"'One Rainy Afternoon' is high class entertainment and an impressive initial production for the Pickford-Lasky organization. Picture has charming flippancy to delight the cultivated taste and with aggregate weight of name roster should hit handsomely in the A houses, with prospects of fat grosses. Appeal is not limited to the sophisticate, however, because story and treatment are in no sense precious or exclusive but have comedy gauged to common level of picture-goers far down the line."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 23 '36

OURSELVES ALONE. (Release date not determined) 70min Associated British Players: John Loder, John Lodge, Antoinette Cellier, Niall MacGinnis, Bruce Lister, Clifford Evans

Directors: Brian Desmond-Hurst, Walter Summers

Based on the play, The Trouble, by Dudley Sturrock and Noel Scott. "[It is] a Sinn Fein story of brutal ruthlessness, showing the unceasing feud between the Royal Irish Constabulary and the Irish Republican Army. . . It leads up to the point where the hero, in love with a sister of the leader of the Republican Army, shoots her brother, who is trying to escape, without knowing his identity. She is then placed in the position where she is forced to lure the man she loves to what seems inevitably his doom." (Variety)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."
Mo Film Bul p82 My '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

OURSELVES ALONE—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] suffers mainly by its too close discipleship to the traditions set by 'The Informer.' Forgetting its model, however, there is much that is fine and convincing in the production, which is handled with restraint and realism. . . Brian Desmond-Hurst has directed the picture with speed and feeling, and with atmospheric touches excellent throughout. Dramatic issues mis-fire, however, by too abrupt interpolation of humorous interludes and much of the tenseness, vitally developed, subsides badly en route."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p7 My 14 '36

"This story of the Irish Revolution of 1921 is very reminiscent of 'The Informer.' It is a gripping story, very well directed, scenically beautiful, and well interspersed with comedy."

+ Motion Pict Herald p36 My 16 '36

"Censorship worries seem to have been overcome to a remarkable degree. Picture should do well everywhere."

+ Variety p15 My 13 '36

OUTLAWS OF THE RANGE. (Release date not determined) 59min Spectrum

Players: Bill Cody. Bill Cody, Jr. Catherine Cotter

Director: Al Herman

A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Starting off with a thrill, this Western holds the interest throughout and keeps to a fast pace which includes the usual shooting, riding and a couple of bang-up fist fights. Family."

+ Box Office p33 Ap 25 '36

"A typical Bill Cody fast-action, outdoor melodrama that will please [juveniles] and all those who go in for such amusement. Cody does his usual hard-riding and is mixed up in plenty of fist-fights."

+ Film Curb p13 Ap 11 '36

"Bill Cody and his young son, Bill, Jr., make a good team in this Western which has enough hard riding and fast shooting to please the most rabid of youthful Western fans. And the appeal for their elders who want plenty doing on the screen is not missing, though the dialogue is stiff and occasionally causes laughter at moments not intended."

+ — Film Daily p4 Ap 8 '36

"'Outlaws of the Range,' with which Ray Kirkwood completes a series of eight Western quickies starring Bill Cody, packs a special thrill for [juveniles] in the presence of Bill Cody, Jr., and as a follow-up on its predecessors will win favor with the Cody fans."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 11 '36

"Even for a Western this is pretty weak. Its inaccuracies, general dullness even the indiscriminate will feel."

— N Y Exhibitor p45 Ap 25 '36

P

PALM SPRINGS. Je 5 '36 70min Wanger-Paramount

Players: Frances Langford. Smith Ballew. Sir Guy Standing. Ernest Cossart. David Niven

Director: Aubrey Scotto

Based on the novel, Lady Smith, by Myles Connolly. "It deals with the daughter of an impoverished Englishman who, not aware of his financial embarrassment, follows him to Palm Springs. He is running a gambling table and she decides to help out by marrying a millionaire." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 6 '36

"A most unsatisfying musical with an improbable plot. Adults."

— Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

"[It is] a slow moving production, hampered by a shop-worn plot. . . However, the beautifully photographed and apparently authentic scenery as well as several delightful western songs add merit to the picture. . . Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Three song numbers help sustain interest at points where all seems lost."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 13 '36

"The story is rather slim, the romance between Frances and Ballew being particularly abrupt, but as everything is made light and gay under Aubrey Scotto's intelligent direction, we accept it all in the spirit in which it is offered and enjoy ourselves in a mild way."

+ — Hollywood Spec p9 Je 6 '36

"Among the highly agreeable music interlarding this inoffensive picture is 'The Hills of Old Wyoming,' which Wyoming's delegates to both the Republican and Democratic National Conventions chose last week as their official song."

Time p57 Je 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picture turns out to be a highly satisfactory bit of entertainment."

+ Box Office p33 Je 13 '36

"A remarkably fine musical with a charming love story. There are several outstanding song numbers with Frances Langford singing delightfully."

+ Film Curb p12 My 30 '36

"With a featherweight story, the main drawing card for 'Palm Springs' will be its three smash song numbers. . . But it is definitely a minor effort for Walter Wanger."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 My 23 '36

"Judicious use of a trio of songs, plus a series of good personal performances, endow this picture with entertainment qualities far above the worth of the plot motivation."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 My 25 '36

"Introduction of three song numbers makes lots of difference in this picture. They noticeably strengthen its entertainment caliber and endow it with a showmanship character that should prove helpful to exhibitors. Without the music. . . the picture would be just an average light dramatic comedy romance. With it the show is a bit of pleasing amusement for showmen."

+ Motion Pict Herald p56 Je 6 '36

"Estimate: fair program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p23 Je 1 '36

"A pleasant, diverting love fable, hauntingly tuned, is Walter Wanger's 'Palm Springs,' suitable for program topper in the more discriminating houses, where it should take care of itself satisfactorily. Outstanding entertainment element is the music. . . [It is a] bright, colorful, amusing screen play calculated to appeal to curiosity about desert resort diversions and behaviour of film folk, with unusually effective meshing of music with comedy drama."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 23 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PANIC ON THE AIR. Ap 10 '36 55min Columbia

Players: Lew Ayres. Florence Rice. Benny Baker

Director: D. Ross Lederman

Based on the short story, Five Spot, by Theodore A. Tinsley. "Mr. Ayres is a radio news commentator, who becomes curious when the Giants beat Detroit in the world series. . . [He] and his pal, Andy, are curious to find out why Lefty Dugan failed to take the mound against the Giants in the last crucial game and discover that he was slugged shortly after he had acquired a $5 bill on which a mustache had been drawn across President Lincoln's face." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y and C: fair."

Christian Century p614 Ap 22 '36

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Bd of R

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 25 '36

"It is a short film with no padding, but far more lively than many others twice its length. The acting is uniformly excellent from the principals down to the smallest parts. . . The story is kept 'on the go' the whole time without being forced. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p49 F 24 '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

"The story plot is stereotyped and slow-moving and the solution is evident from the beginning. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Panic on the Air' is the sort of vehicle that suits Lew Ayres, and, with Benny Baker's plaintiveness and Florence Rice looking nice and natural, the film is somewhat entertaining." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 20 '36

"This 'Panic on the Air' is a reasonably entertaining, sometimes more than just passably exciting little gooseflesh item. Although it has its share of calm moments and is no masterpiece of lethal story telling, it is, for the most part, well enough paced and contains a sufficient amount of thrills to satisfy those who feel that a second-rate shocker is better than none at all." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 Ap 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Sprightly paced mystery drama with a refreshing comedy twist concerning the adventure of a radio commentator who undertakes to solve a baffling crime. Family."

+ Box Office p35 Ap 25 '36

"While it is nothing to rave about it supplies an hour of exciting entertainment. Lew Ayres as the radio guy puts much pep into the playing of his role and largely because of this the picture holds the interest."

+ Film Curb p8 Ap 4 '36

"Good murder mystery with smooth comedy dialogue strong for program fare."

+ Film Daily p7 Ap 23 '36

"A lively and active yarn of murder and romance and mystery, with a news and sports commentator of the radio taking a major part in all three phases of the story, this picture should be found entertaining for those who like active material even though it is not pretentious."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Mr 28 '36

"It is an unpretentious mystery yarn for those audiences [who] prefer action dramas. . . As for exploitation material for showmen, there are several mysterious murders and threats of additional ones; there's the unique radio method of detective work, with Ayres in the part of a Winchellesque announcer."

Motion Pict Herald p50 My 2 '36

"The players do as well as possible with [the] material but the story is against them. For neighborhoods, twin bills, this will prove satisfactory but for de luxers it is handicapped."

N Y Exhibitor p42 Ap 25 '36

"This is quite a far-fetched story, with a title to match, but an exciting screenplay gives it an excellent chance to count in the smaller first-run spots on its own, and it should lend plenty support in the dualers."

+ Variety p29 Ap 22 '36

"Lew Ayres' performance as a radio sports commentator who justifies his high salary by unraveling murder mysteries to sustain a garter program will have to sell 'Panic on the Air' in the lesser dual spots. Picture, unpretentious B classer, relies for entertainment largely on development of plot novelty, and on this score is satisfactory melodrama with comic accompaniment. Ayres plays it with considerable zest, carrying most of the weight."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 11 '36

PAROLE. Je 12 '36 67min Universal

Players: Henry Hunter. Ann Preston. Alan Dinehart. Alan Baxter. Noah Beery, Jr. Grant Mitchell

Director: Louis Friedlander

A young released convict on parole exposes the corruption of a gang of criminals who prey on paroled prisoners.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Wkly Guide Je 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With newspapers discussing the parole system there has been considerable interest aroused which should help. It is a good all-around program feature. . . Aside from the fact that there is a bit too much talk, this is okay."

+ Film Curb p10 Je 13 '36

"It gets to its point in a very direct manner. There is nothing wishy-washy in its treatment and lecturing is kept down to the very minimum. . . Lacking draw names, this number falls into the classification of better program pictures, and should do especially well in those houses which can put across better action entertainment."

+ Film Daily p10 Je 9 '36

"Propaganda plots seem to be the current rage in Hollywood and, if all were as well handled as this one, there would be no complaints. . . The lack of established name draws will be the only stumbling block to the success of 'Parole.' It rates high as purposeful entertainment."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 6 '36

"Patterned somewhat after the recent exposure of inadequate and politically duped parole boards, this film is a fast-moving melodrama, replete with good characterizations, excitement, new twists and new faces. It never lags and ends on a hopeful crusading note which attempts to solve the problem."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Je 9 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

PAROLE—Continued

"Estimate: program, more with selling."
Phila Exhibitor p25 Je 15 '36

"It takes unusual producer-showman's courage and dramatic penetration to deal sincerely and adequately on the screen with a subject as currently controversial as the merits of prison parole. Required amount of these theatric commodities is not in Universal's 'Parole' to make it a picture of more than average box office prospects, but it carries sufficient entertainment for satisfactory program rating."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 6 '36

PASSING OF THE THIRD FLOOR BACK.

D 15 '35 86min Gaumont British

Players: Conrad Veidt, Renee Ray

Director: Berthold Viertel

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Mature." Nat Bd of R

"An outstanding picture with a marked ethical appeal. . . The whole is excellently directed. A well worthwhile and highly recommended picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 14 '36

"Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 14 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"Possibly allegory is more difficult to make convincing in the movies than on the stage. At any rate; this picture version of an old stage favorite is distinctly unsuccessful though there still remain some interesting features. . . The tempo is excessively slow. Aside from the fact that an uplifting thought is presented, the film has little value. Adolescents, 12-16: too mature; children, 8-12: no."

— + Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 11 '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is a] production of exceptional quality."
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 7 '36

"The guttural, at times sinister reenactment etched by the suave, polished and coldly deliberate Conrad Veidt hardly approaches the delicate soulfulness that one would expect from the true Stranger. . . For the most part there is evidence of but little imagination [in the] direction. The strength of the spiritual implication is never realized." J. P. Cunningham
— + Commonweal p76 My 15 '36

"We went because Berthold Viertel directed. Viertel tries hard to salvage this ancient wreck, but with no success." Robert Stebbins
— New Theatre p36 Je '36

"The new English film is curiously arresting, in its direction, staging and performance. It is not always entertainment that Herr Viertel offers, for in one sense the piece is singularly unimaginative in its direction, with barren stretches of un captivating dialogue and slow, dull action, but he has caught in the manner of George Gissing a flavor of London that, while sordid and dreary, has a peculiar fascination." Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ap 28 '36

"In spite of a quiet tenderness and dignity, Mr. Veidt is somehow less effective than the other members of the cast. It is the boarding-house and its sordid, squabbling lodgers which kept this reviewer's intent interest. . . They are a curiously fascinating group. The pattern of the Jerome story, frankly a morality play, seems a little old-fashioned in these days of realism and pseudo-realism." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p18 Ap 29 '36

"Because it is a thoughtful, engrossing and delicately played picture, it should appeal irresistibly to those among us who do not regard a love story as the sine qua non of screen entertainment and who will not swerve automatically from a marquee just because it is not radiant with the names of Hollywood's glamour girls. . . There is nothing colossal in the production. . . Instead you will find a prodigy of moderation: a mannerly collaboration of a temperate director, a restrained script, an orderly cast. It adds up, we are pleased to report, to a singularly likable picture." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 29 '36

"A curious film this—a film that wavers between sentimental claptrap and effective preachment. That sounds like a cool report, I know, but it isn't intended to be. For not only did I manage to work up a reverent respect for most of it; I also enjoyed the greater part of it. . . But, with all due reverence, I still must protest that I was disappointed in parts of it. For although the film says what it has to say with great dignity, it also says some of it without eloquence or even simplicity. Indeed, it says some parts rather clumsily and in the most threadbare writing." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p19 Ap 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A forceful and compelling production of the famous allegorical drama, this will have a definite appeal in the better-class houses as well as for art theatre audiences."

+ Box Office p25 My 9 '36

"It's a bit hard to peg this picture. It has been well done but it depends a good deal on whether your audience likes religious stuff and if they care for British-made pictures."

Film Curb p9 F 8 '36

"Aided tremendously by a perfectly chosen cast and by the unusually effective performance of Conrad Veidt in the central character, this is a distinctly meritorious and entertaining production. . . Although the story does not move along at a particularly brisk pace, it has been kept so closely in tune with its theme under the directorial handling of Berthold Viertel that it never lags in interest."

+ Film Daily p6 Ap 30 '36

"The chief character, of The Stranger, is a modern embodiment of the Christ-idea. . . The Teutonic Veidt, with his accent and suggestion of the brooding sinister, does not meet the requirements, despite dignity and a fine reading of his too few lines. So the picture is weakest where it should be strongest—in the sensed presence of spiritual power. Despite this and other faults, the picture has entertainment value in its characterizations, its movement and its message and should do well enough dualling in the smaller centers."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p2 Ja 28 '36

"Limited as is its box office appeal. . . 'The Passing of the Third Floor Back,' packs a keen concept of dramatic values. While the atmosphere of a long ago out-moded literary fare pervades the narrative, there's nothing musty about the direction or the acting. . . Out of the film's happy combination of talents there develops a fine sustaining of mood and tempo, a background that makes the action feasible and a group of characterizations that impel recognition and interest."

+ Variety p19 My 6 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Made without distinction, and very British in its diction and theatre idiom, although ably enough carried off by well-chosen cast, this first talking version of 'Passing of the Third Floor Back' will have limited appeal to the American trade."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 29 '36

PEG OF OLD DRURY. S 28 '35 75min British & Dominions

Players: Anna Neagle. Sir Cedric Hardwicke. Jack Hawkins

Director: Herbert Wilcox

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Directed with skill and feeling for the period." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p36 Je '36

"Chiefly the film seems to have been planned to give Miss Anna Neagle, as Peg, and Sir Cedric Hardwicke, as David Garrick, an opportunity to play a number of classic roles—and play them, I thought, surprisingly badly. . . Miss Neagle is a bit better as Rosalind, but she hardly makes one impatient to see her in a full-length version of 'As You Like It.'" Richard Watts, Jr.

— + N Y Herald Tribune p15 Ap 14 '36

"The new film [is] a rather gentle but engaging tale. . . Anna Neagle and Cedric Hardwicke, the Nell and King Charles of 'Nell Gwyn,' are again co-starred. They are a particularly well-matched team. . . 'Peg of Old Drury' is one of the more entertaining period pictures, slim of plot, light of heart, and very charming." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p16 Ap 13 '36

"With superb acting, photography that is effective and unusual, yet not bizarre, and direction that is gentleness and good taste itself, 'Peg of Old Drury' is one of the finest cinema productions ever to come out of England, or of anywhere else, for that matter. . . So engrossing is Miss Neagle's portraiture of Peg Woffington that their personalities have become inextricably blended, in the mind of this reviewer, anyway. . . Sir Cedric's impersonation of Garrick is a remarkable performance generally, but his bits from Shakespeare, his Shylock and his Richard III, and his Abel Druggier from Ben Johnson's 'Alchemist' leave lasting imprints." J. T. M.

+ + N Y Times p15 Ap 13 '36

"Some of the most absorbing films of the last three years have been of the historical and costume school. . . and the best of them, it must be confessed, have come from the British studios. The latest in this category—and it is one of the best of them—is 'Peg of Old Drury.' . . Superbly acted and directed with a perfect blending of taste, sureness and gentleness, 'Peg of Old Drury' deserves a place high on the list of fine cinema attractions that the up-and-coming, British motion picture industry has sent us." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p26 Ap 14 '36

"[It] is told dramatically, with careful attention to historical detail and artistic effect. The picture's chief charm, we'd say, lies in its recreation of eighteenth-century London. The Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, Vauxhall Gardens, even the Cheshire Cheese—all are there, with glamour and humor."

+ Stage p10 Je 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Acting of the highest order, excellent photography and the superb musical score given this biographical tale make this one of the finest productions to issue from England's studios."

+ Box Office p63 My 2 '36

"English production that is slow-paced but excellently acted and of considerable appeal. Herbert Wilcox's excellent direction is somewhat handicapped by the disjointed and episodic character of the picture."

+ Film Daily p10 Ap 14 '36

"This is limited to audiences metropolitan, Anglophile, but is nevertheless a handsome, thoroughly entertaining production."

+ N Y Exhibitor p23 My 10 '36

"One of better British-made productions, 'Peg of Old Drury' unfortunately does not contain enough name draw or popular appeal to grab more than average business. Will prove satisfactory in dual spots and is a neat bet for the more arty type of cinemas."

+ — Variety p23 Ap 15 '36

PENSION MIMOSAS. My 5 '36 Franco-American

Players: Francoise Rosay. Paul Bernard. Alerme. Lise Delamare

Director: Jacques Feyder

French dialogue film with English sub-titles. "The Pension Mimosas of the title is a small hotel on the French Riviera managed by the voluble Gaston Noblet and his efficient wife, Louise. Their godson, Pierre Brabant, a gambler by instinct and by inheritance, is constantly becoming involved in scrapes and being protected by Mme. Noblet." (N Y Times)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It contains one of the most masterly exhibitions of ham acting en masse we have yet seen. We were fascinated by the spectacle and stayed on until the grim end." Fred Stein

Hollywood Spec p14 Je 6 '36

"'Pension Mimosas' . . . is very worth seeing." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p36 Je '36

"It is expertly performed, with vigor and warmth, and portrays character with the flair the French have for making Gallic traits familiar. . . Plotty situations and garish scenes enliven the story. . . Even so, the study of [Mme. Noblet's] love for the boy is fascinating screen treatment and the rivalry between her and Nelly, the hard, selfish woman who leads Pierre on, makes for excellent suspense." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p14 My 6 '36

"Although it was well received abroad, rating inclusion in the lists of the Continental 'best ten,' it fails to justify the accolades given it by the foreign press. Part of that may be due, of course, to its cutting before being exhibited here. . . Its pace is somnolent; certain episodes are extraneous and immaterial, and it suggests it might have had a tragic meaning other than the one it now conveys." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p27 My 6 '36

"The picture is faulty in its sequences because many of them wander from the story and are thus obfuscating. Gaston, whose cast name is only given as Alerme, is overplayed. And there are incredible 'gangster' shots indicating a false Parisian reaction to Warner Bros. But Mme. Rosay in her subtle characterization, in her realization of a difficult role is admirable. The film is commended to sophisticated observers with the halting irony of how well it could have been done on the west coast—un-Haysed." Douglas Gilbert

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PENSION MIMOSAS—Continued

+ — N Y World-Telegram p31 My 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Weak drama of mother love and gambling at Riviera gaming house too sombre for American audiences. Acting is fine."
+ — Film Daily p9 My 7 '36

"This film has a good amount of drama, but registers as a tear-jerker. . . [It] will be found acceptable entertainment by French picture clientele."
+ — Motion Pict Daily p17 My 8 '36

"It is not the kind of subject matter in use in American pictures and the production has been supplied with English titles that make clear but do not emphasize the nature of the affection that prompts the godmother to extreme material sacrifices in behalf of the young man. . . Audience classification, adult French."
Motion Pict Herald p36 My 16 '36

PETTICOAT FEVER. Mr 13 '36 80min MGM

Players: Robert Montgomery. Myrna Loy. Reginald Owen. Winifred Shottor

Director: George Fitzmaurice

Based on the play of the same title by Mark Reed. "An airplane wreck forces an English lord and his fiancée to become the guests of a wireless operator in the frozen north. He hasn't seen a white woman for two years and he finds his feminine guest fascinating. . . The wireless operator shamelessly makes love to her. Then his former fiancée who had deserted him arrives." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: fairly amusing; C: no interest."
Christian Century p646 Ap 29 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"A competent cast and clever direction are combined to make highly entertaining, exhilarating and stimulating relaxation of this improbable and dramatic story. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The whole is sophisticated entertainment suitable for adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 28 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 14 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"The direction, following the stage version with the addition of very artificial exteriors, extracts every ounce of fun from the dialogue, and the efficiency of the production seldom allows a dull minute. Suitability: family."
+ — Mo Film Bul p67 Ap '36

"Very good-adult & young adult."

+ — Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"There is little attempt at characterization, and the ending is abrupt and not entirely convincing, but much may be forgiven a story when its gaiety is so consistently maintained and its interpreters so obviously enjoy their roles. Adolescents, 12-16: entertaining; children, 8-12: probably no interest."

+ — Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 15 '36

"A: pretty good light farce; Y: entertaining; C: little interest."

Par M p50 Je '36

"Clever dialogue, humorous situations, spirited characters, novel backgrounds, and a good story make this an enjoyable picture." S. M. Mullen

+ — Scholastic p28 My 2 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"[This is a] bright and highly diverting comedy."

+ — Wkly Guide Mr 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Though it cuts some amusing capers, it is at best a pretty hollow type of humor that tends to grow tiresome as the story progresses." E. F. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 25 '36

"This is one of the brightest, gayest farce comedies presented in a long time. . . [It is] hilarious and stimulating screen fare." Laura Elston

+ — Canadian M p60 My '36

"A trivial farce with Robert Montgomery too cute for some tastes. . . Myrna Loy's calm humor lends tone to the proceedings."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 25 '36

"There is not much to say about 'Petticoat Fever' except that it is amusing entertainment, cleverly directed, well acted, graphically produced and competently photographed. . . It is an extraordinary production feat. In the few outdoor shots we see miles of ice, great blocks piled up by a surging sea to lose themselves against the far horizon."

+ — Hollywood Spec p9 Mr 28 '36

"The whole mood of the film is flippant. And since its stars—Myrna Loy and Robert Montgomery—are Hollywood's best exponents of flippancy, the picture gives the illusion of being much brighter than actually it is. . . Though it hits occasional doldrums, the film remains, for the most part, a slyly entertaining bit of froth. No other actress can handle light dialogue with the same casual ease and sureness of Miss Loy. And, with Montgomery as an adept verbal sparring partner, she makes 'Petticoat Fever' a highly amusing farce." (3 stars) Beverly Hills Liberty p57 Ap 25 '36

"Since Robert Montgomery doesn't smirk and grimace as violently as Dennis King did on the stage in the same role, I suppose that the cinema edition of 'Petticoat Fever' is superior to the original version. In neither incarnation, however, is it anything to cause loud cheering from the assembled multitudes. . . The outdoor Arctic settings look particularly unbelievable and I will insist on that even if it is proved to me that they were actually photographed at the North Pole." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 Mr 21 '36

"The comedy is lively enough and consistently funny. The audience laughed through it yesterday, evidently finding the monotony of its theme rather entertaining. . . 'Petticoat Fever' is one of the season's more frothy comedies, but rather a diverting one." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p10 Mr 21 '36

"'Petticoat Fever,' which was one of the better farces on Broadway last season, has come to the screen suffering from a severe attack of whimsy. Although it has the stuff of which gay, unusual and effervescent comedies are made, it is belabored by such bludgeons of cuteness that not even the charming presence of Miss Myrna Loy is sufficient to restore it to our good favor. . . Mark it down as a picture which might have been a brilliant comedy." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p13 Mr 21 '36

"In its present form, it is a short-winded, harmless little sex anecdote somewhat enlivened by the performance of its three principals, but not enlivened enough to recommend unreservedly to movie-goers in search of satisfactory entertainment." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p9 Mr 21 '36

"'Petticoat Fever' is a pert, bright, and not startling comedy." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p72 Mr 28 '36

"The climax of 'Petticoat Fever' is reached in a scene which shows Actor Montgomery, dressed in white tie & tails, serving an underdone pemmican steak. For cinemaddicts to whom such a scene suggests noteworthy comic vistas, this otherwise innocuous little farce can be wholly recommended."

Time p34 Mr 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A gay, sparkling comedy with bright dialogue, amusing situations and feverish romance expertly combined to produce splendid entertainment that will undoubtedly satisfy all types of ticket buyers. . . Reginald Owen delivers a first-rate performance as the disappointed groom. Family."

+ Box Office p27 Mr 21 '36

"The fun is fast and furious." L. S. Niemeyer

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 Mr 28 '36

"A delightfully amusing yarn that will keep any audience in rare good humor throughout its showing. It has a plentiful supply of laughs and moves along at a swift pace."

+ Film Curb p8 Mr 21 '36

"This one will have no trouble pleasing audiences. It is full of laughs and the comedy is of a refreshing nature. . . The roles are ideal for Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy and Reginald Owen and they romp through them for a heavy score of laughs."

+ Film Daily p7 Mr 14 '36

"A grand little laugh picture from beginning to end, 'Petticoat Fever' is something of a high comedy in the near sophisticated school. Box-office is assured by the personal drawing power of Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy, made doubly sure by happy casting in a popular success. If anything, the screen version of Mark Reed's stage play is an improvement upon the original."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 11 '36

"Not entirely novel, the show has an airy refreshing character for any kind of audience. Additionally there are many suggestions for attention—stimulating showmanship. Dialogue lines easily can be transposed to catchy selling copy. Previewed in Ritz Theatre, Los Angeles first-run neighborhood house. Audience laughter many times drowned out the following conversation."

+ Motion Pict Herald p41 Mr 21 '36

"Every effort has been made to make a screen howl out of the 'Petticoat Fever' play. . . But the result isn't much. Picture is up to its ears in hokum, the situations are often silly and the love interest fails to garner strong appeal. An expert cast struggles with the material at hand and gets a few laughs here and there, but not much else. They won't break down box offices for this one, but the Robert Montgomery-Myrna Loy names may keep grosses from being bad news."

— + Variety p15 Mr 25 '36

"[It is] a smart comedy that should mean good returns. With the Montgomery-Loy names for the top draw, picture has good marquee value. Smartly written, directed, and produced, it has audience appeal both in the first runs and subsequent houses."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 11 '36

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL. J1 24 '36 75min
20th century-Fox

Players: Shirley Temple, Alice Faye, Gloria Stuart, Jack Haley, Michael Whalen

Director: Irving Cummings

Music and lyrics: Mack Gordon, Harry Revel

Based on the play of the same title by Eleanor Gates. "It is a reverse Cinderella theme with a child wandering away from her wealthy young father to engage in adventures of her own. She calls it 'taking a vacation.' . . She is picked up by a team of down-and-out vaudevillians and joins their act for a radio audition. They win a contract to broadcast for a soap firm competing with the product the child's father manufactures." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family & junior matinee."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Je 1 '36

"Certain of Shirley Temple's unfailing charm and talent the producers of her latest picture do not stress plausibility or originality. In spite of story weakness this irresistible little star proves herself fully capable with her songs, dances and dialects. . . Family & junior matinees."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 3 '36

"Shirley sings and taps in her own inimitable way through a vehicle hardly worthy of her talents. General patronage."

+ — Nat Legion of Decency Je 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is much to recommend in this modern fairy tale, its greatest recommendation possibly being that it offers the most natural portrayal yet to come from Shirley Temple. . . The narrative, decidedly weak in substance and logic, comes to us as a film rich in simple charm and humor, a light, scintillating piece of diversion, devoid of dullness." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p11 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Superb directorial handling and intelligent scripting combined with tunes that'll send the customers out of the theatre whistling their heads off, make this Shirley Temple's best by far."

+ Box Office p33 Je 6 '36

"A typical Temple picture. Shirley's fans can hardly find any fault with this—her latest screen vehicle. . . There is little left of the stage play or the previous film version of the story but that matters little as long as Shirley troupes through the picture."

+ Film Curb p10 Je 6 '36

"Darryl Zanuck and 20th Century-Fox have in 'The Poor Little Rich Girl' a box office honey. It is not too far fetched to predict that it will be the biggest grosser of all Shirley Temple pictures. . . Buddy De Sylva should rate a big hand for a picture that spells box-office in big letters."

+ Film Daily p7 Je 6 '36

"Ranking with 'Curly Top' as one of the best of the Shirley Temple pictures, 'The Poor Little Rich Girl' is literally packed with entertainment and gives its tiny star some of her finest opportunities to date. . . It is a fanciful modern fairy story and serves admirably as vehicle for its star. . . Even so, the results might have been less effective had the note of precociousness crept into Shirley's performance. In this regard, the direction by Cummings must share credit."

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL—Continued

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 28 '36

"This follows the you-can't-give-them-too-much-Shirley Temple legend. For entertainment and showmanship purposes, and with all due respect to the supporting players, who strive worthily to be effective, the little starlet is the whole show. . . . A campaign concentrating on the inimitable Shirley looks like the best selling angle."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 My 29 '36

"Just about nine-tenths of this picture is Shirley Temple singing, dancing, acting and being the same charming girl that has endeared her to legions of theatre-goers. Considering the vogue, it doesn't seem to be such an unwise technique. The motivating story isn't much. Quite a bit in it may be difficult for audiences to swallow."

+ Motion Pict Herald p56 Je 6 '36

"Estimate: up to the Temple standard."

Phila Exhibitor p25 Je 15 '36

"20th-Fox's moppet star walks through 'The Poor Little Rich Girl' in grand style, does everything her faithful followers expect her to do, does it excellently. To this extent, picture should be a heavy grosser despite an incongruous story. . . . Lack of continuity is mainly due to cutting which has overlooked many angles."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 28 '36

POPPY, Je 19 '36 70min Paramount

Players: W. C. Fields, Rochelle Hudson, Richard Cromwell, Catherine Doucet, Lynne Overman

Director: A. Edward Sutherland

Based on a play of the same title by Dorothy Donnelly. Previously filmed in a silent version called Sally of the Sawdust. "Fields is a carnival grifter who comes into a small town with his daughter. She meets the mayor's son, falls in love with him. Fields with Lynne Overman, a scheming lawyer, manage to bilk a wealthy spinster out of a fortune by framing Fields' daughter as the rightful heiress to the fortune." (Variety [Hollywood])

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It goes almost without saying that 'Poppy' is the funniest and most completely diverting comedy that has come to local screens for a long time. In spite of the serious illness that has made acting for Mr. Fields a brave challenge to adversity, the new photoplay finds him magnificently comic. . . . The Donnelly work has not entirely escaped the ravages of time. It has a rather incredible romance of the musical comedy variety and a lost heiress theme that demands your tolerance. . . . It is a motion picture which requires no reservations in saying that it should not be missed." Howard Barnes

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p16 Je 18 '36

"W. C. Fields's army of well-wishers will rejoice that a new Fields comedy, 'Poppy,' is on the screen, and will regret that this is not among his better pictures. . . . The fault does not lie with the star that [it] is only fair, although Mr. Fields, like so many comedians, is funnier in supporting roles than when trying to carry the whole picture. Here he is asked to carry the whole picture, and it's not worth all that trouble. The story, however it may have seemed in its heyday, is well worn by now. The direction is choppy, and most of the photography below Hollywood standard." Eileen Creelman

+ - N Y Sun p28 Je 18 '36

"Ordinarily the bare announcement that a new W. C. Fields film has arrived on Broadway is sufficient to send the countless Fields enthusiasts scurrying to the theater post haste to see the greatest of all screen comics. But when that news is further supplemented by the information that Mr. Fields has never been funnier, the announcement becomes an event and calls for a revival of those old customs of street dancing and hat tossing. . . . It can be definitely set down as one of the most hilarious and satisfying of the recent motion pictures." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p19 Je 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Wherever they like W. C. Fields this one will have no trouble in pleasing. It is a light amusing mixture of comedy and romance. Fields' gags are laugh getters and his dialogue is rib tickling."

+ Film Curb p7 Je 13 '36

"This is a laughfest, which will please the Fields fans and make new ones for the comedian. . . . A. Edward Sutherland's direction is of the best. Rochelle Hudson is excellent in the title role and she and Richard Cromwell supply the love interest."

+ Film Daily p10 Je 9 '36

"W. C. Fields scored one of his memorable early stage successes in 'Poppy' some twenty years ago. Now he comes to the screen with an amplified version of the old comedy that will score as high in laughs as the original for a new and greatly amplified audience. It is artful nonsense from a master of mad-waggery and it will capture fat profits at box offices all the way down the line."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 5 '36

"A liberal serving of W. C. Fields' gag, situation and conversation comedy, this is leavened by a thread of youthful romance and serio-drama, mainly involving Rochelle Hudson. . . . There is definite evidence of an effort to divide audience interest in the adventures of both. . . . The screen play is jerky as it concentrates on the comedy and romantic and dramatic highlights. . . . Up to the standard of his best appearances, Fields gives an amusing performance which should provoke much laughter. The affair of Miss Hudson and Cromwell, while not completely convincing, is given an air of realism by the sincere way in which they go about their work."

+ - Motion Pict Daily p3 Je 6 '36

"Not a pretentious attraction, but an amusing and interesting one, it provides plenty of the Fields' brand of entertainment, both as he is a participant in the story's action and in specialty features. . . . Previewed in Alexander Theatre, Glendale. Audience reaction indicated appreciation of Fields' comedy and the efforts of Rochelle Hudson, Richard Cromwell and other cast members to hold up their end in face of his competition."

+ Motion Pict Herald p68 Je 13 '36

"Welcome after a long absence, W. C. Fields again demonstrates he is capable of carrying the entire load. While he is on the screen, everything is okay, when he is off, it becomes a matter of waiting for him to show up again. Result is that where the star is popular the picture will be too."

Phila Exhibitor p24 Je 15 '36

"Slow and lacking smoothness, 'Poppy' needs straightening out before it will please many other than out-and-out W. C. Fields' fans. Picture is interesting, however, when the star is on the screen. . . . Main trouble is that the plot, though familiar, has been allowed to lag to give the star the middle of the road. . . . Fields takes advantage of everything in the script. His dialog is perfectly suited to the Fields delivery."

+ - Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 5 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

PREVIEW MURDER MYSTERY. F 28 '36
65min Paramount

Players: Reginald Denny. Frances Drake.
Gail Patrick. Rod La Rocque. George Barbier

Director: Robert Florey

"Film star Rod La Rocque, who has been warned that he will never live to see the picture he is making, is killed at the theatre preview. Publicity director Reginald Denny, assisted by Frances Drake, takes charge of the case, and the scene moves into the studio itself as the sinister activities of the murderer continue." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: good of kind; C: no."
Christian Century p550 Ap 8 '36

"Adults and young people." Am Legion
Auxiliary

"Adults: entertaining; 14-18: fair; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Interesting for adult audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 29 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates F 15 '36

"There is a tenuous thread of flippant romance, which, however, diverts attention unduly without contributing much to the film. Although completely engrossing while it runs, one is justified, in looking back on it, in grumbling at the number of 'blind alleys' up which one is led, at the consequent number of loose ends left quite unexplained, and at the summary way in which the real criminal is dragged in. Clearly, the story violates all the known canons of detective fiction ethics as respected by our modern novelists in that field. But the development is so slick, ingenious, and rapid that one is given no real pause for the exercise of one's own detective faculties. Suitability: adult."

+ — Mo Film Bul F 24 '36

"An average mystery tale doubles its effectiveness because the plot is laid in a studio interior where talking pictures are made. Adolescents: yes; children: too exciting."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Exciting with plenty of suspense. Family."
Nat Bd of R M Mr '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women F 19 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide F 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This picture is one of the best murder mystery offerings we have had and one of the few good pictures Paramount has given us in some months. . . 'The Preview Murder Mystery' is well worth seeing if you like that sort of screen entertainment. Students of the screen should view it. Its depiction of what goes on in a motion picture studio will interest them."

+ Hollywood Spec p6 F 15 '36

"With his customary pictorial sense, Mr. Florey directs the picture with a decorative flourish, achieving a real feeling for the studio atmosphere. His detailed description of what a set looks like, both interior and exterior, is excellent, even if his photographic genius at times is at the expense of the story." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Mr 21 '36

"Good murder mystery seems to be largely a matter of packaging nowadays, and the sound stages, dressing rooms and ballyhoo of the wonder city provide as novel a bit of integument for homicide as one could imagine."

The picture has rapid pace, surface plausibility—despite too many close-ups of significant glances being exchanged by persons having no connection with the murders—convincing behind-scenes atmosphere." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p13 Mr 21 '36

"'The Preview Murder Mystery' is a first-rate shocker that has in it enough excitement, action and thrills to send the creeps up and down the spine and to leave one limp and pale, but happy, with its clever blood spilling." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p23 Mr 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Thrilling murder-mystery with studio background. . . It moves at a rapid and thrilling pace, is packed with tense situations, hair-raising suspense and should prove a money-maker in any situation. Family."

+ Box Office p25 F 29 '36

"Unusually entertaining murder mystery melodrama. . . Florey has done a mighty fine job of directing and taken all-in-all this picture should please in most any theatre."

+ Film Curb p14 F 15 '36

"Murder mystery played in Hollywood movie studio has strong interest based on locale."

+ Film Daily p4 Mr 21 '36

"This high-tension mystery yarn is different. It is not merely bigger and better but it is a highly diverting novelty, for the three murders and all the excitement that follows take place on a motion picture lot, easily recognizable as the Paramount plant, and while the blood is tingling with the unflagging suspense of the story, the audience is on a close-up personally-conducted tour of the whole works."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 6 '36

"There is much in this that is refreshingly new in the way of a murder mystery, plus many inside revelations of the art of picture making which should provide unique entertainment for audiences and give the exhibitor a wealth of angles on which to base intriguing exploitation."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 F 7 '36

Motion Pict Herald p42 F 15 '36

"Estimate: saleable programmer."

+ N Y Exhibitor p35 F 25 '36

"Apparently planned to meet the independent competition on duals, but thanks to good direction, excellent acting and a good script, this picture gets beyond its class in spite of a trite central idea. It should be able to solo in the smaller spots and front the lesser duals. Selling angle is the fact that it gives an excellent glimpse of film studio processes."

+ Variety p15 Mr 25 '36

"This mystery opera, obviously a B picture, stands chances of getting important money through several exploitation angles. Cast contains a flock of names recognizable by the fans. Some of them are old timers, but they still mean something in numbers as they have been cast here. Picture is based on a murder, several of them in fact, within a studio. It's about the best inside stuff on studio workings seen. Fans who want to get a look-see on picture making should be satisfied with the atmosphere."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 6 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PRIDE OF THE MARINES. Ap 2 '36 63min
Columbia

Players: Charles Bickford. Florence Rice.
Ward Bond. Robert Allen. Billy Burrud
Director: D. Ross Lederman

"An orphan boy meets four Marines, wins his way into their hearts, becomes mascot of the regiment and finally is adopted." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The story is laid against the background of a U. S. Marine base—obvious flag-waving 'patriotic' propaganda. As entertainment, mediocre screenfare."

— + Bul on Current Films Je 6 '36

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee
Fox W Coast Bul My 2 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 29 '36

"The situations, played against a background of a United States Marine base, are artificial and evidently arranged for their appeal to patriotism. Family."

Sei Motion Pict My 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] another of those star-spangled, Hip! Hip! Hooray! products that Hollywood can turn out before you can say 'Sanction.' . . . Throughout the film Mr. Bickford is convincingly tough and Miss Rice winningly winsome. Master Billy Burrud seems perhaps a bit too well fed to suggest an undernourished orphan, but he knows his school-books." J. T. M.

N Y Times p19 Ap 27 '36

"Not only is its plot pretty mediocre, but its dialogue is at times ridiculously childish. But these are really minor matters compared with its more grievous sin, which is that it completely wastes the talents of really first-rate players." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p10 Ap 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Although pictorial backgrounds of the film offer interesting shots, the story offers nothing that would logically connect it with the reputation these tough leathernecks have for fighting. All action has been relegated to a secondary position, while the human interest and romantic angles are played up. Family."

Box Office p31 My 23 '36

"A most appealing story of the Marines. It is interesting because [it shows] the life of these men."

+ Film Curb p9 Ap 25 '36

"Although the U. S. Marine Corps provides an interesting background for it, this yarn hasn't enough in the way of story, novelty and general punch to rate it better than a moderate program offering."

— + Film Daily p4 Ap 28 '36

"[It] has no story and little else besides. It attempts to do at this late date what every other producer has done so much better so far regarding the U. S. Marines, and the picture is far from entertaining, audience interest never being whetted. The phoney climax with the marines fighting an imaginary enemy is entirely without meaning and looks [as if] it came out of the stock shot library."

— Hollywood Reporter p4 Ap 30 '36

"This picture, although not in any sense a big picture, still should be found generally enjoyable, especially by youngsters."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p5 Ap 3 '36

"'Pride of the Marines' is program material for neighborhoods, twin bills. . . . Players are generally satisfactory but the net result is program."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p42 Ap 25 '36

"Flimsy yarn throws the switch on this flag-waver, and pretty well side-tracks it down the juvenile and adventure route. . . . Patriotism and military photography appear to be mainly a means of changing pace and framing a background. As integral elements of the film they figure very little, nor is the photography of flags, parades, etc., more than a stock catalog of a marine base."

— + Variety p15 Ap 29 '36

PRINCESS COMES ACROSS. My 22 '36 75min
Paramount

Players: Carole Lombard. Fred MacMurray.
Douglass Dumbrille. Alison Skipworth.
William Frawley

Director: William K. Howard

Based on the novel, The Duchess, by Louis Lucien Rogger. A chorus girl, masquerading as a Swedish princess on board ship is implicated in a murder and blackmail case. She is cleared through the help of a band leader who has fallen in love with her.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: amusing; C: hardly."
Christian Century p823 Je 3 '36

"Good-mature." DAR

"While the plot is somewhat confusing at times, the suspense and excitement are so well sustained that the climax comes as a complete surprise. . . . Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 6 '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Although the story is a trivial one, so expert is the direction and capable the cast that the result is a very interesting murder mystery. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 3 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 28 '36

"Adults & young people."

Sei Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"[It is] an entertaining and smoothly running comedy drama. Family."

+ Wkly Guide My 23 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray give performances they never have excelled. Carole's masquerade as a Swedish princess is maintained cleverly and as the American girl she is convincing. It is an intelligent screen performance, quiet, restrained, natural, devoid of any suggestion of acting. . . . [MacMurray] gives the most convincing performance of his career. I have liked him before but not as much as I did this time. . . . Anyway, if you like murder mysteries, you will find this to be one of the three or four best we have had yet."

+ + Hollywood Spec p11 My 23 '36

"A curious compound of sentimental farce and grim seriousness, 'The Princess Comes Across' contrives to fuse these seemingly incompatible elements into a thoroughly enjoyable photoplay. For all its lack of balance, the film is consistently engrossing, whether comic

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

or near-tragic, and for an evening of swiftly moving excitement it comes off very well." (3 stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p49 Je 20 '36

"The Princess Comes Across' is an engaging and diverting screen melodrama, marked by brilliant staging, adroit performances and glib dialogue. . . It finds Carole Lombard actually acting, Fred MacMurray increasing his stature as a leading man and an expert supporting company at its best. The film may strain one's notion of the credible, but it is always entertaining." Howard Barnes
+ N Y Herald Tribune p18 Je 4 '36

"It [is] brisk, comic and pleasantly mystifying. . . With William K. Howard in charge, 'The Princess Comes Across' was off to a happy start. . . Even with as trivial a plot as that of the current film, Mr. Howard can send waves of excitement crackling through an audience." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p27 Je 4 '36

"With the subtlety of a sledge hammer, the Paramount's new film pounds away at the pin-sized story. . . [It] just about gets across as a mild-to-boresome comedy. If our reaction happens to be several degrees cooler than the theatre's refrigerating system, blame it on the cheap dialogue thoughtlessly offered to Miss Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray by a quartet of script writers who should have known better." F. S. Nugent
— + N Y Times p27 Je 4 '36

"[It is] an urbane, witty and singularly effective comedy-drama. . . Although it is a boisterous lampoon, it never gets beyond Mr. Howard's control, and after enjoying the sagacious manner in which he has treated his subjects and the expert way he has handled his players I can only say that it is one of the summer season's more deserving and entertaining recreations." William Boehnel
++ N Y World-Telegram p23 Je 4 '36

"Some humor is achieved in 'The Princess Comes Across,' largely because Carole Lombard manages a Garbo accent and Fred MacMurray is active with an accordeon." John Mosher
New Yorker p83 Je 13 '36

"In 'Hands Across the Table,' Paramount found a valuable team in Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray. Their follow-up is superior nonsense. . . [There is] a hilarious end to a continuously diverting film."
+ News-Wk p27 My 23 '36

"Here is mystery melodrama of a pseudo-serious order, but pleasant enough entertainment for all its failings. . . 'The Princess Comes Across' will engross you until train time."
+ — Stage p10 Je 1 '36

"Carole Lombard performs a fine imitation of the accent, mannerisms and to some extent the appearance of Greta Garbo."
Time p26 Je 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Delightful successor to 'Hands Across the Table.' . . The team of Lombard and MacMurray . . . definitely prove in this that they are the most captivating team of funsters in all filmdom. Family."
+ Box Office p18 My 16 '36

"[It is] above the average picture. Can be played in any situation and will surely more than satisfy."
+ Film Curb p10 My 16 '36

"Very pleasing summer entertainment. Even though it develops into a murder mystery, it is handled in a light vein throughout, tending toward comedy. It should meet with popular approval. Carole Lombard does an impersonation of Garbo that stands out. It is one of the most enjoyable features of the picture. . . There may be a couple of questionable spots in the plot, but as a whole the situations are well motivated and interesting, the dialogue clever and sprightly, and William K. Howard's direction keeps the affair moving at a good pace."

+ Film Daily p12 My 12 '36

"Starting out with the promise of a light satirical comedy, 'Princess Comes Across' suddenly becomes a murder mystery on the high seas. The result is pleasantly entertaining, although slightly confusing. It it were not for the presence of the decorous Carole Lombard and the personable Fred MacMurray in the starring bracket, and the always capable direction of William K. Howard, the picture would never rise above the B classification. . . Direction and cast have to struggle against a story that never seems to make up its mind what sort of a story it is."
+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 My 7 '36

"This comedy-romance, the ingredients of which run all the way from satirical burlesque to mystery murder, is a worthy entertainment successor to 'Hands Across the Table.' . . The stars and supporting cast should have no difficulty clocking with mass patronage."
+ Motion Pict Daily p13 My 8 '36

"A mixture of farce comedy, differently concocted love interest and murder mystery melodrama, this picture provides much to engage the attention of both exhibitor and show-goer. . . It makes available for commercial purposes the exploitation worth of a popular screen team, an amusing yarn in which there is no lack of variety and a list of supporting players, name worth of which is high ranking."
+ Motion Pict Herald p29 My 16 '36

"Pleasant, amusing, with some dramatic moments, when a mystery murder comes in, 'The Princess Comes Across' should have no trouble. Good programmer."
+ Phila Exhibitor p17 My 15 '36

"With William K. Howard's direction accounting for a slick piece of satire and [mystery] merging, and Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray given a set of story personalities that jell, 'The Princess Comes Across' spells happy tidings around the box office. Even though the plot occasionally gets murky, the whole thing is managed with such crispness and lightness that the defects become hardly noticeable."
+ Variety p18 Je 10 '36

"An alluring title, with Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray to sell it, gives 'The Princess Comes Across' strong initial advantage, indicating prosperous business in spots where it counts most. . . Carole Lombard plays her role with amusing farcical swagger, creating an outstanding portrait of chorus girl posing in what will generally be accepted as caricature of a screen celebrity. Dialog, especially in the romantic passages, and in Miss Lombard's caricaturing, is delightful. Tale is a bit complex in spots but not enough to detract from audience enjoyment."
+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 7 '36

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND. F 28 '36
93min 20th century-Fox

Players: Warner Baxter. Gloria Stuart.
Claude Gillingwater

Director: John Ford

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

A Guide to the study of the screen version of The Prisoner of Shark Island, prepared by Gladys G. Gambill, is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, New Jersey at fifteen cents per copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The most interesting angle of the film, to me, was the excellent presentation of the mob spirit, of the prejudice, the partisanship, much of it ignorant, that ran rampant at that time. The film would have been improved by the omission of details of the hanging of Mudd's so-called fellow conspirators and the shortening of scenes in the prison, especially the attempted escape."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND—Continued

Bks & Films Ap '36

"The Prisoner of Shark Island' is more than just the problem of one individual—it shows the intolerance and violence that follow in the wake of war—the misery of the Reconstruction Days in the old South after the War between the States. . . [It] is a powerful and compelling drama. . . adult screen-fare."

+ Bul on Current Films Ap 15 '36

"A: strong; Y: possibly; C: no."

Christian Century p583 Ap 15 '36

"The details of brutality and a certain medical incident make the film entirely unsuitable for children and for anyone of a nervous disposition. Suitability: adults."

Mo Film Bul p68 Ap '36

"The school classes in history do not learn about Dr. Mudd: here for once is a movie that is usefully educational. The film has great virtues and commonplace faults. . . Once the doctor is on our American Devil's Island a more theatrical element begins to creep in, not only into the story but into the manipulation of it. . . The massed shiny bodies of negroes, the lines of sharks cleaving the water like a flotilla of submarines—such things seem too obviously manufactured for effect and not done well enough to be effective. . . But for all these drawbacks, which stand out unpleasantly because they are a weakness in a fabric that is otherwise so strong and substantial, the picture is unusual and important." J. S. H.

Nat Bd of R M Mr '36

"A and Y: significant historical drama; C: mature."

Par M p64 Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The Prisoner of Shark Island' will only be appreciated by a few with strong enough constitutions to stand the harrowing sight of so much brutality and suffering. Whether any play or movie of this sort is entertainment or not, depends upon one's conception of how much or how little of life the theatre should present."

Canadian M p41 Je '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Strong, human interest drama with deep appealing admirably acted by Baxter and surrounding cast."

+ Film Daily p7 F 13 '36

PRIVATE NUMBER. Je 5 '36 75min 20th century-Fox

Players: Robert Taylor, Loretta Young, Basil Rathbone, Patsy Kelly, Joe Lewis
Director: Roy Del Ruth

Based on the play, Common Clay, by Cleves Kinkead. This is a third screen version. "Loretta Young, an American girl of obviously gentle breeding, being stranded in New York, applies for a position as servant in a wealthy family. . . The son of the house, Robert Taylor, home from college, falls in love with her and persuades her against her better judgment into a secret marriage." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair; Y: doubtful; C: no."

Christian Century p855 Je 10 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults & 14-18: entertaining; 8-14: mature. Possible for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good-mature." DAR

"The story is not remarkable for originality or depth, but the screen play is shrewdly contrived to make the most of the human and dramatic values inherent in the story and arouses and holds our interest in a most convincing way. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"Adults & young people. A tender romance, beautiful photography, and lovely outdoor settings further enhance this entertaining picture."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 27 '36

"It is entertaining only because it is a vehicle for the ascendant Robert Taylor and lovely Loretta Young, but it chalks up nothing on their scores because it is intrinsically trashy. Motives are confused, situations forced, direction not remarkable. Adolescents, 12-16: poor; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"A trite and time-worn story is so well cast and directed as to become good entertainment. Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 27 '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"The plot . . . is hardly new, but the production, direction and acting are good enough to give it new life. Mature."

Wkly Guide My 30 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] reworks the imperishable taffy about the rich boy who marries the poor girl without telling his parents. . . Robert Taylor's quality and Loretta Young's charm lend personal interest to the unsuspensive story. Basil Rathbone thrown away on another mechanical villain part."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 13 '36

"Here is something of which only Hollywood is capable. It is a magnificently acted, masterfully directed, tastefully mounted example of what the child-minds in the office consider to be a story, worthy of the money and brilliance wasted on it. Apparently starting with the forlorn assumption that, in truth, there is nothing new and that to attempt an original idea would be dangerous, 'Private Number' is just a beautifully executed rehash of the Great American Meleddramer at its time-worn best. . . 'Private Number' is a peerless expression of Hollywood's tragic inability to understand the dramatic fundamentals of its medium." Paul Jacobs

Hollywood Spec p12 Je 6 '36

"The banalities that stud 'Private Number' are not likely to militate against the film's popular success. A formulized synthesis of narrative oddments, it pulls all the cinematic stops. . . Cunningly directed and ably acted, it represents a rather sorry triumph of production tricks over fraudulent material. . . Roy Del Ruth, the director, has brought the piece to the screen expertly, giving it a handsome production and guiding the players through a lot of nonsense with the illusion that they are involved in a substantial motion picture." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p20 Je 12 '36

"Believe it or not, the picture is well acted throughout. . . The plot, however, creaks, as the saying goes, and the two really capable juvenile leads will probably never get over having had to speak the lines they say in 'Private Number.'" J. T. M.

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

— + N Y Times p19 Je 12 '36

"I felt a sorrow for the handsome mastiff named Prince, who plays the part of the pet dog, Hamlet, and even managed to extend a similar sympathy to other victims, such as Loretta Young, Robert Taylor, and Basil Rathbone. I fear the piece should be considered one of the frauds of June." John Mosher

— New Yorker p67 Je 20 '36

"In spite of its mystifying title and occasional turgidity, 'Private Number' is more than a cliché in modern dress. Its interest does not lie in the love affair but in its exposition of the complicated backstairs politics of a big household."

Time p57 Je 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Introducing the initial teaming of a new pair of screen lovers, Robert Taylor and Loretta Young, this will score solidly as far-above-par romantic audience fare with resultant satisfactory turnstile grosses."

+ Box Office p33 Je 6 '36

"Just another picture that isn't going to do much of anything anywhere. Hamlet, a great Dane dog, is a swell comedian providing the only highlight of the picture."

— Film Curb p10 My 23 '36

"[It has a] good marquee cast but [the] hodge-podge story makes this amusing popular fare for the not too critical. . . Miss Young and Taylor register despite the drawbacks of their roles. Rathbone, who is even more handicapped with heavily written melodrama lines, exerts manifold effort."

+ — Film Daily p13 Je 12 '36

"A love story that hits romantic high for the year, bringing together as a modern Cinderella and her prince, Loretta Young and Robert Taylor. . . The combination spells box office returns in the smash category. Its appeal is especially to women, who will give it unlimited word-of-mouth boosting, but it is candy entertainment for any man with a spark of romance in his make-up."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 16 '36

"This is typical Hollywood fare. . . Miss Young is as appealing as ever. Taylor is less boyish than usual and offers a more finished performance."

Motion Pict Daily p11 My 18 '36

"Showmanship calls for proper explanation of entertainment value. The tools are at hand in story content and personalities presented, with Taylor whose popularity is increasing by leaps and bounds, Loretta Young, Rathbone and Patsy Kelly. It can be sold either as a tense drama or a heart-touching romance, especially for adults."

Motion Pict Herald p36 My 30 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 Je 1 '36

"This effort to turn a literary lemon into a cinematic peach appears to have been more than slightly successful. For, despite its several shortcomings, a few of which are downright terrible, 'Private Number' has a couple of things in its favor, and these are likely to carry it through at the box office. . . All in all, the picture is a good example of the art of making something out of practically nothing."

+ — Variety p23 Je 17 '36

"This picture should draw good grosses. Yarn . . . has been given several new sock twists in story and direction which, make for solid entertainment for the masses."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 16 '36

R

RAGGEN, DET AER JAG DET. My 21 '36
Europa

Players: Isa Quensel. Nils Wahlbom. Anna Ohlin. Karl G. Wingard

Director: S. Bauman

A dialogue film in Swedish without English sub-titles. Based on the novel of the same title by Gunnar Widegren. Also known as Raggen, That's Me. "Isa. Quensel, [portrays] the sprightly eldest of a family of five girls who makes a flying trip to Paris to seek distraction from home and office troubles. . . She and a girl friend encounter Consul Westerlund, an American, in a cabaret." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 30 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The cast does excellent work, the scenes in Sweden and Paris are well done and the picture is interesting for persons familiar with its language." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p19 My 22 '36

"[It is] a sprightly piece of semislapstick that our Swedish population ought to go for. . . The plot creaks like a dog-cart, but the individual performances give it a lift that is wholesome, honest and entertaining." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 My 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] fair comedy."

+ — Film Daily p9 My 25 '36

"This [is] a lively comedy, which should be sold with no difficulty by the exhibitor whose patronage numbers people understanding the language. Chiefly by reason of the lack of sub-titles, there is little in the film which should register an appeal with the average American audience, since the story presents nothing outstanding, and the performances, although definitely satisfactory, offer nothing which is unusual."

Motion Pict Daily p16 My 26 '36

"As the film is not equipped with English titles or other interpretative devices, the American appeal of this Swedish production is exclusively to audiences linguistically qualified to appreciate it. . . The story is told principally in dialogue, although several incidents involve considerable action of unmistakable import. Not all of these are above reproach in the matter of taste."

Motion Pict Herald p40 My 30 '36

"'Raggen, That's Me' contains some animated performances, fairish looking Swedish girls and reams of dialog. . . Picture's glaring weakness is a slipshod story, and inability of the director to focus attention on any one of two sets of characters until the last few reels."

+ — Variety p15 My 27 '36

IL RE BURLONE. Mr 27 '36 95min Capitani

Players: Armando Falconi. Luisa Ferida. Mario Pisu

Director: Enrico Guazoni

Dialogue film in Italian with English sub-titles. It is also called The Jester King. "The period with which it deals is the middle Eighteen Forties at the time of one of the several revolts of the people of Naples against

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

IL RE BURLONE—Continued

Ferdinand II, the Bourbon tyrant, then ruling the "Two Sicilies" with the aid of Austria and France." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Laid in the 1840's, the picture has excellent atmosphere, and is well produced. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ap 11 '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Of special interest to lovers of Italian history. Splendid acting and photography. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Ap 6 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Just why Italian film-makers should try, at this late date, to whitewash Ferdinand and to make him appear as not such a bad fellow at heart may remain another movie mystery. . . As the comedy element and the pleasing music predominate, the twisting of history may be over-looked by persons desirous of enjoying one of the best films to reach New York from Italy." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p11 Mr 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] seems to have pleased the Italian-understanding audience, but was hardly of a character to bring rounds of applause from one lacking a knowledge of the language, despite the occasional use of superimposed dialogue titles. . . Outside of a few sumptuous sets and several large groups of extras, it does not reach a complete justification of the program line: 'First Italian Million-Dollar Film.'" — + Motion Pict Daily p3 Mr 28 '36

"Response of [the] audience to the Italian dialogue, (a great deal of which is of humorous character and does not translate readily into the English subtitles with which the picture has been supplied by May Carlisle,) indicated enthusiastic satisfaction. The dramatic action, which begins about midway of the picture and continues to the end, is more effectively interpreted by these captions."

Motion Pict Herald p37 Ap 4 '36

"The foreign-language production lacks the requisites of even an average European film. Will have tough sledding at wickets, even with tolerant Italian audience. Drawbacks include thin story, meandering, lack-lustre direction, transparent plot development and injection of ponderous details. Several neat performances fail to survive these burdens. Added handicap is the 95 minutes that it takes to unfold."

— Variety p17 Ap 8 '36

RED WAGON. D 8 '35 74min First division

Players: Charles Bickford. Raquel Torres. Greta Nissen. Don Alvarado

Director: Paul L. Stein

Filmed in England. "Born with the smell of sawdust in his nostrils, the hero, after years of training, becomes a famous rider and eventually owns his own circus. A fascinating tiger-tamer catches his eye, but when he finds her in the arms of his best friend, he marries a wild gypsy girl on the rebound. This union proves unhappy. But in a dramatic climax, matters are straightened out satisfactorily." (Box Office)

Trade Paper Reviews

"Five players known to American audiences have leading roles in this expensively-produced English film, giving it considerable box-office appeal. Charles Bickford gives a powerful performance in this red-blooded tale of circus life and the action allows him plentiful opportunities to use his fists. Family."

+ Box Office p23 F 1 '36

"This Britisher with nicely-shaped frame of authentic circus background should reap nice harvest in duals for the family trade. It's too long, and its title is ill-timed for children nowadays. At about an hour's run, its speed would be likened to American films."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 29 '36

REVOLT OF THE ZOMBIES. Je 4 '36 65min Academy

Players: Dorothy Stone, Dean Jagger, Roy D'Arcy, Robert Noland

Director: Victor Halperin

"Starting with scenes at the end of the World War, it shows how a scheming officer comes into possession of the partial secrets of Zombeism, and journeys to the ancient city of Cambodia in the Far East to perfect his knowledge of this weird cult of half-living, half-dead control." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The entertainment, while goofy, proved diverting, holding yesterday's audience rapt, if not hypnotized. Mr. Jagger seemed miscast as the insidious villain, being much more in character as the young soldier with an inferiority complex when the story opens. He spoke his lines woodenly, and has considerable to learn in the way of stage presence and ease before the cameras. More could be asked of the jerky direction and even of the settings." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p16 Je 5 '36

"It is only in the beginning that the Halperin brothers' new treatise on the undead achieves any real degree of horror. . . The picture deflates itself rather pitably into a crudely produced and generally ridiculous melodrama." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p17 Je 5 '36

"Although the Times Square motion picture sector hungers for blood and fury and needs a good spine-chiller, these wants are far from satisfied by 'The Revolt of the Zombies,' which is as unintelligent a botch as has been produced this season: stuffy, spurious, stilted and ridiculous. The characters are as robot-like as the living dead men who are at once the villains and the heroes and the speech is an outlandish conglomeration of stereotyped melodramatic phrases." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p19 Je 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is a weird tale of the Far East which should provide enough chills and thrills to satisfy not too particular audiences. . . Seems best fitted for down-town stands where it can be sensationally ballyhooed."

+ Film Curb p4 Je 13 '36

"This production has the same general appeal as 'White Zombie,' also a Halperin production. In this case, the scene is set in the Far East instead of the isle of Haiti."

Film Daily p5 Je 5 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"There is a wealth of exploitation material in this picture. The story has weird angles and situations in good proportion to the drama. It builds dramatically to an exciting conclusion."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Je 8 '36

"Reviewed at the Rialto Theatre, Times Square, where a lobby ballyhoo attracted crowds that impeded pedestrian traffic and filled the theatre to capacity. Audience reaction non-committal."

Motion Pict Herald p68 Je 13 '36

"Estimate: depends on exploitation."

Phila Exhibitor p29 Je 15 '36

"[It] will probably react to intensive exploitation, particularly in the drop-in spots but has little to offer on its own with [Dorothy] Stone not yet able to carry the marquee shoppers. Hardly strength enough to move alone and will need good support to send them out happy."

— Variety p18 Je 10 '36

RHODES, THE DIAMOND MASTER. F 20 '36
95min Gaumont British

Players: Oscar Homolka. Peggy Ashcroft.
Walter Huston. Basil Sydney

Director: Berthold Viertel

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: excellent; C: mature but good."
Christian Century p687 My 6 '36

"The film moves slowly, at times seemingly weighted by its own importance, yet it is nonetheless impressive. A consistently excellent performance is given by Walter Huston, in the title role. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature." DAR

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Authentic scenes of Africa, a glimpse into the lives of the natives, fine photography and a gripping tale make this production noteworthy as entertainment and education. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"The dialogue is elevated in tone, terse and revealing. Acting is of the highest order, voices are those of cultivated people and enunciation is superior. A sympathetic analysis of a greatly misunderstood man and a vivid reproduction of a period in British history filled with stirring events. A film long to be remembered by any audience." Nat Soc of New England Women
Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

"The director Berthold Viertel, continental in his technique, has given us a picture of tremendous force, outstanding in its entertainment value. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 21 '36

"A dignified, authentic and highly interesting picture, suitable for the family. Outstanding."

+ Jt Estimates Ap 1 '36

"Certain adjustments are necessary for dramatic purposes, and certain inaccuracies almost inevitable for the same reason. The physical unlikeness of Walter Huston to Rhodes will disturb some, though none will deny that he gives a most interesting and thought-provoking performance. . . The production is sincere and dignified, and worthy of its theme. Suitability: family, children over 12."

+ Mo Film Bul p43 F 24 '36

"A fascinating biographical picture tells the story of the life of Cecil Rhodes."

+ Motion Pict & Family p2 Mr 15 '36

"Family (mature). Very good."

+ + Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"The picture presents undistorted facts and is a stimulating contribution to historical drama, well worth seeing. Adolescents, 12-16: fine; children, 8-12: mature."

+ Motion Pict R Ap '36

"A: interesting; Y: high historical value; C: interesting as any Western."

Par M p64 Ap '36

"This picture, one of the most pretentious ever produced in England, is a powerful drama. . . The South African background is expertly delineated through beautiful photography. The direction, especially in the handling of native mobs and army troops, is excellent."

S. M. Mullen

+ Scholastic p28 My 2 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] is a worthy effort. Slightly derivative, both in conception and in photography, it recalls the old American picture, 'The Covered Wagon.' . . The film is a very intelligent entertainment." H. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 31 '36

"This is a picture all Hollywood should see. . . For technical excellence [it] has not been surpassed by anything we have made here. . . 'Rhodes' is one of England's important pictures and reflects the rapid advance English producers are making in overcoming Hollywood's lead in the world's market. Time spent in its study will prove profitable to those who make our pictures. It is one of those rare pictures the most caustic critic will have to record as flawless. And for students of history it is a document of great value."

+ + Hollywood Spec p6 Mr 28 '36

"If the film was designed as a flagwagging boost of Empire, it must have sadly disappointed its promoters. Probably seventy per cent. of those that see it will come away with their sympathies firmly on the side of Kruger. The case for the Boers and the Matabele natives is put with great force, largely owing to Miles Malleon's excellent dialogue. . . The film is by no means technically flawless, but it will be an important discovery if producers now realise that the truth, even about Empire-building, can provide good scripts."

New Statesman & Nation p457 Mr 21 '36

"In its sum total [it is] an expertly conceived whitewashing of the celebrated diamond snatcher. Here you will find little of the shrieking imperialist jingoism the West Coast seems to find necessary at the slightest mention of the Union Jack." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p33 Ap '36

"'Rhodes of Africa' is a dull, but painstaking, piece of work. . . In this picture everyone has been so careful not to tread on each other's toes that the life blood has been drained from the characters, and what might have been a stirring affair looks like a page from Little Arthur's history. The trouble is that Cecil Rhodes, Barney Barnato, and the others have not been gone long enough for anyone to make a pictorial record of their doings without so many reservations that they cease to have any characters at all." Mark Forrest

+ + Sat R p416 Mr 28 '36

"Sober, worthy, humourless, 'Rhodes of Africa' unrolls its eleven well-bred reels with all the technical advantages of 1936. . . Nobody concerned with the film has any passionate conviction whether for or against Rhodes and his work in Africa. . . A good film might have been made about it. . . Now as an Empire we are too old, the pride isn't there, the heart seems to have failed once too often." Graham Greene

+ — Spec p575 Mr 27 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

RHODES, THE DIAMOND MASTER—Cont.

"Characteristically slow in pace and sometimes confused in its imperialism, it is, however, an event in biographical cinema. Masterful dialogue and effective performances by Mr. Huston and Mr. Homolka counteract some hasty and not too ingenious telescoping toward the end. The whole, in other words, is not quite as good as its parts."

Stage p10 Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Rhodes,' competently and impressively made, offers substantial entertainment of popular brand and looks like satisfactory merchandise for most American exhibitors. Biggest obstacle to surmount to make the registers ring is lack of romance and woman interest."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 25 '36

RIO GRANDE ROMANCE. Mr 15 '36 60min
Victory

Players: Eddie Nugent. Maxine Doyle.
Lucille Lund

Director: Bob Hill

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A well produced murder mystery melodrama. . . There are some crackerjack fights and all in all it will more than satisfy the lovers of action drama."

+ Film Curb p13 My 9 '36

"As a fast-moving number, in which the G-Man gets his man, this is the type of entertainment that should get over in the action houses. The picture . . . is nicely handled and developed, the suspense is well built up and directed, and it moves quickly."

+ Film Daily p11 My 1 '36

ROAD TO GLORY. 95min 20th century-Fox

Players: Fredric March. Warner Baxter.
Lionel Barrymore. June Lang. Gregory
Ratoff

Director: Howard Hawks

The story of a French regiment in the World War in which two officers fall in love with a nurse. When one goes blind after he learns that the nurse loves the other, he goes over the top to face death.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 6 '36

"Written perhaps to emphasize the utter futility of war, 'The Road to Glory' is a strangely indecisive film. Yet no one should come away from seeing it with any sentimental flag-waving emotions. . . The horror and uselessness of war are shown by the picture. As a social indictment it serves its purpose. It is a good but not a great film. Adolescents, 12-16; depends on individual; children, 8-12: too harrowing."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Quite an interesting study will the box-office career of this picture provide. It contains nearly all the box-office essentials: draw names, excellent direction, good performances, a production of sweep and power, photography of rare artistic quality, gripping drama and spine-tickling thrills. To offset these assets it has one liability: practically no story. . . The picture lacks the one thing which could have given it emotional sweep to make its story weakness less apparent—a continuous musical score. . . By all means see 'The Road to Glory.'"

+ — Hollywood Spec p10 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A gripping story of love, hate and sacrifice, with an abundance of big names in the cast, this production wins a place among the best in war pictures and is at the same time an eloquent plea for peace."

+ Box Office p33 Je 13 '36

"It is a question as to whether or not film fans are fed up on war melodramas. If your patrons do not care for such stories it might be just as well to pass this one up. . . Perhaps this may be a war picture to end war pictures."

Film Curb p10 Je 6 '36

"There is very little preaching, but the visualization of the horrors of war is full enough to get across the message. The piece attains the height of suspense and with material that is gripping, one at times is held spellbound. The subject is certainly a timely one and from the success of other pictures of this type, this one should go over big at the box-office."

+ Film Daily p29 Je 2 '36

"While this is primarily concerned with the record of one French regiment in the World War, it also portrays vividly the personal story of several individuals, blending the whole into a drama of stark realism. . . With the current war interest to spur attention, this should show highly satisfactory returns."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 Je 1 '36

"It is an arresting drama, neither glorifying war nor condemning it. . . Previewed in Grauman's Chinese Theatre. The force and impressiveness of the production held the audience continually in hushed and appreciative silence."

+ Motion Pict Herald p50 Je 6 '36

"Backed by three male names that should draw, impressive production, 'The Road to Glory' has everything to make it a potential box office candidate. What it will do will depend on how women are attracted. The picture takes no sides for peace or for war."

Phila Exhibitor p25 Je 15 '36

"With the names of Fredric March, Warner Baxter, Lionel Barrymore, Gregory Ratoff and others to blaze the way and a tragic but splendidly heroic drama of battle, love, sacrifice, consecration to project powerful appeal, 'The Road to Glory' will take the box office by frontal attack. . . There is no overt propaganda in the picture, for or against war. Drama treats the conflict objectively, with only the natural reflective ironies. . . Most considerably handled for local as well as world market are the battle scenes. German soldiers are shown in but one quick flash in all the detailed welter of the grand attack, and there is no savagery of hand-to-hand combat."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 29 '36

ROAMIN' WILD. (Release date not determined) 58min Reliable

Players: Tom Tyler. Carol Wyndham. Al
Ferguson

Director: Bernard B. Ray

A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"A good, satisfactory, fast-action Western. Sure to please in all situations where outdoor dramas are liked. Photographed amid some unusually attractive scenery, there is enough gun-play, chases, and hard-riding and fights to satisfy anyone."

+ Film Curb p10 My 9 '36

"For the houses playing Westerns, this is satisfactory fare. Everything happens out-of-doors and the photography shows the natural backgrounds off beautifully. The story has enough material to hold one interested, and with the chases and gun play, the action moves along well."

+ Film Daily p9 Ap 29 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p49 My 15 '36

ROAMING LADY. Ap 12 '36 69min Columbia

Players: Fay Wray. Ralph Bellamy. Thurston Hall

Director: Albert S. Rogell

Based on a short story of the same title by Diana Bourbon. "A dare-devil heiress pursues her flying instructor into a camp of Chinese bandits before she can persuade him that love can sweep away the barriers of wealth and position." (Nat Legion of Decency)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: elementary; Y: harmless; C: hardly." Christian Century p75 My 20 '36

"A good picture for the family." Am Legion Auxiliary

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 9 '36

"Adults." Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

"Seeking to combine fast action with interesting glimpses of China, the production is hampered by a commonplace story which often verges on the unbelievable. The cast does its best but the result is hardly satisfactory."

+ Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Typical fast-action fare spiced with considerable good comedy and several romantic interludes, the mixture resulting in a consistently entertaining programmer."

+ Box Office p33 Je 6 '36

"Rather an unbelievable story. Seems destined for the duals and perhaps it was made for them at that. There is a bit of excitement here and there but for the most part it is trite, obvious stuff."

+ Film Curb p8 My 2 '36

"Fairly satisfying action story that should please in the neighborhood stands."

+ Film Daily p3 My 2 '36

"Fine screen treatment by Fred Niblo and Earle Snell . . . plus the well-paced, speedy direction of Al Rogell, lifts this none-too-novel story above the usual programmers turned out by Columbia."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 7 '36

"An ineffectual story which seeks to combine romance and fast-moving action, scattered over a considerable portion of the globe, this picture emerges as routine, suitable chiefly for a double bill program. It has action and romance, but the basic theme is rather far-fetched, and in general the story is not worthy of the leaders in the cast."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ap 23 '36

"Action drama that never gets beyond the program classification. 'Roaming Lady' should serve in neighborhoods, on twin bills."

+ N Y Exhibitor p22 My 10 '36

"Fay Wray and Ralph Bellamy are back together again in an adventure film that is not swamped with too many implausibilities. . .

Picture is light enough to make enjoyable summer fare, and tops for first feature in dual set-up. In spots where the pair draw, it may stand alone."

+ Variety p19 My 6 '36

ROBIN HOOD OF EL DORADO. Ap 10 '36 86min MGM

Players: Warner Baxter. Ann Loring. Bruce Cabot. Eric Linden

Director: William Wellman

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y; strong but unpleasant; C: by no means."

Christian Century p550 Ap 8 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"The film is brutal, exciting and moving in parts, but the uncertain characterization of Murrieta and the excursions into sententious moralising and song and dance sequences befitting light opera [spoil] the effect of these parts and the film disappointingly fails to become the film it promises to be. Suitability: adult; definitely not for children."

+ Mo Film Bul p68 Ap '36

"The romantic and colorful episodes of California history are well selected, the scenery is beautiful and a certain quality of tragic destiny makes this an impressive picture. Adolescents, 12-16: mature; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family. Romantic and stirring and beautifully directed, as well as shedding a useful light on our history."

+ Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"Reclassified on second review. Grounds for B Classification—suggested rape, excessive cruelty. Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 29 '36

"Good horsemanship and excellent rhythm, especially Margo's dancing, give it distinction. It is a strong melodrama, not to be selected for younger children or sensitive individuals."

Scholastic p26 Ap 4 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Robin Hood of El Dorado' is a tremendously handsome production. . . The action is melodramatically exciting—at times almost too exciting and too melodramatic for audience comfort. . . There is, for the average woman patron, anyhow, a bit too much brutality in the film." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 16 '36

"It is a swashbuckling, somewhat overdone romantic melodrama, with Warner Baxter dragging out his broken English accent, which is pretty poor, but which everyone appears to love. Gorgeous photography of authentic scenery adds much to the pictorial angle and some native feasts, songs and dances enliven the whole." Laura Elston

Canadian M p60 My '36

"Strictly for adults not easily upset by spectacles of violence."

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 16 '36

"It would seem that Murrieta was an unfortunate choice as a hero for a motion picture story. 'Robin Hood of El Dorado' is a ponderous production which strives mightily to justify his pillaging, but he remains throughout just a bandit whose only motive is revenge.

ROBIN HOOD OF EL DORADO—Continued
He benefited no one outside of the band of his cutthroat followers. . . Metro has given the picture a production of sweep and vigor, making it a great outdoor epic in which the camera plays the leading part, but it remains an unsatisfactory piece of screen entertainment."

Hollywood Spec p7 Mr 28 '36

"There is fine material in the true study of a Mexican driven by the brutality of the white settlers in early California into banditry. But this is not a true study, the real tragedy of the situation being treated as so much background (overdrawn at that) for a thriller. It is colorful, however, and with some really smashing action." Otis Ferguson

+ — New Repub p222 Ap 1 '36

"This might have been a rollicking film—and there is nothing the films do so well as rollick. But it turns out to be one of those comparatively rare motion-pictures that are wholly imbecile."

— — New Statesman & Nation p860 My 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Impressive, colorful and picturesque screen version of the book by Walter Noble Burns, abounding in action and suspense. Dealing with banditry, murder and miscarried justice, it reaches an apex in heavy drama. Adults."

+ Box Office p27 Mr 28 '36

"Of special interest to Californians, and a sure fire box office [hit]." L. S. Niemeyer

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 Mr 28 '36

"Melodramatic, with a good characterization by Warner Baxter, it seems much too strong for women, will probably have its grosses affected because of it. Men will like it. It possesses strong selling angles for them, but the net result will probably depend on the women."

N Y Exhibitor p30 Mr 25 '36

ROGUE OF THE RANGE. (Release date not determined) 58min Supreme

Players: Johnny Mack Brown. Lois Janu-ary. Alden Chase. Phyllis Hume

Director: S. Roy Luby

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a rather dull Western. General patronage."

+ — Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Typical of the general run of outdoor melodramas. It has its share of gun-play, fast-action, fights, chases, jail breaks and hold-ups. Satisfactory material for dual bills in the smaller stands and okay for theatres where such films are liked."

+ Film Curb p14 My 16 '36

"Suspense coupled with fast action makes this Western a good number for houses showing this type of fare. Although the plot follows conventional lines, its development is logical and S. Roy Luby's direction gives the piece an air of mystery that causes interest to be maintained throughout."

+ Film Daily p12 My 12 '36

"Estimates: good."

Phila Exhibitor p27 Je 1 '36

"Aimed directly at the subsequent run trade and spots where action pictures have a following, this production will fill the bill satisfactorily. . . Story by Earle Snell doesn't ring true in all spots, although some portions of it are okay. S. Roy Luby's direction follows the accepted style for Western thrillers but will have to be speeded up in a few spots for best results."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 9 '36

ROYAL WALTZ. Ap 9 '36 78min UFA

Players: Paul Hoebiger. Willi Forst. Heli Finkensteller

Director: Herbert Maish

Music: Franz Doelle

A German dialogue film with English subtitles. "It tells about an incident during the reign of Franz Josef, when young Count Ferdinand Tettenbach, an officer in his majesty's army, visits Munich and falls in love with a confectioner's daughter." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"For those who love Blue Danube music, paternal monarchy and flowery dialogue, 'The Royal Waltz' should prove enchanting. . . The final scenes, too, with German brass bands, flags waving and the Emperor Franz Josef, then in his youth, arriving behind plumed horses, are impressive, while the musical score is pleasant and the acting capable." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ap 10 '36

"A happy picture of the easy-going court life in Munich in the reign of the popular King Max, 'The Royal Waltz' moves smoothly to its predestined happy ending, sure of winning the approval of admirers of well-staged period screen efforts. A few slight historical slips may be overlooked, as they are harmless." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p27 Ap 10 '36

"Although the tale is more sprightly than the way they tell it in 'The Royal Waltz,' the new German operetta is an extremely tuneful, elaborate and generally satisfactory entertainment. . . The whole thing has a nice, finished quality about it, and were it not for the sluggish direction might have resulted in a really first rate film. As it is, it has enough in it to recommend as pleasant film fare." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p26 Ap 14 '36

"'The Royal Waltz,' [has] prettyish tunes and terrible English captions." John Mosher

New Yorker p80 Ap 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It has] fine acting and direction."

+ Film Daily p8 Ap 11 '36

"Done in a light fashion, it is on the whole enjoyable entertainment. . . even for those lacking a knowledge of the language."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Ap 11 '36

"Reviewed at the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse, New York. Audience reaction: favorable."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 Ap 25 '36

"Weaving through this operetta is a fine, feathery touch that easily fetches and holds the attention and accounts for an exceptionally pleasant 80 minutes of entertainment. Players play their parts with a keen sympathy for the mood of the piece. . . As far as the English titles are concerned, the translator proves to be anything but a stickler for appropriateness."

+ Variety p23 Ap 15 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

S

LE SCARPE AL SOLE. See Alpine love

SCOTLAND YARD MYSTERY. Mr 15 '36 63min Alliance

Players: Gerald Du Maurier, George Curzon, Grete Natzler, Belle Chrystall

Director: Thomas Bentley

Based on a play of the same title by Wallace Geoffrey. "The directors of a large insurance company are seriously troubled over a series of sudden but presumably natural deaths, so they call in Inspector Stanton of Scotland Yard to investigate the problem." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This film does maintain a brisk pace. Something is always happening. It may be something silly. Too often it is. It is dramatic, anyway, and lively, adjectives that can seldom be applied to more pretentious English entertainment. . . 'The Scotland Yard Mystery' is not a picture to call for shouts even from the most patriotic British. Technically, especially as to photography, it is below almost any standard. Perhaps it was here in America that the skillful job of editing was done which gives the film some slight claim to excitement." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p30 Mr 18 '36

"Gerard Du Maurier really should have known better, after all his years in the theatre, than to have accepted the rôle of Inspector Stanton in 'The Scotland Yard Mystery,' the new British picture which is puzzling all the kindergarten pupils in the Globe's audience this week. . . The picture trudges leaden-footed to its dénouement and, when it reaches it (to commit an Irishism) there is none. The cast is infinitely above its material, and we still feel that the real mystery for Scotland Yard to solve is why the players permitted themselves to be treated that way." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p21 Mr 16 '36

"A generally feeble time-waster, the film's cast includes such well-known actors as Gerald Du Maurier and George Curzon, who was seen here earlier in the season in the stage production of 'Parnell.' They do their duty nobly, but their efforts are of no avail for 'The Scotland Yard Mystery' is so destitute of originality that it squanders their noble efforts." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p25 Mr 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This melodramatic importation from England doesn't hold a bid for important American patronage. It's weak in all three of the prime phases of a picture, production, story and acting. For the dualers at best."

— Variety p29 Mr 18 '36

SECRET AGENT. 85min Gaumont British

Players: Peter Lorre, Madeleine Carroll, Robert Young

Director: Alfred Hitchcock

Based on the play of the same title by Campbell Dixon, which in turn was based on the volume of short stories, Ashenden; or the British Agent, by W. Somerset Maugham. "The film opens with people filing past the coffin of a soldier. When they have gone a servant removes the coffin, and we realise that his master is supposed to be dead in order that, under another name, he may undertake a secret mission to Switzerland. As Ashenden he therefore arrives in Geneva, where he finds that, in order to complete his disguise, a woman spy has been appointed to pose as his wife." (Manchester Guardian)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"There is considerable dialogue and the tempo of the film throughout is abnormally slow—by intention, to make the sensational element more exciting by contrast—with the result that, until one knows just how the plot is going to develop, the story shows a visible tendency to drag; the artificially facetious interchanges between the characters are not exactly a help. The slowness does, however, create a novel intimacy of atmosphere, which is increased by very skilful photography. . . The ending is brief and not very satisfactory, and—quite apart from a certain general insufficiency of explanation—there are one or two distinct loose ends in the plot. There is, incidentally, one scene—where a man is found murdered in a church—which might conceivably be found objectionable by certain religious bodies. . . There is much to be said for the technical quality and finish of this film; but the puzzling indeterminacy of outlook which pervades it makes it less than a completed whole. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p33 My '36

"Objection: a highly unwholesome character portrayed by Peter Lorre. Suggestive incidents and dialogue. Objectionable in part."

— Nat Legion of Decency Je 18 '36

"Spy story of the World War, interesting of its kind, well acted and directed, but somewhat vague in spots. Mature."

+ — Wkly Guide Je 13 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is the action which counts in 'Secret Agent,' and this Hitchcock has controlled so skilfully as to make most other spy films look silly, and seem much too slow." R. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p13 My 11 '36

"Alfred Hitchcock's long-awaited 'Secret Agent' is a disappointment. The situation is still unsettled at the end. . . All the elements for an excellent spy film are there, including the dazzling trio of Madeleine Carroll, Peter Lorre, and John Gielgud; but the pace of the narrative is desperate, not easy, and the incontinent use of noise to emphasize emotion or situation, though it is in some cases effective, tends to become a substitute for emotion or situation itself." Robert Giroux

— Nation p821 Je 24 '36

"It is quite as good as the average American film. Yes, but why is it not as good as the best American films? To begin with, Mr. Maugham's Ashenden has been 'improved' almost out of recognition. . . The dialogue is lame, the jokes pitiful. . . A lot of trouble has been taken with this film—it needed also a little thought. For the same producer, the same actors, with a good script and someone to keep an eye on details, could have produced a first-class entertainment."

+ — New Statesman & Nation p764 My 16 '36

"It is a credible, handsome and frequently exciting film. The pace may prove a bit deliberate for audiences accustomed to high-pressure violence and suspense, and there are romantic interludes that interrupt the action, but the production has definite distinction. . . The sound reproduction in 'Secret Agent' is far from good. Combined with very British accents, it causes some of the dialogue to be quite unintelligible. The production is in no sense the equal of 'The Man Who Knew Too Much,' or 'The Thirty-Nine Steps,' but it is still a highly entertaining melodrama." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 Je 13 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SECRET AGENT—Continued

"When that cheerful, rotund Englishman, Alfred Hitchcock, sets out to make a melodrama, he can—and he does—make most of the Hollywood thrillers look like placid bedtime stories. . . . For sheer melodrama, a blood-curdling tale of adventure and spiced with romance, you won't find anything in town to equal it. . . . Mr. Hitchcock has another top-notch melodrama to his credit. 'Secret Agent' is grand entertainment for summer, winter or any other season of the year." Eileen Creelman

++ N Y Sun p8 Je 13 '36

"It is a defect of the screen narrative that all the spies seem to be continually engaged in melodramatic shadow boxing and that the authors, who couldn't have been Mr. Maugham, never really make out a case for the necessity of spying and never convince you that there is anything in Geneva worth spying on. But there are scattered high-lights. Peter Lorre, for example, plays one of the most amusing and somehow one of the most wistfully appealing trigger men since Victor Moore. . . . The picture as a whole is marred by inept camera technique, film editing whose incorrectness hits one between the eyes, and strangely uneven sound recording which, at one point, simply causes the screen to go dead." B. R. C.

— + N Y Times p13 Je 13 '36

"Although the film lacks the pace and the excitement, the terror and the humor, of 'The 39 Steps,' or 'The Man Who Knew Too Much,' it is a facile contrivance which represents Mr. Hitchcock in some of his most ingenious maneuverings. . . . Mr. Hitchcock's sure manipulation of character and incident is calculated to give you an hour of vastly thrilling and at times horrifying entertainment. The acting, as already indicated, is of unusual excellence." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p14a Je 13 '36

"[It] is directed by Alfred ('The 39 Steps') Hitchcock. 'The 39 Steps' was a first-rate English thriller, you may know, and the bright, quick, fresh touch that made it good isn't lacking here. . . . Obviously Mr. Gielgud . . . will in due time enjoy the honors of a cinema career. . . . He does this pleasant melodramatic rôle with all the ease in the world, and looks exactly as all those young sports from Kansas City and points West who buy their clothes at Poole's would give their lives to look." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p83 Je 13 '36

"Had 'Secret Agent' been in the hands of any one of half a dozen other British directors, all capable men, one would perhaps have been satisfied with what is certainly a workmanlike job. But Mr. Hitchcock is blessed with a cinematic imagination that is generally in advance of his fellows, and one therefore expects something a little more than good workmanship. . . . There is one admirable performance, that of Peter Lorre as the hairless Mexican. . . . This film, and a good deal of the acting in it, gives one the impression that it is a mechanical exercise and no more, and Mr. Hitchcock must bear the blame for that." Mark Forrest

+ — Sat R p672 My 23 '36

"It is all a great pity; a pity because of the immense wasted talent of Mr. Peter Lorre, and because Mr. Hitchcock too has talent. How unfortunate it is that Mr. Hitchcock, a clever director, is allowed to produce and even to write his own films, though as a producer he has no sense of continuity and as a writer he has no sense of life. . . . Very perfunctorily he builds up to tricky situations . . . and then drops them. As for Mr. Maugham's Ashenden, on which this film is said to be based, nothing is left of that witty and realistic fiction." Graham Greene

— Spec p879 My 15 '36

"'Secret Agent' introduces to U. S. cinema audiences a hero who should please them highly: Operative Ashenden of the British Intelligence Service, whose activities have been recorded so successfully in fiction by Author Somerset Maugham. . . . In contrast with old-time fiction operatives like Sherlock Holmes, whose deductive gifts were superhuman, Ashenden belongs to the modern school of sleuths whose fallibility makes them plausible. . . . Directed by England's pudgy master of melodrama, Alfred Hitchcock, 'Secret Agent' is a first-rate sample of his knack of achieving speed by never hurrying, horror by concentrating on the prosaic."

+ Time p56 Je 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Just about the tops in the war spy field, with an intelligent plot that keeps twisting and building toward suspense and shock surprises all the way. . . . Recommended highly for thrills and intelligent handling of melodramatic situations."

+ Film Daily p4 Je 13 '36

"With the exception of the last twenty feet, this looks like a box office natural equal to or better than 'Thirty-Nine Steps.' It is typical Hitchcock direction. . . . He has certainly hit the mark again, though the ending is terrible and should be cut without delay."

+ Hollywood Reporter p6 My 18 '36

"This story of espionage during the World War combines mystery, romance and action in what is for the most part an intriguing film. For the exhibitor in the United States there are three leading cast names which to a certain extent should simplify the job of selling, which is further aided by the fact that Maugham was the author of the original novel, and the pull which lies in the nature of the story."

Motion Pict Daily p14 My 15 '36

"There is no glorification of patriotic duty and no waving of flags. Implication, if any, is to the effect that war is a deplorable institution, a circumstance suggesting a possibility of recruiting exploitation cooperation of organizations active in behalf of peace."

Motion Pict Herald p44 My 23 '36

"Well played, it ought to interest anywhere. Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

"'Secret Agent' dallies much on the way and does lots of looping to get over a dramatic point, but withal rates as good spy entertainment, suave story telling, and, in one particular case, brilliant characterization. . . . Director Alfred Hitchcock has done well at blending the tale's grim theme with deftly fashioned humor, appropriate romantic interplay and some swell outdoor photography. Despite the defects, it has what it takes to fare well at the box office."

+ Variety p23 Je 17 '36

SECRET PATROL. My 22 '36 58min Columbia

Players: Charles Starrett. Finis Barton. J. P. McGowan

Director: David Selman

A melodrama of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 23 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

"All those fans who enjoy this sort of film fare will have nothing to complain about in this one."

+ Film Curb p7 My 30 '36

"Following pretty much in the familiar grooves of its type of outdoor melodrama, this is a moderately entertaining secondary attraction."

+ Film Daily p15 Je 3 '36

"Action fare set in the Northwest and concerning the activities of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, this picture should be satisfactory entertainment on a dual program or on the week-end bill when action is the requirement."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 My 22 '36

"Estimate: fair Mountie stuff."

+ Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

SEVEN BRAVE MEN. Je 14 '36 Amkino

Players: N. Bogolybov. T. Makarova. I. Noseltzev

Director: S. Gerasimov

Russian dialogue film made in U.S.S.R. with English sub-titles. "The story describes the adventures of seven men and a woman doctor who pass the winter at the Bay of Happiness in the Arctic, where 275 days of the year are cold and snowy. A geologist, a metallurgist, a radio operator, an air pilot and inventor of an airdred are in the group besides the physician and a boy stowaway, who is put to work as cook." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] a fair-to-middling Soviet picture. . . The photography of the Arctic and the virility of the production are noteworthy, but the plot is rather weak, and, compared to Russian expedition films based on fact, this one seems a trifle sirupy. Yet it is not boring, and during its climax late in the story the suspense is handled well." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 Je 15 '36

"The photography, taken under difficult, outdoor conditions, has a rugged distinction, but if you dislike propaganda, even when sugar-coated and in a dialectically good cause, 'Seven Brave Men' is not the picture for you." B. R. C.

N Y Times p24 Je 15 '36

"Expert characterizations, finished performance by a cast of excellent actors and some rugged outdoor photography . . . save that melodrama of the hardships of polar exploration from being second rate. A halting and muddled story of bravery under trying conditions in the Arctic wastes, it loiters vaguely through a long hour, promising frequently to stir itself out of the doldrums. However, it never quite succeeds in doing so." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p21 Je 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is lifted somewhat out of the average plane of most of the importations from the Soviet state-controlled industry, in that it is characterized by some excellent photography and occasional drama. . . It has rather less of propaganda for Russia than most of the importations from that country."

Motion Pict Daily p21 Je 16 '36

SHOWBOAT. My 1 '36 115min Universal

Players: Irene Dunne. Helen Morgan. Paul Robeson. Allan Jones. Charles Winninger. Donald Cook

Director: James Whale

Based on the novel and musical comedy of the same title by Edna Ferber and the musical comedy by Oscar Hammerstein, II. Romantic story of a showboat player who makes her way up the ladder of success, after her husband deserts her, her child is taken away and she finds herself in dire poverty.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Don't miss the second film made from Edna Ferber's one-time best-seller because you fear the two pictures may be alike. They are not. The second 'Show Boat' is far superior to the first."

+ + Bks & Films Je '36

"A and Y: excellent; C: very good."

Christian Century p783 Je 3 '36

"Excellent. [It is a] smash-hit photo production. Mature—family." DAR

"The river sequences are far the best, so that there is a little sense of 'let down' when the play goes into the more familiar scenes of city life, back stage, and the triumphs of show life. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul My 16 '36

"Notable in the expert direction is the care given the smallest detail and the use made of every dramatic possibility. Outstanding in quality and in entertainment value. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

+ + Fox W Coast Bul My 23 '36

"A picture we should not miss. Family."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 9 '36

"It is a pretentiously mounted series of episodes, each one of which is a complete dramatic unit, highlighted with excellent music. . . The most consistent characterization is that of Charles Winninger as Cap'n Andy Hawks of the 'Show Boat.' He brings us the true spirit of the peripatetic original."

+ Motion Pict & Family p6 My 15 '36

"The whole is a skillful blending of drama and music, of excitement nicely balanced with sentiment. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: yes."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Family-outstanding."

+ + Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Superbly acted, beautifully photographed and magnificently directed 'Showboat' again makes its appearance on the screen with three new songs added and the plot somewhat changed. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 13 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"Outstanding—family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide My 9 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This memorable story of the Mississippi River and of early Chicago days gives promise of being a stand-out picture."

+ Canadian M p61 My '36

"Paul Robeson's singing of 'Ole Man River' alone would make the picture memorable." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 23 '36

"[It] incorporates all of the melodious spirit of musical gaiety and charm that Miss Ferber's novel inspired in the predecessors on stage, screen and radio, recreating the glamour of one of America's best-known earlier institutions: the river showboat. . . Intelligent direction molds all forces, and settings and locales are highly interesting." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p48 My 8 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SHOWBOAT—Continued

"'Showboat' is an extraordinarily effective production, musically entertaining, dramatically sound and scenically beautiful. The story is a human one that will run its fingers, not too roughly, over the emotional strings of the audience. . . The production is not just 'Showboat' done over again. It is a new 'Showboat,' one you never saw before, one only the screen could present with so much sweep, vigor and esthetic appeal. From a cinematic stand-point it is an interesting study. Its primary elements are a story and music, and so adroitly are they mixed we do not lose sight of one when our attention is engaged with the other."

++ Hollywood Spec p7 My 9 '36

"Even those who know every twist of the Edna Ferber story should succumb once more to its nostalgic charm. . . 'Showboat' is enthusiastically recommended as a beautifully photographed tale, as entertaining as the day it was first staged." (4 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p49 Je 13 '36

"All Hollywood was amazed when James Whale, a Briton, was assigned to direct 'Showboat.' Its amazement probably will be renewed in another direction when the photoplay is released. Mr. Whale has directed as if born and bred in the Southern show-boat country. Unless there is public resentment over the arbitrary furnishing of a new ending, obviously designed to fetch the tears boiling into the eyes, 'Showboat' should be one of the most satisfying pictures of this year."

++ Lit Digest p20 My 9 '36

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation p754 Je 10 '36

"'Showboat,' one of the sturdiest and most captivating shows of our day, has been shaped to an opulent, spectacular and generally enchanting screen musical. . . It might have benefited by judicious cutting in the passages that carry the narrative through the turn of the century and down to the last decade. Outside of a few lagging interludes a bit top-heavy with exposition, it is a stunning entertainment." Howard Barnes

++ N Y Herald Tribune p19 My 15 '36

"This is the third version of Edna Ferber's popular story; right at the moment it seems by far the best. It is all as dramatic, as sentimental, as comic, as gay and as touching as ever. And it is even more melodious. . . 'Showboat' is sure to be, whatever else the year may offer, one of the season's finest productions. No one can make a mistake by seeing it or by hearing Helen Morgan sing 'Can't Help Lovin' That Man of Mine' and 'My Bill.'" Eileen Creelman

++ N Y Sun p29 My 15 '36

"Universal's excellent screen transcription, preserving the Jerome Kern score and Oscar Hammerstein's book and lyrics, is the pleasantest kind of proof that it was not merely one of the best musical shows of the century but that it contained the gossamer stuff for one of the finest musical films we have seen. . . Here is one of the few musical shows which is not merely a screened concert. The picture has a rhythmic pace and a balanced continuity of movement which is as exceptional as it is welcome. . . Universal is to be congratulated this morning, and so are we, for 'Showboat' is in port again and we hope it finds safe harbor." F. S. Nugent

++ N Y Times p29 My 15 '36

"Universal has done right by our great American classic—'Showboat.' It moves across the screen—a grand pageant of song, sentiment and loamy nationalism—the finest piece of filmic folk-lore since 'Cimarron.' It is an admirable picture and a delight to commend it wholeheartedly. . . James Whale has done a beautiful job of direction and the cast responds to him with a perfection that at times is astonishing, notably, in Paul Robeson's superb singing of 'Old Man River.' . . The film is excellent entertainment." Douglas Gilbert

++ N Y World-Telegram p27 My 15 '36

"['Showboat'] has been magnificently handled. Never have I seen a musical show so satisfactorily and intelligently adapted. And, I assume, the credit goes chiefly to its director, James Whale, whose name now belongs to the history of 'Showboat.'" John Mosher

++ New Yorker p87 My 23 '36

"It suffers mostly by comparison with the Ziegfeld productions and points up the screen's limitations when approaching this type of film. The musical numbers are excellent. . . Robeson's warm voice records the melancholy 'Ol' Man River' and one other song, a new one, but the Negro actor has been badly photographed—almost beyond recognition. . . Most of the film deserves praise. Sharper cutting would have brought it closer to perfection. Too abrupt transition from scene into song makes for jerkiness. The new ending, sloppy from many angles, including the sentimental, should have been sheared."

++ News-Wk p41 My 16 '36

"As a spectacular motion picture, 'Showboat' is deficient in many departments: background and atmosphere never dominate as they should; there is little or no emotional pull to the story as a whole; the dramatic climax is weak; many of the musical numbers are photographed without imagination; the film lacks continuous action, rhythm and pace. Some of the performances are excellent, within the limitations of the script. . . Certainly no one could fail to be thrilled by the musical portions of 'Showboat.'" R. S. Ames

Script p10 My 16 '36

"No tremendous effort has been expended in effecting a realistic background, but this is unimportant in a film that reproduces the memorable songs so effectively. The 'Ol' Man River' sequence is musically and photographically as excellent as anything yet accomplished on the sound screen. It is woven majestically into a film which intermittently exalts and moves and amuses."

++ Stage p10 Je 1 '36

"'Showboat' which takes nearly two hours to unroll, is well worth the care which Producer Carl Laemmle Jr. bestowed upon it as his final picture before leaving Universal. Handsomely directed by James Whale, magnificently photographed by Leon Shamroy, it brings to the screen what has become a U. S. institution."

++ Time p61 My 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Loaded to the gunwales with bales of Triple X entertainment, this picture carries an insurance policy for record-setting grosses. Family."

++ Box Office p25 My 9 '36

"Not for a long, long time have I heard an audience applaud in the middle of a picture, nor have I heard such applause at the end of a picture, as was evident at the screening of 'Show Boat.' . . The picture has everything that one could want in the way of entertainment. . . Mark this down on your booking sheet as a 'must.'"

++ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p9 Je 13 '36

"Grand entertainment from every standpoint. Certain to be a clean-up at the box office. Universal has done a most commendable job in producing this screen version of the stage hit. . . To sum it all up this is top notch film fare for both old and young of both sexes and in any walk of life. It ought to break records in many a theatre."

++ Film Curb p13 Ap 18 '36

"Entertainment like this can't possibly help but play to smash box-office returns. Most of the outstanding material of the stage success has been kept, but a lot of new material has been added. There is a different ending, a changed plot in part and the addition of some very worthy song numbers."

+ Film Daily p6 Ap 30 '36

"Magnificent in scope of production and unlimited in audience appeal, 'Show Boat' will have smooth sailing as a world's box office attraction. The picture's great musical triumph, 'Old Man River,' [is] superbly and stirringly rendered by Paul Robeson. The staging of this number is very effective photographically. Finally there is 'Can't Help Loving That Man of Mine,' sold by Helen Morgan as only she can sell it."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 27 '36

"Its music, particularly Paul Robeson's singing of 'Ol' Man River,' was received by a preview audience with thunderous applause and actually is an artistic masterpiece. . . . As the picture was shown here, and accepting a preview audience's reactions as a gauge, everyone associated with the production will share in the credit of participating in what is probably the most important Universal production in years. . . . A show that will grip the imagination and sate the appetite of any kind of audience, 'Showboat' is destined for grand grosses if showmen will only put half the effort into the selling that the producers, writers, directors and players did in the making."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ap 14 '36

"Anyone fortunate enough to have 'Showboat' on its program can start in shouting about it right now. Enthusiasm need not be stinted in heralding the picture's entertainment worth. The quality of merchandise delivered will not let anyone down. . . . 'Showboat' is first a musical drama. Its music, no matter in what form, is an artistic treat, and because it is an integral part of the story and sung thereas by Irene Dunne, Allan Jones and Helen Morgan, it is beautiful in the way it accents the motivating spirit."

+ Motion Pict Herald p39 My 9 '36

"'Showboat' will be money at anybody's box office. . . . In lavishness, in appeal, in authenticity, it is a picture that shouldn't lack for word-of-mouth selling."

+ Phila Exhibitor p47 My 15 '36

"'Showboat,' Universal's second talkerized version, is a smash film-musical. A cinch for big grosses, from the deluxers down. Coming at this time, when there seems to be a lull in choice-product releases, 'Showboat' should sail to even higher financial waters. . . . The now classic songs, 'Make Believe,' 'Ol' Man River,' 'Can't Help Lovin' That Man,' 'Why Do I Love You,' 'Bill' and 'You Are Love,' as the duet thematic, have been retained and three new numbers, all in a novelty vein, have been added."

+ Variety p12 My 20 '36

"As important today as entertainment as it was when Ziegfeld produced it a decade ago, 'Show Boat' is a money picture. Impressive in cast and production, theatres should have no trouble selling it. . . . 'Old Man River,' sung by Paul Robeson is the best piece of musical reproduction yet done in pictures. The resonant baritone voice of Robeson brought cheers from the preview mob, should repeat this everywhere. Doubtful if the number has ever been sung so well as it is in this picture."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 27 '36

SILLY BILLIES. Mr 20 '36 65min RKO

Players: Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Dorothy Lee, Harry Woods

Director: Fred Guiol

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: absurd; Y: poor; C: doubtful value."
Christian Century p646 Ap 29 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

"Family."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"The appeal will be mainly, if not entirely, to admirers of Wheeler and Woolsey. Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p68 Ap '36

"Fair-family."

+ - Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 8 '36

"Children will enjoy the fast riding of the Indians in all their war paint. Family."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Silly Billies,' has nothing to do with hill-billies, it is a relief to learn, and while it is silly, it possesses the germ of an original idea. For it is a burlesque on the old 'Covered Wagon' type of Western, and had it been worked out with greater pains and less Wheeler and Woolsey, might have resulted in a fairly good comedy. . . . [The director] seems to have a sense of comedy, but should restrict himself to one or two reels of film; at least 'Silly Billies' could have packed all its humor into a short with nothing lost." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Ap 6 '36

"If it was because they couldn't find a more descriptive label for the latest Wheeler and Woolsey opus that the title writers for RKO decided upon the name 'Silly Billies' they must have lacked either courage or succinctness. Otherwise they would certainly have called it 'Spinach.'" J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '36

"It features Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, and, while I admit openly that I am violently prejudiced against their attempts to tickle the funny bone, I feel certain that even their most ardent admirers will have to confess that 'Silly Billies' is one of their least successful efforts. . . . Parts of this are, as has already been mentioned, mildly funny. . . . But these parts do not occur frequently enough, and when they do are not funny enough, to lift the film out of the mediocre class." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p27 Ap 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fair comedy for popular programs is burlesque on Indian fighting in covered wagon era."

+ Film Daily p4 Ap 4 '36

"'Silly Billies' will have to depend on whatever draw Wheeler and Woolsey retain. As far as the picture goes, it is just another entrant in W-W series."

N Y Exhibitor p31 Mr 25 '36

"Two authors and two scripters get credit for this Wheeler and Woolsey script, and there's not enough credit for one. Story may appeal to dyed in the wool W. & W. fans, but not even they are apt to regard it as one of the comedians' best. Draggy all the way and the gags are preposterous and stretched far too long. Negative results seem indicated for most spots."

+ Variety p17 Ap 8 '36

SINGING COWBOY. My 11 '36 63min Republic

Players: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Lois Wilde, Lon Chaney, Jr.

Director: Mack Wright

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Striking photography of beautiful scenery, fine riding and a thrilling rescue of a girl from a runaway horse lift this production above the mediocre. . . The picture suffers from poor singing and stilted acting and a somewhat loosely constructed plot. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

SINGING COWBOY—Continued

+ — Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"A rather ordinary production. General patronage."

+ — Nat Legion of Decency My 28 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This has been well made and contains plenty of thrills and excitement. . . 'The Singing Cowboy' should have no difficulty in pleasing wherever this type of film is in favor."

+ Film Curb p12 My 16 '36

"Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette and gang get together for a superior Western in which there is no lack of action but careful pacing of it."

+ Film Daily p11 My 13 '36

"A pleasant mixture of drama, romance, villainy and song in measured quantities. . . make this an appealing Western for the Gene Autry radio fans and the theatre-seat cowboys."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 My 12 '36

"Gene Autry's singing of western ballads, with which this picture opens and closes and to which approximately half of the screening time is given over in between, is its dominant exploitation factor. Another unusual angle consists of the presentation of television as a realized, commercially practiced and generally accepted medium for the dissemination of entertainment and advertising sales copy."

Motion Pict Herald p32 My 16 '36

"Family Western. Strong on song, this has action, romance. Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p47 My 15 '36

SINGING KID. Ap 11 '36 85min Warner

Players: Al Jolson, Beverly Roberts, Sybil Jason, Edward Everett Horton, Allen Jenkins, Cab Calloway, Yacht Club Boys

Director: William Keighley

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The picture is packed with clean, wholesome fun, good music and dancing. The ensembles make harmonious pictures instead of being the muddled affairs, created to startle rather than to please that prevail in so many spectacle films."

+ Bks & Films My '36

"A: depends on taste; Y: probably good; C: little value."

Christian Century p647 Ap 29 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A most entertaining elaborate and pretentious production. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Al Jolson heads a notable cast in this musical revue. Mature. Good." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 28 '36

"Clever direction, sparkling music, rhythm, and pep, make this picture most entertaining. Family."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p88 My '36

"In a loose-jointed, noisy production, Al Jolson revives his old successes and offers new songs which are below past standards. The most spectacular as to setting, 'Save Me, Sister,' is dull and in doubtful taste. . . Many of the jokes are so hoary that they could be eliminated without regret. . . Al Jolson's personality will compensate his admirers for weak points in the film. Others should skip it. Adolescents, 12-16: harmless if it entertains; children, 8-12: tiresome."

+ — Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 18 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 29 '36

"A, Y and C: popular type of musical drama."

Par M p50 Je '36

"This is one of Al Jolson's best pictures." S. M. Mullen

+ Scholastic p28 My 2 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Mr 28 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Jolson suffers from excessive nobility of character and, intermittently, a nervous ailment that causes him to lose his voice. Consequently he doesn't sing as much as usual and is not as buoyant. . . The picture lacks humor and drags out mouldy gags. The outstanding song, 'I Love to Singa,' though effective on first hearing, is plugged too much. Edward Everett Horton and Allen Jenkins have little to work with and have to depend on sheer personality. Little Miss Jason, though natural enough is unfortunately a very plain child. Nor is Miss Roberts particularly glamorous." M. E. P.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 11 '36

"Possibly this latest Al Jolson vehicle will turn out to be his best movie effort to date. It has plenty of the glorified show girls, some back stage atmosphere, not too strong a story, but enough to sustain interest." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p60 My '36

"The Singing Kid' [is] one of the best bits of entertainment of the sort I ever saw. . . [It] is a picture you should see if you are looking for clean, decent, clever and lively entertainment which does not endeavor to interest you in the working out of domestic and social problems. The picture was designed to amuse you, and you will find it achieves its purpose."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 Mr 28 '36

"Few American entertainers have stayed at the top of their field as long as mammy-loving Al Jolson. And his latest picture, 'The Singing Kid,' finds him doing, with undiminished energy, the same things he has done in all his other shows. . . Louder than it is funny and more full of jokes than it is of humor, 'The Singing Kid' is a nervous, tuneful trip through Warners' special Broadway." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p57 Ap 25 '36

"Al Jolson's new musical photo-play, a Warner production, is for those who like Jolson, music, and back-stage plots. . . Jolson, plus burnt cork and eight bars of music, is an evening's entertainment to many moviegoers. They will like 'The Singing Kid.' It is the best of the last three Jolson pictures."

+ Lit Digest p19 Mr 28 '36

"A good semi-musical in which the burden of entertainment has been wisely shifted from the aging shoulders of Al Jolson. . . He still sings with the same indifference to pitch and quality that won him the epithet the 'golden-voiced Jolson.' In fact, he's more out of tune than ever, so there ought to be no complaints. But singing aside, he manages to be really amusing in the picture's best number. . . William Keighley's direction of this scene reaches a high-water mark in the medium."

+ New Theatre p18 My '36

"[It is] a routine, familiar and surprisingly common-place musical comedy picture. . . It is the work of that remarkable quartet known as the Yacht Club Boys, who sing topical songs in an incomparable style of their own, that contributes the chief gayety to the occasion. Unfortunately, they are given but two numbers. It would have been advisable to have omitted some of the narrative and, I am heretic enough to add, a few of Mr. Jolson's own precious moments in the interest of providing the Yacht Club Boys with another song or two." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Ap 6 '36

"Mr. Jolson as usual puts on a good show, whatever his material. He has nothing original to offer here; but the songs are lively, the story briskly told and the jokes, however familiar, related with the Jolson gift for comedy. . . This is not his best picture, but it does prove that Al Jolson, as Eddie Cantor remarked at the Strand premiere, is still one of the world's greatest entertainers." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p24 Ap 6 '36

"Equipped with the usual production numbers and—fortunately not so usual—bad Joe Millers, an incredible love story and a hackneyed backstage formula, the new picture is one of the least entertaining of the Jolson series. Among its slender store of assets might be numbered Mr. Jolson himself, singing as exuberantly as ever and trying with might and mammy to give zest to an indifferent score and a lifeless script." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p11 Ap 4 '36

"From all the intrigues, stock figures and stereotyped phrases of backstage romances that have been collected and thrown together under the title of 'The Singing Kid' Al Jolson emerges once again as a trustworthy entertainer—a performer far too engaging and talented to be wasted on such preposterous highjinks. . . In spite of several interesting scenes, 'The Singing Kid' is thin and repetitious, with very little originality at anytime. Moreover, the leisurely pace of the performance rather increases the apathy of the impression it leaves." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p15 Ap 6 '36

"It is a hodge-podge of singas and dancas that revolves about the irrepressible person of Al Jolson and his stooges. It isn't a story; it is a series of moving photographs of Mr. Jolson doing thisa and thata and not getting away with ita, as far as we are concerned."

+ Stage p10 My '36

"Unfortunately, even a galaxy of new talent plus Al Jolson, cannot entirely disguise the fact that, aside from its personnel, 'The Singing Kid' sticks with alarming fidelity to the tradition of its predecessors. . . As entertainment, it boils down to a simple question of taste: Is Jolson's hoarse, good-humored style of putting over a song as acceptable to cinemaddicts now as it was eight years ago when he used it to launch an era of entertainment in the first talkie ever made, 'The Jazz Singer?'"

Time p32 Ap 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Typical Al Jolson offering with the mammy singer in top form, aided by the Yacht Club Boys, in a fast-stepping and singing novelty. . . For the jazz maniacs, it will prove 85 minutes of hilarious entertainment. Family."

+ Box Office p27 Mr 21 '36

"It makes a swell evening's entertainment."

L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 Mr 28 '36

"There's much that's entertaining in this picture. . . Novelty in every phase is the tune to which the show spins. As such it is unique entertainment. It would be wise, if possible, to see the picture in advance of playing to get ideas on how best to publicize it."

+ Motion Pict Herald p38 Mr 21 '36

"Spotty entertainment and one of Al Jolson's minor efforts for Warner Bros. The star should attract enough attention on his own for fair money, but 'The Singing Kid' on its merits won't rate the customary Jolson musical grosses. Story trouble, which is the picture's chief weakness, might have been overcome, as others have, by plenty of trimmings, but the trimmings are not so plentiful this time and it's a case of too much story and not the right kind."

+ Variety p16 Ap 8 '36

SINS OF MAN. My 29 '36 86min 20th century-Fox

Players: Jean Hersholt, Don Ameche, Allen Jenkins, J. Edward Bromberg, Ann Shoemaker

Directors: Otto Brower, Gregory Ratoff

Based on the novel, Job, by Joseph Roth. Jean Hersholt portrays a simple Tyrolian sexton with a passion for music. When his two sons fail him, he is reduced to virtual vagrancy until he is reunited with the younger son, now a famous composer.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The story has a splendid moral, beautifully told, superbly acted and directed. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Well directed and skillfully enacted with Jean Hersholt outstanding in a role admirably suited to his talents. Adults; excellent; 14-18: very good; 8-14: depressing." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good-mature. A fine, thought-provoking picture; smoothly directed." DAR

"In less capable hands the characterization might have been sentimental and maudlin. Understanding direction brings out the high spiritual quality of the story. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A masterly production throughout. Outstanding-family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 23 '36

"Family. This picture pleasingly and understandingly directed, to which beautiful photography, lovely music, sound effects and silences add so much, is one of the truly fine pictures of the year."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 9 '36

"It is not in the plot that the film excels, it is in the touchingly human little episodes that make up the story and in the life-like characterizations. Jean Hersholt is superb. Through his interpretation the character of Chris Freyman is unforgettable. Adolescents, 12-16: yes, but too depressing for some; children, 8-12: too sad."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

"The story is dramatic and well told, appropriate sound effects and music develop the theme, and the stage settings and photography are excellent. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 13 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

SINS OF MAN—Continued

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 23 '36

"Family. (Perhaps too sad for emotional children.) Outstanding."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Interesting story, well acted and directed but over-sentimental. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide Je 13 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Beautiful bit of screen work, lacking the elements of wide popularity, but a picture all lovers of the screen as an expressive art will enjoy for its outstanding cinematic merits. . . Darryl has reason to be proud of 'Sins of Man.' Wise showman that he is, he probably does not look for great returns from it, but no doubt recognizes its value as a prestige picture, one which dignifies the screen as a whole and gains more friends for it."

+ Hollywood Spec p11 My 23 '36

"A relentless attack on the tear ducts, 'The Sins of Man' is so lushly emotional, so unrestrained in its masochism that it more or less defeats itself. In this Jean Hersholt suffers and suffers. . . The film shows that tragedy needs occasional touches of lightness and restraint to be completely moving." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p50 Je 20 '36

"That stalwart character actor . . . Jean Hersholt . . . has been given a rich and varied role in 'Sins of Man.' He handles it with assurance and restrained power. In a screen drama that is constantly skirting the danger line of mawkish sentimentality, he gives a forthright and remarkably persuasive impersonation. The narrative itself is likely to try your patience. It is episodic and disjointed, and leans too heavily on synthetic tragedy. 'Sins of Man' is always more of an exercise in proficient acting than a compelling motion picture. It does not afford Mr. Hersholt a sure-fire part." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p18 Je 19 '36

"Jean Hersholt acts his part to the hilt but it's all in pretty much the same key. It does, however, give him a chance in the latter half to show his mastery of make-up. His ragged, broken, old man is a triumph of characterization. . . Otto Brower and Gregory Ratoff directed like a pair of bang-up morticians. A good job but almost too funereal. However, sincerity should always get a hand." Rob Wagner

+ — Script p8 Je 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An overdose of pathos and a dragging story, which a truly magnificent performance by Jean Hersholt cannot entirely overcome, will create hard-going for this picture so far as appealing to all classes is concerned. Top-notch entertainment for those who like tear-jerkers, it will require intensive selling to interest other classes. Family."

Box Office p17 My 16 '36

"Sentimental tear-jerker designed to satisfy those who like a good cry. Other than the excellent work of Jean Hersholt there is nothing outstanding in the picture. If your patrons like this sort of stuff okay but if not lay-off. Just why two directors were required to make this movie is not quite apparent."

— + Film Curb p12 My 9 '36

"Powerful emotional drama scores for all types of audiences. Story, direction, acting rate highly."

+ Film Daily p12 My 12 '36

"Here is a performance—a magnificent performance—in a simple drama that will literally tear your heart. It is a picture that once seen will never be forgotten. . . At the same time, the picture presents a problem to theaters. It cannot be sold by ordinary methods, for it lacks the usual material for exploitation. You cannot depend upon a ranking star name for draw. There is no spectacle nor light romantic interest. What its destiny may be at the box-office depends entirely upon how it is handled."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 5 '36

"Jean Hersholt scores a personal triumph in this beautifully produced tearjerker which reeks with sentimentality in its relentless determination to send the audience out red-eyed."

Motion Pict Daily p14 My 6 '36

"'Sins of Man' is a class picture. In theme, as acted and in morale it points its primary appeal at those who understand and appreciate fine things. In content it is a somber-toned, sympathy-inspiring, human interest drama. . . The picture will not be an easy one to sell. . . The stunt of showing the picture to the community's opinion-makers may prove effective in stimulating word-of-mouth advertising based upon their comments to create interest among the average theatre-goers."

+ Motion Pict Herald p29 My 16 '36

"Hersholt turns in a swell performance. What the picture does will depend on his draw."

Phila Exhibitor p49 My 15 '36

"Dolorous and somewhat slow through much of its dramatic build-up, and rather exclusively concerned with one man's anguish, 'Sins of Man' will have considerable handicap to overcome in catering to popular taste, which may restrict its box office. . . Picture will be liked and praised where artistic and pure dramatic merits are appreciated because it has careful, effective production, direction and playing and doesn't lack in genuine emotional appeal."

Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 5 '36

SKAERGAARDS-FLIRT. Ap 7 '36 90min Europa

Players: Gideon Wahlberg. Dagmar Ebbesen. Eric Laurent

Director: Arne Bornbusch

A Swedish dialogue film made in Stockholm without English sub-titles. 'Osterman and Sjoeholm are neighboring residents of an island frequented by summer visitors. They plan the marriage of Inga and Erik, respectively their daughter and son, but Lilly, daughter of a wealthy merchant visiting the island, lures Erik away from Inga. When fire destroys the Osterman home he rescues Inga and discovers it is she he really loves.' (Motion Pict Herald)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Amusing comedy. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ap 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The little Cinéma de Paris . . . is echoing these days to the laughter provoked by 'Skaer-gaards-Flirt,' the latest romantic comedy to reach here from Stockholm." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] lukewarm comedy."

— + Film Daily p10 Ap 9 '36

"The photography possesses a peculiarly brilliant quality. In pattern the story is comparable to contemporary American material. . . Reviewed at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, New York, which features foreign-language pictures. Reaction to the comedy dialogue in Swedish was manifested by frequent laughter ranging from chuckle to guffaw."

+ Motion Pict Herald p38 Ap 18 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SKY PARADE. Ap 17 '36 70min Paramount
 Players: Jimmie Allen, William Gargan.
 Katherine De Mille, Kent Taylor
 Director: Otho Lovering
 Based on a radio serial, The Air Adventures of Jimmy Allen.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A fine family picture." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Family-mature." DAR

"The production, though slowly paced at times, presents a fine review of the development of aeroplane flying, with special emphasis on the use of automatic control. . . The cast is uniformly excellent and the direction deft, with the whole picture keyed to a thrilling climax. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Any picture which emphasizes the finer elements of character is worthy of commendation, and this one shows the earnest desire to improve aviation more for the sake of safety than for commercial advantage." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family & junior matinees." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ap 18 '36

"Family. Tense, dramatic situations, crisp direction and convincing acting by a strong cast, led by popular Jimmie Allen, gives this picture unusual and stimulating entertainment."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ap 6 '36

"Family & junior matinees," Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"Suitability: family." Mo Film Bul p89 My '36

"As an exposition of the progress made in commercial aviation since the close of the World War, this picture has a definite educational value. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: if interested."

Motion Pict R My '36

"Juvenile."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"The story is interesting and will doubtless find enthusiastic welcome by juvenile audiences, especially boys since it is not only entertaining, but contains much that is informative of the progress of aviation since the World War. Family & junior matinee."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 6 '36

"A drawn out story. . . Unconvincing and poorly portrayed. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 29 '36

"A and Y: not particularly interesting; C: probably entertaining since it is planned and produced for them."

Par M p50 Je '36

"Family & junior matinees."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Juvenile."

Wkly Guide Ap 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Another melodrama of family interest." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 6 '36

"Its first ten minutes and its last twenty are nearly perfect; its story body is poor talkie. . . Apparently cocky over an excellent beginning, director Otho Lovering evidently sat back and let the picture struggle self-consciously through microphony dialogue and haphazard continuity." Paul Jacobs

+ — Hollywood Spec p13 My 9 '36

"While the picture is, on the whole, quite dull and often downright silly to adults, it should please the air-minded boys for whom it is designed." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills Liberty p38 My 16 '36

"[It] may seem incredible in its story of sky banditry, but as entertainment will be found engrossing as the early Westerns were, when swift hoofbeats marked the tempo and lurid color embellished the plot."

+ N Y Herald Tribune p14 Ap 21 '36

"The picture no doubt is a fine and accurate specimen of contemporary wish-fulfillment for the average immature person. . . Katherine De Mille is the incidental romantic interest, and everybody plays the picture as it should be played; that is, as much like a Saturday afternoon episode of 'The Perils of Pauline' as possible." B. R. C.

N Y Times p17 Ap 20 '36

"Even if its story is more than just a little bit familiar and consists of all the formulae of a nickel-weekly fiction, it has thrills galore and is performed by a cast of pleasant actors." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p15 Ap 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Albeit of only average entertainment value, this Harold Hurley production packs unusual exploitation possibilities because of the pre-selling of Jimmy Allen, via radio, to millions of youngsters. Family."

+ — Box Office p57 Ap 4 '36

"Jimmy Allen is said to have a large [juvenile] following because of his radio serial. . . This fact will, no doubt, help to get business for the picture. It is interesting to note the progress of aviation since the World War but we are very much afraid there is too little excitement to satisfy the children. As for the grown ups the picture simply isn't there."

+ — Film Curb p16 Ap 4 '36

"For the houses which play the better action numbers and for those which have a large [children] patronage, this show is swell stuff. Though logically constructed, the plot is hardly a routine one, and it is loaded with suspense. . . The air scenes look good and the picture shows up well."

+ Film Daily p4 Ap 1 '36

"No cheering will greet the introduction to the screen of the popular radio serial. . . Someone got off on the wrong foot in devising an introductory screen story. It just hasn't enough of what it takes to please [children]."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 28 '36

"Aided by the exploitation it has received over the air, this should do nicely as juvenile entertainment."

Motion Pict Daily p5 Mr 30 '36

"Unless adults are interested in the exploits of Jimmy Allen or are aviation fans, the picture may not hold much interest for them, but for the children who like plenty of action and excitement and want to know the inside workings of airplane manufacturing and flying, the feature is an unusual attraction for special juvenile shows."

Motion Pict Herald p34 Ap 4 '36

"Where Jimmy Allen is popular on the radio, 'The Sky Parade' may get some backing. Elsewhere it will be double featured or neglected. . . Well produced for that type thriller, the show deserves more attention than it will get, except in those sections where radio-conscious fans might be impressed."

N Y Exhibitor p43 Ap 25 '36

"Strong bet for juvenile trade, with plenty of promotional possibilities via the Jimmie Allen radio and newspaper strips. May also get by for general trade in those spots which serve adventures and Westerns as the regular dish. Children are the prime market, however, for

SKY PARADE—Continued

'Sky Parade' is essentially a cross between a radio serial, a newspaper strip, and a horse opera of the ozone with planes for nags."

Variety p14 Ap 22 '36

"Smartly produced by Harold Hurley, this feature, aimed at the mass of [children] who follow the exploits of Jimmy Allen on the air and in the newspapers should show good returns. Picture will hold little interest for adults but Jimmy Allen in the picture turns out to be all that his juvenile followers expect. . . Screen play is written down to Allen's followers as is necessary, at times might seem foolish to adults, but the idea is okay."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 28 '36

SMALL TOWN GIRL. Ap 10 '36 90min MGM

Players: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor, Binnie Barnes, Lewis Stone

Director: William A. Wellman

Based on the novel of the same title by Ben Ames Williams. "Janet Gaynor is a small town ingenue, weary of a dull suitor, an exasperating family, the monotonous routine of a village store and the whole depressing round of small town activities. Running out in a tantrum, she meets an engaging young stranger, Robert Taylor, breezing through town from a football game, is invited for a ride and finds herself married to the young surgeon after both have been pretty high with bubbly—married without love and on the eve of Taylor's promised wedding to a fellow socialite, Binnie Barnes." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair; Y: not the best; C: No."

Christian Century p647 Ap 29 '36

"Faulty direction in the surgical scenes, but entertaining fare for the adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Considerable drinking and the 'gin marriage' which is the crux of the plot, might preclude this picture from impressionable youth. Adults: very good; 14-18: very good; 8-14: mature. Possible for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"No detail has been overlooked to make this story ring true and the result will be gratifying to all ages of audiences. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A good story, improbable but entertaining with good comedy relief. Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 18 '36

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ap 6 '36

"Adults & young people."

Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p89 My '36

"Janet Gaynor, by her personality, almost convinces one that a refined and innocent young girl may pick up a ride with a perfect stranger, spend the night drinking at a road house and end by marrying the gentleman before dawn—but she doesn't quite succeed in such an impossible task. . . The presentation of such a farcical story as realism is far from satisfactory. It is regrettable that these actors and actresses are placed in a story of such low moral tone. Fair. Adults."

+ Motion Pict Guide My '36

"Although a 'gin' marriage is a poor point of departure for any young people when the haze lifts, Kay and Bob are very genuine and worthwhile, and their problem and that of the boy's parents in working out an unpropitious situation wins the sympathy and undivided attention of the audience. . . Credit is due for the good taste with which difficult moments are treated, the amusing use of incident, natural conversation, up-to-date direction. Adolescents, 12-16: needs mature judgment to evaluate; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R My '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Excellent entertainment is provided by a large and capable cast, ably directed in an interesting adaptation of a popular novel. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 6 '36

"[It] contains a marriage under questionable circumstances. Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 6 '36

"A and Y: enjoyable modern Cinderella story, based on Ben Ames Williams' novel, well-directed and acted; C: if it interests."

Par M p50 Je '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Rather long for the mild suspense involved, but rich in amusing incidents and characters. Mature."

Wkly Guide Ap 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Exaggeratedly lavish story-book settings and a pleasantly unreal plot make 'Small Town Girl' an excellent box-office proposition, particularly—it may be added—for the small towns." B. L.

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 18 '36

"The story gives the leads full opportunity to turn on their widely-liked charm and few spectators seem to mind the story's trashiness."

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 18 '36

"After seeing the picture, I still think the story is a trivial one. . . But when all of it is put in a well written script, produced as a picture by Hunt Stromberg, directed by William Wellman, with Janet Gaynor, as the girl—well, it makes a lot of difference."

+ Hollywood Spec p23 Ap 11 '36

"The picture retells the Cinderella tale without the slightest variation on the original theme. But so smartly is it constructed, so amiable are playing and dialogue, that the old situations take on a sprightly freshness that compensates for their lack of novelty. . . While it is true that 'Small Town Girl' works out in a way that will surprise no one, it is also true that Director William Wellman and the scenarists have injected enough playfully sharp incidents to keep the piece lively and entertaining." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p37 My 16 '36

"Mr. Robert Taylor repeats in 'Small Town Girl,' the portrayal he inflicted upon us in 'Magnificent Obsession' of an asinine, quippy, windy, rich, young idiot. . . I have been dodging Janet Gaynor pictures for a long time, but she is really a pretty nice girl fundamentally, and gives us, in this picture, only a minimum of her Shirley Temple twinkle and baby talk, and is a very sweet person in her more serious moments." Don Herold

Life p22 Je '36

"[It] is a typical piece of magazine fiction, running along smoothly and inconsequentially. Its situations are improbable, its characters lightly sketched, its eventual outcome never difficult to foresee. . . It is, thanks to the happy unreality of its mood, almost always entertaining." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p10 Ap 11 '36

"[It] has been animated by a facile group of players and may, as easily, be dismissed as another pleasant, if incurably romantic, bit of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. There were moments in the beginning when it promised to be considerably more and we permitted ourselves the luxury of anticipating another 'Alice Adams.' But then up jumped the plot-boilers." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p19 Ap 11 '36

"Although the material is familiar, the treatment is fairly fresh and imaginative. . . Take this 'Small Town Girl' as a moderately amusing romp that should enjoy a fair amount of spring-time popularity." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p7 Ap 11 '36

"'Small Town Girl' is a sprightly film, well acted, directed, and produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who spotted it with a generous share of amusing incidentals."

+ News-Wk p32 Ap 18 '36

"[The story] is told unaffectedly and often quite entertainingly."

+ Stage p10 My '36

Time p49 Ap 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Modern Cinderella story with the usual happy ending, this is better than average entertainment for all types of audiences. [It is] intelligently produced, well directed and adequately acted. Family."

+ Box Office p23 Ap 18 '36

"'Small Town Girl' is one of the Real pictures to flash onto the screen this year, and one which is bound to be a great box-office attraction."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 My 30 '36

"With some judicious cutting and the action speeded up a bit thereby, this will be very appealing entertainment. Perhaps it will be more successful in the smaller situations but it is a right good comedy-drama for anybody's theatre."

+ Film Curb p12 Ap 25 '36

"Robert Taylor and Janet Gaynor are presented in an enjoyable piece of comedy-drama which should appeal to the masses, and appealing to them means box-office. It may be a Cinderella story but it is very modern and so well written and directed that it can't help pleasing most everyone. The working girls, especially, won't miss it."

+ Film Daily p12 Ap 2 '36

"It should bring satisfactory results everywhere. In addition to a plot with wide appeal, the picture offers a performance by Janet Gaynor which should place her anew in the front rank of name attractions. Teamed with Robert Taylor, Miss Gaynor offers a characterization which, while similar, is at the same time different from her previous efforts and demonstrates conclusively her complete understanding of acting nuances. . . . Aided by the benefit of newspaper serialization, plus the strength of the picture itself, top results seem assured."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 Ap 1 '36

"Modern in atmosphere and tastefully produced, this looks like a show to engage the attention of both patrons and exhibitors. . . . Previewed in Wilshire Theatre, Los Angeles, first-run neighborhood house. Though long drawn out in several situations, which undoubtedly will be trimmed, the picture held the attention of the audience, which seemed to be highly appreciative of the work of the starring players."

+ Motion Pict Herald p54 Ap 11 '36

"Backed by a national newspaper serialization, with star names to sell, 'Small Town Girl' is an exploitable picture that should account for itself nicely. . . . Estimate: good program anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p42 Ap 25 '36

"'Small Town Girl' is romance with nice comedy sequences and with a well-balanced cast. All classes short of the hard boiled minority will accept it on its own terms. . . . Story has been worked and the cast paced along standard formula. [This] is not a criticism but a classification."

Variety p16 Ap 15 '36

"'Small Town Girl' has the poignant quality which, coupled with impressive production and name appeal, spells reliable box office. . . . Picture will amply please the Gaynor admirers, plus the growing rank of Robert Taylor fans, and holds particular strength for women audiences in its captivating love story."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 31 '36

SNOWED UNDER. Ap 4 '36 63min Warner

Players: George Brent. Genevieve Tobin. Glenda Farrell. Patricia Ellis. Frank McHugh

Director: Raymond Enright

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Although just a light bit of nonsense the film is very funny."

+ Bks & Films My '36

"A: mediocre; Y and C: no."

Christian Century p783 Je 3 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"Objection: the whole moral tone is bad—the divorce angle and the suggestive remarks. Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 22 '36

"Though it is an artificial little comedy, treading on delicate ground at times, it is well done. Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The play moves at a merry pace. Not important, but decidedly cheerful."

+ — Canadian M p61 My '36

"'Snowed Under' is full of those things that are always happening in the movies and that seldom happen in life. . . . The only ambition of pictures like this is to fill out the tail end of double-feature bills. With bank nights, Mickey Mouse, newsreels, and Pete Smith to help, 'Snowed Under' should accomplish its little task." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p58 Ap 25 '36

"In retrospect one doesn't know whether to laugh or yawn at the entertainment. It certainly strains for effect, and its theatrical situations are definitely phony, yet its antics remain reasonably hilarious, and some of its bright lines are actually bright." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 Mr 30 '36

"It must have struck someone in Hollywood as funny to coop up in a snowbound Connecticut farmhouse, a playwright, two of his ex-wives, a susceptible subdebantante, a deputy sheriff, and an alimony-demanding lawyer. . . . The film, badly in need of witty lines or amusing characters, gets instead some minor slapstick. Even that helped. . . . 'Snowed Under' is one of those sad episodes, a farce which doesn't come off." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p24 Mr 30 '36

"Only a strong sense of duty, coupled with the grim realization that things could not possibly take a turn for the worse, kept us chained to a seat in the Strand yesterday watching one of the Warner stock companies struggling as best they could with a loud, witless and tiresome farce called 'Snowed Under.'" F. S. Nugent

— — N Y Times p17 Mr 30 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SNOWED UNDER—Continued

"Although the central idea of 'Snowed Under'—three women going out to get their man—may have good possibilities for routine entertainment, the unsteady writing and the awkward acting spare the audience excessive pleasure. If it were competently written and if the actors were less noticeable, audiences going into the Strand might be fairly well served. But those who do will be greeted with slovenly speeches, slipshod direction and a quite artless little series of complications involving all the staple elements of farce. Indeed, they will scarcely be compensated at all, for 'Snowed Under' is just another transient visitor at that theater," William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p13 Mr 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Amusing farce which, due to fast pace, will please average patron in spite of weak plot, flippant dialogue and slapstick comedy. Family."

Box Office p27 Mr 28 '36

"Farce comedy, this majors in ingredients that ordinarily make customers laugh. The humor is sometimes broad, sometimes subtle, yet always it has the power to attain its objective. . . . Fast moving, not bothering with inconsequential but devoting itself solely to the purpose of being nonsensically amusing, the show has plenty to interest the comedy fans."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 Mr 21 '36

SONG OF CHINA. 65min Douglas MacLean

Players: Lim Cho-cho. Shang Kwah-wu. Li Shoh-shoh

Director: Lo Ming-yau

A silent film with musical background produced in China with Chinese and English subtitles. "[It] unfolds as a naive saga of filial devotion. Covering family life for four generations, it shows the second and fourth sons devoted to the Chinese tradition of parental respect, with the third son a prodigal who goes to the city for a period of riotous living, but returns repentant at the end." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The lives of several generations of a fine Chinese family are followed through discontent, disobedience, and redemption, in a beautiful manner in the very best of taste. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Slow-moving, it yet offers an interesting study of Oriental life. Musical background. Adults: interesting; 14-18: mature; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Outstanding, and an educational picture for all ages. Notable for manners and customs, use of silences, the beauty and suitability of the musical score, the photography, and because entirely done by Chinese. Mature-family. Excellent." DAR

"'Song of China' is a picture of great dignity and charm. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"The remarkably fine characterizations of the actors make this a picture to be enjoyed and long remembered. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 27 '36

"The acting is superb in its restraint, symbolism is used throughout, and while the story moves at snail's pace according to American standards, it has a distinct artistic and educational value. . . . Adolescents, 12-16: worth while; children, 8-12: tiring."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

"Entirely different in tempo it cannot be compared with American and English productions. . . . Interesting for the entire family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 27 '36

"[It is] an excellent production. General patronage."

+ + Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"I was surprised by the high degree of excellence achieved in its making. In Hollywood we have a smug sort of view of ourselves as picture makers. We are surprised when someone working somewhere else sends us something as good as our best. . . . Before the first reel has been run you will cease wondering at the fact of its being a wholly Chinese creation and become aware you are looking at one of the finest motion pictures it ever has been your good fortune to see. . . . It is a production only intelligent audiences will appreciate. . . . Our audiences, however, trained by the general run of Hollywood pictures to a lower order of intelligence than 'Song of China' demands for its full appreciation, may not accord it the welcome its artistic merits entitle it to."

+ + Hollywood Spec p7 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"For the arty theaters and for houses that have a large Chinese following, this picture should be good fare. Produced, directed, written, photographed, and played by the native Chinese, it makes an interesting novelty. The picture was made as a silent and with explanatory titles, one can follow the plot without any difficulty."

Film Daily p6 My 26 '36

"This odd and interesting feature-length picture, produced in China by Chinese and brought to this country by Douglas MacLean, will find a special welcome in the art theaters and among young students everywhere. It will do well as a cultural novelty to fill out neighborhood double bills where there is a class or school patronage and can, as a rule, best be exploited through educational groups. . . . Apart from the naive charm of its rather slow-moving story it has study interest in its glimpse of old Chinese manners and customs," and of the later infiltration of western ways."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 22 '36

"[It] may hold interest as a novelty in metropolitan centers. . . . A musical background accompanies the action which will please some western ears but grate on others. The photography is surprisingly good and the acting and direction have a strong professional flavor."

Motion Pict Daily p7 My 26 '36

"Estimate: for Chinese, art houses, only."

Phila Exhibitor p25 Je 15 '36

"'Song of China' might just as well have stayed in the Orient for all the good it will do at the box office in this country. Truly this is a poignant drama of life in the far east, but nearly everyone in America knows much more of the situation currently than is displayed pictorially in the film. . . . For a novelty it's okay, but not in a theatre where people pay good coin to see something. . . . The musical score carries it along beautifully. In fact, if it weren't for the music people would walk out on it. Secondly, the photography is excellent."

— Variety (Hollywood) p5 My 22 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SONG OF THE SADDLE. F 22 '36 63min First national Players: Dick Foran. Charles Middleton.

George Ernest. Bonita Granville. Alma
Lloyd

Director: Louis King

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This is a western drama, constructed on familiar lines. Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p30 Ja 27 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: not recommended; children, 8-12: unsuited."

Motion Pict R Ja '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Not since the glorious days of Bill Hart, Tom Mix, Harry Carey et al. has there been a sagebrush drama as full of action as [this] Warner production. . . [It] is a horse opera embodying practically all of the elements which distinguished the rip-snorting silent films of the covered-wagon days in the West." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p13 Mr 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A better than average Western, good enough as program fare for even those who don't usually go for this type of film."

+ Film Daily p9 Ap 29 '36

"The vengeance motivation of 'The Count of Monte Cristo' animates this western drama in which Dick Foran manages, between stage-coach holdups and similar dramatic incidents, to sing a couple of song numbers which do not detract from the earnestness of the plot presentation."

Motion Pict Herald p56 Ap 11 '36

"Warner Bros. has a sprightly bronc from the western corral, and one that will do well at the window of family and Western houses. Title is a misnomer because it gives no hint at glowing action and spirited abandon found in this sagebrush Robin Hood tale. . . Absence of name draw will make real selling essential. But properly sold, word-of-mouth should help to put it over. A sure bet for dualers and may stand alone in some spots."

+ Variety p63 Mr 25 '36

SONG OF THE TRAIL. F 24 '36 68min Ambassador

Players: Kermit Maynard. Evelyn Brent.
Fuzzy Knight. Antoinette Lees

Director: Russell Hopton

Based on novel of same title by James Oliver Curwood. A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: regulation Western."

Par M p50 Je '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Regulation horse opera that contains its full share of what it takes to make a Western. One novelty is a male chorus who do one song in good style."

+ Film Curb p6 Ap 4 '36

"This Western isn't all fighting, chasing, and gun play, although there is enough to satisfy the action folks. In one of the sequences, Kermit's antics reminds one of Douglas Fairbanks with his flying, jumping, and sliding. Maurice Conn has given this production more entertainment value than is usually found in products of this classification and on that score, the picture might play some dates in the better bracket."

+ Film Daily p9 Mr 27 '36

"Though constructed on a routine action formula, this picture offers a cast headed by Kermit Maynard and Evelyn Brent and the name of James Oliver Curwood as author of the original story to attract followers of hard-riding drama."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Mr 28 '36

"Sticking true to Western formula this offers nothing new in the treatment that goes to make for hard riding, two-fisted and triple-gun-toting gents of the wide open spaces. As for action, plot and simplicity of narrative, it will never smash the illusion of a 10-year-old mind that the glamorous wild west is a series of galloping hoofs, riding to victory against showers of bullets that hit every mark but the hero. . . As for story and plot, it is not what one expects from the pen of James Oliver Curwood."

— Variety (Hollywood) p8 Mr 25 '36

SONS O' GUNS. My 30 '36 82min Warner

Players: Joe E. Brown. Joan Blondell.
Beverly Roberts. Eric Blore. Winifred
Shaw. Joseph King. G. P. Huntley, Jr.

Director: Lloyd Bacon

Based on a musical comedy, Tin Hats, by Fred Thompson and Jack Donahue. "Story deals with Joe E. Brown, an actor, a slacker during late war. He's dragged into the army because he happens to come out of the theatre wearing a stage uniform. In France he gets mixed up with a spy, goes to prison, escapes with the aid of a British officer's uniform. Sent over the top, he manages to capture an entire regiment of German soldiers, returns to find himself a hero." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: amusing."

Christian Century p855 Je 10 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: good; 14-18: good; 8-14: good. Family & junior matinees." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture has several genuinely funny sequences and is spiced with bits of clever dialogue, but there is too little substance to keep it from being a bit draggy now and then. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Splendid entertainment for the family. (Objections to Y.M.C.A. entertainment episode.)" S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul My 16 '36

"All ages & junior matinee."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 7 '36

"As a rollicking satire on the assinnity of war from the point of view of the actual combatants, this film is priceless. As a Joe E. Brown comedy it is one of his very best. . . Enthusiastically recommended for family groups or any other audience. Family."

+ Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"Another Joe E. Brown picture in the typical Joe E. Brown style—perfectly silly and yet it may be of some real value in that it joins the 'Veterans of Future Wars' movement in making fun of war, and very few men or things can stand up against ridicule. Adolescents, 12-16: amusing; children, 8-12: yes."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

SONS O' GUNS—Continued

"Family—junior."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Full of humor and hearty laughs, this satire on war, which might serve as peace propaganda, is clever and delightful, and while it puts no tax on the mentality will prove real relaxation for the entire family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 6 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"Family—junior."

Wkly Guide My 16 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Sons O' Guns' may be just another funny film to the unobserving, but a closer scrutiny of its make-up will show an exceptional depth and a clear evaluation of our emotional thinking. . . Of course Joe Brown's ability needs no comment or praise. His amazingly consistent successes eulogise him beyond anything I might add. Joe Brown is simply Joe Brown. There is no other comedian who can replace him." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p13 My 9 '36

"'Sons O' Guns' is often quite amusing. In fact, it's much funnier than it has any right to be." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p50 Je 13 '36

"Out in Hollywood, where the picture has been seen, there is an impetuous desire to class it with some of the best of Chaplin, notably that superlative comedian's 'Shoulder Arms.' Some critics may agree with this, most won't. None, however, is likely to find the film anything but first rate. It is a very funny motion-picture. . . It definitely is Joe E. Brown's best picture."

+ Lit Digest p20 My 9 '36

"It is the typical Joe E. Brown comedy of making faces, emitting odd noises and managing to be an altogether ridiculous buck private, an achievement that kept the Strand audience yesterday in stitches over his one-man show. . . The wisecracking dialogue is bright, and while the story is pretty outmoded by now because satires on the war and farces about war having been run into the ground, the absurdity of war is made sharply evident even in a slapstick a thing as this." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p19 My 15 '36

"The plot gets pretty rough-and-tumble before it's over, with the slapstick humor fading into silliness toward the close. Mr. Brown's fans will undoubtedly like it all, however, and the picture has some really funny episodes. Not all the gags are fresh, but Mr. Brown performs his antics with a contagious enjoyment." Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p23 My 14 '36

"[It is an] apparent attempt at a war film to end all war films. It is only fair to assume that such a consummation was what Director Lloyd Bacon had in mind, because the war he has produced for Warners is just the silliest business in the world. Not a single soul goes west." J. T. M.

N Y Times p29 My 14 '36

"This is a routine vehicle. . . It emerges from Warner Brothers' studios a Model T job, creaking with hoary gags and hokum humor, and the face-making Mr. Brown is forced to spasms in his heroic attempts to redeem it. . . There are some sequences that do razz the sorry silliness of embattling nations. It is a minor film tragedy, that nothing is done about it to make them effective and they appear in the film only as episodes meant to be funny. A little more punch and a little more point would have resulted in a clever satire of humanity's meanest side." Douglas Gilbert

+ — N Y World-Telegram p4b My 16 '36

"Joe E. Brown rushes into No Man's Land and returns scarred, but in a better-than-expected condition. . . Like most of this comedian's films, 'Sons O' Guns' is nearly a one-man job but in this instance Jerry Wald and Julius Epstein have manufactured a series of gags, mainly derivative, that pop with machine-gun rapidity. . . Eric Blore is immensely humorous as a valet who finds it difficult to forget that he's been a gentleman's gentleman." H. S.

+ Script p11 My 23 '36

"People who are amused by the fact that Joe E. Brown's mouth resembles an omelet will not mind this version of a music-comedy in which the late Jack Donahue danced in 1929-30. . . Good pantomime: Brown, convinced that he is to be shot, rehearsing the way he will smoke a last cigaret with heroic nonchalance."

Time p50 My 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Rampant with extraordinarily clever situations timed perfectly, this is by far Joe E. Brown's best. . . The story, unlike those of most Brown vehicles, gives the gentleman of the gargantuan mouth a real chance to emote. Family."

+ Box Office p25 My 9 '36

"It's highly amusing from start to finish. As a member of the A.E.F., Joe is a scream. He puts over his stuff as only he can do, it. His fans will be delighted with this one."

+ Film Curb p15 My 2 '36

"Joe E. Brown's comedy riot is a knockout for laughs; at the box-office it should ring with the best of the Browns. The screenplay is loaded with hilarious situations, a wealth of gags, and dialogue that is brisk and clever. . . The material allows Brown to run the gamut of his many abilities among them being singing, dancing and control of a funny English and 'Dutch' dialect, all being outstandingly funny."

+ Film Daily p9 Ap 29 '36

"It is richly gagged for steady laughter and the best he has ever turned out for Warners. It can be counted on for universal popularity and should be a substantial money-maker at almost all box offices."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 25 '36

"The film is played and directed to accent its fun-provoking potentialities. It is different from the usual Brown vehicle. It has novelty that ought to be popular, unless war pictures are taboo even from the comic side. The personal popularity of the star should assure satisfactory grosses where they like him."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 27 '36

"Comedy is the essence of the attraction. There are only a few conflict scenes and they are treated to accentuate the motivating quality. The picture may be sold with that asset in mind, with the maximum amount of attention devoted to Brown."

+ Motion Pict Herald p50 My 2 '36

"The result is entertaining program that ought to hit home in sections where the Brown antics mean box office: they are plenty."

+ Phila Exhibitor p47 My 15 '36

"As a starrer for Joe E. Brown, it is a lightweight. . . [The] scripters resorted too often to stale, radio-murdered file jokes. It's 'Sons o' Puns' now. Book got by on the stage because it was simply the foundation for a musical. As a picture it's non-musical, despite the insertion of a couple of songs, and the book, regardless of the refurbishing, still lacks substance enough for straight playing."

— + Variety p12 My 20 '36

"'Sons o' Guns' is tip-top fare for the star. His followers will see him doing everything they fancy and that's enough for any Brown picture. . . What the story lacks is made up in gags. Toppers are Brown's apache dance, his scene with the drunken officer, his capture of the Germans. Brown is in every scene, works harder than usual, is himself throughout."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 25 '36

SOVIET NEWS. Ap 10 '36 70min Amkino

A compilation of Russian travelogues with English narration and French and English subtitles.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The most interesting feature of 'Soviet News' is the reel which depicts the Jewish State Theatre's fifteenth jubilee presentation of 'King Lear.' Our only regret is that the filmed chronicle of this Shakespearean comedy was not more comprehensive." T. M. P.

N Y Times p19 Ap 11 '36

"Frankly, there is nothing particularly striking about 'Soviet News' either in the material it shows or the manner in which it has been compiled. Parts of it are, of course, interesting, but on the whole it is a fairly undistinguished offering, with very little in it except for those whose interest in everything that comes from Russia knows no limits."

William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 Ap 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Highly interesting but obviously one-sided travelogue of Soviet Russia, good for program coupling."

Film Daily p6 Ap 13 '36

"The material may be considered as correlated by association and sequence, although it is taken from various sources and is not otherwise unified."

Motion Pict Herald p41 Ap 25 '36

SPECIAL INVESTIGATOR. My 8 '36 60min RKO

Players: Richard Dix. Margaret Callahan. Joseph Sawyer

Director: Louis King

Based on a novel of the same title by Erle Stanley Gardner. "As the story opens [Richard Dix] has just won a case as attorney for a racketeer and has been sharply censured by a judge. A short time later his brother, a G-Man, is shot by a gang that has robbed a bank of gold bullion." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair of kind; Y: doubtful; C: no." Christian Century p887 Je 17 '36

"An ordinary gangster picture of which we have had too many. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Mature." DAR

"A well-chosen cast and good direction brings this a little above the usual run of 'gangster' pictures. Constructive, perhaps, in that it may have a salutary effect on criminal lawyers wondering whether or not they shall help criminals evade the law. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Dramatic, tense and well acted, the film nevertheless offers little that is constructive or worthwhile for any audience. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Good story, well told and will prove interesting to those who like this type of picture. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul My 2 '36

"Interesting of its kind, this picture deals with the awakening of the public and the judiciary to the part criminal lawyers play in the releasing of guilty criminals through brilliant defense. Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ap 22 '36

"Adult."

Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"The rapid fire of slangy dialogue interspersed with revolver shots keeps up a high pitch of excitement; there are no unnecessary scenes, no tedious digressions from the plot. . . Most children would thoroughly enjoy the thrills in this short film. Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p89 My '36

"The success of this picture is a tribute to clever direction and camera work and an excellent use of suspense. The story with an obvious and hackneyed plot is so dramatically told that it seems new. Adolescents, 12-16: no, because of too sordid atmosphere; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"A fairly interesting picture, with a good cast and direction but little suspense. Fair for family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 22 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Happily very little chatter was canned along with the plentiful action."

Christian Science Monitor p15 My 2 '36

"This piece is above average of its kind, which is possibly due to Cliff Reid's production and the speed and color of Louis King's direction. For, without putting much strain on one's intelligence, the story holds attention, due to its brisk pace, its suspense and the very simplicity of its plot. The outdoor sets too, with dusky mountains in the distance and spacious freedom confronting the cameras, capture the imagination." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 Ap 26 '36

"The picture, aside from being technically spotty, with much poorly concealed splicing and patching, is a reasonably astute bid for the Times Square pedestrian trade." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 25 '36

"Though nothing exceptional, 'Special Investigator' has enough zip and thrills in it to hold the interest of the movie-goer who likes fast-moving underworld films." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p4c Ap 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An adequate melodrama built around a story that is much better than its adaptation. Family."

+ Box Office p33 Ap 25 '36

"The action is fast and exciting. Wherever melodramas of this type are liked this one seems bound to please. Dix gives one of his best performances."

+ Film Curb p12 Ap 18 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

SPECIAL INVESTIGATOR—Continued

"Good program picture with 'G-Man' theme in outdoor locale is interesting throughout."

+ Film Daily p8 Ap 27 '36

"Bordering upon a screen expose of still another racket, 'Special Investigator' remains a minor effort for all concerned. It is not expected to achieve anything higher than the lower half of double bills. . . The entire affair bears aspects of a tale too often told."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 18 '36

"By shrewdly mixing western small town and ranch backgrounds with city atmosphere Radio has given Richard Dix a vehicle that furnishes appeal to both types of his fans—the Western enthusiasts and the girls who like to see him dolled up by high-priced tailors. . . The picture ranks well up among Dix's recent efforts."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Ap 14 '36

"The tracking down of a gangster and his affiliates covers a wide geographical area and the plot is worked out in complete seriousness without comedy relief. . . The love story, likewise, departs from routine channels."

Motion Pict Herald p53 My 2 '36

"Off the horse for the first time in several pictures, Dix turns in a fair performance but the net result is nothing extraordinary."

— + N Y Exhibitor p23 My 10 '36

"Richard Dix's name is the only thing that saves this one and it's doubtful that the star can do much toward overcoming its shortcomings where the box office is concerned. On merit it belongs on the double bills. . . Louis King's direction manages to keep things alive for sixty minutes and the pace is typical of the average Western."

+ — Variety p15 Ap 29 '36

"Following somewhat familiar formulas, with here and there a somewhat different angle injected, this Cliff Reid picture featuring Richard Dix falls short of being satisfactory box-office fare."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 18 '36

SPEED. My 8 '36 65min MGM

Players: James Stewart, Una Merkel, Ted Healy, Wendy Barrie, Weldon Heyburn

Director: Edwin L. Marin

"Its background is the motor car industry and it deals with the struggles of a test driver to perfect his carburetor invention. He is a failure at the Indianapolis speedway races, his car crashing. Through the intervention of a girl, he is backed by his firm in a second try at Muroc Dry Lake. There he proves his invention but again lands in the hospital."

Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: poor; Y: perhaps; C: if it interests."
Christian Century p87 Je 17 '36

"[It is] a picture that will hold the attention and be the topic of conversation for the men and boys of any neighborhood when released. Family & junior matinee." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Interesting for mature audiences." DAR

"This picture has some sequences of daredevil drivers testing new models of automobiles at the factory and auto races, but is otherwise undistinguished. . . The 'shots' of the automobile plant, showing manufacturing, tests, assemblings, etc., are interesting, but the picture is too exciting for sensitive children or grown-ups." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The film is well acted and thrilling but over-exciting for children. Adults & young people." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"It is always interesting to peer behind the scenes in a great industry and when that industry, as in the case of this picture's background, is as close to the popular interest as the automobile, a uniqueness of appeal is assured. . . Enough comedy to offset the tender moments for any but sensitive children. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul My 9 '36

"Family. An unusually interesting [picture] which will have wide appeal."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 27 '36

"Family & junior matinee."

Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: of especial interest to boys; children, 8-12: too exciting."

Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 1 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 14 '36

"Exciting for small children. Family & junior matinee."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Even three love affairs do not suffice to lift this melodrama out of the machine-made ruck for those not interested in details of auto building and testing, as ingredients for entertainment films. The picture has the air of a good short educational subject mistakenly padded into a feature."

— + Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 13 '36

"Stewart, with a personality which could gain him recognition as perhaps the most sympathetic young player on the screen, one who could fill theatres if given lovable gentle, human roles, is here a roughneck mechanic. . . There is no excuse for the characterization given him. . . Wendy Barrie, in the leading feminine role, lacks the personality and ability to make it appealing. She walks through the part without displaying appreciation of its values. . . The picture presents a striking example of how close-ups should not be used."

— Hollywood Spec p10 My 9 '36

"Although it deals with material which suggests exciting screen possibilities, 'Speed,' is a very ordinary Hollywood stencil. . . There is a passage depicting the mechanical miracles of an assembly plant that has been so maladroitly directed and photographed that it is boring where it might have been vastly intriguing. . . With the exception of Mr. Healy, the acting neither relieves nor accentuates the banalities of 'Speed.'" Howard Barnes

— + N Y Herald Tribune p8 My 16 '36

"The story of this one will arouse the envy of no playwright. Its routine sentimentality is interrupted only by some breathtaking races and a really funny characterization by Ted Healy. . . 'Speed' is a fair program picture." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p10 My 16 '36

"James Stewart and Wendy Barrie take their followers on a respectful tour through an automobile plant in the new film, 'Speed.' . . Edifying as it all unquestionably is, it does not prevent 'Speed' from being an essentially minor motor opera, in which a carburetor is the hero and Ted Healy the comic relief. . . [It is no] more than a passable program picture." F. S. Nugent

— + N Y Times p11 My 16 '36

"The film is as fast as its title, sequence after sequence is admirably shot, the dialogue is smart." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World-Telegram p13 My 18 '36

"'Speed' [is] a very, very slow film, with a great deal of talk about the problems of car-buretors and jealousy." John Mosher
— New Yorker p89 My 23 '36

"'Speed' is an example of the proficiency of Hollywood studios in taking an obvious yarn, and, through deft writing, acting and production, converting it into a worthy evening whiler-awayer." Herb Sterne
+ Script p10 My 23 '36

"'Speed' is an incredibly hackneyed story. . . Adequate acting by James Stewart and Wendy Barrie give 'Speed' its only tinge of interest."
— Time p50 My 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Lacking somewhat in story, good production saves this from falling far below the usual M-G-M standard. In spots the continuity not only lags, but becomes confusing. Family."
— + Box Office p63 My 2 '36

"Contains plenty of exciting and dramatic sequences and has a nice sprinkling of comedy throughout. Quite a bit above usual program grade. . . Should be well received by most any audience."
+ Film Curb p11 My 2 '36

"As a program number for the action and excitement fans, this picture meets the requirements. Using the Indianapolis Speedway, and the race course at Muroc Dry Lake, the show has working backgrounds that lately have been in the news. With the Chrysler plant in Detroit as another spot where the action is laid, they make useful and interesting production values."
+ Film Daily p9 Ap 29 '36

"Seriously handicapped by a slim, inadequate story and the gross miscasting of an important character, 'Speed' will just get by, even as a program attraction. The plot has little that is new to recommend it. . . James Stewart's performance is thrown slightly off key by the heavy histrionics of Weldon Heyburn, playing a motor engineer whose interference is resented by Stewart. In Heyburn's hand, the part is so weak that even the climaxing rescue does not give it strength."
— Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 24 '36

"An engaging individual performance by James Stewart against the fascinating background of a motor factory gives this production standout value as a program picture. . . The interesting factory scenes and exciting racetrack sequences are well spotted in the screen play."
+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 27 '36

"Fast moving as the title would indicate, the picture packs plenty of excitement, as well as love interest, comedy and drama. Previewed in the Westwood Village Theatre. Audience reaction was favorable to both efforts of players and production effects."
+ Motion Pict Herald p50 My 2 '36

"Family action drama. Directed from the action angle, with not too much romance, the show will be too weak for single de-luxers, should prove program entertainment for the lesser runs."
+ Phila Exhibitor p46 My 15 '36

"With an automobile race as foundation; Wendy Barrie, Una Merkel and Ted Healy, as the marquee lure; and overboard on news-reel clips, the prospects of this one are not overbright. It offers a new romantic lead, but film shoppers are not interested in debuts, generally. . . Off to a slow start, the plot picks up presently, but there is little to motivate the story and it never develops much of a thrill until the speed test."
— + Variety p12 My 20 '36

"Here's a B picture that should be able to hold its own in many places, can major on any twin bill. Picture has action and an interesting story, but most of all it has James Stewart, who is sure to hit stardom. Lad has a personality not unlike Fred MacMurray, a natural, pleasing delivery which will gather him a host of fans."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 24 '36

SPEED REPORTER. (Release date not determined) 58min Reliable

Players: Richard Talmadge, Luana Walters, Richard Cramer

Director: Bernard B. Ray

"The story is an actionful newspaper yarn, with Talmadge as a reporter who exposes an underworld gang in control of a reform organization, and wins a sob sister for a wife."
Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a fast-action picture that will surely satisfy any audience that likes such films. Talmadge is a swift moving reporter and he puts over an excellent performance."
+ Film Curb p8 My 23 '36

"This fast moving affair should make first class entertainment for the action houses. There is always something doing, and the piece has a lot of suspense."
+ Film Daily p6 My 15 '36

SUNDOWN SAUNDERS. Mr 25 '36 60min Supreme

Players: Bob Steele, Catherine Cotter, Earl Devire

Director: Robert N. Bradbury

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With plenty of pep all the way this is an excellent Western. Abounding in good fights, hard-riding and gun-play this can be depended upon to satisfy the most rabid lover of outdoor tales. Bob Steele does a fine job in the leading role and puts over his action stuff in great shape."
+ Film Curb p14 Ap 18 '36

"Fast Western fills all demands of outdoor picture fans. Abundant fights, gun play and riding shots."
+ Film Daily p6 Ap 13 '36

"Estimate: good."

Phila Exhibitor p49 My 15 '36

SUTTER'S GOLD. Mr 30 '36 85min Universal

Players: Edward Arnold, Lee Tracy, Binnie Barnes, Katharine Alexander

Director: James Cruze

Based on the novel of the same title by Blaise Cendrars. "General Johann August Sutter . . . was once the most powerful landowner in all the vast Mexican northwest. . . In 1849, gold was found on his property; bold and reckless men descended on his estates like devastating locusts; and all the Sutter wealth and power were humbled in the dust. In the most literal sense of the word, the curse of gold wrecked the fortunes of the first great California multi-millionaire." (N Y Herald Tribune)

SUTTER'S GOLD—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Edward Arnold does not have the chance he had in 'Diamond Jim' to do the magnificent work he accomplished in that picture but he makes the role impressive; does all that could be done with it."

+ — Bks & Films My '36

"A: dull; Y and C: no."

Christian Century p615 Ap 22 '36

"Family & junior matinee." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Possible for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature—family." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Deficiencies of the script prevent the clear cut characterization of the title role which we have come to expect from Edward Arnold. Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The story is based partly on history and partly on legend, and many incidents are included that are not relevant. However, it gives a fairly graphic description of a stirring period in California history. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 11 '36

"Family. The picture is understandingly directed, notably fine in photographic and scenic effects. High praise [should go] to the make-up artist for his masterly skill in aging the characters. Fascinating entertainment, vivid and stimulating."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Mr 30 '36

"The actual life of Captain Sutter was so colorful and the historical events during this period so thrilling, it seems unnecessary and even regrettable that so many liberties were taken with the accepted history. Family."

— + Jt Estimates Ap 1 '36

"'Sutter's Gold' represents a lost opportunity. With careful research and adherence to true details it might have been a valuable historical drama of one of the greatest figures in the development of California. . . . The story has been cheapened and falsified until it occasionally resembles the ordinary Western. To say that it is without merit is of course untrue. Adolescents, 12-16; only fair; children, 8-12: no."

+ — Motion Pict R My '36

"The story deals with a most interesting period of history, the direction is slow-moving but expert, the photography is beautiful and the atmosphere of the time is maintained throughout. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 1 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 22 '36

"A and Y: biographical drama of the days of '49 misses being great because of narrative confusion; C: historical interest."

Par M p50 Je '36

"A production highly recommended both for its historic interest and its exceptional entertainment value. Family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 28 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Edward Arnold makes the colorful historical character John Sutter live and breathe again as he did the equally interesting though vastly different 'Diamond Jim' Brady. . . . For those who like this type of movie, 'Sutter's Gold' is going to prove a delightful feast of romantic adventure." Laura Elston

Canadian M p59 My '36

"Though the picture is, of necessity, episodic, it is warm with feeling and tingling with adventure. Binnie Barnes and Lee Tracy emerge with striking portraits. And because 'Sutter's Gold'—like 'The Life of Louis Pasteur' and 'The Prisoner of Shark Island'—treats of a real man, it is full of the breath of life." (3½ stars)

Liberty p37 My 9 '36

"Mr. Cruze must have shot a million feet to get 7,000, and the picture must be somewhere in the cutting room ash can; it's certainly missing from the screen, as would be its usually competent star, Edward Arnold, if he had used his better judgment this time." Don Herold

— Life p26 Je '36

"This film occasions little more than regrets. Most to blame in all probability is the dull and oblique scenario. Cruze's direction is rather wooden, a quality reflected in the cast's performances. Inconsistencies in plot development make it even more difficult to accept 'Sutter's Gold' as a commendable movie."

— New Theatre p35 My '36

"It seems a dramatic story and one could wish that it were more effectively narrated than it is in the current film version. . . . The loose-jointed structure of the story, the general diffuseness of the treatment and the strange lack of vitality in the writing do, however, have the unlucky effect of transforming what might have been a rich and colorful chronicle into a rambling and unimpressive series of episodes dealing with a reasonably tragic American saga. Edward Arnold, always a vigorous and interesting actor, is considerably handicapped by weaknesses of his role, but he makes the passive Sutter a rather credible and sympathetic figure, even when his good fortune has gone to his somewhat confused head." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 Mr 27 '36

"The plot occasionally gets in the way, with clumsily written scenes to check the flow of good pioneering action. It doesn't check it disastrously often. This is a consistently interesting picture, revealing a little known angle of American history. . . . 'Sutter's Gold,' not always up to the high mark it set for itself, is an ambitious, dramatic and often exciting story of a man who made history and was, in turn, destroyed by historical events." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p35 Mr 27 '36

"Little of the bitter irony latent in the tragic career of John Sutter emerges from 'Sutter's Gold,' the ambitious, lavish but sluggish film based on his life. . . . Such is the stuff of 'Sutter's Gold'—stuff that anyone would relish in the cinema, actors and audience alike. But, although the stuff of greatness is there, the manner in which it is projected is astonishingly insignificant. It falters too often in its loosely constructed drama, which is rendered even looser by soft direction, and its writing never soars to the heights of its full-sized subject." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p27 Mr 27 '36

"'Sutter's Gold' should have been one of the good historical pictures. The character is there, and the background. . . . One feels merely that a lot of good material has been lost track of somehow. Although Edward Arnold . . . plays the Swiss pioneer who founded a kind of kingdom for himself on the western coast in the days before the gold rush, this great adventurer is out of focus throughout the film. This is not so much any fault, I feel, of Arnold's as it is of the general vagueness of the narrative." John Mosher

— New Yorker p88 Ap 4 '36

"As adapted by its screen writers and directed by Cruze it diminishes to a series of unrelated episodes in the life of a half-profligate, half-philanthropic individual who is never allowed to assume any credible dimensions at all. The actors try valiantly to overcome a sterile script, but it's no go. . . 'Sutter's Gold' has been a jinx ever since Universal bought the story. That jinx is still in evidence."

— Stage p10 My '36

"The efforts involved in getting 'Sutter's Gold' on the screen seemed last week as misdirected as the celebration over its opening was unjustified. Hampered by a script that characterized its hero variously as paragon and scoundrel, pinchpenny and profligate, altruist and profiteer, without ever making him a human being, the best Producer Edmund Grainger could offer the public was 85 minutes of dignified boredom, which suggested that the producers of 'Sutter's Gold' had wearied of the performance before it began."

— Time p46 Ap 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] makes a bid for a place among the epics of American empire building and properly exploited, should bring a golden stream to the box office. Family."

+ Box Office p37 Ap 4 '36

"It has been given a colorful production, directed with ability and enacted by a capable cast headed by Edward Arnold. . . Swell picture for exploitation."

+ Film Curb p19 Ap 4 '36

"As screen entertainment this picture is stirring and arresting stuff. It is a big picture and will have a wide theater audience appeal. It is rich in exploitation angles and its strong box-office draw from top to bottom is unquestionable."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 26 '36

"It's powerful material but the continuity falters. James Cruze has pieced his episodes together instead of making them blend into a moulded whole. The romance falters. It has its gripping moments, but it leaves the beholder with confused impressions."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Mr 27 '36

"Arnold's work and the vivid chapter of American history involved in the picture are its principal selling points."

Motion Pict Herald p41 Mr 28 '36

"Offering is an important box office entry and should play to fairly healthy returns, in addition to adding production prestige to Edmund Grainger and all who had part in its making. Picture shows painstaking production at every step, is lavish in scope and will stand alone on high entertainment standard at almost any spot."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 26 '36

T

THESE THREE. Mr 6 '36 93min United artists-Goldwyn

Players: Miriam Hopkins. Merle Oberon. Joel McCrea. Bonita Granville. Marcia Mae Jones

Director: William Wyler

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The angle in the play, 'The Children's Hour' by Lillian Hellman that might prevent libraries from cooperation is entirely lacking in the film version, titled 'These Three.' This means a weakening of the story, since communities do not, in these days, grow unduly excited over the fact that a girl is accused of having stolen the lover of another girl."

Bks & Films Ap '36

"A: very fine of kind; Y: good but mature; C: no."

Christian Century p518 Ap 1 '36

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Expertly directed and technically noteworthy, this picture is keyed to a high intellectual note, and will prove interesting film fare for adult audiences." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"No one can see this film without realizing the results of malicious gossip and the effects of falsehood. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Notably well acted, and consistently developed, this film combines delightful humor and poignant seriousness with clever delineation of child types and psychology. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Although the characters are well chosen, and the work of the child 'Mary' remarkable, it is the story of frustration presented in such a convincing manner, that it leaves an uncomfortable and somewhat unpleasant feeling. Adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 28 '36

"A deeply interesting picture which is exceptionally well cast, convincingly acted and masterly in direction. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Mr 14 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"The film is an excellent study of all the characters in the story. It is dramatic, enthralling, and moving. The only blemish is the 'incidental' music which is both too continuous and too loud. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p69 Ap '36

Motion Pict & Family p3 Ap 15 '36

"Outstanding. A fine production, beautifully acted. Mature."

+ + Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"Absorbing and startling film fare for adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 18 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 8 '36

"Outstanding. Adults."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide Mr 14 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"All the way through, Hollywood has done a first class piece of work. 'These Three' is a film of high quality and remarkable power." E. F. Melvin

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 28 '36

"The production as it presently stands may best be described as a quietly understanding though powerful performance, directed and played with impressive restraint that is inspiring in its delicateness. The compelling portrayal of the pupil, Bonita Granville, age twelve, stands out as the high point of an unusually fine and superbly balanced motion picture."

+ + Commonweal p636 Ap 3 '36

"I do know that this picture, per se, is well done. . . It seems a shame, however, that there can't be some strictly adult movies. It is rather sad to think that all movies must be brought down to the level of children and squeamish grown-ups. 'The Children's Hour' was a gripping study of a bitter, unpleasant

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

THESE THREE—Continued

subject, a terrible, worth-while, magnificent evening of torture in the theatre. In comparison, 'These Three' seems something that has just come back from the wash, all full of bluing and starch. (Not for children.)" Don Herold
+ Life p43 My '36

"These Three' succeeds rather well in translating 'The Children's Hour.' . . . The drama in this case depends very much for its effect upon the acting of the juveniles. . . . The pair of them have not been surpassed in my experience by any children of the American studios. They are in fact superior in power to the principals who behave intelligently but who never give the illusion that the school in which they are supposed to be teachers is actually a school." Mark Van Doren
+ Nation p492 Ap 15 '36

"It makes quite a fair film—nothing extra, but the play itself was no world-beater anyway. While the picture gains in production values, it loses in point, movie morals not being the morals of the legitimate stage by quite a margin. . . . The strong bond between the two girls, the hint of abnormality, was what kept 'The Children's Hour' together, giving the ordinary a touch of the sinister and making everything as dead and impossible after the crash as it was shown to be on the stage. Whereas a simple triangle is not enough to explain a whole picture, causing many of the difficulties to seem artificial, some attitudes squeamish and silly." Otis Ferguson

+ — New Repub p222 Ap 1 '36

New Statesman & Nation p668 My 3 '36

An unusual concurrence of writing talent (Lillian Hellman), good direction (William Wyler), and stunning performances (especially Bonita Granville and Marcia Mae Jones) makes 'These Three' well worth seeing. . . . The earnestness and mature skill of Miss Hellman's transcription from her own 'The Children's Hour' forces the consideration and involves the sympathies of her audience." Robert Stebbins
+ New Theatre p33 Ap '36

"Quite a good piece of work has been done with this somewhat problematic drama. . . . I rather wish that Hollywood could have waited until Florence McGee could have been spared for the film. No one else, I am sure, can make the little hellcat of the school who causes all the trouble quite such a demon—as for the adults, they—the three major ones anyhow—do well enough. I can't say that I thought the Misses Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon ever looked like schoolmarm for a moment; nor, scandal or no scandal, could I imagine them long in the business." John Mosher
+ New Yorker p71 Mr 28 '36

"I have seldom been so moved by any fictional film as by 'These Three.' After ten minutes or so of the usual screen sentiment, quaintness and exaggeration, one began to watch with incredulous pleasure nothing less than life. . . . Never before has childhood been represented so convincingly on the screen, with an authenticity guaranteed by one's own memories." Graham Greene

+ + Spec p791 My 1 '36

"From one of the finest and most compelling dramas ever shown on Broadway has been made a screenplay of equal, if slightly dilatory power. . . . The changes made in the scenario detract very little from the impact of a tragic story, and Mr. Goldwyn has lost nothing by casting his production with popular screen personalities. The performances are unusually impressive."

+ Stage p10 Ap '36

"Brilliantly directed by William Wyler and acted by an admirable cast, 'These Three' remains on the screen what 'The Children's Hour' is on the stage—a calmly bloodcurdling investigation of what several honorable adults can suffer at the untender mercies of one dishonorable child. . . . 'These Three' may presage a year in which child actresses will provide their own antidote to Shirley Temple and, barring the unforeseeable, should win Author Hellman next year's Academy prize for adaptation."

+ Time p33 Mr 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is a Sam Goldwyn picture. Ordinarily that means technical and box office excellence. Here, it means the tops. The picture is photographed, recorded, paced, edited, acted, told without a flaw."

+ + N Y Exhibitor p31 Mr 25 '36

"['These Three' is] a thoroughly fine cinematic transmutation of Lillian Hellman's dramatic smash, 'The Children's Hour.' . . . [It] is Gibraltar box office for above average returns. . . . 'These Three' is ultra in every department."

+ + Variety p15 Mr 25 '36

THINGS TO COME. Mr 13 '36 110min London films-United artists

Players: Margaretta Scott. Raymond Massey. Ralph Richardson

Director: William C. Menzies

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

A Guide to the discussion of the photoplay, Things to Come, based on a scenario by H. G. Wells is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents per copy. In preparing the Guide, Alfred F. Mayhew considered the technique, photography, sound effects, and direction of the photoplay and has written a Guide which will enable students to understand more fully this motion picture.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It] is an impressive and technically magnificent anti-war spectacle. . . . War is the villain of the story, war itself. No race of people is made the enemy; war is an unseen monster that devours everything in its road of terror. . . . 'Things to Come' does not fall in the category of conventional entertainment; but the subject on which the film is based and the technical skill and creative genius which have gone into its production, make it an outstanding movie and a definite contribution to the advancement of motion pictures."

+ Bul on Current Films Ap 15 '36

"A: outstanding; Y: thrilling; C: mature." Christian Century p719 My 13 '36

"Scenery is far in advance of modernistic, imagination is given full play in true H. G. Wells's manner in this long, exciting picture suitable for adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Quite plausible, in the face of our own time's political and social unrest, are the earlier scenes of chaotic war. The aftermath of civilization's return to barbarism is also within the realm of reason. If the latter artfully constructed and beautifully photographed sequences of a machine-made world stray into fantastic fields, the film remains marvelously engrossing to the end. Human threads are forgotten in the stupendous rhythm of the whole, which is one more example of the limitless capacities of the film medium. Mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature—excellent." DAR

"Superlatives are in order in speaking of this Alexander Korda production. . . . Considered as entertainment, it provides a stupendous spectacle, astoundingly realistic, with many unusual features; and as an earnest and thought-provoking plea to a world apparently bent upon self-destruction, it is one of the most impressive to reach the screen. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family, altho too intense and too long for children." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The expert direction of Alexander Korda and a remarkably fine cast make this an outstanding picture. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Ap 25 '36

"[It] is transcribed to the screen in a sweepingly powerful and dramatically pictorial form. . . An intensely interesting picture. Adults & young people."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ap 15 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"There is much food for thought in the picture: a potent sermon against war and the inspiring forecast of the great things which are possible if citizens of all nations can be induced to work together for the common good."

Technically the film is a joy. Adolescents, 12-16: fascinating; children, 8-12: too mature and too long."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Highly imaginative, the film will appeal to the eye rather than to the emotion, since the stage settings and theories are emphasized rather than the characterizations. Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 1 '36

"Objection: the Wellsian theory of a mechanical age with the exclusion of any thought of a Higher Being is expounded in this film. Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

"It is a picture to make one pause and ponder human folly and stimulate a searching analysis by all who see it of accepted concepts of progress. . . Go to the picture and see for yourself. It is worthy of your inspection, despite a number of dull conversational stretches during the third phase." S. M. Mullen

+ Scholastic p22 My 16 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Unusual and thought-provoking—a remarkable picturization of Wells' familiar ideas and theories. Suggested for school, church, and library use. Worth keeping permanently available. Family."

+ + Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Things to Come' is an unusual film and an ambitious undertaking carried through with a large degree of success. To the average audience it may be suspected that the mechanical devices and the trick photography will be the chief sources of interest. But Mr. Wells does have something to say that is deserving of attention. By choice he has couched it in extravagant language. That may not add to the impressiveness of his future dreams but it does not detract from the seriousness of the warning." E. F. M.

Boston Transcript p4 My 9 '36

Reviewed by Laura Elston

Canadian M p58 My '36

"[It] lacks logic. . . Mr. Wells' film is an inadequate statement of its thesis, but it is nevertheless successful in a rather crude way in its shattering bombardment of the senses of sight and hearing." Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 24 '36

"Taken as an experiment in advanced mechanics applied to the art of picture making, Mr. Korda's contribution in 'Things to Come' is enormously courageous, in parts awesome in its skillful imaginative fulfilment of the author's hobby of prying into the future. . . The merit of the spectacle resurrects that old description, 'It must be seen to be appreciated.' There can be no criticism of it as a piece of craftsmanship. The scale is as enormous as the method is convincing." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p664 Ap 10 '36

"It is an extraordinary technical accomplishment. Do not miss it. . . Physically, 'Things to Come' is screen history."

+ + Hollywood Spec p9 Ap 25 '36

"This astonishing British film is going to do two things: it is going to make the aging wish they could hold out to 2036, and it is going to frighten adolescents. Mr. Wells is extraordinarily serious about the next one hundred years. . . The problems in making the film were back-breaking. And in solving them, English picture makers have outdistanced Hollywood."

+ + Lit Digest p19 Mr 28 '36

"The whole picture was for me intolerably prosy and grotesquely unconvincing. I was confirmed in a former suspicion, namely, that the future is the dullest subject on earth. . . The actors seemed to know this better than Mr. Wells or Mr. Korda did, for they were unable to say their lines as if they meant them; they stared into the abominable blankness around them and said their pieces like children on parents' day. But perhaps the men behind the picture knew it too. . . It was all very unsatisfactory, like the chimeras of the ancients." Mark Van Doren

— Nation p860 Ap 29 '36

"Typical Wellsian conjecture, it ranges from the reasonably possible to the reasonably fantastic; but true or false, fanciful or logical, it is an absorbing, provocative and impressively staged production which does credit to its maker, Alexander Korda. . . 'Things to Come' is an unusual picture, a fantasy, if you will, with overtones of the Buck Rogers and Flash Gordon comic strips. But it is, as well, a picture with ideas which have been expressed dramatically and with visual fascination." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 18 '36

"The first half of it is a bitter, thrilling, graphic, animated picture of the devastation that the next world war will bring in its wake, as well as a savagely contemptuous composite portrait of all dictators; the second half is a wild-eyed, pretentious, boring, pseudo-socio-scientific extravaganza—and that must be my opinion of 'Things to Come.' . . While I am willing to respect it and honor and shout the praises of several of its parts, I must also groan over some of the stilted speeches and episodes which convert it into a pretentious cartoon and classify it as a potentially great film that never quite comes off." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p7c Ap 18 '36

"Two hours of papier mache models and that goes for the actors. . . We're afraid Mr. Korda, the producer, might have spared himself the trouble and expense. Two million dollars was too great an outlay to prove that Mr. Wells was in his mental eclipse." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p18 My '36

"The film is another Alexander Korda achievement: the William Cameron Menzies direction is expert, Raymond Massey and the various other actors are good, though submerged in the detail of a spectacle which is huge but, sad to tell, won't unsettle the smug." John Mosher

New Yorker p61 Ap 25 '36

"The dialogue beside the impressive action sounds trivial and once or twice grotesque. Mr. Wells being a moralist, it is futile to quarrel with him on account of aesthetic flaws. If this film fully came off it might knock one flat: it does not fully come off because of a constant conflict between moral and poetic intention. It tries to be too comprehensive; its aims are confused. . . 'Things to Come' is a film that grows in the memory. It should be seen for its rolling boldness, the excellence of its lighting, its naivety, its drama and the unforgettable beauty of some of the shots."

Sight & Sound p10 Spring '36

"The entire production is exotically unreal, photographically superb, and provocative. There are many loose-jointed moments, but the grandeur of it cannot be discounted."

Stage p10 My '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

THINGS TO COME—Continued

"[It] seems, at first glance, daringly original. Original it is. It is daring only by contrast with Hollywood's timid preference for doing, insofar as possible, only what has been done before. 'Things to Come' is therefore magnificent entertainment and a tribute to the sound showmanship that has made Producer Korda the kingpin in England's booming cinema industry. . . . It differs from all predecessors in its class by demanding a cerebral rather than an emotional response."

+ + Time p43 Ap 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A courageous picturization of a man's philosophy, conceived and executed on a really massive and impressive scale. Spun from the cloth of pure speculation, it often is tiresome, seldom is exciting. Yet it achieves, interest shrewd showmen can sustain. Adults."

+ — Box Office p63 My 2 '36

"The whole thing spells box office and then some. All will want to see it, children and grown-ups of all classes. One of the best novelty films we have seen in a long, long time. Book it and boost it."

+ Film Curb p19 Ap 25 '36

"Amazing in its production values, Alexander Korda's London Films has produced a picture which is certainly unusual in its theme. It deals forcibly and with tremendous flights of the imagination, with H. G. Wells's conception of the world ruined by a succession of world wars and the building of a scientific international structure upon its foundations. It more resembles a graphic prophecy than the conventional motion picture story."

Film Daily p8 Ap 20 '36

"Alexander Korda and H. G. Wells have striven mightily . . . but they have not been entirely successful. It seems to have been too much of a task. . . . The result is confusion, generalizations, that are effective scene by scene, but of no value to the whole as entertainment. . . . Settings that are overpowering in scope, magnitude and creative imagination . . . are a credit to Korda and the able group of technicians. They are magnificent. Imagination cannot reach the spectacular effects that have been achieved. . . . As a screen writer [Wells] has delivered a subject that for general audiences is unpalatable, unpleasant and unrelieved by anything that touches ordinary motion picture patrons."

Hollywood Reporter p2 Ap 18 '36

"The film has strong selling points. The 'Buck Rogers' atmosphere will appeal to the young, curious; the message will appeal to intellectual groups; the picture as a whole is attractive to class and middle class; the trick photography, the settings, the intelligence are practically irreproachable."

N Y Exhibitor p26 My 10 '36

"It quite obviously will need selling but will be a cinch to sell. The elements are there for the ballyhoo. . . . Picture throughout lacks warmth or feeling. It is an exposition of one man's philosophy which while interesting and colorful is also unpleasant and unbelievable. For the first half hour or so, while Wells is establishing his premise, the picture is interesting. . . . From there on there isn't a spark of humor, vitality or life. It's an impressive but dull exposition of a bad dream."

+ — Variety p14 Ap 22 '36

THIRTEEN HOURS BY AIR. Mr 27 '36 72min
Paramount

Players: Fred MacMurray. Joan Bennett. Zasu Pitts. Alan Baxter. Fred Keating. Brian Donlevy

Director: Mitchell Leisen

"Joan Bennett, boarding the plane just before it takes off, receives financial aid from Fred MacMurray, the pilot. Fred Keating, embarking at Chicago, anxiously strives to prevent Miss Bennett from reaching her destination. As the journey progresses MacMurray learns that his passengers are all involved in intrigue of some sort and when the plane makes a forced landing in a snowstorm the identity of each is revealed." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The plot is generous in the matter of suspense and the human interest with which the film is crammed also helps to create interest and satisfaction for the audience."

+ Bks & Films My '36

"A: depends on taste; Y: exciting; C: no."
Christian Century p583 Ap 15 '36

"These thirteen hours by air were well filled with a dash of comedy, of mystery, of drama, and of a love interest, neither sexy nor trashy. Fast moving and refreshing for the whole family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"[It is] fine film fare for all audiences. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good—mature." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"If 'too many cooks spoil a pudding'—too many writers and too many plots make a confused and illogical picture. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good entertainment for family groups." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This fast-moving, beautifully photographed picture [is] good entertainment for the whole family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Adults & young people." Mrs T. G. Winter
Fox W Coast Bul Ap 11 '36

"Outstanding in its entertainment value is this picture distinguished by the breath-taking beauty of the scenery and photography, the notably fine director who has so effectively blended his material that we are given a picture which runs the gamut of all human emotions. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 30 '36

"Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p89 My '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: probably too exciting."

Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"Expert direction, excellent camera work and fine photography, and well balanced co-operation on the part of a capable cast, together with a nice distribution of humor and suspense make of this trivial story fast-moving, interesting entertainment. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 1 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 22 '36

"A and Y: good melodrama with the plane's forced landing in a snowstorm the highlight; C: thrilling."

Par M p52 Je '36

"Skillful direction and fine photography of air flight effects. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Mr 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Good camera work and a brisk casualness of direction are important factors in making '13 Hours by Air' excellent entertainment. The film is a sort of 'It Happened One Night,' in airplanes instead of buses, and with gangsters instead of whimsy."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Mitchell Leisen had everything to work with when he started this picture, an interesting script, a capable cast and a scenic background with great pictorial possibilities, but it comes out just an ordinary class B production because of the stolid direction given it. Its most glaring weakness is the manner in which the dialogue is spoken. Most of the lines merely are parroted. What should be tender utterances by Fred MacMurray to Joan Bennett are spoken in the same tone in which MacMurray asks an airport dispatcher how the weather is ahead."

— + Hollywood Spec p21 Ap 11 '36

"'Thirteen Hours by Air' has two definite weaknesses. Otherwise it's a somewhat exciting adventure piece. First flaw in the film is its lack of movement. . . The second and more damaging drawback is that while the passenger list includes more interesting characters than anything since 'Grand Hotel,' the audience doesn't learn enough about them until the picture is almost over." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills Liberty p44 My 2 '36

"It has interludes of extravagant excitement and an effective crescendo of violent incident, but on the whole it proves an implausible mesh of plots and sub-plots that unravel as soon as they are woven into the narrative. . . [It] is altogether a carefully wrought motion picture, but one on which craftsmanship has been rather pointlessly expended." Howard Barnes + — N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ap 30 '36

"'Thirteen Hours by Air' is good melodramatic entertainment, never slacking its pace nor the suspense. It is a skillful job, and a diverting one." Eileen Creelman + N Y Sun p28 Ap 30 '36

"There is no disputing the liveliness of the melodrama. The device of tossing a miscellany of humans and motives together on a bus, plane, train or airliner and letting them work out their destiny is as formulaic as the Bartender's Guide and has been used as often, but Bogart Rogers's and Frank Mitchell Dazey's story has been screened with a shrewd sense of pace, with a purposeful preservation of suspense and a knack for comic interlude." F. S. Nugent + N Y Times p17 Ap 30 '36

"It is an exciting and fairly convincing story that bears comparison with the best of the numerous variations of the 'Grand Hotel' theme. There are plots and counterplots without number, and so many persons are interested in getting to San Francisco for one reason or another that if the story does get a bit absurd in spots its action and situations are thrilling enough to make you forget its defects. . . Although the plot puts quite a strain on the credulity of the observer, '13 Hours by Air' is not only lively entertainment but it also throws some interesting sidelights on how large passenger planes are directed from the ground in their long flights across the country." William Boehnel + N Y World-Telegram p29 Ap 30 '36

"'Thirteen Hours by Air' should have been funnier than it is, and far more exciting. It has its moments, however." John Mosher + — New Yorker p87 My 9 '36

"Original moves in any story formula as tightly established as the Grand-Hotel-in-Motion must necessarily consist of variations so stylized that, like the moves in chess, they are sensational chiefly to the initiated. . . Outstanding performance is Bennie Bartlett's as the bad boy who at a crucial moment squirts fire extinguisher fluid out of his pistol into the gangster's eyes."

Time p43 Ap 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Entertaining offering dealing with passengers thrown together for thirteen hours of air travel. Family."

+ Box Office p27 Mr 28 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Splendid entertainment." L. S. Niemeyer + Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 Mr 28 '36

"Action takes place on plane between New York and Frisco and is a yarn of intrigue that holds the interest. Joan Bennett and Fred MacMurray do exceedingly well in the lead roles. All members of the cast, in fact, turn in good performances. The story is above the average. . . All in all this is very satisfactory entertainment."

+ Film Curb p11 Mr 21 '36

"Good popular appeal entertainment is provided by this combination of crook activity, romance and comedy, taking place almost entirely on a cross-country plane."

+ Film Daily p6 Ap 30 '36

"A sort of Grand Hotel on a transcontinental air liner, this one has all that it takes for grand mass entertainment—a rich compounding of romance, comedy, and thrills, served de luxe, with names and everything. Its box office success is assured. It will make money from stems to sticks."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 14 '36

"Timely as streamlining, this comedy-drama of crooks and intrigue moves rapidly with all the action taking place aboard a plane between New York and San Francisco. . . The production offers many exploitation angles and should be sold readily."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Mr 16 '36

"Fast moving, blending its qualities of romance, melodrama, comedy, excitement, thrill and intrigue so that there are no letdowns in the actual or implied action, the show is very different from the formula air adventure thriller. Opportunities for unusual interest creating showmanship are present in adequate quantities to suit almost any kind of commercial requirements."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 Mr 21 '36

"This one falls right into the groove between the good and the bad, with some snappy dialog its best technical recommendation and a cast sufficient to keep it at least on the moderate side of the ledger where the box office is concerned. Story has its points, but it works out poorly, and indications are that a better writing job was possible."

+ — Variety p18 My 6 '36

"Vigorous playing, plenty of comedy and melodrama kept close to the farce edge, counterbalance certain obvious faults and familiar story ingredients to boot this one in as reliable entertainment with good business prospects all along the line."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 14 '36

(s)THREE LITTLE WOLVES. (Release date not determined) 9min United artists

Director: Walt Disney

One of the Silly Symphony Series. "The Big Bad Wolf and offspring nearly make away with two of the Little Pigs." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family—junior. Outstanding."

+ + Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Family & junior matinees." Nat Council of Jewish Women My 13 '36

"Family—junior." Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The new Walt Disney color cartoon 'Three Little Wolves,' should not be missed. It is a memorable chapter in the great series of Silly Symphonies. . . It is a Disney masterpiece."

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p12 My 29 '36

THREE LITTLE WOLVES—Continued

"It is a grand Disney cartoon." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p15 My 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] a natural for audiences everywhere."
+ Box Office p33 My 23 '36

"In anticipation of the natural and provocative question: 'Is it as good as "The Three Little Pigs"?'—the answer is emphatically: 'Yes!' Although 'Pigs' had the edge because it was original, for all commercial purposes the sequel should be better."

+ Film Daily p4 Ap 8 '36

"'The Three Little Pigs' of unforgettable box office memory return in all their pristine porcine rotundity and charm as intended victims of three little wolves coached by their vengeful parent, the Big Bad Wolf himself. . . The subject is a sheer triumph for Disney, who must have known the hazard involved in returning 'The Three Little Pigs' in a manner to circumvent the almost inevitable anticlimax expected in view of their original success. 'Three Little Wolves' is the eminently qualified result. It is immensely satisfying, manifestly advertisable, altogether excellent."

+ Motion Pict Herald p60 Ap 11 '36

THREE OF A KIND. My 20 '36 73min In-vincible

Players: Evalyn Knapp, Chick Chandler, Berton Churchill, Bradley Page

Director: Phil Rosen

"A yarn of a headstrong daughter of wealth, a young man who has his own ideas of how to get 'into the money,' and three amusing crooks, this [features a] series of complications, mistaken identities and romance." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."
+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It's all good, clean fun and should find it easy going in the smaller spots. Excellent fare for the twin bills."

+ Film Curb p6 My 23 '36

"A number of laughs and several good performances make this independent picture entertaining fare, which should serve excellently on dual bills and perhaps be able to stand alone in the smaller situations."

+ Motion Pict Daily p14 My 15 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhood houses, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

THREE ON THE TRAIL. Ap 24 '36 67min Sherman-Paramount

Players: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison, Onslow Stevens, Muriel Evans

Director: Howard Bretherton

Based on the novel, Bar 20 Three, by Clarence E. Mulford. A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is the] best of Hop-a-long Cassidy series. Family." E Coast Preview Committee
+ Fox W Coast Bul My 16 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 6 '36

"A commonplace Western."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This latest of Harry Sherman's Westerns for Paramount release is not as entertaining as those in the series which preceded it, but it still has considerable entertainment value. . . Producer Sherman has reached the point now when he must consider how long the same scenarist, the same director and the same cast can continue to turn out something different each time they unite in making a picture."

+ Hollywood Spec p12 Ap 25 '36

"Howard Bretherton has directed the piece satisfactorily, although he does not achieve the color, speed or suspense of the best of the old time Westerns, but he has interspersed the yarn with humor. . . 'Three on the Trail' is recommended to Western addicts only."

Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 My 5 '36

"It is a mighty nice title, covering as it does the same story Clarence Mulford has been writing for years, and it proves what we have been suspecting right along—that this Hop-a-long Cassidy is a Caruso of the horse opera. . . Like Babe Ruth, Dizzy Dean, Red Grange and Jack Dempsey, [William Boyd] can bask in the dazzling sunshine of adolescent hero worship. Hop-a-long is a great fellow; we hope his public will never fail him." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p26 My 5 '36

"It is recommended to all and sundry who get a kick out of good, old-fashioned thrillers. And, frankly, who doesn't? I say that there ought to be more Western melodramas like 'Three on the Trail,' because it is a decidedly superior item of its kind and because this is the sort of thing that the movies still do superlatively well when they want to." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 My 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fifth and best of Producer Harry Sherman's 'Hop-a-long Cassidy' series, this one is crammed with enough fast action to thrill even the most rabid of Western fans. Family."

+ Box Office p23 Ap 18 '36

"This latest of the Hop-a-long Cassidy series is fully up to the high standard of those that have preceded it. It is far above the average of Westerns and will please any film fan who likes his outdoor dramas. Contains plenty of fast action and excitement."

+ Film Curb p10 Ap 18 '36

"Presenting Bill Boyd as the cool, sane quick-on-the-trigger gentleman, and his handsome reckless pal, Jimmy Ellison, at the helm, another Class-A Western in the Hop-a-long Cassidy series is brought in. With a minimum of gun play and fighting, the picture is built on drama with a nice smattering of comedy. As true of the previous Hop-a-longs, wherever it is at all possible to play Westerns, this show should do well."

+ Film Daily p10 Ap 14 '36

"Each of these Hop-a-long Cassidy Westerns seems a bit more entertaining than the last. The imperturbable 'Hoppy' and his impulsive young buddy, Jimmy Ellison, are endearing themselves to a growing audience and this latest one is sure of good returns wherever Westerns are preferred fare."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 9 '36

"Better production values, a more gripping story and the usual high acting standards make this the best of the Hop-a-long Cassidy series to date. . . As a class action picture the production should please generally."

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 Ap 10 '36

"Soundly produced, its drama, romance, comedy, villainy, suspense, action and excitement being particularly well blended, this latest of the Hop-a-long Cassidy series looms up as of more than acceptable entertainment values."

+ Motion Pict Herald p36 Ap 18 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p23 My 10 '36

"If it's action the exhibitor is looking for in his Westerns, he'll find more than the customers demand in 'Three on the Trail.' . . Besides being loaded with plenty of menace, shooting and riding, the picture has some comedy, plus love interest of an acceptable grade."

+ Variety p18 My 6 '36

"Fifth in the Hop-a-long Cassidy series, 'Three on the Trail' upholds the high standard set by Harry Sherman for these productions, justifies the designation Western in the best entertainment sense, and will satisfy in all spots where this type of picture is relished. In its class it should prove a top money maker, and all who shared in the making may point with pride to the result."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 9 '36

THREE WISE GUYS. My 15 '36 72min MGM

Players: Robert Young. Betty Furness. Raymond Walburn. Thurston Hall. Bruce Cabot

Director: George B. Seitz

Based on a short story of the same title by Damon Runyon. "The playboy son of a wealthy man marries a girl who is really the third member of a gang of three crooks. She falls in love with her husband and determines to go straight. The crooks are determined that she shan't. The lad's father cuts him off without a penny and the boy, after a summer of futile farming, gets a $25-a-week job that involves him in a safe robbery and arrest." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 23 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Lively and entertaining, with many pleasant individual touches. Family."

+ Wkly Guide My 16 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Scripted, directed, played and photographed well, the offering is one destined not for a place of importance among the year's cinemas, but one certain to experience popularity with the average patron. Emerging as just what it obviously was intended to be, a program piece of the B caliber, the picture, because of its lightness, is excellent for summer presentation." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p12 My 23 '36

"The 'Three Wise Guys' is an awkward melange of sentiment and melodrama. . . Although it has several engaging performances, a handsome production and moments of excellent dramatic excitement, it is a hodgepodge entertainment, borrowing many moods without establishing one of them significantly." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 My 23 '36

"The 'Three Wise Guys' is not conspicuously successful as either a tear-jerker or as a comedy. The plot formula is too familiar for suspense, the characters slightly fantastic, and the comedy too sparse. It is not a bad little picture; it just isn't out of the run-of-the-mill class." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p12 My 23 '36

"The picture . . . is superficially successful, thanks to more than the usual dash of first-rate secondary players. In 'The Three Wise Guys,' adroit screen adaptation and unusually discriminating casting have neutralized the story's almost-cynically formulaistic pattern." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p12 My 23 '36

"Betty Furness as Clarabelle is a swell screen looker. . . But Raymond Walburn, as 'Doc,' steals the show. He's funny, believable in a farcелиke role, and makes the most of the best lines. The cleverest part of the production is that they give them to him." Douglas Gilbert

N Y World-Telegram p4b My 23 '36

"Raymond Walburn, as a roguish old crook, provides practically all the life there is in the film." John Mosher

New Yorker p71 My 30 '36

"'Three Wise Guys' is another one from the private dream world of Damon Runyon. . . This [is] a better-than-average program picture."

+ Time p22 Je 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Bright average fare produced as B product. Will serve its purpose well. Direction is inspired and shows that if more time were taken for production, the continuity would have been improved with the picture. Family."

+ Box Office p17 My 16 '36

"Laugh and dramatic sequences follow one another swiftly. Ought to please in most any theatre anywhere. Production up to standard. A better than average program feature."

+ Film Curb p6 My 16 '36

"Chalk this up as another hit from the typewriter of Damon Runyon, who has turned out a clever crook comedy romance filled with his original touches."

+ Film Daily p7 My 23 '36

"A modern fantastic comedy of crooks and Christmas, produced in the B category and shrewdly aimed at the family trade. As a holiday release it would be distinctly helpful to neighborhood box-offices and it will give fair satisfaction in its class throughout the year."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 6 '36

"Here is good average entertainment. . . The George Seitz direction keeps action going at a good pace, establishing much story background with swift, sure shots. Harry Rapf's production is well up to the M-G-M standard for average entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 My 7 '36

"The show is nicely paced, situations move to the tune of engaging dialogue and action, and a spirit is created that gives the picture an unusual amount of human interest."

+ Motion Pict Herald p29 My 16 '36

"Pleasant, played nicely for laughs as well as pathos, it is pleasant program."

+ Phila Exhibitor p46 My 15 '36

"This one gets pretty boring as one improbable sequence leads to another. After unspooling for seventy-five minutes, it fails to make its characters believable or its situations stand up. It has been dressed lavishly with production values, but this cannot disguise the essential phoniness of the story and [its] unsuccessful rendition into celluloid terms."

+ Variety p14 My 27 '36

"This is a breezy, light comedy romance that makes for good program fare. [It] is topped with a slight dash of drama climaxing a plot of subtle conniving between three wise guys of the easy-living school."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 6 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

(s) THRILLS WITH DAREDEVILS. Mr 19 '36
11min Columbia

Players: Jack Kofoed, Ford Bond

"[It contains] trick motorcycle riding, horsemanship, an airplane landing on one wheel, hopping onto a glider from a speedboat, wire walkers, and a flying trapeze act." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With the exception of a few unfamiliar shots this reel of the 'News World of Sports' is under par for this type of subject. Most of the stuff has been seen, in one form or another before and isn't the best of the crop."

+ Box Office p37 Ap 25 '36

"A compilation of good camera shots showing everything to justify the title."

+ Film Daily p10 Ap 9 '36

"This number in the 'News World of Sports' has moments which will make the audience catch its breath as they witness a collection of shots that contains plenty of movement, action and excitement."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 7 '36

TILL WE MEET AGAIN. Ap 17 '36 82min
Paramount

Players: Herbert Marshall, Gertrude Michael, Lionel Atwill, Rod La Rocque, Guy Bates Post

Director: Robert Florey

Based on the play Reunion by Alfred Davis. "[It is the story of] a man and a woman deeply in love, [who] find themselves pitted against each other as spies. The inflexible code of each country requires that they deliver each other to death and they avoid the dilemma only by escaping from Germany, with the secret service at their heels, to accept internment in Holland." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The adroit handling of the story does not glamorize war."

Bul on Current Films Je 6 '36

"A and Y: fine of kind; C: hardly suitable."
Christian Century p719 My 13 '36

"This trite tale lacks sincerity. . . The escape from the fast train, nearly makes a comedy of this negative film. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"An interesting slant on present day psychology is offered when, at the picture's finish, an heroic gesture on the part of the enemy is the means of promising a happy ending. This film is well directed and has human interest plus the eternal drama of war. Mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good-mature." DAR

"There is no undue emphasis on the glorification of war; its power to destroy personal happiness and its effects on the individual are clearly shown. Family-mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A good story, occasionally overdrawn, but on the whole, very real and convincing. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 25 '36

"[It is] an extremely interesting picture with unusually effective background. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 24 '36

"Adults & young people."

Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"The plot is old and is weakened by the happy ending but the development has been so well handled by both actors and director that interest is sustained. Adolescents, 12-16: mature; children, 8-12: too exciting."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Although the theme of this picture is somewhat melodramatic and unoriginal the cast is a good one, the direction sympathetic and the interest is sustained throughout. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 15 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

"A: good espionage drama with Great War background; Y: questionable in spots; C: no." Par M p52 Je '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is played with such poignant grace by Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael and directed so expertly by Robert Florey that the essentially trite story takes on validity and charm." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 2 '36

"This picture is one of Paramount's class B offerings, not one of the big productions upon which the studio brain concentrates. . . If Paramount this season or next does not make a picture less genuinely entertaining than 'Till We Meet Again,' it can go up to the attic, blow the dust off its slogan and display it once more to inform the world that 'If it's a Paramount picture it's the best show in town.'"

+ Hollywood Spec p27 Ap 11 '36

"Though the film is never fully as vital as the actors would like to have you believe, it does have sequences of excitement and occasional moving moments. . . Still, 'Till We Meet Again' would be much more believable if any one of the cast relaxed a bit. The picture insists that the reunion of an English actor and his Austrian sweetheart was the greatest single outcome of the international struggle." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p38 My 16 '36

"A spy melodrama with no nuances to distinguish it from hundreds of others." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p36 Je '36

"The fanciful narrative is translated to screen and microphone in definitely exciting terms and a cumulative suspense is achieved that makes for a diverting entertainment of the pipe-dream school." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 My 9 '36

"It is one of the few spy dramas with a happy ending. . . As a love story, the picture is no great shakes. As a tale of adventure, it manages quite a bit of well directed, if fairly routine, excitement. . . It is a typical spy melodrama, well produced and competently directed." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p7 My 9 '36

"Of its kind, 'Till We Meet Again,' is a few closely spaced notches above the average. . . We find ourselves unable to work up any great enthusiasm [for it.] When we and the espionage film meet again we hope it will be in color or third-dimension to beguile us into believing it is something new." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p11 My 9 '36

"[It] is an admirable film—a compact and moving melodrama of war-time espionage absorbingly told. In performance, direction and dialogue it is one of the swellest pieces of celluloid reeled out of Hollywood in many a grind and rates as one of the best of the season's cinemas." Douglas Gilbert

+ — N Y World-Telegram p4b My 9 '36

"Espionage and passion surge through 'Till We Meet Again,' so it can hardly be called light, yet it belongs in the pretty world of sheer entertainment, and succeeds there well enough. . . The story is familiar but often bright." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p79 My 16 '36

"This spy story of the World War overcomes the mediocrity of its plot by the splendid performances of Herbert Marshall, Gertrude Michael and Lionel Atwill and a thoroughly well-directed production."

+ — News-Wk p42 My 16 '36

"'Till We Meet Again' has the suspense proper to pictures where the issues at stake are not who makes love to whom but whether those who want to make love are to live or die by doing so. Although its handling of secret service technique will suffer by comparison with more carefully authenticated spy stories, notably M-G-M's 'Rendezvous,' it contains two memorable scenes."

+ — Time p58 My 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A class film, admirably directed and enacted. Box-office potentialities are high if picture is properly merchandised. Adults."

+ — Box Office p25 Ap 11 '36

"It is attention holding and is realistic melodrama. Most fans will like it. As played by Herbert Marshall, Gertrude Michael and the fine supporting cast it provides an hour or so of genuine entertainment, a bit above the average."

+ — Film Curb p11 Ap 11 '36

"The plot is much like the previous spy and espionage pictures. Some new twists are tried in this one, but they hardly seem believable. . . Robert Florey's direction of the players is outstanding, and he has done a marvellous job, considering the material."

+ — Film Daily p4 Ap 4 '36

"A romantic drama of rival intelligence services in the Great War that will keep every sort of ticket buyer on the edge of the seat and that will garner comfortable box-office profits all the way from the deluxers to the littlest neighborhoods."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 1 '36

"This romantic melodrama, well produced and acted, will appeal strongly to those who like spy stories. . . Exploitation should feature the production as a spy story rather than a war tale since no battle scenes are shown."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p12 Ap 2 '36

"It's a spy story, but it is not a war story even though all action is projected against the turmoil of the World War."

Motion Pict Herald p57 Ap 11 '36

"Made in an intelligent manner, filled with suspense. 'Till We Meet Again' is program that will find no complaints from patrons but which will probably turn in merely a programmer's grosses."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p43 Ap 25 '36

"Routine spy story played well and nicely produced, but too lacking in cast pull or other punch to get much attention as a grosser. As entertainment it's moderate."

+ — Variety p14 My 13 '36

"Somewhat outmoded in originality of plot and theme, it can be well cataloged as an artistic presentation of life studded against a background of intriguing espionage and warfare. Its box office success might be hampered by the artistic and sophisticated way in which it is handled."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 1 '36

TIMES SQUARE PLAYBOY. My 9 '36 61min
Warner

Players: Warren William, June Travis.
Barton MacLane, Gene Lockhart, Kathleen Lockhart

Director: William McGann

Formerly known as Broadway Playboy

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film under title of Broadway Playboy

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fairly amusing; Y: perhaps; C: hardly."
Christian Century p719 My 13 '36

"Adults, if they have time to waste." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Possible for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. A waste of time. Adults." DAR

"This mediocre, tiresome comedy completely lacks entertainment value because of an uninspiring story, unimaginative direction and the utter bewilderment of a good cast, to which are added objectionable innuendoes and uncalled for drinking." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"It is hoped the power of suggestion is not too strong for, if it is, the audience will come away 'dizzy' from watching the continuous drinking of members of the cast. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Some acceptable comedy for adult audiences but there is an over-abundance of drinking which fills no requirement of the plot. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Unnecessary drinking. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

"The entire cast is well chosen and the director has nicely blended dramatic action, music, song and dance but there is much more drinking than is necessary to carry the plot. Adults."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 21 '36

"Adults."
Jt Estimates Ap 1 '36

"The hard work of Gene Lockhart lends it a certain amount of humour and it rattles along at a good pace but it cannot be said to get anywhere in particular. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p87 My '36

"To the accompaniment of endless trays of cocktails the principals quarrel, are reconciled and quarrel, and no one cares very much how the altercation ends. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

+ — Motion Pict R Ap '36

"The comedy is a bit repetitious but the picture is amusing throughout. Family."
Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Adult."
Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; + — Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

TIMES SQUARE PLAYBOY—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"As a stage play the incident of the friend who interferes with a marriage for good but mistaken motives was too thin to make a satisfactory full-length entertainment and it still is a short portion."

— Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 13 '36

"To those who are fond of a photographic reproduction of good stage technique, this will provide enjoyment. . . [It] is the sort of film that bores me exceedingly. Not for a score of seconds during the entire unreeing does the stream of chatter cease. . . Leaving the theatre where it was previewed, I heard several spectators voice their disapproval of the enormous amount of dialogue, as a result of which, I gather, the offering had not pleased them. The cinema is an art form that should be nine-tenths pictorial. Incessant talking in it is out of place." Allan Hersholt

— Hollywood Spec p31 Ap 11 '36

"The new photoplay suffers in the main because it is too reverent an adaptation of the parent work. For how else explain the static quality of 'Times Square Playboy,' a noisy comedy which manages to be alternately amusing and dull. . . Most of the time the camera is focused on the bickering Lockharts, whose constant babbling becomes a bit boring." T. M. P.

— N Y Times p11 My 2 '36

"Sometimes it's funny, sometimes it's not—and that's the best that can be said of 'Times Square Playboy.' . . Unfortunately, either the director or the adapter, or both, thought it wasn't funny enough. So they occasionally stress their lines and characterizations to the point of burlesque. These excesses are more injurious than helpful, but the film still manages to remain reasonably entertaining." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p25 My 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Snappy farce comedy of the in-one-door-and-out-the-other type, aided by bright dialogue which keeps the laughter going. Family."

+ Box Office p27 Mr 21 '36

"It is interesting in the Mr. & Mrs. angle, by the Lockharts, and we predict this couple will be good in other clean, homely pictures which will appeal to the tired family who want to go for complete relaxation, and see how the other half of the world are supposed to live!" L. S. Niemeyer

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 Mr 28 '36

"This is an entertaining comedy that will do best in the neighborhoods. Gene Lockhart, as the man who breaks up an engagement and then tries his darndest to patch it up, practically carries the picture. He is excellent."

+ Film Curb p7 Mr 21 '36

"Excellent comedy good for all audiences. [It] boosts Gene and Kathleen Lockhart as a comedy team."

+ Film Daily p11 My 1 '36

"The show moves fast and builds its situations so that the element of surprise occupies an unusual importance. While there are fairly good names to use for primary interest stimulating purposes, a campaign that sells the story of the whole show and what it means for those who like fast and furious fun should be productive of best results."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 Mr 21 '36

"[It] makes a weak bid as double bill material. Neither care nor time was spent on 'Times Square Playboy.' The material, as evidenced by what's come to the screen, suggests that it offered little to begin with, no matter who was placed in the cast and who directed."

— Variety p19 My 6 '36

TOO MANY PARENTS. Mr 20 '36 71min Paramount

Players: George Ernest. Frances Farmer. Lester Matthews. Porter Hall

Director: Robert F. McGowan

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fairly good; Y and C: good."

Christian Century p583 Ap 15 '36

"Good." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"A rather weak plot but the acting of the boys is excellent. Family & junior matinee." Nat Bd of R

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

"Family—mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Some feel we should have more such pictures—that it is good for everyone to be so entertained and subtly chastised; others feel it [is] sentimental—that the children [are] put up against adult reactions rather than childish emotions, which makes their acting stilted and unnatural. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Entertaining for any audience and thought-provoking for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 2 '36

"An appealingly interesting picture, based on a well developed human interest story, heart warming in its naturalness."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ap 15 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"Family & junior matinees."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 22 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 15 '36

"The effect of military school life upon young boys, especially those sent away to provide greater freedom to their parents, is sympathetically presented." S. M. Mullen

Scholastic p28 My 2 '36

"A highly creditable production. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"Juvenile."

Wkly Guide Mr 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"I have a deep and painfully-earned distrust of all child pictures; they either make me downright ill, or just plain mad. Depends on whether they are impossible, or good enough to be merely bad. This one sent me away sincerely touched and thoughtful. A shower of encomiums at the feet of Robert McGowan. . . The cast is perfect. There is not one out-of-character portrayal, and that, in a production entirely about children, is something my brief experience has never encompassed until now." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p13 Mr 28 '36

"Played by a bunch of smartly performing [juveniles]—none of whom are particularly well known—this item has many spots of hilarious comedy, and those scenes where it attempts pathos are done with nicely tempered restraint. Except for a somewhat maudlin climax, it is very nearly perfect cinema fare about pre-adolescence." (3 stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p51 Ap 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good combination of comedy and compelling drama revolving around a military-school student who craves attention from his father. Family."
+ Box Office p13 Mr 14 '36

"Grade A entertainment all the way. . . It ought to click in most any theatre and give complete satisfaction."
+ Film Curb p7 Mr 14 '36

"'Too Many Parents' is the kind of picture which exhibitors are apt to make the mistake of considering too lightly in advance, only to be surprised when audiences find out what it's all about. It's a [child] picture, far from the formula, that's worthy of a spot on any program. . . A 'natural' for show-houses playing to family trade, it at the same time offers potent contrast to any other attraction, no matter how big or pretentious."
+ Motion Pict Herald p56 Mr 14 '36

"With a cast totally devoid of drawing power, 'Too Many Parents' will be found a surprisingly pleasant attraction by neighborhood audiences. . . The child cast is generally excellent; the human touches strong, with the result, [a] pleasant neighborhood film that will need strong selling to get started."
N Y Exhibitor p32 Mr 25 '36

"While in the programmer class, 'Too Many Parents' is the wholesome type of picture that should do fairly well, especially in the family houses."
+ Variety p29 Ap 22 '36

"Brimming with entertainment in its joyous and pathetic angles on youth in a junior military academy, 'Too Many Parents' may well prove a surprisingly potent box office package wherever it plays. And on merit it can take care of itself in the best program company. . . Performances of the [juveniles] are indeed remarkable. Each stands out sharply individual, by virtue of the writing and direction as well as by personality."
+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 7 '36

TOO MUCH BEEF. Ap 20 '36 60min Grand national

Players: Rex Bell, Connie Bergen, Peggy O'Connell, Forrest Taylor

Director: Robert Hill

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Nothing very new or startling about this Western. It is just a regulation run-of-the-mill horse opera."
+ Film Curb p5 Je 13 '36

"Familiar and obvious, yet apparently always enjoyable to the clientele that likes its regular dose of western melodrama, there is enough fast action in it to serve its intended purpose without much kick coming."
+ Film Daily p7 Je 6 '36

"Estimate: fair."
+ Phila Exhibitor p46 My 15 '36

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE. Mr 13 '36
98min Paramount.

Players: Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray, Henry Fonda, Fred Stone, Spanky McFarland

Director: Henry Hathaway

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The color photography is exquisite; you almost get the smell of the earth and the trees; when the water ripples, it becomes real water. You get the effect of actually being in the scenes as well as of looking at them."
+ Bks & Films Ap '36

"The simplicity of the story's character, the quiet conviction of its plot, together with the technique of its making spell excellent direction and predict new heights for that precocious step-child of the arts, the Motion Picture. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature-family." DAR

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"A triumph in the use of color, is this production, with its vistas of mountain and valley so wonderfully photographed in soft natural tones, as to be breathtakingly beautiful." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"The direction is vigorous and sustained and lifts the sentimental, old-fashioned story into the realm of excellent entertainment. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"It presents a distinct advance in cinema technique and a theme of universal appeal. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A great improvement has been made in the use of color; nothing harsh and gaudy, but soft and natural, and yet not overbalancing the plot and action. The only thing at fault is the over-yellow tinting of the faces, and in the dialogue, a lack of Southern accent. Excellent direction and cast. Entertaining and gripping. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"So many scenes are worthy of comment and so many bits of acting are notably fine that a brief review cannot do them justice. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Mr 21 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"The story is fairly long; and, as often with films derived from other media, it shows certain tendencies towards the episodic. There are also one or two long-drawn passages of angry or hysterical declamation between characters. . . The use of colour in photographing natural scenery on a large scale is interesting, if not always fully successful. . . The process is an advance on previous ones, but by no means the last word. The story as such can stand on its own feet. Suitability: adults & adolescents."
+ Mo Film Bul p90 My '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Technicolor provides the chief claim to distinction of 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine.' . . Without the color photography to distract attention, the narrative would be more obviously the artificial stuff that it really is." E. F. M.
Boston Transcript p4 Mr 21 '36

"Paramount didn't use Technicolor as a crutch in 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine.' They forgot the color and went ahead and did as good a picture as they could. The color was just so much velvet." Don Herold
+ Life p44 My '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE—Continued

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" advertised as '100 per cent natural color,' seemed to me to hit 175 per cent, especially in its browns and blues." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p360 Mr 18 '36

"Although the best outdoor color rendition to date, the process still leaves much to be desired. In general the tints are exaggerated and uncontrolled. . . . As for the film proper, director Hathaway has managed to enliven the old story and there are good performances by Sylvia Sydney, Fred MacMurray and Henry Fonda." Robert Stebbins

+ — New Theatre p34 Ap '36

"The picture manages to give a faithful representation of inanimate objects, and it is only now and again that the view resembles a picture postcard." Mark Forrest

Sat R p640 My 16 '36

"It is just bad bright picture-postcard stuff, and if one sometimes forgets its picture-postcard quality, it is only because the images move." Graham Greene

Spec p879 My 15 '36

TREACHERY RIDES THE RANGE. My 2 '36
58min Warner

Players: Paula Stone. Monte Blue. Dick Foran

Director: Frank McDonald

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"An exciting Western. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A stirring drama of stage-coach days deviates from the stereotyped Western formula to a degree which affords excellent family entertainment. Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Mature-family." DAR

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The film has a plausible plot, magnificent settings, wonderfully photographed, with some very good singing and stirring views of Indians and stampeding buffalo. Heartily recommended for family & junior matinee." Nat Soc of New England Women

"No drinking, and the only objectionable feature is the ruthless shooting of the Indian braves, for which the buffalo traders are justly punished. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 14 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 1 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"The end is abrupt and becomes less convincing with the sudden pacification of the Indians. . . . The Indian scenes are well done and the method of interpreting by signs is interesting to watch. . . . Suitability: family."

+ — Mo Film Bul p69 Ap '36

"This is more valuable than the usual Western because of the good use of historical background. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: very exciting."

+ Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family—junior."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"A mediocre cast, stock shots, and only fair direction. . . . Suitable for very unsophisticated audiences."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 4 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 29 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Set against a picturesque background of rolling hills, 'Treachery Rides The Range' moves smoothly from beginning to end and is nicely acted by Mr. Foran and Paula Stone, who provide the romantic interest." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p7 My 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Soldiers and Indians, instead of the perennial cowboys and cattle rustlers or gold mine crooks, are brought back into service as the principals in this Western melodrama. It not only proves a welcome change, but the story material given [the cast] also rates higher than average."

+ Film Daily p8 My 29 '36

"Estimate: good Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p30 Mr 25 '36

"Picture brims with horsemanship and gun-play. Also has a telescopic buffalo sequence and plenty of mesa scenes, but is deficient on comedy and merely purrs romance. Notwithstanding, it is superior to most of its type, ought to be okay in the twin bill corrals."

+ Variety p54 Je 3 '36

TROUBLE FOR TWO. My 22 '36 83min MGM

Players: Robert Montgomery. Rosalind Russell. Frank Morgan. David Holt. Virginia Weidler

Director: J. Walter Ruben

Based on the short story, The Suicide Club, by Robert Louis Stevenson. "A prince and a princess of mythical kingdoms, seeking to avoid pledged marriage, set out separately on incognito adventures and find themselves involved in a fantastic suicide club where death is dealt out for a price and with decent decorum for those tired of life." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: good; C: little interest."

Christian Century p887 Je 17 '36

"The direction of this purported Robert Louis Stevenson tale, gives a confused hodge-podge of bewildering horror, some comedy, and a new mood every few feet. Adults. Decidedly not for children." Am Legion Auxiliary

"[It] provides good family entertainment." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Disappointing treatment of this story handicaps the fine actors. Mediocre-mature." DAR

"This screen version of Robert Louis Stevenson's 'The Suicide Club' is a bit confusing and certainly not convincing. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"This skilfully directed picture provides all the necessary elements of entertainment; romance, intrigue, daring, bravery and humor, and will prove most fascinating. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 27 '36

"The idea of a secret society which deals out death is too blood-chilling for children, but for those old enough to accept it as a modern fairy-tale, it is an entertaining and unusual production. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"In spite of its gay trappings and a first rate cast, the story is so unreal, artificial and coincidental that it never becomes convincing and the direction is so slowly paced that interest lags. . . Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 27 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

"[It is] a most entertaining and amusing film. . . Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Beautiful production and many clever actors. Suggested for schools and libraries. Family."

+ Wkly Guide My 30 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Little of the flavor of Mr. Stevenson's 'Suicide Club' is to be found in 'Trouble For Two'; but the film maintains enough of the original plot to be unusual certainly, and entertaining frequently. . . It is when 'Trouble For Two' tries most to adhere to Stevenson's 'Suicide Club' that it becomes most incomprehensible, most obtusely bogged with the inter-plottings which give it the appearance of being badly edited." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 6 '36

"A highly diverting offering, excellently written, directed and acted. Its chief virtue is the manner in which its mood is sustained, its fidelity to the period in which the story is laid. . . I doubt if the picture will have wide general popularity, but to discriminating audiences it will prove delightful. It is rich in humor and has plenty of thrilling moments."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 Je 6 '36

"'Trouble For Two' is, all around, a nice job, an entertaining mixture of laughs and chills, picturesque costumes and romantic melodrama." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p32 Je 1 '36

"J. Walter Ruben has filmed his story with an extraordinarily keen sense of melodramatic value and frequently achieves results with a finesse which we have come to consider a stylistic trade-mark of England's master melodramatist, Alfred Hitchcock. The screen play is the product of superior craftsmanship. Only that could have made us accept another story about a mythical kingdom." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p7 My 30 '36

"'Trouble For Two' is all plot and no play. . . Throughout Mr. Montgomery wears his uniforms and evening dress with the aplomb of a masculine manikin; Mr. Morgan gives another of his delightful performances, the stately and dignified Miss Russell is as radiant as she can be in a screwy part." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World-Telegram p17 Je 1 '36

"I don't suppose that Robert Louis Stevenson's 'Suicide Club' stories belong to the mystery-story grouping any more. They're too gentle. . . You may feel that they are too polite and dainty (and tedious) as they come out on the screen in 'Trouble for Two.' . . Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell can't quite manage to be fanciful, nor will the story let them seem very stirring, either." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p83 Je 6 '36

"Novelty on the screen is rare and this picture has neither predecessor nor parallel. Fantastic, macabre, it contains more genuine amusement than anything glimpsed in months. . . The tang and impish mood of the original have been captured, with the writing, acting, costuming and net result being as perfect as things can be in this particular Vale." Herb Sterne

+ + Script p10 My 30 '36

"It may not stamp Stevenson as the Damon Runyon of his period but, even with the addition of Robert Montgomery in curls and Rosalind Russell being more ladylike than usual, it is an adroit and pleasantly sinister blend of romance and melodrama. . . Director J. Walter Ruben's handling of [the story] shows that he has studied and almost mastered the technique perfected in his two models by London's master of cinematic horror, Alfred Hitchcock."

+ Time p42 Je 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Other than having the advantage of two box-office names, this has little to recommend it. Family."

+ Box Office p69 My 30 '36

"This is a bit gruesome here and there and therefore may not be acceptable film fare in some situations. However, it is splendidly played by a really fine cast. . . Can hardly make the grade for the big spots."

Film Curb p7 My 23 '36

"[It is] a solid box-office attraction combining romance, adventure and intrigue."

+ Film Daily p8 Je 1 '36

"Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell are a team draw that cannot be denied, but whether that draw is strong enough to overcome the confusion of this picture after the first day is questionable. . . The screenplay by Seff and Paramore is sprightly enough but sprightliness alone cannot carry the burden of twists that have no surprises, and suspense that is merely a matter of time as to when the last reel must be due."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 18 '36

"[There is] plenty of talent in this. . . They do good jobs, but the story with which they have to work—a complicated combination of comedy, romance, melodrama and mystery—is hardly worthy of their prestige and abilities. Fantastic, but after its opening sequences, rather gruesome dialogue dominates the action in the narration. . . Despite the names, the picture will require plenty of selling."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 My 19 '36

"Though this is a bizarre combination of comedy, odd love interest, melodrama and mystery and the cast includes some pretty good names, it is the kind of picture necessitating intensive selling to assure popularity. . . Previewed in Westwood Village Theatre. The audience, which demonstrated that it was ahead of the story all the time and knew pretty well just what was going to happen and how, didn't seem to be either interested or impressed."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 My 30 '36

"Estimate: fair program."

+ Phila Exhibitor p23 Je 1 '36

"Metro has done a swell job of dusting off Robert Louis Stevenson's museum piece, but the chances are that not many of the regulars will care. . . In Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell the film has two advantageous selling points, but the pair have been clad in personalities that are somewhat afiel from past performances. . . Mechanics of Stevenson's plots make farfetched probabilities on the screen. . . Good direction and casting and the rich mounting the production has received aren't strong enough to completely overcome these defections."

+ Variety p15 Je 3 '36

"'Trouble For Two' [is] superior entertainment which should find exhibitor welcome almost anywhere for substantial grosses. . . It avoids the common formula and clichés of the screen death-dealer but carries grim and bizarre elements along with constant twist to baffle

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

TROUBLE FOR TWO—Continued

even the most practiced of the puzzle fans. At the same time it provides constant amusement in sparkling comedy of line and situation."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 18 '36

TUDOR ROSE. See Lady Jane Grey

TWO AGAINST THE WORLD. J1 18 '36 65min
Warner-First national

Players: Humphrey Bogart. Beverly Roberts. Linda Perry. Carlyle Moore, Jr.

Director: William McGann

Based on the play, Five Star Final, by Louis Weitzenkorn and previously filmed under that title. "[The] story [tells] . . . how resurrection of an old murder trial results in wreckage of the lives of a father and mother and the happiness of their daughter when a broadcasting station operating on the fringe of legitimacy serializes the case." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family-mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: fair; 14-18: dull; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre-adults." DAR

"This timely picture has an interesting, well-constructed plot, convincing direction that shows intelligent appreciation of values and well-balanced acting,—hence, a very satisfying picture for its type. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"This film is a timely protest against muck-raking radio programs. . . Although tragic in tone, it is thought-provoking, well constructed and very real. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Although the picture has its ethical value, it is too tragic for any but the mature. Irrelevant drinking is objectionable. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul My 16 '36

"The picture, a pitifully tragic one, is vividly portrayed and intensely interesting. It is exceptionally well cast and forcefully directed. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 9 '36

"Mature."
Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: poor; children, 8-12: no."
Motion Pict R Je '36

"While the picture might be considered a protest against much of the material which comes over the radio, nevertheless it proves sordid and unpleasant entertainment. Adults."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women My 6 '36

"Objection—two suicides. Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"[It is] a very good film for mature audiences. Although tragic in tone, it is thought-provoking, well constructed and very real. Mature."

+ Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Two Against the World' is not going to be hailed as one of the season's masterpieces. Teamed with a comedy on a dual bill it will fit in nicely. It is too drab and unpleasant to go it alone. William McGann's direction strives heroically to atone for the poor story material."

— Hollywood Spec p8 My 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Plenty of punch-packed situations and much dramatic action, coupled with a fine plot and good dialogue make this an above the average picture. The yarn moves swiftly to an exciting climax and no attempt is made to change the tragic tone. Family."

+ Box Office p69 My 30 '36

"Holds the interest and should fare well in most spots. . . Fans who like their drama in the raw will appreciate this one."

+ Film Curb p11 My 23 '36

"[It] carries a sympathy wallop that will put it over in good style with popular audiences everywhere. . . [The] forceful, though rather obvious, screenplay and a good all-around job of production puts this above the B-class average."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 12 '36

"This is sensational, grim melodrama. . . Stark in context and carrying no comedy relief, but contrasted by an appealing love interest situation, the show is of that quality that made such pictures as 'Front Page' interesting."

Motion Pict Daily p6 My 13 '36

"One does not have to look long before seeing that this is a revamp of 'Five Star Final.' . . Previewed in Warner's Downtown Theatre. Though audience indicated a familiarity with the story, it also evidenced a tense interest in the dramatic manner in which it was narrated by a new group of players."

Motion Pict Herald p41 My 23 '36

"Estimate: program, depends on handling."
Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

"Picture is well made within limits set, but method of telling is so stern, accusative and uncompromising that entertainment will be restricted even among audiences where it will share program spotting."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 12 '36

TWO IN REVOLT. Ap 3 '36 60min RKO

Players: John Arledge. Louise Latimer. Moroni Olsen

Director: Glenn Tryon

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family & junior matinee." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Amusing; engrossing. Family. Good." DAR

"The escape of the race horse from thieves and his meeting with a herd of wild horses give opportunity for some very instructive scenes of wild animal life as contrasted with the domestic. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Excellent for the family & junior matinee." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The story strains one's credulity but it is nevertheless very appealing and very well directed. Photography is remarkably skillful and the production is one which will delight friends of animals of any age." Nat Soc of New England Women

"With animals as stars, this picture with its glorious background of wild scenery, and its beautiful interpretation of the love and affection between animals, will prove highly entertaining as well as instructive. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Family & junior matinee."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 21 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"The story is occasionally absurd, though there are many good natural touches, but the direction and cutting are very good. Suitability: family; especially for children under 16."

Mo Film Bul p90 My '36

"The remarkable histrionic genius of the two chief actors and their exciting but plausible adventures will hold the interest of all who cherish a sympathy and kinship with horses and dogs. Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: excellent."

+ Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family-junior."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 15 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"A horse, dog and love story. [It is] one of the most satisfactory of its kind. Alive and likeable all through. Family. Junior."

+ Wkly Guide Mr 14 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Good entertainment of its kind."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 13 '36

"[It] is a thoroughly entertaining and heart-warming little film. . . . If 'Two in Revolt' is not enormously exciting, it is at least striking and entertaining throughout and a credit to its producer, Robert Sisk, who has a way of bringing stories that matter to the screen."

William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p17 Ap 27 '36

"This picture must have been difficult to make and Tryon has done a fine job. . . . If you like animals and scenery this can be recommended." H. S.

+ Script p11 My 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Possessing more than average appeal for animal lovers, this entertaining story of a dog and a horse that are born on the same day and whose friendship endures through a long estrangement, will please young and old."

+ Box Office p217 Mr 21 '36

"Varying tastes can come to agreement on this one. Presenting a horse and dog of remarkable intelligence, 'Two in Revolt' shows the escape to nature made by both animals in an effort to find adjustment."

+ Film Daily p6 Mr 19 '36

"Exploitation based on the widespread and earnest human admiration for dog and horse is suggested by the picture content. Special attention might be given to the early sequences, depicting the infancy of the featured animals, and to the canine and equine combats which take place when they escape to their primitive associations with their kind."

Motion Pict Herald p53 My 2 '36

"Neighborhood audiences should like 'Two in Revolt.' For 'A' time, de luxers, it will have little appeal despite the fact that the production was given evident sincerity. . . . Handicapped in cast, the picture will probably be relegated to twin bills, dish nights, but it deserves a better fate."

N Y Exhibitor p31 Mr 25 '36

"A horse, a dog and a small cast figure in 'Two in Revolt' which is half-Western and half of the racetrack variety. It is moderate entertainment of its kind and will go best before audiences that like animals, racing and western desert backgrounds. Hardly strong enough to get anything but dual dates. Story is rather thin."

— + Variety p15 Ap 29 '36

U

UNDER TWO FLAGS. My 1 '36 100min 20th century-Fox

Players: Claudette Colbert, Ronald Colman, Victor McLaglen, Rosalind Russell

Director: Frank Lloyd

This is the third screen version. Based on the novel of the same title by Ouida. "The predominating theme is the love of Miss Colbert as Cigarette and Miss Russell as Lady Venetia for Colman, who fled a jail sentence in England as a result of shielding his wayward brother. McLaglen [plays] the commander of the Legion post at Algeria who becomes insanely jealous of Miss Colbert's affection for Colman. The picture carries a dramatic impact when Arabs declare war and McLaglen sends Sergeant Colman into almost certain death among the Arab tribes to assuage [his] jealous emotion." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"I thought this the best desert film I have seen; even better than 'Beau Geste,' which we all considered an exceptionally fine film."

+ Bks & Films My '36

"[It is] translated to the screen with pomp and ceremony of old-fashioned 'glory of dying on field of battle.' Decidedly militaristic and outmoded; the 'heroic' French Foreign Legion protecting the lives of white men and women against the 'barbarous' Arabs. One expects any tale of the Foreign Legion to abound in bloodshed and violence—and 'Under Two Flags' is no exception."

Bul on Current Films Je 6 '36

"A and Y: very good; C: too exciting."
Christian Century p751 My 20 '36

"This epic of the screen is a spell-binder, and shows that Zanuck's personally produced attempt has exceeded all expectations. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent-mature. Beautiful photography of African dunes; marvelous, terrifying battle-field riding of Arabs, tragedy and comedy skillfully blended." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Claudette Colbert's 'Cigarette' is ardent and tempestuous, but has been toned down to meet present day attitudes towards roles of this kind, and therefore much that might have been found objectionable has been eliminated. Family-mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"This story of the little French girl who gives her life for the legionnaire whom she loved so simply and wholeheartedly is delicately and beautifully handled and so far above the average of motion pictures that it stands in a class of its own. A family film, although possibly the battle scenes will be too exciting for young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"For those who love action, its vitality and its brilliant production qualities place it among the best of its kind. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ + Fox W Coast Bul My 9 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

UNDER TWO FLAGS—Continued

"Family. The production is distinguished by notably fine photography, effective musical scoring, a star cast, flawless in their characterizations, and expert and forceful direction."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 5 '36

"Outstanding. Family—mature."

+ + Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"My feeling is that 'Under Two Flags,' an excellent film version of the Ouida novel, will have the greatest appeal to children and adolescents because of its scenes of stirring adventure. . . [It] is both pictorially and dramatically a fine production."

+ Motion Pict & Family p5 My 15 '36

"Proving that unadulterated hokum can be incorporated in a picture without marring its effectiveness, 'Under Two Flags' tells an improbable yarn so sincerely and so touchingly that even hardboiled audiences will cry and like it. . . For tender-hearted or emotional persons some of the scenes are pretty strong meat, but as a stirring tale of romantic adventure this is ace high entertainment. Adolescents, 12-16; very exciting; children, 8-12; no."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Arab raids and soldiers' romances keep the film moving at a fast pace. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

"The story is reminiscent of 'Beau Geste' and carries all the stark drama, glamour, bravery, sacrifice and tense excitement of that famous story. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Very good battle scenes. Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Though the cast bears the names of such players as Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen and Rosalind Russell, it is [Ronald Colman] who carries off the honors. If there had been more of a story he might have been able to set forth a full-length study in character instead of the pleasing projection of himself that actually results. . . The final scenes of fighting, even to those who may be skeptical about some of the details which lead up to the battle, are genuinely exciting. Rarely does Hollywood set its myrmidons charging at each other in such headlong fashion." E. F. M.

Boston Transcript p4 My 2 '36

"Superlative casting, thousands of extras, a desert locale that would keep the Foreign Legion itself guessing, added to Frank Lloyd's expert direction, combine to make this picture splendid entertainment."

+ Canadian M p41 Je '36

"Ouida's old romance brought forward 30 years in time without removal of its glorification of imperialism or its ancient caste distinctions; given a sprightly comedy treatment that partly rejuvenates a worn-out formula. . . Magnificent desert vistas and sanguinary battle scenes, with many horses trained to tumble, or tripped to provide the spectators with thrills."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 My 2 '36

"It is gripping screen entertainment for its entire length, a closely knit narrative which will satisfy completely the most discriminating audience."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 My 9 '36

"That this picturesque narrative of life in the Foreign Legion, though undeniably entertaining, never attains its potential heights, is due, I suspect, to its selection of incident. . . [It is] commendable movie fare—and a disappointment in not being something more." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p45 Je 6 '36

"A waste of excellent cast, proficient photography, and your good hour and a half." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p36 Je '36

"The striking pictorial beauty of 'Under Two Flags' does not cloak a multitude of dramatic sins in the [film]. Liberties have been taken with [Ouida's] preposterous and sentimental literary bow to the French Foreign Legion, but the narrative still creaks embarrassingly and the photoplay cries out for extensive cutting. . . It is probable that no amount of retouching would serve to invigorate the musty Ouida nickname. The story is a confusion of melodramatic adventures and improbable love affairs that defy a plausible screen pattern." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 My 1 '36

"'Under Two Flags' is a romantic melodrama which might easily have turned out ridiculous or dull, or both. It is neither. . . However it may have seemed at the turn of the century, the plot is no longer new. . . Pictorially, the film is magnificent. Mr. Lloyd kept to black-and-white photography, for which this department thanks him. This is black-and-white photography at its best, with desert sunshine and desert sands giving the cameraman every advantage." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p21 My 1 '36

"Twentieth Century-Fox has not stinted on its production nor on a cast which would do full justice to a venerable piece of stage property. . . It is, as any one can see, a pleasant cast, and it manages, under Frank Lloyd's deft direction, to hold our interest during the quieter interludes when the Legion is not defending the Tri-color. . . That battle scene toward the film's end is a new high in desert warfare and we refuse to believe it could have been made without several of the combatants sustaining real injuries." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p19 My 1 '36

"Except that it is much too long, 'Under Two Flags,' is the best amalgamation of melodrama, romance and adventure that the screen has offered since 'The Lives of a Bengal Lancer.' Even those recalcitrants, who are not convinced that existence under the French rule is the most beneficial in the world will have to admit that the film is full of excitement and thrills as it extols the Foreign Legion's exploits in Africa. . . 'Under Two Flags' [is] superior entertainment." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 My 1 '36

"Many people have to see Claudette Colbert in anything she does, and therefore won't want to miss 'Under Two Flags.' . . It's about the Foreign Legion, but it's no 'Morocco.' Too much sand." John Mosher

New Yorker p87 My 9 '36

"This grand old hokem drammer needed a lot of humanizing to make it live again, but Ray Griffith, producer and Frank Lloyd, director, did it. . . I must confess, however, that my interest began to sag with the big-production stuff. Battles are too noisy, impersonal and confusing, and I'm terribly tired of seeing innumerable horses tripped right in front of the camera." Bob Wagner

Script p10 My 16 '36

"[It is] one of the major disappointments of the season, due primarily to an outmoded theme of love and sacrifice under an African sun. Authentic, powerful background, sincere performing, excellent photography; yet every time two or more of the characters get together, the phoniness of the situations brings the entertainment 'way below its normal level."

— + Stage p10 Je 1 '36

"The current version, costly, handsome and overlong, offers a concession to modernity. . . The magnificently-photographed battle is the film's best feature."

Time p56 My 11 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

"A superlatively spectacular and thoroughly excellent production, this cannot miss being one of the top money-getters of 1936."
+ Box Office p31 My 23 '36

"Whether or not 'Under Two Flags' will win the Academy award for 1936 is something that we would rather not prophesy, but when the list of the ten most outstanding productions for 1936 is compiled, I feel sure that you will find 'Under Two Flags' well in the van of that list."
+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p8 My 9 '36

"The best picture this outfit has produced in some long time. It is quite a satisfactory version of the famous story. Of course there have been many yarns of the Foreign Legion since this one was written and several have reached the screen. All of which rather takes the edge off another tale of the same variety."
+ Film Curb p14 My 2 '36

"Action drama of the Foreign Legion, big in scope and with many excellent performances to give it fine box office drag."
+ Film Daily p4 Ap 28 '36

"A magnificent pageant of love and action in the Foreign Legion that is unforgettable in the thrilling beauty of its production and the gorgeous galaxy of its individual performances, but that nevertheless misses entertainment greatness, though by a narrow margin. Its many outstanding merits, however, will make it a very big money-maker. . . The two faults that tally against it for real greatness are inherent in the old Ouida novel. The central male character switches his devotion from one woman to another in the middle of the story . . . and the dramatic issue, which is the love of two women for the one man, is not stated or its results precipitated until several reels of introductory narrative have passed."
+ Hollywood Reporter p2 Ap 24 '36

"Combining all the available showmanship angles into one dramatic unit, Ouida's famous tale of love, sacrifice and bravery in the Foreign Legion comes to the screen with an effective pictorial translation assuring heavy grosses. . . The film surmounts all the African Foreign Legion chronicles to date."
+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Ap 25 '36

"Showmen will find plenty of effective angles with which to market it. . . On strength of cast, quality of story and excellence of production values, 'Under Two Flags' is entertainment for any kind of audience."
+ Motion Pict Herald p39 My 9 '36

"Backed by four names, with one punch scene, 'Under Two Flags' should do better than average business. . . The story's familiarity is overcome by some romantic bits, but on the whole the yarn doesn't seem to deserve the attention given it. With the names, however, this disadvantage can be overcome."
N Y Exhibitor p23 My 10 '36

"The classic 'Under Two Flags' is still sturdy fare. . . The film's 111 minutes count against it a bit because it would shape up better with 20 minutes or more elided. . . General technic bolsters a now familiar pattern. . . The production highlight is the pitched battle on the desert between the marauding Arabs and the handful of Legionnaires."
+ Variety p18 My 6 '36

"'Under Two Flags' marches to the box office as swaggering melodrama of sure-fire calibre. Picture kept preview audience spell-bound throughout for 105 minutes and indicates healthy box office, with appeal for all types of audience."
+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 24 '36

UNGUARDED HOUR. Ap 10 '36 90min MGM

Players: Loretta Young, Franchot Tone, Lewis Stone, Roland Young, Dudley Digges, Henry Daniell

Director: Sam Wood

Based on the Hungarian play of the same title by Ladislaus Fodor, translated by Bernard Merivale. "Franchot Tone is about to reach the summit of his career, having been assured an appointment as attorney general, when his wife, Loretta Young, receives a blackmailing threat involving some letters written before his marriage by Tone. The payment of the money on the Dover cliffs involves Miss Young as the witness needed to clear a man of murder."
(Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Bks & Films My '36

"A: excellent; Y: good; C: no interest."
Christian Century p783 Je 3 '36

"Adults and later teens." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature." DAR

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Mature." Nat Bd of R

"Family—mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A mystery story which holds one spell-bound from start to finish. Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This picture has weight and appeal for the mature audience. Outstanding work by Roland Young in his usually interesting characterization." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Ap 25 '36

"The picture [is] high in entertainment value. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 15 '36

"The picture is cleverly directed with psychological factors stressed and, although it starts out along the beaten path, it soon takes on new angles which are refreshingly different. Family—mature."

+ Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"The film as a whole cleverly keeps one's attention, though it is somewhat spoilt by the weakness of the conclusion. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p90 My '36

"Ninety per cent of the laughs go to Roland Young who has the best lines and effects such natural comedy relief that a normal attitude is maintained, and the film never becomes what it easily might have been, the morbid story of two crimes. Adolescents, 12-16; too sophisticated; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Perfection of cast, direction and suspense are responsible for the rare entertainment qualities of this picture. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 15 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 29 '36

"A: mystery drama of London life and its criminal court; Y: sophisticated; C: no."
Par M p52 Je '36

"Family—mature."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"[It is] an interesting and dramatic story. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide Ap 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

UNGUARDED HOUR—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] is diverting rather than impressive."
B. L.

Boston Transcript p4 My 16 '36

"This is real drama, with a punch and plenty of thrills right up to the last minute. The climax comes in an unexpected moment and director Sam Wood knows how to get every bit of suspense out of this type of plot." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p61 My '36

"Loretta Young and Franchot Tone, with Roland Young and Lewis Stone, work well together in this dramatically interesting, closely-knit play. . . . The crime is committed with a minimum of morbidity and is solved by natural sequence of cause and effects, rather than by high-school dramas of Hawkshaw deduction." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p724 Ap 24 '36

"Franchot Tone is to me one of the most pleasing actors on the screen, but he is handicapped in 'Unguarded Hour' by the unconvincing role he is given to play. He struggles manfully to make a good story out of a poor one. The picture's assets are a pictorially impressive production well up to Metro's high standard, its strong cast and Sam Wood's capable direction; its liability, an illogical story. . . . However, if you check your analytical sense at the box-office before going in, you may get some satisfaction out of it. I did."

+ — Hollywood Spec p25 Ap 11 '36

"For an evening of brisk mental gymnastics the film is rigorous exercise. Though the plot is too neatly evolved to be realistic, Director Sam Wood has so smoothly dovetailed the complicated workings, so suavely proves his point, that the film is arresting diversion." (2½ stars)

Liberty p38 My 9 '36

"A number of pleasant players are engaged in a lot of exceptionally silly activities concerned with murder and blackmail in [this] picture. . . . There is an excellent physical production and, as already suggested, the players are helpful. I fear, though, that the implausibility which surrounds the entire narrative and the unreal quality of the motivation keep 'The Unguarded Hour' from being a credible or an absorbing motion picture. Nor do I think that the dialogue can be set down as exactly helpful." Richards Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 Ap 4 '36

"[It is] an entertaining melodrama in spite of its dependence upon the well known set of curious chances. . . . 'The Unguarded Hour' belongs to the school of highly theatrical stage plays which seldom prove as exciting in motion picture form. This film is the happy exception to the rule. Its artificialities are obvious and unavoidable. Its manipulation of suspense and dramatics is skillful." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p8 Ap 4 '36

"Concerning 'The Unguarded Hour' this department is frankly incredulous. A melodramatic mountain goat, it leaps from peak to peak with such assurance and dexterity that some of the spectators are bound to be convinced it is headwork, not just footwork, they are admiring. We do not remember off-hand any film so successful in achieving scenes of dramatic conviction by plot processes so unconvincing. Illogic may be the picture's deity, but we must admit it has been served with decorum and effectiveness." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p11 Ap 4 '36

"The new mystery film—it's not a very good one—is called 'The Unguarded Hour.' . . . Loretta Young, Franchot Tone, Roland Young, Lewis Stone and several other excellent actors do their level best for it. But, I fear, not even their level best is enough for 'The Unguarded Hour,' which is too slow, too wordy and too unconvincing to stand up under the strain of first rate competition. . . . Although its speech is halting and its action ponderous, the chief reason why 'The Unguarded Hour' does not deserve even a 'fair-to-middling' rating in the mystery entertainment field is that when the solution arrives the steps by which it was obtained are not very convincing or clear, even though they are explained." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p7 Ap 4 '36

"Henry Daniell . . . presents us with a pretty study of a blackmailer. He's the smooth and mannered scamp, and it's hardly credible that he should ever be undone. The story itself is unbelievable, which perhaps doesn't matter in mysteries and thrillers." John Mosher

New Yorker p85 Ap 11 '36

"A lurid title, 'The Unguarded Hour,' does little justice to one of the cleverest adult murder mystery films that Hollywood has concocted."

+ News-Wk p42 Ap 11 '36

"Larry Weingarten is rapidly becoming identified with productions showing 'class' and excellent taste. Here he gives us another picture of high-grade educated people embroiled in the complexities of one of the best plots that has come to the screen, a murder-mystery story without any of the usual hokum devices to lead one astray. . . . I defy anybody to guess the outcome." R. W.

+ Script p10 Je 6 '36

"As designed by the production staff, the film becomes a photographed stage play, wordy and static, lightened here and there by the inherent excellence of the writing and the adequacy of the acting."

+ — Stage p10 My '36

"For a melodrama containing two violent deaths, 'The Unguarded Hour' is chiefly remarkable for an inappropriate placidity which Franchot Tone's yawnings, head scratchings and frowns to denote the weight of great affairs, do little to dispel."

Time p32 Ap 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A polite murder mystery with the story built amidst a reserved atmosphere. Situated in an English drawing-room locale for the first reel, the plot finally gains enough momentum to make it both interesting and exciting. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ap 11 '36

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p9 Je 13 '36

"Here is an unusually good mystery drama that has been well directed. It is played by an excellent cast that puts it over in great style. . . . Were we an exhibitor this is the kind of picture we'd like to see come along often."

+ Film Curb p10 Ap 11 '36

"The mystery angle of this drama of London life is cleverly worked out, with plenty of suspense, several tense emotional climaxes, and with a cast that gets every ounce of effect from the roles."

+ Film Daily p4 Ap 1 '36

"As well-mannered a mystery as has come out of Hollywood since 'Interference,' 'The Unguarded Hour' is due for satisfactory business anywhere. . . . To win and hold interest, it has a plot of many unexpected twists, purposefully directed by Sam Wood and faultlessly played by all concerned."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 Ap 1 '36

"The stage origin of this story of English aristocratic life is apparent in the extensive use of dialogue to describe off-stage action, but the result is pleasant entertainment. The cast is perfect, the settings sumptuous, the situations neatly handled. What it lacks in basic story values is made up for by smart handling of details."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 Ap 1 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Combining a quartet of marquee names with a closely-knit and suspenseful plot in which the indispensable murder is consummated with a minimum of morbidity, this picture is susceptible to the best type of exploitation suitable for features of its kind."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 Ap 4 '36

"Without the expert cast that's been wrapped around it, this English drawingroom [mystery] would have made a stodgy, meandering talkfest. Even as it stands, the production offers little action or suspense, while the few punch moments that there are find themselves crowded into the final reel. . . The results should fluctuate around the average mark."

+ - Variety p16 Ap 8 '36

"Supervision, writing and direction have fashioned 'The Unguarded Hour' into top-notch film fare and were it not for these contributions, picture might have wound up as just another melodramatic affair. . . [The] picture should get money."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 1 '36

W

WE ARE FROM KRONSTADT. My 1 '36 Mos-film

Players: V. Zaichikov. C. Bushuyev. N. Ivakin. O. Jakov

Director: E. Dzigan

Russian dialogue film made in U.S.S.R. with English sub-titles. "It tells the part that the Kronstadt sailors played in saving Petrograd from the White and foreign troops." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: perhaps; Y: no; C: no."

Christian Century p887 Je 17 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Kronstadt' is an excellent picture and should be seen. It is difficult to understand, however, why the Soviets, who have achieved near perfection in most departments of cinema-making, should display such little knowledge of the technique of continuity. It was often difficult to interpret the military action." Fred Stein

+ Hollywood Spec p14 Je 6 '36

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation p688 My 27 '36

"The test of a successful work is whether it has accomplished what it set out to do. The fervent applause that everywhere greets 'Kronstadt,' and the deserved ecomiums heaped upon the film's director, Dzigan, permit little argument on that score. 'Kronstadt' will win the Russian film many new adherents." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p15 Je '36

"[It is] a notable addition to the magnificent series of Soviet revolutionary films. . . Superbly staged and photographed and brilliantly acted, 'We Are From Kronstadt' is a motion picture in the true sense of that term. It is not as tautly dramatic as 'Potemkin' or 'Chapayev,' but it has an irresistible sweep and power that make it one of the cinema's first-rank achievements. . . E. Dzigan, who must be ranked with Eisenstein and Pudovkin for his imaginative and masterly direction of the work, has realized every implication of the script. Working for three years with Vish-nevsky on the film, with all the resources of the Soviet navy at his command, he has achieved memorable effects in the whole range of cinematic technique." Howard Barnes

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p8 My 2 '36

"From Russia has come a brilliant companion piece to last year's 'Chapayev.' . . 'We Are From Kronstadt' contains some of the most impressive photography and the boldest direction the screen has provided this year. . . All told, the new picture comes pretty close to being the best thing the Soviet Studios have made." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p11 My 2 '36

"In the superior tradition of 'Potemkin' and 'Chapayev,' this 'We Are From Kronstadt' is one of the mightiest films that have come out of a country noted for its productions of direct and persuasive motion pictures. . . A physically exciting and engrossing film, 'We Are From Kronstadt' is, further, notable for its brilliant photography, superb direction and admirable characterizations." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p17 My 4 '36

"One of the finest pictures going is the Russian 'We Are From Kronstadt.' . . It's a Russian film with humor, which is news always, I guess—a humor straight from the barracks, but often gentle and to the point. And certainly if you are sick of the routine movie stuff, you may be glad to see a report of a crisis in history which is not employed merely as a background for romance. . . It's a film to be respected." John Mosher

+ + New Yorker p85 My 9 '36

"Cameraman N. Naumov-Straj turns in a magnificent feat of cinematography when he articulates the progress of this remarkable revolutionary battle piece. . . [It is] a picture which has probably not been matched for photography since 'The Informer,' has certainly not been equaled for military realism since 'Chapayev.'"

+ + Time p56 My 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] fine action, picture with strong 'working class' influence."

+ Film Daily p3 My 2 '36

"'We Are From Kronstadt' is strictly limited in its appeal to patrons of the arty theaters, Friends of the Soviet Union, and students of motion picture technique who are captivated by the elemental effects achieved through the Russians' great sincerity. Of general entertainment value, it has little. Its propaganda is confined to establishing the inevitable success of the Communist cause."

Hollywood Reporter p3 My 22 '36

"It glorifies the revolution and may be of interest to the audiences who rabidly attend the 'little' theatres for their entertainment. The situations are well done after the Russian fashion and the camera work, particularly the scenes on the battlefields, is superb."

+ Motion Pict Daily p15 My 6 '36

"Reviewed at the Cameo theatre, New York, which exhibits Russian films exclusively, where a May Day audience of near capacity received the picture without audible manifestation of reaction."

Motion Pict Herald p32 My 16 '36

"Estimate: for art houses."

Phila Exhibitor p27 Je 1 '36

"It's another drab sermon in favor of the revolution and Communism. Being nothing more than sugar-coated propaganda, something from which the Soviet screen can't seem to escape, it has appeal only for those who are Communistically-minded or still get a kick out of the flag-waving of the U. S. S. R. over its revolution."

+ - Variety p19 My 6 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

WELLINGTON PIKE GOES WEST. 55min
O'Neill-State rights

Players: Russell Gleason, Jack LaRue, Virginia Carroll

Director: Maurice G. O'Neill

A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"This Western to kid all Westerns is built on a droll idea that wins a good quota of laughs, but limits of budget prevent the full development of its possibilities. In its present form it will surprise and satisfy on those lower neighborhood levels where the child-mind takes any Western as normal fare."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 9 '36

"Typical wild west, production of which takes a satirical twist, this is aimed directly at the patronage contingents that enthuse to cowboy-tenderfoot-badman stuff. . . Impressionable youngsters and imaginative Western addicts probably will find much to thrill and amuse them, but the quality of the entertainment probably will not excite run-of-the-mill theatre-goers."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p21 Je 12 '36

"Little to recommend this one, outside of Russell Gleason's performance for anything but the Saturday and Sunday juvenile trade. Poorly written, produced and directed, it is a minor independent effort. . . Virginia Carroll, poorly photographed, and with little to do, contributes little. Direction and production are careless throughout."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 9 '36

WHITE ANGEL. Jl 4 '36 75min Warner-First national

Players: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter, Donald Woods, Georgia Caine, Charles Croker-King, George Curzon

Director: William Dieterle

Based on a chapter, Florence Nightingale, in Eminent Victorians by Lytton Strachey. "The screenplay . . . tells of the conditions existing in hospitals in the time of Queen Victoria and the determination of Florence Nightingale to rectify such conditions. She is a woman reared delicately as women were in those days and her efforts are rebuffed, even by the doctors. Then comes opportunity to serve in the Crimean War, and her winning of recognition after almost incredible hardships and suffering." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Warner Brothers has given us a picture whose sincerity and verity will be a deep source of satisfaction to all. . . The film is restrained and dignified and is a fine contribution to inspirational biographical drama. Adolescents, 12-16: fine; children, 8-12: harrowing in parts."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

"[It is] presented with feeling and simplicity. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"When Kay Francis, as Florence Nightingale, walks between the long ranks of beds upon which wounded soldiers lie—a figure gliding quietly in the still night, unaccompanied, a lamp in her hand—the audience is going to witness one of the greatest moments in the history of screen entertainment. And that is but one of the several great moments in 'The White Angel.' The picture is a dramatized heart-throb. It takes its place beside 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' as a Warner Brothers contribution to the dignity of science and service."

+ + Hollywood Spec p7 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A brilliant depiction of the life of Florence Nightingale, one of the best beloved characters in modern history, 'White Angel' firmly establishes Kay Francis as one of our most beautiful and talented stars. This picture is unquestionably destined for important grosses at all its showings."

+ Box Office p33 Je 6 '36

"It has all the ingredients that go into the making of Grade A entertainment. Will have a direct appeal to all classes. Should be a success wherever played."

+ Film Curb p6 Je 6 '36

"Warner-First National have again turned to history—and the result is an important contribution to the screen. 'White Angel' is a sincere, moving document."

+ Film Daily p29 Je 2 '36

"It is a triumph shared equally by Kay Francis, giving her most glorious performance, and by William Dieterle, directing a subject worthy of his steel. Even were 'White Angel' less than the great picture it is, the exploitation possibilities of its story would make it a sure-fire box office attraction."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 27 '36

"Kay Francis, cast in a title role, captures the indomitable courage of the character and gives a performance which stirs the emotions. It will appeal particularly to feminine audiences. . . A selling campaign similar to 'Pasteur' seems indicated and should produce satisfactory results in all situations."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 My 29 '36

"It is an exploitation show that places in the hands of exhibitors countless opportunities to indulge in soundly constructive interest-creating and business-building campaigns. . . It's the kind of show that exhibitors can take to the opinion creating forces in any community and demand that they support it in such a manner that it will be brought to the attention of every potential patron."

+ Motion Pict Herald p56 Je 6 '36

"Estimate: good production; should do well."

+ Phila Exhibitor p25 Je 15 '36

"Challenged by a strong, stirring story of an heroic character and significant episode in humanitarian progress, Kay Francis steps into a high niche as an important actress in her superb portrait of Florence Nightingale. . . With the Kay Francis name to magnetize the marquee, a moving drama powerful on its own merits, subject matter and treatment which has special appeal for women everywhere, without neglecting masculine appeal, and plenty of exploitation material, the picture presages sure box office of prosperous proportion."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 28 '36

WILDCAT SAUNDERS. (Release date not determined) 55min Atlantic

Players: Jack Perrin, William Gould, Blanche Mehaffey

Director: Harry Fraser

A western melodrama

Trade Paper Reviews

"Well balanced cast and a touch of romance with several comedy highlights."

Film Curb p12 D 15 '35

"Estimate: good for neighborhoods; twin bills."

+ N Y Exhibitor p46 Ja 25 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

(s) WINGED CHAMPIONS. Mr 13 '36 10min
Paramount

Players: Ted Husing

"One of the Grantland Rice Sportlight Series. "Artistic glimpses of various birds 'on the wing' and slow motion views of pelicans in flight." (Sel Motion Pict)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Interesting comments by Ted Husing. Excellent. Family & junior matinee."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"Family-junior."

Wkly Guide F 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Slightly unorthodox, this one leaves the athletes for birds, thus limiting audience appeal to photography, which is satisfying enough. . . Ted Husing does a good job with the narrative."

+ Film Daily p36 Ap 28 '36

"Fine camera work shows the natural flying ability of the birds as they land, take off and glide. . . The Husing humor is at its best when the comical pelicans are shown."

Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 13 '36

"Ted Husing's glib narration contrasts effectively with the often superlative shots of birds on the wing. . . The information given is interesting in itself and the camera achievements are noteworthy. A well rounded, carefully prepared, all-purpose Sportlight."

+ Motion Pict Herald p60 Ap 11 '36

WITNESS CHAIR. Ap 24 '36 65min RKO

Players: Ann Harding, Walter Abel, Douglass Dumbrille

Director: George Nicholls, Jr.

Based on the novel of the same title by Rita Weiman. "Miss Harding is secretary to Walter Abel, with whom she is secretly in love. His partner, Douglass Dumbrille, plans to elope with the firm's money after falsifying the books to place responsibility on Abel. He plans also to take Abel's only daughter with him. Discovering the plans, Miss Harding, at the point of a gun, insists that Dumbrille sign a full confession. This leads to a struggle in which Dumbrille is killed." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Disappointing; Y: not the best; C: no." Christian Century p687 My 6 '36

"The murder trial shows fine direction, and the entire cast gives a smooth, careful performance. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Ann Harding sets an agreeable precedent for herself in this melodrama by the restraint with which she handles her role. Adults: interesting; 14-18: fair; 8-14: beyond." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Unusually skillful treatment of courtroom testimony. Fine cast. Mature." DAR

"While Miss Harding's admirers may feel disappointed in this film, in that it does not provide much scope for her dramatic and emotional powers, it is to be commended for its technical excellence. Family-mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Woman's Clubs

"Ann Harding's dramatic but not exaggerated portrayal, and her power of restraint are the high lights of a complicated but entertaining plot, which shuns sex appeal in a refreshing manner. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 18 '36

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 6 '36

"A tensely dramatic story with some comedy relief, interestingly developed, well acted and ethically satisfactory. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"American Courts of Justice are gaining, through American films, a sinister reputation for callousness and for what appears to British eyes as irregular procedure. . . This weakly constructed story gives the principals, Ann Harding and Walter Abel, little to do, but presents to two or three lesser characters opportunities that are admirably taken; the snub-nosed office-boy in particular makes a good comedy impression. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p91 My '36

"Due to an artificial method of telling the story by flash-backs, and the use of dialogue rather than action, this film grows rather tedious. . . Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 6 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

"A and Y: murder drama with the audience as jurors since killer's identity and the motive are withheld until the final moment; C: no interest."

Par M p52 Je '36

"The flimsy story, although fairly well told, never rises above the hackneyed. . . The comedy scenes, assigned mostly to the office boy, seem superfluous and often fall flat. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Excellent direction lifts [the film] into interesting entertainment. Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Logical and interesting courtroom drama, presented skilfully, this is recommended without reservation. The direction reveals fine taste, sound knowledge of cinematic art and entertainment; the players are altogether convincing; the scripting is of high order and the photography effective. . . Again the magnificent Ann Harding gives a characterization that will delight spectators who find pleasure in viewing fine acting. She has invested her role with an aura of realism, living the character during her every moment before the camera."

+ Hollywood Spec p33 Ap 11 '36

"The Witness Chair' . . . emerges as a lugubrious and mediocre film. This, however, appears to be less the fault of the players or the director than of its author, Rita Weiman, and of the persons who devised the screen play and are responsible for the extravagant plot manipulations—Rian James and Gertrude Purcell." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 18 '36

"Ann Harding suffers in this carelessly fabricated, rather shopworn mystery melodrama. . . But, then, that is nothing unusual for Miss Harding. The greatest sufferer, silent and otherwise, that the screen has known, Miss Harding has shed so many tears in her Hollywood career that if laid end to end—oh, well, it really doesn't matter." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 Ap 21 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

WITNESS CHAIR—Continued

"Announced as Ann Harding's last American picture, it is no notable departure. The patch-job court room drama reeks with implausibilities. . . . Walter Abel, a capable actor under most trying circumstances, is badly miscast as an accused murderer."

+ — News-Wk p29 Ap 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"At the time this was written it was a crackerjack mystery yarn but the plot foundation has been used many times since then. It is the familiar courtroom murder trial stuff."

+ — Film Curb p13 Ap 11 '36

"Although this one effects strong economies in being limited to few settings, smart dialogue, direction and smooth playing make it good fare. . . . The courtroom questioning and cross-questioning is of the better variety, especially in the instance where defense counsel proves a witness has memorized her testimony from the stand."

+ — Film Daily p8 Ap 17 '36

"Ann Harding has little to do but worry and suffer in her characteristically restrained and dignified manner. Her conduct is above reproach, from a social standpoint, but admirable poise alone does not make a picture and 'The Witness Chair' fails to deliver the necessary dramatic punch for the finale."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p12 Ap 2 '36

"Outstanding showmanship availability is the theme the picture follows. Though Miss Harding gives a characteristic dramatic performance and the work of supporting players is of high class, the idea of withholding the motive for the crime and the identity of the killer until concluding sequences, makes it possible for exhibitors to invite audience into the courtroom and let them be jurors."

Motion Pict Herald p54 Ap 11 '36

"It is unlikely that [it] will prove a strong grosser in spite of its star and in spite, too, of a good all around production. It's just that trial stories never did pack much appeal even when they were newer."

+ — Variety p14 Ap 22 '36

"'The Witness Chair' has been a model for many courtroom murder films, but the strength of the original has not been lessened by its imitators. The device by which the testimony of witnesses is photographed in retrospect is still effective when cleverly employed. The swift pace of the action held the audience intently. . . . 'The Witness Chair' will find playing time in class A first runs."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 1 '36

WOMAN ALONE. 90min Garrett Klement-British

Players: Anna Sten. Henry Wilcoxon. Viola Keats. John Garrick

Director: Eugene Frenke

Anna Sten portrays a Russian peasant girl who becomes a nursemaid for the child of a Guards officer. Her soldier-fiance strikes the officer when his suspicions are aroused about her relations with the officer and as a result, he is court-martialed as a political agitator. At his trial, the girl saves his life by testifying, untruthfully, that she was the officer's mistress. Later the officer, now divorced, and the girl are united.

Trade Paper Reviews

"The film has all the earmarks of a big box-office success. . . . All in all it is a fine tribute to British production and should have no trouble in getting American bookings."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 My 19 '36

"Story values are strong and of a popular type and backgrounds are colorful and original in a picture which shows no obvious signs of its British origin; technically it is up to Hollywood standards. . . . This is audience material of a decidedly popular type, with plenty of action, novelty and variety of setting. The woman appeal should be strong."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p3 Je 9 '36

"Even without Anna Sten and Henry Wilcoxon, 'A Woman Alone' would offer story values of exceptionally popular kind. These two stars are, as it happens, very well cast. . . . 'A Woman Alone,' which does not advertise its British origin by any defects of technique, tempo or accent, is audience material of well-proven kind. . . . Over and above the story and 'problem' angles, there are very considerable spectacular values to exploit. The dancing, by the Leon Woizikovsky ballet, is admirable, and the peasant songs, the balalaika music and the stage sets, all lend variety and color."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p60 Je 6 '36

WOMEN ARE TROUBLE. 60min MGM

Players: Stuart Erwin. Paul Kelly. Florence Rice. Margaret Irving

Director: Errol Taggart

A crusading editor, his crack reporter and a girl cub reporter expose a gang of liquor racketeers after sundry adventures, including kidnapping. In the end the reporter marries the cub and the editor who loved her returns to his divorced wife.

Trade Paper Reviews

"This comedy-drama may not be one of M-G-M's specials, but it is an enjoyable show. Although a traditional newspaper yarn, its light-hearted treatment, new twists and clever lines are so very different from similar pictures that it should click nicely as a better program offering."

+ — Film Daily p4 Je 13 '36

"A fast-moving reporter-vs-gangster story results in neat entertainment for program runs. . . . [It] was produced with an obvious eye on the budget. But so well is it performed, and so ably is it directed that the picture is lifted considerably above the average of limited-cost fare. It will please audiences everywhere."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 10 '36

"The result is pretty fair amusement for average audiences. Nothing much that is novel or different is introduced in the story, but the familiar stock stuff abetted by all-around acting and smartly contrived dialogue, situations and actions, are interesting and attention-holding."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Je 11 '36

"It clicks from first to last frame and should be welcome on any man's program as a laugh leavener and an apparently healthy grosser, once the customer is inside the portals."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 10 '36

Y*YELLOW CARGO. 70min Pacific-Grand national

Players: Conrad Nagel. Eleanor Hunt. Vince Barnett. Jack La Rue

Director: Crane Wilbur

A gang of smugglers operating as a bogus motion picture company are rounded up by an undercover agent for the immigration department and a persistent girl reporter.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Clever yarn that travels at moderate tempo throughout. Direction and script are of high calibre, although production falls a bit below average."

+ — Box Office p33 Je 13 '36

"While it has its exciting and dramatic moments it boasts of some really fine comedy."

+ Film Curb p5 Je 13 '36

"Swift-moving program picture presenting dramatic situations in a novel manner."

+ Film Daily p7 Je 6 '36

"There are enough fresh twists and gags in its formula story of crime detection to keep average audiences at close attention and Conrad Nagel makes an earnest, pleasing and believable crime detector, who will make friends in the role. All in all the picture is well above average in its class."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 2 '36

"A new twist in a smuggling story gives value to the first of a series of eight [films] starring Conrad Nagel as a Government undercover man. . . The entire cast makes a smart showing and the film should build interest for the rest of the series. Emphasize the new angle in a smuggling melodrama."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 Je 4 '36

"Estimate: independent program; perhaps more with selling."

Phila Exhibitor p29 Je 15 '36

"When tightened up to program release footage, this will turn out to be a pleasing, fast-moving comedy drama that should click with the average audience. Crane Wilbur, author and director of the picture, has delivered an admirable piece of work in transferring to the screen a story that is different from the general run of fan fare."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 2 '36

YELLOW DUST. F 22 '36 62min RKO

Players: Richard Dix. Leila Hyams. Andy Clyde. Onslow Stevens. Moroni Olsen. Jessie Ralph

Director: Wallace Fox

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This is just another Western livened by a plot, commonplace in itself, but interestingly presented, and the good looks and vital acting of Richard Dix."

Bks & Films Ap '36

"A: hardly; Y: harmless; C: perhaps."

Christian Century p751 My 20 '36

"The treatment is more romantic than is usual in Wild West films, but is so well-handled that it enhances the pleasure of the film. . . The dialogue is good. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p52 F 24 '36

"It is only mildly entertaining because in spite of violent action, one never doubts the outcome. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: questionable."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Much of the typical blood and thunder element conspicuous in the average Western has been substituted here by a well-developed plot, some especially good performances, nice vocal renditions on the part of Leila Hyams and a pleasing sprinkling of romantic interest. It sums up as mighty pleasant outdoor drama, and also contains some bits of good comedy. Family."

+ Box Office p13 Mr 14 '36

"Exploitation logically may include all the tricks in the barrel labeled 'sure fire Western,' from stage coach ballyhoo to bullion lobby displays. Testimonials from local oldsters, to whom the picture should bring back plenty of memories, might prove especially valuable. Performances by the three players named above warrant any reasonable use of their names."

Motion Pict Herald p44 Mr 28 '36

YOU MAY BE NEXT. F 6 '36 65min Columbia

Players: Ann Sothorn. Lloyd Nolan. Douglass Dumbrille. John Arledge

Director: Albert S. Rogell

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Trade Paper Reviews

"Exciting melodrama dealing with a novel attempt at hijacking big radio stations will interest generally and prove particularly good fare where audiences demand fast action and thrills galore. Romantic element is comparatively slight and when dragged in only results in retarding the story development. Family."

Box Office p25 Ap 11 '36

"Although not a pretentious effort by any means, the picture does have several action and thrill packed sequences upon which showmen may well capitalize."

Motion Pict Herald p41 Mr 28 '36

INDEX

Under the names of the leading actors and actresses will be found the productions listed in this number in which they have taken part.

Under the director's name will be found a list of the films in this number which he directed.

Under the headings Books, Plays and Short Stories (Adapted) will be found the author, title of published work and the title of the film. When the title of the film differs from the title of the book, the film's title is given in parenthesis, thus:

Eberhart, M. G.

From this dark stairway (Murder of Dr Harrigan)

ACTORS & ACTRESSES

Abel, Walter
 Fury
 Witness chair
 Acuff, Eddie
 Boulder dam
 Adrien, Iris
 Criminal within
 Alberni, Luis
 Dancing pirate
 Albertson, Frank
 Fury
 Alerme
 Pension Mimosas
 Alexander, Katharine
 Sutter's gold
 Alexander, Ross
 Boulder dam
 Brides are like that
 Hot money
 I married a doctor
 Allen, Jimmie
 Sky parade
 Allen, Robert
 Pride of the Marines
 Alvarado, Don
 Red wagon
 Ameche, Don
 Sins of man
 Ames, Adrienne
 Abdul the damned
 Anderson, Eddie
 Green pastures
 Andre, Lona
 Lucky terror
 Arledge, John
 Two in revolt
 You may be next
 Arlen, Richard
 Mine with the iron door
 Armetta, Henry
 Let's sing again
 Armstrong, Robert
 Ex-Mrs Bradford
 Arnold, Edward
 Sutter's gold
 Arthur, Jean
 Ex-Mrs Bradford
 Mr Deeds goes to town
 Ashcroft, Peggy
 Rhodes, the diamond master
 Astaire, Fred
 Follow the fleet
 Aster, Nils
 Abdul the damned
 Astor, Mary
 And so they were married
 Atkins, Robert
 Cardinal
 Atwill, Lionel
 Absolute quiet
 Till we meet again
 Autry, Gene
 Comin' 'round the mountain
 Singing cowboy
 Ayres, Lew
 Leathernecks have landed
 Panic on the air

Ballew, Smith
 Palm Springs
 Bancroft, George
 Hell ship Morgan
 Mr Deeds goes to town
 Barbier, George
 Early to bed
 Preview murder mystery
 Barnes, Binnie
 Small town girl
 Sutter's gold
 Barnett, Vince
 Captain calamity
 Dancing feet
 Yellow cargo
 Barrie, Wendy
 Speed
 Barrymore, Dolores Costello
 Little Lord Fauntleroy
 Barrymore, Lionel
 Road to glory
 Bartholomew, Freddie
 Little Lord Fauntleroy
 Barton, Buzz
 Feud of the west
 Barton, Finis
 Secret patrol
 Basseggio, Cesco
 Alpine love
 Batobrina, G.
 Children of the revolution
 Baur, Harry
 I stand condemned
 Baxter, Alan
 Case against Mrs Ames
 Parole
 Thirteen hours by air
 Baxter, Warner
 Prisoner of Shark Island
 Road to glory
 Robin Hood of El Dorado
 Bayer, Ferdinand
 Don Bosco
 Beecher, Janet
 Love before breakfast
 Beery, Noah
 Crimson circle
 King of the damned
 Beery, Noah, Jr.
 Parole
 Beery, Wallace
 Message to Garcia
 Bell, Rex
 Too much beef
 Bellamy, Ralph
 Roaming lady
 Benchley, Robert
 How to behave
 Bennett, Joan
 Big brown eyes
 Thirteen hours by air
 Bergen, Connie
 Too much beef
 Bernard, Paul
 Pension Mimosas
 Berry, W. H.
 Once in a million
 Bickford, Charles
 Pride of the Marines
 Red wagon
 Bilotto, Camillo
 Lorenzino de Medici

Blondell, Joan
 Bullets or ballots
 Colleen
 Sons o' guns
 Blore, Eric
 Ex-Mrs Bradford
 Sons o' guns
 Blue, Monte
 Treachery rides the range
 Boardman, Virginia True
 Crime patrol
 Bogart, Humphrey
 Bullets or ballots
 Two against the world
 Bogolybov, N.
 Seven brave men
 Boland, Mary
 Early to bed
 Boles, John
 Message to Garcia
 Bollman, Hans Heinz
 Frasquita
 Bolognesi, Gina
 Milizia territoriale
 Bond, Ford
 Thrills with daredevils
 Bond, Ward
 Cattle thief
 Pride of the Marines
 Bondi, Beulah
 Case against Mrs Ames
 Moon's our home
 Boyd, William
 Federal agent
 Three on the trail
 Brady, Alice
 Harvester
 Brandt, Ivan
 Forget me not
 Brantford, Mickey
 Last journey
 Breen, Bobby
 Let's sing again
 Brent, Evelyn
 Forgotten woman
 Song of the trail
 Brent, George
 Case against Mrs Ames
 Golden arrow
 Snowed under
 Brian, Mary
 Once in a million
 Brice, Fanny
 Great Ziegfeld
 Brissac, Virginia
 Murder by an aristocrat
 Broderick, Helen
 Murder on a bridle path
 Bromberg, J. Edward
 Crime of Dr Forbes
 Sins of man
 Brophy, Edward
 Kelly the second
 Brown, Joe E.
 Sons o' guns
 Brown, Johnny Mack
 Desert phantom
 Rogue of the range
 Brown, Tom
 And sudden death
 Gentle Julia
 Browne, Charles A.
 Federal agent

Baker, Benny
 Panic on the air
 Balfour, Betty
 Born for glory

Bruce, Virginia
Great Ziegfeld
Bunchuk, Yasha
Moscow moods
Burke, James
Forgotten faces
Leathernecks have landed
Burnette, Smiley
Comin' 'round the mountain
Singing cowboy
Burru, Billy
Cowboy and the kid
Pride of the Marines
Bushman, Francis X., Jr.
Caryl of the mountains
Bushuyev, C.
We are from Kronstadt
Butterworth, Charles
Half angel
Moon's our home
Byington, Spring
Educating father
Byron, Walter
Bridge of sighs

Cabot, Bruce
Don't gamble with love
Fury
Robin Hood of El Dorado
Three wise guys
Caine, Georgia
White angel
Callahan, Margaret
Last outlaw
Special investigator
Calloway, Cab
Singing kid
Carey, Harry
Last outlaw
Carrillo, Leo
Moonlight murder
Carroll, Madeleine
Case against Mrs Ames
Secret agent
Carroll, Virginia
Wellington Pike goes west
Cavanagh, Paul
Champagne Charlie
Cavanaugh, Hobart
Love begins at twenty
Cawthorn, Joseph
Brides are like that
Hot money
Cellier, Antoinette
Ourselves alone
Chandler, Chick
Three of a kind
Chaney, Lon, Jr.
Singing cowboy
Chase, Alden
Rogue of the range
Chase, Charley
Kelly the second
Neighborhood house
Chevalier, Maurice
L'homme des folies bergère
Chrystall, Belle
Scotland Yard mystery
Churchill, Burton
Three of a kind
Churchill, Marguerite
Dracula's daughter
Murder by an aristocrat
Clarke, Mae
Hearts in bondage
House of a thousand candles
Clyde, Andy
Yellow dust
Clyde, June
Forgotten women
Cobb, Irvin S.
Everybody's old man
Cody, Bill
Outlaws of the range
Cody, Bill, Jr.
Outlaws of the range
Coghlan, Frank, Jr.
Little red schoolhouse
Colbert, Claudette
Under two flags

Collins, Charles
Dancing pirate
Collins, Cora Sue
Harvester
Collins, Monte
Just speeding
Colman, Ronald
Under two flags
Compson, Betty
August week-end
Dagnet
Millionaire kid
Connolly, Walter
King steps out
Cook, Donald
Girl from Mandalay
Showboat
Cooper, Gary
Desire
Mr Deeds goes to town
Corbett, Leonora
Living dangerously
Corradi, Nelly
Alpine love
Cossart, Ernest
Palm Springs
Cotter, Catherine
Outlaws of the range
Sundown Saunders
Crabbe, Larry (Buster)
Desert gold
Cramer, Richard
Speed reporter
Craven, Frank
Harvester
Crocker-King, Charles
White angel
Cromwell, Richard
Poppy
Crosman, Henrietta
Girl of the Ozarks
Moon's our home
Cummings, Robert
Border flight
Desert gold
Forgotten faces
Curzon, George
Scotland Yard mystery
White angel

Dale, Esther
Farmer in the dell
D'Ancora, Monte
Milizia territoriale
Daniell, Henry
Unguarded hour
D'Arcy, Roy
Revolt of the Zombies
Darro, Frankie
Born to fight
Darwell, Jane
First baby
Little Miss Nobody
Davidson, William
Murder by an aristocrat
Davies, Marion
Hearts divided
Davis, Bette
Golden arrow
Hard luck dame
Davis, Owen, Jr.
Bunker Bean
Deane, Shirley
Educating father
First baby
Dee, Frances
Half angel
De Havilland, Olivia
Anthony Adverse
Delamare, Lise
Pension Mimosas
Delaney, Charles
Millionaire kid
De Mille, Katharine
Sky parade
Denis, Mario
Lorenzino de Medici
Denny, Reginald
Preview murder mystery
De Sica, Vittorio
La canzone del sole

Devire, Earl
Sundown Saunders
Dietrich, Marlene
Desire
Dietz, Lilliane
La canzone del sole
Digges, Dudley
Unguarded hour
Dinehart, Alan
Human cargo
Parole
Dix, Richard
Devil's squadron
Special investigator
Yellow dust
Dodd, Claire
Case of the velvet claws
Murder by an aristocrat
Navy born
Donlevy, Brian
Half angel
Human cargo
Thirteen hours by air
Donnelly, Ruth
Fatal lady
Doran, Ann
Little red schoolhouse
Doran, Mary
Bridge of sighs
Doucet, Catherine
Poppy
Douglas, Melvyn
And so they were married
Dowling, Maryan
Desert justice
Downs, Johnny
Everybody's old man
First baby
Doyle, Maxine
Rio Grande romance
Drake, Frances
And sudden death
Florida special
Preview murder mystery
Draper, Paul
Colleen
Drayton, Alfred
Crimson circle
Dudley-Ward, Penelope
I stand condemned
Du Maurier, Gerald
Scotland Yard mystery
Dumbrille, Douglass
Mr Deeds goes to town
Princess comes across
Witness chair
You may be next
Duna, Steffi
Dancing pirate
Dunbar, Dixie
Educating father
First baby
Dunn, James
Don't get personal
Hearts in bondage
Dunne, Irene
Showboat
Duprez, June
Cardinal
Crimson circle
Ebbesen, Dagmar
Skaergaards-flirt
Ebsen, Buddy
Captain January
Eburne, Maude
Doughnuts and society
Eilers, Sally
Don't get personal
Florida special
Elliott, Gordon
Case of the velvet claws
Ellis, Mary
Fatal lady
Ellis, Patricia
Boulder dam
Love begins at twenty
Snowed under
Ellison, Jimmy
Leathernecks have landed
Three on the trail

ACTORS &amp; ACTRESSES—Cont.

Erikson, Leif
 Girl of the Ozarks
 Ernest, George
 Song of the saddle
 Too many parents
 Erwin, Stuart
 Absolute quiet
 Women are trouble
 Evans, Clifford
 Ourselves alone
 Evans, Madge
 Moonlight murder
 Evans, Muriel
 King of the Pecos
 Three on the trail

Fairbanks, Douglas, Jr.

Amateur gentleman

Falconi, Armando

Il re burlone

Farmer, Frances

Border flight

Too many parents

Farrell, Glenda

Law in her hands

Nobody's fool

Snowed under

Faye, Alice

Poor little rich girl

Fazenda, Louise

Colleen

Doughnuts and society

Forgotten women

I married a doctor

Fellows, Edith

And so they were married

Fenton, Leslie

Murder on a bridle path

Ferguson, Al

Roamin' wild

Ferida, Luisa

Il re burlone

Fields, Stanley

O'Malley of the Mounted

Fields, W. C.

Poppy

Finkenzeller, Heli

Royal waltz

Fonda, Henry

Moon's our home

Trail of the lonesome pine

Foran, Dick

Big noise

Golden arrow

Song of the saddle

Treachery rides the range

Ford, Francis

Charlie Chan at the circus

Forst, Willi

Royal waltz

Foster, Norman

Everybody's old man

Fatal lady

Foster, Preston

Love before breakfast

Fowley, Douglas

Navy born

Francis, Kay

White angel

Frawley, William

Desire

Princess comes across

Furness, Betty

Three wise guys

Gardner, Joan

Forget me not

Gargan, William

Milky way

Navy born

Sky parade

Garrick, John

Woman alone

Gaynor, Janet

Small town girl

Gibson, Hoot

Feud of the west

Last outlaw

Lucky terror

Gielgud, John

Secret agent

Gigli, Beniamino

Forget me not

Gillingwater, Claude

Prisoner of Shark Island

Gleason, James

Ex-Mrs Bradford

Murder on a bridle path

Gleason, Russell

Wellington Pike goes west

Gould, William

Wildcat Saunders

Grabley, Ursula

Annette in paradise

Graetz, Paul

Hot money

Grahame, Margot

Counterfeit

Grant, Cary

Big brown eyes

Grant, Frances

Born to fight

Granville, Bonita

Song of the saddle

These three

Gunn, Judy

Last journey

Gwenn, Edmund

Anthony Adverse

Haas, Dolly

Broken blossoms

Hackett, Karl

Desert phantom

Haden, Sara

Crime of Dr Forbes

Little Miss Nobody

Hale, Alan

Message to Garcia

Hale, Sonnie

It's love again

Haley, Jack

Poor little rich girl

Hall, Porter

Too many parents

Hall, Thurston

Roaming lady

Three wise guys

Halliday, John

Desire

Fatal lady

Hamilton, Margaret

Moon's our home

Hanley, Jimmy

Born for glory

Hardie, Russell

Harvester

Harding, Ann

Witness chair

Hardwicke, Sir Cedric

Lady Jane Grey

Peg of old Drury

Hare, J. Robertson

Jack of all trades

Harker, Gordon

Amateur gentleman

Harwood, John

Once in a million

Hawkins, Jack

Peg of old Drury

Hayes, Bernadene

Absolute quiet

Hayward, Richard

Luck of the Irish

Healy, Ted

Speed

Henry, Charlotte

Hearts in bondage

Herbert, Hugh

Colleen

Love begins at twenty

One rainy afternoon

Hersholt, Jean

Country doctor

Sins of man

Hervey, Irene

Absolute quiet

Hilliard, Harriet

Follow the fleet

Hobson, Valerie

August week-end

Hoerbiger, Paul

Royal waltz

Holden, Gloria

Dracula's daughter

Holmes, Phillips

House of a thousand candles

Holt, David

Trouble for two

Homolka, Oscar

Rhodes, the diamond master

Hood, Darla

Neighborhood house

Hopkins, Miriam

These three

Hopper, Hedda

Doughnuts and society

Hopton, Russell

Below the deadline

Horton, Edward Everett

Hearts divided

Nobody's fool

Singing kid

Houston, George

Captain calamity

Let's sing again

Howard, John

Border flight

Howell, Kenneth

Educating father

Hudson, Rochelle

Country beyond

Everybody's old man

Poppy

Hughes, Lloyd

Little red schoolhouse

Hulbert, Jack

Jack of all trades

Hull, Warren

Big noise

Law in her hands

Love begins at twenty

Hume, Benita

Moonlight murder

Hunt, Eleanor

Yellow cargo

Hunt, Marsha

Desert gold

Gentle Julia

Hunter, Henry

Parole

Hunter, Ian

White angel

Huntley, G. P., Jr.

August week-end

Sons o' guns

Husing, Ted

Winged champions

Huston, Walter

Rhodes, the diamond master

Hutchinson, Josephine

I married a doctor

Hyams, Leila

Yellow dust

Hymer, Warren

Desert justice

Ilg, Kaspar

Mystic mountain

Inescort, Frieda

King steps out

Ingram, Rex

Green pastures

Irving, Florence

Women are trouble

Irving, Margaret

Neighborhood house

Ivakin, N.

We are from Kronstadt

Jagger, Dean

Revolt of the Zombies

Jakov, O.

We are from Kronstadt

January, Lois

Border caballero

Lightnin' Bill Carson

Rogue of the range

Jason, Sybil

Singing kid

Jenkins, Allen

Singing kid

Sins of man

- Jewell, Isabel
 Leathernecks have landed
 Jolson, Al
 Singing kid
 Jones, Allan
 Showboat
 Jones, Buck
 Cowboy and the kid
 For the service
 Jones, Marcia Mae
 These three
 Jory, Victor
 Hell ship Morgan
- Karns, Roscoe
 Border flight
 Keane, Edward
 For the service
 Keating, Fred
 Thirteen hours by air
 Keats, Viola
 Woman alone
 Keeler, Ruby
 Colleen
 Keene, Tom
 Desert gold
 Keith, Ian
 Don't gamble with love
 Kelly, Patsy
 Kelly the second
 Private number
 Kelly, Paul
 Country beyond
 Women are trouble
 Kelly, Walter
 Laughing Irish eyes
 Kelton, Pert
 Kelly the second
 Kendall, Cy
 King of the Pecos
 Kennedy, Tom
 Just speeding
 Kent, Robert
 Country beyond
 Crime of Dr Forbes
 Khorosh, S.
 Children of the revolution
 Kibbee, Guy
 Big noise
 Captain January
 I married a doctor
 Little Lord Fauntleroy
 Kiepora, Jan
 Give us this night
 King, Joseph
 Sons o' guns
 Knapp, Evalyn
 Laughing Irish eyes
 Three of a kind
 Knight, Fuzzy
 Song of the trail
 Kofoed, Jack
 Thrills with daredevils
 Koroleva, Guli
 Children of the revolution
 Kortner, Fritz
 Abdul the damned
 Kruger, Otto
 Dracula's daughter
 Living dangerously
- Landi, Elissa
 Amateur gentleman
 Lang, June
 Country doctor
 Road to glory
 Lang, Matheson
 Cardinal
 Langford, Frances
 Palm Springs
 La Rocque, Rod
 Dragnet
 Preview murder mystery
 Till we meet again
 LaRue, Jack
 Born to fight
 Bridge of sighs
 Wellington Pike goes west
 Yellow cargo
- Latimer, Louise
 Bunker Bean
 Two in revolt
 Laurent, Eric
 Skaergaards-flirt
 Lauri-Volpi, Giacomo
 La canzone del sole
 Lawford, Betty
 Love before breakfast
 Lawrence, Rosina
 Neighborhood house
 Lederer, Francis
 One rainy afternoon
 Lee, Billie
 And sudden death
 Lee, Dorothy
 Silly Billies
 Lees, Antoinette
 Song of the trail
 Leiber, Fritz
 Hearts in bondage
 Lewis, Joe
 Private number
 Li, Shoh-shoh
 Song of China
 Lim, Cho-cho
 Song of China
 Linaker, Kay
 Girl from Mandalay
 Linden, Eric
 Robin Hood of El Dorado
 Lindsay, Margaret
 Law in her hands
 Lister, Bruce
 Ourselves alone
 Lister, Francis
 Living dangerously
 Livanof, Boris
 Dubrovsky
 Lloyd, Alma
 Big noise
 Song of the saddle
 Lloyd, Doris
 Brilliant marriage
 Lloyd, Harold
 Milky way
 Lockhart, Gene
 Brides are like that
 Times Square playboy
 Lockhart, Kathleen
 Brides are like that
 Times Square playboy
 Loder, John
 Ourselves alone
 Lodge, John
 Ourselves alone
 Lombard, Carole
 Love before breakfast
 Princess comes across
 Loring, Ann
 Robin Hood of El Dorado
 Lorre, Peter
 Secret agent
 Louise, Anita
 Anthony Adverse
 Brides are like that
 Loy, Myrna
 Great Ziegfeld
 Petticoat fever
 Luke, Keye
 Charlie Chan in Shanghai
 Lund, Lucille
 Rio Grande romance
 Lupino, Ida
 One rainy afternoon
 Lyon, Ben
 Dancing feet
- McCoy, Tim
 Border caballero
 Lightnin' Bill Carson
 McCrea, Joel
 These three
 MacDonald, J. Farrell
 Florida special
 McFarland, Spanky
 Trail of the lonesome pine
 McGinnis, Niall
 Luck of the Irish
 Ourselves alone
 McGowan, J. P.
 Secret patrol
- McHugh, Frank
 Bullets or ballots
 Moonlight murder
 Snowed under
 Mack, Helen
 Milky way
 MacKay, Barry
 Born for glory
 McLaglen, Victor
 Under two flags
 MacLane, Barton
 Bullets or ballots
 Jailbreak
 Times Square playboy
 MacMurray, Fred
 Princess comes across
 Thirteen hours by air
 Trail of the lonesome pine
 McWade, Robert
 Bunker Bean
 Makarova, T.
 Seven brave men
 Malo, Gina
 Jack of all trades
 Manners, David
 Hearts in bondage
 Mannors, Sheila
 Desert phantom
 March, Fredric
 Anthony Adverse
 Road to glory
 Margetson, Arthur
 Broken blossoms
 Marion, Beth
 For the service
 Marlowe, John
 Brilliant marriage
 Marmont, Percy
 Secret agent
 Marsh, Joan
 Brilliant marriage
 Dancing feet
 Marsh, Marian
 Counterfeit
 Marshall, Herbert
 Forgotten faces
 Till we meet again
 Marson, Aileen
 Living dangerously
 Massey, Raymond
 Things to come
 Matthews, Jessie
 It's love again
 Matthews, Lester
 Too many parents
 Mauch, Billy
 Anthony Adverse
 Maynard, Ken
 Cattle thief
 Maynard, Kermit
 Song of the trail
 Mehaffey, Blanche
 Wildcat Saunders
 Menjou, Adolphe
 Milky way
 Merivale, Philip
 Give us this night
 Merkel, Una
 Speed
 Metcalfe, Bradley
 Millionaire kid
 Michael, Gertrude
 Forgotten faces
 Till we meet again
 Middleton, Charles
 Song of the saddle
 Miljan, John
 Criminal within
 Mills, John
 Born for glory
 Lady Jane Grey
 Milton, Ernest
 It's love again
 Mitchell, Geneva
 Cattle thief
 Crime patrol
 Mitchell, Grant
 Parole
 Mitchell, Julien
 Last journey
 Mix, Art
 Lucky terror
 Moissi, Alessandro
 Lorenzino de Medici

ACTORS & ACTRESSES—Cont.

Monakhof, N.
Dubrovsky
Montgomery, Robert
Petticoat fever
Trouble for two
Moore, Carlyle, Jr.
Two against the world
Moore, Dickie
Little red schoolhouse
Moore, Grace
King steps out
Moran, Jackie
And so they were married
Moreno, Rosita
House of a thousand candles
Morgan, Frank
Dancing pirate
Great Ziegfeld
Trouble for two
Morgan, Helen
Frankie and Johnny
Showboat
Morgan, Ralph
Human cargo
Little Miss Nobody
Morley, Karen
Devil's squadron
Morris, Chester
Counterfeit
Frankie and Johnnie
Moonlight murder
Mowbray, Alan
Give us this night

Nagel, Conrad
Girl from Mandalay
Yellow cargo
Natzler, Grete
Scotland Yard mystery
Neagle, Anna
Peg of old Drury
Nissen, Greta
Red wagon
Niven, David
Palm Springs
Nixon, Marian
Captain calamity
Dagnet
Nolan, Lloyd
Counterfeit
Devil's squadron
You may be next
Noland, Robert
Revolt of the Zombies
Novoseltzev, I.
Seven brave men
Novotna, Jarmila
Frasquita
Nugent, Eddie
Dancing feet
Doughnuts and society
Rio Grande romance

Oakie, Jack
Colleen
Florida special
Oberon, Merle
These three
O'Brien, George
O'Malley of the Mounted
O'Brien, Pat
I married a doctor
O'Connell, Peggy
Too much beef
Ohlin, Anna
Raggen, det aer jag det
Oland, Warner
Charlie Chan at the circus
Olivier, Laurence
I stand condemned
Olsen, Moroni
Farmer in the dell
Two in revolt
Yellow dust
Osborne, Vivienne
Let's sing again
Overman, Lynne
Poppy
Owen, Reginald
Petticoat fever

Page, Bradley
Three of a kind
Paley, Natalie
L'homme des folies bergère
Pallette, Eugene
Golden arrow
Paolieri, Germana
Lorenzino de Medici
Parker, Cecilia
Below the deadline
Mine with the iron door
Parker, Jean
Farmer in the dell
Parlo, Dita
Mystic mountain
Patrick, Gail
Early to bed
Preview murder mystery
Pendleton, Nat
Great Ziegfeld
Perrin, Jack
Desert justice
Wildcat Saunders
Perry, Joan
Mysterious avenger
Perry, Linda
Two against the world
Peterson, Dorothy
Country doctor
Pettingell, Frank
Amateur gentleman
Pichel, Irving
Don't gamble with love
Dracula's daughter
House of a thousand candles
Pidgeon, Walter
Big brown eyes
Fatal lady
Pilbeam, Nova
Lady Jane Grey
Pilotto, Camillo
Alpine love
Pisu, Mario
Il re burlone
Pitts, Zasu
Thirteen hours by air
Pola, Isa
Alpine love
Polk, Oscar
Green pastures
Portman, Eric
Cardinal
Post, Guy Bates
Fatal lady
Till we meet again
Powell, Dick
Colleen
Hearts divided
Powell, William
Ex-Mrs Bradford
Great Ziegfeld
Pratt, Purnell
Dancing feet
Preston, Ann
Parole
Prouty, Jed
Educating father
Purcell, Richard
Jailbreak
Quensel, Isa
Raggen, det aer jag det

Rainer, Luise
Great Ziegfeld
Rains, Claude
Anthony Adverse
Hearts divided
Ralph, Jessie
Bunker Bean
Yellow dust
Ralston, Esther
Girl from Mandalay
Rathbone, Basil
Private number
Ratoff, Gregory
Road to glory
Ray, Renee
Passing of the third floor
back

Reed, Florence
Frankie and Johnnie
Regan, Phil
Laughing Irish eyes
Revier, Dorothy
Cowboy and the kid
Reynolds, Craig
Jailbreak
Rhodes, Erik
One rainy afternoon
Rice, Florence
Panic on the air
Pride of the Marines
Women are trouble
Rich, Irene
Forgotten women
Richardson, Ralph
Things to come
Richmond, Kane
Born to fight
Risdon, Elizabeth
King steps out
Roberts, Beverly
Hot money
Singing kid
Sons o' guns
Two against the world
Robeson, Paul
Showboat
Robinson, Edward G.
Bullets or ballots
Rogers, Buddy
Once in a million
Rogers, Ginger
Follow the fleet
Romantsev, Igor
Children of the revolution
Romero, Cesar
Love before breakfast
Nobody's fool
Rosay, Francoise
Pension Mimosas
Rosmino, Gian Paolo
Don Bosco
Rub, Christian
Murder on a bridle path
Rudens, Dyk
Mystic mountain
Ruehmann, Heinz
Frasquita
Ruggles, Charlie
Early to bed
Hearts divided
Russell, Elizabeth
Girl of the Ozarks
Russell, Rosalind
Trouble for two
Under two flags
Rutherford, Ann
Comin' 'round the mountain
Doughnuts and society
Harvester

Samarin-Elsky, E.
Dubrovsky
Sawyer, Joseph
Special investigator
Scott, Margaretta
Things to come
Scott, Randolph
And sudden death
Follow the fleet
Searle, Jackie
Gentle Julia
Selman, D.
Secret patrol
Shang, Kwah-wu
Song of China
Shaw, Winifred
Case of the velvet claws
Sons o' guns
Shoemaker, Ann
Sins of man
Shotter, Winifred
Petticoat fever
Sidney, Sylvia
Fury
Trail of the lonesome pine
Shipworth, Alison
Hard luck dame
Princess comes across

Smith, C. Aubrey
 Little Lord Fauntleroy
 Soehner, Hans
 Annette in paradise
 Sondergaard, Gale
 Anthony Adverse
 Sothorn, Ann
 Don't gamble with love
 Hell ship Morgan
 You may be next
 Stander, Lionel
 Mr Deeds goes to town
 Standing, Sir Guy
 Palm Springs
 Stanwyck, Barbara
 Message to Garcia
 Starrett, Charles
 Mysterious avenger
 Secret patrol
 Steele, Bob
 Sundown Saunders
 Sten, Anna
 Woman alone
 Stevens, Onslow
 Bridge of sighs
 Three on the trail
 Yellow dust
 Stewart, Athole
 Jack of all trades
 Stewart, James
 Speed
 Stiffi, Maria Vincenza
 Don Bosco
 Stone, Dorothy
 Revolt of the Zombies
 Stone, Fred
 Farmer in the dell
 Trail of the lonesome pine
 Stone, Lewis
 Small town girl
 Unguarded hour
 Stone, Paula
 Treachery rides the range
 Stuart, Gloria
 Crime of Dr Forbes
 Poor little rich girl
 Prisoner of Shark Island
 Stuart, John
 Abdul the damned
 Sullavan, Margaret
 Moon's our home
 Summerville, George (Slim)
 Captain January
 Country doctor
 Swarthout, Gladys
 Give us this night
 Swickart, Joseph
 Caryl of the mountains
 Sydney, Basil
 Rhodes, the diamond master

Talbot, Lyle
 Boulder dam
 Law in her hands
 Murder by an aristocrat
 Talmadge, Richard
 Speed reporter
 Tashman, Lilyan
 Frankie and Johnnie
 Taylor, Forrest
 Too much beef
 Taylor, Kent
 Florida special
 Sky parade
 Taylor, Robert
 Private number
 Small town girl
 Tearle, Godfrey
 Last journey
 Teasdale, Verree
 Milky way
 Temple, Shirley
 Captain January
 Poor little rich girl
 Thorndike, Sybil
 Lady Jane Grey
 Tobin, Genevieve
 Snowed under
 Tomlin, Pinky
 Don't get personal

Tone, Franchot
 King steps out
 Unguarded hour
 Torres, Raquel
 Red wagon
 Tracy, Lee
 Sutter's gold
 Tracy, Spencer
 Fury
 Travis, June
 Jailbreak
 Times Square playboy
 Treacher, Arthur
 Case against Mrs Ames
 Hard luck dame
 Hearts divided
 Tree, Dorothy
 Bridge of sighs
 Trevor, Claire
 Human cargo
 Tyler, Tom
 Last outlaw
 Roamin' wild
 Vaughan, Dorothy
 Love begins at twenty
 Veidt, Conrad
 King of the damned
 Passing of the third floor
 back
 Viarisio, Enrico
 Milizia territoriale
 Vinson, Helen
 King of the damned
 Viva, Sim
 L'homme des folies bergère
 Von Eltz, Theodore
 Below the deadline

Wahlberg, Gideon
 Skaergaards-flirt
 Wahlbom, Nils
 Raggen, det aer jag det
 Wakefield, Hugh
 Crimson circle
 Forget me not
 Walburn, Raymond
 Absolute quiet
 Three wise guys
 Walker, Ray
 Brilliant marriage
 Crime patrol
 Walsh, Kay
 Luck of the Irish
 Walters, Luana
 Speed reporter
 Walthall, Henry B.
 Hearts in bondage
 Last outlaw
 Mine with the iron door
 Ware, Irene
 Criminal within
 Federal agent
 O'Malley of the Mounted
 Washburn, Bryant
 Millionaire kid
 Wayne, John
 King of the Pecos
 Weidler, Virginia
 Girl of the Ozarks
 Trouble for two
 Weldon, Heyburn
 Speed
 Westley, Helen
 Half angel
 Whalen, Michael
 Country doctor
 Poor little rich girl
 Wheeler, Bert
 Silly Billies
 Wilcoxon, Henry
 Woman alone
 Wilde, Lois
 Caryl of the mountains
 Singing cowboy
 William, Warren
 Case of the velvet claws
 Hard luck dame
 Times Square playboy

Williams, Emllyn
 Broken blossoms
 Williams, Guinn (Big Boy)
 Kelly the second
 Williams, Hugh
 Last journey
 Williams, Roger
 Cattle thief
 Wilson, Frank
 Green pastures
 Wingard, Karl G.
 Raggen, det aer jag det
 Winninger, Charles
 Showboat
 Withers, Grant
 Let's sing again
 Withers, Jane
 Gentle Julia
 Little Miss Nobody
 Wood, Helen
 Champagne Charlie
 Woods, Donald
 White angel
 Woods, Harry
 Silly Billies
 Woolsey, Robert
 Silly Billies
 Wray, Fay
 Roaming lady
 Wuest, Ida
 Annette in paradise
 Wyndham, Carol
 Roamin' wild

Yaconelli, Frank
 Lucky terror
 Young, Loretta
 Private number
 Unguarded hour
 Young, Robert
 It's love again
 Secret agent
 Three wise guys
 Young, Roland
 One rainy afternoon
 Unguarded hour

Zaichikov, V.
 We are from Kronstadt

BOOKS (Adapted)

Allen, A.
 Anthony Adverse
 Baldwin, F.
 Moon's our home
 Spinster dinner (Love before breakfast)
 Burnett, F. H.
 Little Lord Fauntleroy
 Burns, W. N.
 Robin Hood of El Dorado
 Campbell, R.
 Tiger valley (Girl from Mandalay)
 Cendrars, B.
 Sutter's gold
 Connolly, M.
 Lady Smith (Palm Springs)
 Curwood, J. O.
 Country beyond
 Song of the trail
 DeBeneditti, A.
 Milizia territoriale
 Eberhart, M. G.
 Murder by an aristocrat
 Eden, R., pseud.
 Dancing feet
 Farnol, J.
 Amateur gentleman
 Ferber, E.
 Showboat
 Finn, J.
 Murder in the big house (Jailbreak)
 Forester, C. S.
 Born for glory

BOOKS (Adapted)—Continued

Fox, J., Jr.
Trail of the lonesome pine
Furnas, J. C.
And sudden death
Gardner, E. S.
Case of the velvet claws
Special investigator
Grey, Z.
Desert gold
Hubbard, E.
Message to Garcia
Jesse, F. T.
Lightning strikes twice
(Half angel)
Kelland, C. B.
Opera hat (Mr Deeds goes to town)
Kyne, P. B.
Born to fight
Lewis, S.
Main street (I married a doctor)
Lippincott, N.
Murder at Glen Athol
(Criminal within)
Millin, S. G.
The life of Rhodes (Rhodes, the diamond master)
Monroe, N. M.
Dr Samuel Mudd (Prisoner of Shark Island)
Mulford, C. E.
Bar 20 Three (Three on the trail)
Nicholson, M.
House of a thousand candles
Ouida, pseud.
Under two flags
Palmer, S.
Murder on a bridle path
Porter, G. S.
Harvester
Pushkin, A.
Dubrovsky
Richards, L. E.
Captain January
Roche, A. S.
Case against Mrs Ames
Roger, L. L.
The duchess (Princess comes across)
Roth, J.
Job (Sins of man)
Rowan, A. S.
Message to Garcia
Saunders, L., pseud.
Snowed under
Shepard, K.
I will be faithful (Human cargo)
Stong, P.
Farmer in the dell
Strachey, L.
Eminent Victorians (White angel)
Tarkington, B.
Gentle Julia
Templin, E. M.
Boulder dam
Wallace, E.
Crimson circle
Weiman, R.
Witness chair
Wells, H. G.
Shape of things to come
(Things to come)
Widegren, Gunnor
Raggen, det aer jag det
Williams, B. A.
Small town girl
Wilson, H. L.
His majesty, Bunker Bean
(Bunker Bean)
Wright, H. B.
Mine with the iron door

DIRECTORS

Alessandrini, G.
Don Bosco
Alexandre, R.
Cloistered
Asquith, A.
I stand condemned

Ayres, L.
Hearts in bondage
Sons o' guns
Barton, C.
And sudden death
Bauman, S.
Raggen, det aer jag det
Beaudine, W.
Forgotten women
Bennett, S. G.
Cattle thief
Scotland Yard mystery
Besozzi, M.
La canzone del sole
Blystone, J.
Gentle Julia
Little Miss Nobody
Bonnard, M.
Milizia territoriale
Bornebusch, A.
Skaergaards-flirt
Borzage, F.
Desire
Hearts divided
Bradbury, R. N.
Sundown Saunders
Brahm, H.
Broken blossoms
Brenon, H.
Living dangerously
Bretherton, H.
Girl from Mandalay
Leathernecks have landed
Three on the trail
Brignoni, G.
Lorenzino de Medici
Brower, O.
Sins of man
Butler, D.
Captain January
Cabanne, C.
Last outlaw
Capra, F.
Mr Deeds goes to town
Clemens, W.
Case of the velvet claws
Law in her hands
Collins, A. G.
Nobody's fool
Collins, L. D.
Doughnuts and society
Connelly, M.
Green pastures
Corrigan, L.
Dancing pirate
Cromwell, J.
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Cruze, J.
Sutter's gold
Cummings, E.
Crime patrol
Cummings, I.
Poor little rich girl
Del Ruth, R.
L'homme des folies bergère
Private number
Denham, R.
Crimson circle
Desmond-Hurst, B.
Ourselves alone
Dieterle, W.
Hard luck dame
White angel
Disney, W.
Three little wolves
Dupont, E. A.
Forgotten faces
Dwan, A.
Human cargo
Dzigan, E.
We are from Kronstadt
Enright, R.
Snowed under
Erskine, C.
Frankie and Johnnie
Etter, M.
Alpine love
Feyder, J.
Pension Mimosas
Fitzmaurice, G.
Petticoat fever
Flood, J.
Everybody's old man

Florey, R.
Preview murder mystery
Till we meet again
Ford, J.
Prisoner of Shark Island
Forde, E.
Country beyond
Forde, W.
Born for glory
King of the damned
Fox, W.
Yellow dust
Fraser, H.
Feud of the west
Wildcat Saunders
Freeland, T.
Amateur gentleman
Frenke, E.
Woman alone
Friedlander, L.
Parole
Gerasimov, S.
Seven brave men
Green, A. E.
Colleen
Golden arrow
Grinde, N.
Jailbreak
Grune, K.
Abdul the damned
Guazoni, E.
Il re burlone
Guilf, F.
Silly Billies
Hale, A.
Neighborhood house
Hall, A.
Give us this night
Halperin, V.
Revolt of the Zombies
Hamilton, W.
Bunker Bean
Murder on a bridle path
Hathaway, H.
Trail of the lonesome pine
Hawks, H.
Road to glory
Herman, A.
Outlaws of the range
Hill, B.
Rio Grande romance
Hill, R.
Too much beef
Hill, S.
Cardinal
Hillyer, L.
Dracula's daughter
Hitchcock, A.
Secret agent
Hogan, J.
Desert gold
Holmes, B.
Farmer in the dell
Hopton, R.
Song of the trail
Howard, D.
Mine with the iron door
O'Malley of the Mounted
Howard, W. K.
Princess comes across
Hulbert, J.
Jack of all trades
Hutchinson, C.
Born to fight
Ivanovsky, A. V.
Dubrovsky
James, A.
Lucky terror
Jones, B.
For the service
Kane, J.
King of the Pecos
Keighley, W.
Bullets or ballots
Green pastures
Singing kid
Kenton, E. C.
Counterfeit
Devil's squadron
Killy, E.
Bunker Bean
Murder on a bridle path
King, H.
Country doctor

King, L.
Song of the saddle
Special investigator
Kirsanoff, D.
Mystic mountain
Korda, Z.
Forget me not
Lachman, H.
Charlie Chan at the circus
Lamac, C.
Frasquita
Lamont, C.
August week-end
Below the deadline
Little red schoolhouse
Lanfield, S.
Half angel
Lang, A.
Great Ziegfeld
Lang, F.
Fury
Lang, W.
Love before breakfast
Law, H.
Neighborhood house
Lederman, D. R.
Hell ship Morgan
Panic on the air
Pride of the Marines
Lee, R. V.
One rainy afternoon
Leisen, M.
Thirteen hours by air
Leonard, R. Z.
Great Ziegfeld
LeRoy, M.
Anthony Adverse
Lloyd, F.
Under two flags
Lo, M.
Song of China
Lovering, O.
Border flight
Sky parade
Lubin, A.
House of a thousand candles
Luby, S. R.
Desert phantom
Rogue of the range
Ludwig, E.
Fatal lady
McCann, W.
Hot money
McCarey, L.
Milky way
McDonald, F.
Big noise
Boulder dam
Love begins at twenty
Murder by an aristocrat
Treachery rides the range
McGann, W.
Brides are like that
Times Square playboy
Two against the world
McGowan, R.
Too many parents
McLeod, N.
Early to bed
Maish, H.
Royal waltz
Marin, E. L.
Moonlight murder
Speed
Marshall, G.
Crime of Dr Forbes
Message to Garcia
Maslyukof, A.
Children of the revolution
Mayo, A.
I married a doctor
Meins, G.
Kelly the second
Menzies, W. C.
Things to come
Moore, V.
Dragnet
Murphy, D.
Don't gamble with love
Murphy, R.
Florida special

Neumann, K.
Let's sing again
Newfield, S.
Border caballero
Federal agent
Lightnin' Bill Carson
Nicholls, G., Jr.
Witness chair
Nigh, W.
Don't get personal
Nugent, E.
And so they were married
Obal, M.
Annette in paradise
O'Neill, M. G.
Wellington Pike goes west
Pedelty, D.
Luck of the Irish
Ratoff, G.
Sins of man
Ray, B. B.
Caryl of the mountains
Millionaire kid
Roamin' wild
Speed reporter
Reinhardt, J.
Captain calamity
Roberts, S.
Ex-Mrs Bradford
Rogell, A. S.
Roaming lady
You may be next
Rosen, P.
Bridge of sighs
Brilliant marriage
Three of a kind
Ruben, J. W.
Trouble for two
Sandrich, M.
Follow the fleet
Santley, J.
Dancing feet
Harvester
Laughing Irish eyes
Saville, V.
It's love again
Scotto, A.
Palm Springs
Seiler, L.
First baby
Seiter, W. A.
Case against Mrs Ames
Moon's our home
Seitz, G. B.
Absolute quiet
Three wise guys
Selman, D.
Mysterious avenger
Secret patrol
Shea, W.
Girl of the Ozarks
Stein, P. L.
Red wagon
Stevenson, R.
Jack of all trades
Lady Jane Grey
Strayer, F.
Criminal within
Summers, W.
Ourselves alone
Sutherland, A. E.
Poppy
Taggart, E.
Women are trouble
Taylor, R.
Cowboy and the kid
Tinling, J.
Champagne Charlie
Educating father
Tryon, G.
Two in revolt
Vierteil, E.
Passing of the third floor
back
Rhodes, the diamond master
Von Sternberg, J.
King steps out
Vorhaus, B.
Last journey
Walsh, R.
Big brown eyes
Watt, N.
Navy born

Wellman, W. A.
Robin Hood of El Dorado
Small town girl
Whale, J.
Showboat
Wilbur, C.
Yellow cargo
Wilcox, H.
Peg of old Drury
Williams, L.
Desert justice
Wood, S.
Unguarded hour
Woods, A.
Once in a million
Wright, M.
Comin' 'round the mountain
Singing cowboy
Wyler, W.
These three

PLAYS (Adapted)

Arlen, M.
Dream princess (Golden arrow)
Burnett, F. H.
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Chancellor, J.
King of the damned
Cohan, G. M.
Home towners (Times Square playboy)
Connelly, M.
Green pastures
Conners, B.
Applesauce (Brides are like that)
Davis, A.
Reunion (Till we meet again)
Decsey, E., and Hohn, G.
Cissy (King steps out)
Dixon, C.
Secret agent
Dodd, L. W.
His majesty, Bunker Bean (Bunker Bean)
Donnelly, D.
Poppy
Flavin, M.
Broken dishes (Love begins at twenty)
Fodor, L.
Unguarded hour
Gates, E.
Poor little rich girl
Geoffrey, W.
Scotland Yard mystery
Hammerstein, O.
Showboat
Hellman, L.
Children's hour (These three)
Jerome, J. K.
Passing of the third floor back
Kinkead, C.
Common clay (Private number)
Kirkland, J.
Frankie and Johnnie
Lehar, F.
Frasquita
Mack, W.
Dragnet
Marischka, H., and E.
Cissy (King steps out) [op-eretta]
Osborne, H.
Shore leave (Follow the fleet)
Parker, L.
Cardinal
Pujal, P., and R.
Monsieur sans gene (One rainy afternoon)
Reed, M.
Petticoat fever
Root, L., and Clork, H.
Milky way
Simpson, R., and Gregory, F.
Living dangerously

PLAYS (Adapted)—Continued

Sturrock, D., and Scott, N.
 The trouble (Ourselves alone)
 Szekeley, H., and Stemmler,
 R. A.
 Pearl necklace (Desire)
 Thompson, F., and Donahue,
 J.
 Tin hats (Sons o' guns)
 Tothoroh, D., and O'Neil, G.
 Mother lode (Yellow dust)
 Vulpius, P.
 Youth at the helm (Jack of all trades)
 Weitzenkorn, L.
 Five star final (Two against the world)
 Young, R. J.
 Glorious Betsy (Hearts divided)

SHORT STORIES (Adapted)

Addington, S.
 Bless their hearts (And so they were married)
 Bourbon, D.
 Roaming lady
 Bradford, R.
 Ol' man Adam an' his chil-
 lun (Green pastures)
 Brennan, F. H.
 Matron's report (Little Miss Nobody)
 Burke, T.
 Chink and the child (Broken blossoms)
 Grant, J. E.
 Hahsit, Babe, and Big brown eyes (Big brown eyes)

Kelland, C. B.
 Recreation car (Florida
 special)
 Maugham, W. S.
 Ashenden; or the British agent (Secret agent)
 Runyon, D.
 Three wise guys
 Scott, E.
 Border flight
 Squier-Lindsey, E.
 Glorious buccaneer (Dancing pirate)
 Stevenson, R. L.
 Suicide club (Trouble for two)
 Tinsley, T. A.
 Five spot (Panic on the air)
 Worts, G. F.
 Absolute quiet

Directory of Producers

Academy. Academy Pictures, Inc, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Ajax. Ajax Pictures Corp, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Ambassador. Ambassador Pictures, Inc, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Amkino. Amkino Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Associated British. Associated British Corp, Ltd, Film House, Wardour St, London, W. 1
 Atlantic. Atlantic Pictures Corp, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.

Beacon. Beacon Films, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Beaumont. Beaumont Pictures, Inc, 846 E 6th St, Los Angeles
 British & Dominions. British & Dominions Film Corp, Ltd, Empire House, 117 Regent St, London, W. 1
 British International. British International Pictures, Ltd, Boreham Wood, Elstree, Hertfordshire, Eng.
 Burroughs-Tarzan. Burroughs-Tarzan Enterprises, Inc, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.

Capitani. Capitani-Films, Via XX, Settembre 3, Rome
 Capitol. Capitol Film Productions, Ltd, 28 Brook St, London W. 1
 Celebrity. Celebrity Productions, Inc, 723 7th Av, N.Y.
 Chesterfield. Chesterfield Motion Pictures Corp, 1540 Broadway, N.Y.
 Columbia. Columbia Pictures Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Commodore. Commodore Pictures Corp, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Conn. Conn Pictures Corp, Talisman Studios, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Criterion. Criterion Film Productions, Ltd, 28 Brook St, London, W. 1

Darmour. Darmour Studios, 5823 Santa Monica Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Deka. Deka-Film, Berlin SW. 68, Hedemannstrasse 13
 Diversion. Diversion Pictures, Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 DuWorld. DuWorld Pictures, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.

Educational. Educational Pictures, Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Empire. Empire Film Distributors, Inc, 723 7th Av, N.Y.

First division. First Division Pictures, Inc, RKO Bldg, Radio City, N.Y.
 First national. See Warner
 Fox. See 20th century-Fox
 France-film. France-Film, 66 5th Ave, N.Y.
 Futter. Wafilms, Inc, and The Futter Corp, 1426 N Beachwood Drive, Hollywood, Calif; Paramount Bldg, N.Y.

Gainsborough. Gainsborough Studios, Poole St, Islington, N. 1, London
 Gaumont British. Gaumont British Picture Corp of America, 1600 Broadway, N.Y. Gaumont British Picture Corp, Ltd, 142-150 Wardour St, London, W. 1
 General foreign sales. General Foreign Sales Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Goldwyn-United artists. See United artists

Hoffberg. J. H. Hoffberg, Co, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.

Imperial. Imperial Distributing Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Invincible. See Chesterfield

Lenauer. Jean Lenauer, 250 W 57th St, N.Y.
 Lenfilm. Lenfilm, Leningrad, U.S.S.R.
 Libkow. Libkow Film, Marszalkowska 94, Warsaw
 London films. London Film Productions, Ltd, 22 Grosvenor St, London, W. 1

Mascot. Mascot Pictures Corp, 1776 Broadway, N.Y.
 MGM. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corp, 1540 Broadway, N.Y.
 Moscow film studios. See Amkino

Olympic. Olympic Motion Picture Corp, 325 W 44th St, N.Y.

Paramount. Paramount Pictures Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Pathé. Pathé Cinema, 6 Rue Francoeur, Paris
 Pickford-Lasky. Pickford-Lasky, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Principal. Principal Distributing Corp, RKO Bldg, Radio City, N.Y.

Regal. Regal Productions, Inc, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif
 Reliable. Reliable Pictures Corp, 6048 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Reliance. Reliance Pictures, Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Republic. Republic Pictures Corp, RKO Bldg, Rockefeller Center, N.Y.
 RKO. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
 Roach. Hal Roach Studios, Inc, 8822 Washington Blvd, Culver City, Calif.

Sherman. Harry Productions, Inc, 650 N Bronson, Hollywood, Calif
 Spectrum. Spectrum Pictures Corp, 739 7th Av, N.Y.
 Studios Photosonor. Studios Photosonor, 17 bis Quai de Seine, Courbevoie, Paris
 Supreme. Supreme Pictures, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Swiss-Praesens Films. Praesens Film A. G., Zurich, Switzerland

20th century-Fox. 20th Century-Fox Film Corp, 44 W 56th St, N.Y.
 Twickenham. Twickenham Film Studios, Ltd, Alliance Studios, St Margaret's, Middlesex, England

UFA. UFA Films, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 United artists. United Artists Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Universal. Universal Pictures, Inc, 1250 6th Av, N.Y.

Van Beuren. Van Beuren Corp, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
 Victory. Victory Pictures Corp, Foy Studios, Culver City, Calif.
 Vitaphone. Vitaphone Corp, 1277 E 14th St, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Wanger. Walter Wanger Productions, Inc, 1040 N Las Palmas Av, Hollywood, Calif.
 Warner. Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc, 321 W 44th St, N.Y.
 Wilcox. Herbert Wilcox Productions, Ltd, Imperial Studios, Boreham Wood, Elstree, Hertfordshire

How to Use the Motion Picture Review Digest

Sample Entry

NIGHT AT THE OPERA. N 15 '35 96min MGM

Players: Groucho Marx. Chico Marx. Harpo Marx. Kitty Carlisle

Director: Sam Wood

"A musical slapstick farce in which the Marx Bros succeed in placing their musical proteges in a Metropolitan Opera performance." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Mad clowning, clever dancing, pleasing vocal and instrumental music are entertaining features of this picture which will please the Marx Bros' fans. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 30 '35

"Very good for type. Family."

+ Jt Estimates N 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A boisterous, rowdy, and thoroughly delightful piece. A Night at the Opera hits a swift pace from the opening and never slackens under the barrage of puns, songs, dancing, and insane antics that come tumbling on top of each other. Following the same general lines of their earlier hits, the Marx Brothers' new film is imbued with an undeniable freshness and enthusiasm that sweeps crazily, but none the less triumphantly, through the whole affair." Beverly Hills

+ + Liberty p46 N 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"[This] probably will go down in history as the best the brothers have contributed to the screen."

+ + Film Curb p14 N 1 '35

"Family farce."

N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

Starting at the beginning, the title of this picture is A Night at the Opera. It was released on November 15, 1935. It is 96 minutes in length. The producing company is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The list of principal players and the director will require no explanation.

Next comes a brief note describing the picture, its nature, and plot. Sometimes these notes are written by our staff. In other cases they are quoted from a published source. In such cases the source is given.

Following the descriptive note, the excerpts from reviews begin. Following each review the source is given, with date of issue and number of the page on which the review appears.

It will be noticed that plus and minus signs sometimes precede the sources. These indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the review as a whole (not just of the quoted excerpt). The meaning of the various combinations of these signs is as follows:

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

The signs are omitted when a review merely reports on a film without expressing a definite critical opinion.

In interpreting these signs, it will be well to remember that their precise significance will vary somewhat according to the source. In general there are three types of sources represented in the MOTION PICTURE REVIEW DIGEST: (1) audience suitability ratings by special reviewing organizations (women's clubs, religious groups, and the like); (2) general newspapers and magazines; and (3) trade papers. The purpose of the audience suitability ratings by the special reviewing organizations is chiefly to pass on questions of morality and propriety and to report on suitability for children of various ages. The purpose of the reviews in general magazines and newspapers is to inform the adult patron of artistic and entertainment qualities. The purpose of the trade paper reviews is to inform the exhibitor of probable commercial value.

This is a cumulated issue. It includes all reviews published since No. 28.
It supersedes Nos. 29-40. DISCARD Nos. 29-40.

MOTION PICTURE REVIEW DIGEST

Vol. 1

September 28, 1936

No. 41

(Superseding Nos. 29-40.)

Published by THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY, 950-972 University Avenue, New York City

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(arranged alphabetically)

	Page		Page
Aces and Eights .....	1	Charlie Chan at the Race
All American Chump .....	1	Track .....	15
And Sudden Death .....	1	China Clipper .....	16
Anna .....	2	Counterfeit .....	17
Anthony Adverse .....	3	Craig's Wife .....	18
Arizona Raiders .....	5	Crash Donovan .....	18
August Week-End .....	5	Crime of Dr. Forbes .....	19
Avenging Waters .....	6	Crooked Love .....	20
Back to Nature .....	6	Crouching Beast .....	20
Beloved Vagabond .....	7	Dancing Pirate .....	21
Below the Deadline .....	7	Dark Hour .....	21
Bengal Tiger .....	7	Devil Doll .....	22
Big Noise .....	8	Devil Is a Sissy .....	23
Blackmailer .....	9	Dizzy Dames .....	24
Blind Girl of Sorrento .....	9	Dcn't Turn 'Em Loose .....	24
Border Flight .....	10	Down the Stretch .....	24
Border Patrolman .....	10	Down Under the Sea .....	25
Bride Walks Out .....	11	Draegerman Courage .....	26
Bulldog Edition .....	12	Early to Bed .....	27
Bunker Bean .....	12	Earthworm Tractors .....	27
Cain and Mabel .....	13	Easy Money .....	28
Captain's Kid .....	14	Educating Father .....	29
Case of the Velvet Claws ...	14	Everyman's Law .....	30
Changing of the Guard .....	14

(Continued on inside front cover)

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(Continued from front cover)

	Page		Page
Fatal Lady	30	Idaho Kid	55
Final Hour	30	Isle of Fury	55
First Baby	31	It Couldn't Have Happened	55
Follow Your Heart	31	It's Love Again	56
Forgotten Faces	32	Jailbreak	56
Frankie and Johnnie	32	Der Kampf	57
Fugitive Sheriff	33	Kelly of the Secret Service	57
Fury	33	King of the Royal Mounted	57
General Died at Dawn	34	King Steps Out	58
Gentleman from Louisiana	35	Lady Be Careful	58
Girl of the Ozarks	36	Last of the Mohicans	59
Girls' Dormitory	36	Last of the Warrens	61
Give Me Your Heart	38	Last Outlaw	61
Glory Trail	39	Lawless Nineties	62
Go Get-'Em Haines	39	Lion's Den	62
Gorgeous Hussy	40	Little Miss Nobody	62
Grand Jury	41	Love Begins at Twenty	62
Green Pastures	42	Mary of Scotland	62
Guns and Guitars	44	Master Will Shakespeare	65
Guns of the Pecos	44	Meet Nero Wolfe	65
Gypsies	45	Mine with the Iron Door	66
Half Angel	45	Mister Cinderella	67
Harvester	45	M'liss	67
Heart of the West	46	Moving Day	69
Hearts Divided	46	Mummy's Boys	69
Heroes of the Range	47	Murder in the Red Barn	69
High Tension	48	Murder with Pictures	70
Hill Tillies	48	My American Wife	70
His Brother's Wife	49	My Man Godfrey	72
Hollywood Boulevard	50	Navy Born	73
Hot Money	51	Neighborhood House	73
I Love You Only	52	News of the U.S.S.R.	73
I Stand Condemned	52	Nine Days a Queen	74
I Was a Captive of Nazi		Old Hutch	75
Germany	53	Our Relations	75
I'd Give My Life	54	Paa Solsidan	76

(Continued on back cover)

September 28, 1936. Vol 1. No. 41

Motion Picture Review Digest, published weekly by The H. W. Wilson Company, 950-972 University Ave., New York, N.Y. Entered as second-class matter March 24, 1936, at the post office at New York, N.Y., under the Act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price, one year, $4.00. Subscriptions are accepted only from those who have subscribed for the cooperative indexing service. Full information will be supplied on request.

Printed in U. S. A.

Motion Picture Review Digest

Vol. 1

SEPTEMBER 28, 1936

No. 41

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

950-972 University Avenue, New York City

Terms of Subscription and Advertising. Full information on request.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

Audience Evaluation Publications

- Am Legion Auxiliary—American Legion Auxiliary. See Fox W Coast Bul
- Bks & Films—Books and Films. $1. Mrs Ina Roberts, 11118 Clifton Blvd, Cleveland, Ohio
- Bul on Current Films—Bulletin on Current Films. National Council for Prevention of War, 532 17th St, N. W., Washington, D. C.
- Calif Cong of Par & Teachers—California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc
See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict
- Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs—California Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs (Los Angeles District)
See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Sel Motion Pict
- Christian Century—Christian Century. $4. Christian Century Press, 440 S Dearborn St, Chicago
- DAR—National Society Daughters of the American Revolution
See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict
- Endorsed Motion Pict—Endorsed Motion Pictures. Publication discontinued
- Fox W Coast Bul—Fox West Coast Theatres Corporation Bulletin. 1837 S Vermont Av, Los Angeles
(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Am Legion Auxiliary; Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; DAR; E Coast Preview Committee; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Int Fed of Cath Alumnae; Nat Bd of R; Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)
- Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)—General Federation of Women's Clubs (West Coast). Bulletin. Mrs Wm A. Burk, 359 N Bronson Av, Los Angeles
See also Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict
- Int Fed of Cath Alumnae—International Federation of Catholic Alumnae
See Fox W Coast Bul; Nat Legion of Decency
- Jt Estimates—Joint Estimates. Bulletin. General Federation of Women's Clubs (West Coast). Mrs Wm A. Burk, 359 N Bronson Av, Los Angeles
(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)
- Mo Film Bul—Monthly Film Bulletin. Issued to members only. British Film Inst, 4 Great Russell St, London W C 1
- Motion Pict & Family—Motion Picture and the Family. Free. Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc, 28 W 44th St, New York

- Motion Pict Guide—Motion Picture Guide. 50c. Mrs John Waldo, Am Assn of Univ Women Motion Pict Com, 330 E 47th St, Indianapolis
(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Film Estimate Service; Nat Soc of New England Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)
- Motion Pict R—Motion Picture Reviews. $1. Motion Picture Reviews, Women's University Club, 943 S Hoover St, Los Angeles
- Nat Bd of R M—National Board of Review Magazine. $2. National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, 70 Fifth Av, New York
See also Fox W Coast Bul; Wkly Guide
- Nat Council of Jewish Women—Los Angeles Section, National Council of Jewish Women. Bulletin. Mrs Florine Wolfstein, Chairman, 617 S Lucerne Blvd, Los Angeles
See also Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict
- Nat Film Estimate Service—National Film Estimate Service
See Motion Pict Guide
- Nat Legion of Decency—National Legion of Decency. $2. National Legion of Decency, 485 Madison Av, New York
- Nat Soc of New England Women—National Society of New England Women
See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict
- N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide—New York Archdiocese Motion Picture Guide
See Nat Legion of Decency
- Parents' M—Parents' Magazine. $2. The Parents' Institute, Inc, 9 E 40th St, New York
- Scholastic—Scholastic. $1.50. Scholastic, Chamber of Commerce Bldg, Pittsburgh, Pa.
- Sel Motion Pict—Selected Motion Pictures. West & East Coast Preview Committees. Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc, Will H. Hays, Pres, 28 W 44th St, New York
(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)
- S Calif Council of Fed Church Women—Southern California Council of Federated Church Women
See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Sel Motion Pict
- Wkly Guide—Weekly Guide to Selected Pictures. $2.50 yearly, with Magazine, $1. National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, 70 Fifth Av, New York
- Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles—Women's University Club, Los Angeles
See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Motion Pict R; Sel Motion Pict

Newspapers and Magazines

- Boston Transcript—Boston Evening Transcript. $5.50. (Wednesday and Saturday). Boston Transcript Co, Inc, Pub, 324 Washington St, Boston
- Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. $2. J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd, Aldine House, 224 Bloor St, W Toronto
- Canadian M—Canadian Magazine. $1.50. Hugh C. MacLean Pub, Ltd, 347 Adelaide St, W Toronto

Christian Science Monitor—Christian Science Monitor. $9. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston

Commonweal—Commonweal. $5. Calvert Publishing Corp, Grand Central Terminal, New York

Hollywood Spec—Hollywood Spectator. $5. Hollywood Spectator, Inc, 6513 Hollywood Blvd, Hollywood

Liberty—Liberty. $2. Liberty Publishing Corp, 1926 Broadway, Lincoln Sq, New York

Life—Life. $1.50. Life Magazine, Inc, 60 E 42d St, New York

Lit Digest—Literary Digest. $4. Funk and Wagnalls Co, 354-360 Fourth Av, New York

Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. (Daily). Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester, 2. Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York

Nation—Nation. $5. Nation Fund Inc, 20 Vesey St, New York

New Repub—New Republic. $5. New Republic, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York

New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. $15. New Statesman and Nation, 10 Great Turnstile, London, W C 1

New Theatre—New Theatre. $1.50. New Theatre Magazine, 156 W 44th St, New York

N Y Herald Tribune—New York Herald Tribune. $15. N Y Tribune, Inc, 230 W 41st St, New York

N Y Sun—New York Sun. $10. Sun Printing and Publishing Assn, 280 Broadway, New York

N Y Times—New York Times. $15. New York Times Co, 229 W 43d St, New York

N Y World-Telegram—New York World-Telegram. $13. New York World-Telegram Pub, 125 Barclay St, New York

New Yorker—New Yorker. $5. F-R Publishing Corp, 25 W 45th St, New York

News-Wk—News-Week. $4. Rockefeller Center, 1270 6th Av, New York

Sat R—Saturday Review. 30s. Chawton Pub Co, Ltd, 18-20 York Bldgs, Adelphi, London

Script—Script. $3. Wagner Publishing Co, 9492 Dayton Way, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Sight & Sound—Sight and Sound. (Quarterly) 2s 6d. British Film Inst, 4 Great Russell St, London, W C 1

Spec—Spectator. 30s. The Spectator, Ltd, 99 Gower St, London, W C 1

Stage—Stage. $3. Stage Publishing Co, Inc, 50 E 42d St, New York

Theatre Arts Mo—Theatre Arts Monthly. $5. Theatre Arts, Inc, 119 W 57th St, New York

Time—Time. $5. Time, Inc, 350 E 22d St, Chicago

Trade Papers

Box Office—Box Office (Eastern sectional ed) $3. Associated Publications, Inc, 4704 E 9th St, Kansas City, Mo.

Canadian Moving Pict Digest—Canadian Moving Picture Digest. $5. Canadian Moving Picture Digest Co, Ltd, 259 Spadina Av, Toronto, 2

Film Daily—Film Daily. $10. The Film Daily, 1650 Broadway, New York

Hollywood Reporter—Hollywood Reporter. $10. Wilkerson Daily Corp, Ltd, 6717 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.

Motion Pict Daily—Motion Picture Daily. $6. Motion Picture Daily, Inc, 1790 Broadway, New York

Phila Exhibitor—Philadelphia Exhibitor. $2. Jay Emanuel Publications, Inc, 219 N. Broad St, Philadelphia

Variety—Variety. $6. Variety, Inc, 154 W 46th St, New York

Variety (Hollywood)—Variety. $10. (Daily). Daily Variety, Ltd, 1708-10 N Vine St, Hollywood, Calif.

Explanations

After the title of the film, the producer is given, next the running time in minutes and then the date of release.

Under Players, only leading members of the cast are listed.

For system of evaluating favor or disfavor of the reviews, see note at bottom of pages. The evaluating symbols indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of each review as a whole, not just of the quoted excerpt.

In the reference to the magazine, the number of the page is first given, followed by the month, day and year.

An index will be found at the end of the quarterly cumulated numbers which includes actors, actresses and directors for the productions indexed; also books, plays and short stories from which movies have been adapted.

Only those foreign films which are likely to be generally shown are listed.

In evaluating films, the women's organizations use "mature" or "adult" when films are unsuited for children; "family" when suitable for all the members of a family; "young people" when suitable for adolescents from 15 to 20 years of age; "children" for those under 15.

Abbreviations of producers' names and their addresses will be found in the Directory of Producers at the end of the number.

(s) This symbol denotes a short feature.

When the date of release is omitted, it has not been determined by the producer.

The running time as given is tabulated after projection room showings and is only an approximation of the actual release length in communities where state or local censorship may result in deletions. For final information, consult your local exchange.

Key to Abbreviations

a	adults	fed	federal	p	page
Ag	August	gen	general	par	parent -s
Am	American	inc	incorporated	pict	picture
Ap	April	inst	institute -ion	Phila	Philadelphia
assn	association	int	international	pub	publisher -ication
av	avenue	Ja	January	r	review -s
bd	board	Je	June	Repub	Republic
bks	books	Jl	July	S	September, south
blvd	boulevard	jt	joint		-ern
bul	bulletin	Lit	Literary	Sat	Saturday
c	children (under 15 years)	ltd	limited	sel	selected
Calif	California	m	magazine	soc	society
Cath	Catholic	min	minutes	Spec	Spectator
co	company	mo	monthly	sq	square
com	committee	Mr	March	st	street
Cong	Congress	My	May	univ	university
D	December	N	November	vol	volume
e	east	nat	national	w	west
ed	edition	no	number	wk	week
F	February	NY	New York	wkly	weekly
		O	October	y	young people (15-20 years)

Motion Picture Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Motion Pictures

September 28, 1936

ACES AND EIGHTS. Puritan 62min Je 6 '36
Players: Tim McCoy, Wheeler Oakman.
Rex Lease, Luana Walters
Director: Sam Newfield
A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a fair Western. General patronage."
+ — Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36
"A, Y and C: fair Western."
Parents' M p38 Ag '36

"A Western of a not unfamiliar type, but it manages to catch a good deal of the glamour of the old dime-novel Western yarns. Juvenile."
+ — Wkly Guide Je 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Tim McCoy delivers another satisfying routine of Western action entertainment in his latest outdoor melodrama. With a good supporting cast, a story that holds interest very nicely at all times, and well-paced direction, the production should give satisfaction to the general run of fans who go for this type of picture."

+ Film Daily p3 Ag 8 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p72 Jl 1 '36

"Tim McCoy without a gun. But his supporting cast flash enough rods to shoot the release into the dependable Western rating, destined for the twin shops."

+ Variety p19 Ag 12 '36

ALL AMERICAN CHUMP. MGM 70min

Players: Stuart Erwin, Betty Furness,
Robert Armstrong, Edmund Gwenn

Director: Edwin L. Marin

"The story centers around a human adding machine, Stuart Erwin, who is grabbed from a $15 a week job in a bank, by a smart carnival trio, whose carnival has gone on the rocks. They try to sell the chump to the public on the basis of his quick calculations, but that does not prove much of an attraction. Forced into a bridge game, the chump brings into play his 'figger' brain, beats the champion and in a playoff, with plenty of dough bet, wins the tournament and the girl." Hollywood Reporter

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Lawrence Kimble's original screen play contains all the elements which make for success, a central idea that is highly amusing and enough subsidiary complications to sustain the comedy for the full length of the picture. But on the way to the screen the story values were lost. The producers and director obviously lack the sense of humor the author displayed. . . The chief weakness of Edwin Marin's direction is his handling of the dialogue. The lines are spouted with little regard for their comedy values, as if they were something to get rid of as rapidly as possible."

— + Hollywood Spec p13 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Laugh laden farce highlighted by Stuart Erwin's droll characterization, this unusual and clever original by Lawrence Kimble comes to the screen as highly pleasing fan fare. Family."

+ Box Office p25 S 5 '36

"[It is a] swell laugh number with well-handled fast comedy appealing to audiences generally."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 29 '36

"In the 'All American Chump' Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has a top 'B' picture, deserving of 'A' ranking and certainly as nice a piece of entertainment as any ticket buyer would expect, even from a picture with twice this cost and a hit buildup. . . Put this one down on your booking sheets as far better than average entertainment."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 26 '36

"Here is an unusually bright and different variation of the old theme in which the hick triumphs over the city slickers. . . The screenplay is just giddy enough to please on any dual bill."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Ag 27 '36

"Here is fresh and volatile farce to fill the laugh spot on any well-ordered bill. . . Offering has high laugh content and will hit box office level aimed at as cream of the B product."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 26 '36

AMO TE SOLA. Italian title of I love you only

AND SUDDEN DEATH. Paramount 67min Je 19 '36

Players: Randolph Scott, Frances Drake,
Tom Brown, Billie Lee

Director: Charles Barton

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: thought-provoking; C: too strong."
Christian Century p1143 Ag 26 '36

"Impressive, and not gruesome, is this story of reckless driving, drinking, and their horrible consequences. Timely and valuable. Good. Mature-family." DAF

Fox W Coast Bul Je 20 '36

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

AND SUDDEN DEATH—Continued

"This picture . . . has a constructive educational value. Adults: good; family: good; 14-18: good; 8-14: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The original idea was an excellent one, but the manner of presentation and the ending caused it to become a very ineffective one. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Jl 4 '36

"Adults & young people."

Jt Estimates Jl 1 '36

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p114 Jl '36

"The lesson, to make it more palatable to movie audiences, is sugar-coated with a love story, and the ethical value is somewhat vitiated by the fact that the leading lady is played up as a heroine when she shields her brother from just punishment. However, since any attempt to correct the existing evils of bad driving is worth while, the film may be commended for its purpose. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: no."

+ — Motion Pict R Jl '36

"The suspense is maintained throughout, the direction is smooth and understanding, and the photography is exceptionally good, while the acting is sincere and not too melodramatic. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 24 '36

"A splendid lesson which every motorist should see. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 25 '36

"A and Y: timely and suspenseful drama of this motoring age; C: tense."

Parents' M p38 Ag '36

"Although the story is evidently manufactured to bring home the intended lesson, the suspense is keen, the incidents well chosen and the cast an able one for a topic of great importance. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

"An excellent picture for safety campaigns. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Je 20 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Unadulterated propaganda directly from Hollywood to aid in the promotion of safe automobile driving. Produced in the usual feature length, in the style of a glorified story-lecture." J. P. Cunningham
Commonweal p246 Je 26 '36

"Paramount illustrates its sermon with a human drama, one which I am afraid you will find difficult to take. . . Paramount makes an honest attempt to provide entertainment you will like. It is a picture crammed with action and physical thrills to compensate in a measure for the unpleasant and unconvincing story."

+ — Hollywood Spec p10 Je 20 '36

"'And Sudden Death' might have been one of the most devastating pictures of the year. . . The film begins as an eloquent plea against reckless driving, but ends up as no more than a rather puerile little melodrama that neither preaches an engrossing sermon nor provides any abundance of cinema excitement. . . You drive cautiously home after seeing 'And Sudden Death,' but you won't have seen a memorable film." (2 stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p47 Jl 18 '36

"It fails to be very effective. It shows, it is true, shots of horrible motor accidents—cars overturning, crashing, skidding and being flung from high places—but it never manages to be really moving, and its object lesson is so elementary that much of the point is lost, for sophisticated minds, at least. Besides, an anemic romance sugarcoats its stern moral rather annoyingly, and the continuity is uneven, so that the sum total fails to be either entertaining or particularly instructive." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p6 Jl 18 '36

"A certain heavy-handedness of direction causes several of the film's more violent scenes . . . to lose much of their effectiveness." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p18 Jl 18 '36

"It would be a privilege to write favorably of 'And Sudden Death.' . . What makes reviewing this well-intentioned film an ungrateful business is the fact that after the first reel or two its honorable denouncement of reckless motorists is thrown to the winds and it becomes a hackneyed melodrama, indifferently written and directed." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p20 Jl 20 '36

"The film isn't as violent a lecture as you might expect, and it is considerably padded with the gentle romance between the officer in charge of traffic and the beautiful heiress who likes to hit seventy. In spite of its substantial subject matter, the picture is pretty much on the slight side." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p56 Jl 25 '36

"Not being an advocate of propaganda in the entertainment field I was a little wary of what the films might do with the theme. I needn't have been, for clever Madeleine Ruthven, with the aid of co-authors Reeves and March, turned out a yarn which is dramatic as well as admonitory. . . Randy Scott's work impresses by its sincerity; it's doubtful whether I've ever liked him as well. It's pleasant to report that Frances Drake has improved immeasurably—she's less the mannequin than heretofore." Herb Sterne

+ Variety p12 Jl 25 '36

"It does not venture to translate into pictures much of the lusty and horrifying blood-reck of the article [by J. C. Furnas] but it does present, within conventional limits, an energetic little sermon on good highway manners."

Time p40 Je 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This starts off like a house afire, but calms down in time to make it a fairly decent excuse for using the basic subject. Family."

+ — Box Office p45 Je 20 '36

"Subject of manslaughter by automobile has been done on several occasions previously as film fare, and much more effectively than in 'And Sudden Death.' And with better all-around entertainment effect as well as with a more adequate cast. . . Houses which play this solo will be in the minority. Thin name draw and the likelihood that it won't build will keep its activities down largely to double spots. . . Story is not well put together, but the worst faults are the irregular and unsteady pace, spotty casting and acting and dull dialogue."

— Variety p17 Jl 22 '36

ANNA. Amkino 90min Jl 16 '36

Players: Ada Voitsik. Abraikosof. Igor Maleyef. Anatol Goryunof

Director: I. Piryof

Dialogue film in Russian with English subtitles. The story revolves about the marriage of a young Soviet worker to a stranger from Siberia who turns out to be a traitor to the cause.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It shows] little sign of the 'classicism' Eisenstein predicted for his native cinema."

Nation p110 J1 25 '36

"The film is a trifle theatrical and, while stirring at times, does not exactly ring true. Mosfilms evidently are trying to combine propaganda with Hollywood plots, and in their desperate efforts to strike a nice balance, strike instead something verging on the ridiculous, if some of the scenes from 'Anna' are samples. Both in performance and treatment the picture resembles our own outmoded film souvenirs, although the subject dealt with is up-to-date enough. . . . There are awkward English subtitles accompanying the Russian dialogue."

Marguerite Tazelaar
— N Y Herald Tribune p10 J1 17 '36

"In general the acting is effective, if somewhat obvious at times, and the picture of what party loyalty means is interesting." H. T. S.

+ — N Y Times p20 J1 17 '36

"'Anna' is pretty mediocre both as propaganda and entertainment. . . . About the only pleasant thing that may be said about it is that you don't have to see it unless you want to."

William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p10 J1 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is an] entertaining counterpart of old-time American melodrama."

+ Film Daily p7 J1 18 '36

"In effect, and in part by reason of very ordinary achievement in performance and production, the film is adaptable only to those audiences for whom a film from Russia is an event."

Motion Pict Daily p12 J1 17 '36

"'Anna' is strictly for the devout. And even for this category it will be about as easy to take as compulsory rhythmic dancing. . . . Cast throughout wears ghoulish makeup which, in the love scenes, looks like a tete-a-tete among Hallowe'en skeletons. It's assuredly not entertainment and, as good propaganda on this side of the Volga, it is doubtful. Background settings, obviously quickie, are only too apt to give the impression that the party members, even their elite, live in surroundings which resemble fish huts. . . . Unravelling is slow and plodding. Film has to go down as a weakie, even adjudged by Russian normals."

— Variety p34 J1 22 '36

ANTHONY ADVERSE. Warner 136min Ag 29 '36

Players: Fredric March. Olivia de Havilland. Anita Louise. Edmund Gwenn. Claude Rains. Gale Sondergaard. Billy Mauch

Director: Mervyn LeRoy

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Altho a long picture, the audience is held to the very finale, and lives with the actors their turbulent fateful lives. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A picture which, like the novel, holds interest despite excessive length by reason of its colorful content and beauty of production. Adults: excellent; 14-18: very good; 8-14: mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A dignified and impressive picturization of the novel, sans the more sensational features, so understandingly directed and intelligently acted it will satisfy the most exacting and discriminating. . . . Beautifully mounted with a delightful musical score which adds to and intensifies each variation of mood and with brilliant acting and unique settings which complement and interpret the theme, this is one of the most important pictures of the year. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Warners deserve praise for the dignity, meticulous thoroughness, and high dramatic quality of this engrossing production. . . . This biographical study of Allen's ill-starred hero is thought-provoking fare for adults. Excellent." DAR

"The dominant character trait of 'Anthony Adverse' and its effect on others is constructive of ethical standards. The delicate situations are handled with dignity. The photography and musical score are very good. Without a doubt this picture will receive general approbation, setting as it does a new high mark of achievement in cinema art. . . . One leaves the play with sorrow that race prejudices, illegitimate sex relations and crime still are too flagrant, but thankful a play such as this one shows their futility and degradation. [It shows the] ability of the director to [transform] a rather unattractive character [into] one bidding for and receiving the sympathy of the audience. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"One of the pictures that you cannot afford to miss. An extraordinary production from every point of view—story structure, acting, beauty of production, smooth-flowing direction. The famous novel comes to the screen as a notable picture. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Je 13 '36

"Outstandingly engrossing in every detail is this notably fine production based on Hervey Allen's lengthy novel. Warner Brothers have achieved real greatness in the art of picture making, presenting a screen play of flowing, forceful action in which is given a powerful portrayal of the life of a man born without a name and buffeted by fate, yet, done without the open frankness of the book. Adults & young people."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Je 1 '36

"Beautifully mounted with a delightful musical score which adds to and intensifies each variation of mood, with brilliant acting and unique settings which complement and interpret the theme, this is one of the most important pictures of the year. Adults."

+ + Jt Estimates Je 1 '36

"Excellent taste and fine discrimination have been displayed by the producer in omitting those elements of the book which were considered objectionable. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency J1 9 '36

"A: outstanding period drama, absorbing entertainment; Y: excellent; C: mature."

Parents' M p38 Ag '36

Scholastic p17 S 19 '36

"This is one of the most important pictures of the year. Adults. Outstanding."

+ + Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

"Mature. Outstanding. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays."

+ + Wkly Guide J1 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Movie fans who protested that a novel of gargantuan proportions as 'Anthony Adverse' could never be reduced to one night's entertainment, are now frankly admitting they were wrong. . . . [It] makes a spectacular picture. . . . There are ninety-eight speaking parts in 'Anthony Adverse' and that with the varied changes of locale, the vast numbers of costumes and extras used, the amount of research involved, combine to make this picture one of the most important ever produced." Laura Elston

+ + Canadian M p34 Ag '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ANTHONY ADVERSE—Continued

Christian Science Monitor p17 S 5 '36

"Filming of 'Anthony Adverse' was preceded by no little speculation concerning the daring moral tones of substantial parts of the source novel, and by frank scepticism over the risk that threatened in properly and sufficiently applying the many-sided essentials of the unusually voluminous manuscript to a scenario that would be consistent with the original. The trepidations, however, are now found to have been unnecessary, for 'Anthony Adverse' emerges triumphantly from Hollywood's workshops retaining the full, vigorous dramatic essence of the original, a tribute both to sincere dignity of treatment and to courage, intelligence and perseverance. It stands as a beacon to an advanced technique of expert photoplay construction." J. P. Cunningham

++ Commonweal p387 Ag 14 '36

"Running about twice the length of the average film, 'Anthony Adverse' hits inevitable lapses. These, however, come not so much from any fault in the film as they do from inability of an audience to assimilate, at one long sitting, all that this intriguing full-blown tale has to offer. . . All in all, [it] comes as a rare treat for the hardy moviegoer." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 Je 27 '36

"[It is] a handsome and spectacular production. Populated with a huge cast and bulging with picaresque adventure and romance, it richly deserves one of Hollywood's favorite adjectives—colossal. . . The exposition is as disjointed as you might have expected, but the photoplay is always visually exciting and has far more suspense and compulsion than its original. . . The performance of the work, on the whole, is not inspired. Fredric March, in the title role, is rather baffled by the exigencies of a characterization which had scant dimensions even in the novel. . . Olivia de Havilland is equally ill at ease as Angela." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p13 Ag 27 '36

"Somehow it has been done, and well done, too. Hollywood tackled 'Anthony Adverse' and conquered it, a triumph for 'Anthony Adverse' as well as Hollywood. Sheridan Gibney extracted the marrow of Hervey Allen's novel, as gigantic in size as in popularity; the Warners made a picture. And the marrow of that adventurous, romantic, complicated, swashbuckling best-seller, as you may see for yourself at the Strand, is the simple and sincerely moving drama of a man who lost his soul and found it again. . . Fredric March does his best work as the sensitive, ambitious clerk determined to make his invented name one he may bear with pride. . . 'Anthony Adverse,' even more than roaring adventure and lusty romance, is a deeply spiritual picture. . . The screen version of 'Anthony Adverse,' like the novel . . . depicts with no sense of hurry or stint, the major episodes in an extraordinary life. Like its enormously popular source, this production should prove fascinating to a good many millions." Eileen Creelman

++ N Y Sun p10 Ag 27 '36

"If size is your deity . . . then you will relish [it]. Speaking for ourselves, we found it a bulky, rambling and indecisive photoplay which has not merely taken liberties with the letter of the original but with its spirit. Mr. Allen's novel was both picaresque and philosophic. An arrant adventure story, it was at the same time streaked through with vivid lines of characterization, preachment, mysticism and humor. For all its sprawling length, it was cohesive and well rounded. Most of its picaresque quality has been lost in the screen version; its philosophy is vague, its characterization blurred and its story so loosely knit and episodic that its telling seems interminable. . . Watching its progress on the screen we squirmed like a small boy in Sunday school. . . Don Luis has been played to perfection by Claude Rains. . . Billy Mauch is an admirable 10-year-old Anthony, but Fredric March is a thoroughly spiritless

Anthony, the man. . . Altogether too much talent to be wasted through a pointless script and unimaginative direction." F. S. Nugent

— + N Y Times p16 Ag 27 '36

"I should be a carping fellow indeed if I kept insisting upon such a petty matter as the episodic treatment this huge novel has received in its transference to the cinema in the presence of such genuine excitement, color, thrills, romance and adventure as the film offers. . . [It] is more fortunate in the acting of its lesser roles than in its principal parts. As Anthony, Fredric March seems sometimes excessively confused and spiritless. But on the whole he carries off the part with considerable success, and Olivia de Havilland is especially lovely as Angela. But it is Claude Rains as Don Luis, Edmund Gwenn as John Bonnyfeather, Louis Hayward as Denis Moore and Gale Sondergaard as Faith who offer performances to watch and applaud." William Boehnel

N Y World-Telegram p10 Ag 31 '36

"In general [it] sustains a fair degree of the usual interest a lively costume piece can provide. Liveliness, indeed, is its most valuable asset, and one not necessarily found when actors have to wear fancy clothes. . . I don't think Mr. March has done any better piece of work than this. . . There happen to be two very good sharp bits of acting in the whole affair, and possibly when I think of the liveliness of the film I am really thinking of the grimaces of Gale Sondergaard and the haughty viciousness of Claude Rains. . . Altogether you get a sense of crowds of people and of lots of travel, all of which helps you along through the two hours and twenty minutes, and gives you the feeling that you've seen a good enough film for your money." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p54 Ag 29 '36

"Adapter Sheridan Gibney's job wasn't one to be envied, and he's acquitted himself creditably though his script never attains dramatic form. . . Studiously played, magnificently staged, the opening sequences are a full-flavored example of high romance at its best, a colorful panorama of eighteenth-century Europe. Here the picture achieves its peak with incisive, textured performances by Claude Rains and Edmund Gwenn. . . As the name character achieves maturity, sweep and fluidity languish, and though we dog Anthony's footsteps across Europe, Cuba and Africa, it's really only his shadow that we see. The man's career is interesting but never touching. Fredric March is a preoccupied hero and I liked him best in his work with the youthful Angela. . . least during the African, soul-coping adventure. . . The production is on a magnificent scale, the groupings arranged by Mervyn LeRoy have merit and, besides the splendid Rains and Gwenn, there is a laudable supporting cast excellently photographed by Tony Gaudio." Herb Sterne

+ Script p10 Jl 25 '36

"'Anthony Adverse' is not now the story of a favored child of the gods. It is a spectacle of morals and manners of eighteenth century life. This certainly is no condemnation. Perhaps Paul Muni could have made the fabulous Adverse live as an individual. Perhaps Laughton could, or even Leslie Howard. In March's hands, Adverse is merely a romantic figure, a hub about whom a deal of interesting data revolves. . . The cast—hundreds of them—coordinate their performances into a vast canvas of pageantry, and give the production authentic feeling and color. An amazingly vital portrayal is given by Olivia de Havilland. . . The costumes, the sets, the dialogue—all are impressive, a strong story told in strong terms."

+ Stage p10 S '36

"Whether even the qualities of the picture itself will cause the LeRoy version of 'Anthony Adverse' to equal the success of the Allen version is exceedingly debatable. As hard-breathing, swashbuckling sword-&-cloak melodrama it is good but not superlative."

+ Time p43 Ag 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"There is much to be said about this film pro and con, but one thing is fairly certain, and that is that the picture will wind up with pleasant grosses in most spots and do just average business in a lot of other spots. It may not set up any long-time box office figure, but it will do well enough that way to more than recompense the producers for the headache involved in manufacturing it. . . 'Anthony Adverse' as a film is a longish bitter-sweet woman's yarn with a lot of marquee strength and, as such, the exhibitors won't have anything to worry about. . . Considering the problem and handicaps involved, the job is a good one. Mervyn LeRoy, in his directorial assignment, also turns in a topnotch job, managing to get pace and action out of the story."

+ Variety p18 S 2 '36

ARIZONA RAIDERS. Paramount 64min Je 26 '36

Players: Larry (Buster) Crabbe, Raymond Hatton, Marsha Hunt, Johnny Downs

Director: James Hogan

Based on the novel Raiders of Spanish Peaks by Zane Grey. A Western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Well selected comedy, good music, and magnificent paramo of horses in action show director Hogan's skill in varying the pattern of the usual Western. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A thrilling sequence of stampeding horses, romance and bits of hilarious comedy make this picture above the average in Western entertainment. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre—mature." DAR

"The stampede is too exciting for small children. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Jl 4 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Jl 1 '36

"About all that one can say of this picture is that it is a Western with the usual scenery, shooting and skilled riding. . . Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: exciting."

+ — Motion Pict R Jl '36

"Thrills, suspense, beautiful scenery and unusual photography are combined to make of this Western wholesome entertainment for the family. Family & junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 24 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 2 '36

"A and Y: entertaining for those who like Westerns; C: exciting."

Parents' M p31 S '36

"Distinguished by excellent photography, fine riding and beautiful horses, as well as an unusual amount of good comedy, the screen version of Zane Grey's novel suffers, however, from a routine plot which is somewhat loosely constructed. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

"Entertaining for those who like Westerns. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Je 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The Arizona Raiders' has more comic touches than is usual in a picture of this virile type. As a matter of fact, the show is often most hilarious when it is being grimly serious." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p47 Jl 25 '36

"Zane Grey (un-Limited) continues turning out his yarns like hot cakes, but this time the batter is disconcertingly thin. Action is the breath of life to Westerns but this tumbleweed saga doesn't achieve even a zephyr to propel it along until close to the final fade-out." Herb Sterne

— Script p13 Ag 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Family."

Box Office p23 Jl 11 '36

"This is one of the most amusing Westerns that has come to the screen in many months. Raymond Hatton is grand in a comedy role, while Johnny Downs also supplies many laughs."

+ Film Daily p14 Je 30 '36

"Zane Grey stories have their audiences cut out for them, but as far as screen fare goes, 'The Arizona Raiders' may even be an improvement on Grey. The western atmosphere and adventure the [children] love come right out of the book, but the studio stepped pretty hard on the comedy throttle, with the result that there are plenty of legitimate laughs, which Grey didn't think of. While the addition of comedy isn't likely to lift this one into big time houses, it ought to increase the take in its own league."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 20 '36

"This offers an unusual amount of comedy in a routine plot, but the laugh sequences are constructed for surprise and deserve special emphasis."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Je 22 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p68 Jl 1 '36

"Only way this one rates [as] acceptable entertainment for the Western fans is [as] an out-and-out farce, and it is so written and directed that audiences may take [their] choice in this respect. Broad treatment of the routine horse opera situations, with all the standby elements loaded in, aims it at the juvenile audience where it should be gleefully relished. For those who like their sage brush sagas straight it will be pretty much of a washout."

Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 20 '36

AT THE RACE TRACK WITH CHARLIE CHAN. See Charlie Chan at the race track

AUGUST WEEK-END. Chesterfield 64min Ap 25 '36

Players: Valerie Hobson, G. P. Huntley, Jr., Betty Compton

Director: Charles Lamont

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] has been given a competent production and a capable cast that works hard, although not always successfully, to make the melodramatic situations convincing. Family."

+ — Box Office p29 Ag 1 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

AUGUST WEEK-END—Continued

"It is just one of those obvious conglomerations that embrace a lot of incidents but lack a single definite punch."

— Film Daily p7 J1 18 '36

"[It] makes an okay supporting feature. . . It's deficient in marquee names but, otherwise, this ordinary exposition of love and living among high society should prove good amusement fodder for those who aren't particular."

+ — Variety p34 J1 22 '36

AVENGING WATERS. Columbia 56min My 8 '36

Players: Ken Maynard, Beth Marion, Ward Bond

Director: Spencer Gordon Bennett

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

"A, Y and C: well photographed outdoor drama of flood days."

Parents' M p34 J1 '36

"The plot is logically developed against a fine Western background. It is well directed and carries a nicely sustained interest. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Familiar but generally acceptable outdoor action stuff that should please the Maynard followers."

+ — Film Daily p9 J1 8 '36

"Made up to the same good Maynard standard, this will please Western advocates. Family Western."

+ Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

B

BACK TO NATURE. 20th century-Fox 60min S 18 '36

Players: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Dixie Dunbar, Tony Martin, Spring Byington

Director: James Tinling

This is the third of the Jones family series and contains the same cast. The Jones family start off on their vacation in an auto trailer after a frantic ordeal in packing and closing their house. Papa Jones plans to go to a druggist convention alone while the family stay at a farm, but he finds he is mistaken.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Amusing and wholesome. Family. Good." DAR

"A domestic comedy very well directed and interesting from start to finish for young and old. American audiences will revel in it and in more of its kind. A particularly good family picture." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Good wholesome entertainment for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ag 22 '36

"A nice blending of humor, excitement and adventure makes this engaging entertainment for the family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 10 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"Naturalness on the part of the cast, some lovely photography of the out-of-doors, clean comedy and a good story are the outstanding features of this very human production. Family. Special merit."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 27 '36

"The Jones family . . . continues to amuse admirers with its whole-hearted enjoyment of life. . . Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"The most entertaining picture of the series so far. Family."

+ Wkly Guide S 5 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The eternal pleasure of seeing ourselves mirrored in the actions and emotions of other people is skillfully utilized by the Jones Family in this perennially refreshing account of Mr. Average Man's domestic adventures and mistakes, and in this, 'Back to Nature' illustrates a vital cinematic law. The production itself is unpretentious, its direction at times careless, its acting often mediocre, and its plot hackneyed, but—it is deeply thematic. It tells its entire story in terms of down-to-earth reality." Paul Jacobs

+ — Hollywood Spec p9 Ag 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"America's favorite film family scores again in another of their laugh hits. Surpasses in general excellence the two previous Jones pictures. Family."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 22 '36

"Plenty of action and excitement for the family trade. Good program fare."

+ Film Daily p6 Ag 14 '36

"[It] is a tip-top program picture. . . It is geared to cash in on the current great vogue for auto trailers, affording exhibitors plenty of opportunities for smart exploitation stunts."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Ag 8 '36

"The adventures of the appalling and appealing Jones family are continued in this [third] of the series, which looks like a success based on the unqualified delight with which a family audience greeted it. . . The entire appeal of the film is wisely based on the comic quality of everyday domestic incidents to which all families are heir."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Ag 10 '36

"'Back to Nature' [is] made for twin bills, devoid of name strength, but okay for family, neighborhood trade."

Phila Exhibitor p36 Ag 15 '36

"Designed primarily for family audiences, neighborhoods and subsequents, this will be no great shakes in many class spots except in dual alignment. As such it serves its purpose in providing homey comedy-fare as secondary feature. And there seems to be no question but that the series is building for spots where patrons come regularly."

+ Variety p21 S 2 '36

"[It is the] most entertaining of the Jones family series of features being produced by 20th-Fox. By this time the series should have gained sufficient sales momentum to mean something at the box office. In neighborhoods, properly exploited, this picture should be the sustenance of any twin bill."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 8 '36

BELOVED VAGABOND. Toeplitz-Columbia
78min

Players: Maurice Chevalier. Betty Stockfeld.
Margaret Lockwood. Desmond Tester

Director: Kurt Bernhardt

Music: Darius Milhaud

Based on the novel of the same title by W. J. Locke. Filmed in England. This is a second version of a silent film which starred Carlyle Blackwell. "Chevalier [portrays] an impecunious renegade from the sober respectability of Eaton Square, [who] hitch-hikes his way to happiness down the poplar-lined byways of Southern France. Romance in the guise of a little gypsy strolling player, Blanquette, comes to rout a lingering attachment to the old school tie traditions across the Channel." (Hollywood Reporter)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Maurice Chevalier charms as usual in a film which dips lightly into la vie bohème, and would probably be something less than mild were it not for M. Chevalier and his competent teammates."

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Although hampered by a loosely knit script and direction that lacked the courage to break away from tradition with any show of decisiveness, Chevalier comes across with a sincere performance and a rush of high spirits that works transformation tricks in bridging gaps where continuity is apt to sag. Treatment, moreover, has a freshness and originality that gives the picture character and a certain sense of realism."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p7 S 9 '36

"Chevalier, moustached, has lost some of his old fire and there is only one moment in his several songs when the old vibrant irresistible quality gets over. . . It's a picture to be sold on its book and star value."

Motion Pict Daily p4 S 9 '36

"This is a picture which should not fail. . . The plot wouldn't bear serious analysis in the light of modernity. Dialog in which the star participates snaps and crackles. One cannot help but fall under the spell of the Chevalier charm. Direction is cinema technique at nearly its best, and the support acting is more than satisfactory."

+ Variety p17 S 9 '36

BELOW THE DEADLINE. Chesterfield-Grand national 64min Je 8 '36

Players: Cecilia Parker. Russell Hopton.
Theodore von Eltz

Director: Charles Lamont

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair crook melodrama; Y and C: no."
Parents' M p38 Ag '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] third rate melodrama." E. C. S.
— Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A decided pick-up in action toward the climax plus the average amount of suspense and thrills throughout enables this detective film to fulfill its purpose—program entertainment. Production values are good but the cast goes through its paces in routine fashion with only Theodore von Eltz emerging with dramatic honors. Family."

+ — Box Office p75 Je 27 '36

"A pedestrian warm-over of the standard crimeplay formula. . . It is meticulously and deliberately detailed so that any child can follow the course of crime and the methods by which a big robbery can be pulled off right under the noses of the metropolitan police. . . 'Below the Deadline' is an average independent offering for sub-standard spots and on that level will doubtless do its bit."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 17 '36

"Containing a title with exploitable possibilities and a second-rate story that follows familiar patterns, this rates for a double bill."

— + Motion Pict Daily p14 Je 26 '36

BENGAL TIGER. Warner 63min S 5 '36

Players: Barton MacLane. June Travis.
Warren Hull. Paul Graetz

Director: Louis King

"Its title refers to Satan, a magnificent tiger, billed as a killer and known to the circus folks as a 'hopelessly bad cat,' but which Barton MacLane, strong-willed trainer of the cats, insists on subduing. There is war throughout the story between the two and in the end the tiger gets its man, thus clearing up a romantic triangle that is the heart of the tale." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Too much brutality and drinking. The tense, breath-taking acting is marvelous but too realistic for comfort or entertainment. Adults only." Am Legion Auxiliary

"While this picture has much that is different and does hold one's interest, there are sequences too terrifying for the average theater-goer. Barton MacLane does a fine piece of work with an unsympathetic role. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Much drinking. Adults. Mediocre." DAR

"Some rather coarse and brutal scenes mar a film which at its best is harrowing and too exciting for family audiences or nervous adults. A group of circus characters, fairly well impersonated, indulge in execrable English and excessive liquid refreshment throughout the film." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It] stresses the importance of abstinence from drink which lessens man's supremacy and obdurate willpower in conquering the beast he faces. Scenes of daring rescue, with a good strong cast, provide suspense, but the picture was so marred with disgusting drinking episodes, that the ethical value was reduced to almost nil. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Jl 25 '36

"[It is] too brutal and nervewracking to be very entertaining. Though there is much emphasis on unpleasant detail, the animal sequences have been handled in a masterly way. Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Jl 15 '36

"Adults only."

Jt Estimates Jl 15 '36

"There is very little excuse for this picture. It is a series of hair-raising scenes of a wild animal tamer in the cage with a particularly sullen and ugly tiger. . . Oh, entertainment! how many crimes are committed in thy name! Adolescents, 12-16: horrible; children, 8-12: absolutely impossible."

— — Motion Pict R Jl '36

BENGAL TIGER—Continued

"An excellent characterization by Barton MacLane, in which he gave to his role crude power, brute strength, and an amazing vitality, lends some conviction and puts him unquestionably in the rank of first-rate actors. Tense direction and good photography add to an otherwise gruesome and lurid production. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 15 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 30 '36

"A: heavy circus melodrama; Y: debatable; C: impossible."

Parents' M p31 S '36

"[It is a] routine story. . . Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"An exciting drama of circus life, not wildly original in theme but well done. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This picture will appeal strongly to all except people with instincts of decency. . . To those organizations which use the Spectator reviews as an aid to determine what pictures to recommend to their members, I would suggest that in each community an effort be made to enlist the support of the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in an effort to prevent the showing of 'Bengal Tiger.'"

— — Hollywood Spec p7 J1 18 '36

"Though much of the film is of standard studio fabrication, there is undeniable force in the gripping climax that has the savage cat finally settling the human difficulties once and for all." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p33 Ag 15 '36

"The piece has been produced with a minimum of artistry, and probable expense, although Mr. King has used imagination in his direction and Barton MacLane's tussles with Satan prove spectacular. . . The scenario is a trifle whiskery and might have been brushed into a more modern version, since it was being resuscitated." Marguerite Tazelaar

— + N Y Herald Tribune p12 J1 31 '36

"'Bengal Tiger' is a hard-boiled circus story, related as toughly as the modern screen will allow, which is not very tough, and offering quite a bit of excitement. The censors have evidently bitten out one large portion of conversation in a scene between June Travis and Warren Hull. Somehow, although the continuity jumped about suddenly here, it didn't seem to matter. The story of 'Bengal Tiger' is not one to worry over." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p9 J1 30 '36

"The chief distinction of 'Bengal Tiger,' aside from the glimpses it affords of circus life, is that it introduces to the screen a new and handsome heavy called Satan—a tiger who does far and away the best job of acting in the picture. . . [It is] the kind of picture that will not bear analysis, but which is more or less saved by the fact that no one would be bothered trying to analyze it, anyway." B. R. C.

N Y Times p22 J1 30 '36

"The new one at the Strand is pretty bad. . . Frankly, if I had my way about it, I should keep whatever further opinion I have of 'Bengal Tiger' to myself, but since it is the bounden duty of screen reviewers to tell all, even the worst, I shall adopt an attitude of tolerance and merely report that 'Bengal Tiger' is a pretty bad melodrama. . . It all seems to me to be a lot of silly pother about some trivial melodramatics no more significant than the usual romantic highjinks found in penny shockers and a pretty awful waste of such talented players as Barton MacLane, June Travis, Warren Hull and Paul Graetz." William Boehnel

— — N Y World-Telegram p10 J1 30 '36

"'Bengal Tiger' is a pretty good, if routine circus story." Russell Maloney

+ — New Yorker p53 Ag 8 '36

"Louis King, director, manages to extract a speedy, well-acted picture from pretty thin story material. . . The circus background is handled in a routine fashion, but the fights between trainer and animal carry real punch." Molly Lewin

+ — Script p13 Ag 8 '36

Time p26 Ag 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Tense action and heavy melodrama that will appeal to the juvenile members of the audience are the highlights of this circus feature that will make good secondary entertainment. Family."

+ — Box Office p23 J1 11 '36

"First rate action picture with thrilling sequences and interesting characters."

+ — Film Daily p6 J1 7 '36

"An exciting romantic melodrama of circus life that is well above the average of Warners' program output and that can be counted on to attract substantial returns on and off Main street if properly exploited. . . There is a spectacularly effective fire episode in winter headquarters and plenty of exciting and realistic footage of the training of the big cats."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 J1 1 '36

"This is a thrill-action melodrama with romance, told against a circus background. While the familiar plot is interesting, Barton MacLane does a nicely pointed characterization as a roistering, drunken lion tamer, with a heart of gold."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 J1 2 '36

"Made for the neighborhood trade, this has little that isn't familiar, although backgrounds are interesting."

— + Phila Exhibitor p27 J1 15 '36

"'Bengal Tiger' has all the earmarks of a melodrama that got a quick going over, with sound and fury far outweighing dramatic substance and the plot leaving hardly a single known emotional stratagem untouched. It's grade-B entertainment for the children who may like the film's exhibition of cat-teasing and man-mauling. . . The jumble of story twists, one more obvious than the other, vie with hackneyed situations to make the production an oldtime serial holiday."

— + Variety p16 Ag 5 '36

"Satisfactory B picture that could have afforded much more entertainment if another ending could have been fashioned. . . Picture contains a lot of strong meat for most audiences, has its share of suspense and thrills. Picture will please the [children], should do fairly well as a dueler."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 1 '36

BIG NOISE. Warner 57min Je 27 '36

Players: Guy Kibbee, Warren Hull, Alma Lloyd, Dick Foran

Director: Frank McDonald

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y and C: no."

Christian Century p999 J1 15 '36

"[It is a] well-produced but quite unoriginal film . . . yet another example of the lack of character and individuality accorded to younger actors, [who] have only to look young and register attraction for each other, while all the brains and personality are handed over to the older generation. It would have been pleasant to see a youthful couple who had more than sex appeal to recommend them. Suitability: family." D. E. B.

+ — Mo Film Bul p118 Jl '36

"This comedy drama of romance and racketeers manages to be deeply amusing. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Jl 2 '36

"A: fairly breezy satirical comedy; Y: possible; C: uninteresting."

Parents' M p34 Jl '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Je 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Summer brands of entertainment appear to be with us again. . . . Guy Kibbee plays another of his homespun roles with characteristic and rustic humor, enacting the part of a retired millionaire. Lightweight and trite as the story is, the naturalness of the performance and the comedy lines keep it from being a bore, although not from being just a mediocre production." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p6 Jl 6 '36

"Guy Kibbee's usually animate countenance bears distinct signs of stoical resignation in this platitudinous comedy. . . . 'The Big Noise' seems to have been produced solely as a field day for this amiable and always amusing bulwark of the Warner stock company. But if this is to be his reward for years of yeoman service we are inclined to commiserate with Mr. Kibbee, who is one of the cinema's grand personalities and is deserving of better things." T.M.P.

+ — N Y Times p18 Jl 4 '36

"'The Big Noise' . . . makes for light, pleasant and satisfactory midsummer entertainment." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p19 Jl 8 '36

"Without the presence of Guy Kibbee 'The Big Noise' would be something in the nature of that inelegant razzoo known as the Bronx Cheer. With his faculty for comedy the picture, despite its slim story silhouette, is mild entertainment notched for those who fervently believe that life begins after sixty." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p12 Je 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It will make a satisfactory filler on a double bill with a heavy drama, but will find it tough going as a single. . . . Too slowly paced at the introduction and tires before the laughs begin to come."

+ — Variety p15 Jl 8 '36

BLACKMAILER. Columbia 66min Jl 10 '36

Players: William Gargan. Florence Rice. H. B. Warner. Nana Bryant

Director: Gordon Wiles

"When a blackmailer becomes the unwelcome and uninvited guest at a dinner party little does he realize the fate that awaits him." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good material poorly handled. General patronage."

+ — Nat Legion of Decency Jl 23 '36

"The nonsense of the detectives is so overdone that a good mystery plot is almost lost in a series of farcical antics and comments. Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A cellar-position choice for a dull evening."

— Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fans who go for murder mysteries will get a moderate amount of satisfaction from this one. Although it's just a run of the mill production, it manages to hold suspense and maintain interest."

+ — Film Daily p7 Jl 23 '36

"The title gives no indication whatever of the character of the production, which appears suitable for the smaller situations chiefly. . . . The mystery is almost forgotten as comedy, which at times descends to the point of downright nonsense, holds sway."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 Jl 8 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p34 Ag 1 '36

"It provides sufficient chuckles for warm weather audiences who may laugh at the sheer absurdities. Only when it strives to become serious does 'Blackmailer' become harrowing. But even as farce verging on light burlesque this will get by only in dual fields. If by mistake it is billed as a mystery chiller, patrons will be disappointed because the film is anything but that. . . . Exhibitors will have to overlook most of the press book on this picture and plug it entirely as a farce comedy."

+ — Variety p14 Jl 29 '36

BLIND GIRL OF SORRENTO. Nuovo Mondo 72min Ag 1 '36

Players: Dria Paola. Dino di Luca. Anna Magnani. Mario Steni

Director: Nunzio Malasomma

Dialogue film produced in Italy with English sub-titles. Based on a novel La Cieca di Sorrento by Francesco Mastriani. "The action begins in 1834 with the robbery and murder of the mother of little Beatrice Rionero by Ernesto Basileo, a young lawyer who gambles. The shock of seeing her mother choked to death makes the child blind. Circumstantial evidence sends to the gallows Ferdinando Baldieri, a nobleman and revolutionary leader, who dies rather than betray his comrades by revealing where he was on the fatal night." (N Y Times)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Although not one of the outstanding Italian films, this is a fair melodrama, judged by standards for Continental productions. . . . These Italian talkies are not yet up to Hollywood standards. This one, however, is honestly and simply enacted by a good-looking cast. If it has neither subtlety nor humor, then neither has it vulgarity nor a straining after false effects." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p17 Ag 4 '36

"[It] gives an interesting picture of customs and life in Naples during the reign of the notorious 'King Bomba.' It also confirms the technical advances being made by the Italian film producers. Done strictly in period, both in setting and the romantic style of acting, the appealing old melodrama moves along smoothly from one tense situation to another, arriving at the inevitable dénouement in a way likely to surprise persons unfamiliar with the novel." H. T. S.

+ — N Y Times p11 Ag 3 '36

BLIND GIRL OF SORRENTO—ContinuedTrade Paper Reviews*

"[It is an] entertaining production. . . Picture has been efficiently handled technically and is well acted."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 4 '36

"This latest importation is an entertaining, well-produced drama. The use of English subtitles makes for ready understanding of the story, and yet, not strikingly outstanding, it is perhaps suited only to audiences who understand the Italian language."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 Ag 7 '36

"Yarn is strong on melodrama of the ultra-heavy sort, and when turned into celluloid additionally takes on costume aspects. Under Malasomma's direction, coupled with a nifty casting and acting job, the net results look nicely saleable in the U. S. Italian market. Beyond that there aren't any chances."

+ Variety p17 Ag 5 '36

BORDER FLIGHT. Paramount 65min My 15 '36

Players: Frances Farmer, John Howard, Roscoe Karns, Robert Cummings

Director: Otho Lovering

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p115 Jl '36

"A and Y: run-of-the-mill air drama with spectacular finish; C: thrilling."

Parents' M p34 Jl '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"All screen aviators annoy me because they are so heroic, and I am so cowardly. . . The aviator heroics in 'Border Flight' are especially irritating. . . 'Border Flight' has many other irritations, such as its repetition of the ancient Cagney-O'Brien, McLaglen-Edmund Lowe act—two guys pretending to hate each other for six reels and then coming out with a disgusting burst of nobility and affection." Don Herold

— Life p28 Ag '36

"A story of aviation smuggling and Coast Guard romance, 'Border Flight' is the heir to the oldtime Western, replete with danger and desperadoes. Moving rapidly across the screen, its colorful exploits include some amazing glimpses of planes shot down in the air, burning ships, and stunting, which make for breathless, if not always believable, entertainment. . . But in substance the piece offers little more than the old Hoot Gibsons or Tom Mixes."

Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 Je 22 '36

"With all due respect to the Coast Guard, which probably will be as upset about some phases of 'Border Flight' as we were, we hope that this will be the last of the 'service' films. It seems that, no matter which branch of the government Hollywood tackles, it always is stumbling upon one patriot and one chap who thinks the uniform is so much spinach. . . Note 'Border Flight' as just another program picture." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p22 Je 22 '36

"Although the central idea of 'Border Flight,' has good possibilities for routine melodramatic entertainment, the writing and direction are unsteady. If the piece were competently written, patrons might be fairly well served. But as it stands now the film is an infantile account of the doings of the men who fly in the service of the Coast Guard." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p8 Je 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Highlights of this production are a number of thrilling air stunts performed in the course of a story dealing with the Coast Guard and its pursuit of a gang of fur smugglers. Otherwise the story has the familiar ingredients of service films. . . Producer A. M. Botsford, Supervisor Dario Faralla and Director Otho Lovering got the most out of the limited possibilities of the story."

+ — Film Daily p7 Je 23 '36

"Producer A. M. Botsford used a familiar theme in this story of the aerial activities of the U. S. Coast Guard, but followed it well in providing a good cast, good direction and a fast-moving script. Result is an action film that can be sold for nice results in the duals, production not being heavy enough to stand on its own in the keys."

+ Variety p29 Je 24 '36

BORDER PATROLMAN. 20th century-Fox 60min Jl 3 '36

Players: George O'Brien, Polly Ann Young, William P. Carleton, Roy Mason

Director: David Howard

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 16 '36

"A and Y: fairly amusing taming of a fractious female; C: good Western."

Parents' M p31 S '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

N Y Times p11 Je 29 '36

"Although 'Border Patrolman' is not up to the standard of 'The Lawless Nineties,' it has plenty of gun play, fast riding and thrilling moments in it to satisfy none-too-particular addicts of this sort of entertainment. . . There is plenty that is funny in the film and plenty that is exciting, but not enough to make it Grade A entertainment of its kind." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p17 Je 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Characterized by a sense of restraint and good taste seldom found in action pictures, yet losing none of its appeal to the dyed-in-the-wool Western fan, this film starring George O'Brien, turns out to be highly satisfactory. Family."

+ Box Office p75 Je 27 '36

"The picture should appeal to the army of O'Brien fans and should hold its own on most any program. The piece is handled in a fresh, breezy manner. Built on the lines of O'Brien's 'Cowboy Millionaire,' it should appeal to the same type of audience. O'Brien's character is a very likeable one and he does his work in fine style."

+ Film Daily p7 Je 20 '36

"Fresh story angles, a smart note of modernity and a class production put this last of the George O'Brien Westerns under his 20th Century-Fox contract well to the top. It can safely be welcomed to almost any double bill."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 17 '36

"A clean, wholesome picture throughout, it is directed by David Howard with dexterity, assuring audiences plenty of exciting entertainment and showmen many easily adaptable exploitation leads."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Je 18 '36

"Estimate: high rating."

+ Phila Exhibitor p69 Jl 1 '36

"The title stamps this one as one of those outdoor cop things from which certain audiences shy. Actually, 'Border Patrolman' is a romantic piece which little more than employs desert country for atmosphere. It is less along the lines of Westerns than the great majority and George O'Brien isn't in the 10-gallon hat all the way. . . Picture, obviously pointed for dualers in the making, should hold up its half of the bill all right. . . The script is away above the average for outdoor dramas and David Howard's direction reduces it to very smooth telling on the screen."

+ Variety p23 Jl 1 '36

"With the aid of expert work in every department, George O'Brien can well be proud of his farewell picture for the 20th-Fox organization after more than fourteen years association with it. One who has followed O'Brien's career on the screen can feel that he has made a sincere effort to top all his previous pictures. Balance of the cast and the way production was handled throughout match his effort, resulting in exceptionally fine entertainment for any class of audience."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 17 '36

BRIDE WALKS OUT. RKO 73min Jl 10 '36

Players: Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond, Robert Young, Helen Broderick, Ned Sparks

Director: Leigh Jason

"The plot concerns a working girl who cannot make up her mind to stop work when she marries. She is finally swept off her feet by a young chap earning $35 per. He is willing to postpone the romance attendant to marriage until his earnings increase. She tries to unite the two ends of the troublesome cost of living, fails in the attempt and secretly returns to work. When he learns of her deception, they quarrel and separate. In the background is a wealthy friend who proposes marriage, but the bride returns to her love on a small salary."

Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: poor; Y: hardly; C: no."

Christian Century p1023 Jl 15 '36

"Good-mature." DAR

+ Fox W Coast Bul Jl 11 '36

"Adults & young people." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Very light entertainment for those easily satisfied. Adults: matter of taste; family: no; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A stormy little domestic comedy with a good deal of wise-cracking, some amusing situations and a rather high alcoholic content. Fairly entertaining for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A clever readjustment bringing a happy ending, is unfortunately marred by too many drinking sequences, and what might have been a very good social drama has become a mature melodrama. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Jl 18 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Jl 1 '36

"Most of the humor, if such it may be called, is supplied by a repulsive-looking furniture-agent and a series of dizzy drunken scenes in which the bride, her millionaire admirer and even the firm-minded husband participate at frequent intervals. Ned Sparks and Helen Broderick, entered to supply more comedy, are ineffectual in raising the entertainment value to an acceptable level. Adolescents, 12-16: poor; children, 8-12: obviously no."

— Motion Pict R Jl '36

"An excellent cast and clever repartee assist materially in making of an improbable story and hackneyed theme a social comedy which proves pleasant entertainment. . . Excessive drinking. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 8 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 16 '36

"A: unconvincing if entertaining; Y: poor; C: no interest."

Parents' M p31 S '36

"Very light entertainment for those easily satisfied. Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"[It is] a bright comedy. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Jl 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"['The Bride Walks Out'] impressed me as being a sorry affair, a sad sacrifice of the ability and charm of Barbara Stanwyck and the established talents of the rest of the cast. . . Roy Hunt's photography, particularly in some close-ups, is of high quality, but, on the whole, the picture is a sorry piece of entertainment."

— Hollywood Spec p19 Jl 4 '36

"One of the wittiest pieces of the season, 'The Bride Walks Out' romps merrily through the series of emotional entanglements that befall a struggling young married couple. Paced by Robert Young, who completely steals the show from its stars, Barbara Stanwyck and Gene Raymond, the picture sprints with a delightful abandon that abounds in easy laughter. . . Though he gives this gay comedy its sprightliest moments, Robert Young throws the story away off balance. For his characterization has so much more intelligence and charm than the dull worthiness of Gene Raymond's that the intended happy ending is really just an acquiescence to movie convention." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p28 Ag 8 '36

"The marital psychologies in 'The Bride Walks Out' are about as subtle as a stuffed club, but there are good comedy lines to keep you in the theatre. . . You've seen this a million times on the screen, but they keep on making it, and folks keep writing me asking me why I am so dyspeptic regarding the cinema. Because I have judgment, is the answer. . . But, wait. Accompanying this inane mush, is some of the dandiest comedy in a long while—chipped in by Ned Sparks and Helen Broderick (there's a team!) and Robert Young." Don Herold

+ — Life p31 S '36

"This orgy of true love, piled on top of the familiar and historic comedy devices of the rest of the plot, proved, I thought, a bit too tough even for the summer season. Miss Barbara Stanwyck, as the harried bride, plays with her customary directness and sincerity, if without any notable comedy skill. Mr. Raymond, I regret to say, is still Mr. Raymond, while Mr. Young as an amiable alcoholic menace has a few pleasant moments. Miss Broderick and Mr. Sparks as two veterans of a long-time matrimonial feud supply the entertaining moments of a feeble farce." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p12 Jl 10 '36

"'The Bride Walks Out' is a feather-light romance with almost no plot, but plenty of laughs. It belongs to the 'She Married Her Boss' school, a thoroughly incredible and amusing yarn. Barbara Stanwyck, dramatic actress whose excellent work is usually dismissed with the description 'sincere,' here steps out into comedy and gets along nicely, too." Eileen Creelman

BRIDE WALKS OUT—Continued

+ N Y Sun p7 J1 10 '36

"A noisy little summer item. . . While the picture is not particularly distinguished, it does provide a workout for Barbara Stanwyck . . . and it gives Robert Young a chance to wear becoming high hats and to spend a great deal of stage money in whimsical fashion." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p15 J1 10 '36

"In case you aren't too particular about your screen entertainment on these sultry mid-summer days you should find attending 'The Bride Walks Out' a reasonably diverting way to pass an hour or so." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p25 J1 15 '36

"Barbara Stanwyck is the dreadfully average American girl in 'The Bride Walks Out.' Nothing could be more inconsiderable than this little effort, which is relieved only by the acidulous humor of Helen Broderick and Ned Sparks." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p49 J1 18 '36

"'The Bride Walks Out' but the audience won't and if you fail to walk in to the theater showing this you'll miss one of the most satisfactory of the season's romantic comedies. . . A great deal of the merit is due to Leigh Jason. His touch is deft, is discernible in the whip-like timing of the gags, in the terse flicks of brilliant hilarity. Not a big picture but an extremely funny one." Herb Sterne

+ Script p12 J1 11 '36

"Cheers, the few we can muster for such an occasion, go unreservedly to those valiant players whose names will not appear on the marquee, but whose inherent buoyancy gives 'The Bride Walks Out' moments of true comedy. Miss Helen Broderick, and the Messrs. Robert Young and Ned Sparks set about, with welcome high jinks, to interrupt the marital setup as established by Mr. Raymond and Miss Stanwyck. If they didn't everybody would walk out."

Stage p120 Ag '36

"The moving picture business—whether because producers feel that the season will excuse shortcomings or diminish protests—has long manufactured a staple product known as 'summer fare.' 'The Bride Walks Out' is a fair sample of it, one of the minor discomforts of hot weather."

— Time p36 J1 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Crammed full of bright lines and uproarious gags which are directed with finesse, this is one of the smartest comedies turned out by Hollywood in many a moon. It is sophisticated, but just enough to make it a winner with every type of audience, and it should account for itself substantially at the box-office. Family."

+ Box Office p31 J1 18 '36

"Sprightly comedy, well directed and acted, which should please all types of audiences."

+ Film Daily p8 J1 1 '36

"Pure unadulterated audience from beginning to end, 'The Bride Walks Out' is just what the doctor ordered for vacation box offices. It is delightful romantic farce, making little sense, but packing a full quota of honestly obtained laughs. Its very innocuousness guarantees that it will be roundly enjoyed by any house anywhere. . . The basic plot is lightweight and motivations of central characters somewhat confused. But farce comedies, like gift horses, need never be examined too closely. It is in the development of the story with bright dialogue and clever situations that the writing job is superior."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 Je 27 '36

"As whimsical farce, this one relies on dialogue for the most part to sustain situations which would otherwise fall somewhat short. Intelligent cutting will speed up the tempo and heighten the comedy, dramatic and entertainment values. The film rates as only fair, with the cast names of Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond, Robert Young and Ned Sparks the only outstanding exhibition angles."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Je 29 '36

"Estimate: fair."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 J1 15 '36

"Mark this one down for fair business, if [it gets] some help on the selling end. . . What helps the picture a lot is fine team-work along comedy lines by Helen Broderick and Ned Sparks, both doing their usual characterizations."

+ Variety p31 J1 15 '36

"It's tough to make entertainment out of [this story] but P. J. Wolfson and Philip G. Epstein have contributed a smart screen play with their dialog making the difference between a dud and a picture that has a chance to do good business. Edward Small has cast the picture with a number of marquee names. Direction by Leigh Jason is expert, giving the comedy a pace that never lags."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 27 '36

BULLDOG EDITION. Republic 58min S 20 '36

Players: Ray Walker. Evalyn Knapp. Regis Toomey. Cy Kendall

Director: Charles Lamont

"Yarn is constructed on the premise of a circulation war between two rival newspapers. One paper is stealing all the sales until racketeering raises its ugly head and muscles in on the weaker sheet." Variety (Hollywood)

Trade Paper Reviews

"Melodramatic and slightly unbelievable, this newspaper-gangster yarn nevertheless possesses its entertaining moments. Family."

+ Box Office p23 S 12 '36

"This one went to the post loaded with intriguing possibilities, most of which, we reluctantly report, were not quite adequately developed. The net result is a fair offering for the twin-bill neighborhood houses."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 5 '36

"Melodrama, romance, comedy, gangsterism and thrill action are included in this different type of newspaper story that has a circulation war for its premise. Supplementing the dominating melodrama is a freshly contrived vein of romantic conflict that establishes the film as acceptable, mature audience entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 S 9 '36

"Built on a threadbare story, aided by some good acting, and decidedly helped by showman-like direction, 'Bulldog Edition' is another double-biller from Republic which should satisfy the neighborhood trade. The picture has action and hokum combined in speedy fashion. Light fare as it is, it should please if spotted on a menu with draw names."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 5 '36

BUNKER BEAN. RKO 65min Je 26 '36

Players: Owen Davis. Jr. Louise Latimer. Robert McWade. Jessie Ralph

Directors: William Hamilton. Edward Killy

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: perhaps; Y: amusing; C: no interest."
Christian Century p999 J1 15 '36

"While built on the premise that 'Action is the soul of progress,' RKO has offered a very slow-moving comedy. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"[It is] obviously designed for less discriminating audiences. Mature: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: mature. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Modernized, but with the basic idea retained, this version of the oft-dramatized Harry Wilson tale is technically well done, but the quaint charm, the original humor, the gentle satire—everything that makes the book a classic of its type, is lacking. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A good lesson in this slow-moving, well-acted picture. Mature—family. Good." DAR

"There are many good comedy situations, although the production drags in spots. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Je 13 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Je 1 '36

"An unpretentious but amusing story. Suitability: family."

+ — Mo Film Bul p116 J1 '36

"A and Y: comedy with good psychology; C: possible."

Parents' M p38 Ag '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Owen Davis, Jr . . . makes 'Bunker Bean' a warmly human and amusing hero in a picture which, while somewhat indifferently produced, has retained much of the comedy of the story. . . . While the picture has not been produced with special care or originality, it offers poignant characterization and hilarious comedy, especially in some of its convulsing lines." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p8 Je 29 '36

"The central rôle affords enviable possibilities for a fine character portrayal and a polished excursion into high comedy, but alas, they seem to be beyond the grasp of Owen Davis, Jr. However, he is credited with a competent surface performance." T. M. P.

N Y Times p21 Je 27 '36

"A moderately amusing little trifle that can be taken or left, depending on one's mood these sultry summer days, it offers Owen Davis, Jr., an actor not unknown to Broadway stage audiences, in the title role. . . . 'Indifferent' best describes 'Bunker Bean.'" William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p10 Je 29 '36

"Harry Leon Wilson can't be blamed for the fact that since he wrote his novel, the theme of the turning worm has been paraphrased in countless domestic comedies. . . . But RKO can be censured for assuming that such familiar material makes good screen fare. And the scribes who turned out the screen play can be reproached for furnishing the audiences with no surprises, endowing their story with no fresh treatment." Molly Lewin

+ — Script p8 Je 27 '36

"Admirers of Harry Leon Wilson's famed 'Merton of the Movies' will find in Wilson's 'Bunker Bean' another introvert so thoroughly frustrated that his past neglect by picture-makers seems inexplicable. . . . Possibly because of its unimportant cast and modest aspirations, 'Bunker Bean' is practically perfect hot-weather entertainment."

+ Time p48 J1 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Made in '18 by Paramount and in '25 by Warner Brothers, the story now is given voice by Radio with decidedly happy results. With no names or marquee draw it is probable that the present version will not get all it deserves, but it will be in the money where word of mouth advertising can spread the tidings, and it will make a great backer-upper for a feature with name draw but a poor story when coupled on a double bill. It will make good with those who see it, for lack of names does not mean absence of acting and story value."

+ Variety p12 J1 1 '36

C

CAIN AND MABEL. Warner 92min S 26 '36

Players: Marion Davies, Clark Gable, Roscoe Karns, Allen Jenkins, David Carlyle, Walter Catlett

Director: Lloyd Bacon

Dance director: Bobby Connolly

Music and lyrics: Harry Warren, Al Dubin

Music director: Leo F. Forbstein

Based on a short story of same title by H. C. Witwer. "The story tells of a love affair between a musical comedy queen and a prizefighter, an affair manufactured for publicity purposes by the girl's press agent. The object is not matrimony but boxoffice, for the girl's show hasn't caught on and the fighter, although champion, isn't cashing in. Of course, the participants begin by hating each other, slowly to fall in love and when they plan a secret elopement, have to be separated by more publicity." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Novel song numbers, dance sequences and lots of laughs make this an entertaining film. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency S 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Writing a screen play for a Marion Davies picture presents the interesting problem of keeping the acting demands of her role within the somewhat limited range of her acting ability. The problem was solved in the case of 'Cain and Mabel' by throwing the story to the secondary characters, using Marion principally for decorative purposes and Clark Gable merely as something for her to quarrel with. The result of this sidestepping technique and Lloyd Bacon's meritorious direction is that we have three outstanding performances which in themselves make the picture worth seeing if you can not find anything better to do. Walter Catlett, Roscoe Karns and Allen Jenkins supply the three performances. . . . A distressing feature of the production is its senseless parade of close-ups. Every time Marion speaks she is shown in a close-up which eliminates all the rest of the composition of what otherwise could be a pictorially attractive scene."

+ — Hollywood Spec p7 Ag 29 '36

"That the musical star and the fighter hate each other at first is just one more bromide in a picture constructed entirely of clichés. This hate turns to love, just as you knew it would." (1 star) Beverly Hills

Liberty p36 S 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Packing a dynamite-laden punch in every reel and exhibiting championship form in scripting, directing, acting and production, this is a cinch to knock the box office blues for the proverbial loop. Picture has everything—except a dull moment. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 29 '36

CAIN AND MABEL—Continued

"By far the best for Marion Davies in many a day, and Clark Gable never steps out of a role which was made to order. . . The whole thing [is] fine and beautifully photographed." L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 S '36

"Packed with entertainment for all types of audiences, 'Cain and Mabel' is ticketed for the sure-fire hit class. It is easily the most amusing vehicle in which Marion Davies has recently appeared. And don't overlook the sock box-office of Clark Gable, her co-star. For eye and ear, there are two gorgeous numbers superbly staged by Bobby Connolly."

+ Motion Picture Reporter p3 Ag 7 '36

"[It] has been given a lavish production surmounting all rivals in sheer glamour. Several musical numbers staged by Bobby Connolly probably have never been surpassed. . . Audiences who appreciate production will appreciate this."

Motion Pict Daily p6 Ag 17 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p41 S 1 '36

"'Cain and Mabel,' while not without considerable entertainment merit as a clashing character comedy [with] moments of high hilarity, is not up to the best Marion Davies picture standard nor the better Clark Gable exhibits. Story is lean, resting heavily upon the bickering lines, and performances are pretty mechanical, with lack of verve and spirit to give it persuasive warmth and arresting human quality. Picture will need benefit of every exploitation expedient and tom-tomming of Gable name to pump up the box office traffic."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 15 '36

CAPTAIN'S KID. Warner-First national 68min
O 31 '36

Players: May Robson. Sybil Jason. Guy Kibbee. Jane Bryan. Fred Lawrence

Director: Nick Grinde

"[A] simple old Yankee skipper has a gift for all stories with which he entertains the devoted Sybil. But Sybil has a terrifying memory as well as a knack for mischief and when the old man gets into trouble over the shooting of a crook in self-defense she unwittingly turns the tall stories against him, almost to his undoing." Hollywood Reporter

Trade Paper Reviews

"Over-familiar hokum is the main ingredient of this comedy drama of the New England coast. Suitable for the neighborhood trade, it will save itself there by good individual performances and a recurrent thread of homespun humor. The names of Guy Kibbee, May Robson and possibly little Sybil Jason will help with the family clientele, but nothing startling can be expected."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 9 '36

"Comedy and drama more artificial than homespun is this film's principal motivation. Despite its unpretentious, unimpressive and never-better-than-average quality, it has some natural humor that is gayly exciting in spots, endowing the picture with considerable amusement value. The romantic angle which involves Jane Bryan and Fred Lawrence, both newcomers, is dragged in in such a manner as to appear generally irrelevant to the main theme and as a result is hardly noticeable."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 S 10 '36

"Warners has churned out another class B grinder. Bolstered by some expert acting and aided by isolated spots of good dialog, the picture never reaches further than the class trade at which it is pointed. Containing all the tricks known to the business, including the chase, the picture, in its present state, is a conglomerate jumble and takes at least three reels to get into the meat of its theme. . . As a program double biller, 'The Captain's Kid' will fill, but certainly will not draw any coin in the till unless teamed with a picture that can act as the magnet."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 9 '36

CASE OF THE VELVET CLAWS. Warner
62min Ag 15 '36

Players: Warren William. Claire Dodd. Winifred Shaw. Gordon Elliott

Director: William Clemens

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Another Perry Mason murder mystery which moves so fast that many of its absurdities do not become apparent until the lights have gone up."

Christian Science Monitor p17 S 5 '36

"Improbability, in films of this type, rears its head in every scene, but to happy and ingenuous film-goers such lapses are no impediment to the enjoyment of the exciting progress of the story. No fare for cavilling sophistication, 'The Case of the Velvet Claws' is brave and exciting stuff for those who are fortunate enough to be able to accept illusion at its face value." Lucius Beebe

N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 29 '36

N Y Times p16 Ag 29 '36

"How Perry [solves the murder] frankly, is a little bit confusing to this reviewer, who had difficulty trying to piece together all the loose ends. . . Though far from the best of the Perry Mason films, 'The Case of the Velvet Claws' is just about thrilling and amusing enough to taper off the dull summer season." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p13 Ag 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Largely because it has been pepped up with comedy material, this latest in the series of murder melodramas results in generally satisfying entertainment for the followers of the 'guess who did it?' mysteries. The story itself is just another routine setup designed to conceal the identity of the culprit until the finish, and in this case the denouement is somewhat of a neat surprise."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 29 '36

"Latest of the Perry Mason [mysteries] goes wackier with every reel. It promises a fair share of entertainment once the onlooker gets into the spirit of the thing and gives up all expectation of seeing sense blended with credibility. Past vogue of the series should be sufficient to make 'The Case of the Velvet Claws' fairly attractive on a double setup. While the narrative proves a jumble of farfetched situations and the dialog frequently takes to nonsensical gibberish, there is nothing wrong with the pace of the production."

+ Variety p21 S 2 '36

(*) CHANGING OF THE GUARD. Warner
20min Je 6 '36

Players: Sybil Jason. Halliwell Hobbes. Sidney Bracey

Director: Bobby Connolly

Produced in Technicolor. An old man tells his grand-daughter his memories of his army life.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A beautiful and educational film."

+ Motion Pict R J1 '36

"A brilliant color showing of drilling and dancing. Excellent. Family & junior matinee."
 + + Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Another production of which Warners have reason to be proud. . . Here we have color where it belongs, and just about enough of it for one evening's entertainment in a picture house. . . 'Changing of the Guard' is high class entertainment. . . The thrill of the swirl of bagpipes runs through it, the color is excellent and the acting of high quality. . . It is a production that will dignify any program."
 + Hollywood Spec p13 Je 20 '36

"The color is sumptuous, particularly in the banquet scenes. The officers are dressed in red mess jackets, the table is aglow with candlelight. . . Here's something that couldn't be as thrilling in black and white. . . Duke Green's camerawork is sheer 100 per cent."
 + Script p12 Je 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Sybil Jason performs in the military formations and sings a specially arranged version of 'Grenadiers' just as well as her diminutive competitor [Shirley Temple]."
 Variety p19 Ag 12 '36

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE RACE TRACK.

20th century-Fox 70min Ag 21 '36

Players: Warner Oland. Keye Luke. Helen Wood. Alan Dinehart. Gavin Muir. Gloria Roy. Frankie Darro

Director: H. Bruce Humberstone

The film is based on the character Charlie Chan created by Earl Derr Biggers. "We find Chan in Honolulu. His friend, a racing stable owner in Australia, is the victim of foul racing. On his way to meet Chan, he is murdered. There are several plausible suspects, but Chan, as usual, finds the one the audience least suspects." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: good of kind; C: probably good."
 Christian Century p1175 S 2 '36

"Excellent entertainment for the entire family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"It is alternately spotted with intense dramatic action and monotonous sage sayings of Charlie Chan. Adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"These Charlie Chan mystery films are among the best of their kind, full of swift movement, humor, suspense, and thrills. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Absence of gruesome details makes this film good entertainment for family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Charlie's deductions bring results, with a big surprise which completes a detective job which will prove good entertainment for those with a penchant for that type of picture. Adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
 + Fox W Coast Bul J1 25 '36

"One of the best of this series, fast moving and consistent. . . Well produced and directed. Family."
 + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
 J1 15 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

"Family."

Jt Estimates J1 15 '36

"The star is charming and delightful as ever and his quaint epigrams continue to amuse while his clever sleuthing maintains suspense and interest throughout. Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 15 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 30 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"A good deal of novelty in this Charlie Chan exploit with a mystery that is likely to keep people guessing. Family."
 + Wkly Guide Ag 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"Did you ever stop to think that the screen has but two character institutions—Charlie Chaplin's tramp and Warner Oland's Chinese detective? Both, apparently, could go on forever. I do not recall a 'Chan' story that was notable as an example of screen writing, but I can not recall a 'Chan' picture which did not entertain me. . . The thing that counts is that the picture is good entertainment chiefly because of Oland's always excellent performance."

+ Hollywood Spec p7 J1 18 '36

"There are a multitude of clues, and the surprise climax is based on reasoning that plays fair with the audience, though only the sharpest of fans will be able to foretell the ending. Warner Oland is given able support by Keye Luke, who plays his enthusiastic but blundering son." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills
 Liberty p37 Ag 29 '36

"'Charlie Chan at the Race Track' unfortunately, is not one of the better Chan thrillers. Its methods are far-fetched, its conclusions fairly obvious. Mr. Chan can't do better than this; but his studio can. This film must have been dashed off in a few days between more cherished productions. . . [His] is, as indeed it always is, a polished performance. But not even a Warner Oland, not even a Charlie Chan can carry an entire picture by himself." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p17 Ag 17 '36

"[It is a] wholesome film document. . . We say 'wholesome' because the film follows Hollywood's latest adaption from Greek tragedy, dictated for all we know by the Hays Office, of having its murders done offstage somewhere. You may have noticed that the clutching hand has become a cinematic archaism, that no longer do daggers descend from crannies in haunted walls and that the death rattle has unaccountably been replaced in pictures by the radio news flash and the newspaper headline." J. T. M.

N Y Times p6 Ag 15 '36

"Although [it] is by no means one of the friendly Chinese detective's greatest exploits, it is, in a quiet, definitely minor way, passable entertainment. And that, I fear, is pretty nearly the best—indeed, better than the best—that I can say for it. If you are a Chan admirer—and who isn't—you should find considerable minor pleasure in watching this great cinema gumshoe." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p11a Ag 17 '36

"Devotees of this sleuth's past screen adventures will find the current exhibit a soupcou superior to most of the series, due to H. Bruce Humberstone's efficient handling of plot and race track atmosphere." Herb Sterne

+ Script p11 Ag 22 '36

"'Charlie Chan at the Race Track' is the twelfth and one of the best assignments which that famed family man and sleuth Charlie Chan (Warner Oland) has received."

+ Time p44 Ag 17 '36

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE RACE TRACK— Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"Charlie Chan scores again. With an abundance of all the elements that go to make up a tip-top mystery story, plus the polished performances of Warner Oland, Keye Luke, and G. P. Huntley, Jr., this picture qualifies as Chan's best effort in his current series. Family."

+ Box Office p31 J1 18 '36

"The latest of the 'Charlie Chans' is one of the best in the entire series. It makes grand entertainment with its mystery, comedy and clever talk. With the race track as the scene of action, the layout is an interesting one. The identity of the killer and his motives are revealed at the very end and with a well developed build up, the piece holds one every foot of the way. Warner Oland gives his usual splendid characterization, but the real joy of the picture is Keye Luke as his impetuous son."

+ Film Daily p11 J1 14 '36

"A grand Charlie Chan, with Warner Oland at his very best, this tops the series to date with a finished product that will make a lot of extra coin at the box office. Chan is consistently excellent, but here, in a story that fairly bristles with breathless excitement, he emerges a little more polished, more believable and more entertaining. It is certain to click not only in the recognized Chan spots but in many a class A house where an excellent entertaining second feature is needed."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 J1 10 '36

"Skulduggery at the races, with millions to win or lose keeps the resourceful Charlie Chan busy in this close knit comedy thriller, which will be rated high by the Chan addicts."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 J1 9 '36

"The most recent addition to the Chan sleuth pictures is the happiest of the last several. Warner Oland, at his best, has a fairly credible story, slick direction, even support and fast tempo. It will please the Chan fans and should satisfy others who go for crime-detective bafflers."

+ Variety p16 Ag 19 '36

"Topnotch thriller of the race track... 'Charlie Chan at the Race Track' is earmarked for substantial grosses in all spots... Warner Oland does his usual excellent characterization as the Chinese detective. Keye Luke amuses with his antics and finesse in handling the clever dialog."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 8 '36

CHINA CLIPPER. Warner-First national 85min
Ag 22 '36

Players: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts,
Ross Alexander, Humphrey Bogart,
Henry B. Walthall

Director: Raymond Enright

"A dramatization of the gradual development of the Sea Plane culminating in a colorful version of the Trans-Pacific flight of Pan-American's great flying boat." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: fine of kind; C: exciting but good."
Christian Century p1175 S 2 '36

"This picture which follows closely the development of Pan American Airways is entertaining, educational, and has universal appeal because of its timely plot. Adults, family, 14-18, 8-14: excellent." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This lacks the personal drama of 'Ceiling Zero' but is every bit as thrilling and will undoubtedly find general popularity... The picture is excellently directed, photography fascinating, and cast admirably selected. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A stirring history of the development of aviation, stressing the courage and high purpose which actuated the pioneers of the air. A thrilling and up-lifting family picture." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This is a production all will enjoy. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ag 15 '36

"This picture engrossing in its entertainment value, merits wide acclaim."
+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 5 '36

"Family. Best of the month."
+ + Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"Thrilling and interesting is this absorbing picture. The entire cast is noteworthy for a fine performance but particularly fine are the portrayals of Pat O'Brien, Ross Alexander, and H. B. Walthall. Family & junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 5 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Ag 13 '36

"Family. Outstanding."
+ + Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"A matter-of-fact story, in which lies its strength, with the thrills of actuality. Suggested for schools and libraries. Family-junior."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 15 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham
Commonweal p467 S 11 '36

"Inspired by the commencement recently of regular air-passenger service between the United States and China, 'China Clipper' reaches the screen with far more success than I awaited, the greatest credit for this going to its director, Raymond Enright. So intelligently, so sincerely has he treated the material provided him, so human has he made all characters, so real and engrossing each situation, so deftly has he handled the elements of drama, romance and humor that the picture is completely satisfying and ranks with the most notable of recent months. It has much artistic merit and throughout is the possessor of an air of authenticity." Alan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p9 Ag 15 '36

"'China Clipper' is a rather hysterical, spasmodically exciting fabrication... Padded with stock shots of flying and transportation, the picture swings along at a neat clip and climbs to a fairly engrossing peak, though it is never quite as tingling as the tense actors would like to have you believe." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p46 S 19 '36

"Up to now Hollywood's genuflections before the modern giants of transport have been fumbling and anemic... The Warner manufacturers, accustomed to fly-fishing screen stories out of present-day events and facts, do better with an obeisance to the China Clipper, than did their breathless rivals... For all that the romance is not a precisely new plot and that the great flying boats are made to do things they have not yet been able to do, 'China Clipper' is a forthright, interesting, often pictorially lovely motion-picture on an exciting modern theme."

+ Lit Digest p24 Ag 22 '36

"Some good aerial shots and the beautiful Frisco-Honolulu plane. The flesh and blood principals are obvious props for the plane's magnificent performance."

New Theatre p23 S '36

"I am afraid that I must be captious enough to suggest that the latest aviation photoplay is a greater tribute to the press agents of the Pan-American Airlines than it is to the men who produced it. There is a line somewhere in the picture wherein one of the players remarks with a touch of bitterness, 'We're all tired and we're getting nowhere.' I suspect that, despite some interesting, if familiar, air scenes and several good performances by the men of the cast, the line can be aptly applied to the film. . . It seems to me that the author of the story might have made its single-minded hero [Pat O'Brien] a ruthless fellow without making him something of a heel, too. . . Miss Beverly Roberts continues to display a minimum of talent as the heroine." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ag 12 '36

"'China Clipper' is not strictly an educational, a commercial, or a straight melodrama. Rather, it is a combination of all three, with the story always in third place. . . Although complete with hero, heroine and a comic or two, it is still little more than an enlarged educational or, had it used the name of the company which flies the real China Clipper, an unusually good commercial picture. The story doesn't matter much; nor, for that matter, does the acting, which is consistently undistinguished. . . This is a film that will probably interest aviation fans; and Pan-American should certainly, in breathless gratitude, invite all the Warner executives on a round trip to China. It seems a small thanks for the publicity that picture gives its new service." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p18 Ag 12 '36

"The picture deserves a respectful accolade both for its technical accuracy and for its rather astonishing refusal to describe the flying boat's journey in the stock terms of aerial melodrama. . . Lieut. Commander Frank Wead, who wrote the story, and Ray Enright, who directed it, have managed bravely to sustain interest in a narrative which properly has a documentary quality. . . [It is] an entirely creditable film ledger." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 12 '36

"'China Clipper' is one more screen melodrama about aviation. It is far from the best of them. It has its moments of excitement—moments which keep one tingling with suspense—but these come all too infrequently and go away all too soon. . . [This] latest saga of the development of commercial flying is more or less a disappointment. Perhaps it wouldn't have been if we hadn't already had so many similar aviation epics." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p19 Ag 12 '36

"'China Clipper' is a minor treatise on transoceanic flying, which possibly has too much Pat O'Brien in it and not enough planes. There are some nice views, taken from the air, of the harbor of Rio de Janeiro, and at least a fair idea is given you of what sort of trip you will have on the China Clipper itself once its passenger service gets started." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p50 Ag 22 '36

"If the eventual launching of the China Clipper and the hopeful closing incident of a transpacific passenger flight lack verisimilitude, it is not due to any stint of zooming airplane motors, interior sequences in Alameda Airport, shots of the Clipper battling a storm. It is merely because cinema producers have not yet absorbed the lesson that fact is sometimes more salable than fiction and that to present a story like the rise of Pan American Airways in fictional form is not to increase but to destroy its impact, which is [what] happened."

— Time p32 Ag 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A surging saga of commercial aviation's development, this picture will clip along to important money and enthusiastic fan reaction. Family."

+ — Box Office p31 Ag 22 '36

"[It is a] strong box-office attraction combining sure-fire dramatic entertainment with big exploitation possibilities."

+ — Film Daily p9 Ag 12 '36

"Not only on its title, but for sheer, smash entertainment, 'China Clipper' will draw them in to the box office and will satisfy all types of audiences in any spot. Here is a picture that, no matter how critical or technical-minded one may be, still has that box office label stamped across it from start to finish. It is . . . packed solidly with audience appeal. Its showmanship possibilities are unlimited. . . Top this off with a well-written and carefully orchestrated score from Forbstein and you have 'China Clipper'—one of the best general audience pictures that Warners has turned out."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 J1 31 '36

"Splendid team work by director, cast and producer turns this aviation saga into gripping entertainment that should hold any audience. . . Frank Wead's story, while admittedly fiction, may eventually be accepted as the true story of the Clipper, so powerfully is it written."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Ag 6 '36

"Well titled, topical because of the always-present interest in the China Clipper Pacific flights, with star values as well, 'China Clipper' should appeal to all audiences. . . Estimate: good program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p33 Ag 15 '36

"'China Clipper' is an aviation picture without the usual thrills. It fictionizes recent history and places too much stress on the technical phase of flying, with the result that its value as an educational screen document exceeds its entertainment merits. Pat O'Brien is the only cast name with draft, and whether O'Brien is sufficient for complete box office purposes is doubtful."

+ — Variety p16 Ag 19 '36

"With due respect for names in the billing, the plane, the China Clipper, is the star of the picture, and the offering is so shrewdly played as to achieve genuine thrills and emotional throbs. . . Preview audience time after time burst into spontaneous applause as the great plane took off on its maiden flight and proceeded on its trans-Pacific adventure—a reaction which may be expected from almost any audience and which indicates enthusiasm that should register solidly at the box office."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 5 '36

LA CIECA DI SORRENTO. See Blind girl of Sorrento

COUNTERFEIT. Columbia 72min Je 12 '36

Players: Chester Morris, Margot Grahame, Marian Marsh, Lloyd Nolan

Director: Erle C. Kenton

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: strong; C: no." Christian Century p99 J1 15 '36

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul Je 27 '36

"Chester Morris gives a natural, consistent portrayal and he is surrounded by a cast each member of which assists in maintaining a well-rounded whole. The direction is expert and smooth and the suspense is held to the very end. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 22 '36

"A and Y: interesting G-man melodrama; C: mature."

Parents' M p47 Ag '36

COUNTERFEIT—Continued

"Photographed with the evident cooperation of government departments, the production carries an authentic atmosphere that is both entertaining and pleasantly educational. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Strong adult entertainment, this one seeks a somewhat belated appeal through exposing G-men methods of tracking down queer-money makers. . . Although 'Counterfeit,' by stressing the basic plot, might have been made a super, it nevertheless will lend strong support to any double bill." Paul Jacobs

+ — Hollywood Spec p18 J1 4 '36

N Y Times p11 J1 20 '36

"If 'Counterfeit' were the first—or even among the first—of the cycle of screen dramas devoted to the government's war on the underworld the entertainment would be a good deal more thrilling. But it is exciting for a casual mid-summer afternoon or evening in the cinema in spite of the expertly produced sharply-spoken, two-fisted racketeer melodramas that have preceded it." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p20 J1 20 '36

"G-Men not only have to be good detectives but convincing actors as well, if one is to judge by their movie biographies, for the initial guys are invariably expected to masquerade as this, that or t'other. . . B. P. Schulberg has turned out a bang-up programmer and Erle C. Kenton's direction deserves a liberal portion of the credit." Herb Sterne

+ Script p13 J1 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Spectacular exploits of T-men, special agents of the Treasury department, make 'Counterfeit' an actionful screen exhibit but even with the producer resorting to all sorts of excuses for action and suspense, it totals up mildly. Due to lack of box office names and questionable pull of G-men or T-men pictures, accounts will have to exert exploitation pressure to put this one over for moderate results or better. . . In the editing, there hasn't been enough manicuring, with result 'Counterfeit' drags in spots."

— + Variety p34 J1 22 '36

CRAIG'S WIFE. Columbia 75min S 25 '36

Players: Rosalind Russell. John Boles. Billie Burke. Jane Darwell

Director: Dorothy Arzner

Based on the play of the same title by George Kelly. "Realistic, sometimes almost grim, it is a vivid story of the working of a selfish, self-centered woman's warped mind. Loving only her home, seeking always to bend others to her will, she causes unhappiness to relatives and neighbors and finally drives her husband from her side." (Motion Pict Daily)

Trade Paper Reviews

"Essentially a character study, lacking practically all the components of orthodox cinema, the box office fate of this will remain a mystery until the last booking has been checked, depending, as it must, strictly on artistic merit, of which it has plenty. Well-directed, well-acted, handsomely produced, it is a deviation from the run-of-the-mill stuff that we believe will pay off, and on which any exhibitor should take a chance."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 11 '36

"A radical departure from the regular run film merchandise is made here. . . It is a woman's picture. The film places in the hands of exhibitors many things outside of the usual formula. It has personnel angles with which to bid for general adult support. If possible, the film should be seen before being presented to get ideas for stimulating business."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 S 12 '36

"To put so much of general audience appeal into what has been regarded as a play of limited class interest, and to do the job without distorting its essential character, is a token of sound showmanship in Columbia production ranks, a credit to the adapting writer and a fine feather in Dorothy Arzner's directorial cap. Picture may stand alone in the discriminating spots and will complement with distinction on any program."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 11 '36

CRASH DONOVAN. Universal 60min J1 12 '36

Players: Jack Holt. John King. Nan Gray. Ward Bond. Eddie Acuff

Director: William Nigh

"Holt, daredevil motorcycle trick rider in a carnival, meets two old friends, both highway patrolmen, and King's fiancée, Miss Gray. At a holdup in a tavern, King is wounded and Holt spectacularly brings in the gang. He joins the patrol [and] falls in love with Miss Gray, but, realizing she loves King, gives up the thought of her." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y: harmless thriller; C: exciting."

Christian Century p1143 Ag 26 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 23 '36

"A, Y and C: timely story of the training of our motorcycle police."

Parents' M p31 S '36

"[It] includes an excellent description of the organization and training of the police patrol and a timely lesson for motorists on careless driving. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide J1 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Of special interest are episodes showing how the highway police are trained."

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 1 '36

"Considering that the romantic subplot has been carried pleasantly by two newcomers, John King and Nan Gray, and that Eddie Acuff has a comic rôle, we should not be too severe. The picture is lively and undemanding; like peanut brittle and a pulp-paper magazine, it has its time and place." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 10 '36

"No permanent harm to the welfare of the cinema has been accomplished by the production of 'Crash Donovan,' an innocuous little romantic melodrama. . . 'Crash Donovan' is one of those films that you may attend with safety, if you are contemplating a siesta hour on these dog days." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p16 Ag 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Shooting, running fights, and motorcycle stunt riding feature this action-packed drama that will attract the youngsters, and make a good family picture for a double-bill."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 8 '36

"This is a short and fairly snappy affair, with action coming along at a rate that is sufficient to offset most of the story weaknesses. Excellent trouping by Jack Holt also is a big help, and the comedy efforts of Eddie Acuff are another asset."

+ — Film Daily p10 Ag 11 '36

"Strictly program, 'Crash Donovan' is something of a glorification of the motorcycle cop. It abounds with hair-breath chase sequences that bring squeals of delight from the [children], a section of the audience that will doubtless vote it the best picture since the last G-man drama. Adults are likely to be less enthusiastic. It is double bill fare at best. . . . An unprogrammed girl sings a speciality number that should come out, as should the laughter-getting moment when the cops break into song with a 'Hi-Hi-Highway Patrol' march. This may be police custom, but it is ridiculous in a movie."

— + Hollywood Reporter p4 J1 9 '36

"A punch-laden action picture of the duties, dangers and drama of life in the California motorcycle highway police patrol, this should find a ready and highly pleased audience among those who like their films with plenty of speed and action."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p16 J1 10 '36

"Estimate: program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p35 Ag 1 '36

"Jack Holt is the main bulwark of 'Crash Donovan'. . . . He provides the occasional smart moments. . . . Otherwise it's routine . . . for the doubler-uppers."

+ — Variety p19 Ag 12 '36

"As a saga of the state police, any state police throughout the union, this picture will stack up grosses for the family and [juvenile trade] if properly played. It must have exploitation. Jack Holt, the topper does his best, but he can't carry the load."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 9 '36

CRIME OF DR. FORBES. 20th century-Fox
75min J1 17 '36

Players: Gloria Stuart, Robert Kent, J. Edward Bromberg, Sara Haden

Director: George Marshall

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: doubtful; C: no."
Christian Century p1047 J1 29 '36

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Altogether an entertaining if sometimes harrowing picture for adult audiences." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The cast is a very capable one, with J. Edward Bromberg, as the injured surgeon, perhaps a shade better than the others. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Adults." DAR

"The highest standards of human relations and behavior dominate the entire film. Aside from harrowing scenes which strengthen the motivation, the picture is satisfying, artistically and ethically. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Although mature in theme, this picture will have interest for young people. Adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 27 '36

"The controversial theme of 'mercy killing' is food for thought. Adults & young people."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Je 14 '36

"Adults."
Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"The leading parts are sincere and well sustained. . . . However, the interspersing of a number of scenes of comedy with raucous laughter and tiresome jokes makes it a little difficult to readjust oneself to the moments of tragic importance. It is one of those pictures which have some excellent points but are not well-balanced productions."

— + Motion Pict R J1 '36

"Full of false premises this effort to sensationalize the 'mercy' killings performed by doctors constitutes a mediocre picture. The direction is fast-moving and the story is well constructed except for an ending which serves definitely as an anticlimax. Adults."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 17 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 9 '36

"A: forceful drama; Y: pretty strong melodrama; C: no."

Parents' M p31 S '36

"This is a dramatic presentation of a timely subject, 'mercy killing,' with the final decision left to the audience. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide J1 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a 'thrill drama,' and although treated with sincere dignity, the 'mercy killing' subject of the theme makes it a highly controversial matter." J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p307 J1 17 '36

"Here the spectator is treated to distinctly realistic, strong, at times uncommonly powerful drama. In every respect does this offering merit attention and praise. . . . A beautifully mounted production, in places thrilling in its drama, often charmingly amusing, appealingly human and always absorbing, it rightfully achieved high favor with its recent preview audience. And that it will succeed both as entertainment and commercially wherever publicly screened, is my firm belief. . . . Don't fail to view the picture." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p14 Je 20 '36

"This unusual theme—Should doctors kill hopelessly doomed patients?—has been treated with quiet intelligence. And as there is no playing up of the more sensational elements certain to appear in a story of this type, the film comes as a worthwhile offering for those who want occasional respite from the boy-meets-girl formula." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p24 J1 25 '36

"The Crime of Dr. Forbes' is an unusual picture, an unexpectedly intelligent picture. It has a certain amount of the half-baked, superficial stuff that the movies always get into when they start to play with test tubes and X-Ray negatives, but it is far from the sap picture that you might expect on this theme. On the whole, it is dignified, careful and articulate. It does not presume to answer the question of mercy killings, but it does a satisfactory job of sneaking out of the responsibility." Don Herold

+ Life p28 S '36

"The first half of this film is unanticipatedly adult and ably played. . . . [Later] however, the film bogs down in the platitudes of a Hollywood murder trial and never comes up again. Edward J. Bromberg's authoritative investment of the title rôle is the first opportunity he has had to show his talent and Group Theatre training."

Robert Stebbins

New Theatre p22 Ag '36

"Director George Marshall and an extremely competent cast have produced in 'The Crime of Dr. Forbes' an engaging motion picture, amusing and absorbing by turns—a straddle, of course, but a most entertaining one. . . . The picture, despite the fact that it fails to sustain a serious mood, is nicely blended by tricks of script writing and direction, so that it becomes good entertainment even though it lacks impact." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p11 J1 6 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CRIME OF DR. FORBES—Continued

"The Crime of Dr. Forbes' is ingenious front-page stuff, brightly and scathingly written, cunningly put together and acted to the hilt by a band of sure-fire players. Aside from its bitterness at the way tragedy is converted into comedy by the calloused of our nation, it is a good show with traces here and there of good drama. . . . Although it fails in its chief mission, which is to take a definite stand on the matter of mercy killings, the film is vastly entertaining and permits the audience . . . to have a vivid and exhilarating time."

William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p15 J1 7 '36

"This is the best picture the Western Avenue studio has turned out in some time. . . . A great deal of thought and imagination have been used on this small budget picture and some of the 'touches' are worthy of more pretentious photoplays. . . . Authors Frances Hyland and Saul Elkins have constructed a canny screenplay that has surprise, suspense and pace." Herb Sterne

+ Script p14 J1 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The timely and gives controversial subject of 'mercy killings' high this Sol Wurtzel production a mounting designed for more-than-average audience appeal. Adults."

+ Box Office p75 Je 27 '36

Reviewed by L. S. Niemeyer

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 J1 4 '36

"Estimate: fair, depends on selling."

+ Phila Exhibitor p72 J1 1 '36

"The dramatic weight of 'Dr. Forbes,' coupled with cast performances and good comedy relief, entitle it to a fair chance despite lack of names among the players. Its appeal is distinctly adult."

+ — Variety p15 J1 8 '36

CROOKED LOVE. Nuovo mondo 76min Je 20 '36

Players: Nelly Corradi, Fosco Giacchetti, Raimondo Van Riel

Director: Adelqui Millar

Italian dialogue film with English sub-titles. Filmed in Rome. Also called Luci Sommerse and Dimmed Lights. This depicts the adventures of a notorious gentleman jewel thief who makes the Riviera his headquarters. There he meets a charming girl, daughter of a banker and decides to reform. He is afraid that if she knows his true identity, she will not marry him. After a battle with his former underworld pals, he wins her.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Crooked Love' is the Italian version of a play about a reformed thief, 'Lord Spider,' and while its attempts to imitate the jaunty ways of Hollywood are valiant, they are scarcely successful. In fact, compared to some of our own 'Screen Souvenirs,' composed of early silent films, they would make a shabby showing. . . . Cutting and editing may partly account for the ludicrous results at Teatro Cine-Roma, but not entirely." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p14 Je 23 '36

"The feature is a heavy-handed drama of the old school, with a plot not unlike those of the very ancient Mary Pickford films. . . . This is not so much as a story; nor does the production improve it. The pace is slow, the photography dull, and the acting a series of grimaces and poses." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p21 Je 24 '36

"The picture is well made technically, and the acting is generally good." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p22 Je 22 '36

"Although it grieves me to say so, this is among the least interesting of Italian films that have recently been shown on Broadway. Some of the complaints that might honestly be made against it are that it is slow, shambling, feeble and bogus." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p23 Je 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] generally well made and well acted drama-romance, laid in attractive Riviera backgrounds."

+ Film Daily p7 Je 23 '36

"This is to be considered definitely one of the less conspicuous of the importations of Italian product. . . . In general, the film is of the type which probably will appeal to audiences understanding the Italian language . . . but to few others."

+ Motion Pict Daily p14 Je 26 '36

"With a story hung on the old Raffles formula, this import has its moments of effective drama. Neither the direction nor the acting is of an especially high order but the film has a star, Nelly Corradi, who packs everything when it comes to face and figure."

+ — Variety p23 J1 1 '36

CROUCHING BEAST. Olympic 56min Ag 21 '36

Players: Fritz Kortner, Wynne Gibson, Richard Bird

Director: W. Victor Hanbury

Based on a novel Clubfoot by Valentine Williams. Dialogue film produced in England. 'It's a yarn about British spies in 1915 Turkey, with an American girl getting into all kinds of jams with the beast, Ahmed Bey, because she befriends [an English spy].' (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p17 S 5 '36

"In terms of what Mr. Dudley Nichols calls escapist entertainment, 'The Crouching Beast' may be just what you are looking for. It does not pretend to make much sense. . . . No one can say the picture lacks plot—that's the trouble with it, it has too much and also plenty of action. What it needs is a lot of things, but what it really has is a really superb performance by Mr. Kortner, whose poisonous creation invokes a spirit of evil, and produces a suspense every time he puts in an appearance." Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 22 '36

"The heroine is our own Wynne Gibson, who used to get into lots of similar scrapes for Paramount. Fritz Kortner, schooled in the cinema tradition of Turkish terrorism by playing such rôles as Abdul the Damned, clubfoots through this one with ease." J. T. M.

N Y Times p6 Ag 22 '36

"[It is] a lot less murderous than its title. . . . I was chagrined at Fritz Kortner's Ahmed Bey. In 'Abdul the Damned' he did a swell job, but he plays the Turkish beast like a Bronx salesman giving the heat to a customer." Douglas Gilbert

N Y World-Telegram p13 Ag 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An intensely dramatic spy story located in and around war-torn Constantinople, this will carry a fair measure of interest for thrill fans. Adults."

+ — Box Office p23 S 12 '36

"This drama of wartime spy activities . . . is a generally suspenseful and engrossing affair. It is helped considerably by the performances of Fritz Kortner in the title role and by Wynne Gibson."

+ Film Daily p4 Ag 22 '36

"This is a feeble and inconsequential tale of spies. . . The dramatic content, while attempting to reach a serious vein, borders on the unconsciously humorous."

— Motion Pict Daily p12 Ag 24 '36

"Spy story that has the benefit of an American name, a nice performance by Fritz Kortner, this should prove fair entertainment. Although made in Britain, it should hold interest, having been edited so that it moves more rapidly than similar importations."

+ Phila Exhibitor p44 S 1 '36

"Between covers, [this mystery] was a particularly sinister one; but this filmization of one of Williams' mystery melodramas still leaves plenty to be desired. An English production, it holds practically nothing for the American market—even though it co-stars an American personality, Wynne Gibson, with Fritz Kortner, Austrian character actor. Picture is extremely weak on almost every front, its deficiencies notably lying in the script and direction. . . The spotting of personalities with heavy Piccadilly accents in the roles of Germans and Turks in a World War setting . . . makes the entire production appear ludicrous; hardly digestible fodder for even slightly intelligent audiences."

— — Variety p21 S 2 '36

D

DANCING PIRATE. RKO 85min My 22 '36

Players: Charles Collins. Frank Morgan. Steffi Duna. Luis Alberni

Director: Lloyd Corrigan

Music and lyrics: Richard Rodgers. Lorenz Hart

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p115 Jl '36

"A and Y: feast for eye rather than intellect is this amusing light song and dance comedy—a fantasy in color: C: admirable."

Parents' M p31 S '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Rather a novel twist to this newest of all technicolor films, makes it interesting. . . A novelty that will interest many lovers of song and dance is a spectacular Indian war dance performed by [Collins] in order to win over to his cause a band of natives." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p32 Jl '36

"The Dancing Pirate" is a feast for the senses rather than the intellect. . . The lithe, pleasantly mannered Charles Collins dominates the show. His dancing is the closest thing to Fred Astaire Hollywood has yet discovered. And, charmingly scored by Alfred Newman, Collins's debut is an amusing and beautiful treat for the eye and ear." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p49 Je 20 '36

"Dancing Pirate," the first all-technicolor dancing musical, is quite delightful, or perhaps it was merely one of my easy-to-please, unfinicky evenings at the movies. Some may say that it is nothing but a succession of pretty colored postcard shots, but even that is excusable in a musical, and the shots this time are scrumptious, as colored postcards go. . . The fun is of a much better sort than you might expect in connection with a series of picture postcards." Don Herold

+ Life p27 Ag '36

"Frank Morgan is amusing and Steffi Duna projects with some vitality but the pall of Natalie Kalmus's bad batik hangs oppressively over the entire production." Robert Stebbins

— + New Theatre p22 Ag '36

"Despite its technological importance as the very last word in color photography, 'Dancing Pirate' manages also to be a light and amusing trifle in song, dance and comedy. . . Any comment on the color photography would be amateurishly presumptuous. It is simply the perfection of all that is commercially available nowadays and while we trustingly take for granted that the future holds an even greater store of chromatic wealth, in the meantime we politely stand in awe of a technique which already combines the dramatic shadows of the Dutch school with the rich palette of the Venetians." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p19 Je 18 '36

"I didn't see all of 'Dancing Pirate,' I got so depressed right in the middle of it that I had to leave the theatre. . . The whole thing is done in color. Even had it been dressed in the conventional black, I don't think it would have been a beautiful picture." John Mosher

— — New Yorker p73 Je 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As the first all-technicolor dancing musical, 'Dancing Pirate' has exploitation possibilities, despite the fact it went haywire. Save for potentialities that Charles Collins suggests, Pioneer's 'Pirate' is too comic operetta to qualify as 1936 film fare. . . 'Dancing Pirate' is a weakie."

— Variety p29 Je 24 '36

DARK HOUR. Chesterfield 64min Ja 15 '36

Players: Ray Walker. Irene Ware. Hobart Bosworth. Berton Churchill

Director: Charles Lamont

Based on a novel, The Last Trap, by Sinclair Gluck. A murder mystery in which a killer attempts to slay a man who is already dead. Two detectives, one of the old school and one of the new, are pitted against each other to find the solution.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Take a murder mystery containing all the usual ingredients, such as an evil old man, a mysterious butler, a wise-cracking young detective and a much beset-upon heroine, cast with a group of capable players and place in a satisfactory production—the result will be an average programmer well-suited to double-billing. Family."

+ — Box Office p31 Ag 22 '36

"With a better story and handling than is found in the majority of murder mystery dramas coming out of the independent shops, this production ought to satisfy the grind clientele that goes for the 'guess who did it' melodramas."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 1 '36

"Ponderous and talkative, this mystery drama is quite average. The featured players handle their roles well, but they work with a mediocre story."

— + Motion Pict Daily p17 Ag 21 '36

"This [mystery] may have made good reading as a detective novel, but the screen version fails to approach even the jelling stage. Only for minor secondary dual spots. Aside from the lack of names, bad casting, faulty acting and indifferent direction wreck what possibilities the story ever had."

DARK HOUR—Continued

— Variety p17 Ag 5 '36

DESTINY UNKNOWN. See Passaporto rosso

DEVIL DOLL. MGM 70min JI 17 '36

Players: Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Lawton, Rafaela Ottiano, Juanita Quigley, Arthur Hohl

Director: Tod Browning

Based on the novel, Burn, Witch, Burn, by Abraham Merritt. "An escaped convict . . . encountering a mad scientist, learns of a process to reduce human beings to doll-like sizes. The scientist dies and the avenger decides to use the process in his campaign for justice. With one living doll to do his bidding, he disguises himself as an old lady and opens a doll shop in Paris. His first enemy is captured and transformed into a doll; the second is stabbed by the girl doll; the third tortured by mysterious happenings until a confession is obtained." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: better not; C: no."
Christian Century p1047 JI 29 '36

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults; excellent; family: good; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good-mature." DAR

"Adults & young people." Nat Soc of New England Women

"As a mystery melodrama, it is unusual and tense, but only suitable to a mature audience." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul JI 18 '36

"A strongly dramatic story which is consistent and holds the attention throughout. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates JI 1 '36

"Melodrama at its best. . . The predominant mood is heavy and morbid though there is some attempt at comedy relief. Excellent for adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women JI 8 '36

"Objection: revenge theme and implied suicide. Objectionable in part."
Nat Legion of Decency JI 23 '36

"A and Y: intriguing novelty; C: hardly."
Parents' M p31 S '36

"Adults."
Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Fantastic but unusual. Family."
Wkly Guide JI 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is an ingenious and entertaining film. The plot has sufficient suspense as first one and then another of the enemies capitulates. Even better are the tricks of photography. It is pleasant to see the screen remembering again some of its skill with optical illusions and double exposure." E. F. Melvin
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 1 '36

"The Devil Doll' is a first class mystery-drama, such as Lon Chaney used to delight in. . . [It] has all the elements of exciting and thrilling screen entertainment." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p36 Ag '36

"Well done of its kind, for those who like chillers however mechanical."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 1 '36

"The mighty interesting results accruing from Tod Browning's latest directorial effort bring conclusive evidence of the appropriateness of the title, 'Master of the Macabre,' which has variously been fastened on him. . . [It is] a thoroughly dramatic mystery horror that is strikingly out of the ordinary." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p347 JI 31 '36

"The camera really is the hero of 'The Devil Doll,' and the demonstration of its powers makes the picture well worth seeing, even though the story is unpleasant and will leave you with a bad taste in your mouth. . . It is all weirdly extraordinary, but the same devices should have been used in the manufacture of a comedy to which you could have taken the children and with them enjoyed the time of your several lives. As we have it, however, do not take the children."

+ — Hollywood Spec p6 JI 18 '36

"Lionel enjoys an actor's holiday in a role that lets him disguise as the hero of 'The Devil Doll,' and the demonstration of its powers makes the picture well worth seeing, even though the story is unpleasant and will leave you with a bad taste in your mouth. . . It is all weirdly extraordinary, but the same devices should have been used in the manufacture of a comedy to which you could have taken the children and with them enjoyed the time of your several lives. As we have it, however, do not take the children."

Liberty p32 Ag 15 '36

"The Devil Doll' [is] warranted to terrorize the most self-possessed. . . Lionel Barrymore plays the escaped convict. His transformation, achieved after weeks of Hollywood puttering, into an aged, seemingly kind crone, is astonishing, not only as make-up but as performance. . . The bizarre story places 'The Devil Doll' somewhere between an out-and-out horror picture and a novelty film. No one is going to be haunted by it, but the effect during actual screening is powerful."

+ Lit Digest p19 JI 18 '36

New Theatre p23 S '36

"In 'The Devil Doll,' Mr. Browning is hardly at his best. Yet in a dramatic medium that is too much given to health and vitality, it is always pleasant to run across one of his slyly unwholesome melodramas if only for the sake of contrast. 'The Devil Doll' is second-rate Tod Browning, but it is pretty good fun anyway. . . 'The Devil Doll' is mechanically excellent. Unfortunately, though, in the business of creating the photographic atmosphere of brooding evil and vague, menacing horror—the mood that was so magnificently captured in 'Freaks' for example—the production is less successful. Mr. Browning used to provide us with considerably more of the hint of doom."

Richard Watts, Jr.
+ — N Y Herald Tribune p4 Ag 8 '36

"The miniature humans of the film, instead of appearing sinister, are only cute. Even the crimes they are forced to commit are quaint rather than horrible. 'The Devil Doll' isn't likely to scare any one but children, whom it might affect most seriously. It is, for those over twelve, a fairly entertaining novelty. . . It is rather fun, on the whole, and Mr. Barrymore, disguised as an old lady, is astonishingly believable." Eileen Creelman
+ — N Y Sun p8 Ag 8 '36

"[It is] a photoplay which is grotesque, slightly horrible and consistently interesting. A freak film, of course, and one which may overburden Junior's imagination, but an entertaining exhibition of photographic hocus-pocus for all that." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 8 '36

"Although he has hit upon a chilling theme for his latest film, Tod Browning, ace of horror-film directors, has not produced quite such a chilling film. It has moments that are tense and thrilling and leave one pale around the gills with excitement. But it also has its limping moments and I suspect that you will find its movement slow at times and its language often pedestrian." William Boehnel
+ — N Y World-Telegram p14a Ag 8 '36

"The idea is good, but the finished product is probably of more interest to movie technicians than to you and me. This column is no parent-teacher's forum, but I might as well tell you that I would be pretty careful about taking the kiddies to see it. It's concerned with one of the favorite phobias of childhood, and realistic enough to produce some hysterical reactions. Still, maybe your kiddies would just laugh at it." Russell Maloney
New Yorker p53 Ag 8 '36

"If you have a taste for screwy horror-drama, this is fun. . . Cameraman Leonard Smith is the lad who deserves the major credit for the trick photography really makes this show." Herb Sterne
+ Script p12 Ag 8 '36

"The Devil Doll' is the most ambitious effort ever undertaken in the use of the long-known but seldom-employed technique of photographic disproportion. . . Unlike Director Tod Browning's 'Freaks,' or most of the famed Lon Chaney silents which he made, 'The Devil Doll's' hobgoblinery beguiles rather than frightens."

+ Time p36 Jl 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Something new in the blending of a chiller and melodrama, the plot structure, while incredible, is intriguing and direction and enactment are of the highest order. Properly merchandised, it will be a revenue-getter and meet with audience satisfaction. Family."

+ Box Office p31 Jl 18 '36

"Unusual mystery drama along novel bizarre lines expertly directed and exceptionally well acted."

+ Film Daily p6 Jl 7 '36

"Intriguing as a novelty, 'Devil Doll' is exceptionally well made with all concerned contributing the utmost to excellence of the fantastic plot. It is difficult, however, to predict box-office for such an attraction. Responsibility for its success will rest entirely on how it is sold. All a reviewer can say is that 'Devil Doll' is well worth the selling. Its horror is kept completely objective, never transcending the bounds of entertainment. . . Lionel Barrymore delivers a superb performance in an exacting role. His impersonation of an old lady is amazing and he wrings all sympathy possible from his character."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 3 '36

"The responsibility for the success or failure of this film rests with exhibitors, since much depends on the way the advance exploitation is handled. Certainly the film offers an opportunity for ingenious campaigns and stunts, for it is strikingly out of the ordinary."

Motion Pict Daily p8 Jl 6 '36

"Estimate: well made thriller; depends on selling."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 Jl 15 '36

"As an illustration of the photographic art, 'The Devil Doll' is interesting, although not very practical. The technical aspects may provide diversion to the limited number of people who are interested in such things, but in general appeal the picture is lacking. Through its basic 'idea,' the picture is in the horror category, and it has about everything an adult-scarer needs except story. The fault lies with the failure of the scenarists to fortify the fantastic 'idea' with a helpful and credible plot."

+ Variety p18 Ag 12 '36

"The Devil Doll' is a weird sort of screen concoction which bids for entertainment on combination of sheerest fantasy and realistic melodrama. . . Picture will hold interest and create comment wherever imaginative treatment is appreciated, and for its experimental nature and handling as entertainment off the beaten trail, Edward J. Mannix deserves ample credit in the production spot."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 3 '36

DEVIL IS A SISSY. MGM 92min S 18 '36

Players: Freddie Bartholomew. Jackie Cooper. Mickey Rooney. Ian Hunter. Peggy Conklin

Director: W. S. Van Dyke

"Circumstances force the cultured Freddie Bartholomew into association with Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney, tough mugs in the city slums. Domestic affairs of the youths' parents are not conducive to the best welfare of the trio. They are led into petty crime through the desire of Mickey to buy a tombstone for his electrocuted father. With a tolerant juvenile judge setting the boys on the right track, young Rooney would backslide. But following a brush with bandits during which young Bartholomew endangers his life, the tragedy of his threatened death opens his pals' eyes to the right way of living." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Although featuring young boys, it is a story containing much interest for adults. A perfect moral for youngsters. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency S 17 '36

"Remarkable for the naturalness and humaneness of its detail—it is very like a modern, city Tom Sawyer. The acting of the three boys is excellent. Family-juvenile."

+ Wkly Guide S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A tailor-made vehicle for the screen's three foremost boy actors, this picture will reap a rich harvest in laughs, tears and revenue. Family."

+ Box Office p23 S 12 '36

"With neither fuss nor feathers, ballyhoo nor bombast, M-G-M has launched a winner in this attraction. And any preconceived notion that it is only a [child's] picture is erroneous. Acted by youngsters it is, but with a feeling for the human emotions of comedy and drama that vies with the work of the most seasoned player. From every production angle, casting, writing, acting and directing, it is practically flawless. It is fresh in story and treatment, rich in pathos and humor, and will appeal to every class of audience and every age."

+ Film Daily p11 S 9 '36

"From its arresting title to its laughable final scene this comedy-drama of boyhood is grand entertainment for all ages and all classes. Its humor, its humanity and its superb enactment, with Freddie Bartholomew heading the admirable cast, will make it a box-office bell-ringer from top to bottom. . . It was a swell piece of showmanship to have brought these three gifted and popular boys together in one picture. Its box office results will be important."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 5 '36

"Drama with a heart sock, possessed of powerful human interest and told with forceful directness, this picture held a preview audience's attention in a vise-like grip. Although the three juveniles are featured, the picture is absolutely not a [juvenile] attraction. While it is of quick interest to that audience, segments of the theme should stir adults deeply. . . It is an intelligent study of a timely and vital subject."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 S 5 '36

"Outstanding in dramatic and commercial worth is 'The Devil Is a Sissy,' rich in humanity and humor, fresh in treatment and loaded with widest audience appeal for men, women and children. . . W. S. Van Dyke, directing with his essentially boyish zestful spirit—a perfect choice for the material—guides his charges with deep and sympathetic comprehension of the troubled youthful heart and pride."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 5 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

DIMMED LIGHTS. See Crooked love

DIZZY DAMES. Liberty 65min J1 16 '36

Players: Marjorie Rambeau. Florine McKinney. Lawrence Gray. Inez Courtney

Director: William Nigh

Music and lyrics: George Wagner. Howard Jackson

Based on the short story, The Watch Dog, by P. G. Wodehouse. The film was produced in 1935 but has just been released in the metropolitan territory. A former actress, now running a theatrical boarding house, tries to keep her daughter who is away at school in ignorance of her career. When the daughter returns for a surprise visit she falls in love with one of the boarders. After complications, the mother allows the young lovers to marry.

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is a semi-back-stage yarn with nothing out of a more or less routine order, best suited for the minor spots."

+ Film Daily p7 J1 18 '36

"One glance at the cast promises a musical of some proportions, but it is all held down. . . Over half of the principals are from the music stage, and are given sparse flings at doing their stuff, but it ends there. Mild story is leisurely told by this group, with none of stellar pull big enough to lift it out of the duller category. Title never quite lives up to its name."

+ Variety p17 J1 22 '36

DON'T TURN 'EM LOOSE. RKO 66min Ag 28 '36

Players: Lewis Stone. James Gleason. Bruce Cabot. Louise Latimer. Betty Grable

Director: Ben Stolliff

Based on the short story Homecoming by Thomas Walsh. "[The] story . . . deals with [a] ruthless, murderous outlaw son who is liberated by father as member of parole board and is then shot to death by the father as the son is about to commit another killing." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The acting is uniformly good, the subject timely, and direction vigorous and spirited, which all lends conviction to the story. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Mature." DAR

"A tense drama vividly acted, which holds the attention and presents a needed and downright message without mincing matters. Adults & young people." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The picture rings true with a potent lesson. Adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 5 '36

"Timely and powerful indictment against the misuse of the parole system, in releasing hardened criminals. . . A thought-provoking and grippingly interesting picture. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 25 '36

"This is a convincing story. . . Thoroughly reliable cast turns in a most satisfactory performance with Lewis Stone, as the father, giving one of his finished portrayals and Bruce Cabot maintaining a sadistic touch throughout. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

"A terrible indictment of our parole board system. (Too tense for children.) Adults." Nat Legion of Decency S 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Don't Turn 'Em Loose' is one of the most expertly handled class B's it has been my good fortune to see. . . There are not a dozen irrelevant lines of dialogue; it is terse, fluent, and acts solely as a camera support. . . 'Don't Turn 'Em Loose' can be summed up in that one seldom deserved word—excellent." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p11 Ag 29 '36

"It is to be doubted if, for sheer slam-bang heart-trapping, the Hollywood cinema has filmed a more thumping scene than that in which the college executive, newly elected to the Parole Board, confronts his notorious, murderous son. . . It is straining things a little to believe the ending: in which the father, seeing his boy about to kill a detective, shoots the son down. Scenarists Harry Segall and Ferdinand Reyher, the bit in their teeth, raced to this conclusion about two paces in advance of credibility."

+ Lit Digest p23 S 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As stark and tragic a drama as has ever been filmed in Hollywood. The story builds without wavering to a climax that is terrific. It blasts with stunning force at our much criticized system of paroles, and leaves no doubt as to the punch that can be attained with proper directing and acting."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 29 '36

"It's strong stuff and very, very fine." L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 S '36

"Abuse of the prison parole system here furnishes the subject for a second vigorous melodrama. The first was Universal's 'Parole,' reviewed a few weeks ago. The two pictures are, however, widely different in plot and this one will stand on its own feet as beefsteak entertainment apart from its preachment and is strong enough to top almost any double bill to box office advantage. . . The production under Robert Sisk is satisfyingly excellent from first to last."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 20 '36

"The most sordid aspect of graft and corruption in its relation to parole boards is heavily emphasized in this unrelenting melodrama which is an impassioned preachment against easy parole. . . Emphasize the problem of easy parole for criminals in selling this one."

+ Motion Pict Daily p17 Ag 21 '36

"Another story about parole for criminals, this has the benefit of an action title as well as a fast moving story, though short on names. . . Estimate: program."

+ Phila Exhibitor p41 S 1 '36

"'Don't Turn 'Em Loose' presents vigorous, provocative treatment of the dangerous human gamble involved in current parole practices as news headlines and police records relate them. . . Bitter and sombre much of the way, it yet is close enough to big social problems of the day to have positive entertainment value and should prove good program complement in most spots, especially where the customers can stand thoughtful, thematic fare."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 20 '36

DOOMED CARGO. See Seven sinners

DOWN THE STRETCH. Warner-First national 67min S 19 '36

Players: Patricia Ellis. Mickey Rooney. Dennis Moore

Director: William Clemens

Mickey Rooney, the son of a once-famous jockey, escapes a sentence to the reformatory, but is placed under the custody of the owners of a horse stable. Engaged as a jockey, he rides in the climax race in London, holding back his mount to let the owners of the stable, now poverty stricken, win the race.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"It is regrettable that a question of race track ethics makes this dubious entertainment. Adults; fair; family: doubtful; 14-18 and 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Questionable ethics. Good-mature." DAR

"A question of racing ethics is involved which lovers of clean sport will regard as inadequately handled. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"There is a good story which will entertain all who admire a good sport and fine horses. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Jl 18 '36

"Adults & young people."
Jt Estimates Jl 1 '36

"The ending leaves the audience sympathetic but a little doubtful of the ethics involved, a problem which might well offer opportunity for discussion among students evaluating the social value of pictures. Adolescents, 12-16: entertaining; children, 8-12: yes."
Motion Pict R Jl '36

"Family."
Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 8 '36

"Exciting and convincing track atmosphere. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Jl 30 '36

"A and Y: fast moving race-track comedy; C: entertaining."
Parents' M p31 S '36

"Adults & young people."
Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Simple in plot but invariably interesting. Family-juvenile."
Wkly Guide S 5 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Mickey Rooney is one of the finest actors appearing on the screen. . . . Despite some obvious drawbacks, 'Down the Stretch' is well worth seeing on account of Rooney's contribution to it. The chief weakness of the story is its ending. . . . On the whole, Bryan Foy, producer, made a passable job of it."
+ — Hollywood Spec p6 Jl 18 '36

"Formulated to please the family trade, to entice laughter and tears, 'Down the Stretch' achieves its aim due to the talents of young Mickey Rooney and colored Willie Best. . . . Mickey is cast in a rôle that is years too mature for the mite's appearance; it's difficult to be convinced when he smokes and frequents gambling clubs. The kid's sincerity carries him through and his dramatic scenes have punch."
Herb Sterne

+ — Script p12 Jl 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Superb comedy furnished by a colored boy, William Best, a race track plot with a decidedly different twist, and the names of Patricia Ellis and Mickey Rooney make this a picture that will please every audience. Family."
+ — Box Office p31 Jl 18 '36

"'Down the Stretch' is a formula racing yarn that . . . should please most audiences but is lacking in draw names."
+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 8 '36

"Here is an interestingly developed race track comedy which unfolds at a swift pace with maximum humor and pathos. It should be adequate in all spots. . . . The picture should show profitable results in both first run and neighborhood houses."
+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Jl 9 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."
Phila Exhibitor p34 Ag 1 '36

"This is fast-moving comedy-drama backgrounded against the race track that furnishes many thrilling and exciting moments balanced with sufficient pathos and comedy to make it all-round entertainment for any audience. . . . Bryan Foy has given the production many lavish settings combined with employment of two large race track settings that should appeal to all lovers of horse racing."
+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 8 '36

DOWN UNDER THE SEA. Republic 62min
Ag 25 '36

Players: Russell Hardie, Ben Lyon, Ann Rutherford, Irving Pichel, Fritz Leiber

Director: Lewis D. Collins

"The vigorous story of conflict between the sponge fishers who work from large boats in deep water with divers and the 'hookers' who fish along shore from small boats, is built to the theme of self-sacrifice and centers about the professional careers of two friends who love the same girl." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Jl 30 '36

"A: sea life melodrama; Y and C: exciting and educational."
Parents' M p31 S '36

"Family."
Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Suggested for schools and libraries for educational value. Family."
Wkly Guide Jl 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Principal values are in the unpretentious actualities in the lives of the heritage-steeped inhabitants in the Greek fishing colony of Tarpon Springs, and their thrilling deep-sea divers for sponges off the stormy Florida Keys, where filming was done. All too obvious are the stagings which were forced into this otherwise interesting pictorial record, injected under the mistaken idea that even a threadbare plot of perceptible artificialities is necessary and that theatrical dramatization is essential."
J. P. Cunningham

+ — Commonweal p428 Ag 28 '36

"The under-sea shots in the new picture are well worth a visit, but as for the story, a veil could be drawn over certain of its sequences without great loss. Had the picture included less of these plotty doings and more of the diving interludes, it would have been a better production, both from an entertainment and educational point of view."
Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p9 Ag 10 '36

"The most engaging quality of 'Down Under the Sea,' is its cheerful pretense to authenticity. Its tale might be preposterous, its telling astonishing and its dénouement absurd, yet Republic Pictures preserves the demeanor of a man who not only expects to be believed but considered an authority. . . . The picture plunges away on a wild-eyed pursuit of villainy, heroism, murder, man-eating sharks and death-bed nobility." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 10 '36

"[It is] a meager and unassuming little melodrama. . . . If you have nothing better to do, you may enjoy watching [the cast] attempt to make something fresh and thrilling out of commonplace melodrama and farce that make up the film. But I fear that you will hardly be excited by the proceedings." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p12 Ag 10 '36

DOWN UNDER THE SEA—Continued

Reviewed by John Mosher
New Yorker p48 Ag 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Excellent under-water photography, and an insight into the Florida sponge-fishing industry make this an educational film as well as a good feature. Family."

+ Box Office p23 Jl 11 '36

"Interesting and unusual film that will please audiences liking robust action. . . With its outstanding underwater photography, it is a subject that should have wide audience appeal as a first rate program number. In the houses that use action pictures it should fit in especially well, for it has plenty of that quality."

+ Film Daily p14 Je 30 '36

"The Greek sponge fishers of Tarpon Springs, Florida, supply authentic material for this excellent melodrama, which worthily interweaves interesting information with strong emotional appeal. The novel subject is intelligently and engrossingly presented and the picture, despite modest name draw, will yield a creditable showing on any double bill and make a good build-up on word-of-mouth. . . Armand Shaefer, in charge of the production, earns high credit for a distinctive task well done."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 27 '36

"Against the fresh and interesting background of sponge fishing, this picture tells a dramatic, romantic love story. Geared to a thrill action plot in which the quality of suspense has been deftly applied, the film is both educational and entertaining."

Motion Pict Daily p11 Jl 1 '36

"Estimate: good melodrama for neighborhoods, more with selling."

+ Phila Exhibitor p27 Jl 15 '36

"A romance of the sponge-gathering industry doesn't suggest much and it isn't much in 'Down Under the Sea,' a 'B' picture of dubious box office draught and appeal. . . A crew went down to Florida to get actual scenes of sponge fishermen. . . This authenticity, however, is of only passing interest since the story itself, its drama, romance and melodrama are hardly what the average audience orders."

— Variety p19 Ag 12 '36

"'Down to the Sea' is . . . moderately entertaining in drama and interesting for novelty of background, which should please the family trade and may, because of its fresh atmosphere, hit somewhat higher in the duals occasionally. Much of the crucial action is filmed under water on the actual sponge beds, offering exploitation possibilities beyond the average B picture. While more careful development of story and more adept casting of some of the important roles would have exploited possibilities of the subject more absorbingly, competent playing by majority . . . sustain audience appeal."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 27 '36

DRAEGERMAN COURAGE. Warner-First national 60min O 24 '36

Players: Jean Muir, Barton MacLane, Henry O'Neill, Robert Barrat, Addison Richards

Director: Louis King

"Barton MacLane [is cast] as the heroic, driving draegerman who is fired from his mine job because he has the guts to protest unsafe conditions in the shaft, but comes back to head the rescue squad when his former employer, Robert Barrat; the superintendent, Addison Richards; and the village doctor, Henry O'Neill, are caught in a second cave-in of a deserted mine." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It] provides a most interesting picture for the family. (Too exciting for children.)" Am Legion Auxiliary

"This film makes a rather obvious appeal to our sympathies, but the subject matter is unusual and interesting and the production has impressive technical excellence. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Harrowing. Adults." DAR

"This is a tense social drama with the vivid realism of a good news reel. . . A creditable production which will interest adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A very enlightening picture through capable action, direction, and realistic sound effects. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul S 5 '36

"A well chosen cast do very satisfactory work, especially Barton MacLane and Henry O'Neill. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 25 '36

"This realistic, stark, gripping and well-developed story is convincingly acted and directed with intelligence integrating tense situations into compact drama. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 26 '36

"A slight love scene brings relief to the plot. Realistic photography provides thrills. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 17 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Draegerman Courage' is good entertainment, much better than that provided by the majority of pictures costing many times as much. Any audience in any house would find it engrossing. It derives its strength from the fact that it is primarily a physical story which the camera relates."

+ Hollywood Spec p6 Ag 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picture version of the recent Nova Scotia mine disaster is packed full of dynamite-action and crowds enough thrills into 60 minutes of film to last the average fan a week. Time-liness of plot makes it a sure box office picture. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 29 '36

"This picture . . . makes exciting entertainment. True, the outcome is never in doubt, but the suspense is so well sustained that it will keep most audiences gripping their chair-arms. It ranks above the average of the Warner B product and will be profitable on that level."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 22 '36

"Jean Muir has little to do as the sweetheart of MacLane, who gives his expected hearty performance. . . The prominence of cave-ins in recent headlines is about the only exploitation angle."

Motion Pict Daily p12 Ag 24 '36

"Taking a front page incident of a mine rescue, Warners have produced a programmer which is short on name strength, but which has exploitable angles to help. . . Estimate: program, depends on handling."

Phila Exhibitor p40 S 1 '36

"Draegermen are the rescue squads in mine disasters. 'Draegerman Courage' is the dramatic screen echo of a comparatively recent, much-headlined incident of resurrection of several men buried for days in a Nova Scotia cave-in. So vividly pictured and convincing is the film, so carefully directed, well played and authentically detailed that audiences will feel present at an actual record of a herculean task of rescue with the emotional elements intensified by excellently-contrived screen play."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 22 '36

E

EARLY TO BED. Paramount 75min Je 5 '36

Players: Mary Boland. Charlie Ruggles.
George Barbier. Gail Patrick

Director: Norman McLeod

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: good; 14-18: good. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The picture is a series of good comedy sequences and the dialogue particularly clever and funny. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre-mature." DAR

"Amusing situations, skilful direction and expert acting are combined to make wholly enjoyable entertainment. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 20 '36

"Enjoyable entertainment for the family."

+ Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p116 Jl '36

"This is capital fun. . . Many lines provoke laughter, the entire cast joins whole-heartedly in the action, and there is never a dull moment. Adolescents, 12-16: amusing; children, 8-12: probably mature."

+ Motion Pict R Jl '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 10 '36

"A and Y: light comedy; C: if interesting."

Parents' M p47 Ag '36

"Enjoyable entertainment for the family."

Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Those two nice, tame people, Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles . . . make a thoroughly entertaining full-length comedy out of the theme of sleepwalking. . . [They] are no doubt so successful at this because they do not try very hard. A little too much pressure, and this picture could have been one of the colossal clucks of the year." Don Herold

+ Life p30 S '36

New Theatre p23 S '36

"While [it] is not as distinctive or substantial a piece as 'Ruggles of Red Gap,' Miss Boland and Mr. Ruggles once more prove a diverting married couple. . . The picture, while not a masterpiece in any sense, is gay and amusing and deftly done. Norman McLeod keeps it going at a smart pace and blends his comedy scenes together skillfully and tellingly." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Jl 16 '36

"The picture is much more amusing when it forgets the plot and concentrates on the personalities of its comedians. As background for Mr. Ruggles's sleepwalking antics and Miss Boland's hysterical efforts to protect him from his subconscious self, the story serves very well. 'Early to Bed,' besides welcoming Miss Boland and Mr. Ruggles back as a co-starring team, is excellent hot-weather entertainment." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p12 Jl 16 '36

Reviewed by B. R. C.

N Y Times p20 Jl 16 '36

"'Early to Bed' is, frankly, purely porous-knit entertainment. It neither solves nor pretends to solve anything, and about its only reason for being is that it manages by fits and starts to provide considerably more than just a minimum number of funny—sometimes more than just merely funny—lines and situations." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p15 Jl 16 '36

"'Early to Bed' is perfect fare for the summer boarders. . . In fact, I should say they'll be lucky if they find 'Early to Bed' on the screen rather than most of the pictures that have been turning up these hot days. . . Personally, I was more amused by some of the minor touches than by the broad farce of the Ruggles night excursions." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p56 Jl 25 '36

"The two comedians are as funny as they always have been. It's not belittling them to say that this picture is a triumph for director and writers. They're probably just as grateful as their public is to be handed such inspired material." Molly Lewin

+ Script p14 Jl 11 '36

"[It is] a rather frolicsome piece . . . and [has] moments of sure-fire merriment."

+ Stage p120 Ag '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles individually are excellent comics, and together they're twice as good. Give them a break in the way of story and dialogue and they'll produce as many laughs as any team that Hollywood boasts of. 'Early to Bed' gives them such a break and they make the most of it. Picture is a corking comedy and should do nicely on business."

+ Variety p17 Jl 22 '36

EARTHWORM TRACTORS. Warner-First national 63min Jl 18 '36

Players: Joe E. Brown. June Travis. Guy Kibbee. Dick Foran. Carol Hughes

Director: Raymond Enright

Based on the Saturday Evening Post series of short stories by William Hazlett Upson. In this hilarious comedy, Joe E. Brown portrays a super-salesman with an inflated ego who tries to sell tractors to a confirmed tractor hater. After tremendous odds he succeeds not only as a salesman, but wins the customer's fair daughter as well.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: feeble; Y and C: harmless fun."

Christian Century p1071 Ag 5 '36

"[It] leaves you breathless with laughter. Fine support under smart, brisk direction. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Good fun for the family. Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Inimitable Joe E. Brown makes you laugh and forget your troubles. Family." DAR

"Good entertainment for the family." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 27 '36

"A rollicking comedy that will delight the entire family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Je 14 '36

"For an hour of fun, relaxation and unabashed laughter try 'Earthworm Tractors.' Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: good."

+ Motion Pict R Jl '36

EARTHWORM TRACTORS—Continued

"Family & junior matinees. Joe E. Brown, this time as a salesman of tractors, brings with him many a hearty laugh."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 17 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency JI 2 '36

"A, Y and C: hilarious comedy."

Parents' M p69 S '36

"A hilarious Joe E. Brown comedy, filled with absurd situations and breathless laughs for fans of this comedian. Good entertainment for the family & junior matinees."

+ Sel Motion Pict JI 1 '36

"Family-juvenile."

Wkly Guide JI 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Earthworm Tractors' is Joe E. Brown's best picture to date and if you like the wide-mouthed star, you'll love his Alexander Botts, high-powered salesman and lover." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p30 S '36

Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham
Commonweal p307 JI 17 '36

"It is a hilarious picture and no one who sees it is going to feel he did not get a run for his money."

+ Hollywood Spec p12 Je 20 '36

"Given admirable support by Gene Lockhart as a rival salesman, the pretty June Travis, and Carol Hughes, Brown's latest gag-fest should not disappoint his loyal fans. Joe himself is more subdued than usual. . . . Although, as we have shouted, there is nothing new in 'Earthworm Tractors,' the picture remains a speedy bit of diversion." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p24 JI 25 '36

"'Earthworm Tractors' is a typical Joe E. Brown vehicle, showing him as the meek, kind-hearted country fellow he always is. . . . He lends to the performance, of course, his characteristic touch of the clown who laughs while his heart is breaking. The picture is entirely his, although Guy Kibbee, as a crotchety prospect, is excellent." Marguerite Tazelaar
N Y Herald Tribune p6 JI 25 '36

"The title role of 'Earthworm Tractors,' is filled by a huge mechanical monster; with Joe E. Brown at the wheel, it is responsible for an hour of comic havoc. . . . 'Earthworm Tractors' is a lot more fun than most of the summer offerings." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p13 JI 27 '36

"Guy Kibbee, as a suffering prospect on whom Joe, the demon tractor salesman, inflicts the endless nightmare of his terroristic demonstrations, holds up his end of the picture superbly, but it is Joe who is still the overloaded coolie of comedy, the staggering, pottery-draped peon of pantomime. . . . Joe himself, of course, is better, more important, larger and funnier, than any picture he has yet appeared in, including even 'Elmer the Great.'" B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p16 JI 25 '36

"With nothing to go upon except a boisterous personality and a hackneyed idea Joe E. Brown manages by neat work to survive the hour which 'Earthworm Tractors' requires to unroll itself. . . . For fully three-quarters of its unreeling 'Earthworm Tractors' stalls for time and sets up the framework for the climax, which is a mad tractor ride up hill and down dale. . . . Just when 'Earthworm Tractors' seems to be breathing its last frail life away, the authors and the director stage a furious tractor ride across the countryside. This sudden burst of energy wakes up the film and the audience at the same time and provides about the only real excitement you will find in it. . . . 'Earthworm Tractors' is at best a routine comedy."

William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p15a JI 25 '36

"Joe E. Brown . . . does a good job of proving what a funny thing an eight-wheeled, 80 horse power jumbo caterpillar tractor really is. . . . Brown's next to last picture for Warner, it ranks with his funniest."

+ Time p41 JI 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Joe E. Brown in all his hilarious history has never made a picture so uproariously mirthful. The adaptation and direction of the widely-read William Hazlett Upson stories are nothing short of perfect, affording the wide-mouthed comic an opportunity to ride to a new high in popularity and bring forth a picture that will pack them in any man's theatre and give the customers double their money's worth in laughs. Family."

+ Box Office p75 Je 27 '36

"It's a riot." L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 JI 4 '36

"Again Joe E. Brown crashes through with a show that is a riot of fun. There is enough of the clowning Brown to satisfy his regular fans and, with a higher type of comedy than usual, a still wider audience should go for it. Loaded with gags, suspense, breath-taking hazardous situations, it has what it takes to make a swell piece of box-office entertainment."

+ Film Daily p24 Je 16 '36

"Brown drops his buffoonery to play almost straight in a rollicking comedy of situation that will keep all sorts of audiences laughing and yooing for a full seventy minutes. It is Brown's best box-office bet to date and that means money everywhere."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 11 '36

"With vigorous hilarity as his keynote, Joe E. Brown here brings Alexander Botts, the famous tractor salesman of William Hazlett Upson's magazine stories to life. . . . The picture should add to Brown's following and click generally."

+ Motion Pict Daily p21 Je 12 '36

"Estimate: good."

Phila Exhibitor p68 JI 1 '36

"'Earthworm Tractors' is far from a 100% job. Writers of the screenplay evidently amplified too much on Brown's standard character. They ladled the hokem on in gobs, giving everything a broad stroke and even repeating on their situations. Result is mild humor where there could have been strong comedy, in spots appearing to be just another instance where screen writers have substituted their own ideas for another's. For children, the picture is a setup. The hokem is such as to appeal more to the juveniles than to the adults, which is not saying, however, that the grown-ups will not be at least partially amused."

+ Variety p14 JI 29 '36

"This is box office prescription not alone for the confirmed Joe E. Brown fans but for a much wider audience. . . . Rich in gags, well-suited to the comic's standard character, 'Earthworm Tractors' is probably Brown's best from audience standpoint and should fare prosperously."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 11 '36

EASY MONEY. Invincible 70min Je 10 '36

Players: Onslow Stevens. Kay Linaker. Noel Madison. Alan Vincent. Barbara Barondess. Robert Homans

Director: Phil Rosen

"A story of racketeers who make their money out of insurance companies through fake accidents. They are apprehended by a clever district attorney who joins the legal department of an insurance company." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It is well acted, directed with a keen sense of the dramatic and its vivid and exciting scenes hold interest throughout. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee
+ Fox W Coast Bul Ag 1 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency J1 9 '36

"A and Y: interesting and timely; C: doubtful."
Parents' M p69 S '36

"Adults & young people."
+ Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

"[It is an] interesting and timely picture. Family."
+ Wkly Guide Je 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Satisfactory entertainment for the average double-bill house. A not too pretentious effort that is saved from being just another 'quickie' by the honest attempts of its cast to make a sincere showing. Family."
+ — Box Office p23 J1 11 '36

"Taking a subject which is of current timely interest, the bilking of insurance companies through the medium of fake accidents, a generally satisfactory melodrama exposing the practice has been turned out here. It is a good job from a production standpoint, as well as in the writing, directing and acting."
+ Film Daily p3 J1 11 '36

"When it comes to reading—and anticipating—the headlines, some of the independents are right up with the majors. Invincible's 'Easy Money' . . . ties right in with the current insurance racket trial in the local courts, makes use of the upholstery-cord murder clue of New York's Tiverton murder, and introduces enough murders, maimings and similar innocent activities to make a first class horror film, if it only had Lugosi. It will satisfy the theaters and audiences at which it necessarily is aimed because of its low budget. . . . The Perez and Adamson original plus the Horman screenplay provide a smooth foundation, although possibly piling on all the stock dramatic tricks to change the balance of power too thickly at the end."

Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 27 '36

"This film has a ready-made break with the fake injury racket making headlines all across the country. . . . [It] is a creditable effort in the low budget class and should do nicely for the exhibitor who stresses the timely angle."
+ Motion Pict Daily p16 Je 30 '36

"Very interesting, if still familiar, this is good fare for the neighborhood houses."
+ — Phila Exhibitor p63 J1 1 '36

"There is sufficient entertainment value in 'Easy Money' for the not too demanding fan to insure satisfaction."
+ — Variety p31 J1 15 '36

"Sufficient production, direction and acting along with a sincere and honest screen play makes 'Easy Money' satisfactory film fare for neighborhoods, particularly those with [juvenile matinees] and those anxious to build up with proper exploitation. . . . It's a good independent with all its qualifications. Maury M. Cohen has given this film a little more than usual production."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 27 '36

EDUCATING FATHER. 20th century-Fox.
58min J1 10 '36

Players: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Dixie Dunbar, Spring Byington, Kenneth Howell
Director: James Tinling

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Amusing dialogue and situation makes good film fare of the familiar. Adults: good; 14-18: good; 8-14: good. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Entertaining, but rather thinly convincing in spots, it will furnish an evening's amusement to the entire family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Suitable for family & junior matinees." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 13 '36

"Family & junior matinee."
Jt Estimates Je 1 '36

"Here is light, wholesome comedy with plenty of suspense and good acting. . . . [It] should please family audiences. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: entertaining."
+ Motion Pict R J1 '36

"A: light domestic comedy; Y and C: wholesome."
Parents' M p47 Ag '36

"Family & junior matinee."
Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide Je 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is a] mildly agreeable piece."
— + Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 1 '36

"[It] presents entertainment, possibly a little dull because of the subject matter, but still humorous, matter-of-fact, and realistic. . . . Mr. Prouty is fine as a somewhat dyspeptic father, and Spring Byington is too in the role of the devoted mother. In fact, the whole cast is fine." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 Je 22 '36

"The suburban Joneses, who made their screen debut a few months back in 'Every Saturday Night,' present the further adventures of what we sincerely hope is not the typical American family in 'Educating Father.' . . . A shade or two more melodramatic than the first episode, but still relying for its appeal upon its humorous reflection of small-town domesticity, the picture is tolerably amusing in an entirely inconsequential way. . . . [The cast] strive, and rather successfully, to catch the spirit of a small-town tribe; but that, in itself, is not too important an enterprise." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p22 Je 20 '36

"[It is] a likeable but slightly old-fashioned farce about a typical American family . . . designed especially for that large public that likes and enjoys homely, humorous, folksy American films. . . . The members of a large cast contribute to make 'Educating Father,' amiable and pleasant, if unimportant entertainment." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p8 Je 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Agreeable entertainment for the family trade, but sadly out of place in the de luxers. Just a quiet little domestic story with no love interest other than one sequence, where a determined young flirt is brought in to create a situation and then conveniently forgotten. In the lesser houses this series will click nicely and probably build up into a money-maker."

EDUCATING FATHER—Continued

+ Variety p45 Je 24 '36

EVERYMAN'S LAW. Supreme 62min

Players: Johnny Mack Brown, Beth Marion, Frank Campeau

Director: Albert Ray

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a dragging Western. General patronage."

— + Nat Legion of Decency Jl 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This Johnny Mack Brown Western has the ingredients that should make it a very good number in the action houses and those playing outdoor fare. The pace set is a rapid one, there are the fights, shootings, and chases, and although the plot is of the regulation type, it is handled in such a manner as to maintain one's interest throughout."

+ Film Daily p11 Jl 21 '36

Phila Exhibitor p39 Ag 1 '36

"Rip-snorting Texas cowhand drama, this one will keep the family, particularly the children, on the edge of their cushions and will add much to Johnny Mack Brown's prestige through his characterization of the law-abiding cowboy. It's better than average for the money spent, cleverly written and well acted, produced and directed."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 18 '36

F*FATAL LADY. Wanger-Paramount 73min
My 15 '36

Players: Mary Ellis, Walter Pidgeon, John Halliday, Ruth Donnelly, Norman Foster, Guy Bates Post, Allan Mowbray

Director: Edward Ludwig

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: very good of kind; C: not for them."

Christian Century p951 Jl 1 '36

"Mary Ellis's part calls for only a limited portion of her acting ability, although it gives her fine singing opportunities. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul Je '36

"A and Y: good mystery; C: mature."

Parents' M p47 Ag '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Passable melodrama for adults and the not-too-young." E. C. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 20 '36

"The sleuthing side of 'Fatal Lady' is capably assembled and, as it turns out, logically motivated. . . The source of the film's appeal is not in its deadlier phases. For it is when the picture is showing such beguiling scenes as the opera company's rehearsal on board train—scenes which have nothing to do with the killings—that 'Fatal Lady' becomes entrancing film fare. Unfortunately there aren't a great [many] of these liltng interludes."

(2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p44 Je 27 '36

"'Fatal Lady' is one of those 'Music is my Life' pictures, and it is terrible tripe, in spite of the presence therein of several capable ladies and gentleman of the silver screen. . . The murders get to be pretty funny before the evening is over, and the place sounds like a shooting gallery at times. Every line is a speech, and you'd better not stop to think about some of the lines, or you'll giggle out of turn. Not for children." Don Herold

— Life p30 S '36

"[Miss Ellis] was highly effective on the stage in 'Children of Darkness' and 'The Dybbuk,' but I fear that she is not in her most comfortable mood in the cinema. This, however, is a tribute to her taste, if not to her Thespian skill, for 'Fatal Lady' is hardly the sort of vehicle to appeal to so expert a performer. . . Some of the singing in 'Fatal Lady' is excellent, but it is to be feared that the quality of the plot doesn't quite keep up with it. Such expert performers as Alan Mowbray, Norman Foster and the brilliantly suave John Halliday provide a breath of life to the proceedings, while that handsomely exasperated comic, Edgar Kennedy, brings a note of heroic humor to a minor role." Richard Watts, Jr.

— + N Y Herald Tribune p6 Jl 11 '36

"Some of the unhappiest features of a number of stock movie themes are combined in 'Fatal Lady.' . . As a prima donna's vehicle . . . [the film] is perhaps at its lethal worst. . . It is in the old-fashioned category of vampirism that we must place 'Fatal Lady.'" B. R. C.

— N Y Times p11 Jl 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Fatal Lady' doesn't figure much for the box office. A hodgepodge of entertainment, this film will deliver spotty business at best."

— + Variety p31 Jl 15 '36

FIAT VOLUNTAS DEI. See Your troubles are mine

THE FIGHT. See Der kampf

FINAL HOUR. Columbia 59min Jl 7 '36

Players: Ralph Bellamy, Marguerite Churchill

Director: D. Ross Lederman

"Ralph Bellamy goes to pieces when his wife gets a divorce, and when a girl, sought by the police, hides in his apartment, he saves her. Later, a wandering drunkard, she sees him in a cafe in which she works, and helps him. The cafe owner, in love with her, aids in putting Bellamy back on his feet." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: unsuitable; C: no."

Christian Century p1175 S 2 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 6 '36

"A somewhat routine plot has an exceptionally good opening scene, some exciting moments and a novel trick cleverly used to give punch to the unexpected climax. Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A second-rate program filler."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"A reasonably interesting murder mystery is showing at the Rialto with an unusual angle in the respect that a group of beggars and 'con' men trip up the guilty party in a surprise ending. . . The film is good run-of-the-mill entertainment with Ralph Bellamy and Marguerite Churchill teaming satisfactorily aided by a helpful supporting cast." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 1 '36

"For a brief spurt in the beginning when some straight shooting takes place, 'The Final Hour' moves along fairly competently. Then it begins to encounter difficulties and towards the end it practically surrenders, calls off the dogs and lets the customers walk out of the theater much the same as they came in. . . The performance of the entire cast . . . is fair enough under the circumstances. But in spite of the noble efforts of the actors the film must be set down as another screen disappointment." William Boehnel

- N Y World-Telegram p15a Ag 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Melodrama with plenty of action that makes average entertainment."

+ Box Office p29 Ag 1 '36

"For the minor spots, this yarn will get by on the strength of conscientious work by the cast under Ross Lederman's direction, although the story itself is pretty much along beaten lines."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 1 '36

"Incredible but fairly tense entertainment that is undistinguished in any department, be it story treatment, direction or cast. For the money spent on this production it is to be supposed that Columbia did as well by it as could be expected. . . Hollywood and Columbia can consider this just a fair day's work."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Ag 6 '36

"This film is active and entertaining fare. Rather routine in its conception and background, it contrives to be fast moving and holds the attention. In the lesser spots it should be found satisfactory."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 Jl 6 '36

"Estimate: neighborhood program."

Phila Exhibitor p26 Jl 15 '36

"Elemental stuff, slow, humorless and verbose. A formula picture to chaperon the double deckers. . . Some of the players don't fit the roles and there is, hardly a convincing character in the picture."

- Variety p16 Ag 5 '36

FIRST BABY. 20th century-Fox 75min My 22 '36

Players: Johnny Downs, Shirley Deane, Dixie Dunbar, Jane Darwell

Director: Lewis Seiler

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p102 Je '36

"A and Y: honestly presented domestic drama; C: if interesting."

Parents' M p44 Jl '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It has] oft-used situations handled with a freshening touch."

Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 27 '36

"It's a cross between 'The First Year' and 'Bad Girl,' with bits of many other domestic comedies worked in. Somehow Lamar Trotti, author, and Lewis Seiler, director, have managed to evoke tenderness from their threadbare material. Sentimental, of course, but honest, sincere and sweet." Molly Lewin

+ Script p13 Je 20 '36

FOLLOW YOUR HEART. Republic 85min S 5 '36

Players: Marion Talley, Michael Bartlett, Nigel Bruce, Luis Alberni, Henrietta Crosman

Director: Aubrey Scotto

Music: Victor Schertzinger

Dances: Larry Ceballos

"The plot concerns the adventures of a mad theatrical family. . . Of this group, Miss Talley seems to be the only person approaching normalcy. . . When Alberni returns home with a stranded show troupe Michael Bartlett, manager of the company, literally drafts the girl for a special performance given to raise funds. Eventually he wins her heart and persuades her to continue with the company as prima donna." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

"Lovely music permeates the entire production, which is a wholly charming one. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Well up among the good musical romances, with some of the best singing to be heard on the screen. . . An elaborate production, and a very good cast. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The special significance attached hereto is in the making of the first elaborately mounted musical [by one of Hollywood's smaller producers.] The results accruing from this piece of independent play pioneering are not all that could be expected if production had the benefits of the more expensive talent and less limited exchequer of Hollywood's richer fields, but they do measure well to the standards of a musical romance pattern." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p428 Ag 28 '36

"Unfortunately, the music stops now and then to make way for the plot. Miss Talley sings well, speaks with a Kansas twang, and acts not at all."

+ News-Wk p29 Ag 22 '36

"When Marion warbles, a subtle alchemy is visible; her eyes become luminous, her gestures meaningful; there is a panoramic view of an artist very much in command of a great gift. But handling mere dialogue seems to bore this young lady who obviously finds words of considerable less import than melody, for without music the Talley personality becomes negligible; her face assumes a series of petulant expressions. . . All faults are forgotten . . . or at least forgiven . . . when our prima donna scales the scales, and her rendition of 'Je Suis Titania' from 'Mignon' is a treat for tired ears. . . Larry Ceballos directed a ballet that is enchanting. . . Michael Bartlett is excellent. In magnificent voice, he also impresses with a deft performance. . . As a singing actor Bartlett has few equals on the screen." Herb Sterne

+ Script p11 Ag 29 '36

"Standard pattern of operatic cinema is the story of a pretty U. S. nobody with a glorious voice who rises from obscurity to a triumphant debut at the Metropolitan. Since Soprano Marion Nevada Talley actually had such a career, it might be expected that her first picture would follow the same trite formula. 'Follow Your Heart's' chief asset is that it does not. . . . Definitely wooden as an actress, [Miss Talley] displays a Midwestern twang when speaking, is at ease only when singing arias from 'Mignon' and 'Les Huguenots,' beside which the popular concoctions written for the film are apt to seem unusually hollow."

FOLLOW YOUR HEART—Continued

Time p31 S 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The most lavish production ever attempted by an independent, this musical extravaganza, introducing Marion Talley's nightingale notes to screen audiences, and carrying dance numbers breath-taking in their beauty, will give box office grosses a pleasant boost."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 15 '36

"It is a feast for the eye and ear. . . . Marion Talley and Michael Bartlett play the leading roles and their solos and duets will be a delight to lovers of music."

+ Film Daily p10 Ag 11 '36

"The most ambitious effort ever recorded by an independent producer has been rung up by Republic with its production of 'Follow Your Heart.' It is the tops of class entertainment from an independent and should bring to Republic plenty of shekels for its effort and satisfy exhibitors that big pictures can be made by the little fellows if they have the desire (and the money) to go after them. . . . Marion Talley in her screen debut and Michael Bartlett sing their way to brilliant success in both solos and duets and their musical support is of high quality. Both received big rounds of applause from the preview audience after each number."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 7 '36

"Here is Republic's most lavish offering to date. The real showmanship employed in its production makes it a class attraction that will hold its own with all but the most elaborate specials. . . . Endowed with both mass and class appeal, the picture should click generally."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Ag 8 '36

"Republic shot the works on its No. 1 show on the 1936-37 schedule, with the result a creditable production that will depend on the Talley-Bartlett click for its grosses. Production is A-1, best from the company. Miss Talley is a new name in pictures, though getting an air plug; Bartlett's success with a previous company was not overwhelming. Regardless, Republic can well be proud of its achievement. Estimate: creditable job; deserves strong selling."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 Ag 15 '36

"Most pretentious and ambitious of Nat Levine's Republic efforts, 'Follow Your Heart' has superb tonal quality and pictorial beauty and sets a new high for the organization which compares well with the best of major musical productions. It has high entertainment calibre and will unquestionably justify its showmanly labors at the box office, with especial indication of hit returns in the class houses. . . . Miss Talley is in fine voice and utilizes to the fullest the wide range provided by combination of classics and modern songs."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 7 '36

FORGOTTEN FACES. Paramount 72min My 8 '36

Players: Herbert Marshall, Gertrude Michael, James Burke, Robert Cummings, Jane Rhodes

Director: E. A. Dupont

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"E. A. Dupont's direction is a good job of work wasted: Herbert Marshall, in turn gambler, convict and butler, is easy to watch; Gertrude Michael is not convincing as a thoroughly disreputable character. Robert Cummings and Jane Rhodes, as the delightful young couple, supply the few bright moments in this depressing spectacle. Suitability: adults."

— + Mo Film Bul p103 Je '36

"A: stark drama of hate between husband and wife; Y: sordid; C: no."

Parents' M p44 Jl '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] is so perfect a blend of visual effectiveness in its direction and hokum in its story that it is noteworthy, especially since it provides such captivating entertainment. . . . Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael seem like strange puppets of destiny, sealed in a vacuum from which they cannot escape. Their actions and behavior are fascinating because they are so patently fiction, and pulp-magazine fiction at that. Yet never does one's attention stray from them and the working out of their lilliputian problems. It is not alone their performances, poignant as they are, which makes for this illusion; it is Mr. Dupont's uncanny use of the screen to tell a story absorbingly. . . . Mr. Marshall is excellent. . . . Miss Michael as the worthless woman gives a marvelous performance. While there are faults in the piece, it remains a fascinating melodrama."

Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 Jl 4 '36

"Mr. Marshall gives one of his usual ingratiating, almost overly polished and somehow spinally weak characterizations. A thoughtful and sincere performer, he nevertheless does not impress you as being sufficiently involved emotionally to shoot his wife's lover the way he does. . . . [It] makes a passable though, alas! more than thrice-told tale." B. R. C.

+ — N Y Times p18 Jl 4 '36

"Nothing startling, to be sure, is this drama of a murderer . . . but good enough in every respect to keep you engrossed from beginning to end. . . . There is nothing sensational about the film, but it has enough moments of suspense and excitement to lift it above the average run of pictures." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p11 Jl 6 '36

"A minor melodrama, 'Forgotten Faces,' though somewhat smugly in treatment, has its points." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p55 Jl 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is the second try for Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael as a picture team, and once again the results are far from satisfactory. . . . 'Forgotten Faces' could easily have been first rate. But, for several reasons, it isn't. It won't amount to much at the box office."

— Variety p15 Jl 8 '36

FRANKIE AND JOHNNIE. Republic 67min My 1 '36

Players: Helen Morgan, Chester Morris, Lilyan Tashman, Florence Reed

Director: Chester Erskine

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y and C: no."

Christian Century p1071 Ag 5 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The acting and the singing are good, and the settings create an appropriate atmosphere of unreality. The photography is uninspired. Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p103 Je '36

"A: slow-moving tale; Y: objectionable; C: no."

Parents' M p44 Jl '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The classic ballad of the dance-hall girl and the gambler who 'done her wrong' has been so thoroughly whitewashed since it was first filmed two years ago that it now emerges as only fair screen entertainment. Adults."

+ — Box Office p45 Je 20 '36

FUGITIVE SHERIFF. Columbia 58min Je 1 '36

Players: Ken Maynard. Beth Marion. Walter Miller

Director: Spencer Gordon Bennett

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee
Fox W Coast Bul Jl 18 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 18 '36

"A, Y and C: mediocre Western with good scenery."

Parents' M p47 Ag '36

"[It is] a stereotyped plot. . . Story, direction and acting are second-rate, but the skilled riding and beautiful scenery found in, nearly all Westerns will be enjoyed. Family."

— + Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: standard Maynard."

Phila Exhibitor p24 Je 15 '36

FURY. MGM 90min My 29 '36

Players: Spencer Tracy. Sylvia Sidney. Walter Abel. Frank Albertson. Bruce Cabot

Director: Fritz Lang

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: strong; Y: too strong; C: no."

Christian Century p912 Je 24 '36

"The excellence of the mob scenes and those of the courtroom action with their individual character types attests to the artistry of the director. Thought-provoking entertainment. Adults & young people."

+ Jt Estimates Je 1 '36

"This fine picture is an indictment of lynch law but it is only propagandist by inference and English audiences will find it a very moving drama. Fritz Lang's direction is ingenious and wholly admirable. . . A picture to see. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p103 Je '36

"A: gripping indictment of lynch rule; Y: pretty realistic; C: too brutal."

Parents' M p47 Ag '36

"Adults & young people. Outstanding."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

"Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays."

+ + Wkly Guide Jl 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] is presented so realistically as to terrify one. . . Not pleasant, but exceedingly strong drama admirably done." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p36 Ag '36

Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p246 Je 26 '36

"Those gripping scenes, in which Director Fritz Lang shows how human beings cease to be individuals and become part of a mad mob, display a frightening power. That the film slips off to an ending that loses much of its earlier punch does not prevent this courageously unvarnished document from being a compelling blast against mob rule." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p44 Je 27 '36

"'Fury' is a harrowing and stirring picture to see. . . Except for the usual abrupt and sticky endings—the parting shot of idealism triumphant, satisfactory in itself but choked and faltering—the last third of this film is as impressive as the first. But half-way through we settle down to listen in a courtroom to the wrangling of lawyers—and find ourselves watching an ordinary talkie. . . Lang's direction of the mob-scenes is magnificent. . . Spencer Tracy has never done anything better than his work in this film." John Marks

+ New Statesman & Nation p14 Jl 4 '36

"'Fury,' with all its limitations, is among the most honest, forthright films to emerge from a Hollywood cutting-room. . . The second half of the film almost renders invalid its object by shifting the emphasis of guilt from the lynchers to vengeful Spencer Tracy. . . Lynching has an economic and racial background that is necessary to a complete understanding of the problem and the film was faulty for the want of it. . . Apart from these weaknesses, in all probability compromises demanded by the box-office experts and not of Lang's making, 'Fury' is the most forceful indictment of lynch justice ever projected on a screen. . . [It is] a memorable example of film making at its apogee." Robert Stebbins

+ + New Theatre p11 Jl '36

"In making 'Fury'—an eloquent, grim anti-lynch picture—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer dropped all the formulas. . . The splendid acting and photography are no small part of the picture's merit. Because of the integrity with which it presents the subject, 'Fury' is one of the most praiseworthy films ever produced. Unmistakably, it shows the effectiveness of the motion picture for educational propaganda."

+ + News-Wk p39 Je 13 '36

"There is no time or space here to sit down and choose the magnificence of adjective which will justly represent the quality of a great film and at the same time titillate the doubters to rush away and see it. . . I should say that no film of this year will touch it short of a miracle. . . To Hollywood and the American censors must go irrevocable credit for turning out about their own country a movie that in any other part of the civilized world would have been instantly banned as subversive, disorderly, and a subterranean growth from the Communist party. Best film of the quarter." Alistair Cooke

+ + Sight & Sound p26 Summer '36

"'Fury' is astonishing, the only film I know to which I have wanted to attach the epithet of 'great.' . . Any other film this year is likely to be dwarfed by Herr Lang's extraordinary achievement: no other director has got so completely the measure of his medium, is so consistently awake to the counterpoint of sound and image. Even 'Louis Pasteur,' an honest, interesting and well-made picture, suffers by comparison, and seems half-way to the stage. . . Lucky the film-goer who has been able to see. . . the work of the greatest director."

Graham Greene

+ + Spec p15 Jl 3 '36

"This picture is being acclaimed one of the most courageous ever attempted by the American cinema industry. That's going a little far, we think. . . It is disheartening to record that 'Fury' sold itself down the river of regret. It practically apologized for being vigorous. It took back everything it said, and ended on a note of fine fellowship and all's-right-with-the-world, which we know from the first four reels isn't so."

FURY—Continued

+ — Stage p8 J1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The picture has been especially well cast. . . Tracy, in particular, gives a memorable performance, one that will stand out in your memory for a long, long time. . . 'Fury' is a picture that will not be easily forgotten, both because of the fearlessness of its theme, and because of the excellent manner in which it is presented."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 J1 4 '36

G

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN. Paramount 95min
S 4 '36

Players: Gary Cooper. Madeleine Carroll. Akim Tamiroff. Dudley Digges. Porter Hall. William Frawley. J. M. Kerrigan
Director: Lewis Milestone

Based on the novel of the same title by Charles G. Booth. "[It is an] account of one young American adventurer's attempt to buy machine guns for one group of Chinese while another old American adventurer and his daughter try to deliver the same machine guns to the enemy." (N Y Sun)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: probably too strong; C: no."

Christian Century p1239 S 16 '36

"[It is] a grim, dynamic drama. . . Too strong fare for children. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency S 10 '36

"A thrilling drama of rebellion in China. . . The photography is excellent and the acting of Akim Tamiroff as General Yang and Gary Cooper as the American is likewise excellent. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide S 5 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This shrewdly wrought melodrama . . . sustains the spectator's interest and Mr. Odets is to be congratulated on eschewing anything of intrusive levity. Hence the action story for the most part rings true. . . Although it is always a relief to witness Mr. Cooper and Miss Carroll together, and there is nothing but praise for their performances, the role which carries most weight is that of General Yang, superbly played by Akim Tamiroff." Mordaunt Hall

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 5 '36

"The General Died at Dawn' is an exciting melodrama. . . Director Lewis Milestone sometimes overplays the melodramatic note."

Christian Science Monitor p17 S 5 '36

"Clifford Odets is a brilliant playwright and he turned out a screen play of high literary merit. Lewis Milestone put it on the screen with superb artistry. Paramount provided a splendid cast and a most impressive production. Unfortunately, however, the picture succeeds only in being illustrated literature and not screen entertainment. . . Throughout the picture screen values constantly are sacrificed to theatre values, as could be expected from a script prepared by a man with no screen experience and trained only to express himself in the language of the stage. Gary Cooper's name has box-office strength, but I am afraid it is not strong enough to counteract the effect of adverse word-of-mouth criticism the slow pace of the production will prompt."

+ Hollywood Spec p11 S 12 '36

"Vividly staged, tensely acted and punctuated by freshly arresting dialogue, 'The General Died at Dawn' is an intriguing if somewhat mannered screen melodrama. It is the product of talented collaborators. Doing his first job for the cinema Clifford Odets has adapted it imaginatively, writing some incisive and provocative speech that gives depth and power to the characters and situations. . . If the production proves confused and even pretentious at times, it is largely because so much stylized technique has gone into the filming of a rather ordinary narrative. Mr. Odets, the most talented of our younger playwrights, has had remarkable success with his first scenario. . . There is so much excellence in 'The General Died at Dawn' that its faltering moments are more disappointing than they would be in a run-of-the-mill production. . . Brilliantly acted, it is a photoplay that will well repay your attendance, particularly if you do not expect too great things from the entertainment." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 S 3 '36

"The General Died at Dawn,' an action thriller of the 'Shanghai Express' school goes slightly arty at times, which is a strange thing for a thriller to do. This gets in the way of excitement too much of the time, as punches telegraphed ahead seldom register with the expected force. Partly because of its cast and director, but quite as much because of its provocative title, 'The General Died at Dawn' had been anticipated as one of the season's important productions. It is instead, although a fair picture, one of the season's first disappointments. Star and director have each proved that they can do better than this, although most of the film's faults may be laid to stilted dialogue and a deadly slowness of pace." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p16 S 3 '36

"An out-and-out adventure tale, with far less 'social consciousness' than Mr. Odets' admirers will believe, it is active, preposterous, hair-raising and entertaining in equal and generous proportions. . . Mr. Odets' script is vigorous and colorful, even if it is not dedicated entirely to the class struggle, and Mr. Milestone's direction demonstrates again his thorough mastery of his craft. The players are faultless." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p17 S 3 '36

"So much undoubtedly has been expected of Clifford Odets' first screen play, 'The General Died at Dawn' . . . that this report is likely to sound disparaging. For although Mr. Odets has much to say about oppression and the glories of the times to come, he has not said it, in this reporter's opinion, with the full substance and vitality that have characterized his writings for the theater. . . But whatever else Mr. Odets may have said or left unsaid, he and his director, Lewis Milestone, have brought a freedom, a flow and an imaginative treatment to their work seldom achieved in the cinema. Although dullness is not lacking in the film—it should be subjected to some drastic cutting—the production is, by the sheer excess of its invention and treatment, more effective than it deserves." William Boehnel

N Y World-Telegram p25 S 3 '36

"The beautiful lady, the soldier of fortune, and a surrounding assembly of sinister little yellow men are luscious ingredients for melodrama; and they are most satisfactorily exploited in 'The General Died at Dawn.' The film is a thoroughly lively one, and distinguished, too; lifted above the average of its kind by the general handling of Lewis Milestone, by the Clifford Odets dialogue, and by the behavior and performance not only of Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll but of the subsidiary Orientals and Occidentals involved. . .

Dressed up to kill in Milestone's richest furbelows, all this adventure and excitement should provide almost anyone with a snug hour and a half." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p94 S 12 '36

News-Wk p42 S 12 '36

"Leftist admirers of Playwright Clifford Odets may find it a little hard to get excited over the issues he raises in his first screenplay. . . If plaintive radicals were inclined to inquire last week 'Odets, where is thy sting?', sophisticated cinemaddicts were less surprised at the speed with which Hollywood had apparently caused Playwright Odets to modify his creed, than at that with which Playwright Odets had obviously acquired Hollywood's technique. Directed in somewhat over-ostentatious style by Lewis Milestone, 'The General Died at Dawn' remains a first-rate melodrama, vividly penned, performed and photographed."

+ Time p28 S 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The thoroughly splendid and natural performance that fans have learned to expect from Gary Cooper and a supporting cast of general excellence, working through a thrill-packed, stimulatingly different story under effective direction, make this unadulterated entertainment from start to finish—a sure money picture in any situation. Family."

+ Box Office p23 S 12 '36

"Excellent performances by Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll and Akim Tamiroff save this picture from the complete oblivion which it otherwise deserves, and to which the author of the screen play apparently intended it to descend. Here is one of the most outstanding cases where an excellent novel is slaughtered to make a moving picture. . . The situations and dialogue are at times so ridiculous that you are reminded of the old 'Hoss Opera' days, instead of this era of intelligent thought and vision. . . Lewis Milestone, the director, has been responsible for many fine pictures, but he too seems to have taken a holiday during the making of this picture, for several of the faults of the picture can be accounted for only by poor direction. . . This picture is not recommended as box-office, but will probably get by on the strength of its names and the novel."

— Canadian Moving Pict Digest p5 S 12 '36

"Paramount steps into the spotlight with a magnificent melodrama of intrigue in the Chinese civil war that has every element for a major box office wallop. Not least of these is a leading role for Gary Cooper that not only keeps him right up where he landed in 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town' but that will add to his prestige and his value. . . The novel by Charles G. Booth has been brilliantly dramatized by Clifford Odets. This is his first produced screenplay and it proves him a master of structure, of incident and characterization. Except for one or two florid speeches the dialogue has drive and enormous vitality."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 1 '36

"Developing a romance which is contrasted with the dramatic theme, the story is told in a series of suspense-laden situations in which action and dialogue are forcefully combined to create an atmosphere of danger and tragedy. . . Primarily a man's attraction, a studied exploitation treatment of the film's romantic content should aid in arousing audience interest in the production among women patrons."

Motion Pict Daily p3 S 2 '36

"Here is hokum on the half-shell, laid on thick and unabashedly by experts; a tiny bit too long, a tiny bit too ponderous but real entertainment withal and cinch box office. At first contact it seems sort of a shock to realize that Clifford Odets, the white-haired boy of the radical element in New York theatricals and Lewis Milestone, the breathlessly arty director, have combined their talents to turn out lurid melodrama. Nevertheless, that is what this picture is—and the boys have done a swell job of it. It's Odets first film attempt and his hand is distinctly visible throughout."

+ Variety p16 S 9 '36

"Oriental in its motivations, settings and pace, inclined to be ponderous and sombre, and naturally more of a men's audience picture than women's, 'The General Died at Dawn' may expect spotty returns, despite the Gary Cooper-Madeleine Carroll selling label, and will need smart exploitation to cash for full value on its merits. Nature of the melodrama will put limitations on its appeal, although production is ably handled from all angles within scope of the material. Tale lacks leaven of humor and compensating lightness for its deadly involvements."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 1 '36

GENTLEMAN FROM LOUISIANA. Republic
70min Ag 17 '36

Players: Eddie Quillan, Chic Sale, Charlotte Henry, Marjorie Gatenon, John Miljan

Director: Irving Pichel

"The story is built around episodes in the life of Tod Sloan. It is the tale of a clean-hearted lad with a love for horses and a burning ambition to win success as a jockey. He, like Sloan, is the inventor of the modern racing seat and with it he rises to spectacular heights." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mildly amusing; Y and C: good of kind."
Christian Century p1175 S 2 '36

"Romance and racing blend harmoniously to make an enjoyable film. General patronage."
+ Nat Legion of Decency Ag 27 '36

"Skillfully directed and well acted, with Chic Sale and Eddie Quillan deserving of special mention. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"A tender and moving story of a jockey's love for his horse, nicely acted especially by the young hero. Several exciting horse races add to the film's enjoyment. Family-junior."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Eddie Quillan would get somewhere if producers would give him more opportunities to display his wares. . . Quillan has a rather conventional part, which he succeeds in making ingratiatingly interesting. It provides him with an opportunity to display a wide range of emotions. . . The story is rather obvious; we know what is going to happen, and our attention is kept alive by our interest in watching how the obvious end is to be reached. It is fundamentally sound dramatic construction to let the audience know what is going to happen. It permits it to take an intelligent interest in each step of the progress toward the known end. For that reason I found the little picture entertaining."

+ Hollywood Spec p9 Ag 29 '36

"Eddie Quillan is one of the most persuasive juveniles on the screen. His incisive naturalness, a gift for genial comedy and song-and-dance routines lifted 'The Sophomore' and a host of other Pathé comedies into the realm of entertainment and box office smashes. . . The costumes add a new note to horse-race operas and director Irving Pichel draws pace and human interest from a stereotyped formula that demands a nose-to-nose track finale." Herb Sterne

Script p12 Ag 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Paced by the splendid performances of Eddie Quillan and Chic Sale, and booted down the back stretch by a top notch story of early race

GENTLEMAN FROM LOUISIANA—Continued
track days in the old South, this life story of Tod Slocane is a commendable first effort on the part of Director Irving Pichel. Family."
+ Box Office p31 Ag 22 '36

"It makes a very nice program number and should appeal to regular audiences. The [children] will like it, as the horse racing atmosphere is exciting and allows for a lot of action. The director has captured the simplicity of the piece and he conveys its mood in a most pleasant manner."
+ Film Daily p7 Ag 15 '36

"This human and unpretentious offering,
while not continuously exciting, has many merits and will fare well generally in dual harness."
+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 12 '36

"The story offers entertaining excitement played against the background of the sporting world in the 'Gay Nineties.' . . Throughout the story such characters as 'Diamond Jim'
Brady, Steve Brodie and John L. Sullivan enter the background adding to the picture's appeal.
[It] has wide appeal and should fit happily on most programs."
+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Ag 13 '36

"Estimate: pleasant neighborhood program."
+ Phila Exhibitor p41 S 1 '36

"The Gentleman from Louisiana' [is] a fast-moving sympathetic picture which is good entertainment in any program division."
+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 12 '36

GIRL OF THE OZARKS. Paramount 67min
Je 12 '36

Players: Virginia Weidler. Henrietta Cros-man. Leif Erikson. Elizabeth Russell
Director: William Shea

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Too sad for children. Adults." Am Legion
Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A production made outstanding by the remarkable ability of little Virginia Weidler, who naturally and convincingly portrays the gamut of emotions and who with simplicity and conviction expresses a child's frustration and despair. . . The plot is routine with a very weak and abrupt ending, but the child actress and her supporting cast, as well as the beautifully photographed mountain scenery, lift the picture far above the ordinary. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"A sad little story, overdrawn and not entirely consistent. It offers, however, some good characterizations but its ethical value for family audiences is debatable." Nat Soc of New England Women

"With a theme concerning the salvaging of an underprivileged and misunderstood child this picture presents a somewhat over-sentimentalized and at times, unconvincing story of the child of a poor Ozark mother. . . This social drama is well adapted for the enjoyment of the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Je 27 '36

"This true picture of a primitive people in our own land is depressing but starkly realistic in its human interest and convincing acting by the entire cast. Family."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Je 20 '36

"Family."
Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"The picture's weakness is that it is too consistently depressing. Though we are trained by current literature to associate tragedy with the people of this locale, the introduction of a lighter note would be welcome. Adolescents, 12-16: possible; children, 8-12: too emotional and depressing."

+ — Motion Pict R Jl '36

"A trivial story is ably directed and appealingly portrayed. Family, but too sad for small children."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 17
'36

"A: sentimental drama of mountain people;
Y and C: interesting if somewhat depressing."
Parents' M p69 S '36

"Family."
Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The results appear favorable in terms of Miss Weidler, but less auspicious from a box office angle. Selection of the yarn for its tearjerking was no mistake, but the hill-billy flubdub is just a bit too seedy and the title makes no attempts whatsoever to cover up. With the family and juvenile audiences there won't be any trouble. Bigger houses, however, are out, and dualing has to be taken for granted."

+ — Variety p18 Ag 12 '36

GIRLS' DORMITORY. 20th century-Fox 65min
Ag 7 '36

Players: Simone Simon. Constance Collier.
Ruth Chatterton. Herbert Marshall

Director: Irving Cummings

Based on the play, Matura, by Ladislaus
Fodor. The plot concerns a young school girl in a strict German girls' school who falls in love with a middle-aged professor. He in turn is loved by an older teacher. When the young girl finds this out, she is heart-broken and runs away to Paris. The professor gives up the woman who has loved him for years and follows the young girl.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: excellent; Y: doubtful value and effect."
Christian Century p1119 Ag 19 '36

"The outdoor fencing scene is one long to be remembered, and all exteriors show fine selection and photography. Adults & young people."
Am Legion Auxiliary

"This delightful picture, primarily for adults, offers an interesting psychological study in the reactions of young people and adults to a given situation. . . Adults: good; family: no; 14-18:
no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The story is not a particularly profound one, still the production has a certain haunting quality due entirely to the personality and facility of the vivacious little French star,
Simone Simon. . . Simone has unusual ability and responds to moods as does a delicate instrument. Herbert Marshall and Ruth Chatterton give excellent performances—better than the story warrants. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Inappropriate title. Mature." DAR

"An artistic and skillfully directed production with a very fine cast and careful attention to detail. Vivid and entertaining for mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A thoroughly psychological and convincing social drama. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Deft and understanding direction and a gifted cast again prove their importance in the making of a distinguished photoplay, and a story that might easily have been ordinary is lifted to superior heights by the artistry with which it is handled. . . Adolescents: mature; children: no." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ag 8 '36

"A rarely beautiful picture distinguished by unusually fine camera work. . . Especially fine directorial effects give the picture unusual entertainment value. Adults & young people."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Jl 28 '36

"Best of the month. Mature."
+ Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"The story is well developed by a capable cast. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Ag 20 '36

"Outstanding."
+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"The new French star has an attractive personality, and is much helped by her co-stars and some excellent minor characters. Family."
Wkly Guide Ag 15 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Mlle. Simon has an unspoiled and ingenuous manner that is eminently suited to the part she is expected to play. . . The moments when the picture resembles 'Maedchen in Uniform' most closely in its attempt to set forth a delicate study of adolescent girlhood are the best parts of the picture. But those moments are not so frequent as might be wished." E. F. Melvin
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 15 '36

"If you like romantic drama, well acted, with a touch of European juvenile psychology running through the main thread, you will enjoy 'Girls' Dormitory.'" Laura Elston
Canadian M p36 Ag '36

"Simone Simon, capable in both comedy and drama, makes a pleasant first American appearance. . . The outcome points the need of sympathetic understanding and avoidance of judging others."
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 15 '36

"Simone Simon has the divine spark. If Hollywood, which has destroyed more star material than it has made stars, will treat this girl with ordinary common sense, will put her in but few pictures and select the few wisely, she can become within the next two years one of the three or four leading box-office magnets. . . 'Girls' Dormitory' is in every way a thoroughly satisfactory picture. Irving Cummings has given it masterly direction."
+ Hollywood Spec p8 Ag 1 '36

"European in setting, 'Girls' Dormitory' is also the censorable sort of story that the European studios generally contrive with more adult intelligence than Hollywood is willing to dare. . . Though, in bald outline, 'Girls' Dormitory' is no more than a mild variation of the perpetual triangle theme, the film has moments when it is truly outstanding." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p45 S 19 '36

"Critics are accepting Mlle. Simon enthusiastically, even taking pains to assure readers that correct pronunciation of her name is 'See-moan See-moan.' . . Nothing Simon can say, nothing any critic will write, can help her so much as her first American picture, 'Girls' Dormitory.' . . She combines impishness with fresh, appealing youth. She is a capable, resilient actress, thus far justifies all that has been written about her."
+ Lit Digest p20 Ag 29 '36

"[Mlle. Simon's] American screen debut is auspicious. Endowed with a vivid and arresting personality and an exciting gift for swift changes of mood, she dominates the picture in no uncertain manner. She is not conventionally pretty, but she combines the ingenuous charm of a young girl with the intriguing glamour of a woman of the world. . . Less work has gone into the creation of a distinctive and persuasive screen drama than in affording a setting for the new star. . . It pays scant heed to credible motivation or characterization. The atmosphere of the school just before commencement has been caught in too precise outlines and the teachers typed to a point of caricature. . . If 'Girls' Dormitory' is far from a fine photoplay, this does not alter the fact that it has given birth to a new star." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 29 '36

"Mlle. Simon . . . does not, probably because the script could not make up its mind about the film's final mood, emerge as a great actress in this, her first Hollywood production. . . She'll need a stronger picture than this to launch her into stardom, if and when she is ready for that. 'Girls' Dormitory' hesitates too much before the implications of its story. It pulls up at the brink of tragedy and laughs off, with a scene that must have been added after the final cutting, all the emotion that had gone before. . . There was material for a really fine picture. Some of it the cast and director have realized. There are sensitive moments, and some delicious bits of comedy." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun Ag 31 '36

"Officially this has no weight, but we suggest that Congress cancel a substantial part of France's war debts in consideration of its gift of Simone Simon to Hollywood. . . Virtually unknown here before the picture was screened, she had become a star of the first magnitude at its conclusion. . . The Hollywood inevitable occurs, even to the scene of renunciation. . . and a decidedly unsatisfactory happy ending. For this should have been, as it started out to be a poignant tale of breathless young infatuation and transient despair." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 29 '36

"[Mlle. Simon's] appeal is a languid kind of come hither, rather startling in her role of a teen age student, but showing a potential depth the film tragically fails to exploit. Her employers should take off her pinafores—make her act her age, and go to work on her tonal huskiness. . . 'Girls' Dormitory' is not, as you may have inferred, an Elsie book 'Maedchen in Uniform' but a trite, if earnest traveltogue of Young Woodley's Sister in the Tyrol. . . It could have been a beautiful story and it still is, but the Fox people were unwise even to think of grinding it. It is a pity, but it is true, that the films can do nothing about the tragedy of adolescence sex expressed in adult language. These things should be left to the unfettered stage, where they can talk grown-up." Douglas Gilbert
+ N Y World-Telegram p9a Ag 29 '36

"The whole thing, the quality of youth all over the place, the Herbert Marshall performance as the master, Ruth Chatterton's presentation of the instructress who also has an eye on her superior, the adult note of Constance Collier and J. Edward Bromberg, and a newcomer, Simone Simon, as the girl, all shape into something unusually nice. . . It's a smooth and polished and touching affair. This Mlle. Simon is a childish and expert little thing who has just run over, I believe, from Paris." John Mosher
+ New Yorker p67 S 5 '36

"Twentieth Century-Fox hasn't provided much of a story, but a whale of a cast makes a lot out of it. . . In her first American film, Miss Simon pouts and putters about seductively, rather like a high-brow Clara Bow. Her acting is mostly French accent, but her sex appeal makes up for that."
News-Wk p31 Ag 8 '36

"It has received tactful and ingratiating treatment from adaptor Gene Markey who has done a splendid writing job. . . Irving Cummings' direction is laudably delicate, causes events to flow smoothly, wisely permits pantomime to develop characters. . . A picture to be recommended. . . and seen." Herb Sterne
+ Script p10 S 12 '36

"The picture is meant to be a tour de force for the newest European import, a French actress named Simone Simon. The impulse to present this fresh personality in all its vitality just about took the producers off their feet. . . We see [Herbert Marshall] in the year's most distressing dénuement, proposing to and being accepted by a baby-doll siren."

GIRLS' DORMITORY—Continued

Stage p10 S '36

"Although Herbert Marshall and Ruth Chatterton are billed above her, Simone Simon is the star of this picture. Producer Darryl Zanuck designed it expressly to provide a vehicle for her U. S. debut, and Screenwriter Gene Markey and Director Irving Cummings have intelligently fitted the material to her talents. . . Helped by U. S. lighting and No. 28 makeup, Simone Simon is more embraceable than in her last French picture to reach the U. S. (Lac aux Dames)."

+ Time p30 Ag 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A competent cast, Irving Cummings' usual convincing direction and a smart adaptation by Gene Markey give the youthful Simone Simon an impressive background for her American screen debut; and a resultant feature promising well for her box office possibilities. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 8 '36

"With all the advance ballyhoo placed in back of this little French actress, it looked as if the producers might be overplaying their hand, but the reaction of the audience at the Roxy at the opening performance proved impressively that they were right. Simone Simon took the audience by storm, and the emotional reaction from the work of this clever and charming personality was plainly noticeable throughout the theatre. The story is packed with appeal and charm and a quality of electric tenseness that grips you. While nothing of tremendous dramatic importance occurs, yet the suspense keeps building, and it is the type of entertainment that gets the femmes of all ages and stations in life."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 29 '36

"The film is particularly notable for the magnificent playing of its co-stars, Ruth Chatterton and Herbert Marshall, and the American debut of Simone Simon, a young French actress destined to go far. . . Hers is a performance unprecedented in Hollywood productions. Fresh, bright and alive, her face mirrors expressions with an ease that transcends acting. Consciously or unconsciously her native talent is distinctively out of the ordinary and she is certain to attract much attention from American audiences."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 25 '36

"Miss Simon shows exceptional promise and her debut is aided considerably by the accomplished work of Marshall and the sympathetic cooperation of Miss Chatterton. The scenes reflecting the life of the girls' school contrast pleasantly with the story's weighty theme."

Motion Pict Daily p6 Jl 27 '36

"The picture should appeal to women, but its draw depends on the Simon buildup. Both Marshall and Chatterton are star material. 20th Century-Fox has given the show a nice production, direction is okay, familiar story has been well handled."

Phila Exhibitor p36 Ag 15 '36

"Few imported players ever were given a more auspicious buildup than this newcomer (Mlle. Simon). . . No good reason why she should not at once become a drawing attraction. Chances are all in her favor. . . Herbert Marshall does not always get the most out of his assignment as the headmaster. He is stiff and unresponsive in spots. On the other hand Ruth Chatterton gets the best assignment she has had recently and infuses her part as the assistant instructor with a tenderness and understanding she has not always been permitted to reveal of late."

+ Variety p18 S 2 '36

"Simone Simon was launched at the Chinese last night by 20th-Fox and her launching was in much the same fashion as the Queen Mary. The French importation has about everything desirable in a young screen star. With an impish naivete that is refreshing, ability away above the average and looks that are compelling, she should reach the top in a few strides. Darryl Zanuck has made no mistakes in her initial appearance. Though he surrounded her with the toughest opposition, she comes through with honors. Screen play by Gene Markey is an excellent job of writing and dialoging."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 25 '36

GIVE ME YOUR HEART. Warner 88min Jl 18 '36

Players: Kay Francis, George Brent, Roland Young, Patric Knowles, Frieda Inescort

Director: Archie L. Mayo

Based on the play, Sweet Aloes, by Jay Mallory. "Kay Francis is the mother of a child born out of wedlock. Influenced by Roland Young, she surrenders the infant to its father's family. Later, married to George Brent her life is a tragic torment. On the verge of a mental crackup, which would wreck her hopes for happiness, Young brings her and Brent together. Miss Francis . . . and [Brent's wife], Miss Inescort, visit the sleeping youngster. At peace with Miss Inescort, for whom she previously had had nothing but vicious hate, and sure that the suffering she has undergone has atoned for her sin, she dedicates her life to being Brent's true wife." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This possible but not probable chapter in high-class society gives Kay Francis an excellent opportunity to be emotional to the nth degree. It is doubtful if her efforts will prove entertaining to the usual run of theatergoers. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The social sin is here made to appear desirable because of a situation beyond the control of either participant; hence it is destructive to ethical and social values. Adults; matter of taste; family: no; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The picture starts with a bad situation and works out a solution that requires an entire new school of thought in order to appreciate it. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Entertaining psychological drama. Adults. Good." DAR

"Perhaps the relation between an invalid wife and the mother of her husband's child is a theme unfitted to the wide distribution of the motion picture but certainly this finished production with its adroit handling of situations, its philosophical humor, its real sanity in human predicaments will delight discriminating adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It is] a dignified social drama from point of portrayal but of a sophisticated type best suited to adult audiences." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 1 '36

"The picture is artistically produced with the interesting background of two continents, beautiful costumes and lovely music. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Jl 18 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Jl 15 '36

"Though unconventional in theme [it] nevertheless makes absorbing drama. The cast is an exceptionally well chosen one and the direction of Archie Mayo is skillful and understanding. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 22 '36

"Delicate situations competently handled by a strong cast. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 30 '36

"A: good social drama; Y: sophisticated; C: no."

Parents' M p69 S '36

"Its wise dictum that to overcome a bogie one must face it rather than bury it, is valuable. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"A difficult subject handled with admirable delicacy. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide S 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 12 '36

"The picture is an intelligent use of talkie technique, one of the best examples of it ever to reach the screen. The delicate theme, which so easily could have been made censorable, is handled throughout with the best of taste, there being nothing in it to offend the most narrow-minded purist. Archie Mayo's direction is superb."

+ Hollywood Spec p5 Jl 18 '36

"A restrained, sleekly articulate study of thwarted lives, this is a picture of moods rather than action. And though it is at times rather dull, there is a quietly powerful emotion about the whole thoughtful affair that should appeal to a great number of women. . . [It is] gently tearful diversion." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p39 Ag 22 '36

"[It is] a mild moral lesson that one sin doesn't make a sinner. . . Somewhat daring in plot for movie-public youth, the film-drama preaches sympathy for the woman with a past."

News-Wk p31 Ag 8 '36

"We remember being rather stirred by the heroine's plight on the stage. We remember being amused by Miss Francis' emotional antics on the screen. Roland Young has some fine Mallory lines to say, and his disposition of them is certainly worth your hearing."

— + Stage p10 S '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Ultra modern and sophisticated problem drama, which affords Kay Francis an opportunity to occupy a superbly-enacted emotional role, this will have a particular appeal to women, will be generally acceptable to all. Adults."

+ Box Office p25 Jl 25 '36

"This will appeal especially to women. Its delicate subject has been handled with good taste and intelligence. It gives Kay Francis a strong emotional role and she does unusually good work."

+ Film Daily p11 Jl 14 '36

"An intelligent and penetrating problem play of society lightened by a due proportion of real comedy and produced with fine insight and dignity. It gives Kay Francis a highly sympathetic emotional role in which she triumphs and it adds thought-provoking entertainment elements that will make it strong box office, especially on the class levels."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 10 '36

"This is a fine class picture. It is a serious dramatic problem play. Based on a delicate, intimate theme, it is carefully prepared and directed with intelligent good taste and impressively acted. Essentially an adult attraction, its appeal is aimed directly at feminine patronage. Yet, blending distinctive drama with engaging comedy, it is of a character almost certain to make a forceful impression upon generally mature audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Jl 11 '36

"Drama that women will like, this is adult stuff that has been handled with good taste. . . What the picture does depends on the women's draw."

Phila Exhibitor p38 Ag 1 '36

"Following her top performance in 'White Angel' with a role even more exacting in its dramatic demands, Kay Francis will win a new audience and increase her value as a Warners star asset in this picture. . . Among women especially it should receive much word-of-mouth benefit. This, coupled with the name, an exceptionally fine supporting cast and an impressive production in every respect, should register substantially."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 10 '36

GLORY TRAIL. Crescent 65min

Players: Tom Keene, Joan Barclay

Director: Lynn Shores

"With the end of the Civil War, an unsundered band of Confederates, headed by Tom Keene, goes to settle in the west. On the way they meet a group of northerners of which Joan Barclay is a member. There is a natural animosity, but under Keene's leadership, everyone is getting on well and he and Joan are falling in love. . . The lovers marry in a wholesale marriage ceremony to which the southern boys have brought their girls from back east." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"All of the desirable bang-bang of a typical Western, but with a story structure which takes it out of the formula category, this first E. B. Derr production of his Tom Keene series augurs well for Crescent's future as a producer of good action films. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Jl 25 '36

"In using the unsundered rebel Confederates, in the settling of the West, the producer struck on an interesting and novel idea. It makes for forceful action and dramatic entertainment. . . With its historical setting, audiences generally should like ['Glory Trail'] and [children] especially should go for it in a big way."

+ Film Daily p8 Jl 10 '36

"An outdoor action picture combining much that is novel with standby elements, this picture is an auspicious inaugural effort. . . The picture should appeal to those who like to see their entertainment move."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Jl 13 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p39 Ag 1 '36

"Built on substantial story, with interesting motivation and away from the cut-and-dried Western pattern, without neglecting the sure-fire action ingredients, 'The Glory Trail' offers good entertainment for audiences at which it is directed."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 8 '36

GO GET-'EM HAINES. Republic 62min Je 15 '36

Players: William Boyd, Sheila Terry, Eleanor Hunt

Director: Sam Newfield

A mystery tale in which a reporter who boards a steamer for a story about an absconding financier finds himself involved in a murder mystery.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Objectionable in part. Objection: the killer, realizing he is trapped, commits suicide."
Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

GO GET-'EM HAINES—Continued

"A and Y: fair; C: not recommended."
Parents' M p47 Ag '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: good action murder mystery."
+ Phila Exhibitor p27 Jl 15 '36

GORGEOUS HUSSY. MGM 105min Ag 28 '36

Players: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore, Franchot Tone, Melvyn Douglas, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi

Director: Clarence Brown

Based on the novel of the same title by Samuel Hopkins Adams. "The story . . . concerns the political turmoil of states' rights and Union rights in 1823 when America was still young and 'not yet beyond an occasional growing-pain.' The historical characters and events revolve—in this fictionalized version—about the life and loves of Peggy Eaton, daughter of an inn-keeper, and finally First Lady of the White House as the niece of President Andrew Jackson." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fine of kind; Y and C: doubtful interest."
Christian Century p1239 S 16 '36

"It is very well cast and all [the cast members] are to be complimented on their fine performance in this historical drama. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture is certainly popular entertainment of the highest order. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"This engrossing fiction has an exceptionally convincing historical background, fine characterizations, and expert direction. Mature. Excellent." DAR

"A worthwhile historic drama, valuable for its visualization of a day that is past and as a vital human document. Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This charming mixture of history and fiction should be greatly interesting to all. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 5 '36

"Family-mature."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 25 '36

"Best of the month."

+ + Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"An all-star cast lends glamour to this very interesting and thrilling portrayal of life in the days of Andrew Jackson. Lionel Barrymore makes 'Old Hickory' live again in a performance which outshines all of his past successes, and Beulah Bondi as his pipe-smoking spouse is superb. Family. Special merit."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

"Any deviation from history may be forgiven as this film gives us an admirable picture of the times, beautifully acted and superbly mounted. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

"Magnificently produced and attention-compelling is this fascinating picture of love, jealousy and intrigue. . . . Almost unparalleled is the brilliancy of Clarence Brown's direction; meticulous attention to every detail has given beauty, life and power to his work. A distinguished cast, each expertly chosen for his or her part, each giving a skillful and noteworthy characterization so realistic one really lives the story. . . . Truly a great picture. Family-mature."

+ + Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Suggested for schools and libraries. Family. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide Ag 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have produced a most engaging picture. . . . It is a happy blending of fact and fancy, a film which undoubtedly would have been more dramatic had truth been adhered to, but, one that is, nevertheless, intriguing, with definite characterizations in several instances and cleverly written dialogue. . . . The film cannot be weighed as an historical document, except for certain portraits. However, as a diversion, it is highly satisfactory. And so is this Peggy, so long as one does not refresh one's memory by digging up the facts." Mor-daunt Hall

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 12 '36

"Many fine qualities flavor 'The Gorgeous Hussy,' a vivid play of human life that skillfully blends dramatic and romantic American fact with fiction. . . . There is evidence everywhere of authenticity of reproduction, and it is well-rounded entertainment by an excellent cast."

J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p487 S 18 '36

"'The Gorgeous Hussy' is, I believe, the most expert job Director Brown has turned out. . . . Clarence gives us a new Joan Crawford, an attractive, softened and gentle girl without false eye-lashes and extravagant make-up that in previous pictures suggested the actress playing a part. . . . Lionel Barrymore never appeared on the screen to better advantage. Beulah Bondi gives a superb performance, by long odds the greatest of her screen career."

+ Hollywood Spec p10 S 12 '36

"It cost a sum to turn a counting-house clerk pale, it surrounds Joan Crawford with a failure-proof cast. But it accomplished the filming of a glamorous, piquant incident in American history and gave Miss Crawford the best opportunity she ever has had in motion-pictures. Fact and fiction have been expertly meshed to make the story of impetuous Peggy Eaton a cinema romance of impressive stature. . . . Barrymore was never better than in this rôle. The younger men are no less powerful. Director Clarence Brown has put his picture together with unusual cunning. It emerges [as] one of the finest pictures of the year, actually the best Miss Crawford ever has made. Her dignity and composure are noteworthy."

+ + Lit Digest p17 S 12 '36

"A colorful and heart-warming saga of American history has been re-captured on the screen in 'The Gorgeous Hussy.' . . . Handsomely staged and persuasively acted, the motion picture translation of Samuel Hopkins Adams's gaudy novel forms a rich and entertaining pageant of life in the Andrew Jackson era. . . . There has been no great adherence to documentary evidence in the work. . . . As a matter of fact, it is Andrew Jackson and his pipe-smoking wife, Rachel, who dominate the most captivating passages in 'The Gorgeous Hussy.' . . . In the title rôle Joan Crawford is handsome, although century-old costumes do not go well with the pronounced modernity of her personality. . . . Mr. Brown has staged the piece with a keen eye for its color and pageantry, permitting the romantic interludes to balance as they will with recreated history in a show that is rich with trappings and accented by moments of moving intensity." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 S 5 '36

"'The Gorgeous Hussy' is regulation MGM box office stuff. . . . what with a bit of flag waving here and a spicy scene there. It's not a bad picture either for a glossy pulp-paper fiction type of show. The story of Mrs. Eaton and her loves is not very important, isn't even very interesting as Miss Crawford plays it. The drama of Andrew Jackson and his Rachel is real. There is the story. . . . The picture really belongs to these two characters, to the fire-eating frontiersman who became a president, and to the pipe-smoking backwoods woman who married him." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p35 S 5 '36

"It is our hope that some day we may come to understand why Hollywood, when it selects a colorful personality for one of its themes, almost invariably chooses to divest the hapless character of that very color which seemed to justify a screen biography and hastens to reduce it (or him or her) to a faded stereotype which might pass for any one. Consider the Peggy O'Neill Eaton of 'The Gorgeous Hussy'... President Jackson disbanded his Cabinet because of her, men died for her and eventually she moved to Spain and married a 19-year-old dancing instructor. Is there a bit of that in Metro's and Miss Joan Crawford's portrayal of Pothouse Peg? Well, just a bit... What we have here, and you might as well make the best of it, is a thoroughly romanticized biography in which Miss Crawford is gorgeous, but never a hussy... Miss Crawford's Peggy is a maligned Anne of Green Gables, a persecuted Pollyanna, a dismayed Dolly Dimple... Most of it has an incredible ring and the players never are quite convincing in their political or emotional arguments." F. S. Nugent

— + N Y Times p7 S 5 '36

"That hectic era when Andrew Jackson became seventh President of the United States... serves as a colorful and exciting setting for an entertaining and romantic melodrama... Whatever the film lacks in historical accuracy is more than made up for by the entertainment its romantic story and colorful settings provide. After a slow beginning the film gets under way in full stride and its interest never lags for a moment... Lionel Barrymore steals whatever acting honors there are. As the blustering Jackson who defends not only Peggy but the Constitution as well and who is always trying to remember not to say 'ain't,' he grunts, blusters and snorts in a manner that is altogether delightful." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p10a S 5 '36

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p95 S 12 '36

"In Joan Crawford's latest, Robert Taylor, the screen's No. 1 glamour boy, forsakes his usual role of a doctor for that of a sailor of 1823. Fortunately, he dies early in the picture. Miss Crawford is ineffectually pretty as Peggy O'Neal... The film is a bad adaptation of a Samuel Hopkins Adams novel."

— News-Wk p42 S 12 '36

"In this picture a large group of early Americans became living, breathing people. Two, especially—John Randolph and Daniel Webster... Lionel Barrymore plays the rough old Andrew Jackson up to the hilt, his performance somewhat edited by a too-faithful attempt at physical resemblance, resulting in an oversized wig and putted brows that sadly interfered with his facial expression... It is Joan's finest part in years and she enacts it superbly. Not the least of her triumphs is her makeup, or lack of it... Douglas not only gives the best performance of his career but just about the best in the picture. He makes you believe his uncompromising political opinions... The big hand goes to Clarence Brown, director, and Joseph Mankiewicz, producer." Rob Wagner

+ Script p10 S 5 '36

"[It] forms a pattern which balances in entertainment whatever it may lack in educational value. Surrounded by youthful matinee idols who seem a shade too chipper in the roles of mature statesmen, Lionel Barrymore grunts, glares and snuffles to fine effect. Equally sure-fire is Beulah Bondi as Mrs. Rachel Jackson." Time p19 S 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Boasting enough stars for six pictures and with a patriotic and historic background, this picture will register solidly at the turnstiles. While Joan Crawford has top billing and gives an impressive portrayal, Lionel Barrymore's depiction of President Andrew Jackson is undoubtedly the high spot of the film. Family."

+ Box Office p23 S 12 '36

"This is a superb production in every department... It gives Miss Crawford the best acting opportunity she has had in a long time and she takes full advantage of it. However, she is surrounded by such able supporting performers that to this reviewer she stands out not so much as the lead, but rather as one of a perfect cast... 'Gorgeous Hussy' can be sold to the patrons who go for big names, to those who seek entertainment, and to those who love romance. The ladies will love it—but so will the rest of the family."

+ Film Daily p8 S 1 '36

"In 'Gorgeous Hussy,' Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has a fine picture and a swell piece of entertainment, a top starring vehicle for Joan Crawford and unquestionably a box office hit... 'Gorgeous Hussy' will certainly bounce Joan Crawford back to top fan favor, as this is easily the best picture she has had for some time, giving her acting opportunities that brought out the real Crawford and should invest any box office with record ticket sales... She has been surrounded with a cast whose combined performance and fan magnetism would be hard to equal in another picture."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 28 '36

"This film is undoubtedly one of the meatiest and finest pictorial examples of entertainment yet produced. Rich in color, heart interest, drama, homely pathos and vibrant emotion, it is headed for glorified rendezvous at the nation's box-offices... Exhibitors throughout the country will rush for this one with its cast name draw plus a human story which fully lives up to the name power of the picture."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Ag 29 '36

"Exhibitors should look at the star assembly to find out whether this is a box office click. The answer, apparently, is that it is. With Taylor at a peak, with Crawford top money, with the other names as insurance, with a production that rates with Metro's best, 'The Gorgeous Hussy' is a sure thing."

+ Phila Exhibitor p10 S 1 '36

"With four marquee names topping the cast, an historical fictional story that's familiarly known and distinctive direction, 'Gorgeous Hussy' is a money picture. Beyond the names of Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore and Franchot Tone, the film has innumerable angles for special exploiting. Once the story gets over the trivia of slow-moving costume moments it builds to successive peaks without let-up. Picture is primarily Lionel Barrymore's... He's the Barrymore of old in the best role he has had in a long time."

+ Variety p16 S 9 '36

"'Gorgeous Hussy' is gorgeous entertainment, superlative in every dimension, destined to rank among the best pictures of any year and a money offering of smash calibre by every right of draw names, story and directorial merit and showman's intelligence. Challenged by dramatic opportunity in rich roles of a superb screen play, Joan Crawford and at least half a dozen fellow stars and supporting players turn in their top performances... Miss Crawford displays a new composure, dignity, ripeness which opens up entirely new channels for her at Metro and which will enhance her box office value still more. For emotional power she has never done anything to touch this role."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 28 '36

GRAND JURY. RKO 60min J1 24 '36

Players: Fred Stone, Louise Latimer, Owen Davis, Jr. Moroni Olsen

Director: Albert S. Rogell

The plot concerns a small town citizen who undertakes single-handed to round up a band of murderous gangsters who have taken over control of the town.

GRAND JURY—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: amateurish; Y: harmless; C: little interest."

Christian Century p1026 S 9 '36

"A trite story of the gangster versus the citizenry is here poorly directed and indifferently cast except for the brilliant work of Fred Stone. Fair entertainment for adults & young people." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"[It is] a mildly entertaining newspaper-gangster picture. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Fred Stone's wholesome commonsense and the pertinent facts involved make this worth seeing. Mature." DAR

"Adults & young people." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A rather hackneyed, over-acted, non-ethical picture, yet not demoralizing enough to exclude it from the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The production is fair entertainment. Adolescents: passable; children: no." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 8 '36

"While the picture lacks conviction and is slow moving, the work of Fred Stone is humanly realistic. Mature."

— + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) J1 28 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 6 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Fred Stone deserves a better story assignment than repeated presentation as an elderly homespun gentleman who isn't as bright as could be expected, considering Mr. Stone's own intelligence. . . Entertaining after its own too simple fashion." E. C. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 8 '36

"The proceedings at the Palace this week, where 'Grand Jury' is the new screen offering, are not of a kind to rout a filmgoer's ennui and infect him with the pleasant fervors of excitement. . . The results are far from satisfactory. . . Nor do the players help matters much." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p12 Ag 3 '36

"'Grand Jury' is just another weak link in a long chain of sissy cops-and-robbers operas. The film leans heavily on the likeability of Fred Stone, a chap who can squeeze appeal from even the hokiest material." Herb Sterne

— + Script p12 Ag 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Below-average racket expose film which will have a struggle carrying its end on even an average dual program. Family."

— Box Office p25 Ag 8 '36

"Nice wholesome entertainment for the entire family, combining human interest, comedy and romance."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 1 '36

"[It is] a synthetic crime comedy. . . The trite story is tricked out with amusing gags for a fair grist of laughs, but they do not raise it above the level of average program fare. Fred Stone plays his part for its comedy moments, but it has not had breathed into it the breath of life and will scarcely add to his laurels. A good supporting cast is similarly obscured in a world of stock unrealities, few of the characters being clearly enough drawn to register anything much."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 J1 25 '36

"This is one for the Fred Stone fans who like his skittish brand of humor. He uses his opportunities well."

Motion Pict Daily p6 J1 27 '36

"Fred Stone again comes to the fore in a programmer that ought to please small towns, neighborhoods. Cast is filled with feature faces who will insure satisfaction for audiences."

Phila Exhibitor p38 Ag 1 '36

"Below par production. Story is silly to start with and grows worse as it unfolds. . . It's jerky continuity throughout and the villains are never believable. Handling of the actors is stilted and awkward and even the camera angles are old-fashioned and abrupt. Stock situations, sloppily reworked, do not produce either laughs or tension."

— — Variety p16 Ag 5 '36

"The combination of a fast-moving, logical story, an excellent cast and capable direction makes 'Grand Jury' a better than average picture in every respect. . . It is the type of entertainment the whole family can enjoy."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 25 '36

GREEN PASTURES. Warner 90min J1 25 '36

Players: Rex Ingram. Oscar Polk. Eddie Anderson. Frank Wilson

Directors: Marc Connelly. William Keighley

Choral music: Hall Johnson Choir

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

A Photoplay Study Guide on Green Pastures, prepared by Mabel A. Bessey, is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, at fifteen cents a copy. The guide is one of a series of aids to the critical appreciation of photoplays.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: notable; Y: very good; C: probably beyond them."

Christian Century p1047 J1 29 '36

"This month brings us another epochal film. . . Needless to say, 'Green Pastures' will make its advent under the sponsorship of women's clubs, civic organizations and church groups throughout the United States. Pastors will refer to it in their sermons, teachers will draw ethical lessons from it for the benefit of their students, for 'Green Pastures' has a simplicity, a richness of thematic material and an underlying philosophical soundness and sweetness that take it far out of the class of an ordinary film."

+ + Motion Pict & Family Je 15 '36

"A and Y: grand entertainment; C: Bible story graphically told."

Parents' M p44 J1 '36

"This picture . . . has been the subject of some criticism on the part of people who hold that the screen should not trespass on religious grounds in this manner. On the other hand, there are those who see, not an offense against religious feeling, but a thing of great beauty and celestial charm in this simple narrative of what heaven is like when pictured by a Negro Sunday School teacher to his class of little children."

Scholastic p17 S 19 '36

"Here is as unusual a film as one is likely to come across, because of its material. . . A great deal of the film, from a quality that is usually called 'quaint,' is amusing, in a tender and lovable way; but much of it is profoundly moving, touching fundamental things in the human heart. However fantastic and merely humorous a lot of it may seem, out of it comes a conception of the Creator in the throes of creation, always evolving onward to something higher, that has its appeal to every religious instinct, of whatever creed."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Under the guiding hand of Marc Connelly, 'The Green Pastures' has been brought intact to the screen, preserving the simple quality, the imaginative humor and the homespun element of unaffected 'goodness'—there is no other word that quite describes it—that were among the characteristic marks of the original work. Even for the stage 'The Green Pastures' was an unusual exploration of folk material. For the film to approach so closely to the achievements of the play, is no small accomplishment."

E. F. Melvin

+ Boston Transcript p3 J1 25 '36

"We have no hesitation in naming 'The Green Pastures' not only as the leading picture of the month, but as one of those that will be remembered as one of the standout pictures of the year."

Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p35 Ag '36

"A carefully chosen company attains to an ensemble in this presentation, which is steadily moving in its reverential naïveté."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 J1 25 '36

"Never has there been a picture quite like 'The Green Pastures.' It is tender and humorous, touching and gay. And through this blend there runs a deeply sympathetic feeling that never condescends to burlesque the fable's simple imagery. . . . 'The Green Pastures' is the cinema treat of the year." (4 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p45 J1 4 '36

"Whatever our various concepts of God, I think we will all be spiritually satisfied and tickled by 'The Green Pastures.' . . . Those who feared God might go Hollywood in this movie version of the fine stage production do not know their Marc Connelly. He has touched this movie with the same delicate humor and the same fine feeling he put into the stage 'Pastures.'" Don Herold

+ Life p28 S '36

"Warner Brothers will be hurt to learn that in 'The Green Pastures' they have not produced a spectacle. The press releases attest to the '120 gigantic settings,' '1,000 players,' and 'lavish scenes' which the studio placed at the disposal of Marc Connelly, but in making his first movie, a literal transcription of his play, Mr. Connelly has achieved the paradox of a non-'colossal' production under the aegis of the Brothers. . . . Mr. Connelly's preservation of his play is right, not because it avoids the abuses which the movie spectacle has received at the hands of vulgarians, but because no translation other than a literal one was possible." Robert Giroux

+ Nation p110 J1 25 '36

"Almost the sole exception to the rule that makes movie going during the summer months an unmitigated horror. . . . The Warner Brothers' film version of Marc Connelly's stage play, 'The Green Pastures,' can cause few regrets. No film of recent memory has boasted such authoritative and beautiful performances, such perfection of ensemble and individual brilliance. True, 'The Green Pastures' is not very stimulating as cinema. . . . It seems elementary that if a film is to be denied continuity it should at least possess variety of emotional content. This variety 'The Green Pastures' lacks. It is, however, a definitely superior item worth seeing. . . . 'The Green Pastures' [is] outstanding film entertainment, if not a cinema masterpiece." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p22 Ag '36

"[It] has been transferred to the screen with care, taste and fidelity under the author's paternal direction and, in its new incarnation, it remains the beautiful, moving and stirring work that it was upon the stage. . . . The producers have been satisfied to make an edition of 'The Green Pastures' that is faithful to the original, rather than a striking cinema conception of its own. . . . This careful and conservative method of treatment gives the picture a slight carbon-copy quality, but it avoids the potential pitfalls admirably and the result is that the quality of simple magnificence that the drama possessed is never lost. . . . I admired the work of every actor whose name appears in the cast of characters. But if Rex Ingram's role had not been properly played the work of all of them would have been in vain. . . . The whole production is a tribute to the courage of the Warner Brothers.'" Richard Watts, Jr.

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p10 J1 17 '36

"If motion pictures needed any justification, the Music Hall's current picture provides enough to last for a decade or so. . . . Not only Marc Connelly, all three Warner brothers, and W. G. Van Schmus can point with pride this time. The whole human race may like itself, and understand itself, quite a little better after seeing this film. . . . Mr. Connelly, with a wisdom that should surprise none who knows his work, resisted all temptation to splurge. Here is no spectacle, no Hollywood glamour, or varnished lavishness. . . . The cast is, as might be expected since most of the players appeared in the original play, a fine one. . . . Equally with the directors, they deserve all praise for the making of the year's most memorable film. It would seem unnecessary to urge that 'The Green Pastures' should be missed by no one, of any age, any nationality, any religious persuasion." Elleen Creelman

+ + N Y Sun p7 J1 17 '36

"That disturbance in and around the Music Hall yesterday was the noise of shuffling queues in Sixth Avenue and the sound of motion-picture critics dancing in the street. The occasion was the coming at last to the screen of Marc Connelly's naïve, ludicrous, sublime and heart-breaking masterpiece of American folk drama, 'The Green Pastures.' And the direct exciting cause was the fact that no profane hands have been allowed, in the words of the Second Cleaning Angel, to 'gold up' its marvelous and unforgettable felicities. It still has the rough beauty of homespun, the irresistible compulsion of simple faith." B. R. C.

+ + N Y Times p20 J1 17 '36

"No matter what your personal opinion is of the manner in which Mr. Connelly and his associate director, William Keighley, have treated this heart-breaking masterpiece of American folk life—there are some who are ungrateful enough to suggest that no particular camera imagination has gone into the work—you will have to admit that all the inner beauty, comic fancy, compassion and religious devotion of the original has been transferred to the screen with fidelity. . . . That no outstanding camera imagination has gone into the screen transference of this beautifully wrought Biblical story will not be denied here. But therein, it seems to me, lies the secret of its great power and beauty. Given just such a simple and heart-warming story and every other director—well, nearly every other director—in Hollywood would have gone off on a camera angle spree." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p25 J1 22 '36

"'The Green Pastures' is a careful photograph of the play. Its chief value is for those who didn't see the original and who want to know what all the excitement is about. . . . Those who have seen the play are going to find this film a perfectly respectable piece of work and probably unnecessary. It won't excite them much; it will recall the humor, the fanciful and picturesque qualities, the quaint attributes, but not the power of the play. . . . Either because of screen limitations or because it is not the patriarchal Richard B. Harrison but the much younger Rex Ingram who is De Lawd, there is no such stirring climax in 'even a God must suffer' as there was in the stage production. . . . This is dignified; it's honest; and no tremendous sensation." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p48 J1 18 '36

GREEN PASTURES—Continued

"It is to be doubted whether the film version of Marc Connelly's legend is an improvement over the stage version. This is mainly due to the role of De Lawd, which Rex Ingram played with dignity and restraint but with total lack of conviction. He could have, with profit, traded some of his pictorial sweetness for an adequate share of internal force. 'Green Pastures' will have an interesting history. We must consider it as an adventure in the art-film classification. But regardless of its success or failure at the box office, it must stand as a major achievement of William Keighley, the director." José Rodríguez

Script p10 Ag 22 '36

"The film, with but few concessions to the camera's inexorable demands for scope, has preserved most of the simplicity and appealing grandeur of the play, and represents, as near as it is humanly possible, an honest interpretation of a great story in another medium. . . 'The Green Pastures' is a notable film achievement, and an inspiring one."

++ Stage p8 Jl '36

"One of the strong features of the play was the poverty-stricken bareness of the Heaven it portrayed. One of the principal dangers of the cinema was that Heaven would either be improved beyond any Southern pickaninny's dream or else that the artfulness of its simplicity might seem condescending. The producers have avoided both these pitfalls. Heaven has been improved, but only slightly."

Time p38 Je 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] a production that is certain to make screen history. Your reviewer was one of a very few who did not care for the play, but for an hour and a half I sat in the private screening room at the Film Exchange here in Toronto, spell-bound as I watched a beautiful production, masterfully directed, capably acted and artistically mounted."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 Jl 4 '36

"Not only has 'Pastures' been motivated into a prestige film for the Warners, but it's a simple, enchanting, audience-captivating cinematic fable which should reach the masses and surpass the theatre history-making run of the show. . . 'Pastures' in cooler weather would be a mop-up and, even as a summer release, it's headed for big grosses, fortified by the fact that the current dearth of socko film product gives it excellent advantages for concentrated attention. . . It's a critic's picture if ever there was one, and that's not going to hurt, either. That doesn't mean that 'Pastures' can coast in, sans selling. It'll require plenty of ballyhoo, considering the two major mass-mentality handicaps—the all-colored cast, and the complete absence of anything resembling a marquee name."

++ Variety p17 Jl 22 '36

GUNS AND GUITARS. Republic 56min Je 19 '36

Players: Gene Autry, Dorothy Dix, Smiley Burnette, Tom London

Director: Joseph Kane

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 25 '36

"It follows the customary action picture formula and, except for fine outdoors photography, presents little that is new to that type of cinema. Family."

— + Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

"Western fans will have their fill of blazing guns, fist fights and cross-country riding during the final reels of this latest Autry vehicle, although they may find that the star's singing slows up the introduction. Family."

+ Box Office p23 Jl 11 '36

"Routine in its conception and story, this Western features Gene Autry and his guitar, the combination providing several bits of vocalization, which may or may not be an asset to a riding, shooting Western, depending entirely upon the tastes in action films of the audience."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p24 Je 25 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p69 Jl 1 '36

GUNS OF THE PECOS. Warner-First national 56min

Players: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel, Gordon Hart, Eddie Acuff

Director: Noel Smith

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is a] clean Western, filled with action, music and 'right-will-win' presented for the wholehearted entertainment of western story fans and children of all ages. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Although not original as to plot and with forced situations, this is fairly good entertainment because of excellent horsemanship and bits of attractive outdoor photography. Adults: fair; family: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family, altho exciting for small children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Based on historical data, there is an unique interest and ethical value to the picture for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The picture could have been made more suited to young audiences if the tenseness had been relieved by comedy or a change of tempo. Adolescents: yes; children: too exciting." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 8 '36

"[It is] an interesting Western portraying in an entertaining manner the part played by the Texas Rangers in fighting crooked interests. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Jl 28 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 27 '36

"An interesting 'Western,' portraying in an entertaining manner the part played by the Texas Rangers in fighting crooked elements and establishing justice in the Lone Star State. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With an abundance of the usual cowboy story elements which make this a cut-and-dried Western, Dick Foran succeeds, by his pleasant singing, in adding a note of class to the picture. Family."

+ — Box Office p25 Ag 8 '36

"This tale of the Texas Rangers in the early days, while a weak story, offers considerable gun play and hard riding. . . Foran renders his songs pleasingly and may build into a popular singing, action star with somewhat better story material."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 Jl 27 '36

"The trouble with Foran is that he hops in, out of the saddle, appearing in the better Warner productions, then hopping back into the saddle. Western stars have to stick to the saddle to be built up. If Foran is to become a Western draw, he will have to keep away from the society dramas, etc. While the Westerns in which he is appearing are okay from the production, musical, etc., standpoint, Foran, himself, is the problem."

Phila Exhibitor p38 Ag 1 '36

"Texas locale with the rip-snorting shooting rangers will not help this one at the box office. Dick Foran and Eddie Acuff try hard to make the best of things to aid the yarn, but it is a weakling. . . . Harold Buckley's screen play from the original of Anthony Goldaway is a little amateurish. It's been done too many times, anyway. Then, too, the preview audience hissed and sneered at many of the episodes."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 25 '36

GYPSIES. Amkino 83min J1 29 '36

Players: Alexander Granach. N. Mordvinov. M. Sinelnikova. Lala Chernaya

Directors: E. Schneider. M. Goldblatt

Russian dialogue film with English sub-titles. "Gypsies" tells about the efforts of a member of the Soviet government to try to get the band of nomads to whom he has been assigned to settle down and become collective farmers. Loath to give up their freedom, the gypsies listen patiently to the government representative and eat the food given them by the authorities, but make no real effort to give up their wandering life." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"All done in good humor, with delightful acting—especially that of Alexander Granach, a German exile. . . . It [is] a film decidedly worth seeing."

+ Nation p166 Ag 8 '36

"With all its faults, the most wholesome movie fare of the month. . . . To say that the Russians are past masters at this sort of thing is to put it trivially. . . . The film has faults—at times, bad continuity, a disharmony of acting styles although the actors are all in their way superb . . . but these faults are as nothing in the face of its fine lyrical qualities, and the greatness of its theme—the regeneration of a people."

+ New Theatre p23 S '36

"While presented in plot form, the piece is really thinly veiled propaganda, although its performance is theatrical enough, since the cast includes chiefly professional actors. . . . But the gypsies' life lacks the glamour that tradition attaches to it, and the emphasis laid on the Kolkhoz (Collectivists) in their reform of the wandering nomads strips it of even elementary enchantment. However, every now and then touches of characteristic Russian humor flow through the script, and certain of the characterizations possess a comic spirit helpful to the treatise." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 J1 30 '36

"The subject of 'Gypsies' is one that has given plenty of headaches to even the most optimistic Soviet officials. . . . While the circumstances of their conversion to the Soviet idea doubtless are less dramatic than the action of the photoplay, this highly entertaining picture probably conveys a general notion of how it is being done. . . . The film gathers speed as it progresses and moves into an exciting and dramatic climax which yet would have been more impressive had it been a little less à la Hollywood." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p22 J1 30 '36

"My guess is that 'Gypsies' will appeal to filmgoers who, sated with the current mediocrities from Hollywood, look for entertainment to a film studded with first-rate acting and excellent photography. . . . Were its continuity better and were it shorter, it would stand high up on the list of Russian films. . . . If you are interested in the life and habits of a group of picturesque Russian nomads as well as the efforts of the government to make them settle down, you will find 'Gypsies,' interesting but uneven in quality." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p10 J1 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"There are elements of interest in this latest importation from Russia. . . . but again the Soviet State cannot refrain from injecting into its screen material pointed implication of the good life which is to be enjoyed under the kindly guiding hand of the collective state. . . . With occasional flashes of good photography, the film as a whole appears to have little outstanding appeal for any but those patrons who are particularly drawn to Russian films."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 J1 31 '36

"Except for a series of clips showing the nomads, primed with a dram or two of vodka, in native dances, costumes, and choral executions, the picture is largely standardized Soviet fare of the mission-festival stripe. Which means that by American forms it isn't far from being a rousing oats opera. . . . Of gypsy history, folk lore, etc.—in short, how the gypsies got that way—there is not one hint."

+ Variety p16 Ag 5 '36

H

HALF ANGEL. 20th century-Fox 65min My 15 '36

Players: Frances Dee. Brian Donlevy. Charles Butterworth. Helen Westley. Etienne Girardot

Director: Sidney Lanfield

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."
Mo Film Bul p103 Je '36

"A and Y: reasonably entertaining murder mystery; C: possible."

Parents' M p44 J1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Romantic and comic murder mystery for adults who don't mind the introduction of a mentally deranged person as a pivotal figure." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 20 '36

"Despite some of the screen's best writing and acting talent, this too-often-told tale by Bess Meredyth and Gene Fowler drags badly. . . . Etienne Girardot, doing his familiar madman part, Helen Westley, and Charles Butterworth waste some good acting."

— News-Wk p42 Je 6 '36

HARD LUCK DAME. See Satan met a lady

HARVESTER. Republic 65min My 1 '36

Players: Alice Brady. Russell Hardie. Ann Rutherford. Frank Craven. Cora Sue Collins

Director: Joseph Santley

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

HARVESTER—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Granting that Gene Stratton Porter's novel, 'The Harvester' had little to offer the cinema, it is a sorry task of transcription. The production is one in which nearly all the participants have fumbled. Alice Brady and Frank Craven, two comedians who are adept at turning awkward corners in a script, contribute some interludes of pungent humor to the work, but for the most part it plods through banal situations in a manner that can scarcely be construed as entertaining." Howard Barnes

— + N Y Herald Tribune p6 J1 4 '36

"'The Harvester' [is] frankly a period piece. . . Because of the extreme simplicity of production, direction and acting, the story is rather entertaining." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p15 J1 6 '36

"Somewhere in the revision and adaptation to which Mrs. Gene Stratton Porter's novel, 'The Harvester' has been subjected in preparation for its conversion to the screen there has been lost the simple nobility of its central figure that made the book a best seller when it was written twenty-five years ago. . . The picture has its attributes, of course. Alice Brady provides an amusingly exaggerated profile of the scheming mother." J. T. M.

— + N Y Times p18 J1 4 '36

"The amount of your patience with 'The Harvester' will depend more on your taste for sweetness and sentiment than on your desire for screen drama. . . It is a pretty tiresome film. . . [and] is hackneyed to the core in dialogue and situation." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p11 J1 6 '36

"The most one can ask for in the revival of these wholesome classics is a feeling of nostalgia. . . Less able hands might have bungled the story. . . Director Joseph Santley does a painstaking, affectionate job of recreating the detail of the period. But he is lax in guiding individual performances. . . Alice Brady (who is given top billing although her role doesn't warrant it) acts as though she were on the verge of renouncing these roles in favor of the dramatic stuff in which she triumphed on the stage. I'll bet audiences would welcome the changes." Molly Lewin

— + Script p13 Ag 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'The Harvester,' is a long yawn. Based on the Gene Stratton Porter novel of two decades ago, it is creaky, tedious film fare for today's audiences. In addition to that, the picture suffers from lack of ingenious direction and from a cast which, except for Alice Brady, doesn't acquit itself sparkingly. . . Producers have always found it difficult to put over pictures dealing with farm life and farm people. . . Its place distinctly is the smaller, unimportant theatres, and on the off days."

— Variety p15 J1 8 '36

HEART OF THE WEST. Paramount 60min J1 10 '36

Players: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison, George Hayes, Sydney Blackmer, Lynn Gabriel

Director: Howard Bretherton

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a routine Western. General patronage."

— + Nat Legion of Decency J1 30 '36

"[It is] a genuinely entertaining production. Family."

— + Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Maintaining the high entertainment standards established by its five predecessors, this last of the 'Hop-a-long Cassidy' films winds up the current series in a blaze of glory. It has the same action and thrill appeal as the others and introduces a new touch in the form of a hit theme song, 'Family.'"

— + Box Office p25 J1 25 '36

"This Hop-a-long Cassidy number tends more to comedy than have the previous releases in the series. At the same time there are enough of the regular Western ingredients to make it interesting to the regular outdoor fans. There are a number of good action situations with a stampede that highlights the picture. . . Although the picture may not reach the high standard of some of the other Hop-a-longs, it still is one of the better Westerns and makes very pleasing entertainment."

— + Film Daily p6 J1 7 '36

"The sixth and last of the present series of Hop-a-long Cassidy Westerns drops under the high average of the series. It will serve as one of six but will scarcely add lustre to this popular brand. The picture shows evidence of haste. The screenplay provides too little for the lead and other characters and depends too much on the one big scene—the turning back of the cattle stampede with dynamite, which is not as carefully developed as it should be. Also there is more than a fair allowance of incongruities and some weak spots in casting."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 J1 3 '36

"A formula Western, introducing nothing that is new or novel, this provides only average secondary entertainment. Merely repeating the old story of honest ranchers at war with cattle rustlers, the only change in the standard brand of thrill action is the idea of using dynamite to halt a cattle stampede."

— + Motion Pict Daily p5 J1 7 '36

"Estimate: fair."

— + Phila Exhibitor p26 J1 15 '36

"Weak Western with all departments, exclusive of photography, responsible for its lack of entertainment. As one of the 'Hop-a-long Cassidy' series, it will have to fight for what it gets. Story lacks sock, is old fashioned in construction and particularly in dialog."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 3 '36

HEARTS DIVIDED. Warner 76min Je 20 '36

Players: Marion Davies, Dick Powell, Charlie Ruggles, Claude Rains, Edward Everett Horton, Arthur Treacher

Director: Frank Borzage

Music and lyrics: Harry Warren, Al Dubin

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair; Y: rather good; C: little interest."
Christian Century p912 Je 24 '36

"There is something vitally lacking in this lavish film. The stars play their roles in an unconvincing manner, and are quite eclipsed by the splendid characterization of Napoleon by Claude Rains. . . Taking many liberties with the authenticity of this episode in French-American history. . . has left much to be cleared up in the minds of seekers of true historical facts. Adult." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Picturesque costuming and lavish production add greatly to a picture ably directed, well enacted, and artistically photographed. Dick Powell is in good voice and serves nicely as the prince incognito. Adults: very good; 14-18: good; 8-14: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Photographically beautiful, but a thin story and unhappy casting give the screen version of 'Glorious Betsy' a feeling of insincerity. The dramatic theme and delightful romance are all but lost because of the farcical treatment of the whole. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Colorful, gay, and amusing romance. Based on history. Mature-family. Good." DAR

"[It is] a picture of fine entertainment for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Glamorous, light, amusing entertainment. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter
Fox W Coast Bul Je 20 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"This had all the makings of a most entertaining picture but it did not realize its possibilities. . . This is due in part to the ineptitude of Miss Davies and Mr. Powell in their romantic roles, and in part to an inadequate scenario. Adolescents, 12-16: probably entertaining; children, 8-12: no interest."

— Motion Pict R Jl '36

"[It is] a very stilted historical romance. . . Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 10 '36

"A and Y: glamorous historical romance with music; C: entertaining." Parents' M p47 Ag '36

"Not entirely true to historical events, but sufficiently so as to prove good entertainment for the family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Miss Davies is seen to the best advantage in her more playful moments during the earlier portions of the story. She is less appealing when she faces the big moment of her great renunciation. . . She might be well advised by her true friends to cultivate the lighter humors and leave to others the parts which call for emotional acting. . . Frank Borzage, who knows as well as any director in the business how to manage romantic sentiments on the screen, has avoided the pit of over-sentimentality but the film as a whole is not one of his major works." E. F. Melvin

+ — Boston Transcript p7 Je 20 '36

"In spite of the fact that Marion Davies, the star of 'Hearts Divided,' may not deserve the rating, this picture because of its lavish production, careful direction and attractive settings, not to mention the splendid supporting cast does deserve mention among the month's better pictures. . . If you love pictures glowing with romance, youth, beauty and southern allure, you will adore 'Hearts Divided.' Whatever her histrionic failings may be, Marion Davies as Betsy Patterson, is good to look upon. Dick Powell as Jerome Bonaparte is reasonably free of his master-of-ceremonies-mannerisms and looks quite handsome in his gold braided uniforms and court apparel." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p31 Jl '36

"Miscasting throws this romantic melodrama so much awry that there is no telling whether or not its story could have been made more than mildly interesting." E. C. S.

— Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 20 '36

"The fluffy Marion Davies's performance is all too reminiscent of the histrionics that might be expected from a student of high-school theatricals after her second lesson from a correspondence school of the 'drama.' Artlessly and heartlessly, she flattens, even flattens the grand collection of supporting players." J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p287 Jl 10 '36

"An exceedingly tedious offering. . . When [Marion Davies] plays herself, she can draw from an audience the feeling of friendship accorded her by those who come in personal contact with her. In 'Hearts Divided' she has a role which demanded the finished acting of a Claudette Colbert, a Norma Shearer, a Luise Rainer; a role which she tries hard to translate into believable terms but does not make convincing. Her task was made more difficult by the presence in the cast of some of the screen's most accomplished players."

— Hollywood Spec p10 Je 20 '36

"Warners have strained every muscle in a Herculean effort to make 'Hearts Divided' a hit. . . None of these embellishments can quite overcome the miscasting of Marion Davies, a comedienne, and Dick Powell, a crooner, in heavily romantic roles. . . In short, 'Hearts Divided' is topheavy." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p48 Jl 18 '36

"A wide-mouthed purse has been opened to surround a faintly creaky plot with enough glamour and musical-comedy trickery to keep it alive and bubbling for 1936 audiences. The result is a romantic picture in which Miss Davies is lovely, Dick Powell sings with his usual brío and a New York stage actor, Claude Rains, steals the show to achieve a long, carefully cherished ambition. . . Maryland audiences will react warmly to the scenes involving old Baltimore. The cinema seldom has recreated so successfully the flavors, customs and wistful loveliness of an old and romantic city."

+ Lit Digest p19 Je 20 '36

"An innocuous performance by Dick Powell is somewhat counteracted by an excellent portrayal of Napoleon by Claude Rains and some diverting dialogue which, while not entirely in the Louisiana Purchase idiom, remains its most refreshing feature."

Stage p8 Jl '36

"'Hearts Divided' turns out to be a particularly inept little costume piece in which Marion Davies proves unable to furnish first-rate entertainment even when directed by Frank Borzage and surrounded by such players as Dick Powell, Charles Ruggles, Edward Everett Horton, Henry Stephenson, Arthur Treacher, Claude Rains."

— Time p37 Je 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Lavishly mounted, intelligently directed and with an abundance of cast names, Marion Davies' romantic feature of early America will fare well with the fans. Family."

+ Box Office p45 Je 20 '36

HEROES OF THE RANGE. Columbia 51min
Mr 28 '36

Players: Ken Maynard, June Gale, Harry Woods, Harry Ernest

Director: Spencer Gordon Bennett

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee
Fox W Coast Bul Ap 11 '36

"A, Y, and C: one more Western." Parents' M p50 Je '36

"A generally mediocre production, totally lacking in novelty, treating of Western outlaws and their apprehension by a cowboy turned G-Man. The beautiful white horse, Tarzan, gives the one praiseworthy touch to an innocuous story which otherwise must be classified as 'just another Western.' Family."

— + Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

HEROES OF THE RANGE—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"Following the old formula route, this Western manages to hold the interest with a fast action story that keeps things pepped up from the start. Ken Maynard is in the saddle most of the time, and when he is standing on his feet he is usually engaged in gun work or using his fists handily, so all in all it is a lively drama of the open plains that will please the youngsters."

+ Film Daily p16 Ag 18 '36

"This is an entertaining Western that is sure-fire fare for the enthusiasts. As usual with Ken Maynard films there are a few musical interludes in outdoor fashion that are quite pleasing."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 Ag 20 '36

"This time Ken Maynard is a G-man. It's a new role for him, but he's still in chaps riding Tarzan, that nice big white hoss of his, and the background is the same as in most Westerns. Although crammed with action, pounding hoofs, a lot of gunfire and plenty of fisticuffs, plus the usual romance, 'Heroes of the Range' is only fair to middlin'. It shouldn't expect to arouse more than passing interest."

+ — Variety p16 Ag 19 '36

HIGH TENSION. 20th century-Fox 62min Je 26 '36

Players: Brian Donlevy. Glenda Farrell. Norman Foster. Helen Wood

Director: Allan Dwan

A roistering under-sea diver who repairs ocean cables is continually in scrapes with his pal and his boss. He battles also with his sweetheart, a pulp magazine writer who uses his adventures for plots. Finally, after a thrilling rescue in the best picture tradition, he saves his pal's life and wins the girl.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: poor; Y and C: no."

Christian Century p1239 S 16 '36

"Unnecessary drinking and two roughhouse episodes make this unsuitable for children. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Too much drinking and too prolonged slapstick fighting. Adults: matter of taste; family: no; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Waste of time. Adults." DAR

"Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Marvelously photographed under-sea sets and capable acting and dialogue, combine to bring very good entertainment to the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Jl 4 '36

"There is plenty of action, often verging on slapstick, but the total value of the film is dubious. Adults."

— + Jt Estimates Jl 1 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R Jl '36

"There is interesting photography of men at work on the bed of the ocean and a story which is somewhat different. However unimaginative direction which fails to click loses an opportunity for clever results. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 24 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 9 '36

"A, Y and C: fair comedy."

Parents' M p69 S '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'High Tension' is a loud and funny comedy written almost entirely in the vernacular, which is well suited to Miss Glenda Farrell's aptitude for robust comedy. Here she is aided and abetted by Brian Donlevy. . . 'High Tension' may be recommended to the not too finicky as better than average hot-weather screen fare." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 11 '36

Reviewed by William Boehnel

N Y World-Telegram p10 Jl 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Rapidly paced story, weak on the action and strong on the comedy, written to display the comedy talents of Glenda Farrell and the physique of Brian Donlevy. Family."

+ Box Office p75 Je 27 '36

"Moving at a high rate of speed with scene after scene loaded with bang-up action, characters who are amusing and exciting, hilarious comedy, and clever talk, this show makes first class program entertainment and should be at home in any house using any type of action fare. The handling of the fight scenes sets a new style and they are knockouts in more than one sense of the word."

+ Film Daily p24 Je 16 '36

"Disarmingly unpretentious, 'High Tension' succeeds admirably in being just what it set out to be—a thoroughly entertaining little action comedy. It is sure to please the audiences for which it is intended. . . Additional editing will help tempo of early scenes wherein too much time is wasted."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 13 '36

"Treating deep-sea diving in a farcical rather than a dramatic manner, this picture emerges as a fast-moving comedy which should click in smaller houses. . . Comedy is the best selling angle and should produce satisfactory results if emphasized."

Motion Pict Daily p11 Je 15 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhood, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p72 Jl 1 '36

"Speedy, actionful comedy, which looms as strong fare on any dualer, and may get by in some single spots. Chief weakness is lack of heavy name appeal. . . Technical phases of deep-sea diving in repairing cables are touched on lightly, making story doubly effective. . . This should build on word-of-mouth to sizable portions. It will be an audience-pleaser."

+ — Variety p55 Jl 15 '36

"In the B class it is as good as comes along, should hold its own on any dual bill and will stand by itself in many single spots. Donlevy steps out in front as a fast-talking screen personality. . . He's in character all the time, tossing off many a wisecrack worthy of better pictures. This effort should win him a flock of new followers."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 13 '36

(*) HILL TILLIES. MGM 18min Ap 4 '36

Players: Patsy Kelly. Lyda Roberti. Toby Wing

Director: Hal Roach

In order to attract publicity so they may get theatrical offers, a press agent arranges for Patsy Kelly and Lyda Roberti to live for ten days in the woods without food.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"[It is a] farcical comedy. Family."

Wkly Guide J1 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Although there are stretches of dialogue that are flat, this comedy . . . is dippy enough to arouse an amused reaction from lighthearted patrons."

+ Box Office p27 J1 25 '36

Film Daily p3 J1 11 '36

"This is an amusing comedy by that hair-brained trio, Lyda Roberti, Patsy Kelly and Toby Wing, which has some clever lines and funny situations. . . It has some fresh twists. Entertaining."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 J1 15 '36

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE. MGM 90min Ag 7 '36

Players: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Taylor, John Eldredge, Jean Hersholt, Joseph Calleia

Director: W. S. Van Dyke

Taylor portrays a playboy-scientist who is about to leave for some medical research in tropical jungles. He meets a model at a gambling house who persuades him to give up the research but his brother convinces him and he leaves. For revenge the model marries the brother.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y: unwholesome; C: no." Christian Century p1119 Ag 19 '36

"Entertaining but not convincing. The scenes of dissipation in the city are not consistent with the self-sacrificing loyalty of which both hero and heroine are capable when in the wilderness. Adults only." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"An unusually good cast and expert direction obscure a story which should not be too closely analyzed to be enjoyed. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Adults. Good." DAR

"Peculiar motivations, but the action is interesting, involving an expedition into southern jungles to track down a fever germ. Mature." Nat Bd of R

"A technically superior picture, vivid, convincingly acted and sympathetically interpreted. Adults & young people." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 15 '36

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 5 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"Although the direction is fast moving and logical, the story is highly improbable and unconvincing. Special mention should be made for fine performances on the part of Robert Taylor, Jean Hersholt, and John Eldredge. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 5 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 13 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Peculiar motivations, but the action is interesting. Mature."

Wkly Guide Ag 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"In 'His Brother's Wife' the juxtaposition of caddishness and nobility becomes somewhat confusing to the plodding patron of the arts . . . The film's number one job is done by John Eldredge, as that helpless pawn of fate, Chris's worried, conscientious brother. Miss Stanwyck seems a little over-histrionic and throaty." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 15 '36

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 15 '36

"'His Brother's Wife' is an example of the adroit making of acceptable screen entertainment out of a poor script. The story is full of holes, its motivating incidents being merely mechanical contrivances to keep it going irrespective of psychological soundness. The kind of girl Barbara plays would not do the things she does. Her inexplicable marriage to the brother of the man she loves can not be reconciled with her heroism toward the end of the picture. . . Still the picture is entertaining, thanks chiefly to Barbara Stanwyck's charm. The screen is alive every moment she is on it. Even though we can not approve the things she does, we approve highly her manner of doing them."

+ Hollywood Spec p6 Ag 15 '36

"Grimly playful and heavily dramatic by turns, 'His Brother's Wife' is a disconcerting mélange of muscle-bound whimsey and bosom-heaving dramatics. . . There is hardly a realistic moment in the film, and the story jumps from episode to episode with little regard for logic." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p44 S 12 '36

"[It] is a safely old-fashioned photoplay triangle that suffers from two flaws in addition to its curious lack of vitality. That lack of vitality is particularly surprising because the film was directed by W. S. Van Dyke, who is popularly supposed to be the high priest of directorial vigor. The other chief defects I found in the film are (1) that each climax in the story can be anticipated at least ten minutes before the director gets around to it, and (2) that the characters are the most annoying and generally unpleasant of the season. I think this is a handicap in romantic tales." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 15 '36

"Incredibly romantic, glossily produced, expertly directed and peopled by the sort of players most often encountered on the covers of the fan magazines, 'His Brother's Wife'—even to its title—has been so astutely aimed at the box office that we can but stiffen resignedly and wait for the marker to cry bullseye. A triumph of machine-made art, it is a picture that will succeed no matter how we, in our ivory tower, rail against it for its romantic absurdity. . . For all its outrageous implausibility, the spotted fever-brother's wife saga has been so smoothly directed by W. S. Van Dyke that it probably will hold your attention, even though it does not reward it." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p6 Ag 15 '36

"Among the actors in a polished performance are such adroit people as lovely Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Taylor, Jean Hersholt, John Eldredge and Joseph Calleia. Under these circumstances it is a little bewildering to have to report that the result is astonishingly insignificant. . . I must admit to being not only pretty torpid about it but full of sorrow on behalf of everybody in it, since apparently the audience is unable to take its showy melodramatics any more seriously than I can. . . Paying guests at the Capitol exercised a prerogative seldom used and laughed right out loud at several of the film's most dramatic episodes. Loyal admirer though I am of the director and everybody in the cast, I cannot—indeed, decline to—call it even a moderately good entertainment.” William Boehnel

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE—Continued

— N Y World-Telegram p15a Ag 15 '36

“‘His Brother's Wife’ is a somewhat agonizing film, partly because of the peculiarly awkward situations in which the characters find themselves and partly because of the harsh flippancy with which they express their painful opinions . . . Nice people must deprecate the spite marriage of the heroine to the brother of the man she loves, and will hardly feel entirely reassured when a divorce at last paves the way for future adjustments.” John Mosher
+ — New Yorker p50 Ag 22 '36

“A superabundance of plot becomes bewildering; at times the motivation smacks of Miss Gertrude Stein, and there's a sour taste . . . no matter how hard the dialogue strives to keep the situation clean. Robert Taylor proffers a performance that is as neat as the handkerchief he sports in his breast-pocket. Right now his profile is enough to satisfy the matinee girls but bits of business, the reading of single lines, show he's improving as an actor.” Herb Sterne
+ Script p13 Ag 22 '36

“‘His Brother's Wife’ does not present the kind of people sheltered audiences are used to seeing on the screen. . . Major embellishment of these proceedings is the co-starring of Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck, long co-starred romantically in fan magazines and chatter columns. Proximity in ‘His Brother's Wife’ stimulates what is possibly the best performance of each to date, in spite of moments when John Meehan and Leon Gordon's screen play buckles under heavy alternating loads of whimsy and melodrama.”
+ — Time p48 Ag 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

“Definitely a money picture, what with three sure draw names, an entertaining story, a goodly sprinkling of comedy and superior direction and production. Family.”
+ Box Office p25 Ag 8 '36

“Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck in a mass appeal story, which is cleverly dialogued, is entertainment that should put the merry tingle into the cash register. Taylor's role is one of the he-man type and it should add many to his army of fans. Miss Stanwyck has a part that is tailored to her talents and it should do much in strengthening her position.”
+ Film Daily p7 Ag 1 '36

“Here is one with all the elements of a great box office attraction. It has smash performances . . . and a story filled with the kind of hokum that is always certain of audience appeal. But—and this is a big BUT—the picture in its preview form is so over-plotted as to seem overlength. The time is actually less than an hour and a half, yet additional editing is called for. . . All of which adds up to too much plot for any one picture. With some of the confusing motivations eliminated, the improvement would be marked.”
+ Hollywood Reporter p3 J1 29 '36

“The chief appeal of this handsomely produced film lies in the performances of Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck in essentially unsympathetic roles which somehow fail to gain the sympathy of the audience for faulty, but human, characters.”
Motion Pict Daily p3 J1 30 '36

“With hero Taylor riding the crest of the wave, ‘His Brother's Wife’ should be responsible for big dough at the box office. Backed by name strength, a dramatic story, calling upon Taylor to act for a change, the picture is saleable, with Taylor's draw insurance.”
+ Phila Exhibitor p33 Ag 15 '36

“‘His Brother's Wife’ puts Robert Taylor over the top and re-establishes Barbara Stanwyck. . . Taylor, as a potential No. 1 male draw for the femmes, cinches himself in this ‘un. And Miss Stanwyck, who has been carrying dubious messages to Garcia and shooting Annie Oakleys, likewise does all right for her immediate film future which, for a time was on uncertain shoals. . . Basically, of course, both the [heroine] and the hero aren't quite up to the Elsie Dinsmore standard. He's a bit of a shallow playboy and the fact that she becomes a steerer for a clip joint—but what a fancy joint!—isn't exactly Rover Boy timber, but then it's that sort of a story.”

+ Variety p16 Ag 19 '36

“A cast of big names, a fair story and dialog that has plenty of punch, fail to put ‘His Brother's Wife’ into the class of outstanding pictures. In many cases, the picture lags, a factor which can be remedied to a great degree in the cutting process.”
+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 29 '36

HOLLYWOOD BOULEVARD. Paramount
75min Ag 21 '36

Players: John Halliday, Marsha Hunt, Robert Cummings, C. Henry Gordon, Esther Ralston, Esther Dale, Frieda Inescort

Director: Robert Florey

“The interwoven story concerns a has-been actor, once at the top and famous for his amours, who is now struggling to come back. He is persuaded into writing the story of his love-life for a pulp magazine and on the strength of the yarn gets back into pictures. But the magazine stuff threatens the happiness of various women, including his estranged wife and daughter, and toward the end there comes some genuine conflict.” Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

“Mediocre. Mature.” DAR
Fox W Coast Bul Ag 22 '36

“There is a vague feeling of sadness seeing once again on the screen the stars of yesterday who lost their popular appeal years before it seemed warranted. Mature.” Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

“The fact is brought out that the public sees the type of movies which it will support and thereby sets standards of production. Intelligently directed and except for its excessive drinking, very interesting for adult audiences.” Nat Soc of New England Women

“The picture is distinctly constructive in value and should be enjoyable to all except the very young children. Family.” S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul S 5 '36

“The picture is well cast, acted and directed with its chief interest the return to the screen of many of the old time favorites, the colorful background of Hollywood and beautiful Santa Barbara, studio scenes, and the excellent use made of staging, lighting, and photography. Family-mature.”

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 25 '36

“In an effort to bring back to the screen some of the favorites of the silent screen, Paramount has produced an exceedingly interesting picture. . . Hollywood and its interesting bits of local color and well known spots in Santa Barbara sustain veracity and authenticity to the production. Family.”

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

“Adults.”
Nat Legion of Decency Ag 20 '36

“The plot emphasizes the meteoric glory of fame and the inevitable passing of the popularity of a public entertainer. Adults & young people.”

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Hollywood Boulevard' is an expert piece of direction, away above what we find in ninety per cent of the big pictures made by the big directors. . . [It] is good enough to be shown anywhere. . . It is interesting from the start of the first introductory title. . . Do not let the fact of its appearance on some double bill keep you away from 'Hollywood Boulevard.' Single bill houses rarely show a better one."

+ Hollywood Spec p7 Ag 29 '36

"Veteran picturegoers should get a certain pleasure out of spotting the old-time performers who flit through the film's gaudy background. . . [It is] a film that is at all times interesting, both in its heavy plot and frivolous decorations." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p44 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A highly entertaining picture with a good story, excellent acting and direction, and enough shots of the film capital to sell it to any movie audience. . . Although the story is played a bit too grimly to be realistic, there are enough sly digs taken at the film colony to offset any heaviness. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 8 '36

"The Hollywood background should be interesting to those who have read and heard about the different spots shown. They should serve well in exploitation. The old-timers should also help to make the picture a good program number. Robert Florey, the director, has gotten as much as possible from the material, which is none too strong. It lacks punch and has a tendency to ramble without hitting any real high spots."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 4 '36

"An engaging idea went wrong in the dramatizing of this minor saga of professional life in Hollywood and it emerges as neither comedy, sound drama nor even tragedy, though the last comes nearest to the result. A rather footless and episodic story that arrives close to nowhere, it is spotted with Hollywood locations and personalities and anti-Hollywood philosophy. These supply exploitation angles that will help get the picture across in the less critical fields. . . John Halliday, sterling trouper though he is, is too restrained and well-poised for the part of the flamboyant actor, and Robert Cummings, excellent juvenile, is scarcely at home as a poet in a studio-writing straight-jacket."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 31 '36

"The presence of former film stars and the background of the film capital combine to make this picture an exploitation natural even though the story drags and is never as interesting as the shots of the Brown Derby, Sardi's, the Trocadero and other spots which are shown."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ag 1 '36

"An oddity in that it tells a story of Hollywood, with some old time faces that will make a lot of movie patrons realize how old they are, this is exploitable even if short on star draw. . . Estimate: program, depends on handling."

Phila Exhibitor p36 Ag 15 '36

"Good exploitation picture with many a sales angle that should appeal to the fans who have a yen for Hollywood information and would like a glimpse of this Bagdad. Two angles stand out: Hollywood itself and the inclusion of some 20 former stars who are still interesting to many a picture-goer. . . Inclusion of the former stars is a bit muddled, with several of them unrecognizable; however, most will be familiar to the generation which went to pictures nightly some years back."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 1 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -- Mediocre; - Poor; --- Exceptionally Poor

HOT MONEY, Warner 70min Jl 25 '36

Players: Ross Alexander, Beverly Roberts, Joseph Cawthorn, Paul Graetz

Director: William McGann

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a fairly entertaining program picture. . . Adults: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: involved." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Je 20 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p116 Jl '36

"It is undoubtedly far-fetched, but there is sufficient originality in treatment to make it lightly entertaining. Adolescents, 12-16: fair; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R Jl '36

"Fast-moving, expert direction and a well chosen cast somewhat redeem this otherwise mediocre farce comedy. . . The actors struggle hopelessly to make the production other than dull and uninteresting. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 10 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 2 '36

"A and Y: good farce; C: mature."

Parents' M p69 S '36

"Farical situations, good dialogue, an exuberant young hero and an attractive heroine. Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Je 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Patterned somewhat along the lines of 'Get Rich Quick Wallingford,' the new film is neither particularly good nor conspicuously poor farce. Thanks to competent editing and direction, it falls quite gracefully into that niche reserved for 'amiable entertainments.'"

T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 25 '36

"In spite of one or two genuinely comic performances and an idea that has possibilities for routine entertainment, the intrigue, stock figures and stereotyped phrases of 'Hot Money' spare the audience excessive pleasure. If the piece had been competently written and staged with the sparkle and buoyancy required by farce comedy the work of Ross Alexander, Joseph Cawthorn and Paul Graetz would have stood out to better advantage and the audience might have been fairly well served. As it stands now 'Hot Money' is monotonous farce." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p20 Jl 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Another addition to the light summer trivialities that has little in the general lineup to recommend it. The entire action is based on so many improbabilities and far-fetched situations that it holds little appeal to intelligent audiences."

- Film Daily p4 Jl 25 '36

HOT MONEY—Continued

"It is not played as straight farce nor burlesqued comedy, so what was intended is anybody's guess. Nevertheless, it manages to extract a fair quota of laughs mainly through some absurd situations and spontaneous humor provided by Joe Cawthorn and Andrew Tombes."

+ — Variety p15 J1 29 '36

I

I LOVE YOU ONLY. Nuovo mondo. 75min J1 18 '36

Players: Milly. Vittorio de Sica. Enrico Viarisio. Giuditta Rissone

Director: Mario Mattioli

An Italian dialogue film with English subtitles. Known also as Amo Te Sola. Against a background of the turbulent days of 1848 when the Grand Duke Leopold of Tuscany was driven from Florence by the liberal party, this musical drama tells the story of a titled girl in love with a composer.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This latest production from the Rome Cines Studios is a romantic farce, with music, a bit of drama and a historical background that doesn't disturb it in the least. . . These Italian talkies are improving all the time. The photography is still uninteresting, and the direction sometimes too hurried, occasionally too slow. The romantic leads, Milly and Vittorio de Sica, are a good-looking pair. . . 'I Love You Only' is cheerful hot-weather entertainment designed of course for Italian audiences." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p22 J1 21 '36

"Delightful scenes in city and country, excellent acting and pleasant musical bits make 'Amo Te Sola' well worth seeing." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p11 J1 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] generally pleasing romance with music, well acted and directed in the beautiful background of Florence and surrounding suburban country."

+ Film Daily p9 J1 22 '36

"This Italian importation appears to be entertaining fare, but with an appeal limited almost entirely to those audiences understanding the language. This is true since neither situations nor performances, although capable, are sufficiently outstanding to overcome the importance of the dialogue in providing the entertainment."

Motion Pict Daily p9 J1 24 '36

"This import is effective in its lighter and musical moments. Because musical angle has been made predominant it should satisfy foreign language spots where they get the nuances of dialog partially lost in English captioning. . . Leisurely manner in which plot is developed and overdose of endless talk undoubtedly will annoy average American audience. Music and musical background are most commendable features of film."

+ — Variety p34 J1 22 '36

I STAND CONDEMNED. United artists-Korda 76min J1 10 '36

Players: Harry Baur. Laurence Olivier. Penelope Dudley-Ward

Director: Anthony Asquith

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film under title of Moscow Nights and issue of June 29, 1936 under title I Stand Condemned. Released in England under title Moscow Nights

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fairly good; Y: perhaps; C: no interest."
Christian Century p99 J1 15 '36

"[Harry Baur] as the peasant-merchant, cruel and kindly by turn, and willing to sacrifice himself to bring happiness to the girl he loves, evokes sympathy and admiration for a fine performance. The direction is most capable and understanding, the photography is exceptionally fine, and there are some very interesting Russian dances and songs. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 22 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 25 '36

"A: rather slow-moving but interesting; Y: possible; C: no interest."

Parents' M p69 S '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide Je 20 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"In the film Mr. Olivier, though he is a capable young actor, is overshadowed by Harry Baur, the accomplished French actor. . . The interest of the film lies not so much in the story as in the acting. There are too many familiar ingredients in the plot for it to be completely successful. The players, however, are up to the mark." E. F. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 J1 18 '36

"The play does have in its favor a new Russian dress, a wealth of authentic song-and-dance pleasantries, and some excellent acting, especially that of Harry Baur, whose personality is powerful, like a Laughton, or Jannings." J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p307 J1 17 '36

"To those who saw Harry Baur's extraordinary performances in 'Poil de Carotte' and 'Crime et Châtiment' it seems incredible that in his first English movie he should be dull."

— Nation p110 J1 25 '36

"It is certainly one of the poorest imports of several years. Harry Baur's inflated performance as the love-damaged capitalist who plots the death of his rival, coming after his remarkable Porphyry in 'Crime et Châtiment' is an illuminating comment on the importance of direction in the movies." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p22 Ag '36

"'I Stand Condemned' betrays most of the virtues and faults of British film-making. . . It has moments of stirring suspense and cinematic beauty but it lacks the cunning timing and sharp conflict of character that is so necessary to a realization of its fanciful theme. Anthony Asquith has directed it with more than a passing glance at Soviet motion picture technique."

The most brilliant acting in 'I Stand Condemned' is done by Laurence Olivier. . . Eric Siepmann has gone in too heavily for atmosphere. . . A motion picture of this type needs swift telling with nothing but significant detail to register with impact on the screen. Much of 'I Stand Condemned,' while pleasantly produced, gives the impression that the director is merely marking time." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p16 J1 2 '36

"[It] is an excitable piece, keyed up to the performance of Harry Baur, as vivid a characterization as any screen has offered this season anyway. . . Hollywood may yet have to start worrying again about British competition." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p10 J1 2 '36

"There is a somewhat poignant study in moods in the new London Films production 'I Stand Condemned,' that permits the virtuouse

French character actor, Harry Baur, to exhibit, despite definite handicaps, considerable of the wide emotional range for which he is noted in his own land. . . . Penelope Dudley-Ward, as Natasha, resembles Hollywood's Mary Astor in many respects. Her performance is a tempered one in a part that might easily have been overdone. . . . Laurence Olivier's portrayal of Ignatoff is rather too clipped and flippant, and his voice cracked a couple of times just when folks were expecting great things in the way of diction to complete his resemblance to Ronald Colman." J. T. M.
N Y Times p27 J1 2 '36

"Although it grieves me to say so, 'I Stand Condemned' is not only one of the least interesting of spy films, but it is also one of the paltriest efforts that have been sent here from England—the work, one fancies, of a director and author earnestly disposed but seriously impeded by the bad habits of inexperience." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p11 J1 2 '36

"'I Stand Condemned' isn't going to make any great stir, yet it has its points. . . . The fast pace helps the sketch a lot, and you may even find it superior to the average." John Mosher
+ — New Yorker p55 J1 11 '36

"Whoever titled 'I Stand Condemned,' London Films production of a World War Russian-spy story, perpetrated a film pun at the expense of Harry Baur, France's most famous character star. . . . Chief impression: Baur's acting with his eyebrows."
News-Wk p27 J1 11 '36

"'I Stand Condemned' has been lauded as a vehicle for the acting prowess of Harry Baur, but it is Olivier who really gives the outstanding performance, his graceful wit and agile behavior coinciding regularly with the best moments of the film. These two actors present interesting extremes of histrionic technique—and the picture is an excellent grandstand for the event."
+ Stage p121 Ag '36
Time p53 J1 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Adults."

Box Office p23 J1 11 '36

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p9 J1 25 '36

"This is a remake of 'Nuits Moscovites' ('Moscow Nights'), one of last season's best French films. In French its main weakness was the story; translated into English the story is an even worse stumbling-block. . . . Its leisurely procedure. . . won't help it in this market. Camera work and other technical production is fine."
— + Variety p15 J1 8 '36

I WAS A CAPTIVE OF NAZI GERMANY.

Malvina 89min Ag 2 '36

Players: Isobel Steele and an anonymous cast

Director: Alfred T. Mannon

The picture is an account of the arrest and imprisonment for espionage of an American girl, Isobel Steele, by Nazi officials and her detention in a prison under unbearably harsh circumstances for four months until her release through the intervention of Senator William E. Borah.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Frankly propagandist in nature, it nevertheless has a sufficient background of fact to give an audience some knowledge of life under a dictatorship. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Ag 13 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The document of Isobel Steele, made with bad actors and worse equipment. Unlikely to persuade anyone who is not already convinced Germany has an oppressive government."
— Nation p166 Ag 8 '36

"While the picture is pure propaganda exposing a vicious affair, if it is true, it deserves to be widely shown; if it is not, an apology is owed the Nazis. The film, of course, has little interest outside its inflamed story, which holds attention constantly and at high emotional pitch. Its direction is amateurish, although the prison scenes are excellent, and the print generally has an awkward crudity. The acting, too, is for the most part inexperienced, although certain characters, a prosecutor in the trial scene, for example, are fine. . . . This cinema will not entertain audiences, but rather leave them angry." Marguerite Tazelaar
N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 3 '36

"For all the elaborate precautions of the film's makers to ward off (what we are led to believe would be) Hitler's retaliation—the cast, with the exception of Miss Steele, remaining anonymous, and the producer, Malvina Productions, being just a Hollywood Jane Doe—the picture is less an exposé of Nazi persecution than a mirror for Miss Steele's rather amazing unsophistication. This inference we had drawn when first she began writing about her German experiences; there is no doubt about it any longer." F. S. Nugent
— N Y Times p11 Ag 3 '36

"Although I am all on the side of the author, I must confess that the film is a little too pretentious to be an effective protest. As performed on the screen of the Globe, it is so loosely written, ineptly cast and indifferently acted that its 'idea' is bungled. At heart a stilted editorial, it is so artificial in manner that it fails both as propaganda and entertainment. . . . Frankly, this is the sort of film which, to be effective, must be good not only in its convictions but in its presentation. To be anything less serves to weaken the cause it espouses. It is with regret then that I report that 'I Was a Captive of Nazi Germany' is a showy affectation, amateurishly produced and acted." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p14 Ag 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As the experiences of Isobel Steele in Germany during 1934 are presented in sequences of this picture, they have power to arouse sympathy for her alleged treatment at hands of Nazi authorities. Audiences enjoying inflammatory film fare of the propaganda type will find a good deal in the episodes to fan indignation. Isobel Steele herself plays the leading role with surprising skill and her presence adds interest to the picture."
Film Daily p7 Ag 4 '36

"Actually, the film is neither more nor less than a pictorial record, and, as such, must be reckoned of limited appeal for general audience consumption. For those who feel strongly on the situation which exists in Nazi Germany the film offers something definitely of interest. For all others interested in the extent to which a political dictatorship may carry the exercise of absolute power, the picture likewise should be worthwhile."

Motion Pict Daily p14 Ag 5 '36

"This is typical inferior independent stuff. Miss Steele's experiences are put on thick, the set is cluttered with Keystone cops, snarling Germans. Estimate: limited draw."
— Phila Exhibitor p37 Ag 15 '36

"Possibilities of making a gripping screen yarn were muffed through the inclusion of extraneous detail, tedious pacing and bad acting. Proper cutting job might enhance its possibilities. Despite these and other flaws, there is no question about the picture being a strong preachment against the Nazi rule. Hence, it will be up to the individual exhibitor to decide whether he wants to play the film and whether it would be suited for his type of patronage. It is too prolonged to fit nicely on many double bills and too weak to stand alone."

I WAS A CAPTIVE OF NAZI GERMANY—

Continued

+ — Variety p17 Ag 5 '36

I'D GIVE MY LIFE. Rowland-Paramount 80min
Ag 14 '36

Players: Sir Guy Standing, Frances Drake,
Tom Brown, Janet Beecher

Director: Edwin L. Marin

Based on the play, The Noose, by H. H. Van Loan and Willard Mack. Filmed previously in 1928. It is being shown by some theatres under title of The Noose. "It is the story of a lad who has been raised by a high-grade crook and who chooses to go to the gallows in silence for the crook's murder rather than save himself by revealing that he is the pre-marital son of the governor's wife by the man he has murdered in defense of her name." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: better not; C: no."
Christian Century p175 S 2 '36

"[This is a] heavy topical film. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Unusual lighting effects, symbolism, and splendid photography. Adults: good; family: no; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Illogical situations. Adults. Mediocre." DAR

"Ethically, it is satisfactory but there is little relieving comedy and the film as a whole is heavy and rather harrowing. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Clever use of symbolism and lighting effects, enhance the tenseness of suspense and give a true ethical tone to a near tragedy. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Adolescents: too emotional; children: no." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
Fox W Coast Bul Ag 8 '36

"[It is a] vividly portrayed human interest picture. Though of gangster type this is an engrossing story, well developed, acted with sincerity, and directed with skill and understanding. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Jl 28 '36

"This production is given a degree of plausibility by the sincerity of the acting and capable direction. Mature."

Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"Adults."
Nat Legion of Decency Ag 13 '36

"Mature."
Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p17 S 5 '36

"It remained for Edwin L. Marin to give us the first picture in which every line of dialogue is given its real meaning by the tone in which it is uttered. In their love scenes Frances Drake and Tom Brown exchange affectionate expressions almost in whispers, and in the entire picture not a line is spoken above a conversational pitch, the result being that 'I'd Give My Life' is one of the most convincing bits of entertainment we have had since the screen was given a tongue. Talking in natural conversational tones curbs the disposition of a player to over-act, consequently the performances are smooth, easy and entirely convincing."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 Ag 29 '36

"Produced none too effectively, although with high emotion in certain of its scenes due to the animated performances of Mr. Brown and Frances Drake, the piece seems dated, not alone because it deals with the prohibition era and its nightclub and speakeasy backgrounds, but because the lines and situations have the slightly stale aroma of a past season's hit or an old newspaper's headlines. . . Director Marin has treated the melodrama with sufficient gloom, particularly in the prison scenes, but he has done nothing outstanding with interpretation of the story which results on the screen in rather a stereotyped production, emotionally exciting but still undistinctive." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 17 '36

"Somewhat blurred and out of proportion, 'I'd Give My Life' pulls its dramatic punches and deserves no better rating than middling melodrama. The performances are far better than the script. We must voice an objection to Tom Brown as Nickie, feeling that Mr. Brown, a very nice young man, fails—probably because of his niceness—to convince us he could be a reform school alumnus or even a half-hearted lieutenant in crime of the evil Mr. Gordon." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '36

"[It is] a sound, standardized melodramatic idea, moderately well worked out [and] makes for a tolerable hour or so in the cinema." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p15a Ag 15 '36

"[It] is too flayed a piece of yarn to hold up as modern screen fare. The dialogue is hi-falutin', the minions-of-the-law as well as the gangsters act like so much produce from a really good finishing school." Herb Sterne
— Script p10 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Heralding his reentry into the production field, Richard A. Rowland brings forth a picture that promises well for his new venture. Brilliant, convincing acting under the sympathetic direction of Edwin L. Marin has developed a melodrama that will pull at the heartstrings of any audience. Family."

+ Box Office p29 Ag 1 '36

"Richard A. Rowland's first contribution to the Paramount output is a valuable program asset. It is an adroitly devised melodrama strong in tearful suspense that, without the aid of big name draw, will win its way widely and build on word-of-mouth in the neighborhoods to good profits."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 24 '36

"An emotion-stirring melodrama through which runs a strong thread of suspense, this makes for acceptable average entertainment. . . Though serious in tone, the picture seems to be of a character that will appeal to general audiences and be of particular attraction to women."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Jl 25 '36

"This shapes up as a nice job but short on what the marquee needs. Estimate: fair program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p35 Ag 1 '36

"It's a low-budgeted film and creditable on its production. Picture is a bit shy on what it takes for the marquee with Sir Guy Standing for the top name, though Tom Brown has the lead. Other names are less important to the box office but the play has been unusually well cast and deftly directed, although handicapped by too deliberate exposition of the premise, inducing a slowness no amount of direction can correct. There is not sufficient plot material to warrant this diffuseness. . . The picture should do fairly well in most spots as the topper in a twosome."

+ — Variety p16 Ag 19 '36

for the summer cinema, when standards are pretty mediocre." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p6 Ag 7 '36

"'Jailbreak' belongs to a familiar school of culture. It's a fast, tough picture with a certain ingenuity hinted at in the working out of the mystery which is built up in the story. All the types are usual—the loyal girl, the kindly warden, the bright young newspaperman, the convicts and gangsters of screen melodrama." John Mosher

New Yorker p48 Ag 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It should not be offered to discriminating audiences, however, as the story is loaded with absurdities only partly camouflaged by a certain speediness which Director Nick Grinde has achieved. Rates as a 60-minute companion for stronger pictures on dual bills. . . [The] two leads, Craig Reynolds and June Travis, are not only obscure newcomers but major weaknesses of the production on the score of poor performances. Girl is especially stilted and unconvincing."

— Variety p18 Ag 12 '36

K

DER KAMPF. Amkino 90min S 10 '36

Players: Lotte Loebinger. Bruno Schmidsdorf. Gregor Gog. Ingeborg Franke

Director: Gustav Wangelheim

German dialogue film with English sub-titles, made in Moscow by exiles and refugees from the Hitler regime in Germany. "[It] tells of the beginnings of Hitlerism in Germany and how the Nazis try to blame outrages that they have committed on their enemies. More specifically, it tells how one Fritz Lemke, more fond of football than of justice, finally comes over to the side of those gallant protestants who are fighting for their lives, their religion, their political belief—in short, their birthright." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The documentary evidence . . . has not been adroitly organized with the underlying account of Fascist aggression. The Vertov or 'camera eye' method requires consummate weaving together of real and imagined scenes. In 'Der Kampf,' the former are unquestionably authentic but they tend to interrupt and confuse the main exposition. . . Curiously enough, there are none of the Jewish persecutions that have been identified in most American minds with Hitler's climbing into the saddle. . . Gustav Wangelheim has staged parts of the photoplay brilliantly, but he has not been able to make it either a piece of arresting rapportage or a credible straight drama." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p18 S 11 '36

"By far the most vigorous and the most accurate condemnation of the Nazi scheme of things, the film is betrayed by the very fervor of its makers. When a speaker permits himself to be carried away by his own emotion, he becomes incoherent; 'Der Kampf,' produced by a group which has reason to regard the Nazis with intense hatred and the Soviet with loyalty and hope, becomes confused, chaotic, fanatical and, at times, maudlin. If the propaganda film is to be a telling instrument against the Hitler régime it must be used with the icy precision of a surgeon's scalpel, not as a butcher's cleaver." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p29 S 11 '36

"If I may be permitted to divorce my critical judgment from my sentiments I shall straightway have to report that 'Der Kampf' is a pretty poor film, largely because it wants to cram too many protests into one mouthpiece. Fanatically sincere in their enthusiasm for justice, all those concerned with the production have allowed their emotions to overcome their intelligence, with the result that they have not given coherent expression to their theme. It might have been a good thing for the film and the cause it espouses if someone less rapt about exposing the iniquities of Hitlerism and more inspired with the idea of producing a good film had taken hold of it. Then its cause would have been doubly effective." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p29 S 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is a dramatically presented account of events leading up to the burning of the Reichstag. . . The picture apparently is intended as a challenge to Hitler, and on that score it is likely to prove strong controversial stuff."

Film Daily p15 S 11 '36

"With a measure of authenticity and a cast of exiled German actors, the film, in documentary and theatrical flashes presents its case. . . While it is a historically strong piece of indignation its appeal is limited to Soviet film devotees."

Motion Pict Daily p4 S 11 '36

KELLY OF THE SECRET SERVICE. Principal 69min

Players: Lloyd Hughes. Sheila Mannors. Fuzzy Knight

Director: Robert Hill

Based on a short story, On Irish Hill by Peter B. Kyne. The plot deals with a scientist who has perfected an aerial bomb to keep enemy fleets from our shores. After the plans are stolen by a rival scientist through hypnotism, the government agents step in and after numerous exciting adventures unscramble the facts.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"While lacking strength for larger key-city first runs, this is diverting amusement for average moviegoers. . . It has a good plot full of intrigue and thrills."

+ Film Daily p9 J1 22 '36

"Estimate: for action houses."

Phila Exhibitor p38 Ag 1 '36

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED. Principal-20th century-Fox 60min S 11 '36

Players: Robert Kent. Rosalind Keith. Alan Dinehart. Frank McGlynn, Sr.

Director: Howard Bretherton

Based on the novel of same title by Zane Grey. A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 2 '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 2 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 17 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'King of the Royal Mounted' contains all the ingredients that make for success, glorious scenery, a capable cast, and the usual story, but Howard Bretherton's direction makes a poor thing of it. The dialogue is just lines spoken without any regard for the significance of scenes. . . It is direction at the peak of its stupidity and which robs the picture of all conviction. Intelligent direction was all it needed to make it entertaining."

— + Hollywood Spec p6 Ag 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"That old master of action dramas, Sol Lesser, turns in another picture sure to hit pay dirt at the box office. Family."

+ Box Office p25 S 5 '36

"A lightweight get-your-man yarn for people who think slowly, fabricated from run-of-the-mill Zane Grey ore. In fact, its materials are so familiar that the ore seems more like the tailings from that famous story mill. Earle Snell's screenplay gives it one or two new twists, but its slow, matter-of-fact telling must confine it to support duty in the lower brackets."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 21 '36

"This has everything necessary to please those with enthusiasm for Westerns and action pictures. The film's principal quality is the magnificent mountain scenery photographed with utmost effectiveness. The stills should make excellent lobby displays for a selling angle. The story, while it will make good stuff for the small towns and neighborhood trade, is lacking in the sophistication necessary for the de luxe spots."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Ag 22 '36

"Estimate: fair; best for neighborhoods, twin bills."

+ Phila Exhibitor p41 S 1 '36

"With a fairly strong yarn, Howard Bretherton's direction manages to keep story moving at a pace that holds interest throughout, yet at times continuity is somewhat marred by use of too many abrupt cuts that put the actors in the awkward position of having to walk in and out of scenes in mechanical fashion. . . Picture as a whole is fair entertainment and should please the family trade and be acceptable to audiences appreciating outdoor action drama."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 21 '36

KING STEPS OUT. Columbia 75min My 15 '36

Players: Grace Moore. Franchot Tone. Walter Connolly. Elizabeth Risdon. Frieda Inescort

Director: Josef von Sternberg

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It] is an excellent vehicle for accentuating the scintillating beauty and sprightly personality of the star, but leaves something to be desired in vocal exhibition, as one hears less of her rich, golden voice in this picture than in former productions. . . Excellent collaboration on the part of Howard Jackson who revised the musical story, and Sidney Buchman who [wrote] the screen play, are responsible for this very enjoyable picture for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 13 '36

"The film shows evidence of hasty construction. [Miss Moore] sings three or four songs, all of which are coarsely recorded and her fans will be disappointed with such a meagre allowance. . . In all, pleasant light entertainment which does not attempt to emulate Grace Moore's earlier successes, marred by poor reproduction. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p104 Je '36

"A and Y: diverting musical romance; C: if interesting."

Parents' M p44 J1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Delightful acting by Grace Moore, with some lovely music, plenty of light frothy comedy, and Franchot Tone doing his familiar serious characterization, with Walter Connolly thrown in for good measure against an elaborate and colorful background, make this good summer movie fare." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p32 J1 '36

"After the heights she touched in 'One Night of Love,' almost any Grace Moore picture is bound to be a trifle disappointing. Still, if 'The King Steps Out' is no cinema jewel, it remains a pleasant little excursion to one of those mythical musical-comedy kingdoms."

(3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 Je 27 '36

"'The King Steps Out' is a fair example of a Ruritanian musical. Grace Moore delivers a far more intelligent and effective characterization than we have been assured lies within her powers."

+ New Theatre p12 J1 '36

"Grace Moore is the only American star presented to her screen audiences with a Miss before her name, an act intended no doubt to fill us with respect and happy anticipation. Alas, 'The King Steps Out' fulfills no such promise. . . Director von Sternberg tries hard to hide its inherent defects under tempo and Herman Bing. It is an inglorious duty, however, in the face of Miss Moore's strident histrionics, Mr. Tone's stiff interpretation of a Rover Boy King, and the year's most emphasized beer imbibing."

— Stage p8 J1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 Je 20 '36

L

LADY BE CAREFUL. Paramount 67min S 4 '36

Players: Lew Ayres. Mary Carlisle. Benny Baker. Larry Crabbe. Grant Withers

Director: Theodore Reed

Based on the play Sailor Beware by Kenyon Nicholson and Charles Robinson. "The story concerns the battle of Lew Ayres, known in the navy as Dynamite, to capture the heart of Mary Carlisle, nicknamed Stonewall because of her ability to resist masculine advances. Ayres' shipmates and Mary's friends, meanwhile wager on the outcome, throwing their influence in the direction of their bets. As expected, the couple fall for each other and a romantic conclusion caps the courtship." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: better not; C: no."

Christian Century p1239 S 16 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"If it bores the more serious-minded, it will undoubtedly delight the younger contingent in the picture audiences. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

"Mature-family. Good." DAR

"[It is] a light, inconsequential film that will be tiresome for any audience of average mentality, although it is as harmless as milk toast." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Interesting scenery with glimpses of the navy, make good entertainment for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul S 5 '36

"This light comedy, will amuse those who enjoy watching the antics of sailors. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 25 '36

"A completely 'white-washed' version of the stage play, 'Sailor Beware,' this light, romantic comedy of sailors on shore leave manages to be fairly entertaining. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 27 '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"A swell farce, bubbling over with clever dialogue and amusing situations. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Lady Be Careful' interested me chiefly by virtue of its being the first directorial job of Theodore Reed who has been a long time in various branches of picture-making. There is nothing in Ted's direction to indicate a first attempt. . . The script being extremely loquacious, did not permit him to make a motion picture, but he has made an entertaining talkie."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 Ag 15 '36

"The surprising thing about this screen translation is that it turns out to be such amiable amusement. . . [It] provides as much lightly unpretentious pleasure as we have come across this season. It's a treat." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p35 S 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Straight, light, fast-moving nautical comedy, this picture will bring chuckles from the most critical audience. Excellent casting is evidenced. Family."

Box Office p61 Ag 22 '36

"Playing, direction and writing unite to present one of the year's surprise packages of sheer entertainment. The smartest thing Paramount can do is to forget that 'Lady Be Careful' was ever thought of as a B picture. If the studio gets behind it with an A campaign, it is likely to be a clean-up everywhere. . . Banned as too risqué for the screen, the original has been kicking around for many moons. Obviously the right writers for the screen play were not found until Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Harry Ruskin tackled the job. They proved to be just the right writers. It is a superb piece of work, sparkling with swell dialogue and punchy situations."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 8 '36

"[It is] a light comedy which holds the interest. . . Benjamin Glazer's production has maintained good taste throughout the story. As light entertainment, the picture is suitable for showing with a more serious subject."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Ag 10 '36

"Mild program, devoid of what the marquee orders, but somewhat pleasing, this makes no appeal to greatness but should meet double feature, neighborhood requirements. Its comedy moments will help overshadow some of the disadvantages caused by lack of names."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p36 Ag 15 '36

"Smart showmanship . . . bright business and lines . . . plus sparkling performances by all hands, have converted the play 'Sailor Beware' into one of the sprightliest comedies of the season. It should be welcomed with open arms by any exhibitor, either for solo billing or to grace the top of the program for prosperous returns. . . Altogether, 'Lady Be Careful' comes close to a perfect hour's diversion."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 8 '36

LADY JANE GREY. See Nine days a queen

LAST OF THE MOHICANS. Reliance-United artists 90min Ag 13 '36

Players: Randolph Scott. Binnie Barnes. Henry Wilcoxon. Bruce Cabot. Heather Angel

Director: George B. Seitz

Based on the novel of the same title by James Fenimore Cooper. The saga of the days of the French and English War when the Huron Indians aided the French against the British defenders of the newly settled American continent.

Alice P. Sterner has prepared a Photoplay Study Guide to Last of the Mohicans. The Guide is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents a copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fine of kind; Y: very good; C: too strong." Christian Century p1026 S 9 '36

"This picture is adapted to the entire family, for it is one of our American classics told in a beautifully fitting manner." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Eleven months of extensive research were required before this thrilling drama went into production in order that history might be accurately told in the presentation of the well-known book. . . So well has it been edited that it is thrilling without being emotionally exhausting. Symbolism, sound effects, light and shadow as well as exquisite photography and deft direction enhance the artistry of this production. Educational and entertaining with universal appeal." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The story moves swiftly, benefiting by intelligent direction and good casting, and gives a clear, concise picture of that part of the French-Indian War which it depicts. . . Emphasis is placed on the nobler traits of character, such as chivalry, sense of duty, strict code of honor, and when these virtues dominate the spirit of a picture, it deserves approbation." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Despite its educational worth, the film is too horrifying for children, unless incidents of Indian cruelty are cut. Good. Mature." DAR

"The film is notable for striking contrast, great scenic beauty and finished portraiture. A superior production which will meet enthusiastic response from appreciative audiences. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Exceptionally well cast; and one cannot but be impressed by the womanly women of the picture as compared with the characteristically 'wooden females' of the Leather Stocking Tales. The picture is also notable for excellent photography thus giving to the world another valuable historical drama. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Ag 29 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'King of the Royal Mounted' contains all the ingredients that make for success, glorious scenery, a capable cast, and the usual story, but Howard Bretherton's direction makes a poor thing of it. The dialogue is just lines spoken without any regard for the significance of scenes. . . It is direction at the peak of its stupidity and which robs the picture of all conviction. Intelligent direction was all it needed to make it entertaining."

— + Hollywood Spec p6 Ag 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"That old master of action dramas, Sol Lesser, turns in another picture sure to hit pay dirt at the box office. Family."

+ Box Office p25 S 5 '36

"A lightweight get-your-man yarn for people who think slowly, fabricated from run-of-the-mill Zane Grey ore. In fact, its materials are so familiar that the ore seems more like the tailings from that famous story mill. Earle Snell's screenplay gives it one or two new twists, but its slow, matter-of-fact telling must confine it to support duty in the lower brackets."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 21 '36

"This has everything necessary to please those with enthusiasm for Westerns and action pictures. The film's principal quality is the magnificent mountain scenery photographed with utmost effectiveness. The stills should make excellent lobby displays for a selling angle. The story, while it will make good stuff for the small towns and neighborhood trade, is lacking in the sophistication necessary for the de luxe spots."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Ag 22 '36

"Estimate: fair; best for neighborhoods, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p41 S 1 '36

"With a fairly strong yarn, Howard Bretherton's direction manages to keep story moving at a pace that holds interest throughout, yet at times continuity is somewhat marred by use of too many abrupt cuts that put the actors in the awkward position of having to walk in and out of scenes in mechanical fashion. . . Picture as a whole is fair entertainment and should please the family trade and be acceptable to audiences appreciating outdoor action drama."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 21 '36

KING STEPS OUT. Columbia 75min My 15 '36

Players: Grace Moore, Franchot Tone, Walter Connolly, Elizabeth Risdon, Frieda Inescort

Director: Josef von Sternberg

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It] is an excellent vehicle for accentuating the scintillating beauty and sprightly personality of the star, but leaves something to be desired in vocal exhibition, as one hears less of her rich, golden voice in this picture than in former productions. . . Excellent collaboration on the part of Howard Jackson who revised the musical story, and Sidney Buchman who [wrote] the screen play, are responsible for this very enjoyable picture for the family."

S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 13 '36

"The film shows evidence of hasty construction. [Miss Moore] sings three or four songs, all of which are coarsely recorded and her fans will be disappointed with such a meagre allowance. . . In all, pleasant light entertainment which does not attempt to emulate Grace Moore's earlier successes, marred by poor reproduction. Suitability: family."

+ — Mo Film Bul p104 Je '36

"A and Y: diverting musical romance; C: if interesting."

Parents' M p44 J1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Delightful acting by Grace Moore, with some lovely music, plenty of light frothy comedy, and Franchot Tone doing his familiar serious characterization, with Walter Connolly thrown in for good measure against an elaborate and colorful background, make this good summer movie fare." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p32 J1 '36

"After the heights she touched in 'One Night of Love,' almost any Grace Moore picture is bound to be a trifle disappointing. Still, if 'The King Steps Out' is no cinema jewel, it remains a pleasant little excursion to one of those mythical musical-comedy kingdoms."

(3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 Je 27 '36

"'The King Steps Out' is a fair example of a Ruritanian musical. Grace Moore delivers a far more intelligent and effective characterization than we have been assured lies within her powers."

+ — New Theatre p12 J1 '36

"Grace Moore is the only American star presented to her screen audiences with a Miss before her name, an act intended no doubt to fill us with respect and happy anticipation. Alas, 'The King Steps Out' fulfills no such promise. . . Director von Sternberg tries hard to hide its inherent defects under tempo and Herman Bing. It is an inglorious duty, however, in the face of Miss Moore's strident histrionics, Mr. Tone's stiff interpretation of a Rover Boy King, and the year's most emphasized beer imbibing."

— Stage p8 J1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 Je 20 '36

L

LADY BE CAREFUL. Paramount 67min S 4 '36

Players: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle, Benny Baker, Larry Crabbe, Grant Withers

Director: Theodore Reed

Based on the play Sailor Beware by Kenyon Nicholson and Charles Robinson. "The story concerns the battle of Lew Ayres, known in the navy as Dynamite, to capture the heart of Mary Carlisle, nicknamed Stonewall because of her ability to resist masculine advances. Ayres' shipmates and Mary's friends, meanwhile wager on the outcome, throwing their influence in the direction of their bets. As expected, the couple fall for each other and a romantic conclusion caps the courtship." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: better not; C: no."

Christian Century p1239 S 16 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"If it bores the more serious-minded, it will undoubtedly delight the younger contingent in the picture audiences. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Mature-family. Good." DAR

"[It is] a light, inconsequential film that will be tiresome for any audience of average mentality, although it is as harmless as milk toast." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Interesting scenery with glimpses of the navy, make good entertainment for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul S 5 '36

"This light comedy, will amuse those who enjoy watching the antics of sailors. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 25 '36

"A completely 'white-washed' version of the stage play, 'Sailor Beware,' this light, romantic comedy of sailors on shore leave manages to be fairly entertaining. Family."
+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 27 '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"A swell farce, bubbling over with clever dialogue and amusing situations. Family."
+ Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Lady Be Careful' interested me chiefly by virtue of its being the first directorial job of Theodore Reed who has been a long time in various branches of picture-making. There is nothing in Ted's direction to indicate a first attempt. . . The script being extremely loquacious, did not permit him to make a motion picture, but he has made an entertaining talkie."
+ Hollywood Spec p8 Ag 15 '36

"The surprising thing about this screen translation is that it turns out to be such amiable amusement. . . [It] provides as much lightly unpretentious pleasure as we have come across this season. It's a treat." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p35 S 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Straight, light, fast-moving nautical comedy, this picture will bring chuckles from the most critical audience. Excellent casting is evidenced. Family."

Box Office p61 Ag 22 '36

"Playing, direction and writing unite to present one of the year's surprise packages of sheer entertainment. The smartest thing Paramount can do is to forget that 'Lady Be Careful' was ever thought of as a B picture. If the studio gets behind it with an A campaign, it is likely to be a clean-up everywhere. . . Banned as too risqué for the screen, the original has been kicking around for many moons. Obviously the right writers for the screen play were not found until Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Harry Ruskin tackled the job. They proved to be just the right writers. It is a superb piece of work, sparkling with swell dialogue and punchy situations."
+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 8 '36

"[It is] a light comedy which holds the interest. Benjamin Glazer's production has maintained good taste throughout the story. As light entertainment, the picture is suitable for showing with a more serious subject."
+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Ag 10 '36

"Mild program, devoid of what the marquee orders, but somewhat pleasing, this makes no appeal to greatness but should meet double feature, neighborhood requirements. Its comedy moments will help overshadow some of the disadvantages caused by lack of names."
+ Phila Exhibitor p36 Ag 15 '36

"Smart showmanship . . . bright business and lines . . . plus sparkling performances by all hands, have converted the play 'Sailor Beware' into one of the sprightliest comedies of the season. It should be welcomed with open arms by any exhibitor, either for solo billing or to grace the top of the program for prosperous returns. . . Altogether, 'Lady Be Careful' comes close to a perfect hour's diversion."
+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 8 '36

LADY JANE GREY. See Nine days a queen

LAST OF THE MOHICANS. Reliance-United artists 90min Ag 13 '36

Players: Randolph Scott. Binnie Barnes. Henry Wilcoxon. Bruce Cabot. Heather Angel

Director: George B. Seitz

Based on the novel of the same title by James Fenimore Cooper. The saga of the days of the French and English War when the Huron Indians aided the French against the British defenders of the newly settled American continent.

Alice P. Sterner has prepared a Photoplay Study Guide to Last of the Mohicans. The Guide is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents a copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fine of kind; Y: very good; C: too strong." Christian Century p1026 S 9 '36

"This picture is adapted to the entire family, for it is one of our American classics told in a beautifully fitting manner." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Eleven months of extensive research were required before this thrilling drama went into production in order that history might be accurately told in the presentation of the well-known book. . . So well has it been edited that it is thrilling without being emotionally exhausting. Symbolism, sound effects, light and shadow as well as exquisite photography and deft direction enhance the artistry of this production. Educational and entertaining with universal appeal." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The story moves swiftly, benefiting by intelligent direction and good casting, and gives a clear, concise picture of that part of the French-Indian War which it depicts. . . Emphasis is placed on the nobler traits of character, such as chivalry, sense of duty, strict code of honor, and when these virtues dominate the spirit of a picture, it deserves approbation." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Despite its educational worth, the film is too horrifying for children, unless incidents of Indian cruelty are cut. Good. Mature." DAR

"The film is notable for striking contrast, great scenic beauty and finished portraiture. A superior production which will meet enthusiastic response from appreciative audiences. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Exceptionally well cast; and one cannot but be impressed by the womanly women of the picture as compared with the characteristically 'wooden females' of the Leather Stocking Tales. The picture is also notable for excellent photography thus giving to the world another valuable historical drama. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Ag 29 '36

LAST OF THE MOHICANS—Continued

"Pretentious and authentic in production, forceful and dramatic in direction and convincingly portrayed by an able cast, each one making a worthy contribution, this picture, attention compelling in its appeal, merits wide acclaim. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 19 '36

"Best of the month. Family, generally."
++ Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"In bringing this classic to the screen the producers have retained much of the glory and thrill that went into the making of this successful book. The story is vital, inspiring and highly exciting. . . Some gruesome scenes detract from its adaptability for small children, but it should prove most enjoyable for the family generally."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 19 '36

"Realistically portrayed, a battle to the death between two Indians might be disturbing to very young children. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 20 '36

"A masterly adaptation of James Fenimore Cooper's semi-historical classic that faithfully preserves the strength of the original, starkly dramatic tale. . . The siege of the British Colonials at Fort William Henry against the French and Indians and Munro's surrender to General Montcalm have been presented in a memorably dramatic way. . . One of the important films of the year. Family."

++ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Suggested for schools and libraries. Family-juvenile."

Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"If interest has lapsed in James Fenimore Cooper's Leatherstocking Tales, the film version of 'The Last of the Mohicans' will revive it, and probably cause a run on many a public library, probably one of the few places where the author's works are to be found in their entirety. The film has a story, more fresh and stirring than many modern ones, and direction, by George B. Seitz, so swiftly paced, that the audiences often find themselves on the edge of the seats, whooping along with the Indians on the screen." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 5 '36

"Good costume melodrama with Indians returning to the screen as major ingredients of a film spectacle."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"'The Last of the Mohicans' arrives true to the author's idea of the bitter struggle of a new world that was literally torn from the hand of a grudging destiny. Some of the characters are more polished than Mr. Cooper would have them, but at no time is there any mistaking their tradition-encrusted representations. . . The grisly massacres and walloping rescues occur with expectancy, but even so their arrival assumes dramatic importance in the fine treatment of George B. Seitz, one director who knows the values of panorama vistas to outdoor stagecraft of this style." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p467 S 11 '36

"The films have done very handsomely by 'The Last of the Mohicans,' and playgoers with a hankering for straightforward melodrama, complete with a love theme that doesn't overpower the whole arrangement, will do well to tie themselves to the Rivoli for an hour and a half of literally hair-raising doings. . . It makes first-class frontier drama, and if its producers don't clean up on it there is something mysterious in their bookkeeping. It can't have cost any very great fortune to put the film together, but the result is a gratifying study in fidelity to an established original, and one which is full enough of honest excitement to rate as a bang-up chapter of the American legend. . . As part of the film chronicle of American conquest 'The Last of the Mohicans' is sturdy stuff, and as straight screen entertainment it ranks as anybody's money's worth of high-proof excitement." Lucius Beebe

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 S 3 '36

"'The Last of the Mohicans' described with gusto some of those early encounters on this continent between white man and Indian, between English and French. They have made a bang-up melodrama out of this old James Fenimore Cooper novel. . . This is a thriller, complete with tomahawks, scalplings and hair-breadth escapes. It is also a sentimental piece, unabashed in its gallant phrases and idealization of the Mohicans. Director and adapters have so handled even this sentimentality that the most flagrant bits of bathos become rather charming bits of period fiction. . . This is grand stuff for movies, as it always has been. Cops and robbers have almost replaced paleface and redskin as characters for movie melodramas. Time has not dulled the terror of an Indian massacre, the sound of war drums beating in the night, the sinister stealth of a Huron stalking through the forest." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p16 S 3 '36

"It may seem captious, perhaps, to quibble over details in the telescoping of so ponderous an item as 'The Last of the Mohicans' into a mere hour or so of screen entertainment. . . We left the Rivoli yesterday with the feeling that Reliance Pictures had played fast and loose with the favorite fictional character of our youth. . . The mere suggestion that the noted scout of the Leatherstocking Tales might soften even for a moment under the blandishments of a woman is clear heresy. . . They have, of course, done a grand job of bringing the high spots of the story to the screen. . . The massacre of Fort William Henry is by far the bloodiest, scalpingest morsel of cinematic imagery ever produced, and we were consequently about ready to overlook the elisions made necessary in fitting the novel to the screen when Hollywood permitted Hawkeye to fall in love." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p17 S 3 '36

"A few children here and there, satiated with the run of drama and underworld goings-on, may feel kindly toward 'The Last of the Mohicans,' and the Boy Scouts may endorse the woodlore. . . However, I fear the usual impression will be that the studio raked in a collection of the meekest young gentlemen around the precincts, dressed them up like Indians, and told them to make whoopee." John Mosher

New Yorker p95 S 12 '36

"In a great confusion of Indians, redcoats, snuff, and dubious dialogue, the old story reels itself out to a happy if unorthodox ending. Bruce Cabot as the evil Magua, speaks his lines as though he already held his B.A. from Carlisle College."

News-Wk p42 S 12 '36

"Here is a melodramatic hodge-podge of frontier life made to order for Boy Scouts and Girl Reserves. Youthful enthusiasts of wood lore will undoubtedly thrill to its tomahawking and fort building. For everyone else, alas, it is a screenplay with all its parts neatly labelled and laboriously played. . . The film, even more than the novel, is replete with sacrifice and sportsmanship, and the last of the Mohican tribe bows his head in silent tribute to the superiority of the white man, whose leadership is not here so deftly displayed."

+ Stage p10 S '36

"A danger of James Fenimore Cooper's works as cinema material is that, without his sombre prose (admired by Maxim Gorki and imitated by Joseph Conrad) they generally boil down into an antique kind of penny-dreadful. Scenarists Philip Dunne, John Balderston, Paul Perez, and Daniel Moore worked in shifts for more than a year to keep this from happening to 'The Last of the Mohicans.' Net result is an intelligent and exciting version of a story, which, properly loaded with physical action, keeps the imprint of literature."

+ Time p19 S 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Beautifully photographed and wisely cast, this expert adaptation of the James Fenimore Cooper historical classic will leave a lasting impression on younger audiences and also will prove splendid entertainment for the more mature patron. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 29 '36

"[It is a] good drama of early American frontier warfare produced with plenty of action for popular appeal."

+ Film Daily p9 Ag 12 '36

"As entertainment it is a gorgeously glorified Western and as history it is an authentic adventure tale that every red-blooded American will thrill to. As a production it is of major quality and fit to solo in the key spots. Despite its light name pull it will register vigorously at all box-offices. The picture's one marked fault at present is its length. Chiefly compounded of battle, murder and sudden death, its 90 minutes of suspenseful action develops a letdown from sheer exhaustion."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 8 '36

"James Fenimore Cooper's story may be a tradition-encrusted literary classic, but the entertainment it provides is just as modern and as compelling as tomorrow's headlines. The first attraction of its kind to come to the screen in some time, 'The Last of the Mohicans' is a thrill-action drama, rivalling the most vividly conceived gangster film in excitement-provoking quality... [It] swept a preview audience into enthusiastic applause."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ag 10 '36

"With strong historical angles, strong sentimental moments, this has plenty of action for all. Production is a good one, with audiences likely to forget at some moments that it is still Hollywood. This is strong fare for kids, family trade. Estimate: good job, highly exploitable."

+ Phila Exhibitor p37 Ag 15 '36

"'The Last of the Mohicans' is obvious box office. Its potentialities in spots west of the Mississippi are predicated on a natural yen to see something exciting... while in larger metropolitan areas they're likely to go for it simply because it's an 'Injun Pitcher.'... The James Fenimore Cooper historical fiction story is transferred to the screen with surprising fidelity, though the two love stories are accentuated, quite naturally, for screen purposes... 'Last of the Mohicans' will mean plenty of wampum at the wickets. It's geared to adult patronage with added appeal for younger generation."

+ Variety p16 S 9 '36

"There was hearty and sustained audience response... The juvenile audiences will pack the theatres when 'Mohicans' comes to town. At the same time, the entertainment appeal is broad enough to attract the whole family, since the story and its presentation have been handled in a splendid manner."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 8 '36

LAST OF THE WARRENS. Supreme 59min
My 10 '36

Players: Bob Steele. Margaret Marquis.
Charles King

Director: Robert N. Bradbury

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: slow-moving Western."
Parents' M p47 Ag '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is all done in a wide, free and fancy style, without much rhyme or reason in certain situations, but it is chock full of thrills, action and suspense, and after all that is what the fans want."

+ — Film Daily p7 J1 2 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p30 J1 15 '36

"Except for a novel opening... 'Last of the Warrens' is just another Western, one that employs most of the familiar plot situations of this type of screen fare. Though there's a lot of action, 'Warrens' breaks no records as saddle-leather entertainment... Picture's short running time of fifty-nine minutes makes it ideal as the No. 2 feature for duals."

+ — Variety p28 J1 8 '36

LAST OUTLAW. RKO 72min Je 19 '36

Players: Harry Carey. Hoot Gibson. Tom Tyler. Henry B. Walthall. Margaret Calhahan

Director: Christy Cabanne

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: good; C: perhaps."
Christian Century p1071 Ag 5 '36

"The old and new tactics of outlaw capture are well compared in this Western that children will enjoy and flock to. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: little interest. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A good cast and direction but while the film is all right for family audiences, it is far too tense for young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This rapid action picture has an ethical value which marks it for good family enjoyment."
S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 13 '36

"Suitability: family; especially children under 16."

Mo Film Bul p117 J1 '36

"A, Y and C: unusually good Western."
Parents' M p47 Ag '36

"Well produced, this picture, satisfactory from an ethical standpoint, is well directed and the capable cast includes many old time favorites. Family, exciting for young children."

+ Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"John Ford, who wrote the original story, and Christy Cabanne, who directed the film, have collaborated to produce a Western that is so genuinely exciting and diverting that it is a decided ascent from the average horse opera."
William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p14a Je 13 '36

"The treatment is disarming, the development contains some adroit comedy, the climax is thoroughly amusing... Christy Cabanne's direction hits the proper trail and goes a long way toward making the merits that the film contains." Herb Sterne

+ Script p11 S 5 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LAWLESS NINETIES. Republic 57min F 15 '36

Players: John Wayne. Ann Rutherford.
Harry Woods

Director: Joseph Kane

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Just as it looked as if present-day Westerns had forgotten all about the lassos Bill Hart and Tom Mix used to throw with such dexterity, 'The Lawless Nineties' proves they haven't, and a prettier lasso is not to be found in the archives of Westerns than the one [with which] Mr. Wayne trips up a thundering herd of villains. . . . If a person likes Westerns this one is exciting. The riding is thrilling, the wide spaces inviting, and the fights so realistic Joe Louis's trainers should look them over." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Je 29 '36

"The thinness of Wyoming's population to this very day perhaps may be due in part to the number of strong men who bit the dust, according to 'The Lawless Nineties,' when the virgin territory was struggling for statehood against outlaws and obstructionist politicians. . . . The cast is kept so busy that it can find very little time for such luxuries as romance and convention," which, of course, is entirely as it should be." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p11 Je 29 '36

"A decided ascent from the Western-melodrama average is recorded in 'The Lawless Nineties.' . . . Speed is the essential merit of this first-rate 'horse opera,' which has plenty of thrills and excitement in it and which is acted in a first-rate manner." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p17 Je 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] a fairly exciting drama. It all hews close to the accepted horse opera pattern, with lots of shooting, hard-riding and fistfighting. On a dual platter it will make spicy dressing."

+ — Variety p23 J1 '36

LION'S DEN. Puritan 59min J1 6 '36

Players: Tim McCoy. Joan Woodbury.
Arthur Mellette

Director: Sam Newfield

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The original twists and surprises keep this one steaming all the way, and it will get over easily with the fans who want plenty of the thrill stuff."

+ Film Daily p4 Ag 25 '36

"There is excitement, action and suspense in this Western. The story contains a good degree of novelty deviating from the routine."

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 Ag 25 '36

"Estimate: okay McCoy."

+ Phila Exhibitor p38 Ag 1 '36

"Tame mixture of east and west with Tim McCoy first as a night-club entertainer and then as a two-gun man of the open spaces. Very little action in the opus, sole thrills confined to a single gun fracas. For the neighborhood dualers."

+ — Variety p21 S 2 '36

LITTLE MISS NOBODY. 20th century-Fox 72min Je 12 '36

Players: Jane Withers. Jane Darwell. Ralph Morgan. Sara Haden

Director: John Blystone

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: perhaps; C: doubtful."

Christian Century p912 Je 24 '36

"The film is interesting and absorbing throughout except for the rather heavy crime development at the end. Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p17 J1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Little Miss Nobody' is basically concerned with the essential nobility of a small and distinctly unprepossessing orphan. . . . As played by the round-faced little Jane Withers, this characterization never quite comes off, but since Miss Withers is very young, the fault may be attributed more to the director than to the player, and undoubtedly, more to the story itself than to either player or director."

B. L.

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 27 '36

"Cheerful family entertainment with laughable pranks by Jane and a contrasting touch of melodrama involving jewel thieves."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 27 '36

"It is regrettable to see Miss Withers sugar-coated for coast-to-coast consumption, when she had such promise of becoming our one child female Edward G. Robinson." Don Herold

Life p28 Ag '36

"It is a superannuated fable about peewees at the poor farm, a mixture of practical jokery, youthful fixations and hokum melodrama."

— Time p37 Je 22 '36

LOVE BEGINS AT TWENTY. Warner-First national 60min Ap 22 '36

Players: Warren Hull. Patricia Ellis. Hugh Herbert. Hobart Cavanaugh. Dorothy Vaughan

Director: Frank McDonald

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 20 '36

"[It is a] pleasant domestic comedy-drama. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 15 '36

LUCI SOMMERSE. See Crooked love

M

MARY OF SCOTLAND. RKO 123min Ag 28 '36

Players: Katharine Hepburn. Fredric March. Florence Eldridge. Douglas Walton. John Carradine

Director: John Ford

Music director: Nathaniel Shilkret

Based on a play of the same title by Maxwell Anderson. Against a tapestry of political and religious conflict Katharine Hepburn portrays the ill-fated Mary Stuart who in the late years of the sixteenth century paid with her life for Queen Elizabeth's fear that a Stuart would ascend the throne of England.

A Photoplay Study Guide, prepared by Mary Imelda Stanton, is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc., 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, at fifteen cents a copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: excellent; Y: very good; C: mature."
Christian Century p119 Ag 19 '36

"Absorbing in interest and flawless in artistry and technical achievement in this elaborate film. . . Mr. Nichols, and Mr. Ford, have scored a worthy successor to their outstanding success, 'The Informer.' Adults: good; family: good; 14-18: good; 8-14: beyond." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Unusual photography, expert direction, and the stirring musical theme all deserve praise and add greatly to the high standard of the picture. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Don't miss this beautifully enacted film. . . Remarkably fine interior sets, photography, and musical scoring; a distinguished cast. Mature-family. Excellent." DAR

"Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A large and exceptional cast, aided with the embellishment of realistic scenic effects, make vivid an interesting episode in English history, and a living picture both educational and entertaining. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 1 '36

"Outstanding."
+ + Jt Estimates J1 15 '36

"The picture is highly recommended for the family as a valuable, educational, and artistic film."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 22 '36

"The artistic and architectural beauty of the settings from the lavish splendor of Elizabeth's court to the fog-bound seacoast of grim Scotland and the exceptional performance of Katharine Hepburn and her entire cast are excelled only by the gripping romance, drama and tragedy of this historical production. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency J1 30 '36

"An exciting movie, well above the average photoplay but oversimplified by being too completely confined to the tragic love story of Mary and the Earl of Bothwell."
Scholastic p17 S 19 '36

"Best of the month."
+ + Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"There will probably always be contention about Mary Stuart—what kind of a woman she really was, how much a mere victim and how much to blame for her tragic troubles. . . Historically there is no need to quarrel with the conception of Mary herself for biographers and historians are too uncertain about it though there is every likelihood that she was a much more forceful person than Anderson has chosen to make her. But there is no historical justification for making Bothwell such a fine fellow. For the sake of an easy love-story, with complete appeal to audience sympathy, a ruthless border brigand, dominated sometimes by passion but always by ambition, is changed into a brusque and hearty sort of boy-friend, completely and selflessly devoted to the queen. . . Miss Hepburn's Mary has a little the air of being acted by Alice Adams. It is touching and appealing, but a bit school-girlish, and that will probably make a lot of people like it better than something deeper and more mature."

Wkly Guide Ag 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Maxwell Anderson's play, which Helen Hayes did so successfully the season before last, becomes a moving, stirring and highly spectacular motion picture. . . [It] evokes murmurs of praise and interesting comment. . . In the matter of casting, one can think of several actresses whom one might rather see in this role than Katharine Hepburn." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p28 S '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"Historians, quibblers, loyal students of the stage and followers of Helen Hayes . . . will detect with ease some flaws in this newer version, but the fact cannot be denied that . . . 'Mary of Scotland' presents a magnificent and vivid play of elemental human emotions in violent yet fascinating conflict. . . Miss Hepburn does very well by the Scottish Queen, minus the usual Hepburn mannerisms, even if her portrayal is not at all times historically correct emotionally." J. P. Cunningham

+ + Commonweal p407 Ag 21 '36

"Perhaps it is because it tries to tell us too much about the affairs of Mary and her court, tries too much to interest us in her life as a whole; but I think it is because it presents us with a woman who is struggling to remain a queen and in so doing becomes less a woman than a symbol—but, whatever the reason, 'Mary of Scotland' is not satisfactory screen entertainment. . . [It] is too impersonal to become widely popular. . . The picture does not stir our emotions, as screen entertainment, to be successful, must stir them. It concerns itself too much with already established facts and not enough with its human phases."

+ + Hollywood Spec p8 Ag 1 '36

"A lavish, impressively mounted spectacle, but utterly lifeless in its characterizations, 'Mary of Scotland' must be listed as one of the major cinema disappointments of the current season. . . The story has been given a stilted, loosely assembled treatment that receives no great aid from the costumed players. Katharine Hepburn's interpretation of the title role takes the lush, fiery Mary Stuart and makes a shallow, prattling girl of her." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p57 S 5 '36

"Pictorially lovely, literate in the writing, and containing a number of stirring scenes, 'Mary of Scotland' offers too much juggling for some audiences. . . The film opens with a series of powerful scenes which later become diffused, due to an apparent effort to keep history at its best and tell the story from three view-points Mary's, Bothwell's and Queen Elizabeth's. . . Both Miss Hepburn and Miss Eldridge depend upon 'mouth-twitching' to cover a variety of moods; reverence, fear, love and indignation. Time was when this was considered the last resort of an aging French actress."

Lit Digest p18 Ag 8 '36

"This powerful figure [Elizabeth] has become, in 'Mary of Scotland' a petulant harpy. Dudley Nichols—one presumes the scenarist is responsible—has reduced her from history's and Maxwell Anderson's practiced, Machiavellian ruler to the flighty and jealous step-sister of Mary Stuart's Cinderella. Mr. Nichols had the storyteller's right to tamper with history—in detail the film is actually more accurate than the play—but what did he hope to gain by the change? . . . Miss Hepburn is the star, all right, but her Mary Stuart reminds one of nothing so much as her Babbie in 'The Little Minister'—both are Scottish, in love, and that's all. . . As an object the film makes an impressive appearance. . . 'The Informer'

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; + - Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

MARY OF SCOTLAND—Continued

proved the abilities of director John Ford and scenarist Dudley Nichols as story-tellers, but they have not repeated their performance here. To the defect of Mr. Nichols which I have suggested is added the further one of undistinguished diction." Robert Giroux
Nation p165 Ag 8 '36

"'Mary of Scotland' owes a good part of its success in the movie version to Katharine Hepburn, as a personality and moving force. . . . [It] is mainly good as superior and handsome melodrama, I think; or call it the triumph of histrionics over history—which in this case serves only as a romantic storehouse from which may be requisitioned the necessary matters of state, love, action, what not. . . . Fredric March is surprising and fine, but the top-most influence in humanizing all these deeds and speeches is Katharine Hepburn. In her best moments (and this is one of her best) Miss Hepburn has and projects over to her audience a high measure of spirit—both in the meaning of essence and in the meaning of vitality, moral spark and force." Otis Ferguson
+ New Repub p47 Ag 19 '36

"Katharine Hepburn's first extra-adolescent part in years could hardly have been more unsuitable than this. . . . Interiors conventional, exteriors madly unconvincing, dialogue humourless, and Hepburn-fans who have been demanding their ravishingly gawky goddess in a different guise, will be sorry they spoke."
— New Statesman & Nation p289 Ag 29 '36

"So crossed and criss-crossed is this period with diverse and clashing interests, with a simultaneity of dozens of actions and conflicts, that regardless of a poet's skill, it would appear impossible to be compressed within the framework of the conventional three act play. 'Mary of Scotland,' it would seem, was inevitably doomed to failure. Under these circumstances, the film version of 'Mary of Scotland' . . . was defeated before the battle began. The film not only inherited all the ills of the original play, and in several instances added faults of its own facture, but even deprived itself of several of the original's virtues. Like the play, the film has no directives, no point of view, is entirely unclear as to its purpose. . . . The whole enterprise is a regrettable one and should serve as a warning against the indiscriminate taking over of unsuitable stage-successes to the screen."
— New Theatre p21 S '36

"The tragedy of the most alluring of the Stuarts. . . reaches the cinema in a moving, eloquent and distinguished transcription. . . Miss Hepburn, after a slightly strident opening scene, provides a lovely and touching characterization of the hapless Mary, while Fredric March has never been finer than he is as the bold, dashing and romanticized Bothwell. 'Mary of Scotland' is a fine motion picture, admirably produced and admirably acted. Assuredly it has its faults, not particularly as drama, but as cinema. For one thing, it is too long, and I certainly do not know just where it should have been cut. . . . In addition, there is perhaps an excess of dialogue and, although it is always excellent talk, the picture does suggest garrulousness upon occasion." Richard Watts, Jr.
+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Jl 31 '36

"This is a most excellent picture of the Sir Walter Scott-Hervy Allen-Alexandre Dumas school, romantic, hearty, showy and theatrical. It does not, to one still keenly touched by the beauty and fire of the original Maxwell Anderson stage play, seem a great picture. The spirit, along with Mr. Anderson's poetry and the performances of Helen Hayes and Philip Merivale, is absent from the screen. What remains is good lusty entertainment, surefire for the box office. . . . Still, if this is not Anderson, Hayes and Merivale, it is yet above the average Hepburn, March, Director John Ford, and is a sound historical romance." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p8 Jl 31 '36

"'Mary of Scotland' must be considered one of the year's notable photoplays. . . . Yet there are times when the characters—Mary Stuart particularly—do not come through clearly and there are scenes which lack the vitality they possessed in the play. There is this blend of excellence and mere adequacy in the new picture which curbs our tongue when we would use the word 'magnificent,' and limits us to the less glowing epithet, 'impressive.' . . . Although Katharine Hepburn's Mary Stuart shines brilliantly through most of the film's two-hour course, we were conscious of definite defects in her characterization." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p22 Jl 31 '36

"Using Maxwell Anderson's lyric play of the same name as a framework for his story, Mr. Nichols has discarded the original's blank verse and substituted dialogue more suitable to the needs of the cinema. In this respect Mr. Nichols has not failed. If the screen version of 'Mary of Scotland' lacks the poetic rapture of the original, it has an exalted rhythm and incomparable vigor all its own. . . . In all the principal roles 'Mary of Scotland' enjoys the luxury of accomplished actors. It is left to Miss Hepburn to bring Mary vividly, glowingly, to life. This she does. . . . 'Mary of Scotland' is a fine-spirited, inspiring film that goes forthwith on the recommended list of this department." William Boehnel
+ + N Y World-Telegram p8 Jl 31 '36

"The sets are huge and handsome, and give the impression of being solid all the way through; none of the rooms in any of the scenes is smaller than a hockey rink. All this represents an expenditure of thousands of dollars and months of work, and is extremely impressive; but it has little or nothing to do with Maxwell Anderson's play. . . . The wisps of 'Mary of Scotland' visible between cloak-swishings and sword-wavings are not especially encouraging. Katharine Hepburn, in the title rôle, finds the cards stacked against her from the very start. . . . Another handicap is the fact that most of her scenes are played to the accompaniment of perfectly thunderous incidental music; put in, probably, in the hope of 'pointing up' the action. I think that just annoys most people. . . . I don't think [Katharine Hepburn] quite fulfilled the demands of the rôle. 'Mary of Scotland' is something for a grown-up actress." Russell Maloney
— + New Yorker p52 Ag 8 '36

"Those who bumped their way in through the crowds [to the stage version] won't easily forget Helen Hayes's studly interpretation of the fire-hearted Queen, Philip Merivale's stubborn Bothwell, Helen Menken's dry, sharp Elizabeth; and for that reason they should stay at home and read a good book when the Hollywood version gets around to the neighborhood theater. Others, unprejudiced by the stage production, will find in John Ford's screening an exceedingly pleasant, if slightly maudlin, evening. What was once drama has suffered a change into melodrama, and what was once acting has become in the hands of Katharine Hepburn, Fredric March, and even Florence Eldridge, mere mugging. . . . Yet the play is fool-proof. Its original forceful structure remains, and has, if anything, gained rather than lost power in its adaptation to a more flexible medium."
News-Wk p22 Ag 1 '36

"The writing . . . distorts the ill-fated Stuart, makes her strong instead of capricious, constant in place of wayward, a woman of will rather than of moods. . . . The portrait in no wise resembles those gleaned from histories and biographies. Strictly as romantic entertainment the picture comes through; it is lavish stirring, entirely worthy. John Ford's direction is sure, breathes sweep and power into the costume piece. Photography and composition . . . superb—an achievement for lenser Joseph August who has created some unusually exciting close-ups. . . . Under Ford's guidance Hepburn proves herself one of the rare actresses of the screen, shows that she need not lean on glamour, unfolds a new range, an ability to electric-shock spectators legitimately. One of these days [she] is likely to pale even the haloed, traditional names of the Theater." Herb Sterne

+ Script p10 Ag 8 '36

"The story of Mary, Queen of Scots, is exciting stuff no matter how you take it—almost. The way it must be taken in the current cinema version is too much to ask of anyone. . . . We found it all pretty resistible. The story has been telescoped into chaos, and the two principals have in no way captured the glamor and majestic stature of their historic prototypes. 'Mary of Scotland,' through inappropriate writing, directing, and casting, has become merely a costume heyday for Hollywood headlines."

— Stage p10 S '36

"[Its fault] is not that its most dramatic moments (e.g., Elizabeth's visit to Mary in the Tower of London) are apocryphal; it is that its most historically conscientious moments are not dramatic. . . . That, outside the narrow range in which she is superb, Katharine Hepburn often acts like a Bryn Mawr senior in a May Day pageant; that Frederic March's Scottish burr has Wisconsin overtones; and that Director John Ford tried to symbolize the sombre quality of his story by the over-simple expedient of shooting it in the dark, are circumstances which do not heighten the film's dramatic impact. If 'Mary of Scotland' is still worth seeing, it is because the picture is based on one of those tremendous legends, which, projected to heroic proportions by their reflections in history, have a validity which not even the blunders of faulty narration can totally destroy."

Time p27 Ag 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] an outstanding picture. A feature with almost perfect exploitation ramifications, it should fare well in all showings. Pandro S. Berman's production is intelligent and sympathetic with exactly enough pomp and pageantry."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 15 '36

"Once in a while, it is this reviewer's privilege and pleasure to witness a production that is superlative in every way. . . . In this class must be placed RKO Radio's production of 'Mary of Scotland' for it is a 'great' picture."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 Ag 15 '36

"In an attempt to get an authentic picturization of the historical facts concerned in the reign of Mary, Queen of Scots. . . . Pandro Berman has delivered a production for Radio that will probably be a great treat to scholars but a bit boring for the ordinary picture audience. The picture is magnificent. Extremely lavish in its production, it is rather dull in entertainment values due to its great length. . . . and a noticeable jumpiness of the story, probably caused by some intensive cutting in order to get it down to its present length. . . . The picture sinks, insofar as this reviewer is concerned, by the attempted telling of too much story and the dragging of most every scene to an unbelievable length. . . . The Hepburn fans will not stamp her performance in 'Mary' as her best, nor among her best. She gave Mary an extremely cold characterization that was spotted with many unbelievable speeches. . . . So far as our opinion goes, its success is doubtful."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 J1 24 '36

"Radio has taken a chapter, the stirring story of Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, and produced therefrom a splendidly powerful drama of the screen. By reason of the superiority of the production in its technical phases and the high caliber of the interpretation, the picture must be reckoned an outstanding achievement. . . . The looked-for portrayal of the tragedy-beset young queen by Katharine Hepburn will add immeasurably to her stature as a splendid actress. Her performance is sincere, intelligent and genuine, and compares favorably with the sterling work of Helen Hayes, who originated the role of Mary in the Anderson play on Broadway in 1933."

+ + Motion Pict Daily p8 J1 23 '36

"Slow in spots, long, this has, however, magnificent settings, a great cast to help sell it. . . . Estimate: nice production; depends on Hepburn draw, buildup."

Phila Exhibitor p38 Ag 1 '36

"[It tells] the story beautifully, artistically, delicately, with meticulous attention to detail and portrayal—but with perhaps some doubt on the straight box office angle. . . . As is, despite running over two hours, despite having an overabundance of dialog (which will murder it in the foreign market) and despite being of an essentially dull historic nature, it should get a lot of talk and okay business. But it will have to be watched and nursed carefully once it leaves the big keys."

+ Variety p16 Ag 5 '36

"Plaudits to all those connected with the production of 'Mary of Scotland.' . . . Katharine Hepburn is perfect casting as Scotland's last great ruler. Fredric March as Bothwell, gives a sterling performance. . . . With a cast of names, plus the drawing title, picture should be a heavy grosser. For the women, it should have a strong attraction."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 24 '36

(*) MASTER WILL SHAKESPEARE. MGM
Lumin Je 13 '36

Players: Anthony Kemble Cooper

This short includes a clip of the new Romeo and Juliet feature to be released by MGM. It is the first of a series to be called Milestones of the Theatre Miniatures. This depicts the steps in Shakespeare's ascent to the title of the world's greatest playwright.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It has] beautiful views of Stratford. Interesting. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Not until you see this short will you believe that it's possible to cram so much consummate skill into a thousand feet of film. . . . The story [is] remarkably well-knit and packs a human interest that should appeal not only to the upper strata but to the masses. . . . Sum total: an enchanting film."

+ Box Office p27 J1 25 '36

"It is magnificently produced with all the accurate costuming and scenic design of the Shakespearian period. The atmosphere produced and maintained throughout lifts this into the class of Screen Gems. It will prove a treat to the literary, and all the intelligentsia, besides having a decided popular appeal."

+ Film Daily p3 J1 11 '36

"A serious yet entertaining short in which a small portion of the Bard's life is portrayed, this is an effort of unusual appeal. It is tasteful and sober. . . . Altogether it will please the multitude of the Bard's admirers."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 J1 15 '36

"Excellent."

+ Phila Exhibitor p40 Ag 1 '36

MEET NERO WOLFE. Columbia 72min Ag 1 '36

Players: Edward Arnold. Lionel Stander. Joan Perry. Victor Jory. Russell Hardie. Walter Kingsford

Director: Herbert J. Biberman

Based on the novel, Fer-de-Lance, by Rex Stout. Nero Wolfe, a tight-fisted detective, solves the mystery of Professor Barstow's death without leaving his home. The mystery begins when the professor dies on the golf course, presumably of a heart attack. Nero drinks beer, tends his orchids, while the amiable Archie Goodwin handles the details.

MEET NERO WOLFE—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair; Y: perhaps; C: hardly."

Christian Century p1095 Ag 12 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 16 '36

"A and Y: good murder mystery; C: no interest."

Parents' M p69 S '36

"Suspense is well maintained, though the production, humorous in spots, lacks somewhat in pace and excitement. Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Superior mystery-story diversion of the talkie sort, but only fair for those who like to see a story told in action."

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 1 '36

Reviewed by Don Herold

Life p31 S '36

"The first and we trust the last in a projected series . . . We hope that Mr. Arnold, Stander and Herbert Biberman, (the latter directed the film), will be spared connection with the next in the series." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p22 Ag '36

"I would set down 'Meet Nero Wolfe' as passable midsummer cinema fare: something neither to cheer for nor hoot at with any particular violence. . . . The story . . . plays pretty fair with the spectator and if not excessively exciting or gruesome, is quite workmanlike in its execution." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 J1 16 '36

"'Meet Nero Wolfe,' in spite of three murders and a bit of shooting here and there, has rather a static quality. . . . The story . . . seems pretty phoney. . . . 'Meet Nero Wolfe,' to audiences recently delighted by such crack murder dramas as 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford,' may seem lacking in ease and authority. It never stoops to dullness, however." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p12 J1 16 '36

"'Meet Nero Wolfe' is considerably less than satisfactory gooseflesh entertainment. . . . [and] hasn't the speed and action usually found in a murder film." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p15 J1 16 '36

"A most comforting sort of detective for these humid days is 'Nero Wolfe.'" J. T. M.

+ — N Y Times p20 J1 16 '36

"'Meet Nero Wolfe' is considerably less than satisfactory gooseflesh entertainment. . . . [and] hasn't the speed and action usually found in a murder film." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p15 J1 16 '36

"[It] ought to offer some entertainment. . . . It's no knockout thriller and it depends a little too much on the eccentricities of its leading character for its major value. Edward Arnold handles Nero easily, and I suppose one can foresee a series built around the part. . . . In my opinion, this is one of those mystery stories which depend too much upon a lot of things that have happened years before to a lot of people. . . . Some people, however, don't object to a little foginess in their plots, and these folk will be thoroughly content, I should think, with 'Meet Nero Wolfe.'" John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p56 J1 25 '36

"Very lazy but also very funny is Nero Wolfe, who bows to the mystery-story public in Columbia Pictures' production 'Meet Nero Wolfe.' . . . Columbia may have started a cycle of Nero Wolfe pictures with this adaptation of Rex Stout's novel 'Fer-de-Lance.' Magazine stories about the fat and fabulous sleuth provide plenty of material."

+ — News-Wk p29 J1 25 '36

"[Nero Wolfe], less dashing than Philo Vance and less whimsical than Charlie Chan, but more mercenary than either, will be a highly acceptable addition to the screen's growing corps of private operatives."

+ Time p40 J1 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Entertaining and interesting mystery that is enlivened by the rib-ticking performance of Lionel Stander. Family."

+ Box Office p25 J1 25 '36

"This detective thriller belongs to the better type of mystery pictures. Its story moves swiftly, maintains suspense, has much good comedy, and introduces a new type of detective in the fat, beer-drinking criminologist, Nero Wolfe. . . . Edward Arnold as the criminologist gives a swell performance, entirely in the spirit of Rex Stout's detective; it is suave and subtle; at times jocose and menacing."

+ Film Daily p8 J1 16 '36

"From the fictional concoction of Rex Stout has been developed a new and delightful detective character for the screen, Nero Wolfe. If the title of this film indicates that others featuring him are to follow, an interested and eager film public would seem to be assured."

+ Motion Pict Daily p19 J1 16 '36

"Estimate: enjoyable program."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 J1 15 '36

"Edward Arnold's characterization of the Falstaffian private dick who solves [mysteries] without leaving his easy chair should strike the general fancy favorably and rate well with the box office. The comedy and the guessing elements have been deftly mixed, the well-knit narrative precludes any drooping in interest and the cast disports itself in crack [mystery story] fashion."

+ Variety p17 J1 22 '36

MINE WITH THE IRON DOOR. Columbia-Principal 60min My 8 '36

Players: Richard Arlen, Cecilia Parker, Henry B. Walthall, Stanley Fields

Director: David Howard

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee
Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"The acting is good and the plot, although a little incredible, is not such as to strain the imagination too far. Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p118 J1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Richard Arlen is, I think, a pleasant enough young man (I'll trade him for Gable, with Montgomery thrown in) and he sets a nice, easy-going pace in 'The Mine With The Iron Door' but the sum-total effect is hardly exciting enough to warrant my yanking at your coattails in its behalf. The story sounds as if it had been written on a warm Los Angeles afternoon between 2:30 and 5:30. Not for children." Don Herold

— + Life p31 S '36

"'The Mine With the Iron Door' . . . is a straightforward performance and [has] concise direction. . . . The performance of Mr. Walthall is a finely shaded one, while Miss Parker, even in this juvenile role, combines restraint with understanding of the character. Mr. Arlen is his usual pleasant self, natural and sincere, while Stanley Fields as the boisterous Dempsey adds comedy to the piece. The outdoor settings will appeal to the nature lover."

Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 Jl 11 '36

"The Mine With the Iron Door' is pleasantly brief, and its small, well-managed cast of experienced players achieve in it a nice balance of fun and adventure." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 11 '36

"[It] has in it some very pleasant actors. . . Having admitted that, let's quit being nice and guarded about it and admit that it's a pretty tedious entertainment." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p13 Jl 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Because of a rather trite story idea and lack of ingenuity or punch in development, this production never lifts its head above the routine action melodrama class."

+ Film Daily p3 Jl 11 '36

"Although classed as melodrama, this adaptation of Harold Bell Wright's yarn isn't beyond . . . box office possibilities. It's strictly a program picture for secondary spots, with production, mounting and music of minor dimensions."

+ Variety p31 Jl 15 '36

MISTER CINDERELLA. Roach-MGM 85min

Players: Jack Haley, Betty Furness, Monroe Owsley, Raymond Walburn

Director: Edward Sedgwick

When a barber impersonates a millionaire, he finds himself enmeshed in many highly ludicrous situations.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 10 '36

"A, Y and C: unobjectionable but silly farce."

Parents' M p69 S '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"If you are one of those hardy souls, one who thrills to bed-room chases and mixed identities, 'Mister Cinderella' was made to order for you. If, on the other hand, you have sensitive ears and an aesthetic soul, don't even walk past the theatre which plays it; the racket will produce a neurosis. . . 'Mister Cinderella' is rough rowdiness with a punch. If you are too refined, send the children—they will love it." Paul Jacobs

Hollywood Spec p10 Ag 1 '36

"[It is] an old-fashioned but effective comedy that makes a vigorously unsnubtle attack on the mirth centers. . . 'Mister Cinderella' affords just cause for loud guffaws." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p39 Ag 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Combining an array of old-but-still-good slapstick pranks, this picture will bring the laughs. Director Edward Sedgwick makes the most of the situations, and Arthur Treacher turns in an excellent performance with his inimitable butler characterizations. Family."

+ Box Office p29 Ag 1 '36

"This is a Class A comedy, built solely for laughs—and getting them."

+ Film Daily p3 Jl 11 '36

"Built for audience laughter, 'Mister Cinderella' succeeds honestly in its purpose. It makes no bid for sophisticated appeal, but rather is content to get belly-laughs with out-and-out slapstick. . . Not a trick was overlooked in the workmanlike job of this experenced comedy constructionist. What if a deal of tried-and-true formula material is evident? The preview reception proved all of it good audience stuff."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 8 '36

"Hal Roach, with an original story and capable cast, has turned out one of the funniest pictures in the current season. Although about a thousand feet too long, the film can be trimmed down to make a picture which will amuse all ages. The preview audience at the Orpheum laughed and giggled throughout the first showing. . . The comedy angle plus the name players should be exploited."

+ Motion Pict Daily p16 Je 30 '36

"Estimate: good comedy."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 Ag 1 '36

"Fast moving comedy with sufficient laugh angles to please any audience, 'Mister Cinderella' should prove a good investment for the Roach studio. . . Audiences will accept it with more than average interest. As double bill fare, it's near perfect."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 8 '36

M'LISS. RKO 65min Je 17 '36

Players: Anne Shirley, John Beal, Guy Kibbee, Douglass Dumbrille, Moroni Olsen

Director: George Nicholls, Jr.

Based on the short story and play of the same title by Bret Harte. Previously filmed as a silent picture about eight years ago, Anne Shirley portrays the childlike mountain girl who grows up in the rough, riotous atmosphere of California's gold rush. Surrounded by her drunken father, her poker-playing guardians, she is befriended by an idealistic young school teacher who wins her love.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: perhaps; C: doubtful value."
Christian Century p1095 Ag 12 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: fair; family: no; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The tempo of the picture is slow with the sentimental sequences a bit stressed. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Mature-family." DAR

"With a positive ethical value—the ability of two characters to live above their conditions—we recommend the picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Jl 11 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Jl 1 '36

"This Bret Harte classic, popular thirty years ago both as a story and as a play, preserves in its screen appearance much of the flavor of the original but it is elaborated for the demands of the screen and the additional material is not always in good taste nor up to the standard of the original. Adolescents, 12-16: passable; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R Jl '36

"Bret Harte's simple, direct and unsophisticated story is ably adapted and will delight those who enjoy refreshing entertainment. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 1 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Jl 16 '36

"A and Y: mild entertainment; C: no."
Parents' M p69 S '36

"[It] will delight those who enjoy refreshing entertainment. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

M'LISS—Continued

"Family-Junior."

Wkly Guide J1 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"RKO Pictures evidently concluded at the start that the million-copy circulation of Bret Harte's 'M'liiss' since 1868, automatically assured strong screen material. Evidence of the fallacy is at hand. The very transformation of Bret Harte's tale with such absolute faithful duplication, without any independent imagination, precluded the possibility of attaining anything even approaching first-rate drama... Someone, also, has mistakenly convinced the producers that her performance will further their ambition to make Anne (M'liiss) Shirley the 'America's Sweetheart' successor to Mary Pickford." J. P. Cunningham

— Commonweal p347 J1 31 '36

"Radio gives us in this a notable picture, notable for its splendid direction and acting, its flawless writing and its fine photography and art direction. It is charming entertainment and a sufficiently worthy example of screen craftsmanship to warrant my suggesting that those interested in the cinema as a medium see and study it. While this is definitely a talkie, it leans not infrequently on the camera as a story-telling aid. The dialogue is utterly realistic, confines itself to essentials and is delivered at all times with the highest possible degree of naturalness." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p17 J1 4 '36

"There is not another Hollywood actress quite like Anne Shirley. Her playing is imbued with an elusive quality—an adolescent sincerity and a fragile comedy flair—that makes this young performer as distinctive in her way as Mae West or Garbo. In 'M'liiss,' her latest and a typical vehicle, Miss Shirley once more scores in a role that might seem ridiculous in less sensitive hands... This comes as a gently persuasive item for your more relaxed moments." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p29 Ag 8 '36

"The film trade press gave 'M'liiss' high praise as a 'family' picture; predicted it would charm even urban audiences."

+ Lit Digest p18 J1 11 '36

"There is an audience, no doubt, for pictures like 'M'liiss,' 'Ann of Green Gables' and 'The Harvester,' or producers would not continue making them. That they are too simple, sentimental and rustic for this taste proves nothing, of course; therefore you may conceivably enjoy an hour at the Roxy indulging in a few tears... To one who remembers Bret Harte for his Poker Flat stories, the picture 'M'liiss' comes as a surprise... Mr. Harte's colorful and adult episodes have been changed into something childish and saccharine... Miss Shirley is not our idea of an actress and John Beal is wasted as Thorne." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p4 Ag 8 '36

"'M'liiss' is based on Mr. Harte's story, but the pioneer West it describes is the West of Hollywood films, a Hollywood closely watched by the Messrs. Hays and Breen. So absent is sin from the picture that this yarn of the roaring, gambling West becomes a mild, sugar-and-water romance for the kiddies. It is not much of a drama nor is its production one to stir enthusiasm." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p15 Ag 10 '36

"There is little or nothing left of the hard-bitten picture that Bret Harte drew. The youthful Anne Shirley's characterization of the M'liiss of the screen version has its moments." J. T. M.

N Y Times p5 Ag 8 '36

"Although it is difficult to write with any degree of persuasiveness about the narrative of 'M'liiss,' the film possesses a really skillful physical production, has freshness and individual style and emerges as a considerably more likable photoplay than you might suspect from a brief digest of its story... Charming, romantic, nostalgic, expertly acted and directed, 'M'liiss' is more than just bearable screen entertainment." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p12 Ag 10 '36

"Bret Harte's quaint sampler has been embroidered with leisurely stitches of sentiment; as a film it is thoroughly old-fashioned and just as thoroughly enjoyable... It's warm, human hokum of the type that gets under the skin. The sequence in which the star sings 'There's a Tavern in the Town' accompanied by gestures and dance steps is certain to be talked about." Herb Sterne

+ Script p12 J1 11 '36

"The brisk early days of California have taken on a pastel hue in the change from novel to screen. No longer is Smith's Pocket the roaring locale of tender love... 'M'liiss' is a well washed daughter of the lot, hair coiffed in the latest fashion, eyebrows neatly plucked, eyes open wide in the engaging manner of local ingenues. Saloon scenes take up some two fifths of the total footage, violating the Bret Harte tradition in each foot."

Stage p121 Ag '36

"'M'liiss' is... dragged down from the shelf now for no better reason than to show that it should have remained there... Cinem-actress Anne Shirley, whose re-christening from 'Dawn O'Day' two years ago was an improvement that deserved but did not get an Academy Award, does the best she can but fails to achieve more than a Pyrrhic victory over her material."

— Time p42 J1 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a picture with box-office in every reel and a double handful of down-to-earth appeal for every member of the family."

+ Box Office p27 J1 4 '36

"This is a faithful transcription of the old Bret Harte story... John Beal is real and believable, and carries the picture along convincingly, and at all times holds the attention... The trouble with the production is that it fails to build to any real suspense and a thrill climax such as a story with this background demands."

+ — Film Daily p9 J1 8 '36

"Bret Harte's sentimental comedy of frontier days, now more than half a century old and the model for a whole school of American fiction, as here brought to the screen, is a gem in its class... It is headed for fat grosses in all neighborhoods and will solo on many Main Streets with profit. It will also advance Anne Shirley, who plays the name part, in popular esteem and box office importance."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 Je 23 '36

"Unusually well produced and performed, this backwoods romance should appeal to family audiences. It marks a definite step forward for Anne Shirley."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Je 24 '36

"This should bring Anne Shirley back after she slipped in her last effort. 'M'liiss' is no record breaker but it is family entertainment that small towns, neighborhoods should like. Guy Kibbee's presence should help."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p69 J1 1 '36

"Heavy doses of mush are mixed with a sprinkling of sarsaparilla in this one to make up an hour of what is generally passed off under the misnomer of family entertainment. With no names to help it at the box office it will have to get in line for double-feature spotting... It just isn't the kind of story which can stand up under sincere treatment in this day and age."

+ — Variety p18 Ag 12 '36

"Intelligent production by Robert Sisk, with emotional and comic elements neatly balanced to prevent descent into maudlin and caricature pitfalls, appropriate direction by George Nicholls, Jr., and restrained playing by Anne Shirley and able cast have shaped the tale as excellent entertainment for general audience level. Homespun quality fits it best for the family trade, but it should take care of itself on any program where substance rather than names count."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 23 '36

(*) MOVING DAY. United artists 8min J1 22 '36

Director: Walt Disney

Produced in Technicolor. When Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck are dispossessed, they try to move their furniture out and run into tremendous difficulties.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Sei Motion Pict J1 '36

"Family-junior."

Wkly Guide Je 20 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Latest Mickey Mouse release in which an erratic piano is the star and Donald Duck's humiliation is complete. Among the best."

+ Nation p110 J1 25 '36

"By all means see the current Mickey Mouse. . . There's an upright piano in it, doing some of the most sinister things I've ever seen on a movie screen." Russell Maloney

+ New Yorker p53 Ag 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Donald Duck once again overshadows Mickey Mouse as star of Walt Disney's latest Technicolor cartoon to the delight of audiences who have long since allowed the quack-voiced little fellow to replace the squeaky rodent in their affections. . . The laughs, in fact, come so fast during Donald's hide and seek with a stubborn piano as to leave one almost breathless. Filled with fast and furious fun, 'Moving Day' is tops in the cartoon field."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 1 '36

"[It] contains a barrelful of laughs. . . Donald Duck undergoes a series of absurd adventures that elicit one laugh on the heels of another. In fact, Donald is the hero, Mickey a sort of stooge (and often forgotten)."

+ Film Daily p8 J1 16 '36

MUMMY'S BOYS. RKO 62min

Players: Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Barbara Pepper, Moroni Olsen

Director: Fred Guiol

"Bert Wheeler and Bobby Woolsey are a pair of ditch diggers who go to Egypt with a group of scientists to excavate the tomb of an ancient king. Expedition is jinxed with a number of members marked for death." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A complete farce with too many 'unfunny' situations. Best left unseen." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Mature." DAR

"Labored humor, antiquated gags, a few interesting camera angles, in a film that as a whole is tiresome and unfunny." Nat Soc of New England Women

"In sequences of utterly impossible situations, built around heroic attempt at a plot, Wheeler and Woolsey dispense plenty of their type of ineane diversion. 'Family.'" S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul S 5 '36

"Though not up to previous efforts this typical Wheeler and Woolsey vehicle has plenty of action and enough mystery and comedy to entertain their fans. 'Family.'"

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 25 '36

"By far the worst vehicle in which this pair of comics have been cast, 'Mummy's Boys' is nil as far as entertainment values are concerned. A waste of anyone's time."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 26 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"When the team first came to the screen I enjoyed its pictures, but it did not take me long to get tired of them. One can stand just so much of Woolsey's cigar and Wheeler's continued dumbness. Until last Saturday evening it had been three years since I saw Wheeler and Woolsey on the screen. I wanted to see if I could figure out the secret of their box-office strength, so I attended a preview of 'Mummy's Boys' and was bored excessively by the picture as entertainment but interested in it as a subject for study. My study, though, did not get me far, for I still can not see why the public year after year should pay handsomely to have two characterizations repeated for it at regular intervals."

— Hollywood Spec p8 Ag 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This provides a better-than-usual frame for their mad capers, which seldom leave the well-beaten track, and the juvenile sense of humor will respond heartily in the well-established 'Whoosey' areas."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 10 '36

"The new Wheeler and Woolsey film is no better than their last few offerings and will appeal only to fans whose loyalty cannot be shaken. . . Several individual members of the cast turn in good work, struggling with pathetic futility to do justice to the poor material. . . The exhibitor should make his play for the Wheeler and Woolsey fans by emphasizing the background of the comedy and the value of the second picture on the program."

— Motion Pict Daily p6 Ag 11 '36

"Comedy moments are sprinkled through occasionally, with the boys milking old and new gags in the best manner possible. In the final analysis, it will depend on the boys themselves."

Phila Exhibitor p41 S 1 '36

"'Mummy's Boys' is a poor effort in entertainment, holds little to recommend it other than as a filler in twin bills. It would be hard to pick out any single thing in the picture for recommendation. Story and direction are weak throughout. Gags are poorly developed. Picture will have to struggle for trade, even with the Wheeler and Woolsey fans."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 10 '36

MURDER IN THE RED BARN. Olympic 60min Ag 15 '36

Players: Tod Slaughter, Sophie Stewart, D. J. Williams, Clare Greet

Director: Milton Rosmer

Dialogue film produced in England by MGM's English unit as a quota picture. This is a revival of the famous old English melodrama

MURDER IN THE RED BARN—Continued by an unknown author. "Its setting is England of sixty years ago and its principal characters a cowardly, heartless squire and an ingenuous, flirtatious village maiden. The squire seduces the girl, then, to settle his gambling debts, becomes engaged to a rich woman. When the girl, ordered from home by a stern father, pleads for his help, Squire Corder murders her in the old red barn." (N Y Sun)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Although the picture is as much of a burlesque as the actors can make it, it lacks the fun of the flesh-and-blood product. Yet it is amusing enough. . . . The chief interest of the piece lies in exaggerated action, done with an appearance of complete seriousness. The treatment is old-fashioned, with backdrop sets, deliberate pace and scenes taken directly from the play. However, the great thatched red barn, both within and without is impressive. The score has a humorous touch and the high-falutin' speeches are often comical." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ag 19 '36

"The matinee audience watched the picture quietly, too quietly to help along the atmosphere. This kind of drama needs a noisy audience, perhaps a beer-drinking audience, ready to hiss and applaud and stamp feet with excitement. . . . If Gilbert Josephson could somehow persuade his audiences to join in the fun, 'Murder in the Red Barn' would be more jolly. Its British producers and cast have wisely decided not to burlesque it. The play is presented on the screen probably much as it was on the stage in its heyday, some sixty years ago." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p18 Ag 19 '36

"Tod Slaughter, the Corse Payton of London, is quite perfect as the ogling, lip-curling, 104 per cent impure Squire. Sophie Stewart will melt even the most adamant heart as Maria. . . . All have been assembled at great expense—as the gentleman in the prologue confides—for your amusement. To make it really perfect, though, the World Cinema should install a bar and a hissing claque." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times Ag 19 '36

"The company of players assembled at the World Cinema is admirable, delineating skillfully the sorrows, joys and homilies of the peasant folk. Especially is Mr. Tod Slaughter to be commended for his realistic histrionics in the role of the recreant Squire. . . . In conclusion may we congratulate Mr. Josephson of the management for a pertinent and profitable evening." Douglas Gilbert

+ — N Y World-Telegram p19a Ag 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] suited chiefly to the smaller theaters. While produced by British Lion in a more serious vein than is generally accorded to the stage revivals of the melodramas of long ago, this well-known story has many interesting moments as program pictures go. A capable cast of English actors give it a lively tempo despite the fact that the character parts are played after the fashion of the old school of acting. Those sequences showing the murder of the heroine and her interment by the villain in the old red barn have a gruesome touch as vivid as the sordid scenes in Frankenstein."

Film Daily p8 Ag 19 '36

"There is none of the downright burlesque of the old 'meller' which so pleased the stage audience, nor, on the other hand, is there the completely serious playing of it which might also be reckoned genuine entertainment—of a sort. Rather there is a combination of both. The character bits are done in the time-honored heavy style, almost with a touch of burlesque, while much of it is played straight. A word for Tod Slaughter's performance as Corder, the villain. It is easily the outstanding feature of the film."

— + Motion Pict Daily p12 Ag 20 '36

"Foreign made, this will serve as a novelty for art or intimate houses; class sectors can sell it as a burlesque. . . . Audiences, told this is a burlesque, might enjoy it more. As a freak attraction, it can be pushed."

Phila Exhibitor p44 S 1 '36

"This screen version of the 50 to 75 year old American stage melodrama is unbecoming entertainment for the States. The makers of this film may have been minded to benefit from the occasional revival of old stage melodramas of the gaslight era, over here, as travesty. Perhaps this film may be offered as travesty for it will go better with beer and pretzels. The performers are serious and the stuff is just dated costume matter. And very humorless. Picture is equally deficient on the technical side, neither the photography nor the sound being very apt."

— Variety p21 S 2 '36

MURDER WITH PICTURES. Paramount
75min S 18 '36

Players: Lew Ayres. Gail Patrick. Paul Kelly. Benny Baker

Director: Charles Barton

"Lew Ayres is the crack photographer of a daily who gets mixed up in a murder case endeavoring to protect the name of Gail Patrick who is the chief suspect." Motion Pict Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"Newspaper murder yarn enhanced by smart dialogue and Lew Ayres' briskly entertaining performance. The not-too-heavy plot is well developed and will be found acceptable. Family."

+ — Box Office p25 S 5 '36

"'Murder With Pictures' is a better than average program mystery yarn, with more emphasis on smartly dialogued up-to-date comedy than on the mystery. With a background of newspaper photography, affording a number of new twists, both in story treatment and in fantastic murder technique, it's an all-around craftsmanlike job that should please most audiences."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p2 Ag 27 '36

"As a typical mystery melodrama, this picture succeeds in keeping the audience guessing. The same formula prevails—everybody in the cast is under suspicion. . . . The picture will stand up on a dual bill and is satisfactory entertainment for the audiences that like the murder-mystery theme."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Ag 28 '36

"Long time ago 'twas said plots for the [mystery story] industry had been depleted. This picture more or less proves the statement. Despite the fact that the identity of the killer, to become quite legal, is well buried in a maze of incidents, one does not particularly care to learn said identity. While the story is weak and the direction in many cases in need of strong bolstering, the cast comes through with a splendid performance."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 27 '36

MY AMERICAN WIFE. Paramount 65min J1
31 '36

Players: Francis Lederer. Ann Sothorn. Fred Stone. Billie Burke. Ernest Cossart

Director: Harold Young

The yarn concerns a wealthy western pioneer family grown socially ambitious. The daughter marries a count in Europe and brings him home to a round of lavish entertainments. He wants to Americanize himself and cultivates the friendship of the grandfather, a tough old Indian fighter.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: amusing; C: doubtful interest."
Christian Century p1175 S 2 '36

"Excellent. Mature-family." DAR

"Amusing. Family." Nat Bd of R
Fox W Coast Bul Ag 8 '36

"Good dialogue and bits of splendid outdoor photography. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Francis Lederer plays the role of the count with his usual charm and sincerity, ably aided by Fred Stone. Other members are not so happily cast and are rather 'stagey' in their parts. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent. Clever from startling opening sequence to finale, this exceptionally well-produced, social satire glorifies a fundamental American trait—pioneer democracy. Mature. Family." DAR

"The entire production is smooth, light comedy in excellent taste. Constructive in tone for the entire family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This sparkling Western comedy will interest every type of audience of any age because the original, by Elmer Davis, is good writing. . . Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"While periodic visits to One-Eyed-Joe's saloon seem to constitute a rather large portion of the young man's effort to be an American, the appealing naivete of Francis Lederer keeps the picture in its proper light comedy vein throughout. Adolescents, 12-16: entertaining; children, 8-12: probably not interesting." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ag 22 '36

"The picture is excellently directed, skillful use having been made of all material, clever dialogue and amusing situations, with many subtle thrusts at American snobbery. . . Delightfully amusing for all. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 10 '36

"Constructive in tone for the entire family."
+ Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"This highly entertaining comedy, with many amusing situations and bright dialogue gives Francis Lederer a rare opportunity for a fascinating portrayal. . . Excellent direction and good photography. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 12 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Ag 6 '36

"The cast is exceptionally well suited for the comedy rôles and does excellent work under skillful direction. Outstanding entertainment value. Family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] a neatly turned domestic comedy. . . Light and amusing."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"My American Wife' [is] as neat a little picture as I have seen recently. For the first time since he won a place in pictures by his stage performance in 'Autumn Crocus,' Francis Lederer captures much of the charm which first drew attention to him as a screen possibility. . . The picture will do more to establish him as a favorite than any other in which he has appeared."

+ Hollywood Spec p9 Ag 1 '36

"A mild lampooning of the no longer wild West, 'My American Wife' is a frothy little comedy-romance that spreads much easy cheer. . . Agreeably fashioned throughout, the film is at its sly best when poking slightly vicious fun at civic and social leaders." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 S 12 '36

"The film satirizes snobbery in the wealthier American classes, but the satire is velvet-gloved and there is the iron hand underneath. The entertainment industry cannot afford to be severe. . . Mr. Fred Stone is an amusing grandpa, Miss Billie Burke the best of the horrid snobs, and one can say without fear of contradiction that Mr. Lederer and Miss Sothorn are a handsome couple. Mr. Lederer is also an actor." J. S.

Manchester Guardian p11 Ag 20 '36

"A comedy of manners, 'My American Wife' takes off with mild hilarity social climbing of a less prosperous period than the present. . . Because of several good performances, particularly the amusing ones by Billie Burke. . . and Francis Lederer. . . the picture proves amiable and diverting. . . While scarcely belonging in the category of 'Ruggles of Red Gap,' [it] yet has something of the humor and good nature of that classic. Its direction is easy and fast enough to be comfortable, as well as mildly comic, while the characterizations are sprightly and sometimes sharp-edged." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p11 Ag 21 '36

"A most engaging comedy-drama arrived at the Music Hall yesterday noon. 'My American Wife' turned out to be one of those surprisingly likable films that come along now and then. . . They've got just the right cast for this happy little picture." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p4 Ag 21 '36

"If we may be permitted slight liberty with one of Fred Stone's lines in 'My American Wife,' anybody that likes this kind of a picture will find this kind of a picture the kind of a picture he or she likes. This extremely comprehensive critical formula was originated by Mark Twain, and was probably inserted in the current motion picture by way of suggestion to film critics. The suggestion is accepted with thanks, because there isn't much else to say about the picture." J. T. M.

N Y Times p12 Ag 21 '36

"[It is] a pretty good film—no rave, y'understand, but 88 cents worth of chortle. . . There are skeptics who snort at Mr. Lederer's enchanting make-believe, maliciously contending that his bitter-sweet advances are slightly Suchard, and rate him as his studio's Shirley Temple. I recall tagging him with an unkind 'coy' in some old appraisal forgotten with the film. Baseless, all baseless, and his 'American Wife' proves it. In this new picture Mr. Lederer is rejuvenated." Douglas Gilbert

+ — N Y World-Telegram p18a Ag 22 '36

"[It] is distinguished because the American heiress marries a count who isn't a phony." John Mosher

New Yorker p34 Ag 29 '36

"Intending satire, the characters go overboard on exaggeration, but some of the situations are good fun. On a double bill this will give patrons their money's worth. It's slightly difficult to believe that polished, continental Francis Lederer really has his heart set on a ranchito, wife and babies. Lederer must have parts tailored to fit and this rôle puckers at the shoulders, hangs none too well, but through perseverance and charm the actor does a thoroughly competent job." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p10 Ag 22 '36

MY AMERICAN WIFE—Continued

"'My American Wife' is a pungent satire on the old theme of Europeanism v. Americanism, to which has been added a new twist."

Time p48 Ag 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Smartly paced film that should prove highly amusing... Lederer plays a tailored role with earnestness. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Jl 25 '36

"A picture that is entertaining, plus a nice bit of flag waving, should do nicely at the box-office... Under Harold Young's direction, the show maintains a speedy tempo, the laughs are many and legitimate, and the players are grand. Boris Morros has furnished a most appropriate musical score and throughout this Albert Lewis production has everything that should make it splendid mass entertainment."

+ Film Daily p11 Jl 21 '36

"Hollywood has been turning out a surprising number of clever light comedies recently. 'My American Wife' is to be ranked among the best of these unpretentiously amusing films. It is sure to provide an hour of laughter and honest entertainment wherever it is shown. Francis Lederer has here a splendidly tailored role and he plays it joyously with full appreciation of its values."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 18 '36

"Sparkling, fresh comedy, this picture stacks up as exceptionally pleasing all-audience entertainment... The picture contains those elements which may mean a box-office surprise. Fun for any kind of patronage, it adds considerably to the prestige of Lederer and Stone. Sold as all-laugh amusement with many angles available for unique and effective exploitation, the picture certainly should click."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Jl 20 '36

"Light comedy that may prove a surprise, this can be recommended as a neat piece of summer comedy. It has been directed and played with an eye to certain audience satisfaction."

+ Phila Exhibitor p35 Ag 1 '36

"'My American Wife' is fair enough to insure satisfaction. It won't send 'em out singing its praises but it'll leave the patrons in an agreeable mood. Fred Stone adds much to the interest and worth of the picture... He is a very interesting character and is missed when the footage doesn't include him. That's a good sign. If he only gets the right material, something that's also true in the case of Lederer, he could grow."

+ — Variety p20 Ag 26 '36

"As his Paramount swan song, Albert Lewis has turned in a picture of which he may well be proud. In every department it reflects production intelligence. With a story that is interesting and unique from start to finish, it should be able to hold its own, helped by a cast of recognizable names, in any theatre."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 18 '36

MY MAN GODFREY. Universal 95min Ag 30 '36

Players: William Powell. Carole Lombard. Alice Brady. Eugene Pallette. Gail Patrick

Director: Gregory La Cava

Based on the novel of the same title by Eric Hatch. When Carole and Gail, two socialite sisters, participate in a treasure hunt ball they find Powell, defeated victim of the depression, living on a dump heap and bring him to the ball. Carole insists upon giving him a job as a butler in their home where he resists her advances, saves the mother from a gigolo lover, evades the vengeful attacks of the other sister and saves the father's fortune.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: amusing; C: doubtful interest."
Christian Century p1239 S 16 '36

"Adults: good; family: doubtful; 14-18 and 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"With every opportunity for rather broad comedy, the director skated adroitly over thin ice in some instances, and produced a superior picture of its kind. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Witty dialogue, highly amusing situations, a remarkably fine cast, skillful direction, and a big underlying truth mark this satire of the pampered rich as one of the year's best. Don't miss this rollicking comedy. Mature—family. Excellent." DAR

"This film presents a really valuable thought camouflaged by hilarious comedy filled with clever lines and acted with verve and charm. Delightfully amusing for sophisticated audiences. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It is] a very entertaining picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Mixed with the satirical humor is a bit of philosophy of living. Adolescents: entertaining; children: mature." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ag 15 '36

"The picture has a deeper note beneath the gay exterior and provides most diverting and fascinating entertainment. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 5 '36

"Adults & young people. Best of the month."
+ + Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"This is a rollicking farce in which the idiotic antics of a spoiled and pampered family are amusing but can hardly bear the brunt of a feature length film. Adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 5 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 20 '36

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide Ag 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Splendid summer entertainment, in the vein of nonsensical comedy that is pitched to a high key in satirical farce... Morrie Ryskind's witty adaptation [and] a sparkling cast expertly carries the insane and ridiculous comedy situations to a rollicking conclusion, on the crest of funny and foolish dialog." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p328 Jl 24 '36

"One of the smartest, most amusing comedies of the season. If we may accept it as a sample of what we may expect from Universal's new management, we can look forward to getting some superlative entertainment when Charlie Rogers really gets under way... All in all 'My Man Godfrey' is a thoroughly enjoyable picture which safely can be put on your list of those you must see."

+ Hollywood Spec p6 Ag 15 '36

"Violently whimsical, 'My Man Godfrey'... is an utterly insane treatment of a present-day fairy tale that works very hard for the many laughs it produces... In skipping their dexterous way through a series of situations that are all designed for laughter, the characters offer an agreeably cockeyed show abounding in mental slapstick." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p31 Ag 15 '36

"The plot, if thin, is novel and the dialogue amusing. Unfortunately, the scenarists, Morrie Ryskind and Eric Hatch, retard the action occasionally by expressing their sympathy for the unemployed. . . Powell gives a suave and satisfactory performance."

+ — News-Wk p42 S 12 '36

"The Hollywood idea of high society is as fine a reason for 'come the revolution' as any one could think up on a moment's notice. Wasters, numskulls, and nitwits, these lorgnette-raisers revel in abominable taste, inanities, assorted stupidities. . . Occasionally the banter sparkles. For the most part it sounds much like an off-center phonograph record. . . Devotees of mad, mad, too damned mad comedy may find 'My Man Godfrey' more to their liking than I did." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p10 Ag 29 '36

"Made out of material as old as show business and as tricky as cobwebs, 'My Man Godfrey' emerges with that evasive quality that is not skillful playing, writing or direction, but something that mysteriously adds itself to these things, and makes a tip-top picture."

+ Time p30 S 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Smartest, brightest, funniest society comedy to come out of Hollywood in many a moon. William Powell at his best and Carole Lombard surpasses all her previous performances."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 8 '36

"'My Man Godfrey' is in this reviewer's opinion one of the most laugh-provoking comedies to reach the screen since talkies were presented. . . For exhibitors the picture is a veritable gold-mine. It can be sold from many angles, but our advice is to play it up chiefly as the comedy sensation of the year."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p5 S 12 '36

"This is one of the wildest farces that has come to the screen in a long time. It is loaded with laughs and much credit is due Gregory La Cava, who produced and directed. . . The opus will have no trouble in pleasing all types of audiences."

+ Film Daily p24 Je 16 '36

"Off center from the very beginning, 'My Man Godfrey' is practically without precedent as an utterly mad farce riot. It is a picture wherein a good third of the dialogue is lost in continuous roars of audience laughter. And with William Powell and Carole Lombard costarred and supported by a large cast of expert farceurs, it is likely to prove a box office sensation."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 12 '36

"Nonsensical comedy pitched to a satirical farce key, this can be readily tabbed as all-audience, all-laugh entertainment. In story content, production and cast values it has qualities that should make selling a pleasure."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Je 13 '36

"Estimate: good program."

+ Phila Exhibitor p68 Jl 1 '36

"Sprightly farce comedy neatly tailored to the best talents of William Powell and Carole Lombard, distinguished with sophisticated air but right down the alley of popular entertainment, is 'My Man Godfrey.' . . The offering is earmarked for handsome grosses. It is made to order for the ace spots and should exert heavy draw all the way down the line. Preview assembly carried considerable excess footage, and picture needs elimination and tightening to snap it up for full value of its rich comicalities."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 12 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

N

NAVY BORN. Republic 68min Je 15 '36

Players: William Gargan. Claire Dodd. Douglas Fowley

Director: Nate Watt

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y: perhaps; C: no value."
Christian Century p1095 Ag 12 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Je 25 '36

"A and Y: pretty good comedy drama; C: if interested."

Parents' M p47 Ag '36

"A highly diverting story, filled with human interest, humor and suspense. . . Not the usual navy picture, but rather a comedy-drama with naval atmosphere for its background. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE. MGM-Roach 58min

Players: Charley Chase. Rosina Lawrence. Darla Hood. Margaret Irving

Directors: Alan Hale. Harold Law

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film. It has also been released as a short with 20 minute running time.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: slapstick that will amuse the easy-to-laugh."

Parents' M p45 Jl '36

"Good. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"[It is an] amusing comedy. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Jl 11 '36

NEWS OF THE U.S.S.R. Amkino 87min Je 25 '36

A film record of recent events in the Soviet Union, with titles in English and French and explanatory remarks in Russian.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Excellent views of recent events in Russia."

H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p16 Je 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[The Russian events] are presented in an absorbing manner."

Film Daily p4 Je 27 '36

"Utterly without pattern, interminably long in unimportant sequences, botched and frequently in very poor photography, the picture may get past after a fashion in the red hot communistic spots, but even the reds will not care particularly for it. Nothing whatever for the general public."

— — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 10 '36

NINE DAYS A QUEEN. Gaumont British
78min S 1 '36

Players: Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nova
Pilbeam, John Mills, Sybil Thorndike
Director: Robert Stevenson

Filmed in England and known there as Tudor Rose. Later released as Lady Jane Grey

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film under title of Lady Jane Grey

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: excellent; 14-18: heavy; 8-14: beyond." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A worthy production, with a capable cast well directed. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent. Mature-family." DAR

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"The direction is exceptionally skilled and artistic and historical details are painstakingly accurate. The entire picture is a royal pageant in which real people live out their lives. An interpretation of colorful English history made in the true English spirit, this film is a rare joy for students of history. Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Jl 11 '36

"Family, exclusive of young children. Outstanding."

+ + Jt Estimates Jl 1 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: mature."

Motion Pict R Jl '36

"This is a picture of rare beauty and should be seen by the entire family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 24 '36

"Historically correct as to sequence of events and costumes. The details of interiors are especially interesting, re-creating the period convincingly. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 18 '36

"A: impressive drama; Y: excellent; C: fine, if not too mature."

Parents' M p69 S '36

"Historical drama, possessing great significance because of its authenticity and dramatic vigor, also noteworthy as sheer entertainment. . . The pageantry is impressive, invoking a glamour greatly enhanced by beautiful and authentic settings, superbly photographed. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

"A better historical picture than 'Henry VIII' and more moving, though not so amusing. In fact, one of the best pictures made from history. . . Suggested for school, library and church use. Worth being kept permanently available. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide Je 6 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is an] excellent British picture. . . There is no comedy relief to spoil this page out of history but don't think for an instant that this is sombre entertainment—it is drama—powerful and strong—but nevertheless splendid theatre for serious, sincere folk." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p29 S '36

"Gaumont-British's 'Nine Days a Queen' is a great motion picture, rich in heart interest. . . [It] is one of the screen's greatest achievements. . . Its merits entitle it to a run of months, but perhaps its lack of names well known over here will deny it such success. But do not be among those who do not see it. It would be denying yourself a treat."

+ + Hollywood Spec p11 Jl 4 '36

"If you see 'Nine Days a Queen'—and you must—you'll never forget the story of gentle little Lady Jane Grey. And the names of Warwick, Tudor, Seymour and Edward VI will no longer be hideous abstracts made to elude the unhappy victim at examination times. . . Nova Pilbeam's Lady Jane Grey is essentially a girl. The gripping simplicity of her performance climbs to great heights with the powerful structure of the film. You'll not soon forget it." (4 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p31 Ag 15 '36

"'Nine Days a Queen' takes only seventy-eight minutes most of which is the most thrilling cinematic entertainment offered in several years. . . Nova Pilbeam fulfills the hopes critics had for her as an actress in 'Little Friend' and 'The Man Who Knew Too Much.' Sir Cedric Hardwicke dominates every scene with the customary sureness for which he has been acclaimed 'one of the world's leading actors.'"

+ + Lit Digest p18 Ag 8 '36

"[It] is a moving film. . . Miss Nova Pilbeam achieved some moments of real beauty in the part of Lady Jane Grey. In the closing stages of the film, especially, her acting is no longer that of a 'child star,' but gives glimpses of a talent of the highest degree." W. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p13 Jl 7 '36

"Authentic backgrounds lend a substantial air to costume dramas and 'Nine Days a Queen' benefits by castles that look like castles and not like wedding cake miniatures. . . The picture unfolds leisurely, has been majestically produced and will no doubt find a discriminating, if limited, audience." Herb Sterne

+ Script p10 Ag 8 '36

"Director Robert Stevenson and Writer Miles Malleson . . . have contrived to present a clear and unadulterated picture of England and her so-called rulers of this time. It is forceful drama they deliver, spoken and enacted with assurance by the entire cast. Particularly impressive are the performances of Nova Pilbeam as the doomed Jane, and Sir Cedric Hardwicke as the Earl of Warwick. . . 'Nine Days a Queen' is not perhaps the distinguished production that 'Henry VIII' was, but there is an easy grace here, and a directorial precision that makes it important historical cinema."

+ Stage p10 S '36

"'Nine Days a Queen' is a sequel to Alexander Korda's famed 'The Private Life of Henry VIII,' so close in general merit to its predecessor that there seems no reason why the story cannot keep on chronologically up to and including Edward VIII. [It] has the qualities cine-maddicts have learned to expect from British historical studies: smart writing, fine playing, meticulous setting and casting, an august reverence for Empire."

+ Time p20 S 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Authentic settings and costumes, splendid photography and effective performances are the outstanding features of this tragic tale of one of the most dramatic periods in English history. The distinguished group of British actors has, however, little marquee value here, and the story of the political intrigue that surrounded Lady Jane Grey during her short reign on England's throne will have its main appeal to class audiences. Family."

Box Office p29 Ag 1 '36

"'Nine Days a Queen' . . . undoubtedly is one of the finest pictures ever produced in England. Rivaling 'Henry VIII' in the luxury of its settings and the perfection of its detail, this picture should be one of the biggest box-office attractions of the year, especially in Great Britain and the Dominions."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 Jl 4 '36

"For all-around handling, this is one of the most efficient productions to come out of the British studios so far. It has a strong historical situation, well written dialogue, unusually good cast, tempo of movement and expert cutting. . . . Though a costume drama, the particular talent of British actors for not merely playing their historical roles but actually living them, gives the story a good human touch and plenty of emotional climaxes."

+ Film Daily p21 Je 26 '36

"GB has poured all its resources into a production that ought to bring much prestige to the company. . . . Any drawback in the lack of domestic names can be overcome by word-of-mouth build-up. As it stands, the picture is a credit to GB."

+ Phila Exhibitor p24 Je 15 '36

"Gaumont British scores high with this powerfully written, directed and superbly played drama. . . . Easily one of the best of the British productions, it should prove profitably appealing to the generality of American audiences as well. For the more cultivated and demanding patronage it will offer impressive entertainment. Tragic it is in the best dramatic sense, but it has leavening of lighter moods and great finesse and color in the playing, if not outright comedy, to round it out richly without ever losing the essential mood. . . . Grim climax will take stout hearts on part of audiences and may be almost too strong for the average relish."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 20 '36

THE NOOSE. See I'd give my life

O

OLD HUTCH. MGM 79min S 25 '36

Players: Wallace Beery, Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker, Elizabeth Patterson

Director: J. Walter Ruben

"'Old Hutch' has been out of work for 20 years when he finds $100,000 in stolen bills buried on the bank of his favorite fishing stream. Knowing that he could never cash a thousand dollar bill unquestioned, 'Hutch' sets out to become a man of means and takes over a deserted farm and begins to pile up money the hard way. By the time he is established as a good provider the gangsters recover their stolen bills." Motion Pict Daily

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"One of those rare, down-to-earth glimpses of real people which the screen sometimes affords us; an honest, unadorned tale of a shiftless, lazy husband, his faithful wife and half dozen children, 'Old Hutch' will find itself well toward the top of the season's list of well made pictures."

+ Hollywood Spec p12 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Down-to-earth comedy with Wallace Beery in a role well suited to his home-spun humor makes this good entertainment. Family."

+ Box Office p25 S 5 '36

"MGM has spotted Wallace Beery in a home-spun yarn that does not spin much in entertainment because of a weak story. . . . The sole value of the picture from a box office viewpoint, will be measured by the draw of Wallace Beery."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 27 '36

"This film is made to order for the Wallace Beery fans, but is rather too routine in its plot development to make new followers for the star, though he turns in plenty of laughs as the good-for-nothing who suffers reform. . . . Elizabeth Patterson drew an impulsive burst of applause from the preview audience for her splendid scene as the downtrodden wife who is goaded into protest."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Ag 28 '36

"Fitted with a character precisely to his liking and talents, Wallace Beery takes 'Old Hutch' on an entertainment joy ride of ineffectuous comedy which will please the customers far and wide and tingle the box office pleasantly wherever Beery is a name and home-spun fare is relished. . . . Beery has never been better coached and piloted, delivering modulations not usually expected of this actor. For these merits and generally sound entertainment tone of picture credit also goes amply to Harry Rapf as producer."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 27 '36

ON THE SUNNYSIDE. See Paa solsidan

OUR RELATIONS. Roach-MGM 70min

Players: Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Alan Hale

Director: Harry Lachman

Based on the short story, The Money Box, by W. W. Jacobs. "Laurel and Hardy as two hen-pecked husbands and Laurel and Hardy as their twin brothers whom they have never seen before complicate each other's lives considerably with gangsters, a stolen ring and other action thrown in." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Skipping merrily through 'Relations' is an undeniably successful brand of humor. Genuinely witty, blissfully absurd, neatly, spontaneously and unconventionally told, it is quite the brightest, most steadily enjoyable feature offering yet to come from Stan and Ollie. It sparkles continually with unhackneyed wit and not once threatens to lose the brisk tempo established at its start. Both stars achieve tremendous success in their dual roles, never having been better and seldom as good." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p8 Jl 18 '36

"As a typically good offering from these veteran funsters, the picture provides a palatable amount of easygoing amusement. . . . The complications that ensue are hardly the latest twist in story-telling. But it is all unfolded with an engaging good humor that makes this enjoyable if not exactly hilarious film fare." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p58 S 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here's a comedy riot from start to finish, replete with old-time slap stick technique. Family."

+ Box Office p31 Jl 18 '36

"Laurel and Hardy's comedy of mistaken identities is a slap-stick laugh show."

+ Film Daily p11 Jl 14 '36

"'Our Relations' turns out to be a weak sister for Laurel and Hardy. . . . The screenplay is cumbersome and wordy, direction rather deliberate. The whole thing lacks spontaneity."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 10 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

OUR RELATIONS—Continued

"At the preview the film drew more laughs than any of their recent pictures, and it should prove satisfactory entertainment wherever [Laurel and Hardy] are a good attraction."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 J1 11 '36

"Estimate: depends on star draw."
Phila Exhibitor p34 Ag 1 '36

"Based on mistaken identify with Laurel and Hardy playing dual roles, 'Our Relations' is topnotch fare for the comedy team."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 10 '36

P

PAA SOLSIDAN. Svensk-film industri 90min Ag 25 '36

Players: Ingrid Bergman. Lars Hanson. Karin Swannstroem. Marianne Losfgren
Director: Gustaf Molander

Swedish dialogue film with English sub-titles produced in Stockholm. "Eva Bergh is an orphan who has inherited some of her artist father's tastes without his talent, so she has to work as a bank clerk. Feted by her circle of near-Bohemians on her birthday, she almost yields to the love-making of Joakim Brink, a writing Casanova, but catches herself in time and marries the substantial and altogether admirable Ribe." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Done with the usual excellence of Swedish pictures in direction, acting and photography. Family."

Wkly Guide S 5 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The natural charm of Ingrid Bergman, the young Stockholm actress whose star has risen so rapidly in the Scandinavian film firmament, makes it worth while visiting the Cinéma de Paris to see 'Paa Solsidan.' . . . While the acting of all the principals is excellent, Miss Bergman dominates the field throughout. The comedy is in good taste, but the film is photographed theatre rather than a movie." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Romantic comedy drama in charming backgrounds and well acted."

+ Film Daily p9 Ag 31 '36

"A Swedish importation, this is suitable for audiences [who] want to hear their native language spoken. The picture is a familiar story in another setting. . . . It is finely photographed and a finished production. The yacht racing sequences are of particular merit. While the tempo lags at times it usually moves gayly along."

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 Ag 26 '36

PALM SPRINGS. Wanger-Paramount 70min Je 5 '36

Players: Frances Langford. Smith Ballew. Sir Guy Standing. Ernest Cossart. David Niven

Director: Aubrey Scotto

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: waste of time; Y: worthless; C: no."
Christian Century p975 J1 8 '36

"This light picture will not add much to the career of the radio find, Frances Langford. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"[It is] thoroughly entertaining. . . . Adults: entertaining; 14-18: good; 8-14: good. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A slow moving production, hampered by a shop-worn plot. . . . However, the beautifully photographed and apparently authentic scenery as well as several delightful western songs add merit to the picture. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Fairly entertaining for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Typical music and desert scenery are the main features for a rather mature picture." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family." Mrs T. G. Winter
Fox W Coast Bul Je 20 '36

"Some lovely scenes of the desert and pleasing music in a film fairly entertaining for adults."

+ — Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"Frances Langford has not the personality to make any impression on the slim material, and the film consequently depends on Guy Standing's excellent portrait of an aristocratic roué and on his gentleman's gentleman and companion in vice, Ernest Cossart. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p118 J1 '36

"There are enough good points to make 'Palm Springs' worth seeing, but it does not rank as a topnotch musical. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: little interest."

+ — Motion Pict R J1 '36

"Fair for family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 10 '36

"A and Y: feather-weight romance; C: no interest."

Parents' M p47 Ag '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Sir Guy Standing and E. E. Clive in secondary parts save the entertainment with ripe characterizations." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 27 '36

"The meager, attenuated plot is never as important as the settings and songs. . . . 'Palm Springs' comes as a harmless time killer that is just restful enough." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 J1 1 '36

"Miss Langford is rapidly developing a vibrant screen personality as a backdrop to her silken singing, a gamin quality unknown in her earlier work. When the moon-glow girl is not working . . . and she works hard, this is a distinctly mild musical. . . . For Langford fans . . . and those who take vanilla." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p10 Je 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Song hits are highlights of fairly entertaining drama-romance with touches of comedy."

+ — Film Daily p7 Je 20 '36

"This innocuous little musical serves principally to point up Smith Ballew as a screen type and the possibilities of Frances Langford for acting roles. It is Ballew's picture debut, and he comes through all right. . . . Picture is burdened with an inane story not unlike others recently on the screen. Too much stress has been placed on the songs, though all three are excellent. Result is neglect of plot structure. Film is overboard in length for amount and type of material presented. Difficult to conceive, it making other than secondary dual spots."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

+ — Variety p29 Je 24 '36

PAROLE. Universal 67min Je 12 '36

Players: Henry Hunter. Ann Preston. Alan Dinehart. Alan Baxter. Noah Beery, Jr. Grant Mitchell

Director: Louis Friedlander

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It is good for the public to know that it is impossible for an ex-convict to go straight so long as he is refused honest employment. It is regrettable that the story is undistinguished following the beaten track of the motion picture gangster theme. Adults: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Absorbing in theme and handled by a capable cast, but too thought-provoking to appeal to an audience that wants to be entertained. . . The social handicap towards a paroled man becoming rehabilitated is brought out, but the solution is not quite clear other than to suggest the parole board be removed from politics. (We question the advisability of producing these propaganda pictures in such a highly emotional and sensational manner.) Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Rather amateurish but decidedly constructive. Mature." DAR

"Convincing characterizations by an exceptionally strong cast and an intelligent handling by the director of the vital issues involved result in a picture of strong sociological import. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"The acting is very real and the film is definitely constructive and thought-provoking for mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"To the seriously minded, thinking public, this picturization of the evil reactions of the parole board and their blindness to justice and safety of society in wholesale release of prisoners who to a large percent revert to their former type of crime, the title will awaken a hearty response and, though mature in substance, it will have a lesson not beyond the caption 'family.'" S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Je 27 '36

"Timely in theme this picture opens wide the doors of rackets and the methods of racketeers who daily menace the lives and business of honest people. The stark realism of the direction and the convincing portrayals of a large cast present this present day problem most forcibly. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Je 20 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"[It is an] involved, melodramatic and somewhat improbable picture. As an indictment of the parole system it warrants attention but from the standpoint of an audience seeking entertainment it is too unpleasant to be recommended. Adolescents, 12-16: no, too tragic and violent; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R Jl '36

"This is a powerful indictment against the present day parole system and a daring expose of the traps into which paroled men fall. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 17 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 25 '36

"A: fair prison melodrama; Y: debatable; C: no."

Parents' M p48 Ag '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This film, which bears the simple yet descriptive title, 'Parole' is considerably weakened by an over-emphasis on interplots and romance." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 27 '36

"Fair melodrama, with rather too much cold-blooded killing by racketeers." E. C. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 27 '36

"Proceeding on the assumption that the public would pay for information about the conduct of its affairs, Universal gives us a well made piece of propaganda for greater understanding of the conduct of parole boards. . . But, talking about functions, what is the function of the screen? My conception of it is as something to patronize at night to recover from the stress of the day's affairs; something to entertain us to the point of forgetfulness. . . I can imagine [no subject] with less appeal to me personally than the parole system. . . I have my own worries. And in addition to the narrow range of its thematic appeal, 'Parole' invites our interest in two people I never heard of before."

+ Hollywood Spec p9 Je 20 '36

"In many ways it is fascinating although faintly depressing entertainment, presented at machine-gun pace—a brittle, arresting performance. The story swerves into fabulous dramatics at times and weakens its point, but for the most part paints a vivid and convincing picture of parole abuses. The lecture at the end could have been cut to the plot's advantage. Otherwise the piece is exciting and provocative." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 Je 27 '36

"'Parole,' for all its high purpose, is still essentially a gangster drama, not bad either for a quickie. . . The plot gets pretty lurid at times, with a few quite incredible incidents like the blond secretary's romantic self-sacrifice for a man who had hardly noticed her. In melodramas, however, one isn't supposed to notice holes in the story." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p13 Je 29 '36

"The only characters allowed by the story to be human and understandable are not the nice, reclaimable convicts, but the toughs—especially Alan Dinehart as the racketeer exploiter of discharged prisoners. . . There are only one or two isolated touches even faintly suggestive of Mr. Joel Sayre, who is listed as one of the authors." B. R. C.

N Y Times p21 Je 27 '36

"Although 'Parole's' intentions are honorable, the results are devoid of those elements which are necessary to make propaganda entertaining, and so 'Parole' is lacking on both scores, since it is neither an effective preaching nor a good show. Chiefly responsible for this grievous error is the fact that the authors have taken a good idea and, instead of putting it together with cement, have used paste so that it is pretty leaky." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p10 Je 29 '36

"The movies find it difficult to present a controversial question from a specific viewpoint and this unassuming programmer swings its legs on both sides of the fence. . . In a part that is not clearly defined in the writing, Bernadene Hayes gives a brisk, magnetic performance. . . Alan Baxter is extremely effective as a gangster; he has tense menace and the ability to hold the screen. In the romantic spots newcomers Henry Hunter and Ann Preston strive hard." Herb Sterne

PAROLE—Continued

+ — Script p12 Je 20 '36

"'Parole' is unlikely to affect the U. S. penal system but it should not disappoint cinemaddicts who like rapid-fire entertainment."
+ Time p49 Jl 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Smashing indictment of the present parole system, this should bring in a diversified group of fans—those who like plenty of action and those interested in public affairs. Family."
Box Office p45 Je 20 '36

Reviewed by L. S. Niemeyer
Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 Je 20 '36

"Absence of strong names will probably prevent 'Parole' from creating strong box office draft. Film is crowded with action, packs a neat wallop, . . . grips despite obvious implausibilities."
+ — Variety p12 Jl 1 '36

PASSAPORTO ROSSO. Nuovo mondo 92min Ag 17 '36

Players: Isa Miranda. Filippo Scelzo. Oreste Fares. Ugo Ceseri

Director: Guido Brignone

Italian dialogue film with English sub-titles. "Concerning the emigration of Italians in 1893 to South America, due to political reverses, the plot weaves a familiar course, tracing the destiny of a doctor and a school teacher brought together in a foreign land. The immigrants have been engaged to construct a railroad. Pestilence and exploitation add to their troubles. A climax is brought about when an unscrupulous Don Pancho prevails upon the Government to send troops to the railroad camps to quell non-existent trouble." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A preachment of the doctrine 'an Italian born on foreign soil is loyal to his fatherland.' General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The picture, intended very evidently for a special audience, should be of much interest to immigrants and descendants of immigrants. Much care has been taken with the steerage sequences, with the details and atmosphere of those long dreary voyages from a beloved country to a strange, bewildering land. . . 'Passaporto Rosso' should appeal to New York's great Italian-American population." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p16 S 1 '36

"'Passaporto Rosso' is a sprawling and cumbersome screen drama freighted with nationalistic fervor. Technically, except for lethargic direction, the new importation is superior to the average film that emerges from our Hollywood studios. . . 'Passaporto Rosso' is undoubtedly the most conspicuous recruiting poster turned out so far by the Italian film producers. The film is exceptionally well acted and has a beautiful and appealing heroine in Isa Miranda, who bears a striking resemblance to Marlene Dietrich and would be a sparkling addition to the Hollywood firmament." T. M. P.
+ N Y Times p18 S 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is an importation that will find favor with the Italian element. The story is shot with snatches of propaganda and nationalism that limit the appeal. . . The film has an occasional epic quality and fundamentally is of a nature that should pluck at the heartstrings of Italian-born audiences. At times the dramatics are overdone and the point too forcefully revealed."
+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 S 1 '36

"[It is] a tedious and long recital. . . For the Italian trade, depending on its standards of film entertainment, 'Red Passport' may prove passable. It has a few laughs but they aren't brought out by the English titles. The love interest is of a fair quality but the story and direction have no dynamite."
— Variety p17 S 9 '36

PEPPER. 20th century-Fox 65min S 18 '36

Players: Jane Withers. Irvin S. Cobb. George (Slim) Summerville

Director: James Tinling

"Jane Withers, a slum toughie, gathers her gang to raise the rent from an evicted widow and demands the money from a dyspeptic millionaire, Irvin S. Cobb. After battles with cops and butlers, Cobb and Miss Withers escape for a day of stolen delights at Coney Island." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: probably amusing; C: amusing, but doubtful value."

Christian Century p1239 S 16 '36

"Some rather far-fetched situations, an exaggerated scene of rounding-up an enormous gang to break up a wedding, and an over-directed little precocious star, make this picture one that children will revel in, but shouldn't. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Jane Withers is the 'little child who shall lead them.' Although her motives are above reproach, her methods to secure these ends are often doubtful. Adults: matter of taste; family: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The story moves at a brisk pace, but the action is decidedly rowdy and the comedy slapstick. Ethics questionable. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family. Good." DAR

"Altho this is not one of her best, fans of the little star will no doubt enjoy the usual tomato throwing, window smashing, etc. Others, however, will question whether these activities really are so tremendously funny or should ever be so regarded by childish audiences. Family, with reservations." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 1 '36

"The inimitable personalities of the little star and Irvin Cobb provide the chief interest of this picture though we wish that this talented child might be given better story material. Family."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Jl 24 '36

"This picture is obviously designed to display the talents of Jane Withers, but the story is unworthy of this little trouser. . . The story moves at a brisk pace, but the action is decidedly rowdy and the comedy slapstick. Family: a matter of taste."

+ — Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"Jane Withers, as an independent, kindly, but mischievous little girl, dominates this bright little comedy. . . Family & junior matinee."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 22 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 13 '36

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A mildly amiable tale of the child-wins-way-to-heart-of-rich-older variety, with Jane Withers and Irvin S. Cobb filling the formula. Family entertainment for fans of Miss Withers and Mr. Cobb."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"Frankly, I look with suspicion on most child pictures, because they so often are just like this one. From the rich old grouch who always succumbs to the unspoiled sweetness of the tiny pauper, to 'our gang' of delightful rowdies who, at the distress-signal of the pauper, always materialize out of empty streets to save whatever situation needs saving—all the routine tricks of all child-stories are here again in all their faded humor, cuteness, pathos and bathos. . . Much as I revere the written artistry of Irvin S. Cobb, my appreciation diminishes in ratio of visual propinquity."

— Hollywood Spec p10 Ag 1 '36

"In its broad outline 'Pepper' is just antiquated hokum; but in its enthusiastic telling the picture is alive with fun. . . The picture will entertain adults as well as the children for whom the show is pointed." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p40 Ag 22 '36

"'Pepper,' a brisk, often impertinent motion-picture [is] obviously designed for children. Adults need not be frightened away. It is excellent entertainment. . . Adult filmgoers addicted to full-fashioned comedies ought not to miss it. In addition, it definitely is the best photoplay made by Jane Withers, who is to midget mischief what Shirley Temple is to infant sweetness. Some prefer Miss Withers' lapses to Miss Temple's perfections."

+ + Lit Digest p18 Jl 25 '36

"Theonly weapons placed at [Jane Withers'] disposal here are a couple of over-ripe tomatoes which she tosses at Mr. Cobb, who proves himself to be an obliging target. Although tomato-tossing may not be regarded as the proper pastime for little girls, Jane might be pardoned had she taken careful aim at the scenario writers who concocted 'Pepper.' . . The players do all that they possibly can with the material at their disposal." T. M. P.

— N Y Times p11 Ag 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This laugh hit, undoubtedly Jane Withers' best, is crammed as full of spice as the title, and coupled with the performances of Irvin S. Cobb and Slim Summerville will bring enjoyment to the whole family."

+ Box Office p31 Jl 13 '36

"Good family entertainment with lively comedy yarn in popular vein and swell work by Jane Withers."

+ Film Daily p3 Ag 8 '36

"The new Jane Withers comedy yields about twice as many laughs as any of her others. It is rowdy, it is slapstick, and it is undisguised hokum, but it is also hilarious. Critical parents, may object to its [juvenile] roughhouse, but the [children] themselves will flock to it and yell with glee throughout. In average neighborhoods its box office returns will considerably surpass previous Withers offerings."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 9 '36

"A rousing roughhouse in farce spirit is this fast and furious comedy, heavily overplayed for the purpose of building laughs. . . The fast, slapstick comedy angles are its best appeal."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Jl 10 '36

"Typical Withers entrant, this should do as well as the others. Where the No. 2, 20th Century-Fox child star draws, she will be okay."

Phila Exhibitor p35 Ag 1 '36

"'Pepper' is just fair box office for the lesser duals. . . Besides its lack of appeal to adults, film is also questionable in its attractiveness to juveniles. This is mainly due to the impossible trend of the story. . . In spots it reminds too strongly of an 'Our Gang' short. Blown into six reels, it drags woefully."

+ — Variety p18 Ag 12 '36

"Appealing to the youngsters with a good share of entertainment for the adults, 'Pepper' should have no trouble earning its way. Jane Withers does everything expected by a child star, handles herself ably in the rough and ready sequences, makes the most of every opportunity afforded her."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 9 '36

PICCADILLY JIM. MGM 100min Ag 14 '36

Players: Robert Montgomery. Frank Morgan. Madge Evans. Eric Blore. Billie Burke. Robert Benchley. Cora Witherspoon

Director: Robert Z. Leonard

Based on a novel of same title by P. G. Wodehouse. Piccadilly Jim appeared on the screen in an earlier version with Owen Moore. "The story opens in London where Montgomery, a caricaturist, is engrossed in his main problem of exercising paternal influence over Morgan, his ham actor father. The play-boy sire's attempt at romance with the willing Billie Burke is blasted by her domineering sister, Miss Witherspoon. Montgomery, by way of revenge, lampoons the Witherspoon family to make it the laughing stock of Europe." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: better not; C: no."

Christian Century p143 Ag 26 '36

"A hilarious comedy with sparkling dialogue is spiritedly acted and intelligently directed. . . This humorous character portrayal will amuse all the family except the juniors." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The picture is hilariously funny in spots and is very well done. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Very talky comedy; fine cast. Mature. Good." DAR

"A rollicking romance, with perfect dialogue racing along to a dramatic finish. The film is perfectly timed. Sets are exquisite. Suspense runs high. Humor is deftly handled. The picture is well cut, smooth and easily followed. A domestic comedy bordering on farce which provides excellent entertainment for audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The presence of some early scenes in which there is too casual drinking, makes the picture not suitable for children. Adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ag 22 '36

"[It is] a most amusing picture filled with action and possesses clever, subtle dialogue, beautiful photography and an interesting background. The entire cast acquit themselves with merit. Exceptionally deft is the work of the director and most pleasing is the musical score. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 10 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PICCADILLY JIM—Continued

"A domestic comedy bordering on farce which provides excellent entertainment for the family."

+ + Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"Lively, delightful screen fare is provided by this frothy comedy, fine cast and expert direction. . . Sparkling entertainment for the family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 12 '36

"Expert characterization adds to the enjoyment of this laughable tale. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 20 '36

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"[It is] a highly diverting comedy . . . novel in plot and situation, the dialogue literate and amusing, and [has] an excellent cast. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 15 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The dialogue, situations and sequences have the same crazy, impossible and delightful character [as the book]. There is only the mildest, face-saving attempt to make sense out of the story; only enough, in fact, to make a new and unexpected situation all the funnier." M. S.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 22 '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"Quite an amusing debate. There is so much talking in it that Director Bob Leonard had little room for the injection of bits of technique which would have recalled to us the rapidly disappearing art of the screen. . . If you enjoy screen entertainment which talks incessantly, which is nicely produced and capably acted, this picture should give satisfaction. . . 'Piccadilly Jim' could have been a brighter little comedy than it is. And its opening scenes would have been more amusing if Montgomery, the star, had been presented as a sober young man, not a drunken one. There seems to be an impression shared by producers that there is something funny in drunkenness on its own account, no matter how slight may be the reason for it."

Hollywood Spec p8 Ag 15 '36

"'Piccadilly Jim' [is] a silken, hilarious comedy from an impetuous froth by P. G. Wodehouse. Pulling no punches, forcing a star to swim for himself, the studio surrounds Robert Montgomery with a cast of shrewd, artful players. None bests him at the work of being suavely comic, but neither does he best any of his supporting players. The result is high-grade fun. . . Mystery: the identity of the unnamed cartoonist who actually drew the strips used in the film. They are better and funnier than dozens which are used daily in newspapers from Coast to Coast."

+ Lit Digest p20 Ag 15 '36

"There is so much brash and amusing nonsense in 'Piccadilly Jim' that its labored and tedious conclusion comes as a distinct disappointment. For the most part it is a gay comedy of manners, making frequent excursions into burlesque. Enlivened by fanciful situations and witty lines, it is performed with knowing zest by a company of oddly assorted but ingratiating players. Had the final sequences been telescoped into a swift and rousing climax, it would have been an altogether delightful screen frolic. As it is you will find it a diverting and sometimes hilarious entertainment." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 31 '36

"A motion picture called 'Piccadilly Jim' arrived unheralded yesterday and proved the surprise of the season. This is a monstrously funny comedy, a P. G. Wodehouse story actually told in P. G. Wodehouse style, mood, characters and even dialogue. Somehow a cast, a cast that might have been invented by Wodehouse himself, has been assembled that fits into the exact spirit of the extremely casual atmosphere. . .

'Piccadilly Jim' needs no more reviewing than a Wodehouse story; but it's a careless moviegoer who forgoes the hilarious sight of Mr. Montgomery elegantly astride a truck horse on Rotten Row, Mr. Benchley scraping acquaintance with an American girl, and Mr. Clive dictating a letter of dismissal." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p29 Ag 29 '36

"An engaging bit of nonsense, it has been played with thorough good humor . . . and, sped along by Robert Z. Leonard's direction, it provides an uncommonly diverting hour or so of picture-watching." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 31 '36

"There's a lot of liveliness . . . in 'Piccadilly Jim,' which is why we are worrying about Wodehouse. A good deal of crazy cavorting has been designed by Charles Brackett and Edwin Knopf for Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans, Billie Burke, and Cora Witherspoon, a most judicious interpretation of a valet is given by Eric Blore, and Robert Benchley is wedged in as a barroom character; but all these notables yell. And we don't want our comedy with a yell any more than we do our poetics." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p54 Ag 29 '36

"Charles Brackett and Eddie Knopf have made an amusing scenario from the P. G. Wodehouse novel. . . Acting honors go to Frank Morgan as the father who proves that once an actor always an actor, and to Eric Blore as the suave English butler."

+ News-Wk p42 S 12 '36

"The year's high in comedy casts gets together for a frolic in this story. . . It is farce of a strictly hoydenish nature, not bothering much with anything but the buildup of a situation to the point where a character may recite his lines in the most favorable circumstances. These circumstances come fast and furiously."

+ Stage p10 S '36

"Screenwriters Charles Brackett and Edwin Knopf permit their gusto in the complications to slow up the story, but occasional lapses from pace and over-energetic mugging on the part of the Pett family are not serious faults."

Time p23 Ag 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Another swell comedy with plenty of what it takes to make the turnstiles click. Director Robert Leonard has squeezed the last drop of entertainment value from a snappily adapted Wodehouse yarn and a notable cast."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 15 '36

"Here is a delightful comedy that will please all types of audiences."

+ Film Daily p14 Ag 6 '36

"Still another superlative class comedy is herewith added to the succession that has made this so notably a comedy year. And this one, despite its delightful extravagance of phrase and literary flavor, will not have a limited appeal, but will prove continuously hilarious entertainment for all classes and be a box office asset everywhere. . . The P. G. Wodehouse book was rich pickings for the scenarists . . . and they have done an outstanding job of comedy construction and cultivated dialogue writing."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 3 '36

"Possessing all the ingredients necessary for comedy-romance with a real sock, this film should prove a delight to exploitation-minded showmen and audiences. . . The direction of Robert Z. Leonard will please both showmen and audiences and make the film a sure box-office clicker anywhere."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ag 4 '36

"A good comedy from start to finish, this will help bring Montgomery back into the chosen circle, with a performance, backed by an able cast, that will find favor. Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p33 Ag 15 '36

"'Piccadilly Jim' [is] an entertaining, if long, romantic comedy. Film editor could have shorn a little away here and there and nothing of importance to an otherwise pretty rapid-fire light comedy would have been left on the cutting room floor. Its appeal being wide and its contents clean, Robert Montgomery's latest starrer should show good form at the box office."

+ Variety p18 S 2 '36

"Whatever it takes to make a fast-moving comedy click, 'Piccadilly Jim' has it. From start to finish, it is a polished, fast moving, entertaining picture that is sure-fire box office anywhere. It is the kind of picture that can safely be ballyhooed and then reap profit through word of mouth appreciation. . . From the viewpoints of audience and theatre management, 'Piccadilly Jim' is just what the doctor ordered."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 3 '36

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL. 20th century-Fox
75min J1 24 '36

Players: Shirley Temple. Alice Faye. Gloria Stuart. Jack Haley. Michael Whalen

Director: Irving Cummings

Music and lyrics: Mack Gordon. Harry Revel

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good; Y: mostly good; C: perhaps."
Christian Century p1071 Ag 5 '36

"Marred only by the introduction of a threat of sinister kidnapping, this delightful picture is a fine vehicle for the dancing and singing of the delightful little star. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Good family entertainment." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Special mention should be made of the clever manner suspense was introduced and handled—sequences with the kidnapper were lightly touched upon but definitely kept in the background—wisely! Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent-family. Shirley Temple was never better." DAR

"A well directed picture suitable for family & junior matinees." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The picture moves swiftly, smoothly, with many types of people excellently presented. And of course we love it. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul Je 13 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Je 1 '36

"Rather than a dramatic setting, it is a series of vaudeville turns in which the little girl is as usual, the star, and it unfortunately gives her little opportunity to act. . . The ever-present menace of a kidnapper may make the film less popular with many families than other recent Shirley Temple releases. Adolescents, 12-16: probably very entertaining; children, 8-12: doubtful, depends on child."

+ Motion Pict R J1 '36

"A and Y: sentimental drama of childhood; C: excellent."

Parents' M p69 S '36

"Another delightful Shirley Temple film with a well constructed plot, diverting incidents and the refreshment of spirit which contact with the amiable and gay personality of this charming little lady always provides. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

"Family-junior."

Wkly Guide Je 20 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Miss Temple's newest film is, if nothing else, at least adequate juvenile entertainment. But if Hollywood is to devote its time to the development of a market for infant film followers, it can surely do better than this confused and improbable modernization of Eleanor Gates's 'Poor Little Rich Girl.' Shirley Temple, as has been frequently observed, is a capable little actress; but precociousness and charm are not enough to pull her through the type of roles which she has been getting."

B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 11 '36

"The so-called screen's 'top tot' sings, dances and acts the same—there is never any deviation, charming as she is. The production itself is one of those things." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p328 J1 24 '36

"While 'The Poor Little Rich Girl' is not Shirley Temple's best picture, it clearly shows that the producers have hit upon a formula for fully exploiting the varied talents of America's favorite performer. . . 'The Poor Little Rich Girl' emerges as one of the most purely enjoyable offerings of the season." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p42 J1 11 '36

"In 'The Poor Little Rich Girl' the remarkable acting talent of Shirley Temple is virtually scuttled while she goes through a series of song and dance routines. She is in no sense stumped by the assignment. . . There is always a trace of the monstrous, however, about a child engaged in such doings. One cannot avoid the suspicion that the cinema is intent on making a freak out of an excellent little actress. . . The musical accompaniment is a lot better than the plot. Mack Gordon and Harry Revel have written some catchy tunes for the show, notably 'When I'm With You' and a ditty for the small star called 'You've Got to Eat Your Spinach.' . . Incidentally, the photoplay has several sequences that are not in the best taste." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p14 Je 26 '36

"It was a show which, although ideal for children, offered plenty to the grown-ups, too. Shirley's appeal is not just to her contemporaries. This youngest of the Temples is an extraordinary entertainer, and one handled extraordinarily well by her studio. . . All this is just pie for little Miss Temple. Her personality, which once showed signs of self-conscious cuteness, is again natural and appealing." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p27 Je 26 '36

"Shirley Temple, the mighty moppet, continues to be the Sandow of the Cinema by pirouetting gracefully under the weight of a formless and generally ridiculous script. As a picture, 'The Poor Little Rich Girl' is virtually non-existent; as a display window for the ever-expanding Temple talents, it is entirely satisfying." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p16 Je 26 '36

"I think that the Eleanor Gates story has been pretty well furnished up, and that it makes a pleasant picture. There's not the slightest indication of aging in Miss Temple. The years are treating her kindly. She has practically this whole film on her shoulders, the adults being altogether subsidiary, which is possibly proper." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p45 J1 4 '36

"When someone thinks up a better plot for a Shirley Temple picture, Twentieth Century-Fox should jump at it. 'The Poor Little Rich Girl,' like recent Temple films, tries to split itself in half to interest both children and adults. . . There are feeble hints at kidnapping, some embarrassingly bad acting by Gillingwater stooging for Miss Temple, and frequent songs and dances by the star."

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL—Continued

News-Wk p20 Je 27 '36

"The story was built to give Shirley a chance to do all her stuff and she delivers magnificently. . . A long dance routine exhibits Shirley as nothing less than marvelous." Rob Wagner
+ Script p10 J1 25 '36

"Shirley Temple pictures, like a sideshow in a circus, have an element of effusive familiarity that embarrasses us slightly. No matter how simple and unadorned they pretend to be, we know the Miraculous Mite is being promoted beyond all precepts of tasteful entertainment. . . 'The Poor Little Rich Girl' is no exception to this rule of over-emphasis. In the face of such astonishing talent, the camera pays her the same vulgar attention it might pay a freak."
Stage p8 J1 '36

"Shirley Temple pictures, emerging with the regularity of the seasons, have one point in common. All are minutely tailored to suit her requirements. In this procedure, the weak point is that Shirley Temple's requirements have now outgrown the ingenuity of her purveyors."
Time p48 J1 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[Shirley Temple] is rarely 'out of the picture.' One song hit after another, intermingled with dancing. Her work is her play, however, and that puts it over in such grand fashion, and makes you wish she did not have to grow up."
L. S. Niemeyer
+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 J1 4 '36

"The screen's top tot delivers again with socko box office in 'Poor Little Rich Girl.' Following the Shirley Temple formula of histrionic versatility, augmented by song and dance trimmings, the winsome wee 'un rings the bell in a manner to delight the hardest-berled exhibitors. 'Little Rich Girl' is set for a box office mop-up. . . Again, the story is one of those things, although a shade better balanced in this instance, and tying in almost every surefire ingredient."
+ Variety p12 J1 1 '36

POPPY. Paramount 70min Je 19 '36

Players: W. C. Fields. Rochelle Hudson.
Richard Cromwell. Catherine Doucet.
Lynne Overman

Director: A. Edward Sutherland

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: amusing."
Christian Century p975 J1 8 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"W. C. Fields fans will be amused by the typical gags and dialogue of this comedy romance. Rochelle Hudson and chorus sing 'Rendezvous With a Dream' delightfully. Good. Mature." DAR
+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 27 '36

"Adults: appealing; family: good; 14-18: good; 8-14: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"W. C. Fields, as McGargle, is but a feeble impersonation of himself in other pictures, and the comedy drags painfully in spots in its attempted hilarity. Rochelle Hudson displays a charming style of singing and Richard Cromwell with little to do—does it very well. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"[It is] a good picture to amuse the family."
S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul J1 11 '36

"Family."
Jt Estimates J1 1 '36

"Suitability: family."
Mo Film Bul p119 J1 '36

"Those to whom W. C. Fields' characterizations appeal will like this picture. In it Fields displays all of his usual tricks without the expected number of off-color jokes. Adolescents, 12-16: entertaining; children, 8-12: no interest."
Motion Pict R J1 '36

"Family."
Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 1 '36

"[It is] a delightfully amusing story. General patronage."
+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 25 '36

"A and Y: conversation comedy; C: if interesting."
Parents' M p48 Ag '36

"A hilarious comedy allowing W. C. Fields a fine opportunity to display his talent. . . A capable assisting cast, humorous lines and situations, as well as good photography, are combined in an excellent comedy. Family."
+ Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

"[It is] a highly amusing comedy. Family-junior."
+ Wkly Guide Je 20 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] first-rate Fields fun."
+ Christian Science Monitor p19 J1 3 '36

Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham
Commonweal p287 J1 10 '36

"'Poppy' is just about as delightful a bit of screen entertainment as one could wish for. Nothing is overdone, an unusual quality rarely found in comedies. . . No performance W. C. Fields previously contributed to the screen was more nicely shaded. As the optimistic old fakir he is irresistible. His comedy is delicious. . . All in all, 'Poppy' is a picture you must see. It is the most ingratiating piece of entertainment Paramount has offered us for some moons."

+ + Hollywood Spec p13 Je 20 '36

"W. C. Field's newest comedy, 'Poppy' is based on one of his oldest and funniest hits. Yet the film does not score in this new version. . . This cannot be listed as more than a lethargic blend of paper-weight pathos and standard gags. . . Though 'Poppy' finds Bill Fields far from his silly best, Bill remains—along with Harold Lloyd and Charlie Chaplin one of the few imperishable screen characters." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p49 J1 18 '36

"'Poppy' is a one-man show, and the man is What-a-Man (W.C.) Fields. When Mr. Fields' vaudeville act is interrupted by the plot and by the puppy-love affairs of Rochelle Hudson and Richard Cromwell, it is one of the dumbest pictures ever foisted upon a flicker-loving populace. 'Poppy,' aside from Mr. Fields, is the slowest of slow molasses." Don Herold
Life p27 Ag '36

"The present talking-singing version is all that any Fields's addict could ask. . . The plot of the gay, romping insanity is about as mysterious as a cobblestone and just about as old-fashioned. No one will resent it for that. It is good antique hokum trussed up for a Fields vehicle. All that matters is that Professor Eustace McGargle is back in perfect form."
+ + Lit Digest p19 Je 20 '36

"Half the film is too soupy and insipid to be tolerable in close-up, but Miss Rochelle Hudson looks sweet as McGargle's 'little plum,' and on the whole it makes a pleasant, rambling comedy, hard to praise but easy to enjoy."

New Statesman & Nation p87 J1 18 '36

"W. C. Fields, they say, dragged himself from a sick-bed to make this one. . . Fields is, as usual, magnificent in 'Poppy,' but, all concerned, exhibitors, producers, audience, might well have waited for his complete recovery." Robert Stebbins

New Theatre p22 Ag '36

"On this auspicious occasion, and the opening of any W. C. Fields picture can be no less, it is our solemn obligation to report that the forces of nature and of circumstance continue to be arrayed solidly against our hero. . . But Mr. Fields triumphs—as Mr. Fields always triumphs—and it is a glorious victory, for him and for comedy. . . The real news, however, and the occasion for our rejoicing is this: that man is here again." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p19 Je 18 '36

"[It is a] slightly blurred affair, which isn't, in my opinion, one of the best pictures [W. C. Fields] has made throughout the last eleven years. . . One can feel pretty sure that [he] has given us one of the pleasantest, most charming little comedies we shall get this summer." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p73 Je 27 '36

"To lovers of his bald comedy, and his appeal is as broad as the grins he evokes, it doesn't matter how bad a film is as long as Fields is in it. Paramount took advantage of the fact when it exhumed 'Poppy.' Though the sandpaper-throated comedian is seen too infrequently in this picture—almost completely devoid of interest when he is not appearing—his devotees this week welcomed him back after a year's absence due to illness."

News-Wk p24 Je 20 '36

"Unlike a taste for avocados, an appreciation of the work of W. C. Fields cannot be cultivated. And those of us who are born liking the man (fortunately we are legion) simply count ourselves blessed. His clowning is in the best tradition of the world's funny-men. . . There is a Chaucerian richness in Fields' work—extravagant, gallant, gross, pathetic. . . Lynne Overman as the shyster lawyer plays with a sweep and lavishness that almost equals the star's." Molly Lewin

+ Script p12 Jl 11 '36

"The story doesn't really matter, for Mr. Fields has never acted better. There is no touch of sentimentality in his performance. . . To watch Mr. Fields, as Dickensian as anything Dickens ever wrote, is a form of escape for poor human creatures: we who are haunted by pity, by fear, by our sense of right and wrong, who are tongue-tied by conscience, watch with envious love this free spirit robbing the gardener of ten dollars, cheating the country yokels by his own variant of the three-card trick, faking a marriage certificate, and keeping up all the time, in the least worthy and the most embarrassing circumstances, his amazing flow of inflated sentiments." Graham Greene

+ Spec p97 Jl 17 '36

"The current film version of 'Poppy' presents the world's most lovable master of ceremonies, W. C. Fields, and has the good grace to stand aside and let him do his stuff. . . The carnival setting in 'Poppy' is just an excuse to make it a one hundred percent Fields day."

+ + Stage p8 Jl '36

"'Poppy,' in which W. C. Fields played on the stage in 1923 and the silent screen in 1925, is still an almost ideal vehicle for its bulb-nosed star. . . He executes several of his most celebrated routines."

+ Time p37 Je 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A deftly written screen play makes this an ideal vehicle for W. C. Fields' inimitable brand of tomfoolery, resulting in a laugh-loaded production. Family."

+ Box Office p45 Je 20 '36

"There's one thing that Bill Fields will never be, and that's unfunny. He could get laughs with Hamlet's soliloquy, which is just about what he's doing in 'Poppy.' Amidst the 19th century melodramatics and the considerable sob stuff that goes with it, Fields manages to shake off the ill effects and get his laughs. For that reason, and on Fields alone, 'Poppy' will probably do satisfactory business on the whole."

+ Variety p29 Je 24 '36

LA PORTEUSE DE PAIN. Lenauer 80min Je 30 '36

Players: Germaine Dermoz, Simone Bourdais, Roger Dann, Jacques Gretillet, Fernandel, Drean, Madeleine Guitty

Director: A. Rene Sti

Based on the novel of the same title by Xavier de Montepin and Jules Dornay. Dialogue film in French with English sub-titles. "[The] plot relates the plight of poor Jeanne Fortier, unjustly accused of arson, robbery and murder, for which she is sent to prison by a hard-hearted jury eager to accept circumstantial evidence of her guilt. Years later she escapes and starts searching for her grown son and daughter." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Objectionable in part. Objection: suicide and objectionable remarks."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 16 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The new French picture . . . may be worth a visit in order to discover just how bad a performance can be, particularly when accompanied by undiluted melodrama of the 'East Lynne' vintage. In it the French prove that when they 'let go' they can make Hollywood histrionics seem pale by comparison, and for sheer eye-rolling (not to mention oratory) Mr. Gable, Mr. Montgomery, Miss Chatterton and others will have to look to their laurels. . . Some of the French dialogue is amusing, and a pair of comic bakers will make you laugh. Miss Dermoz, who took the part of Jeanne, did a straight piece of acting surrounded as she was by inept colleagues. Madeleine Guitty, a fine old character actress, gave an excellent portrayal. The direction was hysterical and the cutting and editing did not help it." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p16 Jl 2 '36

"In its own lurid way, 'La Porteuse de Pain' is a kind of French 'Madame X.' The plots are only vaguely similar, nor is there any comparison in production values. The [French] film, however, offers the same mingled themes of murder, sacrifice and mother love. It also throws in a bit of musical comedy, with two rowdy comedians singing a light-hearted duet, the most entertaining part of the picture." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p22 Jl 1 '36

"Acted by a highly competent cast, including the popular Paris comedians, Drean and Fernandel, as the rowdy baker boys, 'La Porteuse de Pain' may prove engaging for patrons not too insistent upon sophisticated screen fare." H. T. S.

+ — N Y Times p29 Jl 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Complications are well worked out in the final scenes. Story is well acted and there is some comedy along with the drama."

Film Daily p7 Jl 2 '36

"Inconspicuously performed, routine in plot structure, this French importation offers little except to those who, with a knowledge of French, enjoy the occasional film shown in this country in that language. English subtitles make for ready understanding of the film by those lacking a knowledge of French."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LA PORTEUSE DE PAIN—Continued

— + Motion Pict Daily p9 J1 6 '36

"This is a very sad story, but about the only people who will weep will be the exhibitors who book it. Every once in awhile French producers make films even worse than some of the bad ones they habitually turn out. This one is even worse than that."

— — Variety p15 J1 8 '36

POSTAL INSPECTOR. Universal 60min Ag 16 '36

Players: Ricardo Cortez. Patricia Ellis. Bela Lugosi. Michael Loring

Director: Otto Brower

"The story centers around the activities of Ricardo Cortez, a postal inspector whose success in transferring billions of dollars in gold from one city to another wins him the thanks of the President." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Fairly well cast and directed. Family."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 10 '36

"The duties of a U. S. postal inspector, an insight into the workings of the department, and the responsibilities imposed on its members in every emergency are clearly depicted in this very interesting film. . . There are interesting, fine photographs of the recent floods, which added materially to the realism and suspense of the production. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 5 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 20 '36

"The story is well directed and acted. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"[It is] an interesting and timely picture. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Fair stuff of its sensational sort."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 22 '36

"Little satisfaction will be had from the cinema proceedings at the Globe Theater, which come under the heading of 'Postal Inspector.' . . Being part romance, part melodrama and part lecture on the manner in which the postal authorities track down those who use the mails with intentions to defraud, the film has had a hard time preventing these three elements from curdling. . . The principals include Ricardo Cortez, Patricia Ellis, Bela Lugosi and Michael Loring, who strive valiantly to breathe life and illusion into a film that sadly needs it." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p31 S 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A number of action sequences, largely based on newsreel shots of flood conditions, comprise the highlights of this somewhat routine program offering. The cast also is good, but the story is too obvious in destination to carry much suspense."

+ — Film Daily p7 S 1 '36

"This comedy-melodrama does not rise above fair program grade. The idea is good enough to have been used to better advantage. In fact, it is a corker. But the picture can scarcely climb above the lesser duals. . . The authors have provided some good entertainment but build it on too obviously a factory-made plot."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 4 '36

"Routine melodrama . . . this is nothing to get extremely excited about. The motivating story is rather thin; it is helped but slightly by a triangular romantic conflict seasoned with dabs of comedy and the interspersing of a couple of song numbers. What strength the film has is imparted by the inclusion of several spectacular flood scenes. For exhibitors there is the possibility of exploitation contact with the postal service itself, although the theatrically artificial quality of the production scarcely justifies cooperative contacts. . . The appeal of the film seems limited to those who like melodramatic thrill action."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p14 Ag 3 '36

"This is the usual melodrama with cops [and] robbers background. Estimate: program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p37 Ag 15 '36

"Some highly capable talent and a novel basic idea are wasted in 'Postal Inspector,' Ricardo Cortez, Bela Lugosi, Patricia Ellis and David Oliver (newsreel cameraman making his feature film debut) wrestle strenuously with giddy lines, inane situations and oftentimes makeshift direction. The handicap is too great. The picture will have difficulty standing alone, though its action commends it for dualers."

— Variety p17 S 9 '36

"Obviously written around a title and suffering from the consequences, 'Postal Inspector' deserves little better than the second honors on a dual bill. For the most part the picture is lacking in everything that a good picture needs. The story is shallow, the situations are all telegraphed and there isn't the remotest showing of suspense or love interest."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 4 '36

PRINCESS COMES ACROSS. Paramount 75min My 22 '36

Players: Carole Lombard. Fred MacMurray. Douglass Dumbrille. Alison Skipworth. William Frawley

Director: William K. Howard

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A shipboard murder with a final unforeseen fillip in its solution, adds spice to an artfully contrived plot. Adults: very good; 14-18: very good; 12-14: good. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Clever direction, excellent cast and effective photography make the rather confused plot of this sophisticated and satirical murder mystery seem unimportant. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Adults & young people." Mrs T. G. Winter + Fox W Coast Bul Je 13 '36

"Family, exclusive of young children." Jt Estimates Je 1 '36

"Suitability: adults & adolescents." Mo Film Bul p119 J1 '36

"Despite its implausibility and mechanical plot this picture will make a diverting evening for the audience in search of light entertainment. Adolescents, 12-16: entertaining; children, 8-12: with family groups."

+ — Motion Pict R J1 '36

"A and Y: merry melodrama; C: little interest."
Parents' M p48 Ag '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This is an admirably acted comedy drama, with plenty of plot and an enthralling murder mystery sequence. . . It is not a notable picture but its suave and finished acting gives it a character of its own." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p32 J1 '36

"Will furnish a mildly diverting hour and a half. Carole Lombard is herself again for the first time since 'Twentieth Century.' Her marvelous imitation of Lynn Fontanne imitating Greta Garbo imitating herself is fine comedy."

+ New Theatre p12 J1 '36

"William K. Howard has made entertaining sea-going pictures before and is thoroughly conversant with the technic of getting movement and tension into a limited locale. The sets are handsome, the occurrences routine. One doesn't die of over-excitement, though neither does one expire from boredom." Herb Sterne

+ Script p11 Je 27 '36

PRISON SHADOWS. Puritan 67min

Players: Eddie Nugent. Lucille Lund. Joan Barclay. Monte Blue

Director: Bob Hill

When a prize fighter earns an undeserved reputation as a killer after several opponents have died after fights, he unravels the mystery and clears himself.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"While there's nothing particularly ingenious about this story, it has been handled in a fairly adequate way and the good work of Eddie Nugent helps to keep it going at an interest-sustaining level."

+ Film Daily p7 J1 18 '36

"Nice. The technique isn't the best, but the plot is the familiar sympathy jerker which ought to please the neighborhoods for which it is suited."

+ Phila Exhibitor p27 J1 15 '36

PRIVATE SECRETARY. Twickenham 55min

Players: Edward Everett Horton. Barry McKay. Judy Gunn

Director: Henry Edwards

Dialogue film made in England. "Horton is cast as the milkshop minister mistaken for a nephew by a wealthy old reprobate recently returned from India. The real nephew had been afraid his pranks would annoy the rich uncle, so left Horton to play the part." (Phila Exhibitor)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] an amusing comedy. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 16 '36

"The old farce . . . still has a lot of laughs in it. Family."

+ Wkly Guide J1 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is English stuff which moves in a fog of accents. It's suitable only for neighborhoods because of its lightness, cheapness, unsuitable for most neighborhoods because of its Anglicisms."

+ Phila Exhibitor p30 J1 15 '36

"It is obvious to see that Edward Everett Horton was spotted in this English-made picture to attract the American trade, but it will not help him any in building new fans this side of the Atlantic, much less on the other side. Production as a whole would be flattered by terming it a glorified screen interpretation of a high school play where amateurs struggle through their lines in an attempt to draw applause from their aunts, uncles and cousins. . . Direction missed badly by a continuous flow of abrupt closeups and straight cuts from character to character."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 25 '36

PUBLIC ENEMY'S WIFE. Warner 65min J1 10 '36

Players: Pat O'Brien. Margaret Lindsay. Robert Armstrong. Cesar Romero

Director: Nick Grinde

Margaret Lindsay is freed from prison where she has been sentenced with her husband, a notorious gangster. Although he threatens her, she divorces him and plans to marry a wealthy young man. In order to entice the ex-husband who has escaped from prison, a G-man substitutes for the groom.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Tense, suspenseful, absurd in spots but amusing. Commendable lack of gunplay till end."

+ Christian Century p1023 J1 22 '36

"Adults: absorbing; family: doubtful; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good—mature." DAR

"A complicated story full of thrills and adroitly handled for its type. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Although over stimulating and too exciting in parts to be recommended for children, it well sets forth the tragedy brought to the lives of innocent people by some selfish, utterly unmoral person, and also depicts the intelligent, untiring efforts of our government agents. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul J1 4 '36

"Again the overworked G-men are used to entertain crime-loving audiences and their role is both undignified and absurd. The story also is improbable and too highly plotted to interest anyone of discriminating taste. . . Though in the end the convict is of course vanquished the picture is trashy and banal. Adolescents, 12-16: banal and in bad taste; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R J1 '36

"Expert direction, fast-moving action, breezy dialogue, a good story with suspense maintained to the end, and a breath-taking fight are its outstanding features. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 24 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 3 '36

"A: far-fetched gangster melodrama; Y: banal; C: no."

Parents' M p69 S '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PUBLIC ENEMY'S WIFE—Continued

"[It has] an entertaining though highly improbable plot. . . The theme which gave promise of strong dramatic possibilities is handled with too little realism and seriousness. Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Lively in action, with a good deal of comedy. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide Jl 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Except for its title, which is unfortunate, 'Public Enemy's Wife' is a reasonably entertaining summer picture on a melodramatic theme. . . No one takes such pictures very seriously, or at least, no one should. They bear the same relation to the more ambitious products of the screen that detective stories do to literature. But they can be very pleasant diversion, so long as the scenarists, director and players are expert at their work. In this case all of them seem to know their jobs."

E. F. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Jl 18 '36

"Enough excitement in this one to keep your attention from wandering. . . 'Public Enemy's Wife' is one of the best examples of sustained suspense we have had in a long time."

+ Hollywood Spec p12 Jl 4 '36

"Never quite believable, 'Public Enemy's Wife' is so packed with shrewdly contrived theatric devices, so full of suspenseful scenes, that the picture is as engrossing as it is obvious. And by borrowing the best moments of a score of previous films and smartly threading them on a novel plot, the affair emerges with a seeming freshness and calculated vitality." (2½ stars)

Beverly Hills

Liberty p45 Jl 25 '36

"'Public Enemy's Wife' applies a comic-opera situation to a crook melodrama . . . and gets away with it with only a moderate strain on our credulity. . . Mr. O'Brien and Miss Lindsay are both able citizens of cinemaland, and they add salt and pepper to the old embarrassments, and the show goes on to very satisfying excitements and laughs. Not for children." Don Herold

Life p31 S '36

"Warner Brothers evidently couldn't quite decide whether to make 'Public Enemy's Wife' a farce or a straight G-Man thriller and fell in between the two schools, emerging with something that's neither fish nor fowl nor valid entertainment." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p22 Ag '36

Reviewed by Richard Watts, Jr.

N Y Herald Tribune p12 Jl 9 '36

"The film is one of Warners' gangster melodramas, but less original and breathtaking than most of the studio's frequent excursions into the underworld. In a way, this is a minor version of 'Mary Burns, Fugitive.' . . The film has not that quality of recklessness which characterized so many of the Warner gangster dramas. . . 'Public Enemy's Wife,' in spite of some fast and furious moments, is well made, routine underworld melodrama."

Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p11 Jl 9 '36

"The government ought to look into the G-man situation in Hollywood. The way things are now, with the screen version of the Federal sleuth being easier to hoodwink than a Keystone cop, any mobster on the lam can bolster up his morale no end by simply pausing in flight to see the latest G-man picture, ['Public Enemy's Wife.']" J. T. M.

— N Y Times p17 Jl 9 '36

"At this stage of the game another pure and simple melodrama about G-men and the underworld is probably the hardest sort of film to write and act entertainingly. However, the Warner Brothers, who have a special flair for getting all the excitement and thrills possible out of racketeer stories, present it with a first-rate cast and with first-rate thrills for all in the audience. . . The whole thing—or nearly all of it—is played at precisely the right pitch for underworld melodrama. Unless I am mistaken you should have no trouble in finding the film satisfactory entertainment for these mid-summer dog days." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p11 Jl 9 '36

"When the picture sags the fault lies with the script. Margaret Lindsay, in a blond wig for part of the footage, gives a good account of herself. . . Pat O'Brien gives a smooth show as the G-man. It's more or less of a vacation for him since the character makes few demands."

Herb Sterne

Script p13 Jl 25 '36

"'Public Enemy's Wife' can be rated as mildly worthwhile only because Margaret Lindsay's acidulous portrayal of an ex-gun-moll turned Palm Beach socialite makes such a character seem faintly plausible."

+ — Time p36 Jl 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Those past masters of 'G-Man' pictures, Warner, came through with another smash in this saga of crooks, federal policemen and love. Although lighter in vein, many new twists and a goodly dash of comedy rates it a place among the top rankers of films in this popular category."

+ Box Office p27 Jl 4 '36

"This is a fast moving comedy-drama, which has a fresh central situation."

+ Film Daily p7 Je 23 '36

"Primitive entertainment on the G-man-versus-public-enemy formula, below average on virtually all counts, but which has enough fabricated suspense to get it by on the lesser dual bills. The names of Pat O'Brien and Margaret Lindsay will help it somewhat, but these two dependable and popular players are pretty much lost in parts that give little acting chance and that are not developed by direction to their full value."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 18 '36

"With such familiar elements as machine guns, jail-breaks, screeching sirens and automobile chases, this seems as if it were made from blueprints rather than a scenario. However, the story offers several original twists and will satisfy in some localities."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Je 19 '36

"Estimate: fair program; depends on selling."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p69 Jl 1 '36

"This fails to measure up to its promise as a vivid dramatic vehicle. . . While this may disappoint some fans, the combination of Pat O'Brien and Robert Armstrong, here teamed up as G-men pals, and Margaret Lindsay, plus obvious bally possibilities, will enable it to gain average grosses in most spots."

+ — Variety p31 Jl 15 '36

"Fast action comedy that should be excellent fan fare for the summer months. Story packs sufficient suspense and comedy to please all theatre-goers. Sam Bischoff has given the picture a good production and a topnotch cast of players."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 18 '36

R*RACING BLOOD. Conn 65min

Players: Frankie Darro, Kane Richmond, Gladys Blake, Arthur Housman

Director: Rex Hale

Based on a short story Lionized by Peter B. Kyne. "Frankie Darro is one of a long line of famous jockeys who rakes enough money together to purchase a promising colt with a bad leg from Kane Richmond, horse owner who is in love with Darro's sister, Gladys Blake." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 27 '36

"An improbable story of the race track but interesting to those who like horses. Family-juvenile."

+ — Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] makes good fodder for the action spots, and should prove particularly timely coming just ahead of the fall racing season. It lacks only some of the finesse and polish the majors give their B pictures for a chance at some of the good neighborhood screens, and it may land there Saturday matinees."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Ag 8 '36

"Balanced evenly with romantic suspense and action, 'Racing Blood' is a generous conglomeration of hokum entertainment aimed at small town and neighborhood trade. The film is a tailor-made vehicle for double bills and will find adequate audience reaction in the aforementioned spots."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 Ag 11 '36

"Estimate: good independent."

+ Phila Exhibitor p44 S 1 '36

"[It is] a fast-moving, entertaining picture with a racetrack background. It has plenty of fistic brawls, plenty of thrilling track shots and enough story suspense to bolster up any bill or provide thrills demanded by the nickel-and-dime audiences."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 8 '36

THE RATTLESNAKE. See II Serpente a Sonagli

RECKLESS WAY. Puritan 68min Ap 20 '36

Players: Marian Nixon. Inez Courtney. Kane Richmond

Director: Raymond K. Johnson

This is the tale of a public stenographer who becomes a sensational Hollywood star through the help of a hotel night clerk. In the end she finds her career disappointing and returns to the clerk.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: poor; C: no."

Christian Century p823 Je 3 '36

"The story is poor and the attempts at satire of Hollywood manners and personalities are obvious and unamusing. Direction has failed to add anything and the editing and photography are poor. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

— Mo Film Bul p105 Je '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Picture has the names of Marian Nixon, Kane Richmond and Inez Courtney to lean on in the neighborhoods and also has the Hollywood angle, which is not discernible from the title. In the middle west it is possible that the film's phoney Hollywood slant may look plausible. In the larger centers it becomes a little hard to swallow. . . . The original idea of 'Reckless Way' was not bad, but in working it out, too much drag was left toward the end. Photography is okay in close and medium shots, but off on the long shots."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 20 '36

"This can only be recommended for tail end of bill in mass neighborhoods."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p72 J1 1 '36

"Intelligently directed, produced and smartly acted from well-meshed yarn, this independent should stand firmly in lower neighborhoods and mainstreeters. C. C. Burr has given it better than average production."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 20 '36

RED WAGON. First division 63min Je 20 '36

Players: Charles Bickford. Raquel Torres. Greta Nissen. Don Alvarado

Director: Paul L. Stein

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair circus melodrama; Y: debatable; C: no."

Parents' M p69 S '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The production fails to provide sufficient of that ingratiating blend of spangles, buffoonery and fustian that we have come to know as the Dexter Fellows touch. It does, in truth, afford Charles Bickford wide opportunity for that snarl of his and for considerable use of his familiar rough-and-tumble tactics. It gives Greta Nissen a try at taming tigers, although it permits Raquel Torres far too few of her dancing moments." J. T. M.

N Y Times p22 Je 22 '36

"For a few brief moments near the end, when the employees of two rival circuses clash in a free-for-all fight, the film manages to break through its lethargy and banality to a reasonably exciting climax. . . . 'Red Wagon' is a leaky and generally preposterous entertainment." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p15 Je 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Despite the presence of Greta Nissen, Charles Bickford, Raquel Torres, Don Alvarado and Anthony Bushell, this British-made film of circus life fails to generate the appeal that might be anticipated. These four names probably will boost its box office potentialities in America, yet the picture itself fails to cash in on its obvious possibilities. Chiefly for the double-bills."

+ — Variety p45 Je 24 '36

RETURN OF SOPHIE LANG. Paramount 65min J1 3 '36

Players: Gertrude Michael. Sir Guy Standing. Ray Milland. Elizabeth Patterson

Director: George Archainbaud

Sequel to The Notorious Sophie Lang. Based on a series of Saturday Evening Post short stories, The Notorious Sophie Lang, by Frederick Irving Anderson. This portrays the adventures of Sophie Lang, notorious lady Raffles who is believed dead by the police. She is the companion of a wealthy old jewel collector who owns a fabulous diamond. On board ship it is stolen by a former underworld friend of the girl, but by outwitting both him and the police, she re-steals and returns the diamond to its rightful owner.

RETURN OF SOPHIE LANG—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

- "A and Y: good of kind; C: doubtful."
Christian Century p1071 Ag 5 '36
- "Fast. Light. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary
- "[It is] entertaining film fare. Mature."
Calif Cong of Par & Teachers
- "Good-mature." DAR
- "The film is well constructed and holds one's close attention throughout. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women
- "[It is] a rather entertaining picture for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Jl 18 '36
- "Family."
Jt Estimates Jl 15 '36
- "Despite a slow-moving and hackneyed beginning, the story gains as it develops. Expert direction of a well chosen cast, good suspense maintained throughout. Family."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 8 '36
- "General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Jl 9 '36
- "A and Y: engaging crook melodrama; C: if interested."
Parents' M p70 S '36
- "[It is] a story loaded with romance and suspense. Family."
+ Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36
- "Family."
Wkly Guide Jl 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Laura Elston
Canadian M p36 Ag '36

"The Return of Sophie Lang' is a thoroughly satisfactory picture of its sort, one which reflects credit on all who had a part in its making, and if you still have any appetite for crook dramas, you will find it sufficiently entertaining to return dividends on the price of admission. It is distinguished for an excellent, finely shaded and intelligent performance by the beautiful Gertrude Michael; a convincing crook characterization by Sir Guy Standing, and good work by Ray Milland who makes an agreeable leading man. Elizabeth Patterson's grande dame is one of the best things she has done."
+ Hollywood Spec p13 Jl 4 '36

"Though the film frequently doesn't make sense, it moves with rapidity after a timid introduction, and captures real interest."
(2 stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p46 Jl 25 '36

"The new film hardly comes under the head of distinguished entertainment, but, in its midsummer, minor league fashion, it is quite passable entertainment. . . . Miss Gertrude Michael is attractive and likable as the great Sophie and Ray Milland, a pleasant young actor, is helpful as the valiant newspaper man." Richard Watts, Jr.
+ N Y Herald Tribune p14 Jl 24 '36

"[It is a] phoney little picture not bad enough to arouse a good healthy indignation, not good enough to fire a spark of enthusiasm. . . . 'The Return of Sophie Lang' is no great shakes as a whole. It is just straightforward narrative, a melodrama told simply and quite clearly. The photography, except when focused on the good-looking Miss Michael, is dull and below Hollywood standard. . . . [It] is second-rate melodrama, neither stimulating nor objectionable." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p22 Jl 23 '36

"We confess to a juvenile fondness for the sort of lively, engagingly played and amiably agile photoplays of which 'The Return of Sophie Lang' is somewhat better than typical.

. . . We find ourselves thoroughly in favor of Miss Lang's return. May it be periodic." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p13 Jl 24 '36

"Frankly, since Sophie decided to play on the side of the police rather than lead them on a merry chase all over the world, she has lost much of her interest and glamour and is something of a disappointment. . . . So when 'The Return of Sophie Lang' revealed Sophie as a good woman, I lost interest in her and in what she did. After all, she provides very little excitement in the film, contenting herself, rather, to carry on a flimsy romance with a handsome young reporter. . . . Personally, I am reluctant to say, I found 'The Return of Sophie Lang' rather hard to take. However, if you have nothing better to do you may enjoy watching Sophie outwit not only the police but also Max Bernard." William Boehnel
+ N Y World-Telegram p8 Jl 24 '36

"Gertrude Michael and Sir Guy Standing, both of them ornamental and skilled actors, are in it, baffling one another with the greatest suavity. I enjoyed it, and I'm not ashamed to say so." Russell Maloney
+ New Yorker p39 Ag 1 '36

"The picture makes for an evening of delightful authentic diversion." Herb Sterne
+ Script p12 Ag 8 '36
Time p54 Jl 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This sequel to 'The Notorious Sophie Lang' is an able effort on the part of its producers to satisfy the demands for mystery fare."
+ Box Office p27 Jl 4 '36

"[It] is highly satisfactory entertainment. Patterson McNutt and Brian Barlow have concocted a clever screenplay."
+ Film Daily p12 Je 18 '36

"Deft writing, direction and playing make this a smoothly silken crime play that will entertain for an hour in anybody's theater. While it cannot be expected to hit any box-office highs it will do better-than-average business for a picture of light name draw."
+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 13 '36

"Light drama, roguery, comedy and romance are the ingredients of this story. . . . Keyed to a vein of suspense, the dialogue and action are well balanced and move at a speedy pace. With effective application, these qualities, plus credible individual performances, result in good average entertainment."
+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Je 15 '36

"Estimate: mild program, best for neighborhoods."
+ Phila Exhibitor p68 Jl 1 '36

"While 'Sophie Lang' is far from substantial as box office entertainment, it is acceptable B product and ought to get by. . . . While 'Lang' takes numerous liberties, it is practically forced to do this in order to give the story motion and melodrama."
+ Variety p14 Jl 29 '36

"[It has a] neatly contrived plot upholding suspense and zestful playing by competent cast. . . . 'The Return of Sophie Lang' [is] acceptable entertainment in the B class. Has sufficient substance and is presentable enough to support the average program."
+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 13 '36

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE. Paramount 85min
Jl 31 '36

Players: Bing Crosby. Frances Farmer. Bob Burns. Martha Raye

Director: Norman Taurog

Music director: Boris Morros

Music and lyrics: Leo Robin. Sam Coslow

The plot deals with an heiress who to avoid a loveless wedding boards a box car which is carrying a group of rodeo performers back to the Frying Pan Ranch. When Bing Crosby, one of the cow hands, learns that she is an heiress and not a working girl as he imagined, true love is almost blighted but after a few songs, all ends well.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: inane; Y: poor; C: no value."
Christian Century p1095 Ag 12 '36

"Good-mature." DAR
+ Fox W Coast Bul J1 25 '36

"Lack of continuity and drunken questionable comedy detracts. Adults: a matter of taste; family: no; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Audiences may enjoy the music, but will not be impressed with the story. . . Bob Burns and his 'bazooka' is not quite as amusing in the picture as he is on the radio. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Aside from one good song by Bing Crosby, the singing is rather raucous, the comedy is coarse and the comedienne decidedly overacts. Social and ethical values are conspicuous by their absence." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The picture will prove diverting for those who prefer the light, effervescent type of musical entertainment. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 15 '36

"Family."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
J1 28 '36

"Mature."
Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"The failure of this picture to 'click' in spite of a good cast and music, and excellent photography can be laid to the fact that the story is a most improbable one, the humor dubious, with the ridiculous antics of Martha Raye bordering on the vulgar. Family."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 5 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Ag 6 '36

"Family."
Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"[It is in a] light comedy vein, with incidental humor of a more hilarious kind and some good songs. Often goofy but pleasant. Family."

+ Wkly Guide J1 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] is not a solemn and romantic melodrama, but a pleasantly satiric bit of foolery, worked out on a large scale suitable for single billings. . . Miss Raye displays extraordinary and unconventional vocal powers which somehow quite outshine those of the better-known Mr. Crosby." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 1 '36

"A Western that pokes a bit of fun at its sort of entertainment, with Bing Crosby singing a variety of ditties in the vein that has made him widely popular. Bob Burns with his 'bazooka' music is one of the bright talents in the company."

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 19 '36

"[Four writers] are credited with the story end of this Paramount offering. It is such a poor job that even with the blame so widely distributed, each of the quintette still has a hefty load to tote. Norman Taurog gave the script sympathetic direction. It was a poor script and he directed it poorly. A major irritation in the picture is Bob Burns, whose monotonous and expressionless voice drones its way through the entire footage without clearing the mystery of his selection for a screen role. . . Martha Raye's eccentric comedy is all right in its way. It would be a riotous success in a Marx Brothers comedy, but has no place in a picture which is basically romantic."

— Hollywood Spec p9 Ag 1 '36

"Never pretending to be realistic, this giddy piece devotes all its bouncing energies to laughter and song. And only because it is handicapped by a hackneyed attenuated plot does it fail to become outstanding film fare. . . Frances Farmer [is] a welcome addition to the screen. And though cowboys will be surprised at their interpretation of ranch life, these new players greatly assist Bing in making this an entertaining though spotty pictorial jam session." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p36 Ag 29 '36

"Not till the arrival at the ranch in the last reel does it wake up. Then the credit is partly due to a comedienne who is new to us, Martha Raye. Her large mouth and a grotesque humour are a very welcome relief, and her singing of a hot number is the brightest moment in the whole film. If the pace at which it closes had been achieved and maintained from the start, 'Rhythm on the Range' would have been good entertainment. As it is, it will satisfy only the Crosby fans."

New Statesman & Nation p224 Ag 15 '36

"The film can be seen with moderate pleasure."

+ — New Theatre p22 S '36

"There is a certain amount of gayety in the new film and, upon one occasion, even a trace of satire, but on the whole 'Rhythm on the Range' is just another passable Bing Crosby vehicle. The satire arrives when Mr. Crosby and several aids sing a number called [appropriately] 'I'm a Lone Cow Hand,' which has some engaging lyrics that amiably mock the tradition of the cowboy lament with sharp and effective humor. . . For the rest of the time the attractive comedy episodes of the picture struck me as being few and far between. . . A comedienne named Martha Raye was liked by the audience at the Paramount yesterday afternoon. It is my minority opinion that she is one of the most trying and exhaustingly annoying performers that I have recently encountered." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 J1 30 '36

"The Paramount's new picture has several claims for midsummer attention, principally the presence of three promising newcomers, new to the screen at least. Bob Burns, of course, has his following of radio listeners. If he is as entertaining on the air as he is in pictures the enthusiasm of his loyal audience is justified. . . Frances Farmer, who looks remarkably like Constance Cummings, is the heroine. . . Miss Farmer, an engaging personality, does more with the part than it warrants. Martha Raye, third of the new group, was greeted with enthusiasm by the Paramount audience, if not by this reviewer. . . There is no doubt that the moviegoers thought her extremely funny; she, as well as the others, will probably be kept busy by Paramount this next year. Mr. Burns should be headed for the electric lights. As for the film itself, it is a simple and pleasant little musical." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p9 J1 30 '36

"We prefer to think of 'Rhythm on the Range' as our screen introduction to Martha Raye. Miss Raye is a stridently funny comedienne with a Mammoth Cave, or early Joe E. Brown, mouth and a dental supply vaguely reminiscent of those frightening uppers and lowers they used to hang over the portals of painless extraction emporia. . . There remains then the conviction that Hollywood has found a remarkable pantomimist. . . Assisting her in the genial task of stealing the picture from the laryngeal Mr. Crosby and the decorative Frances Farmer is Bob Burns, radio's monologist and bazooka player from Van Buren, Arkansas. . . Everything considered,

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE—Continued

Paramount has dealt fairly generously with us; of course, we could have had a mite more of Miss Raye. Still, it's something to anticipate later when her next pictures come along." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 30 '36

"It is a fair though somewhat attenuated comedy that performs the service of bringing Bing Crosby back into the ranks of the cinema's active players. . . If you think it would be fun to listen to Bing croon a lullaby to his prize bull you will probably have a good time at the Paramount this week. Personally, I think the entertainment 'Rhythm on the Range' offers is about as vague as the comic efforts of Martha Raye." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p8 Jl 31 '36

"'Rhythm on the Range' needs no word of critical judgment. Bing Crosby pictures are well-known standard products, like Ford V-8's. If you liked the last Bing Crosby, you'll like this, and so will you like the next one, whatever it turns out to be." Russell Maloney

New Yorker p53 Ag 8 '36

"[Martha Raye and Bob Burns] lift a mawkish cowboy musical from doldrums to delight."

+ News-Wk p23 Ag 1 '36

"It is neither the brightest nor the dullest of the Crosby vehicles, but whatever its shortcomings, it definitely offers fans their money's worth. . . High spot in the picture is the production of Johnny Mercer's 'I'm an Old Cowhand from the Rio Grande'—with everyone in the cast chipping in." Molly Lewin

+ — Script p12 Ag 22 '36

"'Rhythm on the Range' is quite a tolerable picture with a few scenes which do deserve to be called popular cinema and an excellent new comedian, Mr. Bob Burns. I think one might even find a place, in one's ideal popular cinema, for Mr. Crosby: he represents permanent, if disagreeable, human characteristics of nostalgia and self-pity: I would have him bobbing about at the back of the scrimmage like a worried referee—or like an Elizabethan clown crooning his lugubrious reminders." Graham Greene

+ — Spec p270 Ag 14 '36

"'Rhythm on the Range' is a good-humoured, well-paced musicocomedy in which Bing Crosby's nonchalant but thoroughly mellifluous barytone is pleasantly used to punctuate a mildly satiric investigation of the rodeo business."

+ Time p26 Ag 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Bing Crosby, crooning and performing at his best to date; the show-stopping antics of a newcomer, Martha Raye; the droll humor of Bob Burns and his Bazooka; a half dozen catchy tunes; a score of clever situations and a blue ribbon bull. With a weather eye to the box office, Director Norman Taurog blended these ingredients into an entertainment cocktail delectable enough to tickle the palate of any theater-goer, the exploitation possibilities of which will bring tears of joy to exhibitors' eyes. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Jl 25 '36

"This will make a big hit with the Bing Crosby fans. He has been given a good vehicle, excellently directed by Norman Taurog. The picture introduces two new screen personalities in Martha Raye and Bob Burns, who will be popular with the fans. . . 'Empty Saddles,' sung by Bing, should develop into a hit."

+ Film Daily p7 Jl 18 '36

"Bing Crosby has here his best picture in many, many moons. Under the expert direction of Norman Taurog and with a fine supporting cast highlighted by hit screen-debuting performances by Bob Burns and Martha Raye, 'Rhythm on the Range' is due to be a top grossing Crosby release and to accomplish much in reestablishing the box office draw of its star, dealt such heavy blows by a series of inadequate vehicles. . . Four writers are credited with the screen-play, which makes the most of the amusing situations offered, although leaving something to be desired in dialogue construction. Too often are lines obvious when they should be witty."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 15 '36

"Here is probably Bing Crosby's best work to date; certainly his fans will like it better than anything he has done in a long time and should also go for the two new screen personalities introduced in handsome style for the film's comedy. . . Bob Burns, with his bazooka, scores heavily in his first screen role. Martha Raye introduces a new individual style of rowdy clowning which marks her as a favorite in the cast from her first appearance. Crosby has good routine in seven songs with clever lyrics contributed by an accomplished group of songwriters. . . The best exploitation features are the new comics and the different type of Bing Crosby role. The radio popularity of the player should also draw audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p19 Jl 1 6'36

"Comedy with music, this should help do better than previous Crosbys. Estimate: good Crosby."

+ Phila Exhibitor p35 Ag 1 '36

"Despite the title, the costumes and the characters, this is no Western. There's very little range, but plenty of rhythm, and the latter makes it pleasant entertainment. Bing Crosby shoots par, on singing and light comedy but because of story handicap, he might have had some tough going minus the aid of a pair of new faces, clicking on their first picture attempt. . . There are some flaws in Miss Raye's performance, which is to be expected, but at first sight she impresses as a very promising picture comedienne. Burns also got some splendid opportunities and he made the most of the majority of them, but he may have to speed up a bit for pictures."

+ Variety p16 Ag 5 '36

"Still in need of some trimming in the early sequences, 'Rhythm on the Range' stacks up as the best Crosby picture to hit the screens in the past year. Excellently cast with a number of specialty people and containing a number of topnotch musical sequences, it will give the fans about everything they want from their favorite."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 15 '36

RIDING AVENGER. Diversion 57min Je 15 '36

Players: Hoot Gibson. Ruth Mix. Buzz Barton. June Gale

Director: Harry Fraser

Based on the novel, Big Bend Buckaroo, by Walton West. A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"The legion of fans who like Hoot Gibson will be more than satisfied with this one. . . The youngster Buzz Barton is prominently cast, and will add to the delight of the [children]."

+ Film Daily p11 Jl 14 '36

"A good Western with the smiling and recklessly wisecracking Hoot Gibson doing all the exciting situations in fine style. When the action lags it soon is given a fresh start, and the thrills begin again. It has what it takes to make pleasant entertainment—if the audience does not take it too seriously."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 Jl 15 '36

"Family Western."

Phila Exhibitor p68 Jl 1 '36

"If the first five minutes of this, obviously an elaboration of the adaptor, were left on the shelf the picture would be improved. Hoot Gibson never looks better than when on his nag or with rod in hand but, unfortunately, it wasn't realized soon enough in this instance. . . Good in its class."

+ — Variety p55 J1 15 '36

ROAD TO GLORY. 20th century-Fox 95min S
4 '36

Players: Fredric March. Warner Baxter.
Lionel Barrymore. June Lang. Gregory
Ratoff

Director: Howard Hawks

A remake of a French war film Croix de Bois which was never shown in this country.

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fine of kind; Y: strong; C: no."
Christian Century p1143 Ag 26 '36

"A graphic picture of the futility of war is enacted with outstanding sincerity by a splendid cast. . . 'The Road to Glory' was surely not made primarily for entertainment. It is a strong plea for the prevention of war by showing the effects. Family-mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The human equation, rather than the glory-aspect of war, is emphasized in this intelligent and impressive motion picture document which stresses the futility of war as an instrument of civilization. . . Adults: excellent; 14-18: very good; 8-14: beyond." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Set during the World War, 'The Road to Glory' is a bitterly satirical indictment of the utter futility of war and its waste of manhood. . . It has been simply and therefore powerfully presented, without undue sentimentality and with less than the usual measure of hokum. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent. This impressive, suspenseful war film, marked by exceptional photography, shows the stoicism and heroism of men in action and the brutality of war. Adults. Excellent." DAF

"This remarkable picture . . . is ostensibly a powerful indictment against the futility and frightful carnage of warfare, but equally as potent as an achievement in demonstrating the glorious courage of the soldier when his country calls for all his patriotism. The picture will doubtless receive great acclaim as an ambitious undertaking and the younger generation will hail it with enthusiasm. . . [It] is somewhat marred by forgettable anachronisms and lack of careful research work. . . The picture is a masterly enterprise which all old and young should have the privilege of seeing. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"A picture to take its place among such war dramas as 'All Quiet on the Western Front' and 'Journey's End'—powerful, unified and mature. Family-mature, of course." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Je 20 '36

"Outstanding. Adults."

+ + Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"A decidedly militaristic screenplay glorifying war as an instrument of national policy. Just because, during the unfoldment of the slight story, there is a certain amount of tragedy, it does not necessarily follow that the ghastly business of war is portrayed in its true character. . . In the opinion of the editor of this Bulletin very few people will enjoy this movie. Aside from 'Road to Glory' being a vicious anti-peace film, it is not entertainment; it is dull, slow-moving, and heavy."

— Mo Film Bul Ag 24 '36

"Novel in theme as well as in presentation, 'The Road to Glory' is one of the strongest war features yet screened. It is a picture with a purpose rather than a vehicle of entertainment only. Credit is due the studio for not distorting facts in order to make of it a typical motion picture with a glorified ending. . . An outstanding picture bringing a definite message, gruesomely unpleasant in its indictment against war. Adults."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 10 '36

"A powerful and impressive drama stressing the courageous heroism and patriotic sacrifice of men who fought for France. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency J1 23 '36

"A and Y: dramatic indictment of war; C: harrowing for nervous."

Parents' M p48 Ag '36

"The human equation, rather than the glory aspect of war, is emphasized in this highly intelligent and extremely impressive motion picture document which stresses the futility of war as an instrument of civilization. The almost daily menace of European war perhaps warrants this stark reevaluation of incidents of the Great War. . . The film is a strong arraignment of war and should be seen by anyone who can still think of war only as a glittering pageant of waving flags and brass buttons accompanied by stirring music. Constructive and thought-provoking. Adults. Outstanding."

+ + Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

"The horrors of war are pretty well overshadowed by the glamour of heroism and romance, but the fine and sincere performances of March and Baxter lift the film into a semblance of reality. Mature."

Wkly Guide Ag 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 29 '36

"This war triangle story of two officers and a girl is lifted out of the conventional mould by a number of convincing episodes, a good screen play by Joel Sayre and William Faulkner, and several outstanding performances under the direction of Howard Hawks. More than slightly reminiscent of other battle epics, 'The Road to Glory,' by its crisp objectiveness and disinclination to romanticize drums and trumpets, is an effective treatise against war."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"Close in title and similar in setting to Humphrey Cobb's biting novel, 'Paths of Glory,' 'The Road to Glory' can stand by itself as a powerful, completely engrossing war film. It just misses the simple greatness of 'All Quiet on the Western Front' and 'Journey's End,' but not since those two stirring masterpieces has there been anything to match this moving military document. . . [It] has more than its needs in the way of emotional display. In fact, it is the film's penchant for pouring on one big scene after another that keeps it from becoming as realistic as it is exciting. Despite all our petty bickering, this is a film that no one should miss." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p42 J1 11 '36

"Producer Nunnally Johnson . . . forgot propaganda as it might affect the politics or diplomacy of any European nation. The result is a grim, terrifying straight-forward cinema report of what war is like, war anywhere. Critics have pronounced the picture a thumping triumph in objectivity."

+ Lit Digest p20 J1 11 '36

New Theatre p22 S '36

"The photoplay has a certain suggestion of almost every war drama from 'The Big Parade' and 'What Price Glory?' to 'Journey's End' and 'All Quiet on the Western Front.' Nevertheless it is a powerful and effective motion picture that seldom fails to be direct and moving. . . 'The Road to Glory' is much more than a casual imitation of celebrated predecessors in the field. . . I should say that the chief virtue of the 'Road to Glory' was that it made war something dirty and uncomfortable, rather than merely romantic; that it indicated that the screams of the dying were as much to be heard as the sound of exciting martial music." Richard Watts, Jr.

ROAD TO GLORY—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ag 6 '36

"Mr. Zanuck has made a picture of war. Shrewd showman that he is, he has realized that as war itself grows more real, war fiction must be more romantic. . . 'The Road to Glory' therefore is romance, theatrical and highly effective romance; and the lines waiting outside the Rivoli before the second show at noon yesterday proved that Mr. Zanuck had once again guessed right. . . It preaches no sermon. In spite of picturesque detail and colorful tragedy, it makes no pretense at realism in plot. Its one aim is entertainment; and there it succeeds most admirably. This is a good yarn, stirring directed, written with a cunning mixture of comedy and tears, and boasting a number of excellent performances. . . 'The Road to Glory' is first-rate melodrama, vivid and, for all its horrors, sentimental." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p9 Ag 6 '36

"We cannot but be impatient with any such objective, yet romanticized, treatment of war as 'The Road to Glory.' All the more impatient because, much against our personal convictions, we find our interest caught up emotionally, our attention pinioned, our imagination captured by the photoplay. Even though it is a stirring, dramatic and vivid picture, that should not defend it; war should not be considered dispassionately; we should not be beguiled into liking a film that regards it so. And yet, resentfully or not, we must confess that we did. . . The work of the cast is faultless. . . [They] have aided beyond measure in giving the picture a quality which compels our resentful admiration." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 6 '36

"This, as even those who only glance at newspaper headlines must realize, was an ideal time for a motion picture to remind the world, which has a faulty memory, of what a harrowing pastime war is. . . But with characteristic lack of courage the producers of 'The Road to Glory' have failed to take advantage of the opportunity that was within their reach. True, there are moments when the film stresses the futility of war as an instrument of civilization, but these moments are very few indeed. . . However, if you can forgive the film's lack of courage and middle-of-the-road point of view, you'll have to admit that it is a realistic, well-acted variation of 'Journey's End.' . . The acting reveals an admirable integrity." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p15 Ag 6 '36

"Two such notable literary figures as Joel Sayre and William Faulkner have collaborated on this story. . . All throughout my watching of the movie, an apathy lay heavy upon me. To complain that there is nothing new to say about the war is rather like complaining that there is nothing new to say about life anyhow, which is doubtless true too, but it certainly seems unnecessary to stress this fact as definitely as the war films do. . . [It is] a presentable, even sensible, scrap of sentiment and valor, with a touch of humor here and there, which will do nobody any harm and excite nobody." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p48 Ag 15 '36

"A pertinent film, now that Europe is again reverberating to the march of armed forces. No glamour, no Richard Harding Davis flag-waving—just war, a dirty, heartbreaking, nerve-shattering job. . . For the first time an American film submerges individual characters, unfolds a vista of mass action and mass fate. . . Rarely have such convincing panoramic scenes of warfare been filmed. The charges have an uncanny verisimilitude, a deft pacing and grouping that is remindful of D. W. Griffith's vast tapestries of motion. . . Fredric March will be remembered for his work. Discarding the swagger and facile mannerisms that have marred his recent performances, he's thoroughly honest, always the soldier. The romantic interludes have a lyricism that is unusual. His best role since 'Laughter' though the antithesis in demands. Forward, March! . . Three stars, Fredric March, Lionel Barrymore, Warner Baxter in a four-star film." Herb Sterne

+ + Script p10 Ag 29 '36

"There is a disturbing note about this picture—that such excellent playing and directing have not resulted in tenser drama, that such incisive characterization is not moving through its own sharpness. Perhaps music would have given the film an overtone of emotionalism; perhaps we are not used to consultation and a sense of duty being the motivating forces in war drama. Whatever the reason for 'Road to Glory's' failure to come off as an effective screenplay, it is an honest, straightforward photographic pattern."

Stage p12 S '36

"It presents the spectacle of fighting on the Western Front with definitely sadistic relish. . . Neither patriotic poppycock nor pacifistic preaching, 'The Road to Glory' is sure to enjoy a vast popularity which may be partly attributable to the fact that it can be mistaken for either. Actually, it is propaganda for nothing but the shrewdness of Producer Darryl Zanuck in arranging the daringly incongruous combination on such a theme of two authors whose respective specialties are caustic humor and energetic morbidity, and in giving Director Howard Hawks the best material he has had since 'The Crowd Roars.'"

Time p46 Ag 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A gloriously beautiful and unforgettable film of what war really is—not why." L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 Je 20 '36

"[It] is destined for smooth sailing at the box office. It's punchy, timely, gripping, studded with sufficient marquee voltage to underwrite almost anything, and serves as an effective means whereby 20th-Fox launches a new cinematic face of considerable promise, June Lang. . . As romantic war stuff, 'The Road to Glory' is a bit too obvious and stylized. But it's the highly competent production treatment which elevates it to big league company."

+ Variety p18 Ag 12 '36

ROARIN' GUNS. Puritan 59min Ja 27 '36

Players: Tim McCoy. Rosalinda Price. Tommy Bupp

Director: Sam Newfield

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 22 '36

"A, Y and C: just what one expects in Western melodrama."

Parents' M p50 Je '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Treading the routine path of Western thrillers, this one moves along the well worn groove but succeeds in keeping the excitement going quite consistently, with Tim McCoy in action most of the time. . . The [children] will like this one, for it features Tommy Bupp, a youngster who gets plenty of opportunity to be active alongside his grown-up pal, McCoy."

+ — Film Daily p6 J1 7 '36

"An average Western which should prove exciting enough to the outdoor clients." The picture should do well on a double bill."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 J1 8 '36

"Strictly double bill [material]. 'Roarin' Guns' smacks too often of quickie production and careless execution of story material available. Strangely enough this story is not half bad though not highly original."

— + Variety p28 J1 8 '36

ROGUES' TAVERN. Puritan 67min J1 1 '36

Players: Wallace Ford. Barbara Pepper.

Joan Woodbury

Director: Bob Hill

A detective and his bride-to-be stranded in a lonely tavern solve three murder mysteries.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The last scenes are terrible. Altogether the story is absurd, and there is little to help it out. Suitability: adults."

— Mo Film Bul p105 Je '36

"A and Y: unconvincing murder mystery; C: poor."

Parents' M p50 Je '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This program picture closely follows the accepted formula of mystery plays. Its story is designed to baffle audiences until the very final sequences. This it does entertainingly and effectively. Its frequent, creepy scenes, its trio of murders, and its suspense will appeal particularly to patrons who thrive on spine-chilling stuff."

Film Daily p12 Je 4 '36

"This will appeal best to indiscriminate neighborhoods. . . [The] story creaks with familiar situations."

— + Phila Exhibitor p29 Je 15 '36

"Enough thrills in this murder mystery to keep fans keyed up. First half is a little stiff, but as story unreels it improves and shapes up as a nice programmer for the duals."

+ — Variety p55 J1 15 '36

ROMEO AND JULIET. MGM 120min

Players: Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard.

John Barrymore, Basil Rathbone, C.

Aubrey Smith, Edna May Oliver

Director: George Cukor

Music: Herbert Stothart

Dances: Agnes deMille

Based on the play of the same title by William Shakespeare. This is the third cinema version produced. Against a background of magnificent Renaissance pageantry, this most ageless of love tales tells the story of two young lovers sacrificed in the cold, deadly rivalry of two warring Italian families.

A Photoplay Study Guide on Romeo and Juliet, prepared by M. J. Herzberg, is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, at fifteen cents per copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: excellent; C: mature."

Christian Century p1026 S 9 '36

"A play that the masses will understand and love, for the lines of the immortal bard strike into all hearts, and the interpretation given by such a sterling cast is perfect. . . It is a beautiful thing that embodies the history of true love down thru the centuries. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Artistically, the picture leaves nothing to be desired. . . Educationally, the picture is valuable in that it gives an authentic reproduction of the life and customs of the times. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Schools and colleges should see this Shakespearean screen-classic which is marked by authenticity. Mature-family. Excellent." DAR

"This cinema version of the undying tragedy of young love is a veritable feast, for the eye and the ear and even more for the mind and heart. . . Acting will satisfy all lovers of Shakespeare, those of the natural school and those who prefer the traditional interpretation exemplified by John Barrymore's Mercutio. Miss Shearer's Juliet will not soon be equalled. . . A production which employs many arts in their highest expression and one which indicates the great destiny of the motion picture. A film for the entire family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"It is safe to say that no cinema production has had so much reason for first honors as this vibrant and definitely satisfying presentation. . . [It is a] flawlessly entertaining picture for all ages to see and enjoy. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul J1 25 '36

"The cast give unflinching support in this almost perfect photoplay, in which the direction of George Cukor is strong and rarely intelligent and the photoplay exceedingly lovely and effective. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio merits unstinted praise for this distinguished and lavish production."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) J1 15 '36

"Family. Outstanding."

+ + Jt Estimates J1 15 '36

"Superlatives seem inadequate to describe the magnificence of the production and acting of this, the loveliest love-tale of all time. . . The endless amount of research which has gone into the production, the efficiency of the stage craft, masterly and understanding direction, rarely beautiful photography, authenticity of costume and manners of the day, all combine to make of 'Romeo and Juliet' not only tense and absorbing entertainment but will prove of invaluable benefit to students of Shakespeare for all time to come. Family."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 15 '36

"General patronage. Exquisite garden sequences, resembling a Whistler canvas, perfect reproduction of fifteenth century art, architecture and costume, and the finished performance of an outstanding cast all blend to make this a notable production."

+ + Nat Legion of Decency J1 2 '36

"A and Y: extraordinary; C: excellent."

Parents' M p70 S '36

"The movies have finally done it. They have made a screen version . . . that is not only excellent in itself, but a decided improvement over many a legitimate presentation. Shakespeare has become a bore to so many high school and college students (through no fault of his own) that it is a positive pleasure to report on what Irving Thalberg's M. G. M. has made out of 'Romeo and Juliet.' It is beautiful, it is authentic, it is moving, and when all is said and done, it is still Shakespeare."

+ Scholastic p17 S 19 '36

"The settings, the costumes, the acting and the music contribute to a portrayal of 'Romeo and Juliet' which excels all previous film versions."

+ + Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ROMEO AND JULIET—Continued

"An excellent production of the play, with an excellent continuity of plot and doing full justice to Shakespeare's text. Recommended for library use. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family-outstanding."

++ Wkly Guide Je 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"By every test of current Hollywood achievement, Metro's 'Romeo and Juliet' promises to prove one of the two or three most-discussed films of the year. . . Endlessly handsome is this pageant-like version, with its choice photography, its brilliant use of black, gray and white values as foundation for its authentic and bold design in costumes and settings. . . Miss Shearer's performance takes on variety and worth from her devotion to the story. . . She has the pliability to enter into every indicated mood of Juliet, within the scope of her own talents, never forcing the note beyond her abilities, speaking always out of the thought and emotion implied in the words. That Mr. Howard is not the best possible choice for Romeo will, in a measure, be canceled by his appeal for his following in whatever he undertakes." E. C. S. Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 25 '36

"To the uninitiated there will come an introduction to the art of the great English writer under circumstances that could hardly be more favorable. . . It is not a document of Hollywood imagination, but rather a literal translation. . . Virtually the entire cast stands impressively realistic amid beautiful art and architecture and poetry." J. P. Cunningham ++ Commonweal p146 S 4 '36

"I have seen what is probably the finest presentation ever accorded 'Romeo and Juliet'—the finest, perhaps, of the many fine things Irving Thalberg has to his credit as a film producer. . . The production reaches an artistic peak seldom seen on the screen. . . It is not box-office. Shakespeare is not box-office. His appeal is intellectual. The screen's appeal must be to the emotions. . . Of course, there is the possibility of the discovery of a director who can make Shakespeare human, who can handle the Bard's characters in a manner to make us weep over their misfortunes, something that George Cukor's direction comes a long way from accomplishing."

Hollywood Spec p7 Ag 1 '36

"When M-G-M announced that it was going to film 'Romeo and Juliet,' it seemed inevitable that the picture would shock Shakespeare students and bore movie audiences. As a matter of happy fact, it does neither. . . Here is a deeply touching, scholastically faithful account of Shakespeare's romance that manages to combine an academic sincerity with robust and poignant reality. Indeed, the outstanding quality of the picture is its balance. . . Despite a somewhat tepid beginning and an atrocious performance by John Barrymore, whose exorbitant ranting and face-making ruin the prize role of Mercutio, 'Romeo and Juliet' is grand entertainment easily adaptable to camera methods. Dominating the picture is Norma Shearer's exquisite portrait of Juliet. Nothing in her lengthy career has indicated that this actress could climb to the heights she scales in this. . . As Romeo, Leslie Howard is not the traditionally fiery youth, but his stylized acting easily captures both sympathy and respect." (4 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p35 Ag 29 '36

"Critics consider 'Romeo and Juliet' a triumph of motion-picture art, very 'possibly one of the finest pictures ever made in Hollywood.' . . The most acidulous [critics] admitted [Miss Shearer's] Juliet to be a triumph, garlanded Leslie Howard for a curbed, disciplined performance as Romeo. Also, they delighted in the Mercutio of John Barrymore. . . 'Romeo and Juliet' is Hollywood's best joust with Shakespeare to date. Skilled performances, knowing delivery of the famous lines, an acute sense that cheers would be grudging, jeers easy, combining to set alight the talents of all concerned."

+ + Lit Digest p20 Ag 15 '36

"On 'Romeo and Juliet' in the screen version I can only report that if you like the play as it stands and do not require something far and indefinable and somehow beyond, you will like it; if not, not. The picture is done well, but seems little more than that. . . Norma Shearer is rather unappetizingly made up, but neither bad nor good and (surprisingly enough) usually content with just being in there trying; Leslie Howard has grace, intelligence and a flair for lines but the sophomoric of Romeo are too much for him and there are times when that sensitive horse's face of his, wrapped in these disguises, must lead to unfortunate giggles. But as Mercutio, John Barrymore is the real study. I hardly know what to say about it, but am sure there will never be seen on the boards so much scenery-chewing and rubber-face trickery until the day they put 'Lear' into the Billy Minsky houses." Otis Ferguson

New Repub p104 S 2 '36

"At this stage in the development of Hollywood, and we imply no condescension, the production is the last word in what is to be expected—visual loveliness and intelligent, if not imaginative, comprehension of the text. Miss Shearer's Juliet would do honor to many a more established stage reputation. . . Compared to Reinhardt's 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' it shines like a jewel in the crown of night." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p21 S '36

"With rare good taste and surprising resourcefulness the screen has translated Shakespeare's 'Romeo and Juliet' into a distinguished and beautiful photoplay. The singing measures of the tragedy have been framed in sumptuous pageantry. The acting, always effective rises at times to genuine brilliance. . . You will find it the cinema's most successful and engaging obeisance to the Bard. . . Of all the splendid performances in the film, that of Mr. Barrymore is outstanding. . . Miss Shearer is remarkably good. She is inclined to coyness at the start, but from the balcony scene on she plays with simple intensity and profound assurance. In her most ambitious role she does the finest acting of her career. As Romeo, Leslie Howard is almost too restrained, although he conspires with Miss Shearer to make the lovers' meetings incidents of haunting beauty. . . The screen version of 'Romeo and Juliet' has flaws, but they are trivial when weighed against the beauty and compelling power of the production." Howard Barnes

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p11 Ag 21 '36

"Great and still alive as is the material of which the film is made, 'Romeo and Juliet' falls somewhere short of being a great picture. It is a good picture and a distinguished one, worthy, and one no intelligent moviegoer would care to miss. Something, however, has escaped from it in the transfer from printed page, from the stage to a motion picture screen. It does not wring the heart nor start tears of sweet sympathy or bitter resentment of the tragic, needless waste of youth and love and beauty. It remains simply interesting, solid and interesting, never a film to haunt quiet moments like Katharine Cornell's stage production of last year." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p11 Ag 21 '36

"Never before, in all its centuries, has the play received so handsome a production as that which was unveiled last night. . . All that the camera's scope, superb photography and opulent costuming could give it has been given to it here. Ornate but not garish, extravagant but in perfect taste, expansive but never overwhelming, the picture reflects great credit upon its producers and upon the screen as a whole. It is a dignified, sensitive and entirely admirable Shakespearean—not Hollywoodian—production. . . Considering the performances en masse, they are splendid. Here and there we can expect imperfections: Miss Shearer was not at her best in the balcony scene, Mr. Howard came a cropper in a few of his soliloquies—there must be some inherent antagonism between the screen and soliloquy—Conway Tearle was a bit on the declamatory side as the Prince of Verona. . . Mr. Howard is a pliant and graceful Romeo, overly weak perhaps in those moments when his hot blood should have boiled and he shared some of Mercutio's fiery spirit. But as a wooer and whisperer of Shakespeare's silver-sweet lines, he is as romantic as any lady on a balcony might desire. . . We reach the end of the film with this realization: the screen is a perfect medium for Shakespeare; whether Shakespeare is the perfect scenarist for the screen remains uncertain. Metro's film of 'Romeo and Juliet' is a lovely thing; if it should not be well received the fault will not be Hollywood's." F. S. Nugent

 ++ N Y Times p12 Ag 21 '36

"[It is] a handsome, dignified and reverent production. Possibly too reverent, as though upon advice of counsel it were deemed Master Will were still alive and might sue. . . Norma never looked lovelier. Indeed, she is so adequate I have no doubt her performance will go down in cinema history as THE Juliet of the screen. . . She is, I fear, too much for Mr. Howard's Romeo—a role, I am told, that was a natural. But Mr. Howard hath a lean and hungry look, methinks, and runs too much to age. His is a fine maturity, but too wise. . . I must also, in justice to my own reactions, disagree with the antic Mercutio of John Barrymore, who plays this suave and subtle rake, whose demise is so untimely, as a corseted Falstaff, sawing the air and mouthing his words. . . It is disconsoling that so fine an artist as Edna May Oliver should so misconstrue the nurse, giving the role a biting metallic quality more steel than iron. . . But these are flaws, if flaws they are, of no consequence to the lay observer, and the production in its entirety overcomes in its very honesty a quibble here or there. . . I can heartily commend it to an indulgent public." Douglas Gilbert
 + — N Y World-Telegram p7a Ag 21 '36

"The whole thing should have value as a reference film for students of the Elizabethan drama. Vulgarians may overlook the fine points and see in it somewhat the usual costume piece done on a rather bigger than average scale. . . The picture clearly belongs to Norma Shearer and Juliet. . . Actually for once, we see a Juliet who is a girl. . . Miss Shearer never seems desperate, and though her eyes well so richly with tears, seems hardly either terrified or tragic, never inelegantly intense. Her first encounter with Romeo is a delightful scene. . . Leslie Howard appears to be an intelligent, well-bred, and not quite well Romeo. He is possibly a little chilly in the rôle. . . It's in the later and tragic scenes that Mr. Howard is at his best; and there is a good deal to be said for a Romeo who isn't the violent gallant so much as the mournful romantic, which is the kind of Romeo Mr. Howard probably intended. . . I think the studio has been overwhelmed by Shakespeare . . . and [has] rendered the film somewhat cumbersome, removed the possibilities of something fresh and exciting. . . This is a good sensible presentation of 'Romeo and Juliet' but it won't be one you'll hark back to when you are discussing the movies as great art." John Mosher
 + New Yorker p48 Ag 22 '36

"Let there be no doubt about it—Shearer's Juliet can rub elbows with any modern interpretation of the damsel, from Cowl to Cornell. Whether she could have matched her predecessors behind the footlights is irrelevant. As the first Capulet of the films, she answers twice over the camera's peculiar dramatic demands. No one of the current crop of cinema satellites could have touched her performance with an 11-foot pole. . . The only weak spot in the ensemble, Howard enunciates beautifully and tiptoes about in the best of taste, but with all the passionate fervor of a potato."

News-Wk p28 Ag 22 '36

"It comes as something of a surprise to report that M-G-M's production of 'Romeo and Juliet' is all that it should be. . . The cast lists many names that probably have known 'Romeo and Juliet' only on the stage of the Danville High School Auditorium, but their recitation of immortal lines has had intelligent, and sometimes inspired direction. Norma Shearer . . . gives by far the best performance of her career, to create a character of tenderness, emotional stature, and confidence. Leslie Howard's Romeo is perhaps the most mature lover the screen has ever bothered with, his performance being something of a cross between Alan Squier and Hamlet. . . It is maybe more of a commendation to Shakespeare than to the current producers that this play has the authentic touch; but then it's quite a compliment to Mr. Thalberg and associates, too."

+ Stage p12 S '36

"'Romeo and Juliet' is certainly the best since the Jane Cowl-Rollo Peters version and quite probably the best ever shown. . . To intelligent cinemaddicts, it will be no great shock to learn that the best actors currently functioning in the U. S. act the play as well as it can be acted; that the most expensive sets ever used for Romeo and Juliet are by far the most realistic and hence the most satisfactory; and that the camera—which can see Juliet as Romeo saw her and vice versa—greatly facilitates the story. As for the play itself, which is by far the best part of the production, it remains what it has always been, the best version ever written of Hollywood's favorite theme, Boy Meets Girl."

++ Time p30 Ag 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"New heights in cinema artistry have been achieved in the picturization of Shakespeare's immortal love story. It is one of the most important contributions to the screen since the inception of talking pictures—a glorious triumph for Producer Irving G. Thalberg, Director George Cukor, the starring combination of Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard, and all others concerned in the making of the picture. The Universal appeal of its tragic romance and the unusual marquee strength of its cast are assurances that the picture will interest maximum patronage and from the standpoint of enlisting the attention and support of constructively influential public elements and raising the screen in everybody's esteem, it will prove one of the most effective releases in years."

++ Film Daily p2 Jl 16 '36

"Mr. Irving G. Thalberg, producer, showman and visionary . . . has evolved a picture that should be as timeless as the story it tells, gives him top billing in this magnificent effort. . . It is a picture born to be re-issued. It seems to this humble reviewer that, once seen, it must be seen again, so that the appreciation and satisfaction may be more complete. . . The wit and flow of language is something that everyone will want to enjoy again and again. The superb acting throughout of a cast of picture favorites is another thing that you'll want to view again and again—everything about the production will make you proud to be a movie fan. There isn't anyone we can think of who will not want to see this picture; who will not love it; who will not wonder why Shakespeare has been so long neglected or viewed with such pedantic awe." Helen Gwynn

+ + Hollywood Reporter p4 Jl 16 '36

"Its appeal unquestionably will be to every type of picture patronage above the juvenile audience level. For the erudite audience it offers that beauty of fine artistry which should be found wholly charming, while for that average segment of the screen public which ordinarily turns from anything which savors of the highly artistic, there has been concocted much which is stirring, and occasionally thrilling, action. The picture has been magnificently produced, the settings and effects complete and authentic in every respect, and appearing as masterpieces of the art of scenic creation... Showmanship should take into account that the picture, although based on a work of Shakespeare, with its implications, has nonetheless, in its film form, much to appeal to the average audience. Its basic ingredients are universal in their appeal, and that fact should be capitalized by the exhibitor."

ROMEO AND JULIET—Continued

+ + Motion Pict Daily p1 J1 16 '36

"The resources of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have been poured into the finest production of this type that has ever come from any studio. Including not only dollars, but star values, good sense, showmanship angles, the motion picture production of a great play, Metro producer Irving Thalberg produced a picture that has everything to make it a money show. What it will do at the box office depends entirely on how the individual showman gets behind it. It has everything."

+ + Phila Exhibitor p34 Ag 1 '36

"As an example of expert picture making, combining fine photography and excellent sound recording, with the use of technical devices to create and enhance emotional effect, it is a superlative effort... It is a film venture that required unusual courage to undertake... The fine lyric qualities have been retained, and from that point of view there is every reason to laud the production as successful... Whether the film will be the box office socko that the jewelled cast of actors would seemingly guarantee, is likely to be answered by the methods employed in its presentation to the public. It will have to be sold (as Shakespeare always has had to be sold) and the regimentation of the schools, clubs and literary organizations effected. Let there be no doubt as to its attendance possibilities. With full blast propaganda behind it, 'Romeo' will draw into theatres plenty of the casuals, and the star names will magnetize the regular fans. It will also attract a new crop of cinema patrons from the arty, cultural, literati and dramatic bunch."

+ + Variety p20 Ag 26 '36

"To sell the old showman of Avon, as well as the world's foremost poet, to the picture public as popular entertainment is, ironically but admittedly, a handicap to overcome. So far as the box office is concerned, Thalberg and his associates underwrote the enterprise for insured and smashing success with magic names: Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard, John Barrymore, Basil Rathbone and a superb cast of supporting players... Standing at the top of the players' roster, Norma Shearer also stands at the top in performance, her best. As Juliet she places herself on a par with the greatest current actresses of screen or stage... Leslie Howard chose to interpret Romeo with curbed emotion, but gives the role poetic grace, deep conviction and grave tenderness, a carefully considered performance, hauntingly tragic."

+ + Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 16 '36

S*SAN FRANCISCO. MGM 115min Je 26 '36

Players: Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt, Jessie Ralph, Ted Healy

Director: W. S. Van Dyke

This is the story of the memorable earthquake and fire of 1906 which destroyed a city that had gained the reputation of being the wickedest city on the Pacific Coast. Entwined in the history of that catastrophe is the story of an innocent young singer who obtains a job as entertainer in the Barbary Coast cabaret owned by a tough underworld gambler.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fine of kind; Y: probably good; C: not for them."

Christian Century p975 J1 8 '36

"Excellent-mature." DAR

"Interesting for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul J1 4 '36

"Spencer Tracy as the two-fisted priest is a surprisingly splendid role, while Jeanette MacDonald's voice in the operatic sequences redeems whatever may be disappointing in this moving treatment of California life. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The thrilling climax is most appropriate and ennobling. Adults: good; family: good; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The director had a difficult assignment and acquitted himself nobly. The photography is flawless and the settings excellent. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The cast is of high excellence, the singing of Miss MacDonald is noteworthy and a particularly sensitive performance by Spencer Tracy in the role of a priest deserves special mention. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Flawless in direction and casting and with an ethical value beyond a doubt, this picture is suitable for the entertainment of the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul J1 11 '36

"Mature. Outstanding."

+ + Jt Estimates J1 1 '36

"The outstanding performance comes from Spencer Tracy. If anything were needed to show that he is a great actor the evidence is supplied by this performance in a part that is difficult in itself and is made more difficult by reason of the rôles in which audiences have been accustomed to see him... Van Dyke has handled the immense and varied materials set before him as effectively as he handles a simple 'thriller'... All his skill is unequal to the final scenes of conversion. His handling of the 'moral' issue throughout the film seems to suggest that he was as conscious as many cinemagoers will be that it is hokum, and when he has to face it he deals with it as quickly as possible. Suitability: adults & adolescents. This film is definitely not for children."

Mo Film Bul p120 J1 '36

"Earthquakes may have been shown before in movies, but never with such thrilling reality as in this picture. It is really an immense spectacle, a great technical achievement. The film is excellent melodrama... It is all made believable and leaves a vivid though sensational impression of the period and the appalling holocaust from the ashes of which arose the new San Francisco. Adolescents, 12-16: strong but interesting; children, 8-12: too exciting."

+ + Motion Pict R J1 '36

"Pulsating with life, vigor and rare beauty, this stupendous production can but inspire admiration for the studio which produced it... In no way does the picture seem offensive to good taste, since the action, for the most part takes place on the Barbary Coast... Because of its realism and tenseness the picture is suitable only for adult audiences."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 1 '36

"Against a background of the legendary Barbary Coast, a vibrant mixture of drama, faith and love is portrayed with deep sincerity... The addition of Jeanette MacDonald's glorious voice makes the production outstanding. General patronage."

+ + Nat Legion of Decency J1 2 '36

"A: extraordinary; Y: good; C: too mature for many."

Parents' M p70 S '36

"It offers outstanding entertainment, reaching its breathtaking climax in the fire and earthquake disaster, which is a masterpiece of realism, with the terror, destruction and suffering incidental to it most convincing. Adults & young people."

++ Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

"Something in it to appeal to almost every taste, from song and dance to sermon and spectacle. Family-outstanding."

++ Wkly Guide Je 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is enough material in 'San Francisco' to outfit a couple of films. Some of it at first sight seems strangely assorted to be included within a single picture. . . . The songs . . . run through a repertory of dance hall ditties, selections from 'Faust' and 'Traviata,' and religious music such as 'Ave Maria' and 'Nearer My God To Thee.' All this may tend to sound more appalling than diverting. But it has been so ingeniously woven into a scenario . . . that the total effect is one of vigorous entertainment that holds its audience for a full two hours. . . . Excitements, romance, music and the spectacle of the earthquake are combined to make a film that seems destined for widespread popularity. It is more robust than fire-tempered entertainment. But vitality and gusto are praiseworthy qualities." E. F. Melvin

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 27 '36

"It is a combination of strong story, fine casting, some good singing and dancing. . . . An appeal to heart and mind, to ear and eye, to the aesthetic and the taste of the average man on the street—with a smash finish—these are the elements that make a genuine triumph of 'San Francisco.'" Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p30 S '36

"For adults with a taste for raw meat garnished with pastry, and a representation of the great fire for climax." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 27 '36

"Truly a great achievement. . . . 'San Francisco' is Jeanette MacDonald's picture. This talented and beautiful young woman amazes us with the wide range of her versatility. The most impressive dialogue in the production is that spoken by her eyes and interpreted by the camera, fleeting, sensitive impressions more illuminating than any words could be. . . . 'San Francisco' is a triumph for her. It is impossible to conceive of anyone else in the part. . . . 'San Francisco' is more than just an outstanding piece of motion picture entertainment. It is an illuminating lesson in screen writing, in adherence to the principle that the public is interested first in people, and that no matter how overwhelming a production is, it must not overwhelm the people for whom our sympathies have been enlisted. Also it is a lesson in how a picture should be directed. W. S. Van Dyke made a marvelous job of it."

++ Hollywood Spec p12 J1 4 '36

"This camera record of the quake and fire of 1906 is a technical masterpiece. Seldom has any great catastrophe been imitated with such savage reality, and because of these gripping sequences alone 'San Francisco' attains outstanding appeal. Unfortunately, the remainder of this somewhat emasculated portrait of America's one-time Sodom is hardly plausible or touching. The characters are just actors busily skipping through the traces of stock theatrical situations. . . . Despite the authentic settings and the efforts of the large and able cast, 'San Francisco's' only claim to greatness is in the remarkable earthquake sequences. They will shake you right out of your seat." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p28 Ag 8 '36

"There are two things which make 'San Francisco' well worth going miles to see: the singing of Jeanette MacDonald and the astounding ing earthquake sequences toward the end. I again doff a reverential derby to Hollywood technicians. . . . There is nothing notable in the general set-up. Again we have an utterly untrue and beglamoured picture of the Barbary Coast. Not for children." Don Herold

Life p29 S '36

"It is a vigorous, dramatic motion-picture moving steadily toward a climax without compare in the history of film-making."

++ Lit Digest p18 J1 11 '36

"An excellent technical job which reaffirms W. S. Van Dyke's title of Hollywood master."

++ Nation p110 J1 25 '36

"In this film everybody talks about sin. . . . Spencer Tracy in a dog-collar is well worth seeing; the combination is almost unbelievable but he pulls it off and is about the one really convincing thing in the whole picture. The story is uninspired. The result is worth seeing."

New Statesman & Nation p160 Ag 1 '36

"Far removed from the simple and often affecting religiosity of 'The Green Pastures' is this bromidic Legion of Decency conception of the San Francisco earthquake as an Act of God that brought the gospel to Clark Gable and rendered him fit mate for Jeanette MacDonald, the parson's daughter. The synthetic wonders of the earthquake scene are hardly compensation enough for the nausea Miss MacDonald's slyly erotic exaltations induce." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p22 Ag '36

"It is a cunningly screened pattern of cinematic hokum. While the narrative is not to be recommended for its dramatic or emotional integrity, W. S. Van Dyke has shot the works in his direction and the performers have given the material the over-emphasis necessary to make it a showy entertainment. . . . Mr. Gable, as Blackie, is the most successful member of the company. . . . Spencer Tracy is not so fortunate in the part of the holy father, but the role is not one that lends itself to the actor's particular talents. . . . As for Jeanette MacDonald, she is almost entirely nonplussed by the proceedings. When she is chanting rag-time ditties in a Barbary Coast cabaret she is engaging and believable, but there is not much to be said for her renditions of operatic fragments when she has been taken up by the dudes, and she scarcely ever achieves any power in her straight acting." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 Je 27 '36

"'San Francisco' of course is melodrama; and Mr. Van Dyke, what with 'The Thin Man' and a few others, has proved that he knows how to make them. The new film is less brittle, less insistent upon comic values than the others. The story of course is really almost artificial, a fact not at all important in a picture which can show so convincingly the destruction of a great city. . . . The picture is overlong. . . . With those earthquake scenes, with Miss MacDonald's golden voice and beauty, with the dimpled Mr. Gable in a he-man role, and with Mr. Tracy quietly humorous, quietly powerful as the understanding priest, 'San Francisco' doesn't have to worry much about length or anything else." Eileen Creelman

++ N Y Sun p12 Je 27 '36

"[The earthquake] is a shattering spectacle, one of the truly great cinematic illusions; a monstrous, hideous, thrilling débacle. . . . For so impressive and thoroughly entertaining a picture, only a round robin of appreciation would do justice to the many who shared in its making. . . . Mr. Tracy, late of 'Fury,' is heading surely toward an award for the finest performances of the year." F. S. Nugent

++ N Y Times p21 Je 27 '36

"There comes a time in every motion picture reviewer's life when he is afflicted by a sense of remorse for having squandered his stock of adjectives, for having abused by constant repetition the value and power of such words as 'great,' 'magnificent,' 'superb,' because when a truly notable film comes along

SAN FRANCISCO—Continued

he really has nothing left with which to describe it. Such a photoplay, for example, is the thrilling, graphic, grand entertainment known as 'San Francisco'. . . For, make no mistake about it, this 'San Francisco' is a great entertainment, a film that is grandly worth all the adjectives that should and undoubtedly will be bestowed upon it." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p14a Je 27 '36

"Both the Barbary Coast and the Earthquake are obviously rich with screen material; and in M-G-M's big new thriller, 'San Francisco,' they have been combined with the proper results. The quake is all that you could want, and it makes a fine show. . . The film is well supplied with music. . . all of which, I must add, I thought Miss MacDonald did very agreeably." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p45 Jl 4 '36

"'San Francisco' is one of the strangest conglomerations ever welded into a film. It has a lusty story of Barbary Coast days, a love triangle, cabaret dancing, opera, comedy, religion, and a moral, politics, and the 1906 earthquake. Despite these seeming incongruities, the picture holds together well—and the quake scenes are amazing. . . To bring to a conclusion all these diverse stories, overlong in spots, director W. S. Van Dyke uses the earthquake as a grand climax. Without the rest of the picture, this portion alone would be worth a steep admission price."

+ News-Wk p21 Jl 4 '36

"John Emerson and Bernie Hyman have put over an earthquake more terrifying and destructive than the combined wreckage of the four earthquakes I have experienced. . . Yes, and in so doing it all but drowned a grand and colorful story. . . To MGM: Yes, it is a lovely picture if you can get by with it." R. W.

Script p9 Je 27 '36

Stage p121 Ag '36

"[The] earthquake in the real Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer manner, lasts for 20 minutes on the screen and in all respects except casualties no doubt betters its original of 30 years ago. . . A shrewd compendium of romance and catastrophe, with emphasis on the latter skillfully administered by Director Woodbridge Strong Van Dyke, 'San Francisco' is an excellent example of Hollywood's ability to make yesterday's headline as exciting as today's."

Time p48 Jl 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The Clark Gable-Jeanette McDonald starrer emerges as a feature which justifies the $1,000,000 spent by Metro in telling the stirring dramatic tale of 'Frisco in the most glamorous period of its history. Family.'"

+ Box Office p27 Jl 4 '36

"In spite of the fact that top billing goes to Gable and Miss MacDonald, the opinion of the greater number of the critics, yours truly included, is that Spencer Tracy gives a performance which warrants for him equal billing with the other two. Tracy, as Father Mullin, is magnificent. . . As far as box-office appeal is concerned, there never was a picture with more, and if any one should doubt my statement, let him look at the records which the picture is piling up wherever shown. It is a 'natural' in every sense of the word."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p8 Jl 18 '36

"In blazing letters, 'San Francisco' should spell big money. Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy, operatic numbers that the whole world knows, old time variety bills, catchy tunes, fascinating characters on the far-famed Barbary Coast, robust romance, and for a smash climax and finish a spectacular picturization of the San Francisco earthquake and fire, which will not quickly be forgotten."

A load of entertainment like this can't miss. Miss MacDonald sings opera, church hymns and music hall tunes. It is the best work of her career and should give her the highest ranking among the motion picture opera stars."

+ Film Daily p21 Je 26 '36

"With all the elements of a box-office sensation—three great name draws, smashing spectacle that calls for burst after burst of applause, fine music and believable drama—'San Francisco' is due for outstanding business everywhere. There is no denying the excellence of its lavish production nor the amazing effects achieved by its technical crew. Nothing nearer perfection in staged effects has ever been attained on the screen than these scenes of the destruction of a city by earthquake and burning."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 23 '36

"Facts tending to establish 'San Francisco' as a great audience entertainment and a great showman's exploitation show are many. The quality of the motivating dramatic, romantic story is stirring and the sequences depicting the city's cataclysmic destruction are sensational. It is an impressive tribute to technical genius. . . The fury of the earthquake, [and its] technical excellence brought the preview audience to its feet. . . The film should provoke wide public attention."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Je 24 '36

"A rich, handsome production with strong draw names, a very competent supporting cast, this outdoes other Barbary Coast stories in magnificence. Estimate: box office."

+ Phila Exhibitor p69 Jl 1 '36

"An earthquake, noisy and terrifying and so realistic that the customers will be dodging the falling buildings and mentally hurdling the crevices that yawn in the studio streets, is 'San Francisco's' forte. That sequence, quite lengthy, alone is enough, but the picture has other assets and exhibitors can depend on it to do about everything but chop the tickets. . . Its story basically follows the outline traced previously by 'Frisco Kid' and 'Barbary Coast'. . . But all comparisons are lost by and will be forgotten in the pictorial catastrophe which breaks in just as the story reaches the peak of its emotional pitch, to set a new high in theatrical violence."

+ Variety p12 Jl 1 '36

"It will take an earthquake as devastating as the one depicted in 'San Francisco' to keep this picture from kicking over box office records. Picture is packed with selling angles. . . Production throughout is lavish with the quake sequence topping anything of this type done on the screen to date."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 23 '36

SATAN MET A LADY. Warner 74min Ag 8 '36

Players: Bette Davis. Warren William. Alison Skipworth. Arthur Treacher. Winifred Shaw. Marie Wilson

Director: William Dieterle

Based on the novel Maltese Falcon by Dashiell Hammett. The film was previously known as Hard Luck Dame. In 1931 a film called Maltese Falcon based on the novel was released.

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film under title of Hard Luck Dame

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: unwholesome; C: no."

Christian Century p1026 S 9 '36

"[It is] a most entertaining picture. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Jl 23 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

"[It is] a confused murder mystery. Adults."
— + Nat Legion of Decency J1 30 '36

"The production is hampered by a jerky and incoherent plot and the efforts of an expert cast are utterly wasted. Adults & young people."
— Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 5 '36

"A poor rewrite of 'The Maltese Falcon' that just stops short of a travesty on itself."
— New Theatre p22 S '36

"The mad-hatter touch of 'Satan Met A Lady' almost reduces the picture to inanity, and the current vogue among film producers to outdo one another in smart detective fiction may soon reduce audiences if the new Strand offering, with its pseudo wit and artificial situations, is an example of entertainment. . . The strained humor and self-conscious sophistication becomes as exhausting as the effort to follow the addled plot. Nor does Mr. Williams's smirking and over-studied performance increase one's comfort, while Miss Davis walks through her lines languidly." Marguerite Tazelaar
— N Y Herald Tribune p10 J1 23 '36

"Had Bette Davis walked out on Warner Brothers on reading the script of 'Satan Met A Lady,' her present policy might be at least understandable. She might even have rated sympathy from the general public, from the studio itself. As it is, the Strand feature appears to be, as one spectator expressed it—the Warners' vengeance on Bette Davis." Eileen Creelman
— N Y Sun p22 J1 23 '36

"If Bette Davis had not effectually espoused her own cause against the Warners recently by quitting her job, the Federal Government eventually would have had to step in and do something about her. After viewing 'Satan Met A Lady,' all thinking people must acknowledge that a 'Bette Davis Reclamation Project' (BDRP) to prevent the waste of this gifted lady's talents would not be a too-drastic addition to our various programs for the conservation of natural resources. A cynical farce of elaborate and sustained cheapness, it causes still other intelligent actors and actresses—including Warren William, Arthur Treacher and Alison Skipworth—to behave like numskulls, and deserves to be quoted as a classic of dullness in future press notices." B. R. C.
— N Y Times p24 J1 23 '36

"The important thing about 'Satan Met A Lady' is not so much what happened as a result of the meeting mentioned in the title but rather what happened to a swell Dashiell Hammett novel—'The Maltese Falcon'—when it met a Hollywood scenario writer who evidently had seen all of the cinema's attempts to mix banter with homicide since 'The Thin Man.' The results of this impact, it must be mentioned at once, are pretty distressing—indeed, terrible. Hollywood has committed many major crimes when transferring plays and books to the screen, but seldom has it been guilty of such a misdemeanor as in this instance. . . Although Miss Davis' performance in 'Of Human Bondage' may have won her a delayed Academy prize for acting, her work as the blond killer will not, I fear, bring her any further awards. As for Mr. William—well, let's drop the whole matter." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p10 J1 23 '36

"The 1936 version is vastly inferior to the 1931 version [of the film]. 'Satan Met A Lady' is a little turkey, though, if ever I saw one. For one thing, it suffers from a severe case of 'Thin Man' trouble—unbearably cute writing, directing, and acting. . . There's no use going into the thing any further, except to serve notice on Warner Brothers that if they produce 'The Maltese Falcon' a third time, under a third name, I and all my friends will be very much annoyed." Russell Maloney

— New Yorker p39 Ag 1 '36

"'The Thin Man' set a new style in detective pictures. . . 'Satan Met A Lady' is the thinnest imitation of it so far recorded, remarkable chiefly because Dashiell Hammett was author of the stories from which both pictures were adapted. A frayed tassel from Hollywood's lunatic fringe, it includes performances by Warren William as a ferociously whimsical detective and Bette Davis, last year's Academy Award winner, in the trifling role of a jewel thief."
— Time p29 Ag 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Even though the story is by the author of 'The Thin Man' this programmer fails to compare favorably with the former in entertainment value. Adults."
— + Box Office p29 Ag 1 '36

"This [is a] fairly amusing production. Getting off to a rather confused start and frequently deviating from its main course, the yarn holds interest chiefly by the work of a good cast, which for the most part is obliged to perform more or less goofy roles."
+ — Film Daily p7 J1 23 '36

"An absurd travesty murder mystery that has no rhyme or reason except to garner laughs, which it does at the expense of any shred of plausibility or clarity. Most of the players are involved in roles that multiply the general effect of insanity on the loose. . . The sole entertainment value of the picture is in its comedy lines, which are sometimes forced, occasionally lost in their delivery, but often genuinely comic. This is, however, not enough to save the opus from quick obscurity."
— + Hollywood Reporter p3 J1 30 '36

"[It is] a dashing, frivolous, almost amazing mystery film, with a wild sort of comedy predominating. It is a picture which, in all probability, will be called utterly insane by some persons, and completely entertaining by others. It would seem that halfway opinions by audiences regarding the film are impossible."
Motion Pict Daily p4 J1 21 '36

"Weirdly amusing, that class may only appreciate. Strictly metropolitan stuff for civilized, cynical, for some the comedy will be as mysterious as the mystery. Estimate: mild program."
— + Phila Exhibitor p38 Ag 1 '36

"This is an inferior remake of 'The Maltese Falcon.' . . Chances are an outright revision might have worked out better. . . Where the detective of 'Maltese Falcon' and his activities were natural and amusing, he and his satiric crime detection are now forced and unnatural. . . William tries hard to be gay as the eccentric private cop and his performance is all that keeps the picture moving in many lagging moments."
— + Variety p14 J1 29 '36

"[It] will have to do plenty to eke out a box office existence. It's nonsensical comedy, but something misses fire in dialog, action and direction. . . All players, including leads work enthusiastically, but at the same time appear to be under a handicap."
— Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 30 '36

SECOND WIFE. RKO 60min Ag 21 '36

Players: Walter Abel. Gertrude Michael. Eric Rhodes

Director: Edward Killly

Based on a play All the King's Men by Fulton Oursler. This is a remake of an earlier film

SECOND WIFE—Continued

which starred Conrad Nagel. "Abel, [the father of] a young son, marries Miss Michael and fearing the youngster will not understand, sends him away to school in Switzerland. She is about to have a child when word comes of the boy's illness, and he, without thinking of his wife, goes to his son's bedside." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Altho lacking in subtleness and variety, the direction is adequate and the photography interesting. Socially, it is constructive in that love and fairness win over selfishness and jealousy; technically, it is a great improvement over the earlier version of the same picture." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Its vindication is intelligently handled and dignified by the wife's lack of pettiness when she might still continue to take advantage of the situation. It is a particularly well chosen cast. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Adults." DAR

"An appealing social drama ably handled by an excellent cast under skilled direction. Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 22 '36

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 10 '36

Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 13 '36

"Family-mature."

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Handled calmly and without melodramatic flourishes, it treats a frequent problem sympathetically if not too profoundly."

+ — Wkly Guide Ag 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Domestic drama which in long scenes of dull talk ponders the tribulations of the second wife in her efforts to take up domestic duties under the shadow of the first spouse."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"The problems that confront the young bride of a widower with a child are set forth in listless fashion. . . . Although the new film is a ponderous adaptation of 'All the King's Men' it does manage to build sympathy for the optimistic bride. . . . The principal rôles are capably performed by Gertrude Michael and Walter Abel." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 29 '36

"[It] is related in a tedious manner. . . . Although the characters are identifiable as types and the problem which almost ruins their marriage is a logical one, the film has an irritating quality about it for the simple reason that instead of presenting its drama in a forthright and entertaining manner it does so ponderously and in a deliberate assault on the heart strings." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p31 S 2 '36

"On the sentimental side, but better than average."

+ — News-Wk p29 Ag 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Mildly entertaining domestic drama, with cast doing its best against story odds."

+ — Film Daily p6 Ag 14 '36

"Meant to be a serious study of the step-mother question, this picture is so bad that the preview audience tittered, hissed, roared and applauded in derision throughout. The basic idea is sound dramatic material but its handling in almost all departments is so ineffective that it will scarcely get by as a support number in the lesser neighborhoods. . . . [It] is filled with trite situations and unbelievably dull platitudes. And what merits of exposition the story has are lost in the draggy and inept direction of Edward Killy."

— — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 31 '36

"A more or less routine effort . . . this picture is satisfactory entertainment of the type which usually has its greatest appeal to the feminine contingent. . . . The selling should concentrate on the thematic material and be designed to attract women specifically."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p7 Ag 4 '36

"This is drama with few highlights. . . . With few surprises, program all the way, it shapes up as usual-run-of-the-mill fare. Estimate: fair program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p36 Ag 15 '36

"Domestic piece enacted by a good cast, but retarded through flat story telling and unreel at a sluggish pace. Very little punch to marital snags as jelled into film, with players themselves much too chic and sophisticated for the trite motivations and no lustre to the names for marquee spread. For the duals."

— — Variety p17 Ag 19 '36

SECRET AGENT. Gaumont British 85min Je 15 '36

Players: Peter Lorre. Madeleine Carroll.
Robert Young. John Gielgud

Director: Alfred Hitchcock

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul Jl 18 '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 15 '36

"A and Y: fair spy drama; C: not recommended."

Parents' M p48 Ag '36

"A production which is somewhat marred by jerkiness in development and an occasional lack of smoothness in the screen narrative has, nevertheless, great merit as entertainment because of a cleverly contrived plot, developed with flashes of brilliant direction, in an atmosphere of mounting terror and excitement. Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

"Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays."

+ + Wkly Guide Jl 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The film is not so successful as the roster of distinguished names associated with its production seems to guarantee. It appears to drag when it should move swiftly. Its changes of mood tend to be disconcerting. The acting in general and the presence of Mr. Gielgud in particular are its most appealing attributes."

E. F. Melvin

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Jl 11 '36

"'The Secret Agent' ought to be a better picture than it is. . . . Alfred Hitchcock, who directed 'The 39 Steps' also made 'The Secret Agent,' and there is a great similarity about his treatment and direction in these two." Laura Elston

+ — Canadian M p30 S '36

"Alfred Hitchcock . . . has failed in this instance to sustain cumulative interest in a complicated plot interspersed with repellent touches."

— Christian Science Monitor p13 JI 11 '36

"There is no reason why the English should not eventually lead the world in the motion picture manufacturing business. . . They are still frequently amateurish in the technique of the cinema. . . The train wreck is an instance of English technical childishness—the whole train is evidently from Woolworth's. Not for children." Don Herold

Life p26 Ag '36

"'Secret Agent' is in the nature of a keen disappointment. At no point during its hamstrung and confused progress does it rise above pot-boiler status. Peter Lorre manages an amusing performance on the Grand Guignol side, but John Gielgud, probably England's most famous actor today, turns in a dime a dozen job. When you've played Shakespeare all season it must be difficult to summon any enthusiasm for the poor stuff that these Maugham stories provide."

— New Theatre p12 JI '36

"With a formula set of incidents Alfred Hitchcock has managed to evolve a cheating-cheaters show that is genuinely exciting. . . The story builds to a train-wreck finale that is stirring in itself. But one waits expectantly for the nerve-shattering second explosion that doesn't occur. Instead, there is a faint echo of the conventional kiss as boy gets girl . . . and the audience gets the air and disappointment. . . I found the picture well worth while, despite its lymphatic ending." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p11 JI 25 '36

"'Secret Agent' was not the best of Hitchcock." Allistair Cooke

+ — Sight & Sound p26 Summer '36

"We expect great things of Alfred Hitchcock. He, like Frank Capra, has a way of making a picture his own. . . In 'Secret Agent' he went a little too far in the application of his rules. His effects are conscious. They impede the narrative until little is left but dialogue. His characters are so completely objective that they lack conviction. 'Secret Agent' is cold and lifeless compared to either of the earlier films—['The Man Who Knew Too Much' and 'The Thirty-Nine Steps.']"

— + Stage p9 JI '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Comparable to the finest American-made films, especially as regards cast, photography and production values, this spy drama is certain to satisfy average audiences everywhere."

+ — Box Office p27 JI 4 '36

IL SERPENTE A SONAGLI. Nuovo Mondo
70min Ag 16 '36

Players: Nino Besozzi. Andreina Pagnani.
Lilla Brignone. Vanna Pegna

Director: Raffaello Materazzo

Italian dialogue film, with English sub-titles, made in Rome and known also as The Serpent's Fang and The Rattlesnake. "The plot tells how a teacher, crabbed and tormented by her ill-adjustment to her profession and fear that her secret love affair will be discovered by the head matron, is mysteriously poisoned. Clues point to various pupils, for she is generally hated, as well as to others. A good-looking police inspector takes charge of the case, and, in an adroit fashion, solves it, finally." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"While the new and inappropriately called 'Serpent's Fang' is not the brilliant picture it might have been, it is a long step ahead of the mediocrities Italy has been exporting to its little picture house, the Cine-Roma, during the last few months. . . The piece is disappointing, reminding one, perhaps subconsciously of how sensitive and absorbing that other, German, story ['Maedchen in Uniform'] was." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ag 20 '36

"[It] is a mystery melodrama that might have come from Hollywood instead of Rome. The actors are young and handsome, the pace stepped up far faster than most continental product, and the comedy relief always more important than sentiment. For all that, [it] stands comparison only with California's minor films. The picture's chief lack lies in the plot itself, with the handling of suspense and climax." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun Ag 18 '36

"A happy combination of mystery and humor, which moves fast and holds the interest right up to the unexpected dénouement in the last reel, has arrived from Italy. . . The scenes in and around the school and its grounds are delightful. Technically the whole film is excellent." H. T. S.

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Very enjoyable and fast-moving combination of murder mystery and comedy, with a surprise finish, well acted and directed."

+ — Film Daily p16 Ag 18 '36

"A finely executed production from Italian studios, this picture will be good entertainment for audiences who understand the language. A fast tempo creates exciting atmosphere and carries the story forward rapidly without a dull sequence."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p12 Ag 20 '36

"[It is] a fairly good murder mystery. . . Direction is pretty even and the performances satisfactory. A virtue of the work of the cast members is the restraint shown. [There is] much less over-acting to be found in this foreign-made than in most of them."

+ — Variety p17 Ag 19 '36

SEVEN BRAVE MEN. Amkino 91min Je 14 '36

Players: N. Bogolybov. T. Makarova. I. Novoseltzev

Director: S. Gerasimov

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It boasts good performances and a pervading wholesomeness that is a relief from the sultry air of the usual Hollywood product, but in the main it is too confused and tentative, both in direction and purpose, to reach the high level set by the Soviet film masters."

— + New Theatre p29 JI '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Arctic expedition drama with some thrilling action of the elemental variety helped by good photography and appropriate acting."

+ — Film Daily p12 Je 18 '36

"Lenfilm failed to cash in on a swell opportunity in America by allowing this adventure film to run about 30 minutes overboard. Judicious cutting, added to the fact that it's a foreign import, might have put 'Seven Brave Men' in the money class."

Variety p45 Je 24 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SEVEN SINNERS. Gaumont British 70min Ag 15 '36

Players. Edmund Lowe. Constance Cummings. Thomy Bourdelle. Henry Oscar

Director: Albert de Courville

Dialogue film produced in England. Based on the play, The Wrecker, by Arnold Ridley and Bernard Merivale. This is a remake of a silent film called The Wrecker. When Lowe, an American detective discovers a dead man in his hotel room at Nice, he determines to track the guilty person. With the help of an English girl he runs into a series of accidents and narrow escapes which take them to England.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The direction is deft, smooth and competent, the photography is excellent and thrilling, exciting, suspense is maintained to the very end. Mature."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 2 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 27 '36

"A, Y and C: excellent detective drama." Parents' M p31 S '36

"The production moves very rapidly, is intensely exciting, superbly acted and introduces many humorous incidents. The direction is deft, with a fine distinction in tempo for the different exigencies of the story. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"A good detective plot, with the mystery well sustained, though the effort to inject 'Thin Mannish' comedy is not always successful. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"To date, the average English film has been far below the average American in technique, story and acting. . . 'Seven Sinners' is an English film remarkable in that it has no cluster of stars, no midnight preview, no big press campaign, but is a competent, sparkling, fast-moving, well directed and well acted film. . . 'Seven Sinners' makes no film history, but is worth seeing."

+ New Statesman & Nation p192 Ag 8 '36

"The British cinema continues to demonstrate its flair for melodrama in 'Seven Sinners.' Borrowing heavily from what must be called the Alfred Hitchcock technique, the film spins out a fast-paced and exciting yarn of intrigue and violence. . . It is a smart and diverting variation on an excellent formula. . . Although in no sense an important production, 'Seven Sinners' is a skillfully constructed and vastly entertaining screen thriller." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 22 '36

"The Roxy is billing . . . 'Seven Sinners' as the successor to 'The Thirty-Nine Steps.' This is a bit on the strong side. . . But there is an unmistakable resemblance to the Hitchcock melodrama in the picture's rapid direction, urbanity and cleverness. . . On its own merits it is a crisp, humorous and deftly turned murder mystery. If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, Alfred Hitchcock has been sincerely flattered by 'Seven Sinners.'" F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 22 '36

"The Roxy has been an admirable rendezvous for the mystery films the British, wisely, keep feeding us, but the house lets down with 'Seven Sinners,' its current [mystery], which is a lot of palaver about some nice people who go around wrecking trains. . . Mr. Lowe portrays the detective with a minimum of mugging. . . Poor Miss Cummings has nothing to do but look O. K., which must pall upon her, too." Douglas Gilbert

— + N Y World-Telegram p13 Ag 24 '36

"Wrecking of trains is a pastime with which the camera is fitted to deal, and by the end of this film no one should be in any doubt upon that point. The picture, however would have been much less successful if it were not for the dialogue. All the way through this is light and amusing, and maintaining this level the improbabilities of the story are kept at arm's length." Mark Forrest

+ Sat R p192 Ag 8 '36

Reviewed by Herb Sterne
Script p10 S 12 '36

"Like Hitchcock, de Courville injects a predominant note of humor in his film; and like Hitchcock, he attains his effects by special photographic tricks, deftly juxtaposing horror and humor, tragedy and amusement. . . Both Constance Cummings and Edmund Lowe are likable and lively, and add an American gusto to an otherwise all-English production."

Stage p121 Ag '36

"'Seven Sinners' is a frank attempt to duplicate the success of last year's outstandingly good Gaumont British comic-melodrama 'The Thirty-Nine Steps.' . . Pursuing a bland course through all this excitement, Detectives Harwood and Fenton eventually dig through the intrigues of a bogus reform group, pin the crimes on the least suspectable person in a final melee, which, for those cinemaddicts who want their mysteries solved with explicit completeness, is about the only unsatisfying thing in the picture."

Time p23 Ag 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Without a doubt the fastest-moving picture ever to issue from an English studio, this comedy-drama has the additional advantages of sparkling dialogue, several hair-breadth escapes and crack performances by Edmund Lowe and Constance Cummings."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 22 '36

"Gaumont-British have turned out one of the crispest and most sparkling murder mysteries ever screened, and 'Seven Sinners' has that same rare atmosphere that made 'The Thin Man' so delightful."

+ Film Daily p6 Jl 31 '36

"[It] succeeded in sustaining audience interest in spite of a badly knit story. A good deal of humorous dialogue, almost entirely irrelevant to the main thread, is cleverly introduced and forms a distinctly welcome relief from the generally pervading drama. Another highlight of the production is a series of train smashes, breath-takingly realistic and comparing with anything of the type yet seen on the screen. Edmund Lowe . . . gives an eminently satisfying performance. Constance Cummings, on the other hand, has an unconvincing role which could have been interpreted by any young feminine player possessed of a modicum of ability. . . The picture has a definite appeal for the not too discriminating masses."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p6 Jl 11 '36

"Real action drama with three sensational train wrecks, masterfully directed by Albert de Courville and featuring Edmund Lowe and Constance Cummings, with an excellent supporting cast. Suspense, comedy and action are combined to make satisfactory entertainment to lovers of thrillers. . . [It is] an all-round entertaining, amusing and exciting picture."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Jl 6 '36

"This is a weirdly suspenseful drama in the '39 Steps' tradition. Estimate: fair melodrama."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p33 Ag 15 '36

"This British effort at a detective story in the light, flippant manner has most of the correct trimmings, but the story doesn't bear up under the strain. For American business it rests its case on Edmund Lowe and Constance Cummings, and that's not sufficient.

Lowe's lighthearted flatfoot role is nicely worded and that will be 'Seven Sinners's' biggest asset on this side. On the other side of the ledger is the case which he solves; it's too heavy to blend well with a basically comic characterization. . . On production and technical work, the picture is big time. But still it's only dual fodder for over here."

— + Variety p20 Ag 26 '36

THE SHADOW. Globe 60min

Players: Henry Kendall. Elizabeth Allan. Jeanne Stuart

Director: George Cooper

Filed in England. Based on the novel of the same title by Donald Stuart. A mystery story with a Scotland Yard background.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one is relegated to the secondary spots. The story is weak and lacks most of the essentials that make up successful pictures of this type. Its cast struggles along with situations that are never well-voiced, while the direction is of the spotty variety."

— Film Daily p4 Je 27 '36

"This has a reasonably good element of mystery, but for [the U.S.] market is seriously handicapped by the heavily accented speech, some of which is almost unintelligible. . . In general it is only average mystery."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Je 27 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."

Phila Exhibitor p30 Jl 15 '36

"Wordy Scotland Yard murder mystery done by English cast in slipshod manner. Aside from feeble marquee possibilities (Elizabeth Allan, alone worthy of plugging), this film is too mediocre to please [patrons] even when inside. Looks headed for meager returns on secondary double-program niche."

— Variety p25 Jl 1 '36

(s) SHAKE MR. SHAKESPEARE. Vitaphone 20min Ag 22 '36

Players: Carolyn Marsh. Allen Mann

Director: Roy Mack

When a film producer orders an assistant to read all of Shakespeare's plays in one night and to report on them in the morning, the assistant has a nightmare in which Cleopatra, Romeo, and Marc Anthony play each other's roles with Hollywood modern touches.

Trade Paper Reviews

"A satire with ultra-modern trimmings on some of Shakespeare's works, with everything but the kitchen sink thrown in to make it 'different,' this not only will go over the heads of most audiences but it contains little real entertainment. . . Cleopatra, Macbeth, Henry VIII, Romeo and Juliet, Puck and others 'go Hollywood,' with unsensational results."

— Box Office p27 Jl 25 '36

"A pretentious two-reeler, done with a fantastic touch and with a comedy slant throughout."

Film Daily p8 Jl 3 '36

"At its best it is mildly entertaining."

— + Motion Pict Daily p8 Jl 6 '36

SHAKEDOWN. Columbia 57min Jl 17 '36

Players: Lew Ayres. Joan Perry. Thurston Hall

Director: David Selman

When an heiress falls in love with a poor man, her father offers him an important job in his company. The young man refuses but does accept a job as messenger-boy. The girl agrees to a kidnapping hoax, thinking it will help the young man. When the hoax turns out to be a real kidnapping, the messenger rescues her.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y: hardly; C: no."

Christian Century p1175 S 2 '36

"[It is] a fast-moving, exciting melodrama. Smooth direction, a capable cast, an interesting story and maintenance of suspense to the end. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 5 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 6 '36

"Smooth, exciting entertainment. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Jl 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 29 '36

"As a footnote on minor operations it is our duty to report that 'Shakedown' [is] a fast, scarcely furious, but pleasantly unpretentious contribution from Columbia Pictures. [It is] a dead certainty for second spot on a double-feature bill." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '36

"Mr. Ayres' presentation of Bob is about as real as a wire-photo, which is no censure at all, for the picture is a sticky little yarn about as profound as an engraving on a pin. Joan Perry's Edith Stuart is a pouty little sweetie and an occasional nuisance, which probably isn't her fault, either. . . 'Shakedown' is a 'program' picture—a dubious term I was never able to figure. It is variously defined as routine tripe for the grinds, and not to be taken too seriously, but you could never get Columbia, who produced this one, or any of the studios to admit it." Douglas Gilbert

— N Y World-Telegram p15a Ag 18 '36

"Its familiar ingredients are badly jumbled."

— Time p42 Jl 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] a mediocre mystery. Family."

— + Box Office p29 Ag 1 '36

"[It is a] fairly entertaining little program picture with story in action tempo okay for popular houses."

+ — Film Daily p16 Ag 18 '36

"This is a fast-moving unpretentious formula melodrama of the shakedown racket. Well acted and briskly directed it is engaging entertainment that will keep non-discriminating audiences at close attention and shapes up as good support material for popular houses."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 26 '36

"A melodramatic effort of the shakedown racket, this should be reasonably satisfying and provide fair entertainment. The action is well paced and incidents are logically built up."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p15 Ag 18 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."

Phila Exhibitor p34 Ag 1 '36

"This is a typical semi-gangster film, full of time-worn angles, a make-believe snatch and eventually a murder mystery. It smacks strongly of hurried preparation and shows it in execution. The picture obviously is intended for secondary feature spotting which is where it belongs. Must depend entirely on Lew Ayres as box office draft."

SHAKEDOWN—Continued

— Variety p16 Ag 19 '36

"Evidently aimed at dual bills, Columbia's 'Shakedown' falls exactly in lap of the double spots, but on the under side. It's well written, nicely directed, acted and produced, but it's too formula-built to take the big hurdles. It's nice entertainment for the family and in the not-too-discreet spots will have the family on the seats' edges."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 6 '36

SHE-DEVIL ISLAND. Grand national 64min
Je 1 '36

Players: Native cast

Director: Rafael Sevilla

Dialogue film made on a Mexican island. "A young Spaniard leaves his island home and his fishing to seek a fortune in pearls." (Nat Ed of R M)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Picturesque scenery is the only redeeming feature of the film. Adults."

— + Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

"An interesting picture. . . Excellent photography of the sea, interesting native dancing and good singing. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide My 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Houses that go in for exploitation specials will find something up their alley in this attraction. . . There is a good deal of action and suspense, plus colorful background and good photography, and the novelty of the production recommends it as a bit of something off the beaten track."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 29 '36

"From Mexico has come this melodrama, a picture that can stand big exploitation. . . The picture is a credit to Mexican production, with some fine singing, fiesta scenes, one torrid dance number, beautiful photography. Some mediocre photography bits, some difficulty in the dialogue are found, but these are overshadowed by the picture's good points."

+ Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

SING, BABY, SING. 20th century-Fox 90min
Ag 21 '36

Players: Alice Faye. Adolphe Menjou. Gregory Ratoff. Ted Healy. Patsy Kelly. Michael Whalen

Director: Sidney Lanfield

Music and lyrics: Lew Pollock. Jack Yellen

Music director: Louis Silvers

"Story has to do with Miss Faye, a night club singer whose manager, Ratoff, tries to get her fame through having her mixed up with Menjou, a drunken actor from Hollywood in New York on a vacation. Affair gets out of control when Menjou's manager drags him back to Hollywood. Then starts a train-and-plane chase across the continent with Miss Faye asking for an apology." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: stupid; Y: not good; C: no."

Christian Century p1026 S 9 '36

"Although well-directed and well-played, there is little opportunity for outstanding individual characterizations. Adults: matter of taste; family, 14-18, 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"An hilarious, musical farce with excellent specialty numbers and a story with more originality in treatment than usual in this type—if a bit satirical. . . Filled with nonsensical humor, clever dialogue, and with an excellent cast this is highly amusing, sophisticated entertainment. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre-mature." DAR

"The light plot serves to string together some mad vaudeville, clever dancing and rather dreary 'crooning.' Good photography and occasional bits of acceptable comedy do not prevent this very alcoholic film from being tiresome. Adults, if any." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 15 '36

"The photography is especially fine and high praise goes to the director for the clever handling of the rapid-fire [pace] and the many ludicrous situations. The entire cast is an able one; the comedians contributing much to the general hilarity of the picture. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Jl 28 '36

Jt Estimates Ag 1 '36

"Despite screen protest to the contrary, here we have frivolous farce strongly reminiscent of a much publicized cross-country chase which becomes pleasant light entertainment. . . The entire cast give good account of themselves and much hilarity is provided by the Ritz Brothers, Patsy Kelly and Ted Healy. However the good taste of the producing studio is questioned for making the picture at this time."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 5 '36

"An amusing comedy of a Hollywood star. Excellent satire, good dialogue, and superb comedy by the Ritz Brothers. It is regrettable that one vulgar remark should prevent this otherwise delightful picture from being placed in the A-1 classification. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 20 '36

"Very funny comedy about a middle-aged screen Romeo who becomes involved with a young singer. . . Amusing dialogue, good singing and dancing."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Sing, Baby, Sing' which Twentieth Century-Fox insists is not based on a recent headline romance—is a wildly hilarious farce that gallops along its musical course to the loud accompaniment of incessant laughter. A boisterous, completely insane show, the picture tells its story with a breathless gusto that includes no feeling or sentiment. But for swiftly moving entertainment in sarcastic mood this comes as an outstanding treat. . . 'Sing, Baby, Sing' gets its silliest moments from the Ritz Brothers, a knockabout trio whose dazzling debut marks them for either a lunatic asylum or great acclaim." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 S 12 '36

"Motion-picture musical comedies, as a result of overproduction have become about as novel as a pound of butter. Shattering the vague ennui which most of them arouse, is 'Sing, Baby, Sing,' a fleet lunacy set to music and frivolity. It begins at high tempo, winds up like a siren to a shrill climax, and not in any foot of its length does it lag perceptibly. . . [It] presents to the screen a maniacal trio called the Ritz brothers. If they accomplish nothing else, these superb loons will force the celebrated Marx Brothers to sharpen their wits and routines. . . The surprise of the film is Adolphe Menjou, who long ago added sly comedy to his knapsack of tricks. Slyness melts away in 'Sing, Baby Sing,' and he is seen as a complete Shakespearean ham actor, pompous, ridiculous and exceedingly funny."

+ Lit Digest p24 Ag 22 '36

"A brilliantly amusing caricature of a film actor by Adolphe Menjou lends comic distinction to a medley of lively vaudeville turns in 'Sing, Baby, Sing.' . . [Menjou] is superbly funny. It takes subtle restraint and knowing assurance to realize so mad a satire. Mr. Menjou has brought both qualities to the role. . . Although the Ritz Brothers, with their mad and funny routines, the irrepressible Miss Kelly and Mr. Healy at his most triumphant do the principal work in supplementing Mr. Menjou's antics, the whole company is splendid. Michael Whalen is excellent as the reporter." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 S 12 '36

"Darryl F. Zanuck and Twentieth Century-Fox have contrived a gay, irresponsible medley which is at least as good as the average program picture and finds itself in the upper brackets now and then." P. T.

N Y Sun p19 S 12 '36

"'Sing, Baby, Sing,' [is] one of the most amusing pictures shown at the Roxy this year. . . Darryl Zanuck's nimble company has developed it with keen relish for its absurdities and has entrusted its performance to a group of assorted comedians, clowns and madcaps. . . Mr. Menjou is boisterously funny." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p20 S 12 '36

"Here it is at the Roxy, a musical film so tuneful, fast and amusing that it immediately goes on the top of your list of photoplays that must be seen. . . Adolphe Menjou is superb as Farraday, and his antics while recuperating from a hangover in a hospital will keep you in stitches. Also of great value in making your sides ache from laughter are Gregory Ratoff and Ted Healy. Unless you want to cheat yourself out of some swell fun don't miss the Roxy this week." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p8a S 12 '36

"An excellent example of good musical farce. This has a honey of a central idea (Darryl Zanuck certainly gets his nickel's worth out of the daily paper). . . High-jinks run wild. . . Three eccentrics billed as the Ritz Brothers devastate the risibilities with a knockabout comedy routine which includes poisonous burlesque of such personalities as Harry Richmond, Ted Lewis and Freddie March. . . Ted Healy does his famous magician act and it's as funny as ever. . . funnier, for he has Patsy Kelly to stooge for him." Herb Sterne

+ Script p11 Ag 22 '36

"Adorned with able comics . . . full of good tunes."

Time p23 Ag 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"One of the wow comedy hits of the year. It has music—it has laughs—it has a trio of musical clowns."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 15 '36

"It's all good for whatever might have ailed you. It should carry a 'before and after taking sign,' and the results—would just be grand." L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 S '36

"This picture introduces a wow comedy trio, the Ritz Brothers, and they present a show that should be heavy box-office in any kind of house. . . Gregory Ratoff, with his dialect, garners a lot of laughs, Adolphe Menjou as the drunken actor is swell, Alice Faye does her songs well, and Ted Healy and Patsy Kelly have some good footage. The song numbers are all very good and should be very popular."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 1 '36

"Here's a grand boxoffice bundle of buffoonery-with-music that rates away up top for speed and laughter. It will keep theater tills jingling merrily with smash takes in all classes and audiences in hilarious mood for its full 90 minutes. . . The crackerjack cast carried the loony doings to hilarious heights and registered several comedy performances beyond all previous achievements. . . The picture will definitely set up box office records. It has everything an audience wants for entertainment, plus some performances you will want to hang your exploitation kite to. . . Promise your patrons more laughs and solid entertainment than they have had in a picture for a long time."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 1 '36

"'Sing, Baby, Sing' merits top rung on the filmusical ladder. Its dialogue is witty, sparkling and smart and its tunes exceptionally good for exhibitor plugs. . . The performances by the entire cast are smooth and ably executed, guided by directorial tempo and gusto which kept a preview audience roaring throughout from footlights to the rear of the balcony."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ag 3 '36

"Strong on comedy, with music to help, filled with people whom audiences should want to see, 'Sing, Baby, Sing' looms as good program. . . Audiences should like it. Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 Ag 15 '36

"Logically contrived, 'Sing, Baby, Sing' can stand up with the screen's best musical output. It's box office in any language. With a cast of names and a flock of selling angles it should have no trouble getting grosses."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 1 '36

SINS OF MAN. 20th century-Fox 85min My 29 '36

Players: Jean Hersholt. Don Ameche. Allen Jenkins. J. Edward Bromberg. Ann Shoemaker

Directors: Otto Brower. Gregory Ratoff

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fine of kind; Y: very sad; C: not for them."

Christian Century p975 Jl '36

"The picture is sincere and deserves respect. It needs more restrained direction. . . This is not a film for those who like to be cheered up, but it has strong human interest. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p106 Je '36

"A: powerful human interest drama; Y: sombre in tone; C: no."

Parents' M p45 Jl '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"As a character study, 'Sins of Man' . . . is a remarkable piece of work—sensitive, artistic and exceedingly harrowing. . . A sudden, but surprisingly logical, happy ending sends one away, moist-eyed yet not dissatisfied. If entertainment is the criterion for film merit, 'Sins of Man,' is not so much good cinema as it is an interesting character study." E. F. Melvin

+ Boston Transcript p7 Je 20 '36

"An excursion into the past in title and style of story, with Jean Hersholt by sheer authority and benevolence making engrossing the part of a pious sexton of the Tyrol. . . Too persistently sad for some tastes." E. C. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 20 '36

SINS OF MAN—Continued

"Jean Hersholt is a fine actor, but they put in a hokey show this trip. . . This is a sad, soggy, sentimental picture, with a certain amount of commercialized religion in it. . . Everybody around me was having a thoroughly miserable 85 minutes, and I'm sure they'll all think they were being entertained, edified and uplifted. Not for children." Don Herold

— Life p26 Ag '36

"In spite of its spiritual turn, 'Sins of Man' does not preach; nor is it really gloomy. It is solid, emotional drama of a kind seldom seen on the screen since Herr Jannings gave up his attempts to learn English. There is no love interest; but Fox offers as romantic appeal a good-looking young newcomer, Don Ameche, who does pretty well with two parts." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p17 Je 19 '36

"'Sins of Man' is a thoroughly sentimental, painstakingly sombre and devastatingly complete portrait of a man in sorrow. While it is uncompromisingly tearful, it happens also to have been splendidly performed, honestly directed and handsomely produced. . . Our preference, frankly, is for a more 'contrasty' negative. 'Sins of Man' has blocked in its tragic shadows solidly, courageously ignoring any romantic sub-plot and only in a few penultimate episodes seeking to bring its heavy theme into clearer relief through recourse to a 'funny man.' Although this is a more mature approach to tragedy than the screen generally employs, and must be encouraged in principle if not in this specific instance, still there is danger in overdoing it." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p17 Je 19 '36

"There's certainly not one ray of humor in 'Sins of Man.' If you like 'sad' pictures, here's your prize." John Mosher

New Yorker p73 Je 27 '36

"Aside from [Jean Hersholt] the film has no box-office names, no romance, no comedy—none of the elements that attract screen patronage. Yet by the sheer force of his acting, it develops into a forceful, moving drama, instead of the sentimental cry-fest it could so easily have become."

+ News-Wk p24 Je 20 '36

"[Hersholt] undergoes his ordeal valorously, and lives to see everything set right by the most amazing series of coincidences ever flashed on the screen. It is just barely possible that you may laugh instead of cry."

— Stage p9 Jl '36

"Sad, simple and superfluous, this picture depicts the mishaps of one Christopher Freyman, bell ringer in the Tyrolean town of Zanebruck."

Time p40 Je 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Tedious and frequently phony in its sentimental and religious passages, 'Sins of Man' is not a good motion picture. It will be hard to sell, for there is only Jean Hersholt. Picture introduces Don Ameche, a semi-obscure Chicago radio actor, who will mean little in this instance. There is absolutely no romance in the entire 85 minutes."

— Variety p29 Je 24 '36

SITTING ON THE MOON. Republic 65min S 15 '36

Players: Roger Pryor, Grace Bradley, William Newell, Pert Kelton

Director: Ralph Staub

Music director: Harry Grey

Music: Sam H. Stept, Sidney D. Mitchell

"Pryor, an irresponsible tunesmith, has long nursed a secret yen for Grace Bradley, a former star, who has been blackballed by the studios for deserting a picture. Finding Miss Bradley in the extra ranks with his friend, Pert Kelton, Pryor personally strives to engineer her comeback. Through scheming he manages to get Miss Bradley a radio contract." Motion Pict Daily

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is the 'Sitting on the Moon' type [of film] that drives the reviewer to an untimely grave. There is simply nothing to get the critical teeth into—nothing new, suspenseful, or even interesting; but, on the other hand there is nothing viciously stupid in it. . . It seems a pity that Pryor, an excellent actor, should be wasted on this drivelt." Paul Jacobs

— + Hollywood Spec p15 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A cocktail of entertainment, this sprightly romantic-comedy which is the second musical to emanate from Republic will please the entire family."

+ Box Office p25 S 5 '36

"Given a pleasing human interest story with down-to-earth people doing things like regular folks, a good love interest working up to a tight suspense, and add to that the really charming personality of Grace Bradley, and here is a number that will fit neatly on any exhibitor's screen catering to the average American audience. There is a steady undercurrent of good comedy with bright chatter that is not wise-cracky. . . Grace Bradley is charming, and delivers more in acting ability and glamour than a lot of expensive stars in more expensive productions."

+ Film Daily p15 S 11 '36

"Republic's second musical of the season, 'Sitting on the Moon,' misses getting out of the B musical grade, through failure in writing to capitalize on the possibilities of its excellent original story premise. Cast lacks draw names, but with all its faults it will be well liked in many spots and is a good booking, opposite dramatic fare for duals."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 Ag 28 '36

"This is a musical farce concerning the Hollywood adventures of a pair of song-writers, presented acceptably as average entertainment."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p3 Ag 29 '36

"Never presuming to be pretentious, 'Sitting on the Moon' is a fifty little musical-romance that swings right along. Light and entertaining, audiences should find this number satisfying. [It is] an average story. . . Despite lack of top names, 'Sitting on the Moon' should have a good chance with the family trade."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 28 '36

A SON COMES HOME. Paramount 75min JI 31 '36

Players: Mary Boland, Julie Haydon, Donald Woods, Wallace Ford, Anthony Nace

Director: E. A. Dupont

Based on a short story of the same title by Harry Herve, "Miss Boland [portrays] an angel of the San Francisco waterfront. A gas station attendant is killed and Woods, innocently implicated, is arrested. Looking for help, he tries to pass himself off as Miss Boland's runaway son, but the mother quickly detects the ruse. Believing the boy innocent, she starts a search for the real killer, aided by a reporter." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Lack of realism and exaggerated maternal impulses prevent this melodramatic social drama from becoming outstanding." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"There are plenty of heart throbs and suspense, but too little comedy relief. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent. Mature." DAR

"Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It] makes a strong appeal for strength of character and high ideals—a picture worth seeing and adapted for adults and older children. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 29 '36

"Interesting and engrossing entertainment. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 19 '36

"Mary Boland as the mother gives a finished characterization in a tragic role which will surprise those who have come to think of her only as an accomplished comedienne. Mature." Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"This is a heart-stirring social drama dominated by the artistry of Mary Boland, who in a serious and dramatic role, rises to new heights and is supported by a fine cast. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 19 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 10 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"The direction has many individual and excellent features."

Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 12 '36

Hollywood Spec p13 S 12 '36

"[It is] a motion-picture apparently designed to give Mary Boland a chance to be something besides funny. . . Miss Boland is brilliant as the mother and Julie Haydon begins to approximate the acting talent forecast for her two years ago when she made her debut."

Lit Digest p24 Ag 22 '36

"This is a heavy-handed business and a strange galley in which to discover Mary Boland, whose late royal surroundings in 'Jubilee' have given way to a fish and chips midst along the San Francisco waterfront. In a word, it doesn't suit her. It is a near Tugboat Annie characterization and is not Miss Boland's dish. . . It isn't a very exciting story and Miss Boland's isn't a very exciting part." Lucius Beebe

— N Y Herald Tribune p6 S 7 '36

"Paramount is scarcely being fair to Mary Boland in asking film audiences to judge her as a dramatic actress in so absurdly contrived a story as 'A Son Comes Home.' The obscurely assembled emotional hodge-podge into which she now has been thrust would have put a burden on the virtuous Marie Dressler herself." J. T. M.

— N Y Times p7 S 5 '36

"Throwing off all the characteristics, as well as the blond hair, that have endeared her to millions in comedy roles, Miss Boland goes through the paces of her first dramatic role with compelling effect. Her performance is restrained and completely realized and it is largely because of her work that a highly melodramatic and saccharine story becomes plausible and entertaining. . . The film has a certain amount of speed, coincidences and tears and a nice melodramatic twang to it. If then, you are not too finicky about your screen entertainment, you should enjoy the way 'A Son Comes Home' is played by Miss Boland and her associates." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p10a S 5 '36

"In this exciting picture of the San Francisco water front [Mary Boland] returns to a dramatic role and is superb as the chowder-house proprietor whose son comes home as a killer."

News-Wk p42 S 12 '36

"'A Son Comes Home' devotes itself to tear-enticing, but if you're one who likes a good cry-stuff this will certainly give you a chance to snuffle your way Over the Hill to the Poorhouse once again. . . Actress Mary Boland and Author Harry Hervey are both well established in severely specialized fields; Miss Boland is Queen of Comedy and Hervey has made a deserved reputation in the realm of Indo-Chinoiserie. It is earnestly to be hoped that both these talented people will stick to the knitting in which they excel." Herb Sterne

Script p11 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Wholesome entertainment of interest to every mother and every mother's son or daughter, this film will pull at the box office."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 15 '36

"Gripping picture with Mary Boland in a dramatic role should get by nicely."

+ Film Daily p3 Ag 8 '36

"Thanks to sympathetic and characterful writing, eloquent direction and a deeply-etched character portrayal by Mary Boland, this simple heart story of plain folks of the San Francisco waterfront becomes a work of real distinction. It has universal appeal and will go places at all box offices. . . Mary Boland as the 'Angel of the Waterfront' here delivers her first dramatic role in pictures. It will win her more admirers even than her delightful comedy portrayals, for it has sincerity, emotional power and an unforced simplicity that bites deep."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 5 '36

"A seriously toned character drama, this seems destined to be appreciated by patrons liking and understanding solid, substantial entertainment. . . The plot is powerful and appealing. . . The work of the cast endows the picture with believable realism that held a preview audience in hushed silence."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ag 6 '36

"Dramatic piece well played, but which lacks name strength, this should find favor with neighborhoods, small towns. Well handled, dramatic, this ought to please, even if short on name strength."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p37 Ag 15 '36

"Mary Boland goes dramatic in this picture. She cannot gain sympathy for her efforts in a story in which she is required to turn her own son over to the law for murder to save the innocent boy she has befriended. . . The patrons will reject the situation. . . It all adds up to wasted effort."

— Variety p17 S 9 '36

"'A Son Comes Home' is the kind of entertainment the whole family will enjoy. It has speed, punch, drama, love interest and with it all that wholesomeness that has long been cried for."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 5 '36

(*)SONG OF A NATION. Warner 20min J1 4 '36

Players: Donald Woods. Claire Dodd. Joseph Crehan. Addison Richards

Director: Frank McDonald

A Broadway Brevity short in Technicolor. It is the story of the writing of The Star Spangled Banner by Francis Scott Key.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"If 'Song of a Nation' is really a true account of the personal episodes in Key's life which influenced him to compose the national anthem,

SONG OF A NATION—Continued

perhaps there is some excuse for its militaristic tinge. If not, then it is another of those fight-and-carry-flag-to-victory epics. Unconvincingly enacted by a cast of wooden actors, 'Song of a Nation' won't stir audiences' blood to any great depths of 'patriotic' fervor."

— Bul on Current Films Ag 3 '36

"A story woven around the composition of the Star-Spangled Banner is done in a charming manner which should be an inspiration to every American. Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: excellent."

+ + Motion Pict R J1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Rarely are we permitted to view a short subject which in its brief footage stirs our emotions to a higher pitch than ninety-nine of every hundred feature pictures manage to do in their greater length. 'The Song of a Nation' is a cinematic gem, an artistic morsel that will adorn any evening's entertainment irrespective of what else composes the screen program. . . . This is the most space I ever devoted to a review of a short subject. My excuse is that it is the best short subject I ever saw."

+ + Hollywood Spec p12 Je 20 '36

"Unfortunately it's all slightly pedestrian and the color is too colorful. The battle scenes, done in obvious miniature, are as unconvincing as Miss Dodd declaiming 'The Star Spangled Banner.'" Herb Sterne

— Script p12 Je 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Both on merit and theme, this short subject deserves booking in every theater throughout America. Warners have put into its production the same supreme care that is found in top-flight features."

+ Film Daily p13 Je 12 '36

SONG OF CHINA. Douglas MacLean 65min

Players: Lim Cho-cho. Shang Kwah-wu. Li Shoh-shoh

Director: Lo Ming-yau

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: cultural and unique; Y: worthwhile; C: probably boring."

Parents' M p48 Ag '36

"Authentic in every respect, with an all-Chinese cast and with sub-titles in lieu of spoken words, 'Song of China' is a picture of great dignity and charm. . . . That the picture is interesting, dramatic, and emotionally stirring is a tribute to the very fine direction and the intelligent acting of the unusual cast. Incidental music, interior settings and typical outdoor scenes are a delightful part of the Chinese atmosphere. Family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Our brown and yellow brethren have never been able to assimilate the screen as an art form. Instead of making pictures indigenous to their manners and customs, they've concentrated on turning out composites of all the more worn occidental stencils. . . . It has no appeal for the average American audience though it has all the ingredients familiar in our own flickers. 'Art' theatre devotees will find a certain naive charm, some unintentionally funny titles (the film is silent), plus beautiful photographic work. It's strictly a curiosity." Herb Sterne

— Script p15 J1 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Beautiful, artistic novelty produced and directed by Chinese in China, photography and Oriental theme make this excellent fare for the arty houses. Adults."

+ Box Office p23 J1 11 '36

SPENDTHRIFT. Wanger-Paramount 78min J1 17 '36

Players: Henry Fonda. Pat Paterson. Mary Brian. George Barbier. Edward Brophy

Director: Raoul Walsh

The story is built around a young millionaire and sportsman who has dissipated his fortune. He marries a designing girl who leaves him and finally he becomes a famous radio announcer. After a divorce, he marries the daughter of his horse trainer who has always loved him.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fairly good; Y: amusing; C: fair."

Christian Century p1047 J1 29 '36

"Mediocre-mature." DAR

Fox W Coast Bul J1 25 '36

"A good cast, fine direction and some exciting horse races make of this pleasing entertainment. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 22 '36

"Objectionable in part. Objection: justifies divorce as a solution."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 16 '36

"A and Y: mediocre; C: no interest."

Parents' M p70 S '36

"The plot is transparent, situations trite, and the direction uneven. Adults & young people."

— Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide J1 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"George Barbier and Edward Brophy gag the discouraging story with welcome laughs." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 8 '36

"[It will] teach a valuable lesson to all young fellows who inherit twenty million dollars when they become of age. It will serve a useful purpose also in showing Hollywood how a picture should not be made. For those without the inheritance and with no desire to learn about pictures, I am afraid 'Spendthrift' has nothing. I would not say it is the worst motion picture ever made—merely that it is the worst I ever saw bearing the trademark of a major producer."

— Hollywood Spec p11 Je 20 '36

"The film should be able to take care of the weak half of a double bill." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p24 J1 25 '36

"Fonda plays with his customary directness and sincerity through some of the most peculiar vocal exhibitions seen in recent months. Mary Brian, surprised no doubt at being a villainess, contributes a Southern accent; Pat Paterson offers a mild Scotch inflection; George Barbier is perpetually explosive and Edward Brophy adds slangy grunts."

Lit Digest p19 Ag 1 '36

"The only distinguishing feature of the new film . . . is that it presents Miss Mary Brian who has long been regarded as the most innocuous and saccharine of the cinema ingenues, in the role of the nastiest of the recent Hollywood villainesses." Richard Watts, Jr.

N Y Herald Tribune p10 Jl 23 '36

"Nobody could have tried very hard with 'Spendthrift.' This is one of those synthetic little stories scenario departments do buy now and then. Several indifferent performances do not make it any more believable; nor are the time-honored jokes of much assistance." Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p22 Jl 23 '36

"Considered apart from its romantic-economic theories, 'Spendthrift' may be jotted down as a slight and superficially diverting fable of a polo-playing Cinderella. . . Mr. Fonda, on the other hand, is probably as morose a playboy as you would care to meet; in fact, it might not be a bad idea to see the picture just to get over the notion that an idler's life is all beer and skittles." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p24 Jl 23 '36

"[It is an] unsuccessful effort to blend farce and romance. . . Except for a remarkably fine performance by George Barbier in the role of a dyspeptic millionaire, there is little to recommend in this offering, which relies almost entirely for its laughs on all the stereotyped elements of farce-comedy. However, Mr. Barbier's blustering antics do much to dispel the lethargy that the narrative creates." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p10 Jl 23 '36

"'Spendthrift' is the sort of comedy which conscientious reviewers should avoid seeing in private projection rooms. Thus viewed, the only feeling it could arouse would be simple amazement that anybody should produce it. I saw it in a huge, cold movie cathedral, and there it explained itself, at least commercially. All the little people sitting round me laughed and crowded and clapped their hands with delight." Russell Maloney

New Yorker p39 Ag 1 '36

"This is a bad picture—despite the acting talents of Henry Fonda, a captivating brogue employed by Pat Paterson and a brisk comedy characterization by June Brewster. The story is without charm, it is put together without skill—and the result is a picture with neither sympathy nor conviction." Molly Lewin

Script p11 Jl 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This gay and amusing comedy is a well mounted, intelligently acted laugh-fest that takes full advantage of its limited story possibilities and emerges an unpretentious but very likeable picture. Family."

+ Box Office p75 Je 27 '36

"This one rates a good light summer number with an indifferent story that is carelessly thrown together but is crammed with good comedy business and snappy dialogue that carries the chuckles."

+ Film Daily p7 Jl 23 '36

"This merry and ingratiating little comedy is Walter Wanger's final contribution to the Paramount list and it will add considerable strength to its B group, for which it was planned. Though an unpretentious offering for Wanger, it is a salable fare in all dual groupings."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 12 '36

"[It] has a pleasant cast and an improbable development of a routine plot, but with enough laughs to do nicely."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Je 13 '36

"Estimate: mild program."

+ Phila Exhibitor p68 Jl 1 '36

"There was the basis of a good picture here, but—. Which means it won't do for better than double bill rating. . . Henry Fonda heads the cast of mostly unknowns, which is another exhibitor hurdle that won't be easy. Fonda is a handsome enough lad and it is possible that he might have been accepted as the spoiled young millionaire he's supposed to play if the things he does and says were acceptable. They're not. . . When Hatch wrote this story he wrote it for raffish satire. It was pointed and sharp and funny. Raoul Walsh as director and co-adaptor toned it down and polished it up to where it lost all point."

— Variety p14 Jl 29 '36

"Fast-moving comedy that despite the familiarity of story affords good entertainment through excellence of direction, dialog and casting. Lack of pulling names will keep it in the twin bill class. Production is above average for class B pictures, with Walter Wanger giving the production good framing."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 12 '36

STAGE STRUCK. Warner-First national 90min S 12 '36

Players: Dick Powell. Joan Blondell. Warren William. Frank McHugh. Jeanne Madden

Director: Busby Berkeley

Music director: Leo F. Forbstein

Music and lyrics: E. Y. Harburg. Harold Arlen

"The plot concerns the romance between Dick Powell, dance director, and Jeanne Madden, a country girl who rises from a chorus job to play the star part on the opening night." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Lack of variety detracts from this farcical treatment of life behind the scenes in the theater." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Mature-family." DAR

"A smooth fast-moving comedy which provides a laugh to take home with you. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This social comedy, well cast and directed, gives good clean entertainment. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women Fox W Coast Bul Ag 29 '36

"Enjoyable entertainment for all. Family." + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 19 '36

"Family." Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"Musical comedy at its best. Directed by Busby Berkeley, who proves his ability for excellent stage-craft as well as dances, and with a cast which gives a gay, light-hearted but whole-hearted performance, good, light entertainment is provided. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

"[It is] an entertaining film. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Some amusing spots in the picture and good music. Family."

+ Wkly Guide S 5 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Stage Struck' comes as a pleasant surprise. It is a backstage musical, but one that pokes fun at all backstage musicals. The lovely girls cavorting in patterns on mammoth staircases are actually elbowed out of the way by a plot that not [only] laughs at theater business but anthropology and psychology as well." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 12 '36

STAGE STRUCK—Continued

"As soon as you read the title you know the story. . . While I do not claim it is impossible to write a new story to serve the next series of musical pictures, I do claim the one studios are now using is a good one because its appeal is fundamental. We may scoff at the story after seeing it a dozen times, but each act of seeing it fills us with contentment. . . All in all, 'Stage Struck' is well worth seeing."

+ Hollywood Spec p7 Ag 15 '36

"Nimble dodging most of the pitfalls common to backstage stories, 'Stage Struck' is a merry, tuneful affair. Hardly an inspired offering, the show is nonetheless an engaging merger of gags and music. And while it is reminiscent of many such films, on the whole it is imbued with an infectious freshness." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p45 S 19 '36

"Funny? It's a panic! As a matter of fact, 'Stage Struck' is pretty much of a ten-strike in all departments. . . Right up in the front row with Joan Blondell are the Yacht Club Boys who not only sing songs well but also write 'em. . . Three lusty cheers for the Y.C.B.'s!" Herb Sterne

+ Script p10 S 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Effervescent musical comedy, not hampered by the usual over-impressive dance numbers, this picture will bring patrons in droves and leave them laughing at the fadeout."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 15 '36

"Although a backstager it has only enough of that atmosphere to keep one informed that this is a musical, but the main play is for comedy which it gets in quantity. The box-office should get a healthy play when the show is run. Instead of pretentious musical numbers, the Yacht Club Boys are in for two socko routines. . . Topping everyone in the cast is Joan Blondell as the dame financing her way to stage fame after shooting her husband. Her character is a swell piece of construction, and Joan gets everything from the lines and gives the role everything it needs."

+ Film Daily p10 Ag 11 '36

"With a backstage plot that rings with more authenticity than is usual, 'Stage Struck' is due to duplicate the success of these Warner Bros. musicals. The laugh-studded story is smartly emphasized by the direction of Busby Berkeley and played for the best results by a large and excellent cast. . . Busby Berkeley shows a nice feeling for farce tempo. The picture confines itself to chorus girls for atmosphere and the dancing is entirely rehearsal stuff. It is a field that will open a new career for Berkeley."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Ag 6 '36

"Substituting comedy and fast tempo for the extravagant production numbers formerly used in this type of Warner musical, this picture emerges as satisfying entertainment. Although essentially a backstage story, Berkeley has restrained production massiveness to concentrate on swift comedy punches. . . When tightened to program length the film should please."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ag 7 '36

"Warners ought to get back to their musical stride with 'Stage Struck.' Although a backstage story, everything has been handled so well the customers will think it is new. Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p33 Ag 15 '36

"Here's a refreshing musical that should please the audiences who are tired of big numbers, complicated renditions of songs. . . Busby Berkeley has directed the picture with a fine conception for comedy values."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 6 '36

STAR FOR A NIGHT. 20th century-Fox 75min Ag 28 '36

Players: Claire Trevor, Jane Darwell, Evelyn Venable, Arline Judge, J. Edward Bromberg

Director: Lewis Seiler

Music director: Samuel Kaylin

Music and lyrics: Harry Akst, Sidney Clare

Based on a play, Die Heilige Luege, by Karin Michaelis. "Starting in the Austrian Tyrol, [the story] recites the departure of a blind mother on a surprise visit to her distinguished family in America. There, she believes, is a married son who makes automobiles, a daughter who is a concert pianist and another who is a singing stage star. But all this has been a pretense. They are just hard-working youngsters who have drained their resources for the mother's eye treatments and lied to keep her happy." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: good; C: fair."

Christian Century p1026 S 9 '36

"Intelligent acting, particularly on the part of Jane Darwell, clever direction and a goodly dose of human interest provide a pleasant evening's entertainment for the family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"[It is a] charming picture. Excellent. Mature-family." DAR

"A touching drama of family devotion, emotionally appealing, constructive in tone and very well produced. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This melodrama with a truly universal appeal is certain to please the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ag 22 '36

"[It is] a most human and appealing picture. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 10 '36

"A sentimental story but played with such sincerity by a capable cast that it holds one's interest to the end. Family."

+ Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"Fine direction of a well-chosen cast, each member of which gives a sincere portrayal, makes of an improbable story interesting entertainment. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

"A simple plot charmingly executed. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 27 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ag 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p17 S 5 '36

"Although 'Star for a Night' is just a saccharine take-off on 'Lady for a Day,' its fine direction and sensitively restrained portrayals lift it above its often too-evident status as a double-bill support." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p9 Ag 15 '36

"'Star for a Night' is at best a tolerable program picture." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p7 S 5 '36

"Not only do you have to forget that it is a pretty feeble variation of 'Lady for a Day' but you also have to grit your teeth to bear up under its sweetness and sentiment, which have been piled on with a trowel. While I am willing to admit that there is nothing better for a saccharine film than the good old happy family reunion in the last reel, there is a limit to the amount of sugar-coated pap that one can reasonably stand. This one overdoes it to such an extent that it becomes exasperating rather than effective." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p24 S 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here's a picture tailor-made for all the mothers in the country. While it has all the tears and pathos of the usual mother film, it has enough bright comedy, furnished by three wise chorus girls, to keep it out of the weepy class. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 29 '36

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 S '36

"This beautifully handled sentimental piece should make program fare of the better type. Not only does it have fine emotional qualities, but it has a lot of laughs, singing, dancing, and other back stage ingredients. It should make very good entertainment for all types of audiences."

+ Film Daily p6 Ag 14 '36

"This sentimental comedy of devotion between a mother and her grown family, with a backstage episode and a stage show with music logically included for good measure, is bright and wholesome entertainment. Its sweetness and light are sometimes laid on rather thick, but it has strong general audience appeal and promises prosperity in the neighborhoods."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 6 '36

"An appealing combination of sentimental drama, gay comedy and lively backstage action, this should be enjoyable entertainment for any kind of audience. The film contains familiar elements, which are nevertheless presented in novel fashion and offer wide opportunity for exploitation by the showman."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ag 7 '36

"Pleasant comedy drama that ought to please family, neighborhood audiences, this is short on what the marquee needs, but otherwise nice entertainment. . . Well played, nicely handled, this shapes up as best for small towns, neighborhoods, pleasant for all."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 Ag 15 '36

"It's not a bell-ringer, but will suffice for measuring off a dual program."

+ Variety p20 Ag 26 '36

"Packed with heart appeal, developed with honest and moving emotional wallop and smartly made to offer a variety of elements for practically all tastes, 'Star for a Night' is high-class entertainment which will stand sturdily on its own anywhere—a box office honey."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 6 '36

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER. Paramount 65min Ag 28 '36

Players: Ralph Bellamy. Katherine Locke. Andy Clyde. David Holt

Director: Stuart Heisler

Based on a short story, Johnny Gets His Gun, by Lucien Carey. The young son of a commercial artist feels himself dislodged from first place in his father's heart when he learns that his father plans to marry again. The father is a witness against a band of crooks who come to kill him and find only the boy at home. How the youngster foils the crooks and becomes reconciled to his step-mother forms the plot of the film.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 2 '36

"Although the story is trite and hackneyed the picture is much better than might be expected because of the fine portrayals given by a carefully chosen cast."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 2 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

"A capable cast ably directed, does full justice to a cleverly developed plot, always interesting and at times exciting. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ag 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Sweeping suddenly into one of the finest examples of progressively sustained suspense any audience has this year witnessed, 'Straight From The Shoulder' offers the cinematic student enticing fare. Handicapped almost throughout by the 'just boy' antics of David Holt, the story movement drags often in the beginning, but the plot, fortunately, is made of strong dramatic threads which capably weather the irrelevancies clogging the tempo and delaying the interest. . . Had film editor Everett Douglass weeded a twenty minute total of meandering, 'Straight From the Shoulder' would be outstanding." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p10 Ag 29 '36

"A mild and unpretentious bit of gangster lore, 'Straight from the Shoulder' builds up to one of the most suspenseful sequences on current view." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p35 S 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one has so many smart angles that it will please every type of entertainment seeker."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 22 '36

"Here is a warm, human appealing picture that is tailor-made for the family trade. . . David Holt is the boy and gives his best performance to date."

+ Film Daily p6 Ag 14 '36

"An eight-year-old boy is the hero of this pleasant and suspenseful program picture and the boy is going to put it over for above-average B class returns in the neighborhoods as it is first-class [juvenile] and parent fare."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 11 '36

"Estimate: program for neighborhoods, twin bills."

Phila Exhibitor p40 S 1 '36

"Homespun entertainment qualities make it a natural for the family trade, and it is neatly enough contrived and so well played by young David Holt and his fellow troupers as to fit in as good program complement almost anywhere."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 11 '36

SUZY. MGM 95min J1 17 '36

Players: Jean Harlow. Franchot Tone. Cary Grant. Lewis Stone

Director: George Fitzmaurice

Based on the novel of the same title by Herbert Gorman. "In London, Jean Harlow, a title hunting show girl, marries Franchot Tone. He is shot by a woman on their wedding day. Fearing a murder charge, Miss Harlow flees to France as the war starts. An entertainer in a cafe, she meets Cary Grant, ace flier, and following a war-menaced romance, they marry. Grant goes to the front . . . and gets mixed up with another woman. It is revealed that Tone is not dead, and when he shows up as Grant's pal, Miss Harlow finds herself in the predicament of being married to two men." (Motion Pict Daily)

SUZY—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"'When in doubt, wave a flag.' . . . It is this psychology upon which 'Suzy' is fashioned. Portrayed in a manner of a giant festival, this purported drama of World War days is as flagrant a glorification of war as you would care to see. Not to mention the lesser misdemeanors of bigamy, illicit love affairs, and drunkenness, 'Suzy' attempts to employ all the hysterical flag-waving devices which make for thrills and applause."

— Bul on Current Films Ag 3 '36

"A: good of kind; Y: doubtful; C: no."
Christian Century p1071 Ag 5 '36

"Mediocre. Adults." DAR

— + Fox W Coast Bul Jl 25 '36

"Expert directing of a star cast . . . has brought us a great piece of entertainment. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The excellent photography including very interesting montage shots of actual warfare makes this an outstanding picture. Adults: fair; family: doubtful; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture has its dramatic moments, but as a whole it lacks freshness or originality. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Contrast, carefully finished portraiture and stirring scenes of wartime aviation make this an interesting film for mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A melodrama suitable for an adult audience. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Ag 1 '36

"The picture [is] an entertaining one. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Jl 24 '36

"Fair for adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 22 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 30 '36

"A and Y: action war drama; C: mature."
Parents' M p70 S '36

"[It has] a rather complicated plot reminiscent of several earlier war melodramas."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide Jl 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer took Herbert Gorman's rather sensational World War melodrama . . . and blurred the whole thing with a hasty Legion of Decency sponging. Result is a strangely uneven melodrama—at its best, ingeniously directed and lively; at its worst, trite, stuffy and unconvincing." B. L.
+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ag 8 '36

"For adults in search of an emotional spree."
E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 8 '36

"It will give satisfaction. We could wish for less talking than it contains, and a greater reliance on the camera in developing the psychological phases of the story, but as we seem doomed to have such pictures until Hollywood learns how to use the microphone, we will be lucky if we get none less entertaining than this well-made Metro offering."
+ — Hollywood Spec p5 Jl 18 '36

"One of M-G-M's lavish productions, 'Suzy' is expensively mounted, handsomely dressed, and features a cast of favorites. Unfortunately all this visual display decorates a war-time story so seething with bewildering coincidents and inaccuracies that the picture destroys what believable moments it might have had." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p41 Ag 22 '36

"The story has the now familiar backgrounds of Europe in 1914, its spy scenes are brightly contrived, it has a melodramatic punch of undeniable force. The ending is intelligently arrived at and is logical. For all that the picture was made for Miss Harlow and all the important scenes are pointed in her favor, the honors for performance go mainly to Franchot Tone and Cary Grant. Direction by George Fitzmaurice is brilliant, and he has the foresight to insist on new treatment for scenes which, otherwise, would be much like dozens of scenes in dozens of other spy and war films."

+ Lit Digest p18 Jl 25 '36

"We are more or less innured to the complete indifference with which Hollywood dishes out the minor fables of our time. . . . But cynical hokum toward so unmitigated a catastrophe as the last war and future wars brings you up with a savage wrench. After all these years, how do they dare? Yet once again the Harlows, the Baxters, the William Faulkners and Joel Sayres, the Zanucks, play fast and loose with mortality, dancing lightly over the mass graves, the great charnel houses of the last generation."

— New Theatre p22 S '36

"'Suzy' is by no means a bore. It is lively and it is well played, but I fear that it is in the Three-Eye League tradition. I will go on screaming in my customary wilderness that it is a great shame to waste Miss Harlow in such a role, when she should be exercising her vast gifts as a half-sophisticated, half-innocent comic." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p6 Jl 25 '36

"'Suzy' like most spy drama, depends greatly upon coincidence to make the plot revolve. The scenarists work this old device pretty hard in 'Suzy.' Only George Fitzmaurice's careful direction saves the script. . . . The result, of course, is melodrama, not always plausible but at least never dull. . . . If not taken too seriously, [it is] a fairly entertaining [production]." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p8 Jl 25 '36

"With padded horns of dialogue and venerable plot whiskers, it plunges across the screen, creates some mild excitement and careens out again, leaving us with a few esthetic bruises and a feeling that a little fresh air would do no harm. . . . Miss Harlow's performance may be numbered among her least [interesting], and we still insist she would be wiser not to stray beyond the green pastures of comedy. Mr. Tone can be thanked for the few honest moments of drama that the film possesses." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p16 Jl 25 '36

"Frankly, there is nothing much to pant about one way or another, and when you see [it]—if you do—you'll be bound to admit that ['Suzy'] leaves the state of the current cinema just about where [it] found it. . . . 'Suzy' is a pretty feeble fable, and nothing that Miss Harlow and Franchot Tone, Cary Grant and Lewis Stone, her chief companions, can do helps matters much. Because of its banalities 'Suzy' is beyond the helping stage. . . . Personally, I think it is pretty dull." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p15a Jl 25 '36

"Just when it seemed that things were too awful to be borne, Jean Harlow turned up in 'Suzy.' . . . Platinum blonde or brownette, Miss Harlow is, if she will pardon the expression, my meat. When, as in 'Suzy,' she has a good rôle, and is surrounded by competent colleagues, the total effect is almost too much. . . . Franchot Tone, Cary Grant, and Lewis Stone stand by Miss Harlow nobly, making 'Suzy' something that you really ought to see." Russell Maloney

+ New Yorker p39 Ag 1 '36

"A box office fandango executed with cliché steps certain to cause millions of housewives to abandon unwashed dishes to the mercy of tomorrow morning; that will prove superior to a foot-bath in making shop girls forget their already weary tootsies. . . The situations revel in the obvious; they have as much reality as the lyrics of Tin Pan Alley. . . Franchot Tone's popularity is mounting if one can judge by the Glendale [preview]. He works romantically, but as an Irishman he permits the sham-rocks in his voice to bloom and wither with disconcerting inconsistency. . . George Fitzmaurice's direction is aces. He takes advantage of every trick, uses glamour as a cover for story-holes." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p10 J1 25 '36

"Other stories have shown some of the individual happenings which overtook individual farmers, bellringers, soda-jerkers, et al. at the outbreak of War. 'Suzy' sets out to include in one picture all happenings which overtook all chorus girls stranded in all countries in all wars. Over a period of one and a half hours, it seems to succeed. . . Aside from the stuffy epic manner which ill befits its subject, it is a fair sample of its school—frivolous, kinetic and absurd, but not without real moments."

+ — Time p29 Ag 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With four top marquee names, a full-of-action war story, and intelligent production and direction, this is sure-fire audience fare. Adults."

+ Box Office p31 J1 18 '36

"Box-office cast in excellently acted and directed spy drama that should please generally."

+ Film Daily p11 J1 14 '36

"'Suzy' is a definite money picture. Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone and Cary Grant guarantee that by their combined presence in the picture, together with an excellent supporting cast that is highlighted by Lewis Stone. . . There is an attempt to tell too much story for the ordinary length of a feature picture. This one must be greatly overlength and, because of the fact that it brings in so many incidents that require no telling, the action drags at times."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 J1 9 '36

"The real punch of the film is centered in the last three or four reels, when the legitimate drama of the situation to which much time has been given, makes up for much of the previous meandering. The most effective selling angle seems to be one that combines the appeal of war and spy-menaced romance, backed by the pulling power of the names of Miss Harlow, Tone and Grant in characteristic roles."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 J1 10 '36

"In the better Metro manner, this will need the names to help it at the box office."

Phila Exhibitor p34 Ag 1 '36

"One of those hit-at-all-hazards concoctions that may bore in the de luxers, but which will appeal to less discriminating audiences, though Jean Harlow does not quite square herself for a clumsy bigamy, and the scenarist does not help much in smoothing this and other incongruities. . . All through, the scenarists have put in the punch whether it belongs or not and the general effect would seem to justify this treatment. It's cheap, sometimes tawdry, but for the moment it appeals."

+ — Variety p14 J1 29 '36

"'Suzy' is a love narrative of theatrical heroics and polished hokum, pitched in sentimental rather than sophisticated key, which may not rate critical raves but will probably be embraced with profitable returns by the hordes to whom Jean Harlow is a name and others to whom Franchot Tone is another name, plus other pull elements of the picture."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 9 '36

SWING TIME. RKO 100min S 4 '36

Players: Fred Astaire. Ginger Rogers. Victor Moore. Helen Broderick. Eric Blore

Director: George Stevens

Music and lyrics: Jerome Kern. Dorothy Fields

Music director: Nathaniel Shilkret

Dance director: Hermes Pan

"The story is a gayly irresponsible romantic farce in which Astaire, a professional dancer with a passion for taking a gambler's chance, either at cards or in love, takes up the chase of the highly resistant Ginger Rogers, a pupil in a dancing school." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: very good; C: good."

Christian Century p1239 S 16 '36

"Sparkling dialogue, magnificent setting and the superlative dance routine of the popular Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers all contribute in making this an excellent musical. General patronage."

+ + Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

"Highly recommended for the family."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"The dancing of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers seems better than ever. Outstanding. Family."

+ + Wkly Guide Ag 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p17 S 5 '36

Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p467 S 11 '36

"Fred Astaire's pleasing personality, his rhythmic grace as a dancer, charm and intelligence as an actor and proficiency as a singer make 'Swing Time' a highly entertaining picture. . . Pan Berman no doubt would get in bad with the other fellows who produce musicals if he supplied one of his with a coherent story having some appeal to an intelligent audience, but I think he should have a go at it. The innovation might provoke the box-office into hearty response. I know of no law that would be broken if a picture like 'Swing Time' were made to appeal to the intellect as well as to the eye. But the eye appeal of 'Swing Time' is quite sufficient to make it worth your while. In Fred Astaire you will see an extraordinary artist brilliantly revealing his versatility."

+ Hollywood Spec p5 Ag 29 '36

"This is the funniest of their teamed films. The hilarity is supplied wholesale by Helen Broderick and Victor Moore. On gay occasion the joking becomes impudently ribald, but there is nothing to frighten a censor in any of it. Camera trickery is used with more abandon, and considerably more forethought in 'Swing Time' than in previous items by the dancing stars. . . Audiences in key cities to which the film was released first have been more than usually breathless in their acceptance."

+ Lit Digest p17 S 12 '36

"Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers have a catchy Jerome Kern score, superb comic support from Victor Moore and Helen Broderick and a sleek production in their new film. . . Dancing and singing at the very top of their superlative form and clowning magnificently through interludes of merry nonsense, they distinguish themselves anew as the screen's most engaging musical comedy team. . . Aside from a time-honored complaint about these Astaire-Rogers offerings, it is an enchanting and amusing kaleidoscope of nimble feet, lilting melodies and humorous invention. 'Swing Time' sags badly, however, when it insists upon going through the preposterous routines of parting and reconciliation that RKO seems to think are so necessary in a musical photoplay." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ag 28 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SWING TIME—Continued

"We left the theatre feeling definitely let down. The picture is good, of course. It would have to be with that dancing, with Victor Moore, Helen Broderick and Eric Blore. But after 'Top Hat,' 'Follow the Fleet' and the rest it is a disappointment. Blame it, primarily, upon the music. Jerome Kern has shadow-boxed with swing. . . [The songs] are merely adequate, or worse. Neither good Kern nor good swing. Elsewhere, though, you will find that the astute filmmakers at RKO-Radio's studio have not forgotten their reliably entertaining formula for an Astaire-Rogers show." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p21 Ag 28 '36

"'Swing Time' is the town's top picture, the best musical funneled out of Hollywood's hopper. This Astaire-Rogers film has everything. It is smart, subtle and intelligent—tie that. Not a sop is thrown to a sap, and the whole thing clicks like a night club cash register." Douglas Gilbert

+ + N Y World-Telegram p7 Ag 28 '36

"There would appear to be every reason to expect one of those superb musical pictures that now and then come to light. On inspection, however, other things also appear. It would appear, in fact, that a whole host of influences, mysterious and subversive ones, very hostile forces, hostile to the Kern music, hostile to the dancers, hostile to the antics of the comedians, have applied themselves to make the picture stodgy, exasperating, laborious. They haven't succeeded entirely, to be sure, but hardly a soul will come out from a view of 'Swing Time' without some sense of disappointment. It's all due to the old, familiar complaint. It's another case of plot trouble. . . Why can't Hollywood be good to Mr. Kern and the other bright people of the picture?" John Mosher

— New Yorker p67 S 5 '36

"In 'Swing Time,' RKO has another hit. . . This movie is one of the year's best gloom dispellers. The story doesn't always hit on all sixteen but it moves along with sufficient speed. The music, though catchy, is not up to Kern's standard. 'A Fine Romance' is the best of the lot. The Astaire-Rogers dance partnership moves faster than ever. One of the most effective scenes is Astaire's tap solo before three silhouettes which usually keep time with him but occasionally step out on their own."

+ News-Wk p27 S 5 '36

"For cinemaddicts to whom the release of any Rogers-Astaire vehicle does not automatically constitute the major news of the week, this one may do so on the ground that in it Comedian Victor Moore, whose impersonation of Vice-President Throttlebottom in 'Of Thee I Sing' gained him more fame than has ever fallen to any actual holder of that office, makes his screen debut."

+ Time p19 S 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Those educated feet of the screen's dance team No. 1 again answer the showman's prayer as Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers dance, sing and clown their way through another cash drawer hit. Family."

+ Box Office p25 S 5 '36

"This new Astaire-Rogers vehicle holds its own with their best on almost every count and tops them all for comedy, which means another golden shower at all box-offices. There is no reason why it should not break the notable earning records of its own predecessors. Supreme in the dance, in the personal appeal of its stars and in the class quality of its presentations, the series is this time enhanced by a record laugh-score and enriched by an air of irrepressible spontaneity."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 24 '36

"The best of the Astaire-Rogers films to date, 'Swing Time' means a golden boom at the box offices. The film seems much shorter than its 100 minutes because of the featherweight quality achieved by the brilliant balance of comedy, music, dancing and the plot, none of which is over-emphasized and none slighted. . . Emphasize the smoother sophistication as opposed to the tough overtones of 'Follow the Fleet' comedy and romance, because the songs will exploit themselves."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ag 25 '36

"To say this is the best number in the Astaire-Rogers series is to state this will be cleanup in all theatres."

+ Phila Exhibitor p41 S 1 '36

"'Swing Time' is perhaps a shade under previous par, but it's another box office and personal winner for the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers combination. . . In the same cycle of the light fantastic as its predecessors, 'Swing Time' will satisfy every type of film fan. The younger the audience the better. And with Victor Moore and Helen Broderick in as more mature counter-ballast, it'll also appeal to the family trade."

+ Variety p18 S 2 '36

"Filled with charm for the most sophisticated without missing a bet in dance, song and comedy for the hoi-polloi, and emphasizing personalities and talents of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers for their fullest draw value in production quality, fascinating routines and joyous melody-romance, 'Swing Time' tops all their previous offerings as sheer entertainment. Picture sets a new par for this distinguished team. It comes close to providing 100% theatrical delight, and should prove box office avalanche. Astaire-Rogers films have an enormous ready-made audience, and this one is bound to make new addicts."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 24 '36

SWORN ENEMY. MGM 78min S 11 '36

Players: Robert Young, Florence Rice, Joseph Calleia, Lewis Stone, Nat Pendleton

Director: Edwin L. Marin

"The story has a revenge motivation. In it four characters combine to wreak vengeance on a racketeering mob." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults: matter of taste; family: fair; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Joseph Calleia creates an excellent characterization—that of the sinister Joe Emerald, a man with a twisted personality who is the master-mind of a 'mob'. His physical handicaps and mental equipment are an interesting contrast to the crude brutality of his followers. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good-mature." DAR

"This film is informative, dramatic and enacted with a verve and punch which keeps one interested. Adults & young people." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul J1 25 '36

"[It is] a most entertaining picture. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) J1 15 '36

"Adults & young people." Jt Estimates J1 15 '36

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 15 '36

"Adults." Nat Legion of Decency J1 30 '36

"A and Y: exciting; C: no."
Parents' M p70 S '36

"Adults & young people."
Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"[It is] a pretty good melodrama, helped a great deal by its villains, Family."
+ — Wkly Guide J1 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Characteristic of M.G.M. productions, 'Sworn Enemy' is capably cast; with convincing portrayal throughout. Joseph Calleia's Joe Emerald is outstanding. From the foregoing, a mistaken inference may be made that 'Sworn Enemy' is an extraordinary production which should not be missed. Actually, however, it is merely a thoroughly workmanlike secondary film, a picture forgotten by breakfast-time; but entirely pleasing and a sure promise for admission-price value. That alone makes it unusual in this day of consistent disappointments." Paul Jacobs

+ — Hollywood Spec p11 Ag 1 '36

"Another picture of underworld rackets, stereotyped in plot although not in treatment, is holding Rialto audiences in its relentless grip. And rightly so, thanks to the spine-chilling performance of Joseph Calleia and the excellent suspense of the final scenes. . . This particular version of the G-man's activities is by now a little shopworn. . . The performances and the direction are the best factors of the picture." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p8 S 12 '36

"The picture is not, of course, the compelling document that the film examinations of social evils invariably set themselves up to be. It is, however, a suitable vehicle for the talents of Joseph Calleia and Nat Pendleton, as Hollywood seems determined to continue typing them." J. T. M.

+ — N Y Times p20 S 12 '36

"It is fervently to be hoped that the time will come when studios will discover how to make program pictures without employing the gangster theme. . . This olla-podrida has the familiar ingredients, plus as many loose ends as an octopus." Herb Sterne

Script p10 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Family."

Box Office p23 J1 11 '36

"This is a fast-moving comedy drama that will please generally. It is full of fine performances, with Robert Young surprising by his work in a dramatic part. Joseph Calleia again demonstrates that he is one of the best character actors on the screen and he makes his role of a crippled ruler of the underworld powerful and sinister."

+ Film Daily p6 J1 7 '36

"Here is a neatly turned out piece of entertainment that really entertains. It makes no pretenses of being a big attraction, but is more than satisfactory program fare. Smart showmanship features the production by Lucien Hubbard, the keen direction by Edwin L. Marin, the amply-plotted screenplay by Wells Root and the uniformly excellent performances."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 J1 1 '36

"Aptly titled, this gangster-atmosphered, melodramatic romance stacks up as acceptable average entertainment. The substantial, believable story is well put together, intelligently directed and convincingly acted. The dialogue and situations are effectively balanced to keep the show moving at an attention-holding, fast pace."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 J1 2 '36

"Estimate: nice program."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 J1 15 '36

"Smart production and coordination from every department lifts this considerably above its classification as exceptional melodrama. It will entertain wherever billed and will delight especially for its bright direction and character performances, springing out of sound screen writing which keeps the human relations absorbingly genuine without missing, a bet in developing excitement and suspense."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 1 '36

T

TATTLER. First national 60min

Players: Ross Alexander, Glenda Farrell, Anne Nagel, Craig Reynolds, Hobart Cavanaugh

Director: William Clemens

"Picture affords Ross Alexander a role as the tattler who starts to use the air channels to indulge a private grudge against an offensive ham actor and presently finds himself a big money draw because of his daring dissemination of filmdom lowdown. Chatterer draws libel suits, draws the fire of gangsters whom he publicly identifies with crime and all but loses respect of girl he loves because of his so-called mud-slinging." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Mature audience."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 2 '36

"[It is] a fairly interesting film."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picture has enough rapid-fire action, clever comedy and super-smart entertainment to make it a sure-box office attraction. Family."

+ Box Office p23 S 12 '36

"A breezy little farce that shrewdly and amusingly satirizes the radio purveyors of Hollywood gossip; takes a fling at a familiar type of actorial heel and invades a radio station for a brace of new songs and a grist of slangy humor. Meant to hold up the lighter end of the Warner B pairings, it will do just that with considerable satisfaction."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 29 '36

"This is an amusing comedy. . . The picture should please generally as average entertainment."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 Ag 31 '36

"Hollywood's radio gossips, as an institution, are amusingly and satirically lampooned in this neat little B programmer which will carry its entertainment share on the duals and may advance itself through obvious exploitation possibilities."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 29 '36

TEXAS RANGERS. Paramount 90min Ag 28 '36

Players: Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Jean Parker, Lloyd Nolan, Edward Ellis

Director: King Vidor

Based on a book of same title by Walter Prescott Webb. "[It] attempts to picture definitely the contribution of the Rangers to the civilizing of the West, the taming of marauding Indians, the wiping out of stock rustling and of banditry. To do so it centers on three badmen, two of whom enter the ranger service as under-cover partners to the third. But the spirit of the service gets under their skins and step by step they rise to the new ideal until they find themselves pitted against their old partner. Then it is war to the death, even between friends." Hollywood Reporter

TEXAS RANGERS—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: good of kind; C: very exciting."

Christian Century p1026 S 9 '36

"Good. Mature-family." DAR

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ag 29 '36

"Family-mature."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 2 '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 2 '36

"Stage coach holdups and Indian warfare contribute to the excitement of this excellent Western. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

"Handled on a large scale, it is an out-of-the-ordinary Western story. . . Scenically and photographically the production is outstanding, and although overly drawn out in parts, it offers a vivid picture of a lawless period in American history. Ably directed and acted. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"It is always interesting and has several high points of tense drama, with plenty of adventurous action. Family-juvenile."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A carefully executed, better-than-average Western which except for full feature showings in Texas, would have benefited by additional cutting."

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 S 5 '36

"The story of 'Texas Rangers' differs from most of the documentary sort in that the characters it presents are second in importance to the history it relates. . . But it is none the less a stirring recital, packed with drama and enlivened with comedy touches possessing the virtue of having a legitimate place in the story. . . Jack Oakie never before gave such a performance, nor has he even hinted at his ability to rise to the heights he achieves under Vidor's direction."

+ Hollywood Spec p5 Ag 29 '36

"It is an excellent if overlong photoplay. . . 'The Texas Rangers' is much more than a Western picture. It even is much more than a glorified Western. It is, rather, a cinematic case-history of the Rangers. Director King Vidor. . . is to be credited with performing a valuable feat of recording native history. He also may be thanked for giving the picture some of the most breath-takingly lovely background shots ever made."

+ Lit Digest p23 S 5 '36

"This picture is beautifully produced by King Vidor and ably directed by King Vidor, but King Vidor's story is something else again. . . MacMurray walks perfunctorily through his part. . . Truth is, the picture belongs to Edward Cronjager for very beautiful camera work, and to Jack Oakie and Lloyd Nolan for fine comedy and excellent drama, respectively. . . As a picture 'The Texas Rangers' may be O.K., but as a film story it's pretty terrible." Rob Wagner

Script p11 S 5 '36

"In Dallas, where 'The Texas Rangers' last fortnight had a 'pre-release' premiere, audiences were delighted to find all early white residents of their State, not excluding desperadoes, depicted as high-spirited, swash-buckling citizens in sharp contrast with those cheap chisellers, the Indians. Audiences elsewhere are likely to excuse the picture for its pardonable bias on the grounds of an entertainment value enhanced by King Vidor's vigorous treatment of the story."

Time p20 S 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Taking a surging story of early Texas, Producer-Director King Vidor conclusively proves that it is possible to make a Western which will rank high among the season's hits. Not only does it rate as Grade-A action entertainment, boast a pack-em-in cast, but it has tremendous exploitation possibilities, having been designed as the official picture of the widely publicized Texas Centennial. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 29 '36

"This should be a showman's delight. It has much action and is semi-historic, showing how law and order came to the frontier state of Texas. The work of the Rangers in subduing marauding Indians, cattle rustlers and other bandits is thrillingly shown. The picture is rich in comedy and thrills, with Edward Cronjager's camera photographing the unusually beautiful backgrounds for the battle scenes between the Rangers and the Indians."

+ Film Daily p4 Ag 22 '36

"King Vidor's courageous attempt herewith to glorify the traditional Western with superb production values and names that will pull is only partly successful. . . It is gorgeous, but it is gory, and the endless fighting and killing, continued for some 90 minutes, will wear out its welcome with many audiences before the off-screen epilogue in praise of the service that forms its anti-climactic finish. Further shortening will help, but it is essentially a man's picture. . . It is a question if it can take A rating in the top spots for any sensational returns."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 19 '36

"Following the well-established story situations familiar to its type, but turned out with lavishness in scale, 'The Texas Rangers,' firstly, has Fred MacMurray, who is box-office in any man's theatre these days, a rapidly-moving tempo, punctuated by hard riding, exciting fights and generous gunplay. There is another factor which may add immeasurably to the substantial, potential drawing power of the attraction, which is the fact that some time has elapsed since the last big outdoor Western has been found on any distributor's schedule. With three main story elements—friendship, adventure and romance—skillfully, although obviously combined, this attraction has heart appeal, enhanced by production values on a large scale."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 Ag 20 '36

"Action crammed melodrama that is really an epic Western, 'The Texas Rangers' is a showman's attraction that just oozes with selling possibilities."

+ Phila Exhibitor p40 S 1 '36

"It is a splendid piece of mass entertainment and a money picture of smash calibre with a wealth of exploitable assets, headed by the Fred MacMurray and Jack Oakie names. . . Approach is semi-historic, with feeling of essential accuracy. . . Jack Oakie tops all his past performances with a flawless comedy-pathos creation—a truly great exhibit of humorous and casually tragic acting which equals anything of this nature the screen has seen and one which will drive to the heart of any audience."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 19 '36

THEY MET IN A TAXI. Columbia 70min S 1 '36

Players: Chester Morris, Fay Wray, Raymond Walburn, Lionel Stander

Director: Alfred E. Green

Chester Morris, a happy-go-lucky taxi driver decides to help Fay Wray when she darts into a cab and begs him to protect her from a loveless marriage. Later he finds she is implicated in a jewel robbery. With the help of a reformed convict taxi driver, he locates the real thief.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 17 '36

"Talky, but the talk is fairly amusing. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide S 5 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Without wishing to appear soft where Hollywood's double-feature factories are concerned, this reviewer feels compelled to give one or two very short cheers in regard to the current quickie, 'They Met in a Taxi.' One cheer is for the rubicund Raymond Walburn and the other belongs to the beetle-browed Lionel Stander." J. T. M.

N Y Times p20 S 7 '36

"[It is] a light, bubbling, rapidly moving little photoplay which although of no great import, does have more than its share of good, wholesome fun and gleeful chuckles. . . This bit of what Dudley Nichols calls escape motion picture entertainment is well worth seeing if you aren't too exacting about your screen fare." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p24 S 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Paced by 70 minutes of hilarious dialogue and a carload of 12-cylinder situations, this film is a sure-fire fan picture; unpretentious but highly entertaining."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 15 '36

"Falling in the category of attractions that depend more on entertainment values than marquee strength to provide satisfaction, this picture should have no trouble serving its purpose. It's a nice all-around job of good writing, effective gagging, peppy direction and excellent work by players who fit their roles appropriately and work hard to put them over."

+ Film Daily p11 S 9 '36

"[It] clicks off plenty of chuckles in the 'It Happened One Night' vein. While the picture is missing the snacko star draw of a Gable or Colbert, it is entirely satisfying program fare and should do plenty for Morris and Miss Wray in lifting them out of the ruts into which recent parts have consigned them."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Jl 29 '36

"Fashioned of tried and true material, this makes the grade as better than average audience entertainment. Well directed, nicely produced and acted with enthusiasm by feature and supporting players, the film has a popular appeal that presages mass appreciation."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Jl 31 '36

"Estimate: fair."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p33 Ag 15 '36

"Finely-meshed combination of an aggressive, fast-moving story, an excellent cast and ambitious direction with ample production makes 'They Met in a Taxi' good entertainment for the masses."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 29 '36

36 HOURS TO KILL. 20th century-Fox 65min
Jl 24 '36

Players: Brian Donlevy. Gloria Stuart.
Douglas Fowley. Isabel Jewell. Warren
Hymer

Director: Eugene Forde

Based on a short story of the same title by W. R. Burnett. Most of the action takes place on a train where a detective is pursuing a crook. The crook who is on his way to cash a sweepstake ticket for $150,000 takes the detective's girl along as hostage.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"It varies pleasantly in that most of the action takes place on a train. Adults: good; family: good; 14-18: fair; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"There is a bit of romance between a G-man and a girl reporter, and suspense when the girl is captured by the 'mob,' but both situations are too familiar to be more than mildly entertaining. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Mature." DAR

"Another G-man story, entertaining enough and ethically okay. Audiences over 15." Nat Soc of New England Women

"As usual these plots are clever and tense, and the interpolation of an interesting love motif, gives relief and balance to a most entertaining picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Due to a capable cast, well maintained suspense and elements of mystery, the picture will probably be regarded by the general public as good entertainment of its kind. However, though the public enemy is killed in the end, audiences who question the social value of pictures dealing with crime and violence, will deplore the clouding of moral issue that arises when the gangster is conveniently murdered by his jealous wife, for while this may be retribution, it is not justice. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 1 '36

"In all interesting and exciting entertainment. Family—mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Jl 24 '36

"Family, exclusive of young children."

Jt Estimates Jl 15 '36

"A compact, swift moving G-man thriller that moves with staccato speed which holds interest, mystery and romance. . . Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 22 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 13 '36

"There is a bit of romance between a G-man and a girl reporter, and suspense when the girl is captured by the 'mob' but both situations are too familiar to be more than mildly entertaining. Family, exclusive of young children."

— + Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"A G-man story with some novel twists and a good deal of humor making fast and amusing melodrama, quite well done. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] a routine thriller."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 15 '36

"[It is] a moderately entertaining melodrama. . . The new film, another of many dealing with the G-men, is at its best during its first half when it discusses the dilemma of a gangster who, rather unwillingly, is promoted from Public Enemy No. 5 to Public Enemy No. 1. . . The picture veers from its quasi-humorous path into the more familiar melodramatic channels, ending with the usual climactic gun duel in the gangster's hide-away." T.M.P.

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 15 '36

"Though it would seem that these hip-pocket automatic racketeer melodramas have about run their course, it succeeds in filling out with

36 HOURS TO KILL—Continued

quick electric turns of plot and merry dialogue, a film hour and a half worth seeing. . . Although this may sound less than sensational and original, it makes an effective program picture, and these are not often stumbled over on Broadway this summer. The cast . . . is in every way excellent, playing with such unerring skill that the chances are against your suffering from ennui." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p9 Ag 14 '36

"Cut from the familiar G-Man cloth, this yarn has been freshened by the treatment accorded it by screen writers Lou Breslow and John Patrick, shapes up as a pleasant programmer containing more merit than many a so-called special." Herb Sterne

+ Script p13 Ag 8 '36

"It is [a] highly genial, rapid and unimportant melodrama."

+ — Time p29 Ag 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A new twist which plants much of the action aboard a train is all that distinguishes this from the current quota of 'G-Men-Public-Enemy' films. It is no better or worse than the average in this category and will prove satisfactory entertainment for the fans who like crime-does-not-pay action."

+ — Box Office p29 Ag 1 '36

"This is another in the G-Man cycle, which, because it is shrewdly directed by Eugene Forde, is played in a light vein with comedy the principal keynote. . . The picture should please average audiences."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Jl 20 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."

Phila Exhibitor p35 Ag 1 '36

"This G-man film has a novel twist. It's an amusing, although an unpretentious picture and will require support. Good cast, but possesses no compelling box office draft."

+ — Variety p17 Ag 19 '36

"Neatly contrived, fast-stepping G-man-crook melodrama which will satisfy in the spots for which it is made. . . Most of the players know their way around for entertainment purposes and take full advantage of their opportunities."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 18 '36

THIS IS THE LAND. Aga 60min Jl 9 '36

Players: Natives

Director: B. Agadati

A dialogue film in Hebrew, made in Palestine with English sub-titles. This is the first Hebrew dialogue film ever made. "An historical document of the last fifty years in Palestine, the picture is an account of the rebuilding of the Jewish homeland by its children from far-flung places." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Unfolded somewhat monotonously, it gives a clear picture of the progress and pictures the present populace as bubbling with enthusiasm. . . Among the high spots in the film is the opening of the Hebrew University by Lord Balfour at Mount Scopus, and Sir Herbert Samuel's arrival as Palestine's first High Commissioner. Sports and athletics engaged in by the school children, the bathing beaches with their milling crowds, interiors of some of the factories, and agricultural accomplishments are all on the screen." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 Jl 10 '36

"Sympathizers with the building of a modern homeland for the Jewish people in Palestine are sure to be cheered up by [this film]. . . Beautifully photographed and accompanied by well-modulated and appealing music, this celluloid sketch is more in the nature of a large newsreel than previous Palestine films. And the absence of made-to-order dramatic situations makes it all the more convincing." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[This is an] interesting documentary story."

+ Film Daily p3 Jl 11 '36

"The picture . . . is distinguished by excellent production value and a sense of screen appeal. . . 'This Is the Land' will have decided draw with the Jewish patrons, and being well made, should prove a profitable undertaking aside from the interest it will stir in efforts to rebuild Palestine."

+ Variety p55 Jl 15 '36

THOROUGHbred. British empire 78min

Players: Helen Twelvetrees, Frank Leighton, John Longden

Director: Ken G. Hall

A dialogue film produced in Australia. A horse, won in a crap game by an unemployed newspaper man, turns out to be the inevitable thoroughbred and involves him in a maze of trouble.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The director is clearly working with inexperienced personnel. The photography is variable. Though poor at times there are some good out-door shots. The acting is mediocre. Helen Twelvetrees is decorative but unconvincing as the heroine. Suitability: adults & adolescents. Apart from scenes depicting betting on horse racing, of which some may disapprove, this film is a family film."

+ — Mo Film Bul p14 Jl '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This Australian picture is a mixture. It opens weakly and drifts for a while, suffering meantime from poor photography and indifferent sound. Then it gets into its stride and finishes up with a good stretch of old-fashioned thrilling racing melodrama that will bring most average audiences to their feet."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p7 Jl 30 '36

"This Australian production, sponsored by Stuart Doyle, theatre magnate, has some very good racing scenes, taken on the Melbourne course, as its high spot. . . There is a certain amount of value also in the Australian atmosphere. As a story it is very crude stuff, not helped by indifferent recording."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p9 Jl 24 '36

"Good race-track drama when it sticks to the race track. . . The best that can be hoped for is number two on a dual bill. Yet, for all its faults (mostly technical), the picture spells pretty fair average entertainment."

+ — Variety p15 Je 3 '36

THREE CHEERS FOR LOVE. Paramount 63min Je 26 '36

Players: Eleanore Whitney, Robert Cummings, William Frawley, Elizabeth Patterson, Roscoe Karns

Director: Ray McCary

Music and lyrics: Ralph Rainger, Leo Robin

Eleanore Whitney is sent by her father, a motion picture producer, to a boarding school which is ready to close for lack of pupils.

A stranded dancing troupe puts on a show with Eleanore as star. When her father sees it, he gives them all contracts for Hollywood.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: poor; Y: probably harmless; C: no."
Christian Century p1143 Ag 26 '36

"Mediocre. Mature. Family." DAR
— + Fox W Coast Bul Jl 18 '36

"Sequences in a fashionable school filled with the merry rhythm of song and fascinating tap dance numbers which will surely intrigue youngsters, and oldsters alike. . . The up-to-the-minute versions of the modern tap will prove interesting to young America. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Of no particular value but harmless for all ages." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A rather unconvincing story—the successful racket of a cheap theatrical manager—is somewhat redeemed by smart lines, effective dance numbers, and the clever character work of Elizabeth Patterson and William Frawley. Adults, (possible for family)." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Jl 25 '36

"The plot is vague and sketchy, but forms a background for the excellent dancing of Eleanore Whitney and catchy songs including, 'Where Is My Heart.' Family."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Jl 18 '36

"Family."
Jt Estimates Jl 15 '36

"Suitability: family."
Mo Film Bul p120 Jl '36

"Trite and unconvincing, this musical comedy is redeemed only by the fine tap-dancing of Eleanore Whitney and a good cast which is worthy of something much better. . . Fair entertainment for the family and junior matinees."
+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 15 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Jl 16 '36

"Family."
Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a nice question whether so many films are poor because of double bills or double bills came in because so many films were poor. This is for the bottom brackets."
— Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 22 '36

"Paramount should recut this one, eliminate most of the story, all of the 'comedy,' half of the tap dancing, and release the remainder as a short. There are about two reels of pleasant entertainment in it. . . 'Three Cheers for Love' is a class B production."
— + Hollywood Spec p15 Jl 4 '36

"Paramount's unpretentious contribution to the current tap-dancing craze, 'Three Cheers for Love,' is a lightweight farce that works diligently in its attempt to produce laughs. And when the film is displaying the lithe Eleanore Whitney it has a catching rhythmic flavor. But for the most part this is but a tepid though enthusiastically enacted affair that affords mild diversion." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p29 Ag 8 '36

"Eleanore Whitney's tap talent is on a par with the entire production—small time, uninspired."

New Theatre p23 S '36

"The most harmless picture of the year is on display at the Roxy Theater. An amiable and furiously innocuous screen musical short, stretched to feature length. . . It will annoy no one and may please a few people here and there. . . If you happen to find yourself in a theater where 'Three Cheers for Love' is being shown, there is no reason for you to flee from it in dismay. I cannot, however, recommend that you drop everything else and rush off to see it." Richard Watts, Jr.

— + N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ag 1 '36

"'Three Cheers for Love' doesn't pretend to be anything but nonsense. It is far from distinguished nonsense; but its dancers are light-footed, its comics hard working, and one of its tunes catchy. . . This is really a quickie musical, unpretentiously made, with no big names in the cast." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p8 Ag 1 '36

"[It is a] slight impediment to cheerfulness in the cinema. . . [It] is a nursery exercise in musical comedy high-jinks with a score that is pretty commonplace and with some of the most uninspired dance routines that the screen has yet offered. . . The older players in the cast . . . do what they can to give the proceedings a professional touch, but the youngsters, especially Eleanore Whitney and Robert Cummings, who play the leads are as amateurish as the film itself." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p15a Ag 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With little more than the dancing of Eleanore Whitney and the comedy of John Halliday, Roscoe Karns and William Frawley to recommend it, this film falls into the category of an average picture. Family."

+ — Box Office p27 Jl 4 '36

"As a catchy musical show with a lot of clever tap dancing, songs that should prove popular, and a number of interesting new faces, this number makes very enjoyable program entertainment. It is light and moves quickly and for a summer picture it hits the spot nicely."

+ — Film Daily p4 Je 27 '36

"This is light musical fare offering good production flashes and should fit happily on most programs, despite the lack of stellar cast names. Although the story is slight and handicaps, rather than helps the players, it also leaves them free to concentrate on musical numbers which are delightfully presented. . . The picture should get over as average entertainment."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p22 Je 25 '36

"Program musical that has some nice flashes but which is short on what the marquee needs, this is summer entertainment that won't make much impression but which will serve as passable fare for neighborhoods."

— + Phila Exhibitor p26 Jl 15 '36

"'Three Cheers for Love' is anything but three cheers as a film. Concocted in a routine manner, with dialog which is frequently trite, and provided with a plot that is a weak excuse for the song and dance numbers tossed into it, this musical romance is dreary entertainment. Its only saving graces are a few laughs, (too few) and some fairly good song and dance numbers."

— + Variety p16 Ag 5 '36

"Acceptable B musical built around the familiar theme of a theatrical troupe invading a girls' seminary and posing as the pupils. Despite the trite theme, M. A. Shauer's supervision and Ray McCarey's direction have made it pleasant entertainment."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 24 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

THREE MARRIED MEN. Paramount 60min S 11 '36

Players: Roscoe Karns. William Frawley. Lynne Overman. Mary Brian. George Barbier. Marjorie Gateson

Director: Eddie Buzzell

"The family of Roscoe Karns, the bridegroom, hates the family of Mary Brian, the bride, and all the relatives behave with incredibly bad taste at the wedding. Determined to strike a romantic note from the start, Karns dons comically exotic pajamas. His bride falls into hysterical laughter at his appearance and after the ensuing quarrel runs home in her negligee to her parents." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency S 10 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide S 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Dedicated to the proposition that marriage is a bed of thorns, not roses, this film is sixty minutes of rollicking comedy. Family." + Box Office p23 S 12 '36

"A light-headed satirical farce about a marriage in plumbing and garage circles that will evoke a bundle of laughs and a couple of guffaws in less exacting neighborhoods. Its evident purpose is to provide a bit of balancing gayety for double bills in secondary spots at minimum expense. This it will do with reasonable satisfaction. . . Most of the gags have seen much active service. They are freshly served and kept tripping over one another at a lively pace, thanks to Director Eddie Buzzell's resourcefulness, but the imbecilic character of the entire proceedings is emphasized by the lack of mental normalcy in the whole character list." + — Hollywood Reporter p4 Ag 28 '36

"Based on the provincial premise that there is something side-splittingly funny about any wedding night, this comedy gambols heavily through forced situations, gathering as many guffaws as it does chuckles. . . The cast deserves better material." Motion Pict Daily p3 Ag 29 '36

"Obviously made to fill out the double bill, 'Three Married Men' has turned out to be a top-notch comedy which will help build any program through word of mouth advertising. It is good clean comedy that keeps the audience in constant laughter and is light enough to be enjoyed by children and adults. Without a star name, the cast is made up of players who have their individual followings and there are enough of them to make this fact have an important bearing on box office results. . . The reception tendered 'Three Married Men' will undoubtedly cause Paramount to plant Karns, Frawley and Overman in more pictures of the kind, which will be good news to exhibitors." + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 28 '36

THREE MAXIMS. Wilcox 87min

Players: Anna Neagle. Tullio Carminati. Leslie Banks. Horace Hodges

Director: Herbert Wilcox

Dialogue film produced in England. The story concerns three trapeze performers in a small French circus. The two men members are in love with the girl in the troupe. On the opening night of their act at a famous French theatre, the unsuccessful lover plans to let his rival fall to his death, but changes his mind when the girl, sensing his intentions, faints. She is rescued and the three are reconciled.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The three stars all appear remarkably at home on the trapeze, and there is no sign of faking or 'doubling.' A film with a fresh appeal and plenty of excitement. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p114 J1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A completely satisfying entertainment for ticket buyers, and a first class production job all around. . . Chalk up several red stars to director Herbert Wilcox, both for swift and sure direction and for a new and improved Anna Neagle. He has severely reduced her tendency to be rather too skittish, and she does a grand job as the apex of the triangle. . . All in all a fine piece of entertainment, certain box office on this side [London] and with a good bit more than a chance for America." + Hollywood Reporter p4 J1 14 '36

"Big virtue of this personally directed Herbert Wilcox production is that it has the punch in the right place. The final scenes picture the climax of a triangular drama of jealousy and revenge in which the actors are three trapeze artists. . . This is good stuff, well directed, well played and altogether convincing. Good audience material, it is also first class exploitation subject matter. And for the showman are the names of Tullio Carminati and Leslie Banks, with that of Anna Neagle for places where she is known. Certainly it is her best performance." + Motion Pict Daily p16 J1 10 '36

"Not so very long ago, Anna Neagle was a chorus girl. . . She was pretty and had youth, but her talents were undeveloped. Herbert Wilcox presented her with negative results. In this picture she reveals a natural spontaneity and a very lovable personality that clicks. . . She is brilliantly supported by Carminati and Leslie Banks, two standard actors of repute who acquit themselves admirably. . . Elemental enough in story, but the general effect is excellent, due to the strong cast and admirable direction. Circus atmosphere is correct and vivid, as are also the theatre scenes in Paris. In the opening scenes the background of a French peasant village is faithfully depicted." + Variety p31 J1 15 '36

THREE OF A KIND. Invincible 73min My 20 '36

Players: Evalyn Knapp. Chic Chandler. Berton Churchill. Bradley Page

Director: Phil Rosen

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: fair comedy."

Parents' M p48 Ag '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fairly entertaining romantic comedy with good number of laughs okay for popular bills." + — Film Daily p11 Je 24 '36

"Independently made 'Three of a Kind' represents pretty fair results. It is the situations and the plotting rather than the weight of story, the dialog and general workmanship that makes this subject acceptable. The comedy treatment is an asset, even if none of the laughs are of heavyweight calibre." + — Variety p23 J1 1 '36

THREE ON THE TRAIL. Sherman-Paramount
67min Ap 24 '36

Players: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison, Onslow Stevens, Muriel Evans
Director: Howard Bretherton

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A good clean western comedy. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: good Western; 14-18: good; 8-14: good. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Beautiful outdoor photography, fast-riding and plenty of humor make this series above the average in entertainment for Western type. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Mature-family." DAR

"Family, exclusive of nervous children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A thrilling Western, in a most realistic desert setting, with fine horsemanship, characteristic shooting and drinking scenes. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"In quite leisurely tempo . . . the story is pictured against a background of scenic mountain country, beautifully photographed. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 20 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"It is not the best of the Hop-a-long Cassidy series, but those who have enjoyed the others will doubtlessly be pleased by this. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: too exciting."

+ — Motion Pict R Jl '36

"A stereotyped Western with a hackneyed story, wild riding, much shouting and spectacular gun play. Family & junior matinees."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women

THREE WISE GUYS. MGM 72min My 15 '36

Players: Robert Young, Betty Furness, Raymond Walburn, Thurston Hall, Bruce Cabot

Director: George B. Seitz

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: not the best; C: no." Christian Century p1095 Ag 12 '36

"[It] provides excellent light entertainment. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The dialogue was smart and carefully timed; the cast wisely chosen, with acting honors going to Raymond Walburn as 'Doc.' Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature-mediocre." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"A far-fetched story, loosely constructed but very lively and diverting with clever dialogue and many absurd situations. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Clever action, peppy dialogue and interesting locales result in good entertainment for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Je 27 '36

"[It is] a light frothy picture. . . The good work of the well chosen cast, clever dialogue and adroit direction gives this picture its entertainment value. Adults & young people."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Je 14 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"[It is a] trivial comedy. It is well directed and moves at a lively clip with some amusing situations and fairly entertaining dialogue, but if you miss it you need not repine. Adolescents, 12-16: no value, subject matter not recommended; children, 8-12: no."

+ — Motion Pict R Jl '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 17 '36

"A: implausible but fairly entertaining; Y: unethical; C: hardly."

Parents' M p46 Jl '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Those who are possessed of an extraordinarily sweet-tooth no doubt relish these Damon Runyon confections. . . The comedy is amusingly enough played, the action is rapid, the entire result extremely movie." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p12 Je 20 '36

TICKET TO PARADISE. Republic 65min Jl 10 '36

Players: Roger Pryor, Wendy Barrie, Claude Gillingwater, Andrew Tombes

Director: Aubrey Scotto

The adventures of a young amnesia victim who learns his identity, wins a young socialite and closes a business deal.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 9 '36

"A and Y: entertaining; C: if interested."

Parents' M p70 S '36

"It is well directed and includes some situations that are amusing and some that are both dull and extravagant. However, the moments of romance and thrills hold interest. Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Je 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is a] bargain version of the flossy stock story of an 'amnesia' victim. . . An unresolved mixture of fun, fantasy and melodrama; now dull, now amusing. Passable movie when it goes in strictly for romance and thrills."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 15 '36

N Y Times p5 Ag 8 '36

"[It is] a rather feeble and fumbling carbon copy of the Brewster's Millions theme. . . Frankly, I doubt whether the antics in the film are of a kind to divert ordinary moviegoers. However, they may be of some interest to students of amnesia and so to them the film is recommended." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p16 Ag 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fast and clever in both dialogue and action, this is good light comedy to fill out any bill."

+ — Box Office p27 Jl 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

TICKET TO PARADISE—Continued

"This has comedy and action and is a pleasing number. Aubrey Scotto's direction is excellent and he got much out of the slender story."

+ Film Daily p8 Je 25 '36

"It is rather lightweight fare, thanks to a slender story and a script that lets down in spots, but what laughs it has are wholesome and hearty and it will hold up to needs for a bit of frivolity on neighborhood double bills."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p2 Je 20 '36

"This is at times amusing and occasionally a bit dull."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 Je 22 '36

"Estimate: neighborhood program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p69 J1 1 '36

"Ingratating performances by Roger Pryor, Wendy Barrie and Claude Gillingwater go far in making this fantastic farce-comedy digestible. It contains full quota of movement, a number of chuckles and makes fair enough hot weather entertainment on duo combinations where definite contrast to heavy drama is needed. Marquee weakness will keep it in dual territory."

+ — Variety p55 J1 15 '36

"Aubrey Scotto takes this aggregation of light, fast-moving farcical situations, wraps it up in a bundle and goes to town. Aided by a well-balanced cast, beautiful settings and smart dialog, the director delivers a clever bill of entertainment that will please the average audience."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 20 '36

TO MARY—WITH LOVE. 20th century-Fox
87min Ag 1 '36

Players: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy, Ian Hunter, Claire Trevor

Director: John Cromwell

Based on a novel of the same title by Richard Sherman. The story is set in New York and is a detailed portrait of modern marriage during the ten years between 1925 and 1935. Against a panorama of events including the boom years, the market crash, the depression, the couple are brought together finally by a friend who has always been deeply in love with the wife.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: very good; Y: very mature; C: no."
Christian Century p119 Ag 19 '36

"To Mary—With Love" will make a grand record as a shopper's matinee, but it is doubtful if Friend Husband will agree in its popularity and appeal. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: good; family: good; 14-18: good; 8-14: mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Mature." DAR

"A well constructed and well acted social drama, with good dialogue, beautiful backgrounds nicely photographed and attractive musical accompaniment. Lavish drinking which seems necessary to the plot. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An excellent supporting cast for the three capable principals, aided by good direction, make a thoroughly interesting social drama that rings true. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The picture is interesting in spite of its lack of novelty because it is sincerely and plausibly presented, the acting is natural and convincing, the characters are worthwhile people, and the problems involved touch upon experiences we have encountered, at least in our neighbors' homes, if not in our own. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 1 '36

"The director has made skillful use of all material giving us an unusually interesting and entertaining picture. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
J1 24 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates J1 15 '36

"[It] provides absorbing entertainment. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 22 '36

"Those of us who have lived through the ten hectic years following the War will enjoy the interesting interpretation of the highlights. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Ag 6 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"An interesting and unusual triangle, with a colorful background of contemporary events. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide J1 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It may be suspected that John Cromwell would have been even more successful if the choice had fallen on a different set of characters. . . They belong a little too obviously to the circle of smart young folks to give the theme that universal appeal that it demands. Their speech is just a trifle too glib and sparkling; their success comes a little too easily and the orbit of their rising fortunes is pitched too high. . . 'To Mary—With Love' is not a perfect film. But it does have more than the average of admirable qualities." E. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 8 '36

"Given a pair whose experience is not quite typical of their class, the story has the merit of plausibility upon its own terms and an interesting cast. Entertainment for adults."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 22 '36

"Cromwell . . . gives us a picture which reveals rare understanding of human impulses and to which we give sympathetic emotional response. . . And because it is just an ordinary story, a simple one of situations in which we easily could imagine ourselves, we feel for the three people, understand them and with sustained interest follow their fortunes for the decade the story spans."

+ Hollywood Spec p7 Ag 1 '36

"The picture, in its broad outline, is quite familiar stuff, but so sincerely played that the pungent screen play by Sherman and Howard Smith is displayed to telling effect. . . As the primary menace to Miss Loy's marriage, Claire Trevor, playing a hedonistic drunkard, is a complete delight. Even with Baxter's stodgy work, the film has undeniable feeling and a sharply distinctive flavor that makes it a tearful treat for the up-to-date matron." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p35 Ag 29 '36

"One of these fine days somebody with an eye for urban color and a clear recollection of the details of what Westbrook Pegler calls the era of wonderful nonsense will produce a film chronicling the daffy magnificence of Manhattan as a few surviving veterans knew and loved it a decade ago. It is a wistful subject, replete with sure-fire historic potentialities, but the idea men leagued in the production of the work on view this week at the Paramount scorned its opportunities in favor of a shockingly banal saga of bourgeoisie domesticity. . . [It is] a banana-split drama of marital felicity, indicated by a prodigious and sickening quantity of hugging and bussing on the part of Miss Loy and Mr. Baxter, catastrophe on the inevitable emotional shoals of life, and eventual reconciliation again indicated by a crescendo of passes and sentimental goose grease between these troupers. There isn't a motive that isn't tiresomely antique or an interlude that isn't characterized by such handholding and kiss-nest idiocy as to revolt the sensibilities of even the half-judicious." Lucius Beebe

— N Y Herald Tribune p13 Ag 27 '36

"The picture . . . should be popular entertainment. Its emotions are real, its direction effective and the general production, with its brief extracts from contemporary newsreels, far more lavish than it might appear at first. 'To Mary—With Love' is certainly on the recommended list." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p10 Ag 27 '36

"'To Mary—With Love,' is a film sketch of the last decade that you who are thirtyish and were perhaps a part of that whirl of jazz, speakeasies, mushroom millionaires and Babylonian gayety which characterized the twinkling Twenties can hardly afford to miss. . . . Lest you forget, the era is recaptured for you in the meticulously directed film treatment Twentieth Century-Fox has prepared. . . . The story teams Myrna Loy and Warner Baxter. . . . Somehow though, to one who likes his Loy flippant and satirically histrionic and his Baxter carefree and debonair, this inherently woeful story seems unsuited to the two. To be frank about it, Ian Hunter, as the other man . . . rather steals the picture from the noted team." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 27 '36

"There is at the Paramount this week more footage of fol-de-rol playing at being real—'To Mary—With Love.' . . . Most of the scenes are circa 1925 and so is the technique." Douglas Gilbert

— N Y World-Telegram p9a Ag 29 '36

"There are no surprises, I assure you, in 'To Mary—With Love.' Myrna Loy and Warner Baxter outline ten years of married life in this rather painful brief. . . . They suffer and suffer and at last decide they might as well go on suffering, and that's all there is to it." John Mosher

— New Yorker p67 S 5 '36

"The tragedy of a man broken in morale by the depression and a two-year binge is so candied that little remains but a man-weds-girl-trouble-sets-in-all-comes-out-o.k. formula movie."

— News-Wk p27 S 5 '36

"Unfortunately credible material is often trite and we've been through the staunch-wife-neglecting husband . . . the death of the first child . . . husband grubbing for money in an attempt to forget . . . wife turning to the social whirl for the same reason . . . the years forming a chasm between the two. Vidor's 'The Crowd' handled a similar theme but through honesty and power became one of the screen's features that will live. . . . The picture suffers when it becomes maudlin, loses through over emphasis. Younger leading men would have made some of the situations more sympathetic, the emotional foundering less turgid." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p11 Ag 8 '36

"This movie is too much like life to be spectacular entertainment. Nevertheless it is a biting case history of what has happened to some bright young people in the last ten years. . . . 'To Mary—With Love' loses pace by being told through the eyes of a bystander instead of a participant. For the same reason it gains sensibility."

+ Time p26 Ag 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This could have been titled 'To Showmen—With Profit.' A brilliant script, masterful direction, and flawless acting by Myrna Loy, Warner Baxter and Ian Hunter merge with the intelligent production guidance of Kenneth MacGowan to make a picture rating tops. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Jl 25 '36

"The 1925-1935 page from the life of a married couple as here pictured, is a most enjoyable and satisfying dramatic love story presented in a manner that should give it wide box-office success. It has all the ingredients that make it a woman's picture, and the charm of Myrna Loy can't help but attract the men. For the role of the wife, a better choice than Miss Loy could not have been made. Her work is a pleasure to watch."

+ Film Daily p11 Jl 21 '36

"A penetrating and incisively detailed portrait of modern marriage with emotional values keenly compounded to make a screenplay of distinguished worth. . . . This picture is headed for big returns all up and down the line. It is, in a word, a box office blessing."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 17 '36

"The film makes a direct appeal to feminine patronage, yet it is of compelling interest to general adult audiences. . . . The situations and dialogue are effectively blended and aim to stir sympathetic emotions. Devoid of anything that smacks of artificial theatrics, the human quality of the story is impressive. It gives Baxter, Miss Loy, Hunter and Miss Trevor many opportunities to contribute exceptional performances."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Jl 18 '36

"Drama that women should like, backed by names, 'To Mary—With Love' ought to be a good entrant."

Phila Exhibitor p35 Ag 1 '36

"It . . . does not lend itself well to picturization. It will please in some measure and among some classes, mostly feminine. Probably on the popularity of the printed story. But equally true, it will make men restless and actively impatient with its meandering triviality and lack of action. For juvenile (matinees, etc.) the picture is extremely dubious. . . . It is a pretentious hash-over of the semi-realistic glamorized Hollywood approach to unemployment and tough times."

— + Variety p21 S 2 '36

"The progress of a moving, tense, bitter-sweet love story [is told] . . . with such production wisdom and such superlative acting that it comes close to being all things to all men as entertainment. The box office should respond most prosperously to the picture's many graces, with the names of Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy, Ian Hunter and Claire Trevor to lure the customers."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 17 '36

TRAILIN' WEST. Warner 62min S 5 '36

Players: Dick Foran, Paula Stone, Robert Barrat, Addison Richards

Director: Noel Smith

A western melodrama with a Civil War background.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Fine horsemanship and beautiful horses are the redeeming features of this film, which children may enjoy. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: good; family: good; 14-18: good; 8-14: too intense." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Beautiful scenery, excellent riding, thrilling physical combats and a cowboy with a pleasing voice, all combine to make an unusually pleasing Western. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Mature-family." DAR

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +— Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

TRAILIN' WEST—Continued

"A constructive picture for the family."
S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
+ Fox W Coast Bul J1 4 '36

"If the average Western has advanced a step at a time, this picture has taken two steps backward. . . . To be sure there are good views of mountainous country and daring horsemanship, but roistering saloon scenes and gambling make it questionable for juniors, although they constitute the class which would overlook the weak points of the film. Adolescents, 12-16; poor; children, 8-12; no."

— Motion Pict R J1 '36

"Entertainment for the family & junior matinees."
Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 24 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency J1 16 '36

"A, Y and C: poor."
Parents' M p70 S '36

"A good old-time Western. Family-juvenile."
+ Wkly Guide S 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fair enough little Western is given an element of novelty by a Civil War setting. There are the full quota of fights and fast-riding action shots."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 17 '36

"The Civil War secret service slant makes this Western a little different and gives exhibitors a new exploitation angle. . . . The screen play by Anthony Coldeway has better-than-usual dialogue and the photography by Sid Hickox adds considerably to the value of the production."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Je 18 '36

"Estimate: routine Western."
+ — Phila Exhibitor p69 J1 1 '36

TRAPPED BY TELEVISION. Columbia 63min
Je 12 '36

Players: Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot, Nat Pendleton, Joyce Compton

Director: Del Lord

A young inventor of a television machine is opposed by crooked rival interests who try to destroy the machine just as he is demonstrating it to a corporation. The machine records the fight between the rival and the inventor and makes the sale possible.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: fair; C: possibly."
Christian Century p1047 J1 29 '36

"[It is] a well acted, but stereotyped plot. Family." E Coast Preview Committee
+ — Fox W Coast Bul Je 20 '36

"Lew Ayres' polished performance as the announcer just rescues the film from complete crudity. Special suitability: adults. The police battle at the end renders the film unsuitable for nervous or sensitive children."

— + Mo Film Bul p107 Je '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Je 25 '36

"A, Y and C: fair melodrama."
Parents' M p70 S '36

"Family."
Sel Motion Pict J1 1 '36

"Interesting and rather exciting. Family."
+ Wkly Guide Je 13 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 22 '36

"'Trapped by Television' is a breezy, illogical concoction of comedy and melodrama. For its lighter moments, we are indebted to Nat Pendleton, who contributes a delightfully amusing performance even though he must wrestle with some fairly inane dialogue." T. M. P.
N Y Times p24 Je 15 '36

"No permanent harm has been done by the production of 'Trapped by Television,' the spotty new melodrama. When it is said that the film is a 'spotty melodrama' it is the intention of this reviewer to suggest that if the authors and director had taken time in its preparation and production and given it the attention that it deserves, 'Trapped by Television' might have resulted in a fairly diverting thriller."

— N Y World-Telegram p22 Je 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The television slant given to this strictly routine affair is the only redeeming feature—for exploitation purposes—of an otherwise average concoction of comedy, conversation and an unconvincing romance. Family."

+ — Box Office p75 Je 27 '36

"Trying to take advantage of the television era that is close upon us furnishes a live theme of popular interest, but the subject is too big and important to be treated in such a loose 10-20-30 style as in this production."

— + Film Daily p24 Je 16 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhood houses, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p68 J1 1 '36

"Ordinary melodrama lacking name draw and handicapped by tedious early pacing. Appears to be destined strictly for dualers and then in secondary spot. Even freshness of television angle is buried beneath pile of extraneous detail that means little or nothing. Ballyhooing of televisual slant won't be much of a help for added patronage after opening day because there is much in this film that will disappoint."

— Variety p23 Je 17 '36

TUNDRA. Burroughs-Tarzan 78min Ag 15 '36

Player: Del Cambre

Director: Norman Dawn

The record of a 400-mile trek thru the Alaskan tundra by a doctor whose plane crashes in the Arctic Circle. With a knife and a cigarette lighter he manages to cross marshes, glaciers, forests and icebergs and to adventure among countless wild animals.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A thin story thread weaves its way through what is fundamentally a travelogue (a good one, too) of the snow country and Nature proves a more exciting protagonist than many projected by a writer's pen. . . . The film unreels a satisfyingly different evening for fans who are bored with routine celluloid fare. Magnificent when it focuses on the great outdoors, 'Tundra' becomes rather crude stuff when human performers are introduced." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p10 Ag 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Replete with dramatic incidents, this picture will make a mark for itself at the box office. It has something that will appeal to every man, woman and child. The scenic grandeur alone will be worth the price of admission and of equal appeal are the true life atmosphere and action, not only of the native Eskimos, but of the myriads of wild animals photographed in their natural habitat. Family."

+ — Box Office p25 S 5 '36

"Here is a refreshing picture that should please audiences generally. It is laid in an Alaskan wilderness, with all types of animals sharing honors with Del Cambre, the featured player. In fact, two bear cubs, found by Cambre in his trek across the Arctic tundra, provide most of the laughs and they will be popular with adults as well as the youngsters."

+ Film Daily p4 Ag 25 '36

"This independent effort to do another 'Sequoia' has considerable merit in its natural history studies of the far north, and will prove interesting as a novelty in secondary houses and as an attraction for youngsters. . . . The story is cleverly concocted to make effective use of each encounter with the wild inhabitants of the north, but creaks with a lack of polish in the episodes involving the human actors. Del Cambre's work as the doctor likewise carries conviction in the woods, but misses fire in civilization."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 21 '36

"This film should draw the attention it unquestionably deserves, but the less said about the human actors the better. Fortunately there are few of them and the superb shots of the animal 'performers' hold the attention throughout. This should be good for a dual program in any situation. . . . The story . . . would be improved if the solitary hero's comments on life in the wilds were cut."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p3 Ag 22 '36

"A picture that needs strong selling, with word-of-mouth to help, 'Tundra' is more a feature of wild animal life than Hollywood drama. . . . The importance of the picture, however, does not rest in the acting but in the excellent photography of natural life. Selling this along special lines ought to help."

Phila Exhibitor p44 S 1 '36

"Picture, running 75 minutes, is one of the best and certainly the most complete assembly of wild animal life in its native habitat ever photographed for popular interest. It has thrills galore, gorgeous pictorial beauty, natural comedy in the antics of wild creatures. . . . and a diversity of excitements which will hold any mass audience rapt. . . . A natural for the family zones, it also has provocative novelty for class audiences if properly sold."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 21 '36

TWO AGAINST THE WORLD. Warner-First national 65min J1 18 '36

Players: Humphrey Bogart, Beverly Roberts, Linda Perry, Carlyle Moore, Jr.

Director: William McGann

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: strong; Y: doubtful value; C: no."
Christian Century p1095 Ag 12 '36

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."
Mo Film Bul p115 J1 '36

"A: protest against muck-raking more timely than pleasant; Y: mature; C: no."
Parents' M p48 Ag '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide J1 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A drab filler for adult double bills."
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 22 '36

"Two Against the World' is a retake of Louis Weitzenkorn's 'Five Star Final,' which lacks the sincerity of purpose that distinguished the earlier work." T. M. P.
— N Y Times p11 J1 11 '36

"Filmgoers with memories retentive enough will recognize 'Two Against the World' as none other than that smash hit of five years ago, 'Five Star Final.' . . . Although it has lost nearly all the bite and sting, fury and vigor of the original, which smashed out at yellow journals, the idea is still strong enough to impress those who did not see it in its newspaper office background. However, for the most part, the film seems to me maladroitly written and at times almost oafishly clumsy in its mere mechanics." William Boehnel
— + N Y World-Telegram p10 J1 13 '36

"Even without the punch lines of Louis Weitzenkorn's dialog and its alien background the situation is strong enough to be good entertainment for those who missed the original."

+ Time p54 J1 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This modernized version of 'Five Star Final' is a solid, swiftly-paced drama that should strike a responsive chord with audiences. The story and dialogue give a well-chosen and capable cast full rein for their abilities."

+ Film Daily p3 J1 11 '36

"What chances 'Two Against the World' might have had for single feature spots are considerably dwarfed by absence of marquee illumination and commonplace direction and casting. . . . 'Two Against the World' is too drab to get past the dual barrier."

— Variety p31 J1 15 '36

TWO-FISTED GENTLEMAN. Columbia 63min Ag 15 '36

Players: James Dunn, June Clayworth, George McKay

Director: Gordon Wiles

"Mickey Blake was a fighter [who] fought his way from preliminary boy to title contender because his smart little wife was there to manage, train and coach him. Then he met a blonde débutante, acquired a butler and a fear of getting his pretty face marked, and told his wife to keep out of his affairs." N Y Times

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a mediocre tale. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"We forget what it was called the last time Columbia filmed it, but 'Two-Fisted Gentleman' is the same old story about the young middle-weight who could not stand prosperity. . . . Altogether a picture of decidedly juvenile appeal." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p11 Ag 24 '36

"In this corner James Dunn, in the other June Clayworth, his manager-wife, with the lucky blonde always in the middle. Ten rounds of moralizing, but they left the baby out of this one." Douglas Gilbert

— N Y World-Telegram p13 Ag 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With nothing in it for fresh interest except the pleasing June Clayworth as a prize-fight manager and James Dunn as the leather-pushing sap, this well-worn story about the fighter who goes society is just for the secondary grind spots."

+ Film Daily p4 Ag 25 '36

"With some slight but effective changes from routine formula, this melodrama of the prizefighting ring manages to be entertaining fare. A genuine atmosphere of the ring and the fighting game pervades the story. Good type casting lends a realistic air to the story. It should be reasonably successful."

TWO-FISTED GENTLEMAN—Continued

+ — Motion Pict Daily p12 Ag 13 '36

"Estimate: usual fight yarn."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p40 S 1 '36

"[It is a] routine fight story. . . On the whole it's very familiar film fare which experiences great difficulty in being entertaining. Anything but a bright future is looked for. In most all respects, including story, direction, production, comedy and cast, 'Two-Fisted' is ordinary."

— Variety p20 Ag 26 '36

TWO IN A CROWD. Universal 85min Ag 30 '36

Players: Joan Bennett. Joel McCrea. Elisha Cook, Jr. Alison Skipworth

Director: Alfred E. Green

"Joel McCrea, horse owner who is broke, and Joan Bennett, similarly situated, each come into possession of a torn half of a $1,000 bill. Neither trusts the other and they jointly buy a horse." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 17 '36

"The plot is a bit complicated which makes the story drag at times, but there are plenty of amusing situations and a light comedy touch is retained throughout. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide S 5 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The story is a wild, unbelievable piece of patchwork, about as crazy as a Marx Brothers comedy. As a story it is much poorer than the majority of those from which much poorer pictures are made, but it was fortunate enough to fall into the hands of a first class director who has an intelligent appreciation of the camera's status as the screen's story-telling medium. To Al Green the play was not the thing. He used it merely as raw material to be fashioned into acceptable entertainment."

+ — Hollywood Spec p7 Ag 15 '36

"A sprightly beginning dwindles into a routine and stodgily unfolded little plot that is neither surprising nor always believable. . . The picture has no suspense, and displays very little [else] to take its place." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p46 S 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here's a picture that should be the box office successor to 'Broadway Bill.' It has all of the thrills, comedy and romance of the Baxter-Loy film."

+ — Box Office p31 Ag 15 '36

"A very capable cast tries hard in this picture and there are a number of bright enjoyable spots. However, between these points, much of the material is dull and one's interest lags. The elimination of a lot of useless footage and the addition of a few snappy scenes would do much to give the show some more pep. The piece makes a play for comedy, and now and then some good hefty laughs are obtained."

— + Film Daily p3 Ag 8 '36

"It's frothy stuff in the modern vein, underplaying melodramatic clichés in favor of the human, love-on-the-run approach. Joel McCrea and Joan Bennett breeze through the boy-meets-girl leads in snappy style."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 5 '36

"An interesting comedy-romance for audiences and offering exploitation material for showmen, this film is light and airy with considerable fun in the romance situations, hints of melodrama and plenty of excitement. . . Comedy is the element to be stressed in the selling."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p9 Ag 6 '36

"Pleasant comedy, with names to sell, this is an enjoyable entrant that all should like. Because it has good players it should do a nice business."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p37 Ag 15 '36

"'Two in a Crowd' is a tail-ender in the 'It Happened One Night' cycle. . . A capable cast works hard to make the picture interesting and succeeds in making it but mildly so. . . Main trouble is a thin story with occasional good lines of dialog which hop it up; however, mainly it is a struggle."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 5 '36

U

UNGDOM AV I DAG. See Youth of today

UNKNOWN RANGER. Darmour-Columbia 58min S 15 '36

Players: Bob Allen. Martha Tibbett. Buzzy Henry

Director: Spencer Gordon Bennett

A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"This first Bob Allen Western produced by Larry Darmour for Columbia release sets a new altitude record for freshness of story and originality of treatment. It is the most entertaining broncho play seen hereabouts for many moons and audiences will heartily agree wherever Westerns are box office currency."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 15 '36

"Every Western needs a little something different and this one makes two bids for distinction. Besides a full measure of hard riding, there is a fight between two stallions and some very fair roping and riding by a tiny boy, Buzzy Henry."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p15 Ag 18 '36

"Fast moving Western, this should be a strong buildup for Robert Allen as a Western star."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p40 S 1 '36

"Producer Larry Darmour reveals in 'The Unknown Ranger' that he has an attraction capable of lining up with the others which are bringing big cash returns to those houses which play the horse operas."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 15 '36

W*WALKING ON AIR. RKO 68min S 11 '36

Players: Gene Raymond. Ann Sothorn. Jessie Ralph. Henry Stephenson

Director: Joseph Santley

Music director: Nathaniel Shilkret

Music and lyrics: Bert Kalmar. Sid Silvers. Harry Ruby

Based on a short story, Count Pete, by Francis M. Cockrell. "The story concerns a mimic battle between a strong-willed father and an equally determined daughter over the man she has decided to marry. Each hires a young man to foil the other's game. Father's choice is a two-fisted bodyguard. Daughter employs Gene Raymond to act as an insufferable French count who is to disgust the father into letting her have her own way." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good; Y: very good; C: perhaps."
Christian Century p1026 S 9 '36

"This musical comedy is good light entertainment for the average audience." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"The story does not live up to its promising beginning. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Lively action, pleasing sets and adequate acting of an absurd plot provide an hour of entertainment for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The picture, with a hint of a lesson to parents, is entertaining and will interest the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Ag 29 '36

"Family."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 19 '36

"An absurd plot provides an hour of entertainment for the family."
+ Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"This is a diverting comedy, and although the plot is an implausible one the direction is deft and swift moving. . . Breezy entertainment for the entire family."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 19 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36
Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide Ag 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Joseph Santley's deft direction realizes to the full all the entertainment possibilities of this amusing little story. He enters into the fun of the thing by refusing to take it seriously and going all the way from high comedy to outright farce. . . 'Walking on Air' appeals to us pleasantly from the first scene. It is mounted with good taste, a high degree of artistic merit being attained in the construction and dressing of the sets. . . The story proceeds consistently, and agreeable musical interpolations do not seriously impede its forward progress."
+ Hollywood Spec p10 Ag 29 '36

"A new contribution to late summer hilarity comes from RKO-Radio with 'Walking on Air,' a blithely insane picture which could not have cost half as much as many dull and unwieldy items pretending to the same mad clownishness."
+ Lit Digest p20 Ag 29 '36

"'Walking on Air' . . . is a gay, frothy comedy with a sprinkling of tuneful songs. Its producers, RKO-Radio Pictures, couldn't have realized the entertainment possibilities of this production when it was run off at the studio, otherwise it would have been spared the indignity of reaching Broadway on a double-feature program." T. M. P.
+ N Y Times p20 S 12 '36

"For about one-half of its unreeling time 'Walking on Air' . . . is a feathery but animated little farce that may be enjoyed to the full since it is a witty and humorous variation of the 'Boy Meets Girl' theme. . . Unfortunately, the remaining sections of 'Walking on Air' are not as brisk. . . What follows thereafter is stereotyped and dull, a langorous and feeble attempt to bring to a close a glib little farce by injecting some song numbers into it." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p25 S 14 '36

"As frothy as the title suggests, this is a very tidy comedy job, which drew prolonged and frequent laughter from the preview audience, and which certainly will not cheat the fans. . . A handsome, light-hearted show—Producer Edward Kaufman garners bows." Molly Lewin

+ Script p10 Ag 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Bubbling over with good, clean fun and never having a dull moment, this film will please all audiences in search of light, frothy entertainment and account for itself nobly at the box office."

+ Box Office p31 Ag 22 '36

"[It is] an altogether satisfying hour." L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 S '36

"This hilarious romantic comedy is a swell laugh show that should be grand entertainment for any audience. It may not be one of those pretentious offerings, but it certainly has everything that an audience would want in an enjoyable picture. The piece is one of those light things full of clever situations and bright lines."

+ Film Daily p9 Ag 17 '36

"Here's a sparkling romantic farce-comedy with songs that will hold its own for entertainment with almost any of the year's smartest laugh-provokers. Produced on a limited budget it has been given some of the silken class quality that Radio has achieved in the Astaire-Rogers vehicles and it will go places, beginning at the top."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ag 13 '36

"This is a light farce-comedy which at times attains hilarious moments, although it follows a somewhat familiar pattern. . . Raymond sings two numbers . . . which should interest his followers."

Motion Pict Daily p11 Ag 13 '36

"Pleasant comedy that rises a bit above the program average because of lines, situations, playing, 'Walking on Air' should please. . . Depending on good lines, situations for its laughs (there are many), the entire picture is lightly handled for satisfactory returns."

+ Phila Exhibitor p41 S 1 '36

"Hilarious comedy of romantic cross-purposes, which by virtue of zestful playing, deft direction, rollicking story and captivating musical amendment comes to the box office on considerably higher rating than its original allotment and will amply take care of itself in any company. Gene Raymond hands his fans one of the most ingratiating comedy performances in his record, a breezy, assured, colorful role."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ag 13 '36

WANTED MEN. Hoffberg 35min Je 1 '36

Players: Charles Laughton, Dorothy Gish, Malcolm Keen, Jack Osterman

Director: Clifford Pember

British dialogue film made in 1929 by British & Dominions. "The plot has to do with a girl who almost suffers a fate worse than death when she falls into the foul clutches of a group of fiendish criminals living in the frozen North and is saved from this fate by the heroic efforts of Mr. Laughton." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Seemingly extracted from the mothballs because of Mr. Laughton's fame, the piece has little value outside of the actor's performance, which, though framed in a melodrama, crude and violent, possesses the characteristic Laughton distinction." Marguerite Tazelaar

WANTED MEN—Continued

— N Y Herald Tribune p10 J1 8 '36

"'Wanted Men' [is a] searing, action-crammed, thirty-seven-minute, all-talking screen melodrama. . . Don't, by any means, miss 'Wanted Men.' For its self-sacrificing hero is none other than Charles Laughton. . . The picture was made by British and Dominions when the talkies were indeed in their infancy. It was to have been called 'The Wolves.' . . We couldn't catch more than a stray word here and there until about the second reel, and we are told that several reels had already been eliminated because of sound defects. Just why it was revived at all is somewhat of a mystery." J. T. M.

— + N Y Times p15 J1 8 '36

"[It is] a seriously acted and written melodrama. . . To try to describe the effect of the work of the cast, which includes Charles Laughton and Dorothy Gish, is, frankly, impossible. Such things must be seen to be appreciated to their fullest extent." William Boehnel

N Y World-Telegram p25 J1 15 '36

"A somewhat besmudged early sketch of Charles Laughton's is now about, called 'Wanted Men.' . . Anything with Mr Laughton in it has some interest, of course, and historians may also relish the presence of Miss Dorothy Gish, and of Arthur Margetson." John Mosher

New Yorker p49 J1 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Dealing with a few episodes rather than a story, this British-made short-length feature is very weak entertainment. Poor direction, shoddy photography and faulty sound conspire with crude editing to throttle the abilities of Charles Laughton and Dorothy Gish except for fleeting moments."

— Film Daily p9 Je 8 '36

"Estimate: poor, except as burlesque."

— Phila Exhibitor p30 J1 15 '36

"Everybody makes mistakes when young. This one was made by Charles Laughton back in his native land and it's still hanging over his head. . . Picture came over here in eight reels, but the World Theatre on West 49th Street, New York, cut it down to 35 minutes. The remainder, if cut up further, would make excellent celluloid collar and cuff sets."

— Variety p55 J1 15 '36

WE WENT TO COLLEGE. MGM 64min Je 19 '36

Players: Charles Butterworth, Walter Abel, Hugh Herbert, Una Merkel, Walter Catlett

Director: Joseph Santley

A group of old college graduates return for a reunion. A college professor's wife remembering old campus days tries to rekindle a romance with the husband of a friend.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: poor; C: no."

— Christian Century p1047 J1 29 '36

"Adults & young people." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Satirical but not convincing is this comedy of college reunion spirit. . . The vain search of the old timers for their vanished youth is both pathetic and exaggerated. Excessive drinking makes it unwholesome for family or young people. Adults: a matter of taste." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This rollicking comedy is so silly at times, it really is quite funny. . . Drinking stressed unnecessarily. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A diverting satire on college 'loyalty' which presents some absurd angles familiar to anyone who has ever lived in a college town. Acting is realistic, the comedy, altho far-fetched, is adroitly handled and there is a certain authentic college atmosphere. There is a good deal of drinking which is perhaps not overdrawn, but the film is best suited to adult audiences who can enjoy a laugh at their own expense." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul J1 25 '36

"Though the cast includes well known comedians, the picture is not particularly amusing and is replete with unnecessary drinking. Entertainment a matter of taste."

— Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) J1 15 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates J1 15 '36

"Often amusing but only a fair example of farce. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p18 J1 '36

"There is only a slender thread of story but no more is needed on which to string the amusing incidents of 'Alumni Week.' Those who have ever attended one of these reunions will live again their sensations of pleasure or boredom and those who haven't will be afforded a close-up of what they have missed. Adolescents, 12-16: probably acceptable; children, 8-12: no interest."

+ Motion Pict R J1 '36

"Not a big picture but one which will tickle the ribs and afford an evening of good entertainment. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women J1 8 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 9 '36

"A and Y: enjoyable; C: no interest." Parents' M p70 S '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Those who still are young and are not at college may be disappointed with 'We Went to College' as it is not the standard motion picture with its hero, heroine and villain. It is just good fun. . . Joseph Santley's direction is highly creditable. He keeps things moving along joyously without making too much noise, quite a feat with such hilarious material."

+ — Hollywood Spec p14 J1 4 '36

"This is intended solely for laughing purposes. And even though it is never as completely funny as the unrestrained antics of the players would have it, the picture's plentitude of gags hit a fairly successful level. . . 'We Went to College' was never meant to supply a full movie evening. It is, rather, only a prolonged short subject stretched to feature length to appease those who demand two offerings for the price of one ticket." (2 stars) Beverly Hills Liberty p45 J1 25 '36

"Amused by the trim notion that 'old grads' returning to their alma mater, might provide a thin plot and fat humors, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer finds itself about half-right with 'We Went to College.' The plot is thin, but the humors turn out to be similarly skinny."

— Lit Digest p19 J1 4 '36

New Theatre p23 S '36

"It held a refreshing quality even though its presentation proved somewhat hackneyed. It describes a frequent experience, and a simple one, that of attending a class reunion. . .

While the picture has no particular distinction, it is often very funny entertainment."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p6 J1 27 '36

"Probably no one will give it a thought when the Motion Picture Academy holds its commencement exercises and confers honorary degrees upon the year's best pictures, but we are polishing up a cum laude for 'We Went to College.' Produced by Metro in a genial if economic moment, it is just about as pleasant a comedy as we have seen this season. And it is no less a credit to the M-G-M studios than 'The Great Ziegfeld', 'San Francisco' and some of the other more opulent items which cost more to produce, will earn more at the box office but, on a pro rata basis, are no richer in entertainment." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p20 J1 27 '36

"If there is anyone more ridiculous than an 'old grad' back for reunion at his alma mater it is an actor trying to impersonate an old grad back for reunion at his alma mater. . . Watching such capable actors as Walter Abel, Charles Butterworth, Hugh Herbert and Walter Catlett attempt to burlesque the antics of men who should know better but who become slightly childish when they get back on the campus gives one the jitters. For their task is about as impossible as gilding the proverbial lily. It just can't be done. You simply can't burlesque burlesque." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p20 J1 27 '36

"A comedy with individuality, and one which you're sure to like, is something with the unpromising name 'We Went to College.'" Russell Maloney

+ New Yorker p53 Ag 8 '36

"Despite the directorial talents of the talented Joseph Santley this is pretty much of a waste of time and energy for all concerned. The plot wanders about, helpless as an amnesia victim. . . 'We Went to College' . . . but this reviewer went to sleep." Herb Sterne

— Script p14 J1 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This was designed for nothing but laughs and an effective cast, capably directed, makes it fulfill specifications."

+ — Box Office p27 J1 4 '36

"Although the piece gets a number of laughs, it adds up to hardly anything more than pleasing program fare. The dialogue and a few of the situations get over whatever hilarity is attained, but it seems what a group of old graduates do when they get together is hardly exceedingly funny. Joseph Santley's direction shows that he tried hard to do something with what he was given, but for the most part, the material isn't strong."

+ — Film Daily p7 Je 23 '36

"With a property that doubtless seemed like a good idea at the time, 'We Went to College' just doesn't get anywhere. A fine cast of expert farceurs try their best to find humor in the material, but with little success. . . Certainly no one concerned shirked the assignment, yet the entertainment values were not there. Result is far from satisfactory as program fare. . . Charles Butterworth suffers mainly from lack of adequate comedy of the type with which he has long been associated. . . The waste of Una Merkel's talents might easily call for a Congressional investigation."

— Hollywood Reporter p2 Je 20 '36

"Some people may like this. Others may think it silly. The preview audience's opinion swung both ways. The show is comedy. It has laughs in some places and falls flat in others."

Motion Pict Daily p6 Je 22 '36

"Estimate: weak program."

— Phila Exhibitor p69 J1 1 '36

"Nice marquee illumination is provided by this cast, but the picture is no match. . . The net results are of the dual class. Laughs come readily enough. But being evoked via gags, tag lines, mayhem and stereotype, they will benefit family audiences most readily when the picture is coupled with a heavier film."

+ — Variety p14 J1 29 '36

"Here's a good example of a top-notch comedy idea kicked around. 'We Went to College' should have been a comedy stand-out. As it is, it is no more than a weak secondary picture that will attract little attention despite a known cast. Trouble has been in transferring the idea to the screen. Harry Rapf's associates have muffed all around."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 20 '36

WELLINGTON PIKE GOES WEST. O'Neill-State rights 55min

Players: Russell Gleason. Jack LaRue. Virginia Carroll

Director: Maurice G. O'Neill

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency J1 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This independent production closely approaches an excellent comedy-farce. It is a Western to end all Westerns and it takes a dig at the blood-and-thunder epics with a deft tongue in the cheek touch. Picture is marred by poor recording and lack of editing."

+ — Box Office Je 27 '36

"Short on names, short on what the marquee needs, this is a minor effort that won't mean much except on double features, twin bills."

— Phila Exhibitor p12 J1 1 '36

WEST OF NEVADA. Colony 57min

Players: Rex Bell. Joan Barclay. Al St. John

Director: Robert Hill

Based on the novel, Raw Gold, by Charles Kyson. A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"A wild rock-them-and-sock-them action picture, with Rex Bell doing the hero stuff with all the attendant excitement of gun play, hand-to-hand encounters, and plenty of fast riding. There are plenty of twists in the plot to keep the suspense taut, and an intelligent effort seems to have been made to get this film away from the routine formula."

+ — Film Daily p11 J1 21 '36

"Estimate: okay Western."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p26 J1 15 '36

"Lure of gold, as detailed in this mustang-melodrama, never had the enticing qualities that Rex Bell delivers for the children. The most personable of the current crop of leather lotharios, Bell does his slugging and mugging in the grand manner throughout. Present day Westerns aren't built to support a bill, so this one will also have to take secondary place, although better than most."

+ — Variety p34 J1 22 '36

WHITE ANGEL. Warner-First national 75min
Je 19 '36

Players: Kay Francis. Ian Hunter. Donald Woods. Georgia Caine. Charles Croker-King. George Curzon

Director: William Dieterle

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: good; C: beyond them."
Christian Century p975 Jl 8 '36

"A beautifully portrayed story of the life of Florence Nightingale. The photography is outstanding and commendation should go to those responsible for the authenticity of settings and costumes. The direction is splendid, with just the right amount of emphasis put upon the necessary unpleasant phases. . . . Kay Francis gives an outstanding performance, with the courage and growth of purpose steadily progressing, in features, bearing, and appearance. She is admirably supported by sterling performers in this notable picture which should be seen by the entire family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Expertly directed, the simple story of Florence Nightingale emerges as engrossing film fare, despite the absence of the conventional love affair." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature-family." DAR

"Intensely dramatic and deeply appealing for any audience." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This outstanding historical drama glorifies the founder of a noble work and is suitable to an audience of any age. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Faultless direction and expert photography bring the drama to a magnificent climax. Kay Francis gives a distinguished performance which builds steadily in spiritual beauty. Long remembered by all who hear it will be her delivery of the final speech before Queen Victoria—the speech which has become the pledge of trained nurses throughout the world. A notable picture which reflects credit upon all who had a share in its making. For all ages." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Je 27 '36

"The photography is outstanding, intensifying the various moods of the picture. A picture of rare charm and beauty. Family."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Je 14 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Je 15 '36

"Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p121 Jl '36

"The full, rich life of a great woman is brought to the screen, historically true and unmarred by superficialities, so once more 'hats off' to Warner Brothers for bringing something worthwhile for the public to enjoy. The entire cast is outstanding and portray their roles with sincerity and conviction. . . . This historical drama should be seen by the entire family."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 17 '36

"A and Y: excellent; C: mature."
Parents' M p70 S '36

"This is one of the most consistent of the biographical productions. Nothing was allowed to intrude that might take away from the exposition of a woman's sympathy for suffering humanity and her firm belief in the right of a woman in a man's world to work out her own destiny. . . . The acting, direction and photography are excellent and the entire picture dignified and intensely interesting. Family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

"An interesting subject well produced and the acting of Kay Francis above the average. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Outstanding-family."

+ + Wkly Guide Je 20 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"If Miss Francis seems occasionally a little histrionic . . . one must remember that this all took place in mid-Victorian days when people were less afraid of speeches and emotionalism. . . . 'The White Angel' is a highly dramatized biography—it is inevitable that it should be—but, perhaps precisely for that reason, it is extraordinarily stimulating, hence a film not to be missed." E. L.

+ + Boston Transcript p4 Je 27 '36

"This production takes its place among the really important pictures of the season; it has the same fidelity to historical fact that distinguished 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' and an even greater human interest and heart appeal. Florence Nightingale is perhaps the ideal of all modern womanhood. . . . From the viewpoint of acting, Kay Francis deserves every encomium that can be heaped upon her: she is thoughtful, sincere, firm when necessary, gentle always." Laura Elston

+ + Canadian M p35 Ag '36

"Like 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' ['The White Angel'] . . . is a sincere, conscientious, and thoroughly worth-while document. . . . Though Kay Francis is no Paul Muni, and her platitudinous utterances make her appear more concerned with creating history than doing the work for itself, 'The White Angel' comes as an entirely acceptable film. . . . Altogether, it is an eloquent obituary of a great woman."

(3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p47 Jl 18 '36

"The scenarist, Mordaunt Shairp, has been firm in his intention to hew to the facts of the Nightingale story. No discernible liberties have been taken. The emerging picture is factually the courageous biography of The Lady With a Lamp. . . . The film is a triumph. . . . Some of the photography is remarkable and Miss Francis' support is stalwart. It is a sturdy, only occasionally dew-eyed twin to 'The Story of Louis Pasteur.'

+ + Lit Digest p18 Jl 4 '36

"A far too reverential treatment of the life of Florence Nightingale that chokes on its own sanctity. . . . Good photography by Tony Gaudio. Falls far below 'The Life of Louis Pasteur.'" Robert Stebbins

+ + New Theatre p22 Ag '36

"The latest delving of the cinema into biography finds Florence Nightingale the heroine of an impassioned and frequently moving screen drama. . . . It is a straightforward job of historical reconstruction, weaving together significant events in the career of the lady with the lamp while resolutely refraining from romantic embellishments. The direction of William Dieterle is imaginative and the acting is uniformly excellent. For all these virtues, however, the film has an episodic treatment which becomes tedious at times and it flirts dangerously with sentimentalism."

Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p16 Je 25 '36

"Hopefully, and in all honesty, Warners set about to make a companion piece to 'The Story of Louis Pasteur.' Sorrowfully, and in all honesty, this reviewer must report that 'The White Angel' does not come within hailing distance of that stirring, extraordinary film. . . . The intentions were too good. In their effort to honor the memory of Florence Nightingale, they have quite killed whatever personality that great lady may have had. Her screen biography is incredibly lifeless."

Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p28 Je 25 '36

"A respectful—in fact, a worshipful—history of Florence Nightingale, founder of modern nursing, the picture is dignified, reasonably accurate, deeply moving and dismayingly pompous. These descriptives are contradictory, which cannot be helped, for the film itself is a curious admixture of good and bad. Perhaps we had best stand on the adjective 'worth-while.' The epithet is not as faint as it sounds; not too many of any year's pictures are truly worth the seeing. . . . The film's fault . . . is that the life of its heroine has been editorialized: Miss Nightingale—as Kay Francis portrays her—talks, walks and thinks like a historical character. When she speaks, she is speaking for posterity." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p24 Je 25 '36

"Not only is the film a dignified and reasonably accurate account of Miss Nightingale's almost fanatical efforts in behalf of humanity, it has also been directed and acted with a fine appreciation of the characters and events that it depicts. William Dieterle has directed the film with inspired simplicity; and Kay Francis, by underplaying, recaptures the nobility that surely must have been Florence Nightingale's. The members of the supporting cast are all superb." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p13a Jl 3 '36

"There are no flagrant old-fashioned movie distortions of historical facts here, aside from the general atmosphere and performance, which are unfailingly picturesque. . . . [It] is a little schoolbookish, perfectly respectable, and, I should say, quite on the dull side." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p45 Jl 4 '36

"Meticulously written and acted, the latter half of the picture has punch and pungency that quite make up for the static early sequences. . . . Kay Francis has never done finer work than she offers during the latter half of the film. She ages convincingly, plays without obvious tricks, achieves a haggard manner that has nothing to do with grease paint. If the early sequences could be disregarded there might well be the Academy statuette in store for this performance. . . . A fine film that more than redeems its apathetic opening reels." Herb Sterne

+ Script p8 Je 27 '36

"The 'White Angel' is not only a worthy but often fascinating study of the past, reviving handsomely the glory of bygone days and deeds. A similar entertainment presented on the stage would attract encomiums not only from critics but also from teachers, doctors and philanthropists. On the screen it will fail to do so only because fashion deems it unsophisticated to credit Hollywood with sincerity."

+ + Time p49 Jl 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The producers of 'The Story of Louis Pasteur,' have come through with another great historical biography. . . . The picture has been carefully produced, with an eye to realism, and care has been taken to keep the production on a dignified plane. The acting of Kay Francis as Flo Nightingale is superb."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p9 Jl 18 '36

"As a motion picture it has the elements that attract and probably please the older conservatives and the more infrequent film-goers but it's shy on what it usually takes to please the younger crowd and those addicted to laughs, romance and action. It suggests a spotty box office career depending upon the individual theatre's clientele. . . . Apart from the saint-like spirit of self-sacrifice there is little sock or tension to the film story. . . . There may be a quarrel about Kay Francis in the title role. . . . Character is not quite every day human, but rather a disembodied religious impulse moving in and out among the minions of entrenched stupidity. . . . 'White Angel' needs plenty of selling and tie-ups."

+ — Variety p12 Jl 1 '36

WHITE FANG. 20th century-Fox 75min Jl 3 '36

Players: Michael Whalen. Jean Muir. George (Slim) Summerville. Charles Winninger. Jane Darwell

Director: David Butler

Based on the novel of the same title by Jack London. This is a sequel to Call of the Wild. "Alaska in 1900, with its tense drama of human ambition and perfidy, as well as courage and fidelity, forms the fascinating background for the story of two young men who go there in search of gold. One dies and the other claims the gold mine and wins not only wealth, but the love of the dead man's sister." (Sel Motion Pict)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: fairly good; C: perhaps."

Christian Century p1023 Jl 22 '36

"An old fashioned melodrama of an untamed country and its men. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Exceptional photography distinguishes this otherwise mediocre film." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre-mature." DAR

"The human cast is adequate and although the comedy is somewhat forced, fine photography and a story not too exacting in its requirements provide good family entertainment." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Clever comedy balance, offsetting the tense seriousness of the story, makes it one all will enjoy. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Jl 18 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Jl 1 '36

"Artificial in spite of its good cast, lovely photography and interesting story, this picture fails to convince or ring true. . . . A stilted melodrama of 'Klondike Days' which is suitable for the family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Jl 8 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Jl 9 '36

"A, Y and C: fair outdoor melodrama."

Parents' M p70 S '36

"The characterizations are excellent, humor being furnished by an engaging portrait of a doctor, but a caricature of a clergyman, used as comic relief, is to be deplored as wholly unnecessary and striking a most unpleasant note in an otherwise outstanding production. Family."

Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The possessor of a locale which has experienced wide popularity with readers and screen audiences, this almost wholly transparent Jack London story makes its cinematic appearance as a drama that should give satisfaction to spectators everywhere." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p8 Jl 18 '36

"[It] comes to the screen as a sturdy outdoor melodrama of much scenic beauty and a spurious vitality. The rather outmoded story has been filmed with a straightforward old-fashioned honesty and tackles its battle of men against the rigorous Arctic with commendable gusto. . . . There are no surprises in the story; but since it is agreeably enacted, and since the dog hero handles all his assignments with sure-footed skill, this can be listed as a satisfactory if not outstanding thriller of the wide-open spaces." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p33 Ag 15 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

WHITE FANG—Continued

"This earnest drama of fun in the mining camps is assuredly one of the mishaps of the season. If it were just a trifle worse it would have been funnier, but you can't expect such miracles even in Hollywood. . . It is, of course, ridiculous to waste the distinguished, sensitive and intelligent acting talent of Miss Muir in such a role and such a film, and you might think that even the film magnates would realize that." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p6 Jl 18 '36

"That sly coneycatcher, Gene Fowler, is very busy this week gulling his dear public with a variation of the old Klondike shell-game, called 'White Fang.' . . The general impression conveyed by the story is that Mr. Fowler is not only writing with his tongue in his cheek but is pointing to the lump it makes." E. R. C.

N Y Times p18 Jl 18 '36

"Along toward the end of 'White Fang,' one of the characters remarks in a particularly hectic moment:—'There's something mighty peculiar about this whole business.' And there, frankly, you have a perfect capsule criticism of this screen version of the late Jack London's story. . . Although 'White Fang' does not fulfill any need that is apparent for the welfare of movie-goers, it does serve the purpose of letting Jean Muir prove again that she is an extremely talented and attractive young actress who deserves a part worthy of her talents." William Boehnel

N Y World-Telegram p16a Jl 18 '36

"The scenery is rugged, Dave Butler's direction is perfectly O.K., but the situations remain deplorably pulp-paper and there is but a modicum of the gustiness requisite to redeem such mush-mush operas of the Yukon country." Herb Sterne

— + Script p13 Jl 11 '36

"'White Fang' is designed as a further test of U. S. box-office enthusiasm for dogs."

Time p36 Jl 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Proving itself to be a worthy sequel to 'Call of the Wild' this film has everything—action, drama, pathos, romance and comedy. Ably handled in every department, the acting highlights are split between Charles Winninger and John Carradine, the latter being especially capable. Family."

+ Box Office p31 Jl 18 '36

"'White Fang' is an interesting tale of adventure in the Klondike. It makes top program fare and should appeal especially to those who like Jack London stories of the North and to lovers of dogs. . . Under David Butler's direction, the picture is built in a very suspenseful manner. He hits a fast action tempo and blends the comedy and drama in a very entertaining manner. . . The real joys of the piece are Charles Winninger, Jane Darwell, Slim Summerville, and the dog Lightning. Whenever anyone of these three comedians are around, the picture is a real pleasure and they pile up laughs galore."

+ Film Daily p8 Jl 9 '36

"If it's true what they say about summer, this rather dated melodrama of the frozen north should prove an attraction during these less thoughtful months. It is a matter of record that its predecessor, 'The Call of the Wild,' did extremely well in the heat of last season. 'White Fang' is billed as a sequel and is to be taken no more seriously."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Jl 6 '36

"This sequel to his famous 'Call of the Wild' emerges as unpretentious but entertaining screen fare, which should do especially well in the smaller situations. Properly sold, it may well draw the youngsters from miles around."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 Je 26 '36

"Estimate: best for neighborhoods."

Phila Exhibitor p27 Jl 15 '36

"While 'White Fang' hasn't got the name that 'Call of the Wild' had, and does not equal it in screen strength, it pleases and, for those who lean toward yarns of the north country, will satisfy."

+ — Variety p17 Jl 22 '36

Variety (Hollywood) p3 Jl 6 '36

WILDCAT TROOPER. Ambassador 60min Je 10 '36

Players: Kermit Maynard. Hobart Bosworth. Fuzzy Knight. Lois Wilde

Director: Elmer Clifton

Based on the novel, Midnight Call, by James Oliver Curwood. A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fights, thrills, fast riding, gun play all combined with a well constructed plot, handled in a very suspenseful manner to make a number that should be swell entertainment for the houses that use action and outdoor drama fare."

+ Film Daily p11 Jl 14 '36

"Action fans will find lots of excitement and thrills in [it]. . . In the State-rights action field, this one rates decidedly above average."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Jl 9 '36

"Once again a good one from Maurice Conn, this has hero Maynard as the mounted policeman who cleans up the gang."

+ Phila Exhibitor p39 Ag 1 '36

WINDS OF THE WASTELAND. Republic 57min Jl 6 '36

Players: John Wayne. Phyllis Fraser. Lane Chandler

Director: Mack Wright

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 25 '36

"Family—juvenile."

Wkly Guide Je 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"John Wayne rides the range again in typical strong silent fashion in this Western drama that has been neatly tailored to his measure. Family."

Box Office p25 Jl 25 '36

"Roaring tale of stagecoach days crammed with suspense and exciting action. . . This Western [is] one of the most entertaining in its class."

+ Film Daily p3 Jl 11 '36

"Typical routine, straight Western fare, but withal good, active entertainment of its kind, designed for the purpose of pleasing the youngsters and their elders who like Westerns, this fills that purpose quite satisfactorily."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Jl 13 '36

"Estimate: Western that's different."

Phila Exhibitor p27 Jl 15 '36

WOMEN ARE TROUBLE. MGM 60min Jl 31 '36

Players: Stuart Erwin. Paul Kelly. Florence Rice. Margaret Irving

Director: Errol Taggart

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: fair; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The cast struggles to make their roles convincing, but the story itself downs them. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good-mature." DAR

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Told with humor and several adroit turns of plot, this gangster film may prove instructive and interesting for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Adequate photography and casting, especially the likeable new Will Rogers type, Stuart Erwin, offer good entertainment for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Jl 4 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Jl 1 '36

"An unpretentious and amusing film. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p121 Jl '36

"While this is frankly a program picture, various episodes are treated with originality, and the dialogue is natural and often humorous. . . The gangsters are allotted a liberal amount of footage and one scene in particular might prove terrifying to children. Adolescents, 12-16: passable; children, 8-12: no."

+ — Motion Pict R Jl '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 24 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 25 '36

"A and Y: passable; C: no."

Parents' M p70 S '36

"Good but routine characterizations are furnished by the capable cast and there are amusing situations and clever dialogue to recommend the production. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict Jl 1 '36

"[It is] a lively, fast-stepping and amusing comedy. Family."

Wkly Guide Je 20 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p17 S 5 '36

"With everything in it for the making of a stirring crook drama, this one succeeds in being only ordinary entertainment to hold up its half of a double bill. It strives to be both comedy and drama, interlacing the two until they become tangled and each weakens the other."

+ — Hollywood Spec p11 Je 20 '36

"A minor item from the M-G-M studio, 'Women Are Trouble' is a neat, swiftly related comedy that packs many laughs into its tale of newspapermen versus gangsters. Though there is nothing new in it and the plot structure is dangerously flimsy, this amiable little piece has been so shrewdly directed by Errol Taggart that it emerges as a pleasantly frivolous time waster." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p24 Jl 25 '36

Reviewed by Herb Sterne
Script p12 Ag 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With pace and class in every department, here is a newspaper film which can hold its head up with the best of them. Family."

+ Box Office p45 Je 20 '36

Reviewed by L. S. Niemeyer

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 Je 20 '36

"Estimate: fair program for neighborhood houses, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p69 Jl 1 '36

"As one of those inexpensively produced trivia that keep the screen bright until the main part of the double bill goes on, 'Women Are Trouble' adequately fulfills its destiny. It's strictly a program picture, short on running time, so-so in marquee weight. . . When coupled with a box office film it can perform its subsidiary duties."

+ — Variety p21 S 2 '36

Y

YELLOWSTONE. Universal 62min Ag 30 '36

Players: Henry Hunter, Judith Barratt, Andy Devine, Ralph Morgan

Director: Arthur Lubin

"A mystery involving some buried money has for its background the unsurpassed scenic beauties of Yellowstone Park." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A weak plot, handled as well as possible, by adding the adage that crime does not pay, and having all the criminals meet sudden death. This fact only partly compensates for a most unwholesome atmosphere. Accompanied children could possibly attend this film, at least they would view the beautiful natural scenery to their advantage. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A family picture but too intense for young children." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Considering the great effort made to secure the right to make the picture in Yellowstone Park, it falls short of what might have been an outstanding picture by that name. Music, which so often enhances the beauty and glamor of a film, in this case is so pronounced it becomes irritating at times. The picture inspires patriotic pride in the National Park Service, the conservation of natural beauty for the enjoyment of the American people, and the ideals of the Rangers. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Mature." DAR

"A magnificent scenic background and an exciting tale, punctuated with humor which holds one's attention throughout. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"With the most wonderful possibilities of setting in beautiful Yellowstone Park, this melodramatic 'murder-will-out' rendition of a trite overdone theme is definitely disappointing as a picture. . . Hardly recommendable to any audience." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 29 '36

"Forceful and sympathetic direction make this a notably fine production."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ag 19 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"Despite its background of scenic beauty as provided by its locale, Yellowstone National Park, the picture, which develops into a murder mystery, never becomes other than mediocre. Sufficient advantage is not taken of the natural phenomena and the photography, which should have been in color, is only fair. . . The direction is uneven and slow moving, the story is loosely constructed and the cast is unconvincing in its portrayals, with the exception of Ralph Morgan who turns in a good performance."

YELLOWSTONE—Continued

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women Ag 19 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A routine mystery melodrama whose chief claim to distinction is that it uses the geysers of Yellowstone Park in its murder plot and the scenery of the park for backgrounds. Many of the shots and devices are impressive but are not enough to lift the formula story into distinction. . . The picture will do average duty in dual support and exploitation of its famous locale."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 S 3 '36

"The scenic beauty of the locale rather than the entertaining quality of this formula, melodramatic crime mystery story stands out as the major appeal of this picture. The artistic photography greatly accentuates the natural marvels of Yellowstone Park, but the plot situations complicate the theme."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 S 4 '36

"An intriguing mystery story although the title doesn't show it, 'Yellowstone' is run-of-the-mill fare that has some selling angles to make it appeal. . . Estimate: fair program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p41 S 1 '36

"Lacking names and production weight, 'Yellowstone' must rely on its story and background value, and naturally arrays itself as program support in the lesser duals. Picture's entertainment lies in exploitable use of the national park beauties."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 3 '36

YOUR TROUBLES ARE MINE. Nuovo mondo 80min J1 4 '36

Players: Angelo Musco, Maria Denis, Vasco Creti, Amelia Chellini, Eugenio Colombo

Director: Amleto Palermi

A dialogue film in Italian without English sub-titles. "It tells the story of the good Padre Attanasio, who listens to all the troubles of his parishioners, often to his own embarrassment. For the good man, not wanting to turn away any of the crowd who unburden their souls to him, becomes involved in misunderstandings which sometimes take on an amusing angle." Known in Italy as Fiat Voluntas Dei. (N Y Herald Tribune)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Because of Angelo Musco's deft performance the picture of life in the small Italian village as seen through the eyes of the priest is a warm and pleasantly animated production. But only for those understanding the language will it really have appeal, for it is unaccompanied by English sub-titles." Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p10 J1 8 '36

"Since this time the theater omitted any English dialogue titles, a nonlinguistic reviewer could understand only Senor Musco's amusing pantomime and the audience's constant bursts of laughter. The dialogue must have been pretty funny too. Like so many of these Italian importations, the film has a deeply religious spirit back of its entertainment. . . Angelo Musco's performance is excellent, although the production as a whole, technically as well as in acting, is not to be compared to Hollywood pictures." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p17 J1 7 '36

"Angelo Musco delights the audience. He is aided by a competent cast. Eugenio Colombo deserves honorable mention for his fine work as the sexton. The scenes of life in rural Northern Italy are delightfully real and some of them appear to have been made right there." H. T. S.

N Y Times J1 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[This is an] entertaining drama."

+ Film Daily p6 J1 7 '36

"It is evident from audience reaction that there is considerable lively good humor in this Italian importation. . . The film is adaptable only to theatres whose patrons are familiar with the Italian language, since there are no English sub-titles and the backbone of the picture's entertainment lies in the amusing dialogue of the comedian."

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 J1 7 '36

"Lack of English titles relegates this Italian importation strictly to Italian-understanding audiences, which means that its showings in America will be decidedly limited. . . Picture is much overlong and slowly paced. Photography mediocre and little in the way of topflight acting."

+ — Variety p55 J1 15 '36

YOURS FOR THE ASKING. Paramount 69min J1 24 '36

Players: George Raft, Dolores Costello Barrymore, Ida Lupino, Reginald Owen, James Gleason, Edgar Kennedy

Director: Alexander Hall

An impoverished society girl becomes a partner in the gambling business conducted by George Raft. His helpers resent the step into society and arrange for two society adventurers to swindle Raft.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: perhaps; Y: very doubtful; C: no." Christian Century p1143 Ag 26 '36

"Mature. Mediocre." DAR — + Fox W Coast Bul Ag 8 '36

"This [is a] slow-moving, mediocre picture." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Clever dialogue, capable cast, and plenty of comedy make this good entertainment. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Mature." DAR

"A long drawn out, complicated story with rather worn gags and much 'business' about very little. Acting is adequate and some of the sets are attractive but as a whole the film provides only fair entertainment for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Here is sheer comedy with no moral intended and no problems of moment. . . Adolescents, 12-16: not recommended though absurdly farcical; children, 8-12: not suitable." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul Ag 22 '36

"Adults & young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ag 10 '36

"Mature." Jt Estimates Ag 15 '36

"Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '36

"Adults." Nat Legion of Decency Ag 13 '36

"Clever dialogue, capable cast and plenty of comedy make this good entertainment. Mature."

+ Sel Motion Pict S 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ag 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Apart from a bit of misrepresentation in billing, this department has no quarrel with the new offering which palls only during those moments left to the featured stars. According to the official billing of 'Yours for the Asking,' Dolores Costello Barrymore and George Raft are the stars. According to unbiased observation the real star work is done by Ida Lupino, Reginald Owen, Lynne Overman, Edgar Kennedy, James Gleason and Richard Powell." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 22 '36

"Amusing enough as light farce."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 22 '36

"One queer bit of direction in this one mars what otherwise would have been an excellent job by Al Hall. . . Except for this one lapse, Hall has made 'Yours For the Asking' an exceedingly interesting picture. He derives from Raft the best performance of that actor that I have seen. Raft is typed so definitely that he appears to best advantage in elemental characterizations devoid of subtleties and sophisticated polish. It is difficult, therefore, to make convincing his romances with some of the glamorous young women who have played opposite him. . . So ably [has] the story [been] developed that the romance is a reasonable one which meets with our approval."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 Ag 29 '36

"George Raft, bringing all his expressions—Numbers 1, 2, and 3—into full play, swings through a well constructed revival of the over-used gangster-versus-society theme in Paramount's 'Yours for the Asking.' . . All in all, this comes as smooth cinema fun." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p35 S 26 '36

"The considerable diversion that is offered in 'Yours for the Asking' is not contributed by the stars or the story. George Raft and Dolores Costello Barrymore go through the conventional gestures of a tale that has been told too often by Hollywood. What gives the work flair and comic excitement is the expert clowning of a group of lesser players. Their antics dominate the film from beginning to end and make it a generally amusing, sometimes hilarious production." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ag 20 '36

"'Yours for the Asking' has all the attributes of a picture designed to carry songs, except the songs. It needs a song or two . . . It needs them pretty desperately at times. The comedy seems vaguely familiar throughout, although Paramount lists it as an original story. It follows along an accepted pattern, with a big cast of character comedians wasted in their stock roles. Occasionally of course the picture braces up, with a nice little chuckle here or a bit of semi-slapstick there." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p13 Ag 20 '36

"The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Supporting Casts is hereby invited to press charges against Paramount for its unfair, prejudicial and deleterious conduct toward Reginald Owen, Ida Lupino, James Gleason, Lynne Overman, Edgar Kennedy and Richard Powell in the case of 'Yours for the Asking.' . . Any producing company so fortunate as to obtain the services of such reliable funsters has a personal and a public obligation to provide them with a merry script and, if stars be necessary, to select only those whose past records prove their fitness . . . The selection of George Raft and Dolores Costello Barrymore for the so-called starring roles in 'Yours for the Asking' was in obvious defiance of the screen's code of fair practice . . . [The film] may safely be seen, but only because of the stalwart sextet listed in the preceding paragraph." F. S. Nugent.

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 20 '36

"George Raft is a nimble foil for the talents of Dolores Costello Barrymore, Ida Lupino and Reginald Owen in a piece called 'Yours for the Asking,' another pleasant anodyne and a natural for the Paramount . . . I have never been a votary of the pomade art of Mr. Raft. But this time his scenarists are as slick as he, serving him up in an inoffensive dose . . . It is pleasant, too, to extol Dolores Barrymore for her attempted warmth of a silly role. May I reserve the honors of the skit for Miss Lupino, whose Gert is a hard-boiled hoyden deliciously played." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World-Telegram p9a Ag 20 '36

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p54 Ag 29 '36

"When the Park Avenue cutie met the mug from the wrong side of the social tracks, orange blossoms were detectable at once. . . The plot-road leads to the altar sure enough, but not before five writers cause the characters to meander through some unexpected . . . and very funny . . . situations. The material is fresh and the laughs are deftly crumpled to their goal by Alexander Hall's directorial hand." Herb Sterne

+ Script p10 Ag 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Bright, fast comedy and a convincing performance on the part of George Raft who gives his role of the gambler with social ambitions an air of plausibility, feature this picture that will appeal to class audiences."

+ Box Office p25 Ag 8 '36

"[It is a] lively comedy-romance with ace cast and plenty of amusing stuff to please audiences generally."

+ Film Daily p7 Ag 20 '36

"A scintillating though somewhat brittle farce co-starring George Raft and Dolores Costello Barrymore, in which every character is involved in professional gambling or in other rackets. Its smart sophistication and comic ingenuities will make it acceptable fare for class audiences as a standard program. Its fate for general audiences is more dubious, especially in view of a light name cast."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Jl 29 '36

"Producer Lewis Gensler herein surrounds George Raft with such capable performers as Ida Lupino, Reginald Owen, Dolores Costello Barrymore, James Gleason, Lynne Overman and Edgar Kennedy, and the result is a light comedy drama which moves swiftly and smoothly. . . The picture should please the Raft following and satisfy generally."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Jl 31 '36

"Comedy with star, feature strength, this ought to prove popular, especially in the classier sectors. . . Well-paced, filled with good feature faces, some comedy moments that should please, this should shape up as fair program. Selling the names should be of advantage."

+ Phila Exhibitor p37 Ag 15 '36

"The good pictures are being held back until September. Which may be the reason why 'Yours for the Asking' got into Paramount's ace N. Y. house. . . Film lacks a convincing romance and is packed with absurdities that adult audiences will find hard to down even in warm weather. It will not build George Raft's popularity at a time when a little refurbishing would not have been amiss. Also, it doesn't do right by Dolores Costello Barrymore, right after her neat comeback in 'Lord Fauntleroy.' The role that is thrust on her is not especially sympathetic and seldom presents her with a real opportunity."

— Variety p20 Ag 26 '36

"Perfectly tailored for George Raft, who, surrounded by a topnotch cast, turns in a performance that should please his audiences, 'Yours for the Asking' is excellent comedy fare for any theatre. . . With a cast of recognizable names, picture should have no trouble attracting at the box office."

YOURS FOR THE ASKING—Continued

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 J1 29 '36

YOUTH OF TODAY. Paramount 81min Je 22 '36

Players: Anne-Marie Brunius, Tollie Zellman, Nils Wahlbom

Director: Per-Axel Branner

A Swedish dialogue film with English subtitles. Filmed in Stockholm. Also called Ungdom av I Dag. A sports-loving young girl who would like to marry a young aviator is almost forced to marry a rich man in order to save her mother from financial disgrace. However, a well-meaning uncle comes to the rescue of the mother and the romance.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] a lively, amusing piece, aided by a good cast. . . Aside from the romance in the story, some interesting sequences have been woven in, dealing with the Swedish Air Force. They show young aviators in their training quarters and at manoeuvres, which include some excellent flying. It is this current slant that gives the picture much of its zest, color and entertainment. . . Its chief fault lies in the jerky continuity which results no doubt from faulty cutting. If the picture were presented more smoothly, it would be a first-class light comedy." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p14 Je 23 '36

"Those who appreciate a good, old-fashioned love story done in a highly modern setting and well acted by a company of fine, clean young folk, and a few not so young, are sure to be satisfied. . . Before the end is reached, the audience enjoys many excellent views of flying and delightful scenes in city and country," H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p27 Je 23 '36

"A moderately amusing trifle, the film is a series of complications involving most of the staple elements of youthful romance and misunderstanding. . . Although the film is a little too familiar and a little too inert for the average American audience, it is interpreted by a cast of splendid actors." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p23 Je 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Pleasing romantic story attractively staged and acted by an excellent cast."

+ Film Daily p11 Je 24 '36

"A slight, but rather engaging romantic film of young love and its accustomed difficult course, this Swedish talking picture offers little out of the ordinary with the exception of an extremely attractive and highly competent actress named Anne-Marie Brunius, who is blond and effective. . . The film has nothing for the American audience lacking a knowledge of the language. It is, briefly, just another picture, but one which should be found entertaining for those of Swedish extraction who can appreciate what apparently were a number of amusing bits of dialogue."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 J1 1 '36

"'Youth of Today' is a run-of-the-mill yarn played in a light mood by a capable cast of Swedish folks. . . As entertainment, the film is too slow developing. When it gets moving it bogs down with over-emphasis. . . Even with these handicaps it should prove acceptable fare in many foreign language spots."

+ — Variety p23 J1 1 '36

INDEX

Under the names of the leading actors and actresses will be found the productions listed in this number in which they have taken part.

Under the director's name will be found a list of the films in this number which he directed.

Under the headings Books, Plays and Short Stories (Adapted) will be found the author, title of published work and the title of the film. When the title of the film differs from the title of the book, the film's title is given in parenthesis, thus:

Eberhart, M. G.

From this dark stairway (Murder of Dr Harrigan)

ACTORS & ACTRESSES

Abel, Walter
Fury
Second wife
We went to college
Abraikosof
Anna
Acuff, Eddie
Guns of the Pecos
Alberni, Luis
Dancing pirate
Follow your heart
Albertson, Frank
Fury
Alexander, Ross
China Clipper
Hot money
Tattler
Allan, Elizabeth
The shadow
Allen, Bob
Unknown ranger
Alvarado, Don
Red wagon
Ameche, Don
Sins of man
Anderson, Eddie
Green pastures
Angel, Heather
Last of the Mohicans
Arlen, Richard
Mine with the iron door
Armstrong, Robert
All American chump
Public enemy's wife
Arnold, Edward
Meet Nero Wolfe
Astaire, Fred
Swing time
Astor, Mary
Trapped by television
Autrey, Gene
Guns and guitars
Ayres, Lew
Lady be careful
Murder with pictures
Shakedown

Baker, Benny
Lady be careful
Murder with pictures
Ballew, Smith
Palm Springs
Banks, Leslie
Three maxims
Barbier, George
Early to bed
Spendthrift
Three married men
Barclay, Joan
Glory trail
Prison shadows
West of Nevada
Barnes, Binnie
Last of the Mohicans
Barondess, Barbara
Easy money
Barrat, Robert
Draegerman courage
Trailin' west
Barratt, Judith
Yellowstone
Barrie, Wendy
Ticket to paradise

Barrymore, Dolores Costello
Yours for the asking
Barrymore, John
Romeo and Juliet
Barrymore, Lionel
Devil doll
Gorgeous hussy
Road to glory
Bartholomew, Freddie
Devil is a sissy
Bartlett, Michael
Follow your heart
Barton, Buzz
Riding avenger
Baur, Harry
I stand condemned
Baxter, Alan
Parole
Baxter, Warner
Road to glory
To Mary—with love
Beal, John
M'liss
Beecher, Janet
I'd give my life
Beery, Noah, Jr.
Parole
Beery, Wallace
Old hutch
Bell, Rex
Idaho kid
West of Nevada
Bellamy, Ralph
Final hour
Straight from the shoulder
Bennett, Joan
Two in a crowd
Bergman, Ingrid
On the sunnyside
Besozzi, Nino
Il serpente a sonagli
Bickford, Charles
Red wagon
Bird, Richard
Crouching beast
Blackmer, Sydney
Heart of the west
Blake, Gladys
Racing blood
Blondell, Joan
Stage struck
Blore, Eric
Piccadilly Jim
Swing time
Blue, Monte
Prison shadows
Bogart, Humphrey
China Clipper
Isle of fury
Two against the world
Bogolybov, N.
Seven brave men
Boland, Mary
Early to bed
A son comes home
Boles, John
Craig's wife
Bond, Ward
Avenging waters
Crash Donovan
Bondi, Beulah
Gorgeous hussy
Bosworth, Hobart
Dark hour
Wildcat trooper

Bourday, Simone
La porteuse de pain
Bourdelle, Thomy
Seven sinners
Boyd, William
Go get-'em Haines
Heart of the west
Three on the trail
Bracey, Sidney
Changing of the guard
Bradley, Grace
Sitting on the moon
Brady, Alice
Harvester
My man Godfrey
Brent, Evelyn
It couldn't have happened
Brent, George
Give me your heart
Brian, Mary
Spendthrift
Three married men
Brignone, Lilla
Il serpente a sonagli
Broderick, Helen
Bride walks out
Swing time
Bromberg, J. Edward
Crime of Dr Forbes
Sins of man
Star for a night
Brophy, Edward
Spendthrift
Brown, Joe E.
Earthworm tractors
Brown, Johnny Mack
Everyman's law
Brown, Tom
And sudden death
I'd give my life
Bruce, Nigel
Follow your heart
Brunius, Anne-Marie
Youth of today
Bryan, Jane
Captain's kid
Bryant, Nana
Blackmailer
Bupp, Tommy
Roarin' guns
Burke, Billie
Craig's wife
My American wife
Piccadilly Jim
Burke, James
Forgotten faces
Burnette, Smiley
Guns and guitars
Burns, Bob
Rhythm on the range
Butterworth, Charles
Half angel
We went to college
Byington, Spring
Back to nature
Educating father

Cabot, Bruce
Don't turn 'em loose
Fury
Last of the Mohicans
Three wise guys
Caine, Georgia
White angel

ACTORS and ACTRESSES—

Continued

- Callahan, Margaret
Last outlaw
Calleia, Joseph
His brother's wife
Sworn enemy
Cambre, Del
Tundra
Campeau, Frank
Everyman's law
Carey, Harry
Last outlaw
Carleton, William P.
Border patrolman
Carlisle, Mary
Lady be careful
Carlyle, David
Cain and Mabel
Carminati, Tullio
Three maxims
Carradine, John
Mary of Scotland
Carroll, Madeleine
General died at dawn
Secret agent
Carroll, Virginia
Wellington Pike goes west
Catlett, Walter
Cain and Mabel
We went to college
Cavanaugh, Hobart
Tattler
Cawthorn, Joseph
Hot money
Ceseri, Ugo
Passaporto rosso
Chandler, Chick
Three of a kind
Chandler, Lane
Idaho kid
Winds of the wasteland
Chase, Charley
Neighborhood house
Chatterton, Ruth
Girls' dormitory
Chellini, Amelia
Your troubles are mine
Chernaya, Lala
Gypsies
Chevalier, Maurice
Beloved vagabond
Churchill, Berton
Dark hour
Three of a kind
Churchill, Marguerite
Final hour
Clayworth, June
Two-fisted gentleman
Clive, E. E.
Isle of fury
Clyde, Andy
Straight from the shoulder
Cobb, Irvin S.
Pepper
Collier, Constance
Girls' dormitory
Collins, Charles
Dancing pirate
Collins, Cora Sue
Harvester
Colombo, Eugenio
Your troubles are mine
Compson, Betty
August week-end
Compton, Joyce
Trapped by television
Conklin, Peggy
Devil is a sissy
Connolly, Walter
King steps out
Cook, Elisha, Jr.
Two in a crowd
Cooper, Anthony Kemble
Master Will Shakespeare
Cooper, Gary
General died at dawn
Cooper, Jackie
Devil is a sissy
Corradi, Nelly
Crooked love
Cortez, Ricardo
Postal Inspector
Cossart, Ernest
My American wife
Palm Springs
Courtney, Inez
Dizzy dames
It couldn't have happened
Reckless way
Crabbe, Larry
Arizona raiders
Lady be careful
Craven, Frank
Harvester
Crawford, Joan
Gorgeous hussy
Crehan, Joseph
Song of a nation
Creti, Vasco
Your troubles are mine
Croker-King, Charles
White angel
Cromwell, Richard
Poppy
Crosby, Bing
Rhythm on the range
Crossman, Henrietta
Follow your heart
Girl of the Ozarks
Cummings, Constance
Seven sinners
Cummings, Robert
Border flight
Forgotten faces
Hollywood Boulevard
Three cheers for love
Curzon, George
White angel
Dale, Esther
Hollywood Boulevard
Dann, Roger
La porteuse de pain
Darro, Frankie
Charlie Chan at the race track
Racing blood
Darwell, Jane
Craig's wife
First baby
Star for a night
White Fang
Davies, Marion
Cain and Mabel
Hearts divided
Davis, Bette
Satan met a lady
Davis, Owen, Jr.
Bunker Bean
Grand jury
Deane, Shirley
Back to nature
Educating father
First baby
Dee, Frances
Half angel
De Havilland, Olivia
Anthony Adverse
Denis, Maria
Your troubles are mine
Denny, Reginald
It couldn't have happened
Dermoz, Germaine
La porteuse de pain
De Sica, Vittorio
I love you only
Devine, Andy
Yellowstone
Digges, Dudley
General died at dawn
Di Luca, Dino
Blind girl of Sorrento
Dinehart, Alan
Charlie Chan at the race track
King of the Royal Mounted
Parole
Dix, Dorothy
Guns and guitars
Dodd, Claire
Case of the velvet claws
Navy born
Song of a nation
Donlevy, Brian
Half angel
High tension
36 hours to kill
Donnelly, Ruth
Fatal lady
Doucet, Catherine
Poppy
Douglas, Melvyn
Gorgeous hussy
Downs, Johnny
Arizona raiders
First baby
Drake, Frances
And sudden death
I'd give my life
Drean
La porteuse de pain
Dudley-Ward, Penelope
I stand condemned
Dumbrille, Douglass
M'liss
Princess comes across
Duna, Steffi
Dancing pirate
Dunbar, Dixie
Back to nature
Educating father
First baby
Dunn, James
Two-fisted gentleman
Eldridge, Florence
Mary of Scotland
Elliott, Gordon
Case of the velvet claws
Ellis, Edward
Texas Rangers
Ellis, Mary
Fatal lady
Ellis, Patricia
Down the stretch
Postal Inspector
Ellison, Jimmy
Heart of the west
Three on the trail
Erikson, Leif
Girl of the Ozarks
Ernest, Harry
Heroes of the range
Erwin, Stuart
All American chump
Women are trouble
Evans, Madge
Piccadilly Jim
Evans, Muriel
Three on the trail
Fares, Oreste
Passaporto rosso
Farmer, Frances
Border flight
Rhythm on the range
Farrell, Glenda
High tension
Tattler
Faye, Alice
Poor little rich girl
Sing, baby, sing
Fernandel
La porteuse de pain
Fields, Stanley
Mine with the iron door
Fields, W. C.
Poppy
Fonda, Henry
Spendthrift
Foran, Dick
Big noise
Earthworm tractors
Guns of the Pecos
Trailin' west
Ford, Wallace
Rogues' tavern
A son comes home
Foster, Norman
Fatal lady
High tension
Fowley, Douglas
Navy born
36 hours to kill
Francis, Kay
Give me your heart
White angel
Franke, Ingeborg
Der kampf
Fraser, Phyllis
Winds of the wasteland

- Frawley, William
General died at dawn
Princess comes across
Three cheers for love
Three married men
- Furness, Betty
All American chump
Mister Cinderella
Three wise guys
- Gable, Clark
Cain and Mabel
San Francisco
- Gabriel, Lynn
Heart of the west
- Gale, June
Heroes of the range
Riding avenger
- Gargan, William
Blackmailer
Navy born
- Gateson, Marjorie
Gentleman from Louisiana
Three married men
- Giacchetti, Fosco
Crooked love
- Gibson, Hoot
Last outlaw
Riding avenger
- Gibson, Wynne
Crouching beast
- Gielgud, John
Secret agent
- Gillingwater, Claude
Ticket to paradise
- Girardot, Etienne
Half angel
- Gish, Dorothy
Wanted men
- Gleason, James
Don't turn 'em loose
Yours for the asking
- Gleason, Russell
Wellington Pike goes west
- Gog, Gregor
Der kampf
- Gordon, C. Henry
Hollywood Boulevard
- Goryunof, Anatol
Anna
- Grable, Betty
Don't turn 'em loose
- Graetz, Paul
Bengal tiger
Hot money
Isle of fury
- Grahame, Margot
Counterfeit
- Granach, Alexander
Gypsies
- Grant, Cary
Suzy
- Gray, Lawrence
Dizzy dames
- Gray, Nan
Crash Donovan
- Greet, Clare
Murder in the red barn
- Gretillet, Jacques
La porteuise de pain
- Guitty, Madeleine
La porteuise de pain
- Gunn, Judy
Private secretary
- Gwenn, Edmund
All American chump
Anthony Adverse
- Haden, Sara
Crime of Dr Forbes
- Hale, Alan
Our relations
- Hale, Sonnie
It's love again
- Haley, Jack
Mister Cinderella
Poor little rich girl
- Hall, Porter
General died at dawn
- Hall, Thurston
Shakedown
Three wise guys
- Halliday, John
Fatal lady
Hollywood Boulevard
- Hanson, Lars
On the sunnyside
- Hardie, Russell
Down to the sea
Harvester
Meet Nero Wolfe
- Hardwicke, Sir Cedric
Nine days a queen
- Hardy, Oliver
Our relations
- Harlow, Jean
Suzy
- Hart, Gordon
Guns of the Pecos
Isle of fury
- Hatton, Raymond
Arizona raiders
- Haydon, Julie
A son comes home
- Hayes, George
Heart of the west
- Healy, Ted
San Francisco
Sing, baby, sing
- Henry, Buzzy
Unknown ranger
- Henry, Charlotte
Gentleman from Louisiana
- Hepburn, Katharine
Mary of Scotland
- Herbert, Hugh
We went to college
- Hersholt, Jean
His brother's wife
Sins of man
- Hobbes, Halliwell
Changing of the guard
- Hobson, Valerie
August week-end
- Hodges, Horace
Three maxims
- Hohl, Arthur
Devil doll
- Holt, David
Straight from the shoulder
- Holt, Jack
Crash Donovan
San Francisco
- Homans, Robert
Easy money
- Hood, Darla
Neighborhood house
- Hopton, Russell
Below the deadline
- Horton, Edward Everett
Hearts divided
Private secretary
- Housman, Arthur
Racing blood
- Howard, John
Border flight
- Howard, Leslie
Romeo and Juliet
- Howell, Kenneth
Educating father
- Hudson, Rochelle
Poppy
- Hughes, Carol
Earthworm tractors
- Hughes, Lloyd
Kelly of the secret service
- Hull, Warren
Bengal tiger
Big noise
- Hunt, Eleanor
Go get-'em Haines
- Hunt, Marsha
Arizona raiders
Hollywood Boulevard
- Hunter, Henry
Parole
Yellowstone
- Hunter, Ian
Devil is a sissy
To Mary—with love
White angel
- Huntley, G. P., Jr.
August week-end
- Hymer, Warren
36 hours to kill
- Inescort, Frieda
Give me your heart
Hollywood Boulevard
King steps out
- Ingram, Rex
Green pastures
- Irving, Florence
Women are trouble
- Irving, Margaret
Neighborhood house
- Jason, Sybil
Captain's kid
Changing of the guard
- Jenkins, Allen
Cain and Mabel
Sins of man
- Jewell, Isabel
36 hours to kill
- Jory, Victor
Meet Nero Wolfe
- Judge, Arline
Star for a night
- Karns, Roscoe
Border flight
Cain and Mabel
Three cheers for love
Three married men
- Keen, Malcolm
Wanted men
- Keene, Tom
Glory trail
- Keith, Rosalind
King of the Royal Mounted
- Kelly, Patsy
Hill Tillies
Sing, baby, sing
- Kelly, Paul
Murder with pictures
Women are trouble
- Kelton, Pert
Sitting on the moon
- Kendall, Cy
Bulldog edition
- Kendall, Henry
The shadow
- Kennedy, Edgar
Yours for the asking
- Kent, Robert
Crime of Dr Forbes
King of the Royal Mounted
- Kerrigan, J. M.
General died at dawn
- Kibbee, Guy
Big noise
Captain's kid
Earthworm tractors
M'liss
- King, Charles
Last of the Warrens
- King, John
Crash Donovan
- Kingsford, Walter
Meet Nero Wolfe
- Knapp, Evalyn
Bulldog edition
Three of a kind
- Knight, Fuzzy
Kelly of the secret service
Wildcat trooper
- Knowles, Patric
Give me your heart
- Kortner, Fritz
Crouching beast
- Lang, June
Road to glory
- Langford, Frances
Palm Springs
- LaRue, Jack
It couldn't have happened
Wellington Pike goes west
- Latimer, Louise
Bunker Bean
Don't turn 'em loose
Grand jury
- Laughton, Charles
Wanted men
- Laurel, Stan
Our relations
- Lawrence, Fred
Captain's kid
- Lawrence, Rosina
Neighborhood house
- Lawton, Frank
Devil doll

ACTORS and ACTRESSES—

Continued

Lease, Rex
 Aces and eights
 Lederer, Francis
 My American wife
 Lee, Billie
 And sudden death
 Leiber, Fritz
 Down to the sea
 Leighton, Frank
 Thoroughbred
 Li, Shoh-shoh
 Song of China
 Lim, Cho-cho
 Song of China
 Linaker, Kay
 Easy money
 Linden, Eric
 Old hutch
 Lindsay, Margaret
 Isle of fury
 Public enemy's wife
 Lloyd, Alma
 Big noise
 Locke, Katherine
 Straight from the shoulder
 Lockwood, Margaret
 Beloved vagabond
 Loebinger, Lotte
 Der kampf
 Lombard, Carole
 My man Godfrey
 Princess comes across
 London, Tom
 Guns and guitars
 Longden, John
 Thoroughbred
 Loring, Michael
 Postal Inspector
 Lorre, Peter
 Secret agent
 Losfgren, Marianne
 On the sunnyside
 Louise, Anita
 Anthony Adverse
 Lowe, Edmund
 Seven sinners
 Loy, Myrna
 To Mary—with love
 Lugosi, Bela
 Postal Inspector
 Luke, Keye
 Charlie Chan at the race track
 Lund, Lucille
 Prison shadows
 Lupino, Ida
 Yours for the asking
 Lyon, Ben
 Down to the sea

McCoy, Tim
 Aces and eights
 Lion's den
 Roarin' guns
 McCrea, Joel
 Two in a crowd
 MacDonald, Jeanette
 San Francisco
 McGlynn, Frank, Sr.
 King of the Royal Mounted
 McHugh, Frank
 Stage struck
 McKay, Barry
 Private secretary
 McKay, George
 Two-fisted gentleman
 McKinney, Florine
 Dizzy dames
 MacLane, Barton
 Bengal tiger
 Draegerman courage
 Jailbreak
 MacMurray, Fred
 Princess comes across
 Texas Rangers
 McWade, Robert
 Bunker Bean
 Madden, Jeanne
 Stage struck
 Madison, Noel
 Easy money
 Magnani, Anna
 Blind girl of Sorrento
 Makarova, T.
 Seven brave men

Maleyef, Igor
 Anna
 Mann, Allen
 Shake Mr Shakespeare
 Mannors, Sheila
 Kelly of the secret service
 March, Fredric
 Anthony Adverse
 Mary of Scotland
 Road to glory
 Marion, Beth
 Avenging waters
 Everyman's law
 Fugitive sheriff
 Marlowe, Hugh
 It couldn't have happened
 Marquis, Margaret
 Last of the Warrens
 Marsh, Carolyn
 Shake Mr Shakespeare
 Marsh, Marian
 Counterfeit
 Marshall, Herbert
 Forgotten faces
 Girls' dormitory
 Martin, Tony
 Back to nature
 Mason, Roy
 Border patrolman
 Matthews, Jessie
 It's love again
 Mauch, Billy
 Anthony Adverse
 Maynard, Ken
 Avenging waters
 Fugitive sheriff
 Heroes of the range
 Maynard, Kermit
 Wildcat trooper
 Mellette, Arthur
 Lion's den
 Menjou, Adolphe
 Sing, baby, sing
 Merkel, Una
 We went to college
 Michael, Gertrude
 Forgotten faces
 Return of Sophie Lang
 Second wife
 Miljan, John
 Gentleman from Louisiana
 Milland, Ray
 Return of Sophie Lang
 Miller, Walter
 Fugitive sheriff
 Mills, John
 Nine days a queen
 Milly
 I love you only
 Milton, Ernest
 It's love again
 Miranda, Isa
 Passporto rosso
 Mitchell, Grant
 Parole
 Mix, Ruth
 Riding avenger
 Montgomery, Robert
 Piccadilly Jim
 Moore, Carlyle, Jr.
 Two against the world
 Moore, Dennis
 Down the stretch
 Moore, Grace
 King steps out
 Moore, Victor
 Swing time
 Mordvinov, N.
 Gypsies
 Morgan, Frank
 Dancing pirate
 Piccadilly Jim
 Morgan, Ralph
 Yellowstone
 Morris, Chester
 Counterfeit
 They met in a taxi
 Mowbray, Allan
 Fatal lady
 Muir, Gavin
 Charlie Chan at the race track
 Muir, Jean
 Draegerman courage
 White Fang
 Musco, Angelo
 Your troubles are mine

Nace, Anthony
 A son comes home
 Nagel, Anne
 Guns of the Pecos
 Tattler
 Neagle, Anna
 Three maxims
 Newell, William
 Sitting on the moon
 Nissen, Greta
 Red wagon
 Niven, David
 Palm Springs
 Nixon, Marian
 Reckless way
 Nolan, Lloyd
 Counterfeit
 Texas Rangers
 Novoseltzev, I.
 Seven brave men
 Nugent, Eddie
 Prison shadows
 Oakie, Jack
 Texas Rangers
 Oakmen, Wheeler
 Aces and eights
 O'Brien, George
 Border patrolman
 O'Brien, Pat
 China Clipper
 Public enemy's wife
 Oland, Warner
 Charlie Chan at the race track
 Oliver, Edna May
 Romeo and Juliet
 Olivier, Laurence
 I stand condemned
 Olsen, Moroni
 Grand jury
 M'liss
 Mummy's boys
 O'Neill, Henry
 Draegerman courage
 Oscar, Henry
 Seven sinners
 Osterman, Jack
 Wanted men
 O'Sullivan, Maureen
 Devil doll
 Ottiano, Rafaela
 Devil doll
 Overman, Lynne
 Poppy
 Three married men
 Owen, Reginald
 Yours for the asking
 Owsley, Monroe
 Mister Cinderella
 Page, Bradley
 Three of a kind
 Pagnani, Andreina
 Il serpente a sonagli
 Palette, Eugene
 My man Godfrey
 Paola, Dria
 Blind girl of Sorrento
 Parker, Cecilia
 Below the deadline
 Mine with the iron door
 Old hutch
 Parker, Jean
 Texas Rangers
 Paterson, Pat
 Spendthrift
 Patrick, Gail
 Early to bed
 Murder with pictures
 My man Godfrey
 Patterson, Elizabeth
 Old hutch
 Return of Sophie Lang
 Three cheers for love
 Pegna, Vanna
 Il serpente a sonagli
 Pendleton, Nat
 Sworn enemy
 Trapped by television
 Pepper, Barbara
 Mummy's boys
 Rogues' tavern

- Perry, Joan
   Meet Nero Wolfe
   Shakedown
 Perry, Linda
   Two against the world
 Pichel, Irving
   Down to the sea
 Pidgeon, Walter
   Fatal lady
 Pilbeam, Nova
   Nine days a queen
 Polk, Oscar
   Green pastures
 Post, Guy Bates
   Fatal lady
 Powell, Dick
   Hearts divided
   Stage struck
 Powell, William
   My man Godfrey
 Preston, Ann
   Parole
 Price, Rosalinda
   Roarin' guns
 Prouty, Jed
   Back to nature
   Educating father
 Pryor, Roger
   Sitting on the moon
   Ticket to paradise
 Purcell, Richard
   Jailbreak

 Quigley, Juanita
   Devil doll
 Quillan, Eddie
   Gentleman from Louisiana

 Raft, George
   Yours for the asking
 Rains, Claude
   Anthony Adverse
   Hearts divided
 Ralph, Jessie
   Bunker Bean
   San Francisco
   Walking on air
 Ralston, Esther
   Hollywood Boulevard
 Rambeau, Marjorie
   Dizzy dames
 Rathbone, Basil
   Romeo and Juliet
 Ratoff, Gregory
   Road to glory
   Sing, baby, sing
 Raymond, Gene
   Bride walks out
   Walking on air
 Reynolds, Craig
   Jailbreak
   Tattler
 Rhodes, Eric
   Second wife
 Rhodes, Jane
   Forgotten faces
 Rice, Florence
   Blackmailer
   Panic on the air
   Sworn enemy
 Richards, Addison
   Draegerman courage
   Song of a nation
   'Trailin' west
 Richmond, Kane
   Racing blood
   Reckless way
 Rissone, Giuditto
   I love you only
 Roberti, Lyda
   Hill Tillies
 Roberts, Beverly
   China Clipper
   Hot money
   Two against the world
 Robson, May
   Captain's kid
 Rogers, Ginger
   Swing time
 Romero, Cesar
   Public enemy's wife
 Rooney, Mickey
   Devil is a sissy
   Down the stretch

 Roy, Gloria
   Charlie Chan at the race
   track
 Ruggles, Charlie
   Early to bed
   Hearts divided
 Russell, Elizabeth
   Girl of the Ozarks
 Russell, Rosalind
   Craig's wife
 Rutherford, Ann
   Down to the sea
   Harvester

 St. John, Al
   West of Nevada
 Sale, Chic
   Gentleman from Louisiana
 Scelzo, Filippo
   Passaporto rosso
 Schmitsdorf, Bruno
   Der kampf
 Scott, Randolph
   And sudden death
   Last of the Mohicans
 Shang, Kwah-wu
   Song of China
 Shaw, Winifred
   Case of the velvet claws
   Satan met a lady
 Shearer, Norma
   Romeo and Juliet
 Shilling, Marion
   Idaho kid
 Shirley, Anne
   M'liss
 Shoemaker, Ann
   Sins of man
 Sidney, Sylvia
   Fury
 Simon, Simone
   Girls' dormitory
 Sinelnikova, M.
   Gypsies
 Skipworth, Alison
   Princess comes across
   Satan met a lady
   Two in a crowd
 Slaughter, Tod
   Murder in the red barn
 Smith, C. Aubrey
   Romeo and Juliet
 Sondergaard, Gale
   Anthony Adverse
 Sothorn, Ann
   My American wife
   Walking on air
 Sparks, Ned
   Bride walks out
 Stander, Lionel
   Meet Nero Wolfe
   They met in a taxi
 Standing, Sir Guy
   I'd give my life
   Palm Springs
   Return of Sophie Lang
 Stanwyck, Barbara
   Bride walks out
   His brother's wife
 Steele, Bob
   Last of the Warrens
 Steele, Isobel
   I was a captive of Nazi
   Germany
 Steni, Mario
   Blind girl of Sorrento
 Stephenson, Henry
   Walking on air
 Stevens, Onslow
   Easy money
   Three on the trail
 Stewart, James
   Gorgeous hussy
 Stewart, Sophie
   Murder in the red barn
 Stockfeld, Betty
   Beloved vagabond
 Stone, Fred
   Grand jury
   My American wife
 Stone, Lewis
   Don't turn 'em loose
   Sworn enemy
   Suzy
 Stone, Paula
   'Trailin' west

 Stuart, Gloria
   Crime of Dr. Forbes
   Poor little rich girl
   36 hours to kill
 Stuart, Jeanne
   The shadow
 Summerville, George (Slim)
   Pepper
   White Fang
 Swanstroem, Karin
   On the sunnyside

 Talbot, Lyle
   Trapped by television
 Talley, Marion
   Follow your heart
 Tamiroff, Akim
   General died at dawn
 Taylor, Robert
   Gorgeous hussy
   His brother's wife
 Temple, Shirley
   Poor little rich girl
 Terry, Sheila
   Go get 'em Haines
 Tester, Desmond
   Beloved vagabond
 Thondike, Sybil
   Nine days a queen
 Tibbett, Martha
   Unknown ranger
 Tombes, Andrew
   Ticket to paradise
 Tone, Franchot
   Gorgeous hussy
   King steps out
   Suzy
 Toomey, Regis
   Bulldog edition
 Torres, Raquel
   Red wagon
 Tracy, Spencer
   Fury
   San Francisco
 Travis, June
   Bengal tiger
   Earthworm tractors
   Jailbreak
 Treacher, Arthur
   Hearts divided
   Satan met a lady
 Trevor, Claire
   Star for a night
   To Mary—with love
 Twelvetees, Helen
   Thoroughbred
 Tyler, Tom
   Last outlaw

 Van Riel, Raimondo
   Crooked love
 Venable, Evelyn
   Star for a night
 Viarisio, Enrico
   I love you only
 Vincent, Alan
   Easy money
 Voitsik, Ada
   Anna
 Von Eltz, Theodore
   Below the deadline

 Wahlbom, Nils
   Youth of today
 Walburn, Raymond
   Mister Cinderella
   They met in a taxi
   Three wise guys
 Walker, Ray
   Bulldog edition
   Dark hour
 Walters, Luana
   Aces and eights
 Walthall, Henry B.
   China Clipper
   Last outlaw
   Mine with the iron door
 Walton, Douglas
   Mary of Scotland
 Ware, Irene
   Dark hour
 Warner, H. B.
   Blackmailer

ACTORS and ACTRESSES—Continued*

- Wayne, John
Winds of the wasteland
- Weidler, Virginia
Girl of the Ozarks
- Westley, Helen
Half angel
- Whalen, Michael
Poor little rich girl
Sing, baby, sing
- White Fang
Wheeler, Bert
Mummy's boys
- Whitney, Eleanore
Three cheers for love
- Wilcoxon, Henry
Last of the Mohicans
- Wilde, Lois
Wildcat trooper
- William, Warren
Case of the velvet claws
Satan met a lady
Stage struck
- Williams, D. J.
Murder in the red barn
- Wilson, Frank
Green pastures
- Wilson, Marie
Satan met a lady
- Wing, Toby
Hill Tillies
- Winninger, Charles
White Fang
- Withers, Grant
Lady be careful
- Withers, Jane
Pepper
- Witherspoon, Cora
Piccadilly Jim
- Wood, Helen
Charlie Chan at the race track
High tension
- Woodbury, Joan
Lion's den
Rogues' tavern
- Woods, Donald
Isle of fury
A son comes home
Song of a nation
White angel
- Woods, Harry
Heroes of the range
- Woolsey, Robert
Mummy's boys
- Wray, Fay
They met in a taxi
- Young, Polly Ann
Border patrolman
- Young, Robert
Bride walks out
It's love again
Secret agent
Sworn enemy
Three wise guys
- Young, Roland
Give me your heart
- Gardner, E. S.
Case of the velvet claws
- Gluck, S.
The last trap (Dark hour)
- Gorman, H.
Suzy
- Grey, Z.
King of the Royal Mounted
Raiders of Spanish Peaks
(Arizona raiders)
- Hammett, D.
Maltese falcon (Satan met a lady)
- Hatch E.
My man Godfrey
- Jesse, F. T.
Lightning strikes twice
(Half angel)
- Kyson, C.
Raw gold (West of Nevada)
- Locke, W. J.
Beloved vagabond
- London, J.
White Fang
- Mastriani, F.
La Cieca di Sorrento (Blind girl of Sorrento)
- Maugham, S.
Narrow corner (Isle of fury)
- Merritt, A.
Burn, witch, burn (Devil doll)
- Mulford, C. E.
Bar 20 Three (Three on the trail)
- Porter, G. S.
Harvester
- Rogger, L. L.
The duchess (Princess comes across)
- Roth, J.
Job (Sins of man)
- Sherman, R.
To Mary—with love
- Smith, E.
Red wagon
- Stout, R.
Fer-de-Lance (Meet Nero Wolfe)
- Strachey, L.
Eminent Victorians (White angel)
- Stuart, D.
The shadow
- Webb, W. P.
Texas Rangers
- West, W.
Big Bend Buckaroo (Riding avenger)
- Williams, V.
Clubfoot (Crouching beast)
- Wilson, H. L.
His majesty, Bunker Bean (Bunker Bean)
- Wodehouse, P. G.
Piccadilly Jim
- Wright, H. B.
Alias Brian Kent (Road to glory)
- Mine with the iron door
- Borzage, F.
Hearts divided
- Bradbury, R. N.
Last of the Warrens
- Branner, P.
Youth of today
- Bretherton, H.
Heart of the west
King of the Royal Mounted
Three on the trail
- Brignone, G.
Passaporto rosso
- Brower, O.
Postal Inspector
Sins of man
- Brown, C.
Gorgeous hussy
- Browning, T.
Devil doll
- Butler, D.
White Fang
- Buzzell, E.
Three married men
- Cabanne, C.
Last outlaw
- Clemens, W.
Case of the velvet claws
Down the stretch
- Tattler
- Clifton, E.
Wildcat trooper
- Collins, L. D.
Down to the sea
- Connelly, M.
Green pastures
- Connolly, B.
Changing of the guard
- Cooper, G.
The shadow
- Corrigan, L.
Dancing pirate
- Cromwell, J.
To Mary—with love
- Cukor, G.
Romeo and Juliet
- Cummings, I.
Girls' dormitory
Poor little rich girl
- Dawn, N.
Tundra
- De Courville, A.
Seven sinners
- Dieterle, W.
Satan met a lady
White angel
- Disney, W.
Moving day
- Dupont, E. A.
Forgotten faces
A son comes home
- Dwan, A.
High tension
- Edwards, H.
Private secretary
- Enright, R.
China Clipper
Earthworm tractors
- Fitzmaurice, G.
Suzy
- Florey, R.
Hollywood Boulevard
- Ford, J.
Mary of Scotland
- Forde, E.
36 hours to kill
- Fraser, Harry
Riding avenger
- Friedlander, L.
Parole
- Gerasimov, S.
Seven brave men
- Goldblatt, M.
Gypsies
- Green, A. E.
They met in a taxi
Two in a crowd
- Grinde, N.
Captain's kid
Jailbreak
Public enemy's wife
- Guiol, F.
Mummy's boys
- Hale, A.
Neighborhood house
- Hale, R.
Racing blood
- Hall, A.
Yours for the asking

Zellman, Tollie
Youth of today

BOOKS (Adapted)

- Adams, S. H.
Gorgeous hussy
- Allen, H.
Anthony Adverse
- Booth, C. G.
General died at dawn
- Connolly, M.
Lady Smith (Palm Springs)
- Cooper, J. F.
Last of the Mohicans
- De Montepin, X., and Dor-nay, J.
La porteuse de pain
- Finn, J.
Murder in the big house (Jailbreak)
- Furnas, J. C.
And sudden death [article]

DIRECTORS

- Archainbaud, G.
Return of Sophie Lang
- Arzner, D.
Craig's wife
- Asquith, A.
I stand condemned
- Bacon, L.
Cain and Mabel
- Barton, C.
And sudden death
Murder with pictures
- Bennett, S. G.
Avenging waters
Fugitive sheriff
Heroes of the range
Unknown ranger
- Berkeley, B.
Stage struck
- Bernhardt, K.
Beloved vagabond
- Biberman, H. J.
Meet Nero Wolfe

Hall, K. G.
Thoroughbred
Hamilton, W.
Bunker Bean
Hanbury, W. V.
Crouching beast
Hawks, H.
Road to glory
Heisler, S.
Straight from the shoulder
Hill, R.
Idaho kid
Kelly of the secret service
Prison shadows
Rogues' tavern
West of Nevada
Hitchcock, A.
Secret agent
Hogan, J.
Arizona raiders
Howard, D.
Border patrolman
Mine with the iron door
Howard, W. K.
Princess comes across
Humberstone, H. B.
Charlie Chan at the race track
Jason, L.
Bride walks out
Johnson, R. K.
Reckless way
Kane, J.
Guns and guitars
Keighley, W.
Green pastures
Kenton, E. C.
Counterfeit
Killy, E.
Bunker Bean
Second wife
King, L.
Bengal tiger
Draegerman courage
La Cava, G.
My man Godfrey
Lachman, H.
Our relations
Lamont, C.
August week-end
Below the deadline
Bulldog edition
Dark hour
Lanfield, S.
Half angel
Sing, baby, sing
Lang, F.
Fury
Law, H.
Neighborhood house
Lederman, D. R.
Final hour
Leonard, R. Z.
Piccadilly Jim
LeRoy, M.
Anthony Adverse
Lo, M.
Song of China
Lord, D.
Trapped by television
Lovering, O.
Border flight
Lubin, A.
Yellowstone
Ludwig, E.
Fatal lady
McCarey, R.
Three cheers for love
McDonald, F.
Big noise
Isle of fury
Song of a nation
McGann, W.
Hot money
Two against the world
Mack, R.
Shake Mr Shakespeare
McLeod, N.
Early to bed
Malasomma, N.
Blind girl of Sorrento
Mannon, A. T.
I was a captive of Nazi Germany
Marin, E. L.
All American chump
I'd give my life

Sworn enemy
Marshall, G.
Crime of Dr Forbes
Materazzo, R.
Il serpente a sonagli
Mattioli, M.
I love you only
Mayo, A. L.
Give me your heart
Milestone, L.
General died at dawn
Millar, A.
Crooked love
Molander, G.
On the sunnyside
Newfield, S.
Aces and eights
Go get 'em Haines
Lion's den
Roarin' guns
Nicholls, G., Jr.
M'liss
Nigh, W.
Crash Donovan
Dizzy dames
O'Neill, M. G.
Wellington Pike goes west
Palermi, A.
Your troubles are mine
Pember, C.
Wanted men
Pichel, I.
Gentleman from Louisiana
Piryof, I.
Anna
Ratoff, G.
Sins of man
Ray, A.
Everyman's law
Reed, T.
Lady be careful
Roach, H.
Hill Tillies
Rogell, A. S.
Grand jury
Rosen, P.
Easy money
It couldn't have happened
Three of a kind
Rosmer, M.
Murder in the red barn
Ruben, J. W.
Old hutch
Santley, J.
Harvester
Walking on air
We went to college
Saville, V.
It's love again
Schneider, E.
Gypsies
Scott, A.
Follow your heart
Palm Springs
Ticket to paradise
Sedgwick, E.
Mister Cinderella
Seiler, L.
First baby
Star for a night
Seitz, G. B.
Last of the Mohicans
Three wise guys
Selman, D.
Shakedown
Sevilla, R.
She-Devil Island
Shea, W.
Girl of the Ozarks
Shores, L.
Glory trail
Smith, N.
Guns of the Pecos
Trailin' west
Staub, R.
Sitting on the moon
Stein, P. L.
Red wagon
Stevens, G.
Swing time
Stevenson, R.
Nine days a queen
Sti, A. R.
La portouse de pain
Stoloff, B.
Don't turn 'em loose
Sutherland, A. E.
Poppy

Taggart, E.
Women are trouble
Taurog, N.
Rhythm on the range
Tinling, J.
Back to nature
Educating father
Pepper
Van Dyke, W. S.
Devil is a sissy
His brother's wife
San Francisco
Vidor, K.
Texas Rangers
Von Sternberg, J.
King steps out
Walsh, R.
Spendthrift
Wangenheim, G.
Der kampf
Watt, N.
Navy born
Wilcox, H.
Three maxims
Wiles, G.
Blackmailer
Two-fisted gentleman
Wright, M.
Winds of the wasteland
Young, H.
My American wife

PLAYS (Adapted)

Anderson, M.
Mary of Scotland
Benoit, P.
Nuits de Muscovie (I stand condemned)
Connolly, M.
Green pastures
Dixon, C.
Secret agent
Dodd, L. W.
His majesty, Bunker Bean (Bunker Bean)
Donnelly, D.
Poppy
Fodor, L.
Matura (Girls' dormitory)
Gates, E.
Poor little rich girl
Harte, B.
M'liss
Kelly, G.
Craig's wife
Mallory, J., pseud.
Sweet aloe (Give me your heart)
Marischka, H., and E.
Cissy (King steps out) [operetta]
Michaelis, K.
Die heilige luege (Star for a night)
Nicholson, K., and Robinson, C.
Sailor beware (Lady be careful)
Oursler, F.
All the king's men (Second wife)
Ridley, A., and Merivale, B.
Wrecker (Seven sinners)
Shakespeare, W.
Romeo and Juliet
Van Loan, H. H., and Mack, W.
The noose (I'd give my life)
Weitzenkorn, L.
Five star final (Two against the world)
Young, R. J.
Glorious Betsy (Hearts divided)

SHORT STORIES (Adapted)

Anderson, F. I.
Notorious Sophie Lang (Return of Sophie Lang)
Bradford, R.
Ol' man Adam an' his chil-lun (Green pastures)

SHORT STORIES (Adapted)—

Continued

- |                           |                             |                           |
|---------------------------|-----------------------------|---------------------------|
| Burnett, W. R.            | Hervey, H.                  | Squier, E. L.             |
| 36 hours to kill          | A son comes home            | Glorious buccaneer (Danc- |
| Carey, L.                 | Jacobs, W. W.               | ing pirate)               |
| Johnny gets his gun       | Money box (Our relations)   | Upson, W. H.              |
| (Straight from the shoul- | Kyne, P. B.                 | Earthworm tractors        |
| der)                      | Lionized (Racing blood)     | Walsh, T.                 |
| Cockrell, F. M.           | On Irish hill (Kelly of the | Homecoming (Don't turn    |
| Count Pete (Walking on    | secret service)             | 'em loose)                |
| air)                      | Runyon, D.                  | Witwer, H. C.             |
| Harte, B.                 | Three wise guys             | Cain and Mabel            |
| M'liss                    | Scott, E.                   | Wodehouse, P. G.          |
|                           | Border flight               | Watch dog (Dizzy dames)   |

Directory of Producers

Academy. Academy Pictures, Inc, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Ajax. Ajax Pictures Corp, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Ambassador. Ambassador Pictures, Inc, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Amkino. Amkino Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Associated British. Associated British Corp, Ltd, Film House, Wardour St, London, W. 1
 Atlantic. Atlantic Pictures Corp, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.

Beacon. Beacon Films, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Beaumont. Beaumont Pictures, Inc, 846 E 6th St, Los Angeles
 British & Dominions. British & Dominions Film Corp, Ltd, Empire House, 117 Regent St, London, W. 1
 British International. British International Pictures, Ltd, Boreham Wood, Elstree, Hertfordshire, Eng.
 Burroughs-Tarzan. Burroughs-Tarzan Enterprises, Inc, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.

Capitani. Capitani-Films, Via XX, Settembre 3, Rome
 Capitol. Capitol Film Productions, Ltd, 28 Brook St, London W. 1
 Celebrity. Celebrity Productions, Inc, 723 7th Av, N.Y.
 Chesterfield. Chesterfield Motion Pictures Corp, 1540 Broadway, N.Y.
 Columbia. Columbia Pictures Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Commodore. Commodore Pictures Corp, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Conn. Conn Pictures Corp, Talisman Studios, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Criterion. Criterion Film Productions, Ltd, 28 Brook St, London, W. 1

Darmour. Darmour Studios, 5823 Santa Monica Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Deka. Deka-Film, Berlin SW. 68, Hedemannstrasse 13
 Diversion. Diversion Pictures, Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 DuWorld. DuWorld Pictures, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.

Educational. Educational Pictures, Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Empire. Empire Film Distributors, Inc, 723 7th Av, N.Y.

First division. First Division Pictures, Inc, RKO Bldg, Radio City, N.Y.
 First national. See Warner
 Fox. See 20th century-Fox
 France-film. France-Film, 66 5th Ave, N.Y.
 Futter. Wafilms, Inc, and The Futter Corp, 1426 N Beachwood Drive, Hollywood, Calif; Paramount Bldg, N.Y.

Gainsborough. Gainsborough Studios, Poole St, Islington, N. 1., London
 Gaumont British. Gaumont British Picture Corp of America, 1600 Broadway, N.Y. Gaumont British Picture Corp, Ltd, 142-150 Wardour St, London, W. 1
 General foreign sales. General Foreign Sales Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Goldwyn-United artists. See United artists

Hoffberg. J. H. Hoffberg, Co. Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.

Imperial. Imperial Distributing Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Invincible. See Chesterfield

Lenauer. Jean Lenauer, 250 W 57th St, N.Y.
 Lenfilm. Lenfilm, Leningrad, U.S.S.R.
 Libkow. Libkow Film, Marszałkowska 94, Warsaw
 London films. London Film Productions, Ltd, 22 Grosvenor St, London, W. 1

Mascot. Mascot Pictures Corp, 1776 Broadway, N.Y.
 MGM. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corp, 1540 Broadway, N.Y.
 Moscow film studios. See Amkino

Olympic. Olympic Motion Picture Corp, 325 W 44th St, N.Y.

Paramount. Paramount Pictures Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Pathé. Pathé Cinema, 6 Rue Francoeur, Paris
 Pickford-Lasky. Pickford-Lasky, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Principal. Principal Distributing Corp, RKO Bldg, Radio City, N.Y.

Regal. Regal Productions, Inc, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Reliable. Reliable Pictures Corp, 6048 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Reliance. Reliance Pictures, Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Republic. Republic Pictures Corp, RKO Bldg, Rockefeller Center, N.Y.
 RKO. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
 Roach. Hal Roach Studios, Inc, 8822 Washington Blvd, Culver City, Calif.

Sherman. Harry Productions, Inc, 650 N Bronson, Hollywood, Calif.
 Spectrum. Spectrum Pictures Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Studios Photosonor. Studios Photosonor, 17 bis Quai de Seine, Courbevoie, Paris
 Supreme. Supreme Pictures, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
 Swiss-Praesens Films. Praesens Film A. G., Zurich, Switzerland

20th century-Fox. 20th Century-Fox Film Corp, 44 W 56th St, N.Y.
 Twickenham. Twickenham Film Studios, Ltd, Alliance Studios, St Margaret's, Middlesex, Eng.

UFA. UFA Films, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 United artists. United Artists Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
 Universal. Universal Pictures, Inc, 1250 6th Av, N.Y.

Van Beuren. Van Beuren Corp, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
 Victory. Victory Pictures Corp, Foy Studios, Culver City, Calif.
 Vitaphone. Vitaphone Corp, 1277 E 14th St, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Wanger. Walter Wanger Productions, Inc, 1040 N Las Palmas Av, Hollywood, Calif.
 Warner. Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc, 321 W 44th St, N.Y.
 Wilcox. Herbert Wilcox Productions, Ltd, Imperial Studios, Boreham Wood, Elstree, Hertfordshire, Eng.

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(Continued from inside front cover)

	Page		Page
Palm Springs .....	76	Stage Struck .....	109
Parole .....	77	Star for a Night .....	110
Passaporto Rosso .....	78	Straight from the Shoulder ..	111
Pepper .....	78	Suzy .....	111
Piccadilly Jim .....	79	Swing Time .....	113
Poor Little Rich Girl .....	81	Sworn Enemy .....	114
Poppy .....	82	Tattler .....	115
La Porteuse de Pain .....	83	Texas Rangers .....	115
Postal Inspector .....	84	They Met in a Taxi .....	116
Princess Comes Across .....	84	36 Hours to Kill .....	117
Prison Shadows .....	85	This Is the Land .....	118
Private Secretary .....	85	Thoroughbred .....	118
Public Enemy's Wife .....	85	Three Cheers for Love .....	118
Racing Blood .....	86	Three Married Men .....	120
Reckless Way .....	87	Three Maxims .....	120
Red Wagon .....	87	Three of a Kind .....	120
Return of Sophie Lang .....	87	Three on the Trail .....	121
Rhythm on the Range .....	88	Three Wise Guys .....	121
Riding Avenger .....	90	Ticket to Paradise .....	121
Road to Glory .....	91	To Mary—with Love .....	122
Roarin' Guns .....	92	Trailin' West .....	123
Rogues' Tavern .....	93	Trapped by Television .....	124
Romeo and Juliet .....	93	Tundra .....	124
San Francisco .....	96	Two Against the World .....	125
Satan Met a Lady .....	98	Two-Fisted Gentleman .....	125
Second Wife .....	99	Two in a Crowd .....	126
Secret Agent .....	100	Unknown Ranger .....	126
Il Serpente a Sonagli .....	101	Walking on Air .....	126
Seven Brave Men .....	101	Wanted Men .....	127
Seven Sinners .....	102	We Went to College .....	128
Shadow .....	103	Wellington Pike Goes West ..	129
Shake Mr. Shakespeare .....	103	West of Nevada .....	129
Shakedown .....	103	White Angel .....	130
She-Devil Island .....	104	White Fang .....	131
Sing, Baby, Sing .....	104	Wildcat Trooper .....	132
Sins of Man .....	105	Winds of the Wasteland ...	132
Sitting on the Moon .....	106	Women Are Trouble .....	132
A Son Comes Home .....	106	Yellowstone .....	133
Song of a Nation .....	107	Your Troubles Are Mine .....	134
Song of China .....	108	Yours for the Asking .....	134
Spendthrift .....	108	Youth of Today .....	136

How to Use the Motion Picture Review Digest

Sample Entry

FURY. MGM 90min My 29 '36

Players: Spencer Tracy. Sylvia Sidney.
Walter Abel. Frank Albertson. Bruce
Cabot

Director: Fritz Lang

"Tracy is peace-loving, hard working. He and Sylvia are engaged. On circumstantial evidence, Tracy is arrested as a kidnapper in a Middle-western village. Led by rowdies, the villagers storm the jail, bent on lynching Tracy. Unable to enter Tracy's cell, the mob dynamites the jail. Tracy is believed killed, but the explosion tears off his cell door and he escapes, although injured." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A sometimes horrific indictment against the abuse of law and order. In a clear, unbiased manner the social problems of lynching and mob fury are presented. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

"No locality is indicated, and the plot is cleverly contrived not to arouse controversy and to avoid ultimate tragedy, but the case against lawlessness is presented with surprising force. . . Suggested for church use. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family."

+ + Wkly Guide Je 6 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"How to disturb an audience is of course a big problem in the cinema. Director Fritz Lang has been highly successful with the problem. . . One might say too successful, for 'Fury' is disturbing for the wrong reason: the problem it poses is entirely unresolved at the close. . . It is regrettable that [Director Lang] did not, or could not, make 'Fury' the first-rate tragedy it might have been." Robert Giroux

+ — Nation p821 Je 24 '36

"Although the film becomes top-heavy with an individual plot in the final sequence, it remains a compelling and terrifying document. . . So magnificent is it in its unwavering denunciation of mob rule that one regrets that it has had to fall back on courtroom melodramatics and plot manipulation before it ends." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"From directing, writing, acting standpoints, 'Fury,' is a topnotch job. For audiences, however, it may prove too dramatic for better than fair returns. . . Well done, it is however, a type picture that doesn't always realize its possibilities at the box office. Exploitation may aid it."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

Starting at the beginning, the title of this picture is Fury. The producing company is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It is 90 minutes in length. It was released on May 29, 1936.

The list of principal players and the director will require no explanation.

Next comes a brief note describing the picture, its nature, and plot. Sometimes these notes are written by our staff. In other cases they are quoted from a published source. In such cases the source is given.

Following the descriptive note, the excerpts from reviews begin. Following each review the source is given, with date of issue and number of the page on which the review appears.

It will be noticed that plus and minus signs sometimes precede the sources. These indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the review as a whole (not just of the quoted excerpt). The meaning of the various combinations of these signs is as follows:

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

The signs are omitted when a review merely reports on a film without expressing a definite critical opinion.

In interpreting these signs, it will be well to remember that their precise significance will vary somewhat according to the source. In general there are three types of sources represented in the MOTION PICTURE REVIEW DIGEST: (1) audience suitability ratings by special reviewing organizations (women's clubs, religious groups and the like); (2) general newspapers and magazines; and (3) trade papers. The purpose of the audience suitability ratings by the special reviewing organizations is chiefly to pass on questions of morality and propriety and to report on suitability for children of various ages. The purpose of the reviews in general magazines and newspapers is to inform the adult patron of artistic and entertainment qualities. The purpose of the trade paper reviews is to inform the exhibitor of probable commercial value.

MOTION PICTURE REVIEW DIGEST

Vol. 1

December 28, 1936

No. 54

Published by THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY, 950-972 University Avenue, New York City

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(arranged alphabetically)

	Page		Page
Abyssinia .....	1	Captain's Kid .....	20
Accused .....	1	Career Woman .....	21
Accusing Finger .....	1	Case of the Black Cat .....	21
Adventure in Manhattan....	2	Cavalcade of the West ....	22
After the Thin Man .....	3	Cavalry .....	22
Alibi for Murder .....	4	Champagne Waltz .....	22
All American Chump .....	4	Charge of the Light Brigade..	23
Along Came Love .....	5	Charlie Chan at the Opera..	25
Les Amours de Toni .....	5	Ciboulette .....	25
Amphitryon .....	6	Code of the Range .....	25
As You Like It .....	6	Come and Get It .....	26
Banjo On My Knee .....	9	Come Closer, Folks .....	28
Le Barbier de Seville .....	10	Conflict .....	28
Big Broadcast of 1937 .....	10	Country Gentlemen .....	29
Big Game .....	13	Craig's Wife .....	29
Big Show .....	14	Crime Over London .....	30
Bold Caballero .....	14	Criminal Lawyer .....	31
Born to Dance .....	15	Crooked Trail .....	31
Boss Rider of Gun Creek....	16	Daniel Boone .....	31
Brilliant Marriage .....	16	Devil Is a Sissy .....	32
Bulldog Edition .....	16	Devil on Horseback .....	34
Cain and Mabel .....	17	Dimples .....	35
California Mail .....	18	Dodsworth .....	36
Can This Be Dixie? .....	18	Don't Turn 'Em Loose .....	38
Il Cappello a Tre Punte....	19	Draegerman Courage .....	39

(Continued on inside front cover)

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(Continued from front cover)

Page	Page
Dusty Ermine . . . . .	39	Der Kampf . . . . .	68
East Meets West . . . . .	40	Kelly the Second . . . . .	68
Easy to Take . . . . .	41	La Kermesse Heroique . . . . .	69
Ecstasy . . . . .	42	Killer at Large . . . . .	71
Ellis Island . . . . .	42	King of Hockey . . . . .	71
Empty Saddles . . . . .	42	King of the Royal Mounted . . . . .	72
End of the Trail . . . . .	43	Ladies in Love . . . . .	73
Everything Is Thunder . . . . .	43	Lady Be Careful . . . . .	75
15 Maiden Lane . . . . .	44	Lady from Nowhere . . . . .	75
Flying Doctor . . . . .	45	Lady Luck . . . . .	75
Flying Hostess . . . . .	45	Land Without Music . . . . .	76
Follow Your Heart . . . . .	46	Last of the Mohicans . . . . .	76
Forbidden Heaven . . . . .	47	Laughing at Trouble . . . . .	77
Four Days' Wonder . . . . .	47	Legion of Terror . . . . .	77
Fugitive in the Sky . . . . .	48	Libeled Lady . . . . .	78
Garden of Allah . . . . .	48	Lloyds of London . . . . .	80
Gay Desperado . . . . .	51	Lonely Trail . . . . .	81
General Died at Dawn . . . . .	52	Longest Night . . . . .	81
General Spanky . . . . .	54	Love Begins at Twenty . . . . .	83
Gentleman from Louisiana . . . . .	54	Love in Exile . . . . .	83
Gesuzza, la Sposa Garibaldina . . . . .	55	Love Letters of a Star . . . . .	84
Ghost Patrol . . . . .	55	Love on the Run . . . . .	84
Girl from Maxim's . . . . .	55	Luckiest Girl in the World . . . . .	86
Girl on the Front Page . . . . .	56	Mad Holiday . . . . .	87
Give Me Your Heart . . . . .	57	Magnificent Brute . . . . .	88
Go West, Young Man . . . . .	58	Make Way for a Lady . . . . .	90
Gold Diggers of 1937 . . . . .	60	The Man I Marry . . . . .	90
Gorgeous Hussy . . . . .	60	Man Who Could Work Mira- cles . . . . .	91
Great O'Malley . . . . .	60	Man Who Lived Again . . . . .	92
Greater Promise . . . . .	61	Man Who Lived Twice . . . . .	92
Happy Go Lucky . . . . .	61	Mandarin Mystery . . . . .	93
Here Comes Carter . . . . .	62	Men of the Plains . . . . .	93
Hideaway Girl . . . . .	62	Les Miserables . . . . .	94
Hollywood Boulevard . . . . .	63	Missing Girls . . . . .	95
Hopalong Cassidy Returns . . . . .	64	More Than a Secretary . . . . .	95
House of Secrets . . . . .	64	Murder with Pictures . . . . .	96
I Cover Chinatown . . . . .	65	My Man Godfrey . . . . .	97
In His Steps . . . . .	65	Mysteries of Notre Dame . . . . .	98
Isle of Fury . . . . .	66	Night Waitress . . . . .	98
It Couldn't Have Happened . . . . .	67	Nightingale . . . . .	99
Juggernaut . . . . .	67	Nine Days a Queen . . . . .	99
Jungle Princess . . . . .	67

(Continued on inside back cover)

December 28, 1936. Vol. 1 No. 54

Motion Picture Review Digest, published weekly by The H. W. Wilson Company, 950-972 University Ave., New York, N.Y. Entered as second-class matter March 24, 1936, at the post office at New York, N.Y., under the Act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price, one year, $4.00. Subscriptions are accepted only from those who have subscribed for the cooperative indexing service. Full information will be supplied on request.

Printed in U. S. A.

Motion Picture Review Digest

Vol. 1

DECEMBER 28, 1936

No. 54

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

950-972 University Avenue, New York City

Terms of Subscription and Advertising. Full information on request.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

Audience Evaluation Publications

America—America. $4. America Press, 461 Eighth Av, New York

Am Legion Auxiliary—American Legion Auxiliary. See Fox W Coast Bul

Bul on Current Films—Bulletin on Current Films. National Council for Prevention of War, 532 17th St, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Calif Cong of Par & Teachers—California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs—California Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs (Los Angeles District)

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Sel Motion Pict

Christian Century—Christian Century. $4. Christian Century Press, 440 S Dearborn St, Chicago

DAR—National Society Daughters of the American Revolution

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Endorsed Motion Pict—Endorsed Motion Pictures. Publication discontinued

Fox W Coast Bul—Fox West Coast Theatres Corporation Bulletin. 1837 S Vermont Av, Los Angeles

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Am Legion Auxiliary; Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; DAR; E Coast Preview Committee; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Int Fed of Cath Alumnae; Nat Bd of R; Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)—General Federation of Women's Clubs (West Coast). Bulletin. Mrs Wm A. Burk. 359 N Bronson Av, Los Angeles

See also Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Int Fed of Cath Alumnae—International Federation of Catholic Alumnae

See Fox W Coast Bul; Nat Legion of Decency

Jt Estimates—Joint Estimates. Bulletin. General Federation of Women's Clubs (West Coast). Mrs Wm A. Burk, 359 N Bronson Av, Los Angeles

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Mo Film Bul—Monthly Film Bulletin. Issued to members only. British Film Inst, 4 Great Russell St, London W C 1

Motion Pict & Family—Motion Picture and the Family. Free. Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc, 28 W 44th St, New York

Motion Pict Guide—Motion Picture Guide. 50c. Mrs John Waldo, Am Assn of Univ Women Motion Pict Com, 330 E 47th St, Indianapolis (This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Film Estimate Service; Nat Soc of New England Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Motion Pict R—Motion Picture Reviews. $1. Motion Picture Reviews, Women's University Club, 943 S Hoover St, Los Angeles

Nat Bd of R M—National Board of Review Magazine. $2. National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, 70 Fifth Av, New York

See also Fox W Coast Bul; Wkly Guide

Nat Council of Jewish Women—Los Angeles Section, National Council of Jewish Women. Bulletin. Mrs Florine Wolfstein, Chairman, 617 S Lucerne Blvd, Los Angeles

See also Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Nat Film Estimate Service—National Film Estimate Service

See Motion Pict Guide

Nat Legion of Decency—National Legion of Decency. $2. National Legion of Decency, 485 Madison Av, New York

Nat Soc of New England Women—National Society of New England Women

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide—New York Archdiocese Motion Picture Guide

See Nat Legion of Decency

Parents' M—Parents' Magazine. $2. The Parents' Institute, Inc, 9 E 40th St, New York

Scholastic—Scholastic. $1.50. Scholastic, Chamber of Commerce Bldg, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sel Motion Pict—Selected Motion Pictures. West & East Coast Preview Committees.

Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc, Will H. Hays, Pres, 28 W 44th St, New York

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

S Calif Council of Fed Church Women—Southern California Council of Federated Church Women

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Sel Motion Pict

Wkly Guide—Weekly Guide to Selected Pictures. $2.50 yearly, with Magazine, $1. National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, 70 Fifth Av, New York

Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles—Women's University Club, Los Angeles

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Motion Pict R; Sel Motion Pict

Newspapers and Magazines

Boston Transcript—Boston Evening Transcript. $5.50. (Saturday). Boston Transcript Co, Inc, Pub, 324 Washington St, Boston

Canadian M—Canadian Magazine. $1.50. Hugh C. MacLean Pub, Ltd, 347 Adelaide St, W Toronto

Christian Science Monitor—Christian Science Monitor. $9. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston

Commonweal—Commonweal. $5. Calvert Publishing Corp, Grand Central Terminal, New York

Hollywood Spec—Hollywood Spectator. $5. Hollywood Spectator, Inc, 6513 Hollywood Blvd, Hollywood

Liberty—Liberty. $2. Liberty Publishing Corp, 1926 Broadway, Lincoln Sq, New York

Life—Life. $1.50. Life Magazine, Inc, 60 E 42d St, New York

Lit Digest—Literary Digest. $4. Funk and Wagnalls Co, 354-360 Fourth Av, New York

Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. (Daily). Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester, 2. Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York

Nation—Nation. $5. Nation Fund Inc, 20 Vesey St, New York

New Repub—New Republic. $5. New Republic, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York

New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 30s. New Statesman and Nation, 10 Great Turnstile, London, W C 1

New Theatre—New Theatre. $1.50. New Theatre Magazine, 156 W 44th St, New York

N Y Herald Tribune—New York Herald Tribune. $15. N Y Tribune, Inc, 230 W 41st St, New York

N Y Sun—New York Sun. $10. Sun Printing and Publishing Assn, 280 Broadway, New York

N Y Times—New York Times. $15. New York Times Co, 229 W 43d St, New York

N Y World-Telegram—New York World-Telegram. $13. New York World-Telegram Pub, 125 Barclay St, New York

New Yorker—New Yorker. $5. F-R Publishing Corp, 25 W 45th St, New York

News-Wk—News-Week. $4. Rockefeller Center, 1270 6th Av, New York

Sat R—Saturday Review. 30s. Chawton Pub Co, Ltd, 18-20 York Bldgs, Adelphi, London

Script—Script. $3. Wagner Publishing Co, 9492 Dayton Way, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Sight & Sound—Sight and Sound. (Quarterly) 2s 6d. British Film Inst, 4 Great Russell St, London, W C 1

Spec—Spectator. 30s. The Spectator, Ltd, 99 Gower St, London, W C 1

Stage—Stage. $3. Stage Publishing Co, Inc, 50 E 42d St, New York

Time—Time. $5. Time, Inc, 350 E 22d St, Chicago

Trade Papers

Box Office—Box Office (Eastern sectional ed) $2. Associated Publications, Inc, 4704 E 9th St, Kansas City, Mo.

Canadian Moving Pict Digest—Canadian Moving Picture Digest. $5. Canadian Moving Picture Digest Co, Ltd, 259 Spadina Av, Toronto, 2

Film Daily—Film Daily. $10. The Film Daily, 1650 Broadway, New York

Hollywood Reporter—Hollywood Reporter. $10. Wilkerson Daily Corp, Ltd, 6717 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.

Motion Pict Daily—Motion Picture Daily. $6. Motion Picture Daily, Inc, 1790 Broadway, New York

Phila Exhibitor—Philadelphia Exhibitor. $2. Jay Emanuel Publications, Inc, 219 N. Broad St, Philadelphia

Variety—Variety. $6. Variety, Inc, 154 W 46th St, New York

Variety (Hollywood)—Variety. $10. (Daily). Daily Variety, Ltd, 1708-10 N Vine St, Hollywood, Calif.

Explanations

After the title of the film, the producer is given, next the running time in minutes and then the date of release.

Under Players, only leading members of the cast are listed.

For system of evaluating favor or disfavor of the reviews, see note at bottom of pages. The evaluating symbols indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of each review as a whole, not just of the quoted excerpt.

In the reference to the magazine, the number of the page is first given, followed by the month, day and year.

An index will be found at the end of the quarterly cumulated numbers which includes actors, actresses and directors for the productions indexed; also books, plays and short stories from which movies have been adapted.

Only those foreign films which are likely to be generally shown are listed.

In evaluating films, the women's organizations use "mature" or "adult" when films are unsuited for children; "family" when suitable for all the members of a family; "young people" when suitable for adolescents from 14 to 18 years of age; "children" for those under 14.

Abbreviations of producers' names and their addresses will be found in the Directory of Producers at the end of the number.

(s) This symbol denotes a short feature.

When the date of release is omitted, it has not been determined by the producer.

The running time as given is tabulated after projection room showings and is only an approximation of the actual release length in communities where state or local censorship may result in deletions. For final information, consult your local exchange.

Key to Abbreviations

a	adults	fed	federal	p	page
Ag	August	gen	general	par	parent -s
Am	American	inc	incorporated	pict	picture
Ap	April	inst	institute -ion	Phila	Philadelphia
assn	association	int	international	pub	publisher -ication
av	avenue	Ja	January	r	review -s
bd	board	Je	June	Repub	Republic
bks	books	Jl	July	S	September, south
blvd	boulevard	jt	joint		-ern
bul	bulletin	Lit	Literary	Sat	Saturday
c	children (under 15 years)	ltd	limited	sel	selected
Calif	California	m	magazine	soc	society
Cath	Catholic	min	minutes	Spec	Spectator
co	company	mo	monthly	sq	square
com	committee	Mr	March	st	street
Cong	Congress	My	May	univ	university
D	December	N	November	vol	volume
e	east	nat	national	w	west
ed	edition	no	number	wk	week
F	February	NY	New York	wkly	weekly
		O	October	y	young people (15-20 years)

Directly following the text a complete annual index of actors and actresses, books, directors, plays and short stories will be found. In addition a complete title index of all films reviewed from September 1, 1935 through December 28, 1936 is included.

Motion Picture Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Motion Pictures

December 28, 1936

ABYSSINIA. Amkino 63min D 5 '36

A silent film with an off-screen narration in Russian and additional titles in English on the screen.

Russian film produced in Ethiopia during the Italian invasion and showing the destructive results of Fascist war on a small, defenseless free nation.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] was made by a pair of daring photographers from the U.S.S.R., who have contrived to give fragmentary material a certain unity. Their clips have nearly all been taken in the former domain of the Negus. They fail to suggest the portentous international complications of Mussolini's African adventure, but they constitute a damning indictment of Italian brutality during the war. While definitely partisan, the film is an apparently authentic document." Howard Barnes

N Y Herald Tribune p20 D 9 '36

"The film has several harrowing war scenes and some gruesome 'shots' of the bombing of a Red Cross hospital that are a remarkable testament of the savageness of the conflict. The film is a bit too long and devotes altogether too much footage to a general picturization of the life and habits of the natives before hostilities started—information that is already well known as a result of previous newsreels—but once it gets under way it accomplishes its purpose." William Boehnel

N Y World-Telegram p37 D 9 '36

ACCUSED. Criterion-United artists 70min Ja 8 '37

Cast: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Dolores Del Rio. Florence Desmond. Basil Sydney

Director: Thornton Freeland

Dialogue film produced in England. It is a mystery story with a background of Paris stage life. A Spanish dancer is accused of the murder of a star who has tried to steal her husband's affections.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The locale is chiefly in a French courtroom where procedure is strange and interesting. . . The story is highly dramatic and exciting in the extreme." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p40 D '36

Trade Paper Reviews

— Motion Pict Daily p7 Ag 4 '36

"On form this picture cannot possibly fail in public appeal. It has two stars, a supporting company that is practically flawless, and a story and situations which have always satisfied. Okay for both sides of the Atlantic. . . Direction is intelligent and production atmospheric and elaborate, without ostentation."

+ Variety p19 Ag 12 '36

ACCUSING FINGER. Paramount 60min O 9 '36

Cast: Paul Kelly. Marsha Hunt. Kent Taylor. Robert Cummings

Director: James Hogan

This is the story of an ambitious prosecuting attorney who has helped send many men to their doom and then finds himself in the death house on a charge of having murdered his estranged wife. The real killer is found and the attorney, having learned the condemned man's point of view, becomes an enthusiastic worker against the death penalty.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Rather more argumentative than entertaining, this film is rescued from complete mediocrity by the boldness of its theme and the forceful playing of Paul Kelly. The system of capital punishment is herein belabored for its possible mistakes with more conviction than the given facts warrant. . . The conclusion against legal execution . . . is considerably weakened by the poor presentation of the plot and the undistinguished dialogue which is forced upon the players. The production itself is technically inferior. Its implications are for the adult mind." T. J. Fitzmorris

— America p48 O 17 '36

"A: depends on taste; Y: doubtful; C: no." Christian Century p1510 N 11 '36

"The ending is rather abrupt, but the picture will surely be conducive to a deeper respect for all law and order and to a more sympathetic understanding of one another. Family-mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A powerful picture but too tense and vivid to be classed as entertainment. Adults: strong; 8-18: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture has good story value, vital and interesting subject matter and sincere acting by a well chosen cast, but as an arraignment of capital punishment it falls down in its logic and its psychology. . . The picture is obviously biased and the appeal is an emotional one for it shows the anguish of men condemned to death, but not the tragedy and sorrow of those whose loved ones were murdered. Much is made of the cruelty of the law, but nothing of the right of society to self protection. A laudable attempt has been made to exalt the kinder and more humane instincts of man and society, but a fairer presentation of this controversial subject could have been given. Adults. Rating: matter of taste." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A tense, dramatic film very well acted and thought-provoking. Mature. Over 16." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Well produced, the picture has deep significance, of interest to adults and young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ACCUSING FINGER—Continued

"The effort to prove that the perpetrator of a hideous and totally unjustifiable crime should not be executed by showing the same punishment meted out to the innocent is so illogical as to be fantastic. Whether or not one believes in capital punishment, the treatment of this theme is definitely vicious in its influence on impressionable minds. Not recommended for anybody. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul O 10 '36

"This picture, excellently mounted, is expertly cast even to the smallest character part. The director has been mindful of detail that would enhance the dramatic force; making his work skillful and compelling. Mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 28 '36

"A fine cast give realistic and human portrayals, the direction is clever, the photography of prison scenes is interesting and there is excellent drama development with fine maintenance of suspense. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency O 8 '36

"A & Y: fair; C: no interest."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"The question of capital punishment is treated with such grim realism and such gruesomeness that audiences will find it a terrific arraignment of our accepted way of punishing criminals. . . Directed and acted with evident sincerity, the production has the merit of bringing a serious and controversial subject to the screen. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict p8 N 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Under the guise of an attack on the ethics of capital punishment, this is a rather grim program melodrama. . . Strong acting does not save the film from its own theatricality. Adults."

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 14 '36

"Mr. Botsford again turns in a job of which he may be justly proud. 'The Accusing Finger' is technically excellent, cinematically sound and dramatically outstanding. . . [It] is unreservedly recommended. Cinema students please note." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p13 S 26 '36

"The story is the one about the cold-blooded prosecutor who softens when his own neck is threatened unjustly, by circumstantial evidence, and it is told by means of so many ancient devices of melodrama that even the warmest opponents of legal homicide will be torn between amazement and embarrassment. . . The cast do as well as could be expected with the materials at hand." B. R. C.

— N Y Times p35 N 17 '36

"Although it attempts to make out a strong case against capital punishment. . . [it] is a silly and incredibly feeble murder mystery. Except for a part played exceptionally well by Paul Kelly. . . there isn't a real characterization in the film and the situations are forced and labored." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p17 N 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An argument for the abolition of capital punishment, this film misses fire chiefly because of poor screen treatment and unintelligent direction. . . Poor photography and lighting and a not-too-careful production makes this a picture of neglected opportunities. Family."

— Box Office p19 S 26 '36

"This feature is incomparably stronger in its exposition of argument than in its power to entertain. The footage is generally lacking in suspense and action."

— + Film Daily p9 N 17 '36

"Adding one more to the year's mounting list of social reform pictures, this one makes a sentimental but effective plea against capital punishment. It is a well-made B film and will add strength to double bills in the middle register and on down. The well built script . . . uses a dramatically effective idea to good purpose."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 17 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 S 18 '36

"Familiar, played well by a feature cast, 'The Accusing Finger' is for neighborhoods, twin bills. . . With no star names, it fits into the program category for which it is made."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p35 O 1 '36

"'The Accusing Finger' is a glaring example of too many chefs having a finger in the broth. Added to this is a lack of weighty marquee names, an inapplicable title, mediocre dialoging and uneven tempo. Main fault is that the film fails to develop several plot angles introduced. For the duals, it should satisfy. . . Paul Kelly seems miscast as the prosecuting attorney. . . While Kelly seldom is favored with strong lines, it also is evident that he is inclined to overact."

— Variety p13 N 18 '36

"A preaching against capital punishment, carrying out the story in an unconvincing manner, 'The Accusing Finger' is merely average entertainment. Stagey and theatrical, the piece lacks punch and is lukewarm, except in one or two scenes which in themselves are meritorious only because of individual performances."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 17 '36

ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN. Columbia 75min O 8 '36

Cast: Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea, Reginald Owen, Herman Bing

Director: Edward Ludwig

Based on the novel Purple and Fine Linen by May Edington. A detective story writer is hired by a newspaper to write exposé articles about a series of jewel robberies. He is a cocksure predictor of big crimes and when one of his predictions falls through, he loses his job but meets an actress who helps him regain his job, scoop rival papers and capture the jewel thieves.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The chief merit of the film is the sprightly manner it maintains throughout the action, and it is acted with considerable skill. . . [It is] a maturely amusing production." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p48 O 17 '36

"A: only fair; Y: perhaps; C: hardly." Christian Century p1343 O 7 '36

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"Adults & adolescents." Mo Film Bul p173 O '36

"Fair. Family-mature." + — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"The story becomes bewildering in its many ramifications and is only mildly entertaining. Adolescents, 12-16: probably entertaining; children, 8-12: no."

— + Motion Pict R p4 O '36

"General patronage." Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A: good entertainment; Y: possible; C: unsuitable."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"A blend of expert direction, fine acting and a refreshing story result in delightful entertainment. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p8 N 1 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Clever dialogue and good acting. Family."
+ Wkly Guide O 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This is a smooth little comedy romance that ought to please the whole family—it moves swiftly, has plenty of fun and a souppçon of mystery." Laura Elston
+ Canadian M p38 N '36

"Well acted and moderately entertaining comedy melodrama. Adults & young people."
+ Christian Science Monitor p17 O 31 '36

"The attractive principals do far more for 'Adventure in Manhattan' than the five authors who have had a hand in concocting the new [picture]. . . . Jean Arthur . . . Joel McCrea, Reginald Owen and Thomas Mitchell realize all the best qualities of a screen mystery-romance that is pleasantly diverting and mildly exciting. . . . Edward Ludwig has directed the piece briskly and adroitly, relying on the talents of his performers to conceal the deficiencies of the scenario." Howard Barnes
+ N Y Herald Tribune p21 O 23 '36

"'Adventure in Manhattan' is a lightweight and moderately diverting mystery tale which hurdles its absurdities with the greatest of ease and will be forgotten almost as soon as it fades from the screen. . . . Part of it is entertaining and amusing, but more of it is skittish, far-fetched and unreasonable. And what it does with newspaper procedure, with the libel laws and police procedure is more than we dare to recall." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p27 O 23 '36

"[It isn't] much to brag about. 'Adventure in Manhattan' is a fair, rather crazy mystery with Joel McCrea and Jean Arthur." John Mosher
+ New Yorker p77 O 31 '36

"There's enough humor in the film to give the principals something to work on."
News-Wk p30 O 10 '36

"It seems that [four writers] couldn't quite get together on their conceptions of a mystery-solving reporter and an excitement-loving actress. . . . No attempt is made to explain the mysterious happenings that keep these two people hopping about from newspaper office to stage door. We suppose that would be asking too much of any four script writers. Without Mr. McCrea and Miss Arthur 'Adventure in Manhattan' would be all hollow didoes. With Mr. McCrea and Miss Arthur, it is pleasant nonsense."
+ Stage p12 D '36

"'Adventure in Manhattan' . . . may conceivably prove to the producers of 'It Happened One Night' that box-office success is not necessarily the reward of second-hand whimsey."
Time p71 O 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Geared for popular appeal, especially in the direction of fans who want thrill pictures in a zesty manner. Jean Arthur, who delighted audiences with her performances in 'Ex-Mrs. Bradford' and 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town,' is seen in a similar role. Family."
+ Box Office p63 S 19 '36

"This is a vigorous, expertly produced picture that will exact enthusiasm from every strata of patrons. On all counts it is both an exhibitor and audience picture."
+ Film Daily p7 O 23 '36

"This is a combination of whimsy and crime detection that has frequent spots of engaging lunacy but that as a whole does not quite jell. There is a lack of credibility in the premises of the story that makes many of the situations too forced, even for whimsy. The result is a fair programmer, the sale of which will be helped somewhat by the presence of Joel Mc-Crea and Jean Arthur in well-fitting roles but which cannot be expected to make any high score at the box office."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 1 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 S 4 '36

"Well made comedy drama that has been smartly cast, well played, 'Adventure in Manhattan' ought to build on word of mouth. Estimate: entertaining."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 O 1 '36

"Competent cast and splendid direction manage to ease this one by, but it's pretty close all the way, with the story always operating against it. Through production quality the picture is moderately amusing, and that is about how it will do at the window, moderately. That the plot, after a promising start, gets weaker as it goes along, is not the fault of Jean Arthur and Joel McCrea. . . . Script itself is to blame for the picture's tendency to add implausibility after implausibility to a basically fantastic plot."
+ Variety p14 O 28 '36

"'Adventure in Manhattan' is another tongue-in-cheek comedy melodrama that is slightly above the current run-of-the-mill programmer of this type. Although another [mystery story] involving another newspaper man, picture treats this slant of story with new angle. . . . Obviously a topper for double bills, the picture has plenty of action, and although it drags terribly in opening sequences, the yarn reels off at a fine pace when it finally gets under way."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 1 '36

AFTER THE THIN MAN. MGM 110min D 25 '36

Cast: William Powell, Myrna Loy, James Stewart, Elissa Landi, Joseph Calleia, Jessie Ralph, Alan Marshall

Director: W. S. Van Dyke

"Powell and his wife, Myrna Loy, have returned from a long absence to their San Francisco home. Immediately they are faced with solving the mysterious death of a cousin's philandering and generally obnoxious husband who proposed to relinquish his young wife to a former suitor for a large sum." Variety (Hollywood)

Trade Paper Reviews

"This gay, rollicking comedy mystery should score heavily at the box office and cast is headed by William Powell and Myrna Loy, who were an ideal team in the 'Thin Man.' They romp through their present roles and pile up the laughs. Many of the comedy situations are fresh, with Director Van Dyke extracting the fullest measure of fun. Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich, who wrote the 'Thin Man' screen play, did nobly with the script for the sequel."

+ Film Daily p11 D 7 '36

"Produced as a sequel to the smash 'Thin Man,' this is a worthy successor. With William Powell and Myrna Loy teamed in the same characters as before, the picture is equally as hilarious in its farcical elements and equally as tense and dramatic in the heavier unfolding of its grim mystery. While the 'Thin Man' was a knockout at the box office mainly for its novelty of treatment, which since has been imitated many times, the bizarre treatment of the present story, while not now new, can be assured of tremendous audience appeal because of the memory of the earlier picture, the growing popularity of the Powell and Loy team, and the entertaining qualities of the picture as a whole."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 D 3 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 D 4 '36

"The ingredients are very similar to 'The Thin Man,' the personnel is led by the same top names, including Director W. S. Van Dyke,

AFTER THE THIN MAN—Continued
and grosses may even exceed those on 'The Thin Man' with many new customers educated to this type of entertainment. Magnetic marquee names, fascinating story, handling, all spell prodigious box office."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 3 '36

ALIBI FOR MURDER. Columbia 59min S 23 '36

Cast: William Gargan, Marguerite Churchill, Gene Morgan, John Gallaudet

Director: D. Ross Lederman

"Perry Travis, the new reporter with a 'nose for mystery' and a flair for detecting, follows the clues that lead to the murderer." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair; Y & C: rather good thriller."
Christian Century p1510 N 11 '36

"While not entirely plausible, there are many interesting and humorous touches in this competently acted and directed production. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

+ — Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"Fair entertainment for adults & young adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 8 '36

"A: fair murder mystery; Y: possible; C: unsuitable."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict N 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is a] routine program murder. Adults."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 O 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] well-paced murder mystery that will score with devotees of crime films."

+ Film Daily p10 O 2 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 O 20 '36

"Estimate: program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p36 O 15 '36

"This is a one-murder mystery based on amateur sleuthing, and more talk than action. William Gargan's presence is the picture's principal asset, but he over-talks to a point of boredom."

— Variety p31 O 7 '36

ALL AMERICAN CHUMP. MGM 70min O 16 '36

Cast: Stuart Erwin, Betty Furness, Robert Armstrong, Edmund Gwenn

Director: Edwin L. Marin

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: stupid; Y & C: poor."

Christian Century p1574 N 25 '36

"Fairly entertaining for family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The story is interestingly developed, the cast well chosen and the picture provides good entertainment of the light, humorous type. Family. Adults & 8-18: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture will be popular with all types of audiences seeking light entertainment and not demanding too much from their screen fare. Rating: matter of taste. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature-family. Good." DAR

"A slow-moving farce built around a novel idea which results in a mildly entertaining program picture. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It is] a well cast picture suitable for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The picture is no better than one would expect from such material. Stuart Erwin manages to be funny as Elmer but he is wasted in such a poor vehicle. Waste of time for anybody but harmless for family." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"Well produced and fairly entertaining. Family-mature."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 23 '36

"Fairly entertaining. Mature."

+ — Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"The development does not entirely avoid the obvious, but director and cast together seem to have so much enjoyed making the film that it would be churlish not to join in. Stuart Erwin is in great form as the simple genius, Elmer. . . It is good clean fun and the plot is not too intricate for youngsters to follow. Family." D. F. R.

+ Mo Film Bul p171 O '36

"This is an amusing picture and is excellent fare with its brow-beaten young hero, the willing bride, and just enough improbability to prove entertaining. . . Over-lengthy gangster sequences and excessive drinking. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 21 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A, Y & C: fairly entertaining."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Fairly entertaining. Mature."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p6 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Even with a good cast and high grade producers the obvious hurry in the making of 'All American Chump' results in a pretty slovenly production. . . The preview audience gave it hardly a complimentary hand. . . MGM should allow more time and money for what they call a B picture which in this case is much farther down the alphabet." Rob Wagner

— Script p10 O 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p14 N 14 '36

"Estimate: program farce; best for neighborhoods."

Phila Exhibitor p34 S 15 '36

"With length chopped to about an hour's running time, 'All American Chump' most patently is harnessed up for double combinations. It has neither names, story merit nor consistent entertainment to get by on a single picture set-up. Some of the comedy is silly and much of it inane. The film will not enhance Stuart Erwin's popularity. . . Neither the build-up to the championship tournament nor the title match itself have been given sufficient importance and intelligent direction or development. Seemingly, the card technique angle was chucked out of the window as being too complicated and a lot of commonplace gagging inserted. Much of this is woeful to behold."

— Variety p19 N 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ALONG CAME LOVE. Paramount 67min O 23 '36

Cast: Irene Hervey, Charles Starrett, Doris Kenyon, H. B. Warner, Irene Franklin

Director: Bert Lytell

"It's a Cinderella story, with Irene Hervey playing the girl in Macy's basement who loves the young medico with Park Avenue antecedents." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Here is good entertainment, with splendid performances by several former favorites most notable among them being Irene Franklin. Sympathetically directed, this unpretentious story is an appealing blend of laughter and tears. Family, but mature for children." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family. Fairly entertaining picture, sincerely acted, capably directed and possessing a nice mixture of comedy." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The picture has a likable cast, good acting, an original angle or two, but these virtues hardly compensate for the weak story. Disappointing. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Illogical, but amusing. Family, but mature for children." DAR

"Not a remarkable film but it is well staged and photographed and adequately acted. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Noteworthy is the work of the principals in this highly entertaining comedy for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul O 31 '36

"This sentimental comedy is delightful and most refreshing. . . The cast, studded with the names of many old time stars, portray, in a most capable manner, people who do the unusual thing. The excellent direction is emphasized by many human touches. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 17 '36

"[It is] a passably amusing photoplay. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: no interest."

+ — Motion Pict R p5 N '36

"Natural, simple and sincere performances by a good cast in a somewhat obvious but pleasing picture. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women O 21 '36

"It is to be regretted that a line referring to a Catholic Saint was not deleted from this picture. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A, Y & C: pleasant sentimental comedy." Parents' M p38 Ja '37

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p4 N 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Had the musical scoring been less obvious and had film editor been more perceptive, producer Richard A. Rowland would have a corking film. Even as it is, 'Along Came Love' is genuine entertainment. But most importantly, it portends the possibility of a new era for Paramount." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p21 O 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Light, unpretentious little comedy-drama with an entertainment quality far above that possessed by many more imposing films, this accomplishes what more motion pictures should strive for—enjoyment, pure and simple. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 10 '36

"Using the ingredients that make for mass appeal entertainment, Richard A. Rowland has produced a romantic comedy that should do well as program fare. The women especially should like this story of the shop girl who gets her doctor hero."

+ Film Daily p12 O 6 '36

"This delicious piece of nonsense, with brilliant individual performances, sparkling dialogue and handsome mounting, lacks nothing but big names to put it definitely into big time. As it stands, it is first rate entertainment, packing beaucoup laughs and plenty of heart interest, and in most double billing arrangements it will be hard to tell whether this or the other picture was meant for the top spot."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 3 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 O 5 '36

"Feature players are well cast but in the long run the show will wind up best on twin bills or in neighborhoods."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p3 O 15 '36

"With a keen eye on the box office, Richard A. Rowland has turned out a romantic comedy in 'Along Came Love' that is a light and frothy bit that will fit itself nicely on any double biller. Definitely aimed at mass entertainment, the picture is imbued with all the surefire tricks and should do excellently in all neighborhood business."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 3 '36

LES AMOURS DE TONI. French motion picture 81min N 4 '36

Cast: Celia Montalvan, E. Delmont, Blavette, Dallan

Director: Jean Renoir

French dialogue film with English sub-titles produced in the south of France with a non-professional cast. Toni, one of a group of Spanish itinerant quarry laborers falls in love with a native girl and then turns to the coquettish Josepha who marries the cruel quarry foreman. Toni continues to think of his lost love, ruining his life and finally losing it in an effort to save Josepha after she murders her loutish husband.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Condemned."

— — Nat Legion of Decency N 26 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Going to newspaper files for his narrative, Jean Renoir has attempted to recreate authentic atmosphere and incident in 'Les Amours de Toni.' . . . He has employed an almost 'documentary' method in bringing a group of peasants and workers to the screen, but his realism defeats itself. Although the untrained actors he has assembled are sometimes vividly alive and the backgrounds are always convincing, the piece has little dramatic urgency. . . . What suspense is inherent in the material is dissipated in M. Renoir's efforts to put life over art. One cannot quarrel with the 'naturalistic' effects he has achieved. They inevitably make for a discursive and tedious show, however." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p20 N 5 '36

"Marcel Pagnol, as well known here as abroad for his sparkling comedy, 'Topaze,' this time turns to tragic drama. . . . He has made of it an outstanding example of the French realistic school. He tells his story without pity, without censor, without comment. . . . Although studiously avoiding any trace of sentiment or even of sympathy, the picture is far from devoid of emotional content. This very aloofness intensifies the inevitable tragedy. . . . 'Les Amours de Toni,' well edited and subtitled . . . is a strong, well directed, movingly acted tragedy of peasant life." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p20 N 5 '36

"It is unfortunate that the cinema audience has been weaned on artificiality, because every so often something admirably genuine and sincere, completely unaccented and unadorned, comes along to emphasize this fact, and generally to suffer by comparison with the gilded product of the world of make believe. Into this category must fall 'Les Amours de Toni.' . . . M. Renoir takes for his framework an actual murder and, with a camera that penetrates beyond the police records, photographs a story of rude smoldering passions, niggardiness and frustration that might well, along with its scenic backgrounds, have been given a little technical boost here and there, current film criteria being what they are." J. T. M.

LES AMOURS DE TONI—Continued

 + — N Y Times p35 N 5 '36

"It is a mournful and glintless folkpiece, all starkness and no entertainment. 'Les Amours de Toni' is hellbent on being sincere, but this only throws the glare the stronger on its amateurishness. . . . [It] gives an insight into the habits of these workers who have the ring of truth about them. But otherwise the film leaves one morose and unappeased. . . . The acting ranges from good to awful and the direction is so slipshod that the narrative often becomes confusing." William Boehnel
 — + N Y World-Telegram p21 N 5 '36

"Movies, just movies. Some more unhappy French peasants." John Mosher
 New Yorker p117 N 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] vigorous story of savage emotions. . . . Its stark and often sordid scenes are powerfully displayed."

Film Daily p13 N 6 '36

Motion Pict Daily p9 N 6 '36

"This dull spectacle should have been tagged 'Love and Murder Among the Proletariat.' . . . Story and background are strictly of the genre type. Unless these are recognizable and appreciated, the only thing that the customer can take away with him is a depressive feeling. . . . One thing that reacts in the picture's favor is the casting. The players all pack that earthy flavor and in their simple way sketch in some poignant touches, but the story and the pictorial treatment prove impediments too tough for them to overcome."

— Variety p13 N 18 '36

AMPHITRYON. L'Alliance cinematographique 102min

Cast: Henri Garat. Armand Bernard. Jeanne Boitel. Odette Florelle

Directors: Reinhold Schunzel. Albert Valentin

Music: Francois Doelle

French dialogue film from subsidiary of German UFA with English sub-titles. Also called Gods at Play. "The beginning finds the women of Thebes pleading for their husbands and lovers, gone long years to war. Alcmena, wife to 'Amphitryon, general of the Theban army, directs a plea to Jupiter to bring triumph to Theban arms and return her husband to her. Jupiter, hearing her plea on Mount Olympus, decrees the success of the Theban army. Meanwhile, impressed by the beauty and devotion of Alcmena, the sissified henpecked Jupiter determines to descend to earth in the form of Amphitryon and win her for his own." (Hollywood Reporter)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There are so many English sub-titles in this 'Amphitryon' that you feel you're reading the story instead of seeing it. And it won't excite you much, either. . . . [It's the] general kind of farcical adultery that has kept the French giggling since the days of Charlemagne." John Mosher
 + — New Yorker p77 O 31 '36

"Those bad Nazis have had a hand in financing this film, the picketeers at the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse would have us know. Which emblazoned news, it seems, is enough to stop (only temporarily, we hope) the showing of one of the most engaging comedies about town. . . . All through it is a Greek chorus that sways graciously and chants the French equivalents of Cole Porter lyrics. There is, too, some trick photography that shows us Jupiter and Mercury leaving Olympus on a parachute. You'll like the idea."

+ Stage p12 D '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"One of the most delightful and fanciful of tales has come to life in this story of Greek lore. In a charming ultra-modern, tongue-in-cheek fashion, we are transported to ancient Thebes, and live the lives of Jupiter's worshippers. . . . The dialogue, partly in prose and blank verse, and more often in song, becomes a delightful novelty. . . . This is one of the finest pictures yet brought from France."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 29 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 O 23 '36

AS YOU LIKE IT. Inter-allied-20th century-Fox 95min Ja 8 '37

Cast: Elisabeth Bergner. Laurence Olivier. Henry Ainley. Sophie Stewart. Leon Quartermaine

Director: Paul Czinner

Music: William Walton

Based on the play of the same title by William Shakespeare. In this pastoral fantasy set in the forest of Arden, the puckish Rosalind and the romantic Orlando play out their famous love tale.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This is a curious affair, part Shakespeare and part Bergner. The part which is the Bard's is executed in agreeable if workmanlike fashion and the Rosalind offered, whatever may be said of its orthodoxy, is of a charming consistency. It is definitely a Rosalind compacted of Miss Bergner's own art, owing little to poetry and less to the dread formalism of staid reverence. . . . Paul Czinner, who produced and skillfully directed the picture, kept close to the script and declined to prove the virtuosity of the camera by taking us on an irrelevant tour of the English countryside. This experiment in Shakespeare will probably not match the popular appeal of its predecessors but it has points of undoubted superiority—most of which resolve themselves into Elisabeth Bergner." T. J. Fitzmorris
 + America p168 N 21 '36

"Faithfulness to the spirit and word of Shakespeare, superb acting and direction and admirable photography are combined to create a rare cinematic experience. . . . The recital of 'All the World's a Stage' by Leon Quartermaine is poetry of poignant beauty and Elisabeth Bergner's Rosalind is that happy combination of great art and spontaneity which awakens the most enthusiastic response in the beholder. . . . One of the year's outstanding productions. Adults & young people." E Coast Review Committee
 + + Fox W Coast Bul N 28 '36

"This film version of 'As You Like It' is notable and worth seeing for Elisabeth Bergner's performance as Rosalind, for the acting generally, for the music of William Walton, and for the beautiful quality of Hal Rosson's photography. . . . But, as a film, it contributes little to solving the problems of filming Shakespeare except the wisdom of using such an accomplished and high spirited actress as Elisabeth Bergner in a play that has such a poor plot and depends so essentially on dialogue. Students of the play may dislike her interpretation of the part and the twist which this gives to the whole play, but filmgoers will be grateful for the movement and life which she brings to the film. . . . Nevertheless, as it stands it is well worth seeing and, in addition, can be recommended to teachers who want to give children an opportunity of seeing the play well acted and well spoken. Adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p147 S 30 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

"A, Y & C: excellent."

Parents' M p38 Ja '37

"Miss Bergner's idea (and doubtless her director's idea too) of a romping, giggling Rosalind seemed to miss fire entirely. Not As We Like It at all. But the Shakespeare lines do come through with their old magic. . . . The fault of the picture is not so much the fault of the hard-working players as of the play itself. 'As You Like It' is much better suited to the limitations of cardboard sets in a regular theater than to the realities possible and attempted in a movie version." Ernestine Taggard

+ Scholastic p17 N 21 '36

"The outstanding points about this adaptation of Shakespeare are its refreshing simplicity, grace and good humor. And Elisabeth Bergner, whose Rosalind has great charm and artistry. Those who like the play will delight in the film. Family. Outstanding."

+ Wkly Guide N 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"For such an accomplished actress—such a finished performer [as Elisabeth Bergner], Rosalind is such an easy role, it affords her little scope for emotional outbursts. But as always she plays with distinction and great finesse, and with a fine feeling for the play's delightful whimsy. . . . There is, possibly from our modern viewpoint, a paucity of story and too much dialogue in this Shakespearean romance, but the familiar tale is more than worth seeing for those who enjoy this type of performance." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p36 N '36

"Elisabeth Bergner's Rosalind is another addition to her list of distinctive screen portrayals. Dr. Paul Czinner and Robert J. Cullen, the adapter, have contrived a light-heartedly simple transcription without the sumptuousness of 'Romeo and Juliet' or the invisible wires of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream.' Which leaves the play very much in the hands of the actors and the camera men, who do it ample justice. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 14 '36

"This British-made Shakespearean offering is something of which the screen as a whole may well feel proud. 'As You Like It' always has been one of the Bard of Avon's most popular plays, one of the richest in quotations often repeated. . . . Miss Bergner is magnificent, and her accent, which so many critics in New York and London found fault with on the score of its being so un-English, I thought quite delightful. Other members of the cast are fully up to the standard demanded by the strictest Shakespearean student. . . . It is one of the titles you should underline on your 'Must' list. You will find it drags a little in the middle, but never mind that."

+ Hollywood Spec p6 D 5 '36

"The screen 'As You Like It' . . . has more the flavor of the footlights than of the movie cameras. It is more a photographed stage production. The acting—or most of it, at least—has the mellow histrionic flavor of grease paint. . . . Miss Bergner works hard with the lovelorn young woman, but her performance is not a happy one. For one thing, it frequently is hard to understand her diction. Nor do we care particularly for Laurence Olivier's Orlando. . . . The sylvan slopes of the Forest of Arden are too palpably canvas and wood and the direction of Dr. Czinner is more of the stage than the studio. The background is too static. The banished duke's followers sit around the forest glades as if they were stuffed figures." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p45 D 5 '36

"British critics ignited no bonfires for the picture, but danced in the streets in honor of Miss Bergner's Rosalind."

Lit Digest p24 S 26 '36

"It seems to be settled that we shall hear no more than half the text of any play by Shakespeare which wanders into the movies. . . . What is missing? Merely the heart, I think. Rosalind is here in the person of Elisabeth Bergner, and very charmingly so; but Rosalind is not the heart of 'As You Like It.' Neither is any other individual man nor woman. . . . All of them are necessary, and the ruthlessness with which these others have been trimmed away is a reminder of their value as individuals. . . . The heart of the play being gone, and its brain, we do have left, as I have said, a very nice Rosalind in Elisabeth Bergner. She is worth going a long way to see, and indeed the fragment of the play which has been photographed is in itself delightful." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p613 N 21 '36

"The settings are the worst feature of the film. . . . Much of the acting is excellent. Miss Bergner is enormously accomplished, and achieves her effects with the certainty of long experience. She cannot, of course, give us the English music of Shakespeare's verse, but she is never incomprehensible. Indeed her fault is to do every i twice, to double-cross every t: she is altogether too emphatic, too expressive. . . . Peter Pan has got mixed up with something out of Strindberg. How disappointing that Miss Bergner with all her talent should so have missed the real Rosalind! Mr. Laurence Olivier's Orlando and Mr. Leon Quartermaine's Jacques are triumphantly good: when they are speaking we are indeed in Arden. They give us a notion of the delight which Shakespeare filmed could be. . . . Altogether this production is too unsatisfactory to throw much light on the film possibilities of Shakespeare, but at least it should warn future directors not to hold up the dialogue with needless patches of silent camera-work." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation p352 S 12 '36

"The English screen transcription . . . is richly poetic, sensitively acted and pleasantly mounted, but it does little to advance the cause of Shakespeare in the films. . . . It remains more a photographed version of a stringently cut stage presentation than a comic classic shaped to the cinema. For all its fidelity to the spirit of the original, it is neither as daring a motion picture as 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' nor as brilliantly articulated as the current 'Romeo and Juliet.' . . . It should not be thought that Dr. Czinner's production is without virtues. Particularly, in the early scenes, the film is fluent and filled with beauty of speech and arresting visual compositions. . . . The supporting players, no matter how small their roles, render the poetry of Shakespeare's lines magnificently. It is doubtful if the famous speech of melancholy Jacques starting: 'All the world's a stage' has ever been voiced as expressively as it is here by Leon Quartermaine. Miss Bergner, although a veteran of countless Continental productions of the play, is not a perfect choice for Rosalind. . . . As Orlando Mr. Olivier is remarkably fine. . . . 'As You Like It' does not compare unfavorably with theatrical productions of the comedy but it might have been made far more cinematically credible and entertaining." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p17 N 6 '36

"It is not, unfortunately, an altogether happy venture. The charm and gayety of the original, inherent in the familiar and still fresh dialogue has not been lost. Leon Quartermaine as the philosophizing Jacques, Laurence Olivier as the lovesick Orlando, Henry Ainley as the banished Duke, are as fine a trio as any director of Shakespeare, comedy or drama, could ask. . . .

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

AS YOU LIKE IT—Continued

Mr. Quartermaine's reading of the 'Seven Ages of Man' is in itself almost worth a visit to the Music Hall. This time the fault does lie with the star. . . Miss Bergner's portrayal of Rosalind was long popular in Berlin. . . However Miss Bergner may have played Rosalind in German, she finds her task more difficult in English. A heavy accent ruins several of her speeches. She is somewhat over coy on occasion, given to hammering the point of her scenes and raising her high voice to an alarming shrillness." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p34 N 6 '36

"There is nothing tremendous about the new picture except its simplicity. After the opulence and expansiveness of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' and 'Romeo and Juliet,' it serves as a welcome change in the Shakespearean diet. . . Dr. Paul Czinner . . . has interpreted Shakespeare wisely in the main, making 'As You Like It' neither more nor less than it was meant to be: a pretty comedy, always tinkling on the edge of farce, but restrained from toppling by the wit and by the beauty of its language. . . Miss Bergner's Rosalind [is raised] to the preeminence her portrayal merits. A curious, but thoroughly delightful, blend of womanly tenderness and gamine impishness, Miss Bergner is perfectly adjusted to the part. She can be all tears one instant, all gibing, taunting, feminine with the next. . . Even with the memory of her 'Catherine the Great' and 'Escape Me Never,' this must be rated her finest performance. . . In sum, we have a gay and congenial production of Shakespeare. You'll like it if you liked the play." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p29 N 6 '36

"Having played Rosalind on most of the stages of middle Europe before her exile from Germany, Elisabeth Bergner now performs her favorite Shakespearean role for the benefit of motion picture audiences. . . This is a salute to a great and beautiful actress, if not to a great film or a play—the report of one who sat enthralled through every minute of the photoplay when this magical performer was on the screen, but who wilted somewhat under the second-ratedness of the text itself. . . 'As You Like It' is an indifferent play and it becomes bearable entertainment only when the Rosalind is so radiant, so beguiling, that she makes you forget its intolerably silly and tedious plot." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p27 N 6 '36

"There is an altogether unpretentious air, a general manner that is casual and affable and pleasant, about 'As You Like It' which certainly seems to suit the quality of this very casual comedy. . . Not paralyzed by the grandeur of the author's rank, or feeling called upon to embellish his work with vast ballets and scenic innovations, which always seem a somewhat backhanded compliment anyhow, Paul Czinner, with the advice at times of Sir James M. Barrie, has tried to do no more than present a very pretty piece. And in this aim, which is lofty enough for me, he has surely succeeded. Elisabeth Bergner is a charming Rosalind. . . I can't imagine anyone giving us a better Orlando than Laurence Olivier does here. . . Leon Quartermaine runs through the 'seven ages' in a way you won't hear bettered in your day." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p116 N 14 '36

"The Elstree studio's Shakespearean debut is a good [one]. The picture cost $750,000 but it is straight Shakespeare, treated with a simplicity that fits the play. Dr. Paul Czinner had the pleasure of directing a first-rate cast headed by his Austrian wife, Elisabeth Bergner. . . Judged by its enthusiastic reception in London, 'As You Like It' is very much as Englishmen like it. Released last week in this country, the film will probably please American audiences, too. . . It is demonstrated on the screen, even more clearly than behind the footlights, that this comedy is not Shakespeare at his best."

+ News-Wk p25 O 31 '36

"I am one of those people who believe that there is and should be no connection between Shakespeare and the screen. . . Great care has been taken not to overlay the text with lavish cinematic effects. The result is a judiciously cut version of the play. . . The cast has been carefully chosen and is especially notable for the return of Henry Ainley. . . Rosalind is supposed to be Elisabeth Bergner's favourite and best rôle and, playing it in German, it may well be that her performance is as charming as it is lively; but in English too many of the words are slurred owing to her accent, and there is a tendency to over-emphasise which becomes monotonous." Mark Forrest

Sat R p377 S 19 '36

"'As You Like It' is a respectful film: that is to say there is far more Shakespeare in it than there was in Reinhardt's 'Dream,' and I dare say it is a better production than you will often see on the stage. . . [It has] been heavily censored. . . That, I think, is the chief objection to Shakespeare on the screen: the British Board of Censors will see to it that only the school versions of his plays are produced. Regarded as a film, 'As You Like It' is less satisfactory. There are far too many dull middle-length shots from a fixed camera. . . Dr. Czinner has been too respectful towards stage tradition. He seems to have concluded that all the cinema can offer is more space."

Graham Greene

+ — Spec p416 S 11 '36

"Dr. Paul Czinner has arranged and rearranged the Shakespearean script until it fits the spacious talents of his wife. Rosalind is now not only an elfin jokester but the whole fantastic show. Orlando is allowed a few short sequences . . . but all other characters are recklessly stricken from the script. This, if it awards the camera any direct opportunity to make cinema from drama, is all right. But when it does nothing more than focus undeserved attention on one character, and wreck the delicate fantasy of a woodland idyll, it's all wrong. Furthermore, Miss Bergner's German accent makes something approaching mince-meat of the poetic rhythm that is so ably sustained by the other members of the cast. . . All is really not quite as sorrowful as this would lead you to believe. In the passages that have not been cut there are dignity and an evident reverence. At times the comedy is honestly enchanting, and the scenes with Orlando are always entertaining. . . It will add but little to Shakespeare's career upon the screen."

— + Stage p12 D '36

"'A Midsummer Night's Dream' and 'Romeo and Juliet' . . . had at least one thing in common: neither one has broken records for receipts. The critical acclaim which 'As You Like It' received in London last summer and will receive in the U.S. this winter is not likely to save it from the same fate. Box-office appeal is one of the few virtues the film lacks. . . Elisabeth Bergner's most pronounced drawback is an outlandish accent which she makes no effort to control. . . Shrewd, vivacious and versatile as ever, Actress Bergner probably brings the part to life as thoroughly as possible. . . To give the screen version a scope that no stage production can hope to match, Czinner allowed Set Designer Lazare Meersom . . . a free hand. Brilliantly matched with the glittering poetry of the play are its rich backgrounds."

+ Time p45 N 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"From the studios at Elstree comes this notable Shakespearean production that is a faithful translation to the screen of the play. . . Very few liberties have been taken with the original text, and on that account it will delight all Shakespearean students. Its appeal to the masses will be limited, for the subtleties and imageries of the great playwright likely will be over their heads."

+ Film Daily p13 N 6 '36

"The production is lavish, a superb interpretation of Shakespeare without any compromise to the supposed exigencies of the boxoffice, resulting in an artistic triumph. . . The acting is brilliant throughout. Elisabeth Bergner garners the honors and, despite the striking incongruity of her foreign diction, attains the utmost of whimsy and charm that the role of Rosalind is capable of. Laurence Olivier in the romantic lead seems a little self-conscious. . . The picture's strength lies in Bergner, and her publicity will make it a big bet in the key cities. Possibilities for it in the smaller spots are, however, dubious."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 4 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 S 14 '36

"Class, with little appeal for the masses, the production is creditable throughout. . . As it stands it will not have appeal for anyone who doesn't particularly care for Shakespeare. In the better spots, however, with selling, it may have attraction."

Phila Exhibitor p35 S 15 '36

"Here's Britain's contribution in the Shakespeare derby and a dubious (though lovely) entry. Idea of the producers seems to have been that, with Warners' and Metro's lavish Shakespearean productions on the way it is time to do some of the Bard's pieces in a more simple and direct manner, sans heavy production. Interesting idea, but it doesn't work. Stripped of production lavishness, the play is reduced to a filmization of old-fashioned drama. 'As You Like It,' it happens, is pleasant and has a lot of native charm, but it is beyond the ken and scope of the average theatre-goer in the U. S. . . Elisabeth Bergner, who is starred, is another problem. . . She does not speak English clearly. In her earlier British films ('Catharine the Great,' 'Escape Me Never') her Teutonic accent didn't matter. Here it most decidedly does; it is a nuisance and it jars."

+ Variety p14 N 11 '36

"Miss Bergner's guttural tones come as a shock during the early scenes in contrast to the impeccable English of the others in the cast. However, as the story progresses one becomes so enraptured by her artistry that the discordant note struck by her accent at the start is forgotten. . . Direction of Paul Czinner deserves high commendation although the full range of the camera has not been employed to advantage, the settings being extremely limited in scope and frequently artificial in appearance. . . Although the film is an artistic success, its fate at the box office is dubious."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 24 '36

B

BANJO ON MY KNEE. 20th century-Fox 80min
D 4 '36

Cast: Barbara Stanwyck. Joel McCrea. Walter Brennan. Buddy Ebsen. Helen Westley. Walter Catlett. Katherine De Mille

Director: John Cromwell

Music & lyrics: Jimmy McHugh. Harold Adamson

Music director: Arthur Lange

Based on the novel of the same title by Harry Hamilton, Barbara Stanwyck portrays a girl who marries a headstrong river man who lives aboard a houseboat off the banks of the Mississippi. He escapes after he has wounded a man who violated river customs and kissed his bride. The man recovers. The bride becomes a singer in a New Orleans cafe and the husband almost succumbs to the blandishments of a river girl, but in the end they are re-united.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

"A mixture of drama, comedy and show, with excellent episodes. Walter Brennan stands out in a likeable cast. Family."

+ Wkly Guide D 5 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Excellent entertainment. It started importantly with such stars as Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, and a director of distinction in the person of John Cromwell. It came through as one of the most refreshing pictures of the year, as well as one that is an interesting study from the purely cinematic standpoint. . . The picture's locale is rich in atmosphere. . . In no other picture I have seen in years was the mood sustained so consistently as John Cromwell's understanding direction sustains it. His brilliant handling of the various story elements, his composition of scenes, his blending of story and scenic values make the mood of the production its real continuity. . . The premise of the story is an amusingly odd one which will cause some purists' eyebrows to be elevated in shocked surprise."

+ + Hollywood Spec p8 D 5 '36

"The river folk who populate 'Banjo on My Knee' are such an engaging lot that they keep a scatter-brained narrative gayly spinning up and down the Mississippi. . . It is not the honest study of river-bank riffraff that it might have been, but its characters are persuasively credible, its tunes are lively and it is leavened by amusing lines and antics. John Cromwell has staged the piece smartly, even the preposterous climax that finds the principals storm-tossed in their drifting houseboat, and it is enthusiastically performed. Dramatically 'Banjo on My Knee' is anemic. . . Colorful backgrounds, pungent speech and bright interludes of buffoonery constitute the substance of the work. It is vastly to the credit of the playing and the production that they substitute so enjoyably for the missing structural unity. . . Miss Stanwyck is an appealingly attractive heroine and achieves an excellent characterization. . . Together, the actors have contrived to give the work a rich folk texture. They never step out of the frame of the environment and customs Mr. Johnson has created for them, whether this be authentic or not." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 D 12 '36

"'Banjo on my Knee' is an unimportant little film, rambling in structure and apparently uncertain just where it is heading. Although the main story is drama. . . the manner of telling is musical comedy. The plot stops its wandering occasionally to permit a song, a solo by Walter Brennan or Anthony Martin, a duet by Barbara Stanwyck and Mr. Martin, a chorus by the Hall Johnson Choir. . . None of this makes for serious drama, although it does entertain lightly as it goes along. It has more comedy than most such films, with Walter Brennan responsible for most of the laughs. . . [It] won't win any prizes nor does it make any effort to do so. This is just something [with which] to while away an hour between one Christmas shopping tour and another. The songs are tuneful and pleasantly sung." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p15 D 12 '36

"It impels us to scowl fiercely at the ballyhoo artists who have been telling us that it combines the setting of 'Tobacco Road' with the mood of 'Steamboat 'Round the Bend.' . . It ain't no such thing. There are, we suppose, a few traces of the Harry Hamilton folk novel in Nunnally Johnson's script. . . But [it] leans far more on the side of musical comedy, with biological implications, than it does to an honest tale of the stepsons of Old Man River. . . We found ourselves singularly unmoved by Barbara Stanwyck's tragic demeanor as Pearl and thoroughly irritated by the stupidity of Joel McCrea's Ernie. . . [Some incidents] emerge as definite entertainment factors. Fortunately, they are in attendance constantly enough to keep us from brooding too much upon the inadequacy of the story." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p12 D 12 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

BANJO ON MY KNEE—Continued

"Since [it] is neither forthright folk lore nor forthright travesty but a diffident concoction of the two, it results in a film that has been concocted without much thought or skill, but which nevertheless manages to afford a pretty amusing time. . . The happy beginning lasts about fifteen or twenty minutes, and thereafter, for about ninety minutes more, the author, director and players have to resort to all sorts of wiles to keep the ball bouncing. However, although their efforts are pretty obvious all through the film, many of their tricks prove immensely amusing. . . But for the most part the piece is laborious and awkward beyond belief. . . Miss Stanwyck is not only a pleasing vision as the unhappy bride but is also uncommonly good in the role. Joel McCrea is capital as her husband. . . Tolerable will do for the rest of the cast and will also suffice for a rating of the film." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p7a D 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Twentieth Century-Fox came close to hitting the mark with this saga of the shanty folk along the Mississippi. It has color, romance, comedy, fine music and a brace of 4-star performances, given by Walter Brennan and Joel McCrea."

+ Box Office p21 D 5 '36

"Here is a warm, lovable, human picture that should do excellent business at the box-office. It deserves much exploitation, because once the fans are in they will be highly entertained and will give the picture much word-of-mouth advertising. . . Harry Hamilton's novel is ideal material and has been effectively scenarized by Nunnally Johnson, who also rates special bows as associate producer."

+ Film Daily p17 D 1 '36

"Put 'Banjo on My Knee' down on your list of must play, must play for a longer run and must give heavy exploitation to attract an opening audience, for if you get a big crowd for your first day, the rest of the engagement will take care of itself. . . It's excellent entertainment. . . The hit of the picture is unquestionably Walter Brennan as Newt Holley. . . Brennan takes an exceedingly difficult part, far from being actor-proof, and fashions it into one of the best pieces of acting seen on the screen in some time, and one that will earn him a producer search for material to give him feature billing in the future. . . In playing 'Banjo on My Knee' there may be spots where Stanwyck, McCrea mean little and Walter Brennan is unknown. If yours is one of those locations, forget all about the names and build all your raves on THE SHOW, for you have certainly got one that will give any audience a run for its money."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 28 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 N 30 '36

"'Banjo on My Knee' is a fresh, gusty, living comedy with music which will spellbind average folk and delight cultivated audiences. . . In many respects it is outstanding, and should fare prosperously. . . Miss Stanwyck and McCrea give fine, sincere portrayals. Walter Brennan is the standout in a distinguished, hilarious delivery. Added to his Swan in 'Come and Get It,' this creation of the old shantyboater makes him a top ranker among character comedians, with a style and resourcefulness that will hold any audience every moment he's on the screen."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 28 '36

LE BARBIER DE SEVILLE. Hakim S 22 '36

Cast: André Bauge, Jean Galland, Pierre Juvenet, Hélène Robert, M. Charpin

Director: Louis Masson

This is a combination of two comic operas The Barber of Seville by Gioacchino Rossini and The Marriage of Figaro by Wolfgang Mozart, from the plays of the same title by Pierre

Beaumarchais. A French dialogue film produced in France. "[It] is the melodious, amusing account of the romance of the beautiful Rosine with the handsome and noble Count Almaviva and the setting is Seville in the seventeenth century." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Superb music adds to the attractiveness of the film. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It may as well be said at the outset that unless one understands French much of the meaning is lost. However, the familiar tunes, sung with gusto by Figaro and Almaviva, as well as Rosine's numbers, help to while away the time during the lengthy unwinding of the complicated plot. . . The production [is] kept on the lighter side, in general. Even so, the entertainment is rather heavy-footed." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p23 S 28 '36

"The mistake really was to use both operas. 'Le Barbier de Seville' is nonsensical farce, but gay and rather charming. The music, played as accompaniment for all the action, with only the principal arias sung, is melodious, lovely and pleasantly familiar. . . The last reels, however, deal with the dreary antics of Figaro. . . The story, even accompanied by English dialogue titles and a printed synopsis, makes little sense and less entertainment. The theater might do well to chop off 'Les Noces de Figaro' and retain only the graceful and melodious 'Le Barbier de Seville.'" Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p35 S 23 '36

"The makers of the present importation at the Cinema de Paris certainly have succeeded in giving patrons their money's worth. . . Hélène Robert is a very personable Rosine and her voice is generally full of charm. Jean Galland makes the gallant Count properly dashing and jocular. . . Many of the views are attractive and the playing of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris under the direction of Louis Masson leaves nothing to be desired." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p29 S 23 '36

"If you are an opera lover in search of a bargain and don't mind the screen as a substitute for the Metropolitan Opera House, then the place to visit is the little Cinema de Paris where they are showing Rossini's 'The Barber of Seville' and Mozart's 'The Marriage of Figaro' as one film. . . The settings are lavish, the acting, especially of Helene Robert as Rosine, Andre Bauge as Figaro and Jean Galland as the Count, is superb, and the orchestral playing is beyond reproach." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p18 S 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Advertised as the first attempt to film a complete opera, we unfortunately cannot report it a success. . . The actors are obviously ill at ease. . . The well-known airs are poorly sung, and are employed needlessly and without reason. The direction is poor and lifeless."

— Hollywood Reporter p5 O 10 '36

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937. Paramount 100min O 9 '36

Cast: Jack Benny, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Ray Milland, Frank Forest

Director: Mitchell Leisen

Music & lyrics: Ralph Rainger, Leo Robin

Music director: Boris Morros

"The story concerns the adventures of Shirley Ross who, from a small radio station in the sticks, has been kidding Frank Forest, star singing attraction of the big station. To shut her up they bring her in to town, planning to keep her quiet with promises. But everyone falls for her, including her handsome agent, Ray Milland, Jack Benny, head of the station, and the singing star, and she lands triumphantly in the big time." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The story merely serves to bind together what might otherwise be considered disjointed sequences, but it is well done and the result so entertaining that the interest is held throughout. . . . Each member of the cast gives an excellent performance and the direction and photography are both splendid. All in all, a real laugh-provoking picture. Family-mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Music to suit all tastes, from rumba to symphony, a full supply of good clean comedy, settings that are unusually elaborate and beautiful, dialogue that delights—all these are combined to make it excellent entertainment for all ages. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The result is great entertainment. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family, but mature for children. Excellent." DAR

"Definitely for entertainment and as such very successful. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An opportunity to become acquainted with the public's favorite radio artists is presented in this picture. The only objection is that one may not dial off the portions which do not appeal to the individual taste. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"A lavishly produced, beautifully mounted pot-pourri of rollicking entertainment featuring notable radio stars. It is a medley of beautiful music, both swing and symphonic, highlighted by the magnificent presentation of Leopold Stokowski and his symphony orchestra. . . . Spectacular modernistic settings, unusual lighting effects, particularly the play of light on the famous hands of Leopold Stokowski and the swiftly paced skilful direction of Mitchell Leisen, mark this picture as excellent entertainment for all."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 7 '36

Reviewed by S. M. Mullen

Motion Pict & Family p5 N 15 '36

"The 'Big Broadcast' is lively entertainment, full of laughs, amusing dialogue, songs, dancing and music, ranging in character from jazz to symphonic, with a slight story holding the many acts together rather less laboriously than is usual with this type of production. Adolescents, 12-16; entertaining; children, 8-12; unobjectionable."

+ Motion Pict R p5 N '36

"Highlighted by comedy and entertainment in rare variety, this picture is literally teeming with well known stars, orchestras ranging from swing to symphonic, and specialty numbers without end. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 7 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A, Y & C: entertaining."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p3 N 1 '36

"A fast-moving, highly entertaining musical show, with good music, clever dialogue and plenty of comedy. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Highbrows and low will hear something to their advantage in the 'Big Broadcast,' which has Leopold Stokowski and his symphony orchestra and Benny Goodman and his swing ensemble. Both leaders are superior showmen and their music each superb of its kind. . . . Considering the range of the cast, it might appear that the picture was just a big plum pudding, but it really has an amazing amount of coherence. If there is a general mad undercut, it is due to its locale, a broadcasting station. . . . What we have hitherto lacked in radio pictures is imaginative camera work such as the 'Big Broadcast' has to an amazing degree." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 10 '36

"For those who want to see their favorite radio stars as well as listen to them, nothing affords better entertainment of its kind than Paramount's 'Big Broadcast of 1937.' Jack Benny is one of the best masters of ceremonies and he has plenty of talent to introduce in this mad and merry jamboree." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p40 D '36

"An amiable hodge-podge of music, dancing and comedy. . . . There is even a slight story. Which should be enough to please everybody—well, almost. Family."

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 17 '36

"There is an entertaining atmosphere of gaiety and peppiness flowing from the good music, clever dialogue and abundant light comedy—of its type. The big surprise, however, is the performance of Leopold Stokowski . . . and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, playing a magnificent symphony." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p104 N 20 '36

"The only standard by which it can be judged is that of your personal preference in the way of screen entertainment. I happen to be fortunate enough to possess no definite likes and dislikes in film fare, my only demand being whatever is done be done well enough to keep me entertained. That is something 'The Big Broadcast' failed to do. . . . Burns' brand of comedy has little appeal to me. He has exhausted my interest in his aunts and uncles, and offers me nothing as a substitute for them. His bazooka is as tiresome as his drawl. . . . Stokowski's contribution to the picture is its greatest asset and its supreme artistic achievement."

+ — Hollywood Spec p17 O 10 '36

"In brief, there's something for everyone—well, practically everyone. Jack Benny, our favorite radio comic, has far too little to do as the suave grand mogul of the air. Gracie Allen is her cockeyed self as the big sponsor, and you'll like simple Bob Burns as simple Bob Burns." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p55 N 14 '36

"The jokes were fresh, of course; there were plenty of caustic witticisms for Jack Benny to bite off, like the tip of a cigar; the determined Bob Burns had some excellent folk-lore fun to put across (he did it very well); and Gracie Allen, irresistibly idiotic as ever, was given all that tangled line of nonsense with which—exasperating 'little woman'—she does her inane Indian rope trick. . . . This one raised our hopes by skimming, at first very close to parody. After that, it had several dull moments, a dash of good trick photography, some snappy music, three distinct lines of humour from three very droll comedians, more gaiety than you'd expect from Platt's Golf Balls, and another couple of dull moments, just to keep up the illusion that this really was visible radio."

+ New Statesman & Nation p710 N 7 '36

"A huge pot-pourri of bad gags and good performers. Picture marks the film debut of Johann Sebastian Bach and it must be said he outshines the rest of the cast, although Stokowski . . . tries his best to steal the act. Film estimate: you could do worse."

+ — New Theatre p35 N '36

"Specialty numbers bulk large in 'The Big Broadcast of 1937,' screen musical that has been more imaginatively staged than conceived. It has such sure-fire acts as Benny Goodman's exciting band; Leopold Stokowski guiding a symphony orchestra with eloquent hands and Benny Fields combining showmanship with an engaging voice. In addition to these incidental virtues, there is Gracie Allen at her maddest and most nonsensical. . . . The material is sometimes brashly amusing, sometimes slightly shop-worn, but on the whole it makes for a beguiling show. . . . The most distinctive feature of this musical, from a filmic standpoint, is the adroit direction. . . . On several occasions the shots are pictorially arresting, and they never fail to fit into a pleasant, if overlong pattern."

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937—Continued

Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p18 O 22 '36

"Last night's audience . . . howled at the Arkansas yarns of Bob Burns, the antics of Martha Raye, the smooth jokes of Jack Benny; but in respectful silence it listened to the symphony orchestra of Leopold Stokowski. . . . 'The Big Broadcast of 1937' is bigger, better and funnier than its predecessors. It has some good songs too, thus following the 'Big Broadcast' tradition right along." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p23 O 22 '36

"[It has] a deal of geniality and good humor. An amusing potpourri of words and music, it is energetically played by a cast from the networks and the studios and it has been directed and photographed with considerable artistry by (respectively) Mitchell Leisen and Theodor Sparkuhl. . . . What distinguishes this farrago from a host of other nonsense items equally impoverished of plot is its happy knack of interpolation. . . . Chiefly, though, it is a picture worthy of seeing for its unusual photographic effects. The staging is modern, almost impressionistic, and Mr. Leisen and his cameramen have created a number of interesting studies in black and white." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p31 O 22 '36

"They have put together quite a palatable entertainment in 'The Big Broadcast of 1937,' and any one in search of a handsome, jovial, frisky song-and-dance festival will be more than well repaid by visiting [it]. The film is not only a gorgeous spectacle but also one of the funniest musical revues that has come along in months. . . . [It is played] in a fast, noisy and crack-brained manner by a cast that is skilled in such playing. The musical numbers are tuneful enough and done well enough to make the whole melange something to be enjoyed thoroughly." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p21 O 22 '36

"Our astute little Gracie Allen, who ought to be in Congress, provides what humor can be found in 'The Big Broadcast of 1937.' For some mysterious reason, the studio chose to make a thoroughly commonplace and routine musical show of this film, and right in the middle of it slap down Leopold Stokowski and a symphony orchestra, and a finely recorded rendering of Bach's Fugue in G-Minor." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p77 O 31 '36

"[It] brings together so many movie and radio favorites that the thinness of the story woven through their antics is understandable. Less comprehensible is the dismal material handed such talented comedians as Burns and Allen, Jack Benny, and Bob (Bazooka) Burns."

+ — News-Wk p29 O 17 '36

"A radio station has all the 'glamour' advantages of back-stage stuff plus a better excuse for introducing songs, band music and patter. Five authors built this story and darned if the story isn't good, and what's more important, it holds up to the very end. . . . [The] screening of Stokowski and his symphony orchestra is not only a musical but a pictorial triumph. The lighting of individual player-units as Stokowski swept from one group to another is a musical education in symphonic direction. The press preview bunch cheered!" Rob Wagner

+ Script p10 O 17 '36

"From the radio, from the night clubs, from the symphonic stage, and out of their own backyard, [Paramount] collected their entertainers, and the world's most generous broadcast is on. Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Bob Burns and Martha Raye indulge in some first class nonsense. . . . The narrative is definitely third-rate. Maybe you don't care for a hodge-podge of individual acts, but we found it consistently entertaining. Jack Benny gives old gags new life, and Gracie Allen could make brimstone tasty."

+ Stage p12 D '36

"It is considerably poorer stuff than the two previous 'Big Broadcasts.' . . . Musically, the picture becomes most ambitious when Benny Goodman's band fades away before Bach's Eine feste Burg and Fugue in G-Minor played by an orchestra conducted by none other than Leopold Stokowski, making his cinematic debut in a way which may chill classicists."

— + Time p67 O 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It's just as big as its title—big in names; in the production mounting Lewis Gensler has given it; in the musical direction of Boris Morros and the music of Rainger and Robin; in the bumper load of laughs and simon-pure entertainment it carries; in its exploitation possibilities; and, above all, it will be big box office. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 10 '36

"This is loaded with entertainment and should do nicely at the box office. It is rich in comedy, and Jack Benny, Gracie Allen, Martha Raye and Bob Burns are among the funmakers who pile up the laughs. It has the swing music of Benny Goodman and his orchestra and the classic music of Leopold Stokowski and his Philadelphia Symphony orchestra. The Stokowski sequence is handled with rare skill and is highly effective."

+ Film Daily p12 O 6 '36

"This is a whale of a show, packed solidly with top entertainers and top entertainment from end to end. With about everything that a light musical should or can have, it is a box office bonanza and is likely to do some fancy record-breaking everywhere. . . . For looks, smartness and verve, with a lavish display of talent in all departments, a bouquet should go to producer Lewis E. Gensler."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 2 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 O 9 '36

"Some good songs, plenty of comedy. With the other 'Broadcasts' in the big money, this will hold up the tradition."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 O 15 '36

"'Big Broadcast of 1937' is one of the big pictures of 1937. Both in general entertainment appeal and in box office potentialities, it is tune-film property that hits the bull's-eye. . . . [It] far outdistances the two that preceded it in both ambition and results. Lewis E. Gensler . . . obtained 100 minutes' swell diversion. There is enough good talent in 'Broadcast' to have made two pictures and enough gag-writing reserve in the scenarists to have made both enjoyable."

+ Variety p14 O 28 '36

"Entertainment is the word for 'The Big Broadcast of 1937.' Laden with laughs, swell music, lively tunes and rollicking dialog, the picture is a riot of fun. From opening scene it moves at a grand pace and is throughout real box office. Never taking itself seriously, the film has a genuine flippancy that is always amusing. While not a travesty, the story treats behind-the-microphone activities of a big broadcasting station in a kidding style. . . . While hazarding a guess that none of the Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin tunes will hit the topnotch whistling class, they nevertheless are slated for some popularity."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 2 '36

BIG GAME. RKO 72min O 16 '36

Cast: Philip Huston, James Gleason, June Travis, Bruce Cabot

Director: George Nicholls, Jr.

Based on a novel Odds Against Honor by Francis Wallace. "The screenplay treats of the antics of Huston, the ex-coal-heaver, who is supporting a large family and himself on the proceeds of his collegiate football playing. Huston, in love with June Travis, daughter of a sports writer, is vilified by the latter in an article charging him with betraying his school to a ring of gamblers." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It is the Hollywood conscience which speaks out this season against the ugly taint of commercialism in college football and gives us, as an interesting by-product, a close-up view of last year's All-American team in action. . . . However, grateful as one may be for this nice regard for ethical considerations, it is to the scenes demonstrating how football is played rather than how it is paid for that the entertainment seeker must go. Skillful direction has invested the film with more than a dash of undergraduate enthusiasm and atmosphere." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p96 O 31 '36

"A: good of kind; Y and C: doubtful."

Christian Century p1478 N 4 '36

"Thrilling football scenes, played by the All-American team of 1935, highlight this timely drama of the gridiron. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults & 8-18: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Mature-family." DAR

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Altogether a constructive production certain to attract and please the public. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"The perennial question of professionalism in college football has not been answered by this picture, which merely repeats the hackneyed story. The story is trite. . . . It is unfortunate that football stories which might otherwise be good family entertainment are so often made unsuitable by the introduction of such objectionable elements as racketeers and gambling. 12-16: ethically poor; 8-12: poor." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul O 10 '36

"It is a cynical thrust at the possible attendant rackets which include gambling, bought players, and million dollar set-ups, casting reflection upon the ethics of football as played today. Family-mature."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 28 '36

Reviewed by S. M. Mullen

Motion Pict & Family p2 N 15 '36

"Good. Family-mature."

+ Motion Pict Guide D '36

"Wisely timed to herald the advent of the new football season, this film will find a vast audience of enthusiastic 'fans.' Interest is well sustained throughout in a fairly well developed story. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A, Y & C: timely and good."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Family-mature."

Sel Motion Pict p6 N 1 '36

"Though there is the usual last minute victory for the hero this is a cleverly contrived football story, with interesting twists to the plot, a certain significance beyond the mere game in the Big Business elements, and a more convincing use than usual of real football stars. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There are plenty of well-photographed football shots. Family."

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 17 '36

"While this one by no means is a football picture to put an end to football pictures for this season, it is entertaining. . . . Instead of being content to capitalize, in box-office terms, the country's conception of football as a clean sport, it presents it in a light that will be resented. When we estimate the values of 'The Big Game' in cinematic terms, we are forced to give it poor rating."

Hollywood Spec p19 O 10 '36

"One of the first of a host of autumn pigskin epics—and presenting a curiously hard-boiled slant upon the great American collegiate sport. . . . In the background the makers of 'The Big Game' offer you eight celebrated gridiron stars. . . . Here you have intimate glimpses of fearless football figures pretty badly scared by camera and mike." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 N 28 '36

"Unfortunately, such a gory plot rears its ugly head into the picture that much of the fun in watching the game is lost, and certainly the logic of the story is hard to follow. . . . The picture is just another pretty good football yarn." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 O 24 '36

"An indeterminate film, the beginning of which might easily be mistaken by late-comers for a seasonal newsreel, 'The Big Game' is neither a successful exposé of the college football racket (which it shows timid signs of trying to be) nor a good conventional campus romance, of which it carefully preserves all the ingredients. . . . [It] has about it an air of such grim unreality that even the crescendo voice of MacNamee or a raccoon coat in the neighboring seat would not make it look convincing." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p23 O 24 '36

"Football fans should fall heavily for 'The Big Game,' which is a slick combination of comedy and melodrama when it isn't working itself up into a lather over the well-established fact that football is a big business. However, if you can forget the message that it tries to tell and take the film for what it is—a pleasant, gay, swift little romantic melodrama—you will have a sufficiently good time at it. . . . [It] is an agreeably diversified little film which succeeds by comedy of low and high design and some electric turns of plot, in filling a film hour well worth seeing." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p9a O 24 '36

"A good comedy contingent, ably headed by James Gleason and Andy Devine, establishes this picture a cut above the usual football crop. Eight All-Americans don the buskin with their moleskins as an added—though strictly non-esthetic—attraction."

+ News-Wk p29 O 17 '36

"Football heroes, according to RKO . . . are no longer stalwart descendants of sport-loving American males. They are coal miners, foresters, iron workers, lured by gold into the sanctums of the nation's colleges. . . . The cast, like a lot of coaches, must face the situation and like it. It's a little too much to ask of us, though. A sappy campus romance is bolstered by some mighty fine football passages, played by last year's All Americans. But the best football story is still being told on the gridiron."

+ Stage p14 N '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

BIG GAME—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"The expose of the bigtime football racket should mean plenty at the ticket window. Aside from the appearances of the eight all-American gridgers, the story is well played. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 10 '36

"With a lot of good gridiron stuff, some of which is spectacular, and a load of laughs, this football picture should play to nice business. Eight well-known 'All-Americans' are neatly worked into the proceedings and should help at the box-office. Although the story is built on conventional lines, it is handled in a very suspenseful, fast moving, exciting manner which never allows one's interest to wane."

+ Film Daily p10 S 29 '36

"Box office because it is a hilarious football comedy hitting the theaters at the height of the gridiron season, Radio's 'The Big Game' will score well in most spots and will stand out when added exploitation is given the all-Americans in the cast."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 25 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 S 26 '36

"Football picture made for the football season, this is short on the name side but with entertainment as well as football names to help. Estimate: depends on exploitation."

Phila Exhibitor p36 O 15 '36

"Another expose on college football—though its sting is mitigated by a lot of folderol—'The Big Game' is both timely and okay entertainment for the not so particular gridiron addicts. It should give an excellent account of itself at the box offices from now till the Rose Bowl game, New Year's Day, when the football fever subsides. Added advantage is that it beats the gun on the seasonal grid releases."

+ — Variety p14 O 28 '36

"First on the field with a football picture built to 1936 specifications, Radio has turned out in 'The Big Game' a picture which doesn't do so well under careful story and technical scrutiny but which is sure to drag the money into the box office. The picture has all the hokum that could be plugged into one story. It has the same old theme. But with all this, it still carries punch and has a certain amount of suspense in quite a few sections."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 25 '36

BIG SHOW. Republic 70min N 16 '36

Cast: Smiley Burnette. Gene Autry. Kay Hughes. Sally Payne. William Newell

Director: Mack V. Wright

A western musical melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

"A Western with an unusual plot, which unfortunately sags in spots, plenty of music and singing, some enjoyable humor and interesting scenes of the Texas Centennial. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p8 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This musical Western contains some of the most exciting stunt work plus the singing voice of Gene Autry. Had it been allowed to stand on these two points it would have been more enjoyable. Unfortunately it is spoiled by badly chosen comedy, merely added to the picture for laughs. Comedy should be used only when it carries the story along and becomes a part of the story. . . Autry has a very pleasing and entertaining singing voice. If he would only let himself go a bit more and be a bit more natural, he would be a better actor." John Christensen

+ — Hollywood Spec p11 D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 N 10 '36

"Here is a production that will not only please western fans but which should get playing time in the middle of the week. It is not a true Western but an action drama with western atmosphere. Filmed for the most part at the Texas Centennial, it is the best Autry yet."

+ Phila Exhibitor p52 N 15 '36

"Gene Autry fans will be more than pleased with 'The Big Show.' A musical Western that swings along in high gear, picture should rate aces with followers of the singing cowboy and spots at which this type is pointed. Exhibitors with Autry clientele will especially welcome this."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 20 '36

BOLD CABALLERO. Republic 72min D 1 '36

Cast: Robert Livingston. Heather Angel. Sig Rumann

Director: Wells Root

A western melodrama filmed in color.

Trade Paper Reviews

"There is a quality to the production which somehow restrains it from reaching its potential heights. To begin with, the dialogue has a brittle, insincere ring; the settings have an unnatural atmosphere about them, and the acting gives the impression of being much less in the Hollywood manner than in the style of the legitimate stage. Root's handling of his own scenario leaves one with the feeling that either the script is at fault or his direction is. But despite obvious flaws, this feature is entertaining for the most part, and rises to exciting heights in late sequences. Audiences who like their diversion studded with beauty and action, may overlook the staccato speeches of the players and melodramatic nuances. Principals and supporting players have little opportunity to impress, because of the hurried and harried tenor of the episodes."

— + Film Daily p6 D 3 '36

"Strictly in the Western category despite the use of color photography and an attempt to give it class by a historical background, 'The Bold Caballero' can be expected only to occupy the nether spots on dual bills. As an unpretentious action picture its box office potentialities cannot be augmented by the color. It seems evident that good color pictures cannot be made on short budgets."

— Hollywood Reporter p4 N 23 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p20 N 24 '36

"Filmed in Magnacolor, a process that eliminates one of the fundamental shades, the picture is a two-tone color production pictorially beautiful in the long shots but a hodge-podge in cutting in medium shots and close-ups. Color tones do not match from scene to scene. . . Several of the major characters speak with a decided Mayfair accent, although the story is laid in the west in the early days of the dons. . . Exhibitors may be able to sell this on the color angle, but there will be no word-of-mouth follow-ups to buy tickets."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 23 '36

BORN TO DANCE. MGM 105min N 27 '36

Cast: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart, Virginia Bruce, Una Merkel, Frances Langford, Buddy Ebsen, Alan Dinehart, Sid Silvers

Director: Roy Del Ruth

Dance director: David Gould

Music: Cole Porter

Music director: Alfred Newman

A musical comedy with spectacular production numbers woven around the nimble feet of the dancing star, Eleanor Powell.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Eleanor Powell's individual tapping technique is the most creditable feature of a continuously amusing film. . . The lovely singing of Frances Langford is the gracious panache on a picture combining all the elements of good family entertainment." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p240 D 12 '36

"A & Y: excellent; C: good."

Christian Century p1670 D 9 '36

"The large cast, each an artist in his particular field give excellent and versatile performances. The skill of the director is amply demonstrated in this highly polished production. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 24 '36

"With never a dull moment this lavishly produced musical comedy provides hilarious entertainment. A large and well chosen cast are cleverly directed. The tap dancing of Eleanor Powell is exceptionally fine. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 25 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 3 '36

"A song-and-dance show, with songs by Cole Porter, done in handsome style. The plot . . is not too original, but it is handled with a good deal of novelty. Family. Outstanding."

++ Wkly Guide N 28 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Metro comes to the front once more with a song and dance production which will please the world. . . 'Born to Dance' is a parade of superlatively entertaining numbers, and as a review of it can be but a parade of differently worded superlatives, you can take my word for it now and skip to the next review. . . The preview audience which jammed Grauman's Chinese was generous with its applause throughout the entire showing. . . In distributing credit for the perfections of 'Born to Dance' an extremely large helping must be placed on Roy Del Ruth's plate. A production of the sort, one composed of so many individual elements without interdependence, so easily could become jerky as a whole. Del Ruth skillfully smooths it out, keeps the story in sight, makes his cast feel at ease and give excellent performances."

++ Hollywood Spec p9 N 21 '36

"The nimble and attractive Eleanor Powell is far better as a dancer than as an actress in 'Born to Dance.' . . She executes a variety of fluent and exciting rhythms, amply justifying her designation as first tap dancer of her sex, but a permanently fixed smile and a lack of artfulness make her handling of the narrative less than beguiling. The story is a rambling one, mixing bright and dull interludes. It is best when the clever James Stewart, Sid Silvers and Buddy Ebsen are engaged in the proceedings. The Cole Porter songs are disappointing, but they are set off in handsome and striking production numbers. . . The tunes are satisfactory enough for Miss Powell's glib dancing, but they are not up to his usual high standard, and the words include the rather offensive ditty, 'I've Got You Under My Skin,' which is sung by Virginia Bruce in a definitely embarrassing scene. . . [It] might have been a good deal better." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 D 5 '36

"Eleanor Powell taps her way to official, and deserved, stardom in one of those great glittering musicals the screen handles so well. . . [It is] Miss Powell's second picture, and a tuneful amusing affair it is too. . . The finale, like the big ensemble number in 'The Great Ziegfeld,' is something to see. . . 'Born to Dance' is good fun, filled with excellent Cole Porter songs and original as well as expensive dance scenes. Roy Del Ruth, the director, has kept the picture going at top pace from opening scene to that last spectacular flourish." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p13 D 5 '36

"If, in this necessarily fragmentary discussion of 'Born to Dance,' some feature is overlooked, some item of comedy or mimicry unmentioned, it will not be because of a lack of enthusiasm. It will be because the producers have crammed the film so full of pleasantries and gaiety, as a setting for Eleanor Powell's exquisitely tapped-out rhythms, that it leaves one ga-ga for a time. This condition is perhaps mainly due to Roy Del Ruth's sizzling direction. . . No fewer than seven Cole Porter compositions, most of them destined to a good measure of the ephemeral fame of modern song hits, punctuate the proceedings. . . The closing production number is one of those magnificent Hollywood things, with the forward portion of a battleship, complete from crow's nest to hawse holes, for the setting. But somehow you will forgive this exultation of the cinema set designer in his unlimited field of vision when you see the pertly stepping Eleanor Powell lead the band." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p16 D 5 '36

"Slick songs, nimble dancing, some cheerfully funny, fast and foot-loose satire and expert comedy playing make 'Born to Dance' an extravagant and gay musical that ranks high among the song and dance entertainments of the cinema year. . . The music, although it may go hungry now and then, for some seductive lilt, represents Cole Porter in one of his merriest, if not his most tuneful, moods. . . A standard musical comedy plot, cut on ready-made lines, to be sure, but the players manage to extract big, bulging parcels of fun from it and to keep it moving at a fast and furious pace. Especially Raymond Walburn, who gives a tremendously droll burlesque of a chuckle-headed naval officer, and Reginald Gardner, whose satire of an orchestra leader will have you rolling in the aisles." William Boehnel

++ N Y World-Telegram p7a D 5 '36

"Jack Cummings has been in producer-training at M-G-M for several years. And this, I understand, is his graduation thesis. If so, he has landed up among the face cards with his first big production. For 'Born to Dance' is entitled to all the superlatives, including 'terrific' and 'colossal.' . . We are inclined to cheer the performers when a show bowls us over, but after the opening chorus aboard a submarine I suddenly realized that Cole Porter could give the old team of Gilbert and Sullivan a grand battle." Rob Wagner

++ Script p10 N 28 '36

"Put out for the holiday trade, this big, glittering musical has the air of a department store Christmas tree, wreathed with looping streamers of Cole Porter music and twinkling patches of young dancing. . . With Una Merkel and Sid Silvers clowning through the Cole Porter words and Eleanor Powell tapping out her specialized magic, the whole cast suddenly gives out the feeling that comes to a show when all hands are tops in their lines and happy with what they are doing. Plot is forgotten, the Christmas tree is spangled with dialog as amiably frivolous as artificial snow and lighted up with rows of handsome specialties."

+ Time p23 D 7 '36

BORN TO DANCE—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"Peg this one high among the dance-musical hits of this or any other season. It has everything—lavish and impressive production mounting; that touch of directorial finesse of which Roy Del Ruth is the past master; a sizeable load of laughs of the abdominal variety; a cast, every member of which knows just what to do with made-to-order parts; song hits aplenty; and, above all, those gifted feet of Eleanor Powell. Family."

+ Box Office p23 N 28 '36

"This is one of the singiest, danciest mammoth musicals ever made. And it sure is one grand show. As produced by Jack Cummings, and directed by Roy Del Ruth, it is a big production that should be a box-office wow. Everybody sings and everybody dances, but the topper of them all is Eleanor Powell. Her dances are many and some of the routines are nothing short of sensational."

+ Film Daily p9 N 17 '36

"MGM's 'Born to Dance' has one of the best openings and greatest finishes yet seen in one of those big, lavish and entertaining productions. The opening demands attention that holds for the full length of the picture, setting a pace that would seem impossible to follow, while the finish will send an audience out yelling its praises. It's a big show. . . It is a generous order of breezy and tuneful entertainment and will give general satisfaction and register solidly at the box office. . . Eleanor Powell's dancing seems more magical each time one sees and hears it."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 14 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 N 16 '36

"In the best Metro fashion, 'Born to Dance' is the type show which has all angles to make it a top grosser. Backed by names, good songs, swell music, comedy, spectacle, etc., Miss Powell turns in an ace performance that will help her growing popularity. . . Looking at 'Born to Dance' from all angles, it can't miss."

+ Phila Exhibitor p30 D 1 '36

"'Born to Dance' is corking entertainment, more nearly approaching the revue type than most musical films, despite the presence of a 'book.' It is out of the ordinary both in that respect and because of its exceptional production merit. And it's box office. Cast is youthful, sight stuff is lavish, the specialties are meritorious, and as for songs, the picture is positively filthy with them. . . Eleanor Powell through 'Born to Dance' becomes a star in her second picture, which may or may not be a premature move by the studio. But the improvement in Miss Powell's work in this one as over her first film is great enough to warrant a big stretch in the billing. . . She looks better this time and she is given an opportunity to show that she's not just a good buck dancer, but an exceptionally versatile girl. As an actress she still has not arrived, as indicated in the few occasions when this plot calls for acting. . . Cole Porter's songs receive flattering treatment."

+ Variety p12 D 9 '36

"Metro gave this one the works, and it looks it—a smart, heads-up, lavish production which has a load of sure fire entertainment, well diversified about the standout dance talent of Eleanor Powell, and headed for smash returns. . . The names bracketed with Miss Powell are not showman's sinecures, but 'Born to Dance' is the kind of offering that gets noised about, quickly gathers momentum and is a natural for ballyhoo flash. And by virtue of her demonstration in this picture Eleanor Powell will be established among the cinch draws. . . The Cole Porter music and lyrics will delight the common run of tune devotees as well as the more cultivated, and two or three will certainly reach the popular hit level."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 14 '36

BOSS RIDER OF GUN CREEK. Universal
63min N 1 '36

Cast: Buck Jones. Muriel Evans. Harvey Clark

Director: Leslie Selander

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 6 '36

"A, Y & C: interesting Buck Jones melodrama."

Parents' M p42 O '36

"Homely and sincere acting lift a poorly written story into the field of fair entertainment. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Ag 1 '36

"[It] is an interesting melodrama, well done. Family."

+ Wkly Guide J1 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Although there is no pretension to greatness in any aspect of the picture, yet it is up to standard."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p53 N 15 '36

BRILLIANT MARRIAGE. Invincible 65min
Mr 25 '36

Cast: Joan Marsh. Ray Walker. Doris Lloyd. John Marlowe

Director: Phil Rosen

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Trade Paper Reviews

"A pleasingly romantic type of story, judiciously cast with several Hollywood dependables and directed by Phil Rosen with smoothness and distinction, this Ursula Parrott yarn will prove excellent program fare. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 10 '36

"[It is a] light romantic yarn in popular vein for the not too finicky neighborhood trade."

+ — Film Daily p3 S 19 '36

— Motion Pict Daily p8 O 29 '36

"The results are pretty sterile. . . The soggy quickie flavor of the production stacks it in the nether filler class. Pacing is such as to make it a hard strain on the attention, while the dialog, with but few occasional passages, does little to relieve the trite and dull course of the plot. The acting is about on the same level with the rest of the film's ingredients."

— Variety p16 S 23 '36

BULLDOG EDITION. Republic 58min S 20 '36

Cast: Ray Walker. Evalyn Knapp. Regis Toomey. Cy Kendall

Director: Charles Lamont

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y: better not; C: no."
Christian Century p1639 D 2 '36

"Mediocre. Mature." DAR

+ — Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"Though fairly well cast and directed, [it] lacks distinction."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 23 '36

"While the swift change of events holds interest as in most of these films, it is improbable melodrama, a second-rate picture. Adolescents, 12-16 & children, 8-12: no."

— + Motion Pict R p3 N '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 8 '36

"A: fair; Y & C: unsuitable."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"The calibre of the acting and direction is good. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict p8 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Director Charles Lamont draws [the plot threads] into a rather tight, though not outstanding, little melodrama by means of thrills—some of them lurid—and good acting. Adults."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 O 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A workmanlike blending of action and hokum on the framework of a sparse story that should interest the average audience. Family."

+ — Box Office p63 S 19 '36

"Program entertainment with newspaper-gangland theme that moves to exciting but familiar climax."

+ — Film Daily p4 S 18 '36

"Estimate: program, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p35 S 15 '36

"It will prove exciting entertainment for many double bills. Despite at least three natural bits of strong acting and some neat megging, film does not possess enough marquee strength to attract on its own."

+ — Variety p54 O 14 '36

C

CAIN AND MABEL. Warner 90min S 26 '36

Cast: Marion Davies, Clark Gable, Roscoe Karns, Allen Jenkins, David Carlyle, Walter Catlett

Director: Lloyd Bacon

Dance director: Bobby Connolly

Music & lyrics: Harry Warren, Al Dubin

Music director: Leo F. Forbstein

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Some of the more amusing crimes committed in the name of publicity are herein exposed to the lively accompaniment of songs, dances and snappy patter. . . One must speak guardedly of the acting in this opera. Perhaps it will suffice to say that there are dances by Miss Davies and some alleged fighting by Mr. Gable. The picture will please the whole family, being excellent as a type of thoughtless magnificence well supplied with laughs." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p600 S 26 '36

"A: perhaps; Y: amusing; C: little interest."

Christian Century p1438 O 28 '36

"Mature & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

— + Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"Mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The settings, music and costuming are very beautiful and the story is wholesome and enjoyable. Several lovely dancing scenes add interest. Family. Of little interest to children." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Lavishly produced with gay musical numbers and several hilarious sequences, this picture has life, beauty and atmosphere; but it has enough material for two. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"'Cain and Mabel' is just an ordinary musical comedy, with a hackneyed theme; one anticipates the action far ahead of its portrayal, so dull is the story. . . Miss Davies is not suitably cast as a singer and dancer; she lacks both talents. . . No objectionable drinking. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"The director has exercised imagination and ingenuity in his handling of the production but the result is only mildly entertaining. Adults & young people."

— + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 2 '36

"Fair. Family-mature."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"Crisp, witty dialogue, beautiful costumes and some catchy music give the picture a high entertainment value. Some trite devices are used, but much may be forgiven a picture so colorful and sparkling. Adolescents, 12-16: entertaining; children, 8-12: no interest."

+ — Motion Pict R p4 S '36

"Like the pretentious living room of the nouveau riche, this overstuffed, overdressed musical comedy in which no expense has been spared, gives Marion Davies a most gorgeous setting for her many antics. Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"A and Y: good; C: no interest."

Parents' M p42 N '36

"Only mildly entertaining. Adults & young people."

— + Sel Motion Pict p5 D 1 '36

"[It is] a swell wise-cracking spectacular song and dance show. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide O 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 10 '36

"It isn't often that one of Hollywood's opulent musical shows has so little to recommend it as 'Cain and Mabel.' In it Marion Davies and Clark Gable team up in a listless romance, tricked out with some ridiculously ornate production numbers, trivial songs and the kind of talk that baffles even resourceful character actors. Miss Davies never performed more woodenly, while Mr. Gable flounders about vigorously, trying his best to make the proceedings entertaining." Howard Barnes

— — N Y Herald Tribune p12 O 19 '36

"The current season, which had gotten thus far without any really bad pictures, yesterday hit a new low for this autumn. 'Cain and Mabel' may well be one of the most expensive on view. It is certainly the dullest. The very elaborateness of production only emphasized the paucity of imagination, the inadequacy of the star, and the general lifelessness of what might have been an amusing comedy. . . The picture's chief misfortune is its concentration upon Marion Davies, who still photographs like a young girl, but who has not yet learned how to read lines. She permits the comedy to fall completely flat, and not even Clark Gable, as the angry pugilist, is able to help her." Eileen Creelman

— — N Y Sun p18 O 19 '36

"In order that the aureate charms of Miss Marion Davies may not want for suitable settings in so gusty a flippancy as the late H. C. Witwer's 'Cain and Mabel,' Cosmopolitan has loosed the fitful dreamings of Bobby Connolly into the tale. The result is a colossus of incongruity, rather like staging a prizefight

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CAIN AND MABEL—Continued
in the Taj Mahal. . . Miss Davies's comedy scenes are, traditionally, her best, despite the studio's notion to the contrary. Mr. Gable's roles are becoming routine matters. He needs another 'Mutiny on the Bounty.' J. T. M.
N Y Times p22 O 19 '36

"Marion Davies and Clark Gable have no difficulty in performing the flimsy antics arranged for them in 'Cain and Mabel.' Both of them, as you know, are gifted and persuasive players, capable, when the opportunity is afforded them, of acting in the first rank. That opportunity, however, is denied them in [the film] and they must be content, as its principal players, to give placid exhibitions of themselves in a film that is considerably below par." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p13 O 19 '36

"[The] bright little title gives you an idea of the general run of the wit of the piece. . . Warner Brothers have got their feather fans out again. All business-like, but without surprises." John Mosher
New Yorker p79 O 24 '36

"The studio's cycle of musical spectacles, begun with the successful '42nd Street,' reaches a new low."
— News-Wk p25 O 31 '36

"In this piece [Marion Davies] seemed utterly listless and when it came to the gorgeous pageant she looked as though she were simply posing for a lot of swell stills. . . Nor could she stir Clark Gable. He was at his best in the fight sequences with Marion twenty miles away. The truth is, both principals had to be backed up by a fine bunch of sure-fire troupers. . . As far as this critic is concerned, they saved the show." Rob Wagner
— + Script p10 N 7 '36

"[It is] a double-feature program that follows two determined people on their climb to fame and fortune. The first climax comes when Miss O'Dare, now a musical comedy star, floats forward on a sort of Max Reinhardt setting of clouds and pipe organs to a bombastic musical rendering of 'Who.' Then she floats back off again through a collection of props from 'A Midsummer Night's Dream', 'The Great Ziegfeld,' and 'All Quiet on the Western Front.' . . These two glorious people go off to a little rose-covered cottage-garage in Jersey, and that's the end. It's the end of some very fine feelings about Mr. Gable and Miss Davies and musical comedy, too. You see it at your own risk."
Stage p24 O '36

Time p70 O 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Like the fistic champ that Clark Gable portrays in it, this Cosmopolitan feature matches punches with the very top-flight current films. Not only does Miss Davies give a vibrant and exquisite performance—certainly her best in recent years—but the surrounding cast is flawless, production lavish and the swiftly paced screenplay copiously packs romance, tuneful melody, pathos and humor, providing audiences with 90 minutes of glittering entertainment."
+ Film Daily p7 O 19 '36

"Lack of story substance between numbers makes 'Cain and Mabel' an elongated screen flash act, with its merit confined to production. Cast and script drag it down to mediocre level as entertainment, which leaves everything up to Clark Gable to supply the business. It will do moderately. Marion Davies, as an ingenue star of musical shows, and Clark Gable, as a prize fighter, are woefully miscast. Gable being out of place is an additional burden on a feeble plot, and Miss Davies' shortcomings in the song and dance line make it difficult for the production numbers."
— + Variety p15 O 21 '36

CALIFORNIA MAIL. Warner 56min N 14 '36

Cast: Dick Foran. Linda Perry. Ed Cobb

Director: Noel Smith

"Presenting the period in our country's history, at the time of the transition in the method of transporting the mail from the Pony Express to the stage coach lines, this picture sets forth the plots and counter plots which enmesh the hero, who discovers that not only are the redmen his enemies, but the white man also." Fox W Coast Bul

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good cast, much suspense and plenty of action. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"This [is a] rather exciting story which, although not new, is highlighted with good riding, delightful outdoor settings and the well trained Smokey, a beautiful and intelligent horse. Family. Exciting for children." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Superb horsemanship, a delightful romance and the pleasing voice of Dick Foran, 'the singing cowboy,' all contribute to the entertainment value. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Dick Foran's 'natural' performance is wasted in an unconvincing Western melodrama. Mature & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

"A good Western of the Pony Express days. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"There is a great deal of rough riding, shooting and unpleasant scenes of suggested cruelty on the part of a beautiful horse. Adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 7 '36

"Combined with fine outdoor scenes and spirited action, one finds the naive conversations and overdone melodrama which were prevalent in earlier pictures of this type. . . The picture is marred for children by the use of a splendid horse in the cruel destruction of his master's enemies. Adolescents, 12-16: debatable; children, 8-12: no."
Motion Pict R p5 N '36

"This typically old time 'Western' thriller should prove very entertaining for youngsters. . . The direction is satisfactory, the story is hackneyed and obvious. Family & junior matinees."
+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women O 7 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 26 '36

"A & Y: good Western; C: doubtful because of suggested cruelty by the horse."
Parents' M p38 Ja '37

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict p7 N 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Another drama of the West during the period when stage-coaches replaced pony-express riders, this offers little new for followers of this type of drama. Estimate: routine."
— + Phila Exhibitor p34 D 1 '36

CAN THIS BE DIXIE? 20th century-Fox 66min N 13 '36

Cast: Jane Withers. George (Slim) Summer-ville. Helen Wood. Thomas Beck. Sara Haden

Director: George Marshall

A musical which satirizes the Old South with its traditional southern colonel, and his poverty, his pride and his hankering for mint juleps.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The plot is rather trite, but that is forgotten in the enjoyment of the singing and dancing. Jane Withers is cute. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Some well photographed settings and amusing sequences add interest, but on the whole it is only fair entertainment. Adults & 8-18: fair." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This story, evidently meant as a satire on the Southern Colonels and mint juleps, is unworthy of the fine cast. . . The picture has little entertainment value. Disappointing! Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Can it, indeed? . . . Old stuff, inexpertly farcical, which should offend only Southerner. Mature & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

"Although its continuity is poor and its action ridiculously overdrawn, [it] has nevertheless much that is entertaining for an average audience. Ducky singing and dancing is particularly good and Jane Withers, for a part of the film at least, displays a mood quieter than usual, which is very attractive. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Burlesquing Southern tradition in a rather inconsequential story with a notably good cast, the picture is filled with foolish banter, which will amuse young people. No objectionable features. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"Primarily a vehicle for the little star, this farcical picture is tedious and tiresome due to poor production values. Family."

— Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 10 '36

"This musical farce has a bit of everything in it which for all time has been used in every old-fashioned drama. The story is loosely knit, the direction is uneven, the dialogue is trite and the entire production is a hodge-podge of improbabilities. Only for juvenile audiences."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women N 11 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p6 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[There are] thoroughly charming introductory scenes in this fable . . . which are not quite lived up to by the remainder of the film. But Jane Withers is in top form, and the jamboree of songs and dances with plenty of incidental plot is pleasant enough entertainment."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p19 D 5 '36

"This one will serve only to make its companion on a dual bill feel ashamed of the company it is keeping. Producers of these class B pictures protest to me that in estimating their values I should take into account their small budgets and short shooting schedules. . . This one has all the earmarks of a 'head office' crime. . . But will someone tell me why it costs more and takes longer to produce an ordinary intelligent picture than it does to make one that will not appeal even to the intelligence of a moron?"

— — Hollywood Spec p15 N 21 '36

"Satire is a delicate thing to screen, chiefly because producers, after liking an idea, become frightened prior to production. Deciding to hoke up, their darts for box office lure, the 'makings' of a vitriolic pasquinade become just so much drivel about nothing in particular. . . Outside of a musical number that features a group of heart-warming pickanninies and three colored dancers in the café sequence, it's a mighty dreary exhibit. . . [It's] the type of movie that makes audiences talk back at the screen before the final fade-out—that is, if they stay awake that long." Herb Sterne

— Script p11 N 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"If this be Dixie, make the most of it. And by getting behind 20th Century-Fox's latest Jane Withers vehicle, exhibitors can cash in on its many exploitation possibilities. Riotous, ribald burlesque, it pokes fun at the old southern customs, caricaturing everything from the financially embarrassed Dixieland colonel to the villainous, carpet-bagging banker; it takes nothing seriously, and there's a hilariously melodramatic climax every 15 minutes. Family."

+ Box Office p51 N 14 '36

"Versatile little Jane Withers is the bright star of this satirical musical comedy whose stimulating sequences are generously spiked with swift stepping, sparkling singing and good, clean fun. . . Audiences generally will like this frothy entertainment which uses the Southland as its locale. . . Lots of laughs and lots of action."

+ Film Daily p15 N 12 '36

"About everything that could happen to ruin a picture as a piece of entertainment seems to have happened to this one. Its makers will be fortunate if it does not qualify for razz honors. It is a musical that evidently began as an attempt to satirize the Old South. . . It emerges as an unbelievably unfunny hodge-podge of synthetic caricatures, silly gags and tasteless production numbers. It is also supposed to be a starring vehicle for Jane Withers but the child is sunk in a meaningless part and a welter of banalities, as is almost everyone else in the cast. What the film's box office fate will be is a matter for unwilling conjecture."

— — Hollywood Reporter p3 N 6 '36

— Motion Pict Daily p10 N 10 '36

"20th Century-Fox spent more on this Jane Withers offering than any before, with the result a pot-pourri that should please Jane Withers fans even if probably nonsensical to others. . . Aided by good comedians, fast dancing, musical numbers, specialties, 'Can This Be Dixie?' may be difficult to figure out but it ought to please where they like that sort of thing."

Phila Exhibitor p52 N 15 '36

"While it came very close to being hash, 'Can This Be Dixie?' should prove pleasing entertainment for the not-so-discriminating adults and will click with the juveniles. It will hold its own in the duals, but will take plenty of selling by its lonesome. . . Performance all along the line is okay, Miss Withers appearing to the best advantage in comparison with her last few films."

+ — Variety p13 N 18 '36

"Jane Withers's fans will undoubtedly appreciate 'Can This Be Dixie?' but it is very dubious if general audiences will go for this one. Production is fairly well mounted and is given a generous amount of production value, but it is devoid of draw names except for Withers. . . As a motion picture standing on its own merits, [it] is definitely rated for the lower brackets of a dual biller."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 6 '36

IL CAPPELLO A TRE PUNTE. Nuovo Mondo
79min S 26 '36

Cast: Leda Gloria, Eduardo de Filippo.
Peppino de Filippo, Dina Perbellini

Director: Mario Camerini

Italian dialogue film without English subtitles made in Rome; also called The Three-Cornered Hat. It is based on the novel El Sombrero de Tres Picos by Pedro Antonio de Alarcon. In 1934 the story was used for an American musical comedy, Revenge with Music. "It describes the antics of a miller whose beautiful wife has captivated the Governor of the province. The Governor's unsuccessful efforts to win her love gets him into difficulties, because the miller, who has been

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

IL CAPPELLO A TRE PUNTE—Continued
thrust into prison by the Governor on a flimsy pretext, escapes, goes to the palace in the Governor's stead and reports the flirtation to the Governor's wife." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"[It is] a delightful picturing of the classic tale. . . A spirited production, in the true spirit of Latin comedy. Family."

+ Wkly Guide N 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The Three-Cornered Hat" [will keep] those who can understand Italian in hilarious spirits. But for those who do not know the language, the film may prove tedious despite some of the excellent comic performances. . . The farce is crowded with ridiculous situations hinging on the mistakes the various couples make, and the dialogue appeared to be spiced with amusing double-meanings. The piece, however, includes stretches of boredom."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 S 28 '36

"The audience seemed to enjoy it thoroughly, finding the comedy situations merry, entertaining, and full of laughs." M. J.

+ N Y Sun p29 S 28 '36

"It probably will be to the liking of persons enjoying costume pictures (the period is the middle of the eighteenth century), which move rapidly and smoothly to an obvious end and to the accompaniment of numerous wisecracks, some tuneful airs and much gay confusion. Leda Gloria, a highly attractive actress already a favorite with Cine-Roma audiences, is practically perfect as the attractive wife." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p14 S 28 '36

"[It is] a brisk, tuneful, moderately amusing Italian movie." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p18 S 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A merry musical comedy of marital mistakes."

Film Daily p9 S 30 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p7 S 29 '36

"[It] is one of those unimportant farce-comedies that undoubtedly will be amusing to average foreign-language audiences, and nobody else. Picture depends almost wholly on snappy dialog for laugh results, pantomime verging on slapstick. With no English titles running current with rapid-fire Italian conversation, non-student of Italian vocabulary is left much in the dark."

Variety p29 S 30 '36

CAPTAIN'S KID. Warner-First national 68min O 31 '36

Cast: May Robson. Sybil Jason. Guy Kibbee. Jane Bryan. Fred Lawrence

Director: Nick Grinde

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Pictures involving child stars and gunmen are usually of a highly improbable nature and this one is no exception to the rule. . . The blend of homely humor and melodramatic excitement evidently striven for in the film is not wholly achieved and the production is merely adequate. . . This one will have its most potent appeal among the very young."

T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p96 O 31 '36

"This [is a] delightful and wholesome comedy. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Plenty of action, humorous situations, and good acting make this good, light entertainment for all ages. Adults & 8-18: good. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture will find favor with those who are not super-critical of story matter for it follows a routine course with the gangster element injected in a small dose to bring about dramatic suspense. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Two good songs and comedy bits enliven this pirate-treasure search. Family. Good." DAR

"An amusing mixture of pleasant comedy and melodrama. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It is] an enjoyable family picture." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul S 26 '36

"This sympathetically directed picture provides acceptable entertainment. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 16 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates S 15 '36

Reviewed by S. M. Mullen

Motion Pict & Family p6 O 15 '36

"This picture is too inconsequential to do justice to the acting ability of May Robson and Guy Kibbee. It is an improbable comedy which may entertain because of its small town locale and the picturesque characters it portrays. Adolescents, 12-16 & children, 8-12: fair."

+ — Motion Pict R p4 O '36

"Suitable entertainment for the family and junior matinees. . . This picture maintains an atmosphere and flavor of a small New England sea-port town which is vividly created in setting, dialogue, and choice of cast while the director deserves special credit for making use of local unique characteristics."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 9 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 8 '36

"A, Y & C: pleasant light comedy."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide O 17 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The comedy is pretty topheavy with melodrama, but nobody takes the proceedings seriously, not even the characters themselves." (1½ stars)

Liberty p46 D 5 '36

"Formulated to appeal to the small towners of cities as well as hamlets, the . . . story succeeds very well in its attempt to capture the naive note of pinafore diversion. Frankly a fable, the heart-strings are fiddled unashamedly while the clarinets of comedy are sounded in no uncertain blasts. 'Cunning' is the term which must be applied to 'The Captain's Kid.' . . Kibbee's sweetly timed performance is the film's strongest asset." Herb Sterne

Script p13 N 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Despite a good performance by Guy Kibbee and a wholesome, home-spun story, this falls short on entertainment values. Family."

+ — Box Office p63 S 19 '36

"[It is a] mild entrant that will probably please the family trade because of Kibbee, little Miss Jason. Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p34 O 1 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CAREER WOMAN. 20th century-Fox 70min Ja
22 '37

Cast: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen, Isabel Jewell, Gene Lockhart

Director: Lewis Seiler

Claire Trevor, a young idealistic lawyer just out of law school disagrees with the legal ethics shown by Michael Whalen, a worldly, disillusioned city lawyer. Her first case is that of a young mountain girl accused of murdering her father. Because of small town prejudices, the young girl is almost convicted of the crime although she is innocent. When Whalen enters the case with his theatrical methods of swaying the jury, the girl is freed.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suspense well sustained with comedy introduced through characterizations. Isabel Jewell is convincing as the young country girl. Adults."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 24 '36

"This poorly constructed story never quite decides whether to be comedy or melodrama, and is very uneven in treatment and direction. . . . An adequate cast make the most of a poor script that attempts to tell too much. Mature."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women N 16 '36

"Isabel Jewell, as the forlorn backwoods girl, draws a consistent portrait which seems an anachronism contrasted with her modern surroundings. Suspense is well maintained and rural types provide comedy relief for this tense melodrama. Adults. The Business and Professional Women regard the film as a regrettable travesty on court procedure."

Sel Motion Pict p7 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Here is one of Sol Wurtzel's productions that would have been able to go it alone in any house if in two or three places it had not been marred by the application to it of some picture mentality whose development was arrested before it had reached adolescence. . . . Comedy is dragged in by the heels to leave its scars on what otherwise would have been a practically perfect job of dramatic construction. However, the virtues of the production so heavily outweigh its faults that 'Career Woman' is a picture well worth seeing. It is by long odds the best thing Wurtzel has turned out in a long time."

+ — Hollywood Spec p14 D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Packed with entertainment, it was given sturdy production support on which Director Lewis Seiler capitalized to make a better-than-average B picture, excellently done in every department. 'Career Woman' should be a money-maker. Family."

+ Box Office p23 N 28 '36

"This strong, compelling drama, which both compares and condemns the big city type of murder trial with its theatricalism and the small town form of conviction before actual court judgment, makes a most commendable program picture. . . . Lamar Trotti has fashioned an intelligent screenplay that takes some surprising twists. The dialogue is down to earth language and very fitting to the situations."

+ Film Daily p7 N 24 '36

"Here is a satiric comedy drama of courts and lawyers made as a class B programmer and that easily transcends this rating. It provides superior entertainment because of a frank and thought-provoking approach to real life. . . . It is well written and well made, and will make a stimulating leader on any dual bill even though it has no big name draw. . . . Michael Whalen surprises with his gay and adroit command of the comedy opportunities in his lawyer role and Claire Trevor builds effective contrast with her earnest and sympathetic handling of court work. . . . Miss Jewell very nearly walks away with the acting honors throughout."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 20 '36

"Comedy drama that should be best liked in small towns, this is packed with feature faces, even if short on what the marquee needs in star values. Estimate: fair program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p31 D 1 '36

"Here is vigorous, intense drama of the sticks which will be relished in those communities where quick and honest emotion thrives. Built on the B budget, 'Career Woman' makes the best of its possibilities and gives Milton H. Feld an excellent credit for his first picture as associate producer. . . . It will provide sturdy dual support in the general run of houses."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 20 '36

CARNIVAL IN FLANDERS. See La Kermesse heroique

CASE OF THE BLACK CAT. Warner-First national 62min O 31 '36

Cast: Ricardo Cortez, June Travis, Jane Bryan, Craig Reynolds

Director: William McGann

Based on the mystery story Case of the Caretaker's Cat by Erle Stanley Gardner. "[It] is a complicated mystery thriller depicting the sleuthing activities of Ricardo Cortez, a criminal lawyer, and the unforeseen events that are the result of a wealthy man's will. . . . The cat of the millionaire's caretaker figures prominently throughout, as a menace, suspect and friend." [Variety (Hollywood)]

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This mystery film manages, against the prevailing fashion, to be really puzzling. So many pictures, purporting to be mysterious, are content to be incomprehensible. . . . If you have a head for clues and a willingness to match wits with the screen sleuth, this film will prove a habit-forming stimulant." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p96 O 31 '36

"A & Y: good of kind; C: doubtful value."
Christian Century p1510 N 11 '36

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"[It] offers thrills and laughter for those who like this type of entertainment. Adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The picture lacks the action and suspense necessary to hold the interest of those who like stimulating, exciting detective yarns. Disappointing. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Unconvincing. Mature & 14-18. Mediocre."
DAR

"[It is] an amusing murder mystery notable for particularly good acting and an absurd plot which is deftly worked up to a surprise ending. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It is] a highly exciting picture in which all characters are in the hands of a very good cast and [it has] capable direction. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 7 '36

"This is one of those films which owe its existence to the practice of double-billing. It is a passable mystery. . . . The plot is so complicated that the cat gets lost in the shuffle. Adolescents, 12-16: fair; children, 8-12: no value."

+ — Motion Pict R p4 O '36

CASE OF THE BLACK CAT—Continued

"This mediocre mystery develops without the usual embellishments of suspense and unity even though the debonair Perry Mason again finds clues from thin air and solves all of the murders. Family."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women O 7 '36

"[It is] a baffling double murder. . . Even the most capable audience detective will be surprised at the identity of the culprit. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A & Y: fairly good; C: unsuitable."
Parents' M p38 Ja '37

"The outcome is more surprising than credible, but it is an interesting plot. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide O 17 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"That it has some good portrayals and a pictorially impressive production is about the best which can be said for 'Black Cat.' It fails to capture what is the most essential thing in a cinematic offering of this sort, the illusion of reality. . . [It] makes its screen appearance as an artificial, unconvincing and inconsequential affair." Allan Hersholt

— Hollywood Spec p23 O 15 '36

"I emerged from the preview . . . still bewildered. . . 'Lively and exciting—but darned if I know what it was all about.'" Rob Wagner

Script p15 N 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Although handicapped by a story that is not up to the usual Perry Mason standards, this murder mystery should do well on a dual, if given the benefit of the Mason reputation. Family."

+ — Box Office p31 O 10 '36

"The Case of the Black Cat,' is routine double bill puzzle fare. Warners have failed consistently in bringing the crisp, punchy, best-selling yarns of Erle Stanley Gardner, written around a shrewd, resourceful criminal lawyer, to the screen with the gusto and sustained interest they carry in the printed page, and this is no exception, though a mildly entertaining film."

— + Hollywood Reporter p4 S 18 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 S 21 '36

"With Warren William off the Warners payroll, Ricardo Cortez now succeeds to the Perry Mason role in these detective-thrillers. The result is still the same. The show is destined for neighborhood or twin bill attention. . . Exhibitors who have found out what the others in this series have done for them can expect no more or less from this."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p34 O 1 '36

"Marked by a fine performance by Ricardo Cortez, who carries the whole show on his shoulders, 'The Case of the Black Cat' is a mystery programmer that is excellent double bill fare and should satisfy any neighborhood trade. Suspense is maintained to the final fadeout and audience interest is held to a keen pitch."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 18 '36

CAVALCADE OF THE WEST. Diversion 60min

Cast: Hoot Gibson. Rex Lease. Marion Shilling

Director: Harry Fraser

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 17 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It does not live up to the pretentious title. Family."

— + Christian Science Monitor p15 N 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Nice love action gives Hoot a well rounded part. This opus has plenty of thrills and suspense and all kinds of fast riding to please the fans."

+ Film Daily p12 O 6 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 O 6 '36

"Estimate: Gibson in top form."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 S 15 '36

"Using cavalcade idea in the title is an ambitious attempt for a western melodrama of the dual category. It works well out front, but disappoints on the inside viewing. . . Fits best with a modern second-run."

— Variety p29 S 30 '36

CAVALRY. Supreme-Republic 63min O 7 '36

Cast: Bob Steele. Frances Grant. Karl Hackett. Hal Price

Director: Robert N. Bradbury

A western melodrama of Civil War days.

Trade Paper Reviews

"A routine Civil War-time Western, designed for the delectation of the action belt, where it will do average duty."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 O 1 '36

"Western fans ought to be satisfied, with Steele turning in his hard riding, straight shooting, fighting performance as the U. S. cavalryman. Estimate: okay."

+ Phila Exhibitor p37 O 15 '36

"Following an old formula to garner laughs, Supreme Pictures has gone out and worked religiously to pluck the loose ends for its 'Cavalry.' But it won't go except for the kiddies in the forenoons and maybe a few adults on the slack end of a neighborhood bill. . . Only other redeeming feature of the picture is the photography of Bert Longenecker. He happened to hit clouds throughout the outdoor scenes and they're magnificent. It's worth the price of admission to see them. However, that won't carry the picture to any box office degree."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 1 '36

CHAMPAGNE WALTZ. Paramount 92min Ja 29 '37

Cast: Gladys Swarthout. Fred MacMurray. Jack Oakie. Herman Bing

Director: A. Edward Sutherland

Music: Johann Strauss

Music director: Boris Morros

"The story on which the picture is built involves Gladys Swarthout as a descendant of Johann Strauss. With her grandfather she conducts a waltz palace in Vienna. The enterprise dedicated to the famous master, is a huge success until Fred MacMurray, American orchestra leader, and his manager, Jack Oakie, introduce modern jazz to the city. Opening up a cafe-dancehall in the vicinity, they virtually ruin the Strausses. The [ending] is in reverse when Oakie takes the Strausses to New York to operate a waltz palace, a huge success because of its novelty." Hollywood Reporter

Trade Paper Reviews

"An attempt here to build a pretentious musical production . . . proves disappointing. The idea on which the story was built, the comedy, the romance, and the specialties are all excellent; but after merging these features into a picture there is still considerable lacking for real theater entertainment. The ingredients are there, but the picture misses, mainly on the score of poor producing. The picture patently shows expensive production; in fact, some of the more spectacular music numbers were put in after the film had once been completed and found to need bolstering. It is true that these phases of the picture are among its highlights of lavishness but they fail to overcome the weakness of construction and the picture's inability to hold audience interest."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 D 5 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 D 5 '36

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE. Warner 116min N 7 '36

Cast: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Patric Knowles, Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, Donald Crisp

Director: Michael Curtiz

Music: Max Steiner

Music director: Leo F. Forbstein

Based on the poem of the same title by Alfred Tennyson. The charge "into the valley of death" by the 600 English lancers immortalized by Tennyson as one of the inexplicable heroic blunders of all time is here depicted. As portrayed in the film, the charge was made on forged orders in an effort to revenge the massacre of women and children by natives at Balaclava Heights during the Crimean War.

A Guide to the study of the screen version of The Charge of the Light Brigade, prepared by Max J. Herzberg, is obtainable from Educational and Recreation Guides, Inc., 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents per copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It has been established before this that spectacle is Hollywood's most successful metier but the amazing technical results achieved in this production must renew emphasis on that fact. . . It will appear immediately that the solution of the famous blunder offered herein is fictitious, slightly incredible and most unimpressive. A young major takes it upon himself to sacrifice his entire company in order to visit his wrath on the villain of Chukoti and, the personal notion persists, because he has been crossed in love and feels pretty useless anyway. Had Queen Victoria's fireside poet no more than this to go on, he would never have been moved to write the piece which provides a title for the film. But, take it all in all, we shall not see so complete a tour de force again for many film cycles to come. Its handsome dress and splendid photography recommend this melodrama to patrons in general." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p144 N 14 '36

"The Charge of the Light Brigade' is all that the title implies—a glorification of militarism and a justification of imperialistic conquest of colonial territory. . . Suggestion; protest to your theatre manager and to Warner Brothers Pictures against this war-inciting and pro-imperialistic film."

— Bul on Current Films N 17 '36

"A: notable; Y: very doubtful; C: no."
Christian Century p1574 N 25 '36

"Regrettable cruelty to horses. Mature & 14-18. Excellent." DAR

"One of the year's outstanding films. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Melodrama of war pictured on a magnificent scale. . . It may not all be true in detail and the final motivation may not seem quite adequate when we have had time to think it through, but while we watch we are held by the magic of the camera and the vastness of the production. . . The picture does justice to the subject and thereby gives us an experience too agonizing for the sensitive or for young children. Mature." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ + Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"This magnificent spectacle based on the poem by Alfred Tennyson, is an achievement in the art of motion pictures. Mature audience."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 24 '36

"Technically 'The Charge of the Light Brigade' is a stunning picture, beautifully photographed, fast moving, admirably cast and accompanied by an exceptionally fine musical score. . . The entire film is superbly dramatic. For sheer sensationalism the final charge of the brigade has never been equaled in pictures. . . The sequence runs fifteen minutes, and the scenes of carnage are unbearably realistic. At this time of international unrest and mutual suspicion the social value of such a picture is debatable. The savagery of the fighting, the horror of the massacre (after a truce had been offered and accepted), arouse not only excitement in the spectators, but also actual mad emotions of hatred and lust for killing. The production glorifies war, makes revenge the motive for the final sacrifice, vindicates insubordination. As a bit of warlike realism it cannot be beaten. Its interpretation will depend upon the individual. Adolescents, 12-16: very poor; children, 8-12: impossible."

Motion Pict R p6 N '36

"The blend of historical fact and fiction results in an exceptionally fine picture. General patronage."

+ + Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"Semi-historical in character, this picture is a remarkable production. . . Because of its warlike realism, reviewers are raising the question of the social value of the picture which they feel glorifies war. It is hardly screen fare for sensitive children. A & Y: stirring spectacle; C: no."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"The photography and the musical score contribute much to the dramatic power of the action-filled drama and the acting is of a notably high calibre. One of the year's outstanding films. Family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict p9 N 1 '36

"[It is] a stunning production which reaches a fine climax in the ride into the 'valley of death.' Suggested for schools and libraries. Family. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide O 31 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Despite the praise accorded to this highly fictional film drama based on the blunders at Balaclava and inspired by Tennyson's poem, many filmgoers will demure at supporting a production which involved wanton cruelty to animals. Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p19 D 5 '36

"The Tennyson poem now relives to inspire a thundering thrill, a magnificent panorama of surging action that sweeps with almost breath-taking motion to the tragic attack. . . It is with a stark realism such as the motion picture camera has rarely ever before captured that the Light Brigade rides again. . . Warner Brothers may well be proud of Michael Curtiz's direction. Too, the photography and musical scoring are as thoroughly a dramatic part of the production as the excellent work of virtually all of the players." J. P. Cunningham

+ + Commonweal p76 N 13 '36

"Hal Wallis, Hollywood's premier producer of big and important pictures during the past twelve months, adds to his imposing list another that will be acclaimed by the world as one of the finest creations the screen has to its credit. . . [He has] given us a bit of film entertainment that is physically massive, heroically thrilling and emotionally appealing. Writers, director and cast acquitted themselves brilliantly."

+ + Hollywood Spec p7 O 24 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE—Cont.

"Condemn this story as a romantic glorification of war lust, you nevertheless will be held by its pace, excitement, and sweep. It is done with admirable scope and accuracy of detail and the final charge has high drama. . . Off hand we wonder why Flynn isn't top man in Hollywood. He has dash, he is handsome, he knows enough about acting to more than get by. Don't shy away from 'The Charge of the Light Brigade' because it is history wrapped in pretty costumes. History frequently is highly dramatic. And this will hold your interest, we assure you." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p59 N 21 '36

"The history in 'The Charge of the Light Brigade' is not sound history. It is not really history at all, but high-pressure fiction of the dashing uniformed school. . . Since the picture is grand blood-and-thunder entertainment, expertly directed, lavishly produced, enacted with ease and charm if no particular force, these cavillings may seem unkind. Movie reviewers, however, are unlike the gallant brigade. Theirs not to do or die; theirs but to wonder why. And this film leads to a bit of wondering if, in spite of some hurt feelings, the true story wouldn't have made a more powerful film. . . [It] may not teach history, but it offers as many thrills, both of visual beauty and melodrama, as any moviegoer has a right to demand." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p41 N 2 '36

"The Frères Warner, bless 'em, may not give a hang for history, but they do know how to turn out a smashing and spectacular adventure film. 'The Charge of the Light Brigade,' which has taken what will unquestionably prove to be a long term lease of the Strand, is the 1936 model of 'Lives of a Bengal Lancer.' Like its magnificently melodramatic predecessor, it is a virile and picturesque saga. . . [The] picture, which might have been accounted [in its first half] a larruping action tale, crashes into its spectacular climax. . . Tennyson described the charge and the Warner cameras have photographed it just that way. It's a sight to see. . . While it smacks more of Kipling than of Tennyson, 'The Charge of the Light Brigade,' is a grand movie." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p24 N 2 '36

"The film will cause you to hold your breath, while you watch with enjoyable suspense the furious charge of the gallant six hundred. Acted by a superior cast. . . The Charge of the Light Brigade provides a legitimate wallop for jaded filmgoers in search of new dramatic territory. . . In addition to being lively, exciting and handsomely photographed, the film is excellently acted." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p43 N 2 '36

"Tennyson's poem immortalized the Lancers' brave ride at Balaclava; Warner Brothers' stirring and spectacular film, 'The Charge of the Light Brigade,' will do it all over again. Michael Curtiz's direction, the photography, and the musical score deserve the adjectives that will be lavished on them. . . A romantic subplot. . . threads through a series of exciting, sometimes horrible, incidents to knit them into a plausible and well-balanced whole. Shrewd casting, which brackets Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland in the leading roles, does not stop with the stars. . . A masterpiece of its kind—conceived on a gargantuan scale—the film was more than three months in the making."

+ + News-Wk p24 O 31 '36

"This Charge is a sort of earth-bound 'Captain Blood' (with none of its romantic fervor, however). . . There are some people in it, too. Grown-up people who act strangely adolescent and undisciplined for such a heroic occasion. Rarely in this production could we find the dignity and personal integrity of conduct that are associated with the event Tennyson so nobly commemorated. . . The cast of supporting players. . . create a truly inspiring background upon which the 'stars' etch weak and wavering portraits. When the Charge begins, we are prepared for a rousing justification for all that has gone before. And what happens? Six thousand gallant souls ride on and on and on, amidst a terrifying noisy musical accompaniment, and win Balaclava with mirrors. We weren't once fooled, and that's fatal."

+ — Stage p14 D '36

"Its significance in literature, as the inspiration of Tennyson's famed ballad, will be considerably enhanced by this picture. 'The Charge of the Light Brigade' explains the confusion in the Crimea as romantically as possible. If the result is untrustworthy as research, it is superlatively valid as entertainment, with an honest emotional ring that makes it one of the outstanding cinemas of the season. . . Combining in fresh and spontaneous form the kinetic appeal of 'Lives of a Bengal Lancer' with the patriotic fervor of 'Cavalcade,' 'The Charge of the Light Brigade' will be important to cinema students less for the solution it offers as to the riddles of the Light Brigade than for the mystery it deepens as to why the U.S. cinema industry can wave the British flag so much more effectively than its own."

+ + Time p21 N 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"All of Hollywood's favorite superlatives, 'colossal,' 'gigantic,' 'tremendous,' etc., can be applied to this production without any fear of over-rating. For the first time in four years of reviewing pictures, I was completely carried away by a picture, and at the finale wanted to break out in loud applause, but being alone in a screening room I controlled myself. . . I cannot praise too highly the direction of this picture. It is outstanding."

+ + Canadian Moving Pict Digest p8 N 7 '36

"Warner Bros. have again turned to history and the result is one of the most important pictures of the year. The battle scenes, with the British horsemen charging through the 'valley of death,' have never been excelled on the screen, and will thrill every spectator. Michael Curtiz's direction is his best to date, and he has handled the spectacular and intimate scenes equally well."

+ Film Daily p8 O 20 '36

"As a gripping spectacle, 'The Charge of the Light Brigade' is an outstanding example of the motion picture at its best. It is all motion picture, a highly fictionalized and imaginary account of a historic incident known to every man, woman and child whose education passed the McGuffey readers. A ready-made audience awaits it and it is destined for hit business wherever it plays. . . The result is a rarity in film treatment, a production that loses nothing of intimacy through the spectacular. The characters are so moving that women patrons will not be repelled by the brutalities of massacre and warfare."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 O 17 '36

"Warners have produced another box office giant in a picture that looks headed for top grosses. . . Estimate: topnotch."

+ Phila Exhibitor p37 N 1 '36

"Warner Bros. has turned out a magnificent production. . . It is an elaborate, nicely geared thrill picture that is calculated for big box office where properly ballyhooed. And its exploitation possibilities are countless. Sure to grab heavy male trade, it also holds added interest for juvenile clientele. . . It is strictly up to the exhibitor to cash in, because the film is one of the type that will build after a good opening."

+ Variety p18 N 4 '36

"Superbly wrought entertainment of smash calibre which will gun for box office records. Assuredly one of the finest pictures Warners has turned out, it will rate critical superlatives. . . Without neglecting appeal to feminine audiences, it is in its military melodrama a natural for men. It has in high degree that quality of excitement, physical clash and emotional tension which may be counted on for wide word-of-mouthing to bolster aggregate weight of cast names and battle-action implication of poem which has been read by every school child 'round the world."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 17 '36

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE OPERA. 20th century-Fox 65min Ja 15 '37

Cast: Warner Oland, Boris Karloff, Keye Luke, Gregory Gaye, Nedda Harrigan

Director: H. Bruce Humberstone

Charlie Chan is called in to solve a threatened murder of an opera star. Before he is through two murders are committed. In his bland Chinese manner he solves the crimes.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"One of the best of the series. The picture is interestingly photographed, well staged and acted and directed with finesse. Mature audience."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 24 '36

"[It is] one of the most elaborately produced of the Charlie Chan murder mysteries. . . . The well chosen cast performs admirably one of the best stories in this series. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 16 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 17 '36

"In addition to the high standard of direction and acting that has characterized all the Charlie Chan mystery films, 'Charlie Chan at the Opera' has rather more pretentious settings and background than usual. . . . The operatic sequences and backstage scenes give distinction to a well-constructed and logically developed story. Mature."

+ Sel Motion Pict p7 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Charlie Chan at the Opera' is by far the best of the recent crop of Chan pictures. . . . Once the story gets under way, it flows smoothly and swiftly. . . . Warner Oland, the perennial, who has just signed for ten more Chan pictures, performs," the title rôle with his customary dexterity." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p16 D 5 '36

"Just as Charlie Chan never fails to solve the most baffling of homicides so do the films in which the perennial Chinese sleuth appears seldom fail in their mission to entertain. And the latest . . . is no exception. . . . Warner Oland is perfect as Charlie and Nedda Harrigan, Frank Conroy, Boris Karloff, as well as all the others in the cast, help to make these lethal high jinks diverting entertainment." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p27 D 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This choice blood-curdling story, teaming together Warner Oland and Boris Karloff, gives Hollywood free rein to parade before John Public its ace thriller. Family."

+ Box Office p21 D 5 '36

"This Charlie Chan with its mystery laid in an opera house is one of the best of the series. . . . H. Bruce Humberstone, the director, has provided the piece with plenty of that quality while injecting a swift pace that never lets down. The climax is held to the very end. The mysterious happenings are interpolated into the operatic numbers and together they make for interesting entertainment."

+ Film Daily p7 N 16 '36

"It is the best Charlie Chan done yet. John Stone has given it first-rate production; H. Bruce Humberstone has contributed a lively, intelligent, humorous brand of direction which never lets the piece hesitate a moment; Scott Darling and Charles Belden have turned in a screen-play in keeping with the direction, Bess Meredyth must have turned them over a good story to work on, and everybody in the cast troupe to complete satisfaction."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 12 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 N 13 '36

"Probably tops in this Chan series, 'Charlie Chan at the Opera' has the benefit of an additional name, Boris Karloff. . . . The operatic background is interesting; Oland, Karloff are very good; the result is an ace Chan."

+ Phila Exhibitor p31 D 1 '36

CIBOULETTE. Cipar 100min S 11 '36

Cast: Simone Berriau, Therese Dorny, Madeleine Guitty, Robert Burnier

Director: Claude Lara

Lyrics: Francois de Croisset

Music: Renaldo Hahn

Musical comedy film in French produced in France without English sub-titles. Based on the stage success of the same title by Francois de Croisset. "Dated in the Eighteen Sixties, the story of 'Ciboulette' is the extravagant account, largely in verse, of the way a country maid, bringing her uncle's produce to the Paris market, finds her future husband under a load of cabbages, just as a fortune teller has told her." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A pleasant operetta featuring Renaldo Hahn's lovely music. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Ciboulette' is a little too foreign for an American reviewer altogether to appreciate. Although the lyrics, translated along with a plot synopsis by a most considerate management, are occasionally witty, the story is surprisingly ingenious for these days of 1936. . . . The music is pretty, undistinguished and typically French. The cast could answer almost the same description. . . . As there are no English subtitles, the picture will be most relished by those who understand rapid French dialogue." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p19 S 15 '36

"[It has arrived] here for the entertainment of persons enjoying a frothy mixture of pleasing music, slapstick adventure, wisecracks and period costumes." H. T. S.

N Y Times p20 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Generally entertaining operetta, with tuneful music, plenty of comedy and a colorful costume background."

+ Film Daily p7 S 14 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 S 17 '36

CODE OF THE RANGE. Columbia 54min O 9 '36

Cast: Charles Starrett, Mary Blake, Edward Coxen

Director: C. C. Coleman, Jr.

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 22 '36

"A, Y & C: usual Western."

Parents' M p38 Ja '37

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CODE OF THE RANGE—Continued

"A mildly diverting, unimportant western story filled with action and excitement. . . A mild love affair meanders through the tale without hindrance to the action. The photography is good and the ease of the actors on horseback contributes much to the speed and movement of the somewhat complicated plot. Family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict p9 D 1 '36

"A range war between cattlemen and sheepmen done with less of the wild and woolly effect of most Westerns of its type. Family."

Wkly Guide O 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Intrigue, murder have their place, so, too, do love, romance, but there is nothing which particularly sets this apart from the routine Western. Production good, acting adequate."

+ - Phila Exhibitor p32 N 1 '36

COME AND GET IT. United artists 103min
N 6 '36

Cast: Edward Arnold. Joel McCrea. Frances Farmer. Walter Brennan. Mary Nash

Directors: Howard Hawks. William Wyler

Based on the novel of the same title by Edna Ferber. Arnold traces the rise of a lumber king in the 80's who fails in love but succeeds magnificently in his worldly achievements.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The chief merit of this film . . . is Edward Arnold's full-bodied characterization of a rugged individualist in the lumber business. . . The film frequently generates power and intensity and is recommended to adults." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p168 N 21 '36

"A: notable; Y: unwholesome; C: no."
Christian Century p1639 D 2 '36

"What a picture! . . . This is handled with vigor, realism, and skill. Fine cast. Excellent bits. Family, but mature for children. Excellent." DAR

"Edna Ferber's story . . . is superbly produced. Logging scenes are tremendously impressive. . . There is no let-down. . . The cast, which is made up mostly of unknown players, is expertly chosen for type and quality. One would like to say a word in praise of each one, beginning with Edward Arnold who gives a noteworthy performance. The dual direction is smooth and masterly; the writing, the musical score and the technical values all contribute to the high level of the picture's entertainment quality. Mature." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ + Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"Magnificent scenic effects and an excellent cast make this a picture outstanding in entertainment value. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"[It] is ably directed and strongly developed. Edward Arnold gives a fine performance as Barney Glasgow. Adults; excellent; 14-18: possibly; 8-14: beyond. Mature-family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"[It is] another artistic triumph for recording and photography. This film is outstanding if for no other reason than the majestic grandeur of these opening sequences. But there is no let-down of interest as we follow the career of Barney Glasgow. . . This film reproduces the manners and dress of the period 1884-1907 with authentic realism. Outstanding. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"An excellent adaptation of Edna Ferber's novel. Adults & young people. E Coast Preview Committee

"A strong, realistic drama, magnificently staged and exceptionally well acted by a distinguished cast. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Advocating reformation and upholding good standards in social and commercial life and showing logging from tree to finished board, this presentation is sophisticated in theme and is suitable for the mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul N 28 '36

"An outstanding achievement marked by the combined efforts of two skilled directors. . . In all—superfine entertainment. Mature audience."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 10 '36

"Edward Arnold never gave a finer portrayal. . . The direction is masterly, the photography, particularly of cutting lumber and logging it to market, is magnificent, and the entire production is human and pulsating. Excellent for adults."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women N 11 '36

"A & Y: excellent; C: mature."
Parents' M p38 Ja '37

"Outstanding. Mature."

+ + Sel Motion Pict p3 D 1 '36

"Well cast and directed with thrilling scenes of lumbering in the Wisconsin forests. Mature. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide N 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A gripping screen drama, sometimes brutal, always powerful, which shows the rise of a lumber baron. . . Direction and photography are outstanding and the film is strongly acted. Adults & young people."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '36

"Our most distinguished individual producer scores another success with his picturization of Edna Ferber's 'Come and Get It.' It is a big story, told within a big frame, a story of human emotions which intelligent screen writing and expert direction make understandable. . . Once I wrote that only on a picture's faults can a review of it grow to fat proportions. All hope of writing an extended review of 'Come and Get It' ended with the above paragraph. All the rest would be but a parade of superlatives. . . All in all, 'Come and Get It' is a notable contribution to what has been on the whole a season of notable productions."

+ + Hollywood Spec p7 N 7 '36

"Edward Arnold plays Barney Glasgow through the years—but he is not entirely believable as the younger rugged lumberjack. Actually the picture is stolen by a newcomer, Frances Farmer. . . She carries 'Come and Get It' to whatever interest you will encounter in its length. And there is a grand character performance—of a wild, simple, honest Swede lumberjack—by Walter Brennan. If you like rugged he-man drama, here it is." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 D 12 '36

"Edna Ferber's saga . . . has been made into a vivid and exciting motion picture. Keeping strict faith with its lusty and colorful background of American life a generation ago, the work has strength, beauty and conviction. . . Robustly acted and staged in sweeping cinematic strokes, the film betters the book in nearly every respect. Essentially it is the brilliant portrayal of the leading role by Edward Arnold that gives the photoplay power and distinction. . . In something of a masterly fashion, he moves through the rather fortuitous ending, making the figure of Barney sympathetic rather than ridiculous, when Lotta chooses to marry his son. . . [Frances Farmer] is attractive and sings pleasantly, but she rarely rises to the emotional exigencies of either characterization. . . Treating its source material with laudable license, 'Come and Get

It's a rousing screen re-creation of a colorful period in our not too remote past." Howard Barnes

++ N Y Herald Tribune p24 N 12 '36

"Edna Ferber's entertaining, full-blooded story of the lusty Barney Glasgown is now a fairly entertaining film, but neither lusty nor full-blooded. Somewhere in the recording of 'Come and Get It,' the gusto was lost, and it's probable that happened before cameras were set up, during the casting of the yarn. [It] is handsomely photographed and produced, carefully directed, written in excellent taste. This one, unlike most of its predecessors, has not that perfection of casting to which Mr. Goldwyn has accustomed his pampered audiences. Edward Arnold, for all his efforts, is not quite the Barney of the novel. . . The film, lacking the power of one with something definite to say, still offers sufficient amusement. Frances Farmer is responsible for much of this." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p25 N 12 '36

"Chalk up another hit for Samuel Goldwyn, one of the few producers in Hollywood who refuses to be content with mediocrity. His film version of Edna Ferber's 'Come and Get It' is as fine in its way as those earlier Goldwyn successes of this year, 'These Three' and 'Dodsworth.' . . Edward Arnold, in the central rôle, gives a virile and full-blooded characterization. . . Frances Farmer, first as Lotta Morgan, the cabaret singer, and then as her daughter, is not merely a delight to the masculine eye, but an actress of more than usual merit, and Mr. Goldwyn is to be congratulated for having recognized it. . . You won't find 'Come and Get It' a thoroughly Ferber work, but enough of her has been retained and enough good Goldwyn added to make it a genuinely satisfying picture." F. S. Nugent

++ N Y Times p31 N 12 '36

"The maddening thing about the tedious and dawdling [film] . . . is that it contains several perfectly good and valid reasons—there are moments of fine drama and expert acting in it—for suspecting that it could easily have been a lively and robust career story of a two-fisted lumberjack. But somewhere along the line something went wrong and the result is a formless clutter of characters and incidents of interest to few, if any, cinema-goers. Indeed, it is difficult to recall a better example of how bad one and the same film may be in the period of some ninety-odd minutes." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p19 N 12 '36

"The story opens in a lumber camp and ends at a garden party, which, of course, is progress. I myself was somewhat more taken with the early scenes of lumber-jack society, and especially with such a saloon brawl as one seldom sees, even in movies. . . Seldom, indeed, have the movie people let their story lag; where they haven't been able to put in a good fight, they have edged situations with humor, and you don't have to snooze much. . . The film is nicely turned out, with a care for detail. Fine lumber-camp sets, good furniture of the times (around the turn of the century), and the cast dressed to the last rat of the ladies' hair in the style of the day." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p89 N 7 '36

"Coming on the heels of Goldwyn's exceptionally successful 'Dodsworth' the picture proves that—currently at least—the producer has something of the Midas touch as well as the showman's. . . Frances Farmer excels in the dual rôle of a cynical cabaret singer and her daughter. . . Paramount lent her to Goldwyn as a minor player; she returns to her own studio a fledgling star. . . The burden of the film rests squarely on Edward Arnold's hefty shoulders. The second phase of his characterization is no easy assignment, but he manages the feat of making an unlikely infatuation both credible and deeply moving. The film is well worth seeing."

+ News-Wk p60 N 14 '36

"Arnold has never had so good a character or enacted one so well. His is a veritable triumph. And Frances Farmer is right up with him. She shows a versatility as the hard-boiled entertainer and afterward as the sweet young daughter that is acting of a very high order. . . What a picture! Credit Merritt Hulburd, and, of course, that Old Master of screen beauty and success, Sam Goldwyn." Rob Wagner

++ Script p12 N 14 '36

"Barney's early disposition, and the bawdy days of nineteenth century Wisconsin make much more effective cinema than the luxury-toned mannerisms of the later period. The logging scenes are masterpieces of photographic crescendo, and we feel sure that the cabaret sequence, wherein Barney and Lotta, the dance hall girl, twirl trays at the mirrors, will go down in picture history as a tour de force of silent comedy. . . There are sure, accurately characterized performances by every member of the cast. So perfectly costumed and created are the persons in 'Come and Get It' that it is difficult to imagine them doing anything else. Edward Arnold, of course, is an example of inspired casting. . . It is a rare event when you can't think of the stars' names and have to call them Swan and Lotta and Karie and Emmy Louise. You must have the idea by now. You are supposed to be buying a ticket."

++ Stage p14 D '36

"The result, against a background first of lumber camps and small-town saloons, later of early 20th-Century urban plutocracy, is an extraordinarily warm and lively picture of one of the few romantic aspects of the U. S. which the cinema has so far neglected."

++ Time p37 N 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As meaty as your Thanksgiving turkey is Samuel Goldwyn's film version of Edna Ferber's surging saga of a lumber baron, his loves and his lusts. Fact is, the picture improves on the book, since it eliminates the anti-climatic sequences found in the best seller. It is top flight entertainment for all ages and classes and will vie with Goldwyn's recently released 'Dodsworth' for revenue honors. The entire cast excels. Family."

+ Box Office p51 N 14 '36

"Here is another highly entertaining picture bearing the Samuel Goldwyn label. . . [It] has more warm human tender touches than a dozen pictures. . . The thrilling logging scenes which open the picture with a bang were directed by Richard Rosson. One of the year's outstanding character performances is given by Edward Arnold, and Walter Brennan is close on his heels with a lovable portrayal as his friend."

+ Film Daily p11 O 29 '36

"Samuel Goldwyn has contributed a completely worthy companion piece to his 'Dodsworth.' Though radically different in subject, both dramas are American to the core; are authentic and moving studies of character, and have a wide range of appeal. The new film will attract and delight an even larger audience, for it reaches deeply into the roots of everyday life. It can be counted on for a magnificent box office record. As a production it is literally superb—one of the outstanding pictures of the year."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 27 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 O 28 '36

"Edna Ferber's draw, the excellence of the picture, should help build it into a substantial grosser. Estimate: good job throughout."

+ Phila Exhibitor p52 N 15 '36

"For the first half hour or so 'Come and Get It' is smashing, slam-bang entertainment. Then it fades. It doesn't fade so much that it is ever very bad, but enough to make the latter part seem mediocre by comparison. It will do pretty fair business. . . There are no production flaws in this picture; its fault is that it throws its Sunday punch hurriedly and has little in reserve for a follow-up. . . Arnold has the big part and does the biggest and best job in a cast that's extremely spotty. . . As the dance hall lady [Frances Farmer] overdoes the hardboiled stuff to an extreme and tends to make it a burlesque rather than a sincere study. . . From a production standpoint, Sam Goldwyn, as usual, shoots the works. It's regrettable the story isn't worthy of it all."

COME AND GET IT—Continued

+ — Variety p12 N 18 '36

"'Come and Get It,' brilliantly transposed from the Edna Ferber tale . . . has to an extraordinary degree a quality of difference which sets it off and which will claim for the production highest popular and critical praise. Not heavy with magic names, it will bear exploitation, but has in itself all the elements of fine drama. . . Edward Arnold probably gives the most sensitive, human and compelling performance of his career."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 27 '36

COME CLOSER, FOLKS. Columbia 61min N 7 '36

Cast: James Dunn, Marian Marsh, Wynne Gibson, Herman Bing

Director: D. Ross Lederman

A pitchman or sidewalk hawk gets into the good graces of a girl who owns a department store. After he almost ruins the store by unloading a consignment of worthless merchandise on the unsuspecting customers, he has a change of heart and stages a sensational sale which wins back the customers and also wins the girl for the repentant pitchman.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: absurd; Y & C: better not."

Christian Century p1594 N 25 '36

"[It is] a mildly amusing comedy. . . Performances and characterizations are pleasantly snappy and, together with some good comedy, serve to put over an unpretentious story that is average entertainment. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p9 D 1 '36

"[It is] an amusing comedy of rapid-fire salesmanship. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 31 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] an amusing patter on the theme of the main stem pitchman, with the juvenescent Jimmy Dunn as the sidewalk salesman who could have sold monocles in Mongolia if Columbia Pictures hadn't provided more likely wares and sales territories." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p17 N 23 '36

"Those high pressure street corner salesmen, who sell, among other things, watches that run for ten minutes for two bits to the gullible public, come in for some dubiously humorous consideration in 'Come Closer, Folks,' a clumsy and feeble little comedy drama. . . Save for the pleasant people in it, who make the film seem considerably more entertaining than it actually is, there is nothing to recommend in 'Come Closer, Folks,' which is loaded down with musty prattle and complications that are embarrassing for their lack of ingenuity." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p19 N 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A cleverly-constructed story which will click in the neighborhood spots."

+ Box Office p21 D 5 '36

"Just a good Class B exhibit, that will get the laughs in the subsequent runs and the drop-ins. Made for light diversion and not to be taken apart by critical audiences."

+ — Film Daily p7 N 24 '36

"Obviously directed at the B market, this modest little programmer is a more than ordinarily worthy representative of its class, packing some rollicking comedy and cleverly-constructed farce situations, with which the majority of the cast do first-rate."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 28 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p20 N 24 '36

"Best for neighborhoods, small towns, it has a generally pleasing tone that might offset its lack of names. Exploitation angles, in view of the pitchman background, should be very big."

+ Phila Exhibitor p49 N 15 '36

"James Dunn has become so typed that there is probably little hope for his escape from such material as 'Come Closer, Folks.' . . Not only is it highly fantastic subject matter, but 'Come Closer, Folks' is never more than casually diverting. It is of minor box office value and on most dual bills, to which it points, the booking will be as the No. 2 feature. [It contains] every known liberty in film-making and story-spinning figures. . . The plot is equalled in its inconsistency only by the triteness of the dialog and the brashness which is permitted Dunn in courtroom, store and other sequences."

+ — Variety p15 N 25 '36

"'Come Closer, Folks' is good clean comedy, well suited for any type of audience. There are plenty of laughs through the whole picture. [It] is excellent material for any dualer. James Dunn as the fast-talking racket salesman is right in character and does a swell job."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 28 '36

CONFLICT. Universal 60min N 29 '36

Cast: John Wayne, Jean Rogers, Tommy Bupp, Frank Sheridan, Ward Bond

Director: David Howard

Based on the novel The Abysmal Brute by Jack London. A melodrama of crooked prize fighters.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] somewhat dated but filled with action. . . An obvious lesson on cheating runs through the plot, which is played in a straightforward manner, with little emotional feeling, but which carries a ring of truth. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p9 D 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] satisfactory program offering with a good role for John Wayne."

+ — Film Daily p3 N 28 '36

"An action comedy drama of prize fighting in the gay nineties that has what it takes to please them in the hamlet houses. . . The picture is well made for its class. The script of Charles Logue and Walter Weems does not bother much with subtleties or probabilities but packs in a maximum of two-fisted brawls."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 N 23 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p14 N 27 '36

"Producer Trem Carr takes John Wayne off his horse and moves from the oat burners to the action dramas. The transition is well received by the audience and 'Conflict' brings 60 minutes of good entertainment. It can well round out any dualer and will undoubtedly meet the enthusiastic applause of the [children] who bicycle up to the foyer for the week-end matinees. . . 'Conflict' is not important as a picture, but it will fill the bill where the audiences demand plenty of slugging and action."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 23 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

COUNTRY GENTLEMEN. Republic 60min N 9 '36

Cast: Ole Olsen. Chic Johnson. Joyce Compton. Lila Lee

Director: Ralph Staub

"The story is laid in a small town, where Olsen & Johnson land in jail because of a mistaken kidnap charge. There is a veterans' home nearby and the boys have just got their bonus. It's too much of a temptation to Johnson, while Olsen, who has developed a romantic interest in the town's prettiest widow, played by Lila Lee, wants to go straight." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y & C: good."

Parents' M p38 Ja '37

Trade Paper Reviews

"This Olsen-Johnson mirth maker represents one of Republic's best efforts to date, and the crazy clowning of the pair, together with a double share of their sure-fire vaudeville gags, makes the picture a cinch for any spot, particularly where their stage unit has played. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 31 '36

"Here is a wild comedy that will garner a nice quota of laughs as a program offering. Olsen and Johnson, vaudeville headliners, bring their riotous stage antics to the screen."

+ Film Daily p7 O 24 '36

"Just as delightful a little comedy as has rolled off the production lines for many a moon. In addition to the kind of slapstick which Olsen & Johnson have made their monopoly, it is loaded with precious dialogue, much of it John P. Medbury's, swell comedy situations, and a cohesive story. . . It is the best picture work this comedy pair has ever done and will probably lead them into a fine film future as the industry could well use another reliable laugh team."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 21 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 O 22 '36

"Estimate: okey for neighborhoods, small towns."

Phila Exhibitor p33 N 1 '36

"Republic's presentation of 'Country Gentlemen' is an excellent transformation of typical Olsen and Johnson stage comedy to the screen. There are plenty of laughs and enough action to make it swell comedy material to carry the light end of an otherwise serious dualer and in the smaller spots it will even do for top billing."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 21 '36

CRAIG'S WIFE. Columbia 75min S 25 '36

Cast: Rosalind Russell. John Boles. Billie Burke. Jane Darwell

Director: Dorothy Arzner

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It] emerges as strong and mordant dramatic fare. . . The film strikes out at domestic vices in a strain which is both literate and intelligent and at all times engrossing. These qualities invite adult interest."

T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p24 O 10 '36

"A: very good; Y: mature but good; C: no."

Christian Century p1374 O 14 '36

"This fine play gives Rosalind Russell her best role: a disagreeable personality skillfully portrayed. Expertly directed by Dorothy Arzner. Mature & 14-18. Excellent." DAR

+ + Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"Very good. Adults & young adults."

+ + Motion Pict Guide D '36

"It is an exceedingly interesting problem drama, directed and acted with sensitive appreciation of the different values. Miss Russell is very fine and is ably supported by a well-chosen cast. Adolescents, 12-16: mature and of little value; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R p4 O '36

"[It is] a strong portrayal of a selfish woman. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A: excellent; Y: mature but good; C: no interest."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"A strongly human and realistic story, tragic in its significance, but well balanced with humorous situations and with its suspense perfectly timed. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict p8 O 1 '36

"The film deals honestly with the play from which it was taken, and is so well done it makes excellent adult screen fare. Mature. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide S 26 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Rosalind Russell . . . made Harriet Craig a figure to remember, and showed herself an actress of distinction. . . The story moves to an inexorable climax that has a justice that is foreign to most movie presentation. The play was directed by Dorothy Arzner, Hollywood's first woman director and it is an achievement of note, a picture that should be near the head of any listing of the year's best pictures." Laura Elston

+ + Canadian M p37 N '36

"[It is] a finely interpreted movie version of George Kelly's 1926 Pulitzer Prize Play. Adults & young people."

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 O 31 '36

"Columbia has given in 'Craig's Wife' a dramatic gem of the social problem type, perhaps the best of those which conform to the notion that such problems worked out entirely in dialogue can be sold to the public at a profit. . . Dorothy Arzner gave it direction so brilliant that one wonders why her name has been absent so long from the screen, and all members of the cast give excellent performances. . . Still 'Craig's Wife' is not box-office. It is a photographed play, not a motion picture, and motion picture audiences will not be satisfied with it. . . But while 'Craig's Wife' will not please the many, it certainly will please the few discriminating ones who are willing to accept the stage as it is presented on motion picture screens."

Hollywood Spec p7 S 26 '36

"Dorothy Arzner has directed with intelligence but little warmth. Even Rosalind Russell as Harriet Craig is frigid and impersonal. Much better is John Boles as the husband." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p36 O 10 '36

"Shrewdly, Columbia cast Rosalind Russell in the rôle of Mrs. Craig. It not only gave her a welcome freedom from the type of rôles that had become almost habitual, but gave her a chance to prove a talent heretofore muffled by previous performances. John Boles's portrait of the first patient and then violent Craig neither adds to nor subtracts from his stature as a screen leading man. It is a routine job."

Lit Digest p28 O 10 '36

"The trouble is perhaps John Boles, who is too much the handsome dummy for us to care whether he asserts himself or not. But more likely it is Rosalind Russell, who as Craig's wife does a very attractive piece of acting in the wrong key. She permits us almost to love and pity her; nice emotions, but destructive of the main point, which should be that she deserves everything she gets." Mark Van Doren

— Nation p502 O 24 '36

CRAIG'S WIFE—Continued

"More or less credible morality play on the theme 'People who live to themselves are generally left to themselves.' Succeeds to a greater degree than 'Dodsworth' in getting down to basic causes, though none too well. Rosalind Russell performs title role with great credit. Film estimate: you're doing all right."

+ — New Theatre p34 N '36

"With Rosalind Russell giving a brilliantly sensitive portrayal of an unlovely woman, 'Craig's Wife' is a faithful and arresting screen transcription of George Kelly's celebrated play. . . Her performance reveals acting gifts that have been mostly latent in her earlier assignments. . . You should not go to the Music Hall expecting to find a diverting entertainment in 'Craig's Wife.' . . It does not always come through with clear-cut dramatic unity, but neither did the Kelly play. It is to the great credit of the producers that they have not distorted the grim context of the offering with saccharine amendments." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p17 O 2 '36

"It may be tempting the fates to say so, but we cannot resist noting that Hollywood appears to have found the magic stone for converting good plays into better pictures. . . Columbia has been able to do quite well with Mr. Kelly's drama of domestic infelicity. . . Rosalind Russell and John Boles have translated the whole into a thoroughly engrossing photoplay which has a point to make, keeps it constantly in view and drives it home viciously at the end." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p29 O 2 '36

"There's no lightness, practically no lightness, in the new 'Craig's Wife.' Perhaps it isn't necessary, for this is a good picture and tells its story well, but I do seem to remember that in George Kelly's original play there was a humor, sardonic and vicious though it was, that edged the whole performance. . . John Boles merely goes through the paces of the exploited husband. . . I fear that actually he doesn't make himself much more interesting than his wife's mantel ornaments. . . Miss Russell carries the film to a high point, gives it life, and certainly presents a thorough analysis of a species. The whole thing is distinctly interesting, sensible, and even stirring." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p90 O 10 '36

"The result is a superb picture likely to be listed among the ten best of the year. . . Miss Russell's fine characterization and the excellent portrayal by John Boles likewise reflect the woman director's skill. Columbia Pictures, which won the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award two years ago with 'It Happened One Night,' a comedy, has a good chance to repeat with a tragedy."

+ + News-Wk p27 S 26 '36

"Columbia has contributed a gem to the ocean of cinema offerings, an intelligent, tersely phrased drama that rates with any season's best. It's the rare type of film that is not forgotten at the theater's exit, that clings in the minds of spectators because of the luminous glow kindled by flawless craftsmanship. . . A woman's picture as to credits and I mean credits. Director Dorothy Arzner supplies cerebral, tip-flight megaphone work. . . A capital 'A' picture." Herb Sterne

+ + Script p12 S 26 '36

"With the exception of one or two examples of inept casting, this play has received intelligent screen treatment. . . It is only John Boles who disappoints with a wooden and uninspired version of the romantic husband whose eyes are opened to the calculating dishonesty of his wife. Will keep you dry on a rainy afternoon."

Stage p24 O '36

"The screen version exhibits to good advantage the talents of two ladies. Her brilliantly vitriolic portrayal as Mrs. Craig is likely to be a turning point for Actress Rosalind Russell, heretofore noted for her smooth handling of light comedy roles. The work of Dorothy Arzner, Hollywood's only woman director, is equally distinguished for giving pace without apparent effort to a picture that might, with less expert treatment, have seemed pedestrian."

+ Time p32 O 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Bitter, relentless, yet restrained, the story of a house that was too perfect to be a home—superbly enacted by Rosalind Russell as Craig's wife and aided by a quiet and sincere performance by John Boles as Craig. . . It is obviously aimed to attract women audiences and will be a strong money-earner because of the domestic angle. Adults."

+ Box Office p19 S 26 '36

"George Kelly's Pulitzer Prize play . . . emerges upon the sound-screen as a faithful translation of the original, its appeal necessarily to the adult audience, and particularly at least one section of the so-called feminine adult audience."

+ Film Daily p10 O 2 '36

"Drama that women should like, this has the benefit of good performances by hero Boles, heroine Russell. Estimate: well done."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 O 1 '36

"[It] is a forceful character study whose value is enhanced by markedly good performances, notably Rosalind Russell's, but its appeal will be limited. The finished product suggests support from a class element rather than the masses. It is more of a woman's than a man's dish and more for the adult than the adolescent. While the producers have sought to give pictorial body to a play that dealt largely in dialog in delivering its message, the failure to insert comedy relief and give greater strength to a subsidiary love interest deprives the subject of better entertainment and appeal chances. . . Miss Russell deserves stardom after her work in this one. She has no easy time as Craig's shrewish wife, but gives it all the bite the character contains, embittering everybody against herself in the most beautiful manner."

Variety p15 O 7 '36

CRIME OVER LONDON. Criterion-United artists 80min

Cast: Joseph Cawthorn, Basil Sydney, Margaret Grahame, Paul Cavanagh

Director: Alfred Zeisler

Dialogue film produced in England. When American gangsters find the going too tough in the States, they hie themselves to London where they are foiled by Scotland Yard after an ingenious attempt to steal the bonus checks of a large department store.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This complicated and involved story lacks the element of surprise, and is long drawn out in its development. The characters are types rather than individuals, and no very great demands are made on the capable cast. . . The direction is, on the whole, competent and workmanlike. The settings are mainly of the department store, and are as magnificent and lavish as the most exacting shopper could desire. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p169 O '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The story has all the ingredients for excitement and suspense, but is treated in such an episodic manner, with continuity spinning from one loose thread to another, that interest flags long before the close. . . Alfred Zeisler's direction is hampered by a script that defies the development of suspense, and his underlying flair for satiric treatment of melodramatic happenings gets submerged through a too hesitant handling of situation and development of character."

— Hollywood Reporter p11 N 23 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p15 N 4 '36

"Creditable attempt to do a gangster picture in England. . . Story won't stand close analysis, but should prove a class feature over here [England] and a superior programmer in America. . . Picture may not please the critics, but should serve its purpose."

+ Variety p14 N 11 '36

CRIMINAL LAWYER. RKO 70min

Cast: Lee Tracy, Margot Grahame, Eduardo Ciannelli, Erik Rhodes

Director: Christy Cabanne

"[Tracy] is a wisecracking trickster with a thirst for liquor and a bad legal record. But when he finds himself headed for the governorship he takes his job, though not his love affairs, seriously and finally sacrifices his career by an open-court confession of past perfidies to convict the criminal who has been his chief client." Hollywood Reporter

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] a synthetic combination of crime, criminals and the tricks by which they are saved from the law. . . The picture has little to recommend it except the performances of Tracy and one or two others in the cast. Its place is the duals, chiefly as support. The ingredients are over-familiar but Tracy's role and the way he plays it yield moments that are believable and effective."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 D 4 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 D 7 '36

"'Criminal Lawyer' will rank high among the B pictures in the current output and will be a welcome addition to any dualer. Built around a sophisticated theme, it still has enough honest love interest and comedy to make it interesting for all classes of patrons. . . Tracy's portrayal of the lawyer is an entertaining and convincing one. The same can be said for Miss Grahame. Eduardo Ciannelli is a very menacing heavy in the role of the gambler and his work in this picture should lead to more important parts. . . 'Criminal Lawyer' is a safe booking for any program."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 4 '36

LA CROISIÈRE JAUNE. See Yellow cruise

CROOKED TRAIL. Supreme 59min J1 25 '36

Cast: Johnny Mack Brown, Charles King, Lucille Brown

Director: S. Roy Luby

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 3 '36

"A, Y & C: good."

Parents' M p42 N '36

"Good entertainment of the hard riding, hard shooting type, with a novel plot and plenty of action. Family-juvenile."

+ Wkly Guide Ag 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Generally well made, this has Johnny Mack Brown as a personable, upright hero. Estimate: satisfactory."

+ Phila Exhibitor p53 N 15 '36

D

DANIEL BOONE. RKO 77min S 25 '36

Cast: George O'Brien, Heather Angel, John Carradine, Ralph Forbes

Director: David Howard

Music & lyrics: Jack Stern, Harry Tobias

Music directors: Hugo Riesenfeld, Arthur Kaye

The story tells of the exploits of Daniel Boone who organized a great wagon train to penetrate the Indian country of Kain-tu-kee.

A Photoplay Study Guide to Daniel Boone has been prepared by W. Paul Bowden. The Guide is obtainable from Educational and Recreation Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents a copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The movies have evidently discovered that a dash of historicity can elevate the ordinary Western thriller out of the juvenile class and give it more general appeal. In this melodramatic account of our foremost frontiersman are all the unblushing allurements of the serial picture plus the color and educational content of history. The result of this blending is respectable excitement. . . If you are impressed by elemental struggles in the great outdoors, this film is likely to keep you on the edge of your seat along with giving a vivid notion of the hardships met and overcome in the receding wilderness." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p18 O 17 '36

"A: perhaps; Y: good, but grim; C: doubtful."

Christian Century p1478 N 4 '36

"A good cast and splendid direction make this vividly real. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"[It] will have some interest and appeal for children. Not especially well cast, perhaps, and leaving the feeling that little has been done with a theme that offered great possibilities. Family. Exciting for young children." Calif Cong of Far & Teachers

"Beautiful scenery, excellent photography, a capable cast and thoughtful direction make this one of the better picture productions. Very good. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Fine photography. Harrowing for children. Mature & 14-18. Good." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"A family film, although exciting for young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Bravery, honesty and gratitude are exalted in this picture, which is free from drinking and objectionable 'sex' episodes. This production, with very good direction, casting and photography, is noteworthy and will inspire all with an appreciation of our heritage. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"As semi-historical melodrama it will interest the not-too-critical. Family-mature." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"Family-mature."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 7 '36

"Good. Family, except for sensitive children." + Motion Pict Guide D '36

"Careful research on the life of Boone and the customs of his time make this a film which should stimulate an interest in history and give a clearer understanding of the ambition, sacrifice and steadfast courage of those who came before us. Adolescents, 12-16: good except for the sensitive; children, 8-12: probably harrowing."

+ Motion Pict R p5 O '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

DANIEL BOONE—Continued

"Family."
Nat Council of Jewish Women O 7 '36

"The skillful maneuvering of fact and fiction results in a colorful episode of the era of frontiersmen. General patronage."
+ Nat Legion of Decency O 8 '36

"A & Y: good; C: good but exciting."
Parents' M p32 D '36

"Family."
Sel Motion Pict p9 N 1 '36

"Highly satisfactory entertainment. . . Suggested for schools and libraries. Family. Juvenile."
+ Wkly Guide S 26 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Colorful and relatively accurate historical Western about one of America's most famous pioneer scouts. Its outdoor heroics are directed chiefly to the younger generation and may be found a bit patent by their elders. Family."
+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 7 '36

"Hardly creditable to the admirable attention given by Hollywood of late to films of early America pioneering through the wilderness is this effort to retell some highlights in the life of one of America's greatest frontiersmen. . . Dramatic values are lost, although there is a stirring siege of the settlers' stockade and some excellent outdoor photography. It is more the melodramatic George O'Brien outdoor 'thriller' than a historical document." J. P. Cunningham

— + Commonweal p20 O 30 '36

"It is evident that George A. Hirliman's new Western release was made for the specific purpose of entertaining children. That it unquestionably will fulfill its mission, immediately stamps it as a successful picture. Were it to be judged in terms of pure cinema instead of purpose, this unfair measure would relegate 'Daniel Boone' into the trial-and-error category. . . 'Daniel Boone' though ribbed with flagrant cinematic errors, is nevertheless lusty, and provides clean and genuine entertainment for small-town consumption and for our great Kid Tradition: the Saturday Matinee. You may prefer a book, but by all means send the kiddies." Paul Jacobs

Hollywood Spec p12 S 26 '36

"Further evidence of Hollywood's knack of distorting historical characters into stock figures of blood-and-thunder fiction is presented in 'Daniel Boone.' . . Though the film is supposed to be a chapter from the trapper's life, it resembles a dozen others of a genre which languished when the screen started to talk." T. M. P.

N Y Times p23 O 24 '36

"The cinema and historical romance join hands hospitably in 'Daniel Boone,' which permits us to take an intimate peep at the violent life of the American wilderness away back in 1775. . . [The story] is related in a sometimes tepid, sometimes bloodcurdling but reasonably entertaining melodrama." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p13 O 26 '36

News-Wk p35 O 3 '36

"It turned out better [than 'Ramona'] partly because it is a relatively faithful adaptation of history, partly because Cinemactor O'Brien's chesty musculature fits perfectly the average conception of famed Long Hunter Boone, a middle-sized man who, wrote Audubon, 'appeared gigantic.'"

+ Time p28 O 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Stepping out of the Saturday-matinee Western class, George O'Brien carries with him a naturalness and buoyancy which makes Daniel Boone a living character in a film of consistent action and interest. Family."

+ Box Office p19 S 26 '36

"As an outdoor drama this picture is one of the best of that type, and with its Daniel Boone historical background it takes on an added importance that should make it desired by every exhibitor who can possibly play outdoor fare. George O'Brien, as Daniel Boone, is all that the character should be."
+ Film Daily p8 S 22 '36

"Loaded with high-power melodrama, with a historical background of America's harsh, exciting frontier days, this one would appear set to go places at the average boxoffice. For the deluxe houses it may not stand alone, but for the neighborhoods and subsequent run places, it's sure fire."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 S 18 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p2 S 19 '36

"Where these frontier dramas please, this should do very well. It's superior in technique, in action, in massacre, in stars who play their roles believably. O'Brien, particularly, makes a fine Daniel Boone. He should be an idol for the [children]."

+ Phila Exhibitor p35 O 1 '36

"Allegedly based on the life of Daniel Boone, frontiersman, this film loses all claim to authenticity or honesty of purpose by giving a once-over-lightly to the matter of the sated Virginians who robbed Boone's band of hearty pioneers as rapidly as the latter found and settled new ground. Producer preferred to point his attention instead towards a lot of phoney histrionics and make-believe hysterical Indian fighting. But maybe he was right. The first, honest way might have resulted in nothing more than another dull historical item; this way he has a good Indian picture to sell."

+ Variety p14 O 28 '36

"With the presentation of 'Daniel Boone,' George O'Brien says adieu to the type of Western in which he has so long been a favorite with certain audiences and in certain localities and goes into the more pretentious type of action dramas. . . There is a touch of realism in the wagon train sequences and in the Indian maneuvers. The sound recording by Hal Bumbaugh has been well handled under obviously difficult circumstances."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 18 '36

DEVIL IS A SISSY. MGM 92min S 18 '36

Cast: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney, Ian Hunter, Peggy Conklin

Director: W. S. Van Dyke

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Along with satisfying the expected audience demand for gripping entertainment, this film will prove important for its intelligent discussion of a really vital problem. . . The young players give appealing performances and [the] director, with theatrical good sense, has steered the plot away from heavy sermonizing. If the picture deals almost wholly with juvenile adventures, its interest is not exclusively for children. It is probably more important that responsible adults should see and learn something from it." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p600 S 26 '36

"A & Y: very good; C: doubtful."
Christian Century p1438 O 28 '36

"In spite of the over-loaded story the picture is good entertainment due to the understanding direction and excellent acting of all of the principals. Freddie Bartholomew is charming as the son. Family; tense for children. (The execution of Gig's father although shown only in its effect on his family is very tense.)"

Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The cast is a notably fine one, excellently directed, in a story which will have great popular appeal. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Fine portrayals of boy types by three of the screen's best juvenile actors. Family. Good." DAR

"This is primarily an absorbingly interesting film, very dramatic with good comedy relief. In addition, without being in the least 'preachy,' it demonstrates convincingly the value of sympathetic understanding in schools and juvenile courts for underprivileged boys. A worthwhile film with something for any type of audience. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This picture with its gripping lesson for children, is especially suitable for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
+ Fox W Coast Bul S 19 '36

"Most interesting and engrossing entertainment. Family-mature."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 8 '36

"Best of the month. Outstanding. Family."
+ + Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"[It is] an unusual, moving, and human story. The acting of the three boys is excellent. Freddie Bartholomew gives a striking performance. His efforts to win the approval of the gang, his elation and his success, and misery at his subsequent dismissal are naturally and vividly portrayed. The other boys support him admirably. . . Here is a story of everyday life which has humour, pathos, realism, and drama. Suitability: family." E. P.
+ Mo Film Bul p172 O '36

"The play moves swiftly and entertainingly by reason of excellent acting and skilful direction." S. M. Mullen
+ Motion Pict & Family p1 O 15 '36

"This startling human document deals with one of the most pressing of our social problems. . . The story reflects the point of view of real boys under modern metropolitan conditions and is an absorbingly interesting study of a phase of life which receives too little attention. It is artistic, unified and coherent. Adolescents, 12-16; harrowing but may depend upon the individual; children, 8-12: no."
+ Motion Pict R p5 O '36

"Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney are remarkably good, being human and natural. Freddie is rather painfully 'cheerio' at times, but that is part of what it's all about. But they are all astonishingly lacking in cuteness and other fictional characteristics of screen children. More like something Mark Twain would have written if he'd had New York streets for his setting. . . Altogether it is one of the best kid pictures that has been made, and [the director] is obviously responsible for a striking part of its excellence. Rated honorable mention." J. S. H.
+ + Nat Bd of R M p3 S '36

"Notably cast, understandingly directed and with an appealing story, this picture will prove interesting to audiences of all ages. . . A fine respect for the juvenile court is maintained and the influence of family relations is clearly demonstrated. Family."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 9 '36

"A, Y and C; excellent."
Parents' M p42 N '36

"Family."
Sel Motion Pict p3 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Efficient acting scarcely compensates for the cumbersome, anti-climactic story of 'The Devil Is a Sissy.' It is a down-to-the-pavement affair, which, when it appears to have gone its length, takes a new lease on its maudlin activities. Although W. S. Van Dyke's direction is painstaking, it is surprising that he should have undertaken the task, which could very well have been entrusted to a person far less expert." Mordaunt Hall

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 17 '36

"There is a good deal of hokum in the story but it has enough real humor and pathos to put it above the average." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p38 N '36

"Van Dyke has really produced a child picture which sticks to child values for at least three quarters of its playing time. . . The acting . . . is remarkable. Family."
+ Christian Science Monitor p17 O 31 '36

"This is a stirring moralization on the why and wherefore of young crime and an excellent narration on righteousness that might exert some form of influencing control at least over the developing embryo. . . The play is by no means strictly a juvenile performance." J. P. Cunningham
+ Commonweal p504 S 25 '36

"I am afraid when grownups read that the three leading parts are played by children, they will regard it as entertainment for little people only, the result being that they will deny themselves a cinematic treat. . . 'The Devil Is a Sissy' has inherent entertainment value sufficient to make it do better at the box-office than 'Romeo and Juliet.'
+ Hollywood Spec p9 S 26 '36

"This original movie yarn has an interesting sociological twist—but a lot of melodrama is tacked on the end, with the result that an intriguing story flops in its final reels. . . The story has an undercurrent of sharp social observation and it is shrewdly pointed—until it goes gangster for a climax." (3 stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p37 O 17 '36

"'The Devil Is a Sissy' is a straightforward, warm motion-picture describing the Americanization of a gently-bred, very British little boy. . . Amazingly captured by Director W. S. Van Dyke are the swift changes in boyish temperament. One moment the ill-assorted trio is shattered by a surge of fight spirit, the next the three are illuminated and made real by a flash of boyish understanding, comradeship. . . Freddie has never been more easy and natural in any of his films; it is possible this is his best."
+ Lit Digest p24 S 26 '36

"Head and shoulders above anything of its kind so far, the film [in its second half] begins to slide downhill on its need for ethics. . . If there was ever an image of the boy's life as boys live it, this is it. It has several good people, especially Mickey Rooney, Jackie Cooper, Gene Lockhart, and Freddie Bartholomew; but it is the more special work of Rowland Brown, who did the story and the best part of the direction. In spite of the structural faults already suggested, the picture in its good parts is as sweet and clear as Tom Sawyer's whistle, and I'll go bond that the exact like of it, nudging us so intimately with the thought that we were young once, has not been seen in any art or form." Otis Ferguson
+ New Repub p310 O 21 '36

"This is a sentimental film—wholeheartedly, deliberately, properly sentimental. . . There are many films foully, degradingly sentimental: this is not one of them—and that should be enough. Not that we enjoyed the missionary good-companionship of a New York magistrate straight-talking to a couple of tough urchins, man to man, in favour of their reform to respectable citizenship; but we saw his point and knew he was right. . . The gallant, semi-articulate attempts of the two hooligans (Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney) either to subdue or to express feeling, Ian Hunter's easy control of parental affection, and the perky, puffed-up imitation manhood of Freddie Bartholomew, made it frequently an excellent film. Easily the best of these performances was Master Rooney's: that needed no pinch of salt."
+ New Statesman & Nation p672 O 31 '36

DEVIL IS A SISSY—Continued

"The strangely terrible tragedies and exaltations of childhood have been compounded into a powerful and moving screen drama in 'The Devil Is a Sissy.' . . In the climax, with its mixture of Horatio Alger melodrama and moralizing, the mood is somewhat shattered, but the film remains one of the cinema's really fine studies of youth. Roland Brown has written a tale for it that is for the most part relentlessly honest; W. S. Van Dyke has staged it brilliantly and the acting is vividly compelling. . . It is, essentially, an illuminating research into the emotions of childhood that is so signally successful, in the main, that it becomes a distinguished and impressive photoplay." Howard Barnes

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p8 O 17 '36

"Oddly enough, three child stars prove much better than one, in this case, at any rate. 'The Devil Is a Sissy' is good screen fare for grown-ups, and there should be some way to show it to every child and parent in the metropolitan tenement districts. . . 'The Devil Is a Sissy' is a picture that should prove as entertaining to grown-ups as to children." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p15 O 17 '36

"'The Devil Is a Sissy,' having a soft-hearted plot at its core, is not as ruthless as the Kingsley play ['Dead End'] in its examination of gangster-breeding, but within its optimistic limits [it] contains a shrewd understanding and vivid portrait. . . Although the film slips off into familiar and lachrymal grooves toward its conclusion, it is fresh and crisp and natural most of the way, and it has been served extraordinarily well by its cast. . . The film has been directed by W. S. Van Dyke. . . That, in itself, should be assurance enough of a thoroughly entertaining picture." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p21 O 17 '36

"All and sundry are hereby informed that here is one of the most charming, touching and altogether delightful films of the autumn cinema season. To be sure, a large part of 'The Devil Is a Sissy' is pure and unadulterated hokum, another part is a moral to the effect that going straight and being honest is a tough job, and still another part is downright melodrama. But what a skilful mixture of these ingredients it is! Seldom have Hollywood maestros brewed such a palatable dish from such common garden variety staples." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p7a O 17 '36

"It is concerned, with the hoodlums on our streets, but in a more conventional big-story style than was 'Dead End,' and it hasn't the language, by any means, of that play. . . Adults are minor in this piece, but the young people carry the thing along with considerable ability under the tutelage of W. S. Van Dyke." John Mosher

New Yorker p79 O 24 '36

"Despite the plot hokum, the film has enough humor and pathos to pull it above average."

+ — News-Wk p28 S 26 '36

"Great heart interest plus natural comedy make this something for the entire family. Adults will notice that Woody Van Dyke's direction does a great deal to gloss over some of the clap-trap passages from the writing department. . . What should have been a sharp hail-storm of discerning comment becomes the slush of sentimentality through a 'fraidy-cat attitude which replaces truth with triteness. Or maybe censorship demands that everything be scanned through rose-colored glasses.'" Herb Sterne

+ Script p12 N 14 '36

"There is something enormously engaging in Master Bartholomew's crisp politeness against a background of slums and Public Schools. . . Those three fine young players, Freddie Bartholomew, Mickey Rooney, and Jackie Cooper, proceed to ignore the social implications and moral undertones of the plot, and make a picnic of acting together. It is a picnic everybody will enjoy."

+ Stage p24 O '36

"'The Devil is a Sissy' is a strange title for a valiant and moving little story about three boys on a Manhattan tenement street. . . The final scenes in which [Freddie] re-establishes himself are over-sentimental but not cluttered up enough to spoil the mood of an unusual picture."

+ Time p31 S 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: nice job throughout."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 S 15 '36

"[It] is surefire film entertainment for the family trade. Plenty of pathos for the sentimentalists among the parents, and strong object-lesson stuff for the juveniles, with a dash of gangsterism and general roughneckery, which, however, is well pointed up and neatly skirts the shoals of pulpsteering. . . Under Frank Davis' expert production, fortified by W. S. Van Dyke's sterling direction, it jells all the cross-sections into a surefire cinematic entertainment of above par proportions."

+ Variety p15 O 21 '36

DEVIL ON HORSEBACK. Grand national 67min S 15 '36

Cast: Lili Damita. Fred Keating. Del Campo

Director: Crane Wilbur

Filed in Hircolor. "The story shows how the 'damn best caballero in Mejico' kidnaps a prima donna he had admired on the screen and woos her in his mountain lair, despite the wishy-washy opposition of her American boyfriend. The girl never quite makes up her mind, and in the end goes back to the United States." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y & C: poor."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"While the plot is ancient and the songs a bit sour, this color production contains many beautiful scenes."

+ — News-Wk p30 O 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The new Hircolor process adds considerably to this musical melodrama of Latin America, the film lacking only a real box office name to make it suitable for first-runs everywhere. Action, romance and generous comedy also enliven an otherwise routine Western, but it is the gorgeous outdoor shots in soft greens, blues and orange that will bring in the most favorable word-of-mouth publicity. Family."

+ — Box Office p31 O 10 '36

"[It is] a musical melodrama with wide variety of ingredients aimed at popular appeal."

+ Film Daily p9 S 30 '36

"A well-meant attempt at colorful Mexican romance in brilliant color and songs, but it does not quite come off. It is largely reminiscent of 'The Dancing Pirate' but is far below that standard in color and casting. . . Strong box office names in the leads might have lifted the production into the B class, but Lili Damita is so badly miscast that the director's intention to capture her beauty of face and hair for the glory of Hircolor results in nothing more than a demonstration that her hair is titian and her face white. Keating has little to do but look wise and dispiritedly fill the part of a jealous lover."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 O 5 '36

— + Motion Pict Daily p6 S 30 '36

"This produces a Latin personality with a voice that registers fairly glamorously on the sound track, a dark physiognomy which may carry appeal to metropolitan neighborhood women. He is Del Campo. . . The color helps this picture greatly; for story, action and acting are wanting in conviction, competence. Estimate: for neighborhoods, first part of twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p36 O 15 '36

DIMPLES. 20th century-Fox 79min O 16 '36

Cast: Shirley Temple, Frank Morgan, Helen Westley, Robert Kent

Director: William A. Seiter

Music & lyrics: Jimmy McHugh, Ted Koehler

Music director: Louis Silvers

"The story is laid in the New York of 1850, when actors were social outcasts and the stage production of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' was the sensation of the year. Shirley is the granddaughter of Professor Eustace Appleby, a broken-down actor of the day who lives by his wits and is given to flamboyant speeches and petty larceny." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y & C: disappointing. Only fairly good." Christian Century p1510 N 11 '36

"Shirley is her own winsome self and very entertaining in her new songs and dances although the story is not one of her best. Family, Adults & 8-18: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Shirley Temple is excellent as Little Eva; but the finest characterizations are those of Helen Westley and Frank Morgan. Family, but mature for children. Good." DAR

"An absurd story, labored and far-fetched, which, despite elaborate settings, all but submerges the little star and a distinguished cast. The dubious ethics of this least attractive of the Shirley Temple vehicles make it suitable only for mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Wholesome in value in the main, it is negative in ethical contribution. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"It's a good deal of a story and a clever grouping of many kinds of types. Best, of course, are the new and very clever songs and clever tap dancing, in which we have enough of variation from her previous triumphs to keep entertainment values at their highest. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul O 10 '36

"While the film is built around the talented little star, the large well-chosen cast make worthy contributions, with Frank Morgan and Helen Westley outstanding."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 28 '36

"The picture has real charm, although the story is slight and serves chiefly as a vehicle to display the abilities of the starlet." S. M. Mullen

+ Motion Pict & Family p4 O 15 '36

"Good. Family."

+ Motion Pict Guide D '36

"Obviously it is impossible to make all pictures featuring Shirley Temple equally good, but this one is disappointing. The story is below par, and Shirley herself though expert as ever in singing and dancing, and enticing with her glowing personality, is not quite the charming unaffected child we have learned to love. . . Perhaps the picture would be more enjoyable if Shirley's followers had not been taught to expect better entertainment. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: passable."

— + Motion Pict R p5 O '36

"With its setting of old New York before the Civil War, some good atmospheric background and the remarkable charm and talent of the delectable little star, this improbable story is never for one moment real or convincing. Family & junior matinees."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '36

"Splendid opportunities are given to present the talents of the child star. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A, Y & C: excellent."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p4 N 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide O 17 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The story . . . shows up the immense versatility of Shirley. . . If some of her many emotional scenes seem a little forced, she more than makes up for them by her dancing, which is crisp, competent and assured." M. E. P.

Boston Transcript p7 O 17 '36

"Family."

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 17 '36

"I would advise your seeing [Shirley's] previous picture again. I can not recall its story, but I am sure it can not be as poor as the new one. . . I venture the opinion that Darryl is not doing right by our Shirley, that he is failing to develop her full value as one of his company's assets. He persists in presenting her as an entertaining child carrying the full weight of her pictures by revealing each time her full bag of tricks. The fact that she is an accomplished actress, not merely a hoover and singer, does not seem to have occurred to Shirley's producer. . . She does everything well enough to make one impatient to see her in something more worthy of her talents."

+ — Hollywood Spec p19 O 10 '36

"There are a lot of prominent players in the background of the Temple antics, but what chance is there for them? Even my favorite exponent of dramatic indolence, the dusky Step-in Fetchit, is buried beneath the Temple supercuteness. If your weakness is Shirley Temple, here's your evening's entertainment." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p36 N 7 '36

"Acting has been wisely substituted for antics throughout most of the new Shirley Temple photoplay. . . After a series of vehicles in which the favorite child of our day was rapidly becoming a rather dreadful pint-size version of a night-club entertainer she gets the chance again to display her genuine and remarkable artistry. With excellent assistance from Frank Morgan, Helen Westley and her other supporting players, she achieves an appealing and entertaining characterization in a pleasant screen drama." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 O 10 '36

"Shirley put on a good show for her fans, rewarding their enthusiasm with her usual extraordinary exhibition of personality and talent. She sang, even more often than usual, introducing a song or two that will probably haunt the radios for a while. She danced, tapping through modern routines in pre-civil war settings. . . The plot, reduced to terms so simple that not the youngest of Shirley's fans can miss the point, is enough, and no more, to carry the songs, dances and Temple personality. The cast, however, is a good deal more than that." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p11 O 10 '36

"Dimples' is not the best Temple, nor the worst. The tiny Duse, or the Duse in small doses, executes a few clever tap routines in the Bill Robinson manner early in the film and is cute—the very word—in the petticoats, button shoes and pantalettes of the Fifties. But her Little Eva performance is shameless bathos, and so is the love song she sings with her arms twined about the suffering neck of Mr. Morgan." F. S. Nugent

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

DIMPLES—Continued

+ — N Y Times p21 O 10 '36

"That amazingly incredible youngster, Shirley Temple, is up to her old tricks again of disarming young and old with her winning personality and remarkable talent and so all who adore this unbelievable youngster (and who doesn't?) had better rush right over to the Roxy and see 'Dimples,' in which Miss Temple is at her best. . . Miss Temple has a grand time singing, dancing, making wisecracks, weeping, keeping her grandfather out of trouble and patching up a lovers' quarrel. So grand a time, indeed, that it becomes infectious, and you enjoy it almost as much as she does. Frank Morgan does a perfectly swell job—as, indeed, he always does—as the light-fingered Professor, Miss Westley is superb as Mrs. Allen, and the young lovers are played well enough by Miss Byron and Mr. Kent." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p6a O 10 '36

"Not, probably, her greatest work, yet up to her standard, and rich with interpretative values and undercurrents, 'Dimples' must delight the great following of the artist. . . Obviously this is a film you can't afford to miss." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p95 O 17 '36

"Another reason for hosannas from the Shirley Temple worshippers. This time the little girl gets big helping hands from Frank Morgan and Helen Westley."

News-Wk p29 O 17 '36

"The boys who write Shirley Temple stories have a tough job to find anything new. . . Usually Shirley is all-sufficient for any picture, but this time she has grand competition—or rather help—in Frank Morgan and Helen Westley. . . Nunnally Johnson has another feather for his producer's cap." Rob Wagner

+ Script p10 O 31 '36

"Cinemactress Temple's public, still bigger than that of any adult cinemactress, should be delighted by this pre-Civil War period piece directed by William Seiter."

+ Time p64 O 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picture could be reviewed in two words—Shirley Temple. That's all that showmen need know about it, except that it brings the same high percentage of entertainment, popularity and revenue-grabbing possibilities that have featured all of the recent Temple pictures. Family."

+ Box Office p27 O 3 '36

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 O 31 '36

"Shirley Temple's new vehicle has all the ingredients that make for a box-office natural. Her dances, as staged by Bill Robinson, highlight the picture. There are a number of them; they are clever, neat, and catchy, with that distinctive Temple touch, and they are well spotted. . . In this picture, Shirley shows a greater assurance in her acting and in her lines and she still retains all her childish charm."

+ Film Daily p7 S 26 '36

"Another topnotch Shirley Temple vehicle that will be sure-fire with everyone everywhere, which means a box office landslide from top to bottom. The amazing child duplicates all her best features of previous pictures and adds a new one or two in a neatly tailored story based on a happily conceived idea. . . The direction of William A. Seiter does extremely well by the story and keeps Shirley at her most natural best, capturing also something of a Dickens flavor throughout, an effect that is aided by the admirable period sets."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 23 '36

"With several songs, excellent dancing, this will do good Temple business, which means plenty. Estimate: top Temple."

+ Phila Exhibitor p37 O 15 '36

"Exhibitors have no need to worry about this one. It should easily match the grosses of the recent line of Shirley Temple releases, but it won't be due to the fact that 'Dimples' is solid, expertly fashioned entertainment. It's anything but that. All that the production does is closely follow the pattern set from 'way back, for the youngster, missing not a single trick, whether it comes to jerking tears, dancing, singing or bringing true love together."

+ Variety p15 O 14 '36

"Filled with proved and established entertainment for the vast Shirley Temple audience, 'Dimples' again hits the sure box-office sock formula. . . In song and dance the Temple trouper shows definite progress, especially in the tap routines staged by Bill Robinson. She does new intricacies with a precision and verve which will delight those to whom this phase of the youngster's gifts seems most promising. . . Picture gives Miss Temple spotlight most of the way, but supporting roles are not so subordinated as in some previous offerings."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 23 '36

DODSWORTH. Goldwyn-United artists 90min S 18 '36

Cast: Walter Huston. Ruth Chatterton. Paul Lukas. Mary Astor. David Niven

Director: William Wyler

Based on the novel of the same title by Sinclair Lewis and the play by Sidney Howard. "Dodsworth [is] a rugged American whose business has been his life and who is unspoiled by success. Married for twenty years, he has a grown daughter and a wife whose obsession is a dread of middle age and a longing for social adventure before it is too late." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: excellent; Y and C: entirely too mature." Christian Century p1478 N 4 '36

"Excellent. Mature & 14-18." DAR

+ + Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"[It is] a worthy interpretation of Sinclair Lewis' notable story. . . A handsomely mounted picture, understandingly directed, which will appeal to adult audiences. Adults: worthwhile; 14-18: mature; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature & 14-18." DAR

"An excellent and engrossing rendering of Sinclair Lewis' significant story—one of those pictures that affects one like a cross section of actual people living today and grips one because it shows not only the outer events of their lives but the changes that go on inside. Mature." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul O 10 '36

"'Dodsworth,' the pinnacle of distinguished screen entertainment, is a most admirable adaptation of the Sinclair Lewis novel. A truly great picture."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 28 '36

"Here is a story of real people, shown as they really are. The irony of the original has not been lost, and is pointed by clever and witty dialogue. The film has been very well cast, and is brilliantly acted. Walter Huston is wholly admirable. . . The direction is very skillful and sensitive, and helps to give dignity and charm to a film of quite unusual quality and interest. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p172 O '36

Reviewed by H. M. Le Sourd
Motion Pict & Family p6 N 15 '36

"Excellent. Adults & young adults."
+ + Motion Pict Guide D '36

"Sometimes stage plays are translated into the medium of the cinema so successfully that they lose none of the glamour of the more personal stage contact with the players. This seems especially true of 'Dodsworth.' Too bitter and sardonic in theme for youthful appreciation, it should have special interest for mature audiences because of the splendid adaptation and high production values. Adolescents, 12-16: too mature; children, 8-12: no interest."

+ Motion Pict R p5 O '36

"This outstanding drama with its universal appeal, fine cast, expert direction and tense, absorbing story proves an excellent version of the well known stage play. Family."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women O 7 '36

"Objection: divorce is the solution of the plot. This classification has been made strictly on the basis of moral values contained in the film. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A: excellent; Y: too mature; C: no interest."
Parents' M p32 D '36

"Mr. Howard's sure dramatic touch, combined with an excellent cast and a universal problem, have resulted in a good movie. . . Mary Astor, Paul Lukas, the Bay of Naples, Mt. Vesuvius, the fountains in the Place de la Concorde in Paris—everybody and everything in the entire piece does a good job. But better than all the rest is Walter Huston as Sam Dodsworth, looking as if he had been born into the part." Ernestine Taggard

+ Scholastic p17 N 21 '36

"The dialogue, sophisticated, clever and witty, deserves special mention. One of the season's exceptional films. Adults & young people."

+ + Sel Motion Pict p9 O 1 '36

"A fine study of two types of Americans splendidly acted and impeccably produced. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide S 26 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Samuel Goldwyn has rung the bell. . . No more natural or likeable character than Samuel Dodsworth, as impersonated by Walter Huston, has been seen in a film. . . This production is sure to send Hollywood stock up in the estimation of many. . . It is impossible to say too much in praise of this contribution, for it is so free from the slightest nonsensicality." Mordaunt Hall

+ + Boston Transcript p4 O 10 '36

"It certainly does stand out among the ruck of everyday movies, as a drama of quality and sincere feeling. It is real, where so much that comes to the screen touches reality not at all. . . Ruth Chatterton, as Fran Dodsworth, the first satisfactory role she has had in a considerable period of time, makes the most of it. If her playing has a fault it is the pitiless stressing of her character's cheap and easy selfishness. . . 'Dodsworth' is obviously not a play for children and that not for any reason but that the issues would not be clear to adolescent minds, but for those beyond that category it should prove a wholly satisfactory evening." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p36 N '36

"This is a film transcription of more than passing interest. . . although some of the suspense of the play has been lost through the film technique of parallel sequences. Adults." Christian Science Monitor p15 O 17 '36

"[It] gives as excellent an account of itself in film form as it did when it first captured a vast audience as a best-selling novel, and then as a play that ran for almost two years on the Broadway stage. If anything, the motion picture gains over the stage production in photographic display of color, richness and variety from the novel's European setting." J. P. Cunningham

+ + Commonweal p532 O 2 '36

"To Samuel Goldwyn and Merritt Hulburt must go credit for one of the season's greatest pictures. Sam paid $160,000 for the rights to the story. To justify the investment a great picture had to be made from it, and Sam saw that such a picture was made."

+ + Hollywood Spec p8 S 26 '36

"Samuel Goldwyn's tasteful, conscientious production of Mr. Lewis's novel catches all the pathetic trivialities of Fran Dodsworth's mad efforts to taste life, and all the bitterness of Sam Dodsworth's disillusionments. Walter Huston plays Sam simply and humanly. . . Ruth Chatterton contributes one of the best performances of her career. Mary Astor has never been better in pictures than as the other woman. . . William Wyler's direction is both restrained and admirable." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 O 31 '36

"'Dodsworth' [is] a film which uses the best of the novel, the shape of the play and emerges as a winning production."

+ Lit Digest p20 O 3 '36

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation p502 O 24 '36

"If Mary Astor had done nothing else she could call herself an actress for her look of radiant bliss in the last thirty feet of this film. [It is] a look that sends this audience into the street as happy as Mr. Huston. . . Miss Chatterton . . . plays an unsympathetic part with great spirit, but it is Mr. Huston's rusticated figure that builds the success. There are dull moments—but none when he is visible. . . Altogether it is a most happy configuration."

+ New Statesman & Nation p672 O 31 '36

"Strength lies definitely on the side of the performances—Huston as Sam Dodsworth, Ruth Chatterton as Fran, Ouspenskaya contributing an outstanding characterization as the Baroness Von Obersdorf. The Howard-Lewis play is to our mind pretty small potatoes. Film estimate: you're doing all right."

New Theatre p34 N '36

"In its screen reincarnation 'Dodsworth' is a handsome, provocative and sometimes emotionally compelling photoplay. . . At the risk of seeming to cavil, it must be added that the film, for all its striking virtues, is a yes-and-no offering. . . There is a diffusion of interest in episodic events. Mr. Huston is as gravely intense, vibrant and endearing as he was behind footlights, but Ruth Chatterton fails rather badly in realizing the universal feminine implications of Mrs. Dodsworth. . . The chief difficulty with Miss Chatterton's portrayal is that she makes the hero's wife so completely contemptible that her hold over him, even after infidelities with an international financier in Biarritz, appears ridiculous. . . For the most part Mr. Wyler has brought the Howard scenario to the screen with pace and distinction, linking the fragments together neatly as the action shuttles back and forth across two continents. . . 'Dodsworth,' on the whole, is an excellent screen entertainment, which falters because its brilliance is neither evenly distributed nor sustained." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p19 S 24 '36

"Hollywood can once again be proud. 'Dodsworth,' the film, is, if anything, just a shade better than 'Dodsworth,' the play; and it was a grand play. It's a fine picture, distinguished by acting and direction as much as by Sidney Howard's intelligent, resourceful adaptation of his own work. . . 'Dodsworth' is still another of this season's films on the must list." Eileen Creelman

+ + N Y Sun p20 S 24 '36

"Mr. Howard, who must be considered Mr. Lewis's personal dramatic translator, has adapted his play to the screen with the seriousness of an author who has studied his work long. . . Mr. Goldwyn has had the wisdom to accept his judgment; William Wyler, the director, has had the skill to execute it in cinematic terms, and a gifted cast has been able to bring the whole alive to our complete satisfaction. . . [It is] a work which already has attained something of the stature of an American classic. The film version has done more than justice to Mr. Howard's play, converting a necessarily episodic tale, interrupted by fourteen curtains, into a smooth-flowing narrative of sustained interest, well-defined performance and good talk." F. S. Nugent

DODSWORTH—Continued

+ + N Y Times p29 S 24 '36

"Here is a brilliantly acted, thoroughly absorbing film of the first order. I could, I suspect, tell you at length of the film's excellent acting by Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton and Mary Astor, of the superior screen translation Sidney Howard has made, of the fine direction by William Wyler and the quite magnificent production Mr. Goldwyn has given it. But why waste words. Instead I shall simply advise you to see it at once and enjoy its many virtues to the full." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p23 S 24 '36

"It would have been an inexcusable accident had Walter Huston's 'Dodsworth' not been fine. But there hasn't been any accident, and the Huston 'Dodsworth' should please people who saw the play and people who didn't. . . Paul Lukas and Odette Myrtil have worked together to give us the Lewis story and the Lewis idea. Apparently, Miss Chatterton alone had opinions of her own. I feel that Miss Chatterton has looked upon things and seen them in a different light. . . The result is confusing again and again. . . With everybody else working definitely to present Sinclair Lewis's idea, Miss Chatterton has managed to blur only occasional scenes with her majestic performance, and the whole survives, really, more as Sinclair Lewis's conception than as Ruth Chatterton's." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p77 O 3 '36

"Crowded houses last week proved that Miss Chatterton is cast in a hit and that Miss Astor still has plenty of supporters. Both actresses register their best performances of recent years. . . Well directed by William Wyler, 'Dodsworth' is a film to break a date for—and its ending will leave most date breakers grimly content."

+ + News-Wk p34 O 3 '36

"Will Wyler's direction is nothing less than superb. Not one 'movie' cliché or 'sure-fire' gag. Such naturalness has rarely been seen on the screen." Rob Wagner

+ Script p10 O 3 '36

"'Dodsworth' is a very well-made and well-acted film, with an essentially trivial subject. . . Mr. Walter Huston is admirable as the devoted and uncultured husband. . . Like 'These Three,' another realistic film produced by Mr. Goldwyn, 'Dodsworth' is a little marred by almost incessant music, a relic of the small orchestras which used to accompany silent films. . . No one, I think, will fail to enjoy 'Dodsworth,' in spite of its too limited and personal plot, the sense it leaves behind of a very expensive, very contemporary, Bond Street vacuum flask. Naturalness is so rare on the screen that it is difficult not to over-praise any picture which possesses it, but more than naturalness is needed for deep enjoyment."

Graham Greene

+ Spec p808 N 6 '36

"That terrifically engrossing study of a retired tycoon and his first pleasure trip has at last reached the screen, where we are inclined to believe it should have been all the time. . . When a perfectly satisfying drama finds means of improvement, we don't know the word for it, except 'Dodsworth.' . . This, we think, is excellent 'Dodsworth.'"

+ + Stage p14 N '36

"[It is] directed with a proper understanding of its values by William Wyler, splendidly cast and brilliantly played."

+ Time p31 S 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A superlatively fine picture. Flawless in every department, this Samuel Goldwyn production will be a smash hit from Broadway to Main Street. Adults."

+ Box Office p19 S 26 '36

"The picture is decidedly one for a mature audience, and not for children. The picture is not offensive in any way, but would have no appeal for the juvenile mind. Already established as a box-office champion in the big cities, it should draw equally well in small towns. This picture is Box-Office."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p8 O 17 '36

"Here is a Class A picture that should do excellent business at every box-office. It has ingredients that will appeal to all types of audiences and ranks with the best of the Samuel Goldwyn offerings. The picture follows the play faithfully and the screenplay is by Sidney Howard, who dramatized Sinclair Lewis' famous novel."

+ Film Daily p3 S 19 '36

"Samuel Goldwyn triumphs with this superlative production of Sinclair Lewis' noteworthy best-seller as translated to the stage and thence to the screen by Sidney Howard. A distinguished aggregation of talent contributes to making this penetrating study of late married life a vivid dramatic document. It will win the unstinted plaudits of a very wide audience and, with the names of the author, the book, the play, the dramatist and the players, it can be counted on for big box-office returns, especially in class houses."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 16 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 S 17 '36

"Literate drawing room drama enlivened by nice settings, excellent action, this is best for the older folks, class trade, but a production that will find approval everywhere. Estimate: well done throughout."

+ Phila Exhibitor p38 O 1 '36

"'Dodsworth' is a superb motion picture which yields artistic quality and box office in one elegantly put together package. It rates maximum enthusiasm. It is one of the best pictures of this or any year and a golden borealis over the producer's name. Word-of-mouth should be terrific and for that reason exhibitors might well single it out for special babying."

+ + Variety p17 S 30 '36

"[It] seems certain to gross handsomely from the keys down to the subsequents on the strength of its many entertainment elements plus marquee allure. For several of the players it spells new tops. Walter Huston is 'Dodsworth' to the core. . . Ruth Chatterton adds new laurels to her list of screenings. To many, including this reviewer, this will seem her best performance. . . Mary Astor contributes a performance so vivid and appealing and of such fine artistic merit that she seems now to be just coming into full screen maturity."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 16 '36

DON'T TURN 'EM LOOSE. RKO 66min Ag 28 '36

Cast: Lewis Stone. James Gleason. Bruce Cabot. Louise Latimer. Betty Grable

Director: Ben Stollhoff

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: waste of time; Y & C: no."
Christian Century p1438 O 28 '36

"The result is a gruesome film made all the more harrowing by Bruce Cabot's realistic performance as Ruthless Killer No. 1, whom nothing can and nobody seems to wish to stop. Suitability: adults."

Mo Film Bul p150 S 30 '36

"Fair. Adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"Since the question of parole is a timely and vital issue, it is a pity that the story was not made more plausible. . . The melodrama becomes almost farcical. Good acting on the part of the leading characters barely redeems it. Although in the end the wages of sin is death, a discriminating audience will find the play more dramatic than convincing. Adolescents, 12-16: exciting and too melodramatic; children, 8-12: far too lurid."

— Motion Pict R S '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M S '36

"A and Y: more dramatic than convincing; C: too tense."

Parents' M p42 N '36

"A tense drama, vividly acted, which holds the attention and presents a needed and down-right message without mincing matters. Mature."

+ Sel Motion Pict p4 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"As a grim, occasionally humorous treatment of gangsters and gunfire, this comes as a speedily told and smartly enacted bit of rough-house." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p51 O 3 '36

"'Don't Turn 'Em Loose' has warrant for being as an editorial against the lax and sentimentalized activities of parole boards in general, and as such is valid and authentic stuff. It is also exciting melodrama. If one considers it as an essay in creative characterization and construction it is something else again. . . Just what it may be that makes Mr. Cabot attractive to the cash customers of the world's cinema theaters is, unhappily, lost upon this chronicler of dramatic fatuities. What he knows about acting would be scant credit to the Third Citizen of Verona in an amateur charity performance of 'Romeo,' and his personal beauty can scarcely launch ships or fire topless towers. . . 'Don't Turn 'Em Loose' is farish run-of-the-mine melodrama."

Lucius Beebe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p19 S 24 '36

"It is the parole system which the picture pretends to have under scrutiny, and if you believe there actually is an underlying social purpose behind its excitements then you should be of a mind today to toss all parole boards before a grand jury. . . Mr. Cabot's performance is properly icy; Lewis Stone as the father is a dignified and relentless instrument of the gods. . . For the record, it may be listed as a fast-moving, easily told piece of crime fiction, but it leaves the parole system, as such, pretty much as it found it." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p20 S 25 '36

"A bargain in horror films, 'Don't Turn 'Em Loose' not only permits you to ponder over the ills of the parole system and study a psychopathic case, but also wallow in thrills that will keep you on tenterhooks from beginning to end." William Boehnel

N Y World-Telegram p24 S 25 '36

"[It is] a slight dissertation, with plenty of gunfire, on the parole problem." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p77 O 3 '36

News-Wk p35 O 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Strong gangster picture hitting parole system carries suspense and punch for action fans."

+ Film Daily p11 S 24 '36

"'Don't Turn 'Em Loose' will probably prove disappointing at the box office. . . Stone turns in an even performance. At times Cabot lays on the menace a bit too heavily."

— Variety p17 S 30 '36

DRAEGERMAN COURAGE. Warner-First national 60min O 24 '36

Cast: Jean Muir, Barton MacLane, Henry O'Neill, Robert Barrat, Addison Richards

Director: Louis King

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Commendably restrained direction keeps all shots free of the hysterical horror which might easily have marred the entertainment value of this excellently photographed and properly focused story. Adolescents, 12-16: very tense and harrowing; children, 8-12: no, too much realism, story unsuitable."

+ Motion Pict R p4 S '36

"A and Y: realistic and good; C: too tense."

Parents' M p42 N '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict p4 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Laura Elston
Canadian M p40 D '36

"[It is] played in a clipped, terse manner, and builds to a taut degree of suspense. . . Though the ultimate outcome of the story is seldom in doubt, there is about the whole story a swift undercurrent of danger that gives the picture a gruesomely fascinating air." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p51 O 3 '36

DUSTY ERMINE. Twickenham 75min

Cast: Ronald Squire, Jane Baxter, Arthur Macrae, Anthony Bushell

Director: Bernard Vorhaus

Based on the play of the same title by Neil Grant. Filmed in England. "Plot concerns the return from prison of a skilful forger into the home of his brother, a noted, but briefless, High Court barrister. Young nephew of the ex-convict inherits his talent and joins an international gang in the Alps. Uncle scents the trail and, unwilling that the boy shall follow in his footsteps, tries to save him. When cornered, he takes the blame upon himself and returns to jail." (Variety)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The director has imposed a good rhythm both of mood and of tempo. Altogether, this film is good material well handled. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p147 S 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An amusingly contrived crook thriller, delightfully staged in the Austrian Alps. Handled with originality and a sense of characterization, the production puts across the haziest of incidents with verve and a bid for realism."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 26 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 S 22 '36

E

EAST MEETS WEST. Gaumont British 72min
S 1 '36

Cast: George Arliss. Lucie Mannheim.
Godfrey Tearle. Romney Brent

Director: Herbert Mason

Dialogue film made in England. "Arliss plays the sultan of a small oriental country which has a harbor coveted by both England and Japan. The wily potentate realizes this and plays one against the other with such cunning that he secures a treaty with both countries, plus a sum of money from both, and with both concluding it was an excellent deal for their respective governments." (Variety)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Characterization now offered by Arliss recalls the wily Oriental he created in 'The Green Goddess' just clearly enough for one to make unfavorable comparisons. . . Romney Brent, Lucy Mannheim, and Godfrey Tearle assist Mr. Arliss in making the creaky intrigue credible, but for the public at large it will remain merely another finely etched portrait in that actor's varied gallery. The story has a distinctly adult flavor."

+ — America p120 N 7 '36

"Mediocre. Mature & 14-18." DAR

"Small scale pageantry is introduced to color a shabby story of the romantic variety. The characters are over-dramatized and weakly portrayed, with the exception of the polished work of George Arliss. . . The story lacks novelty and the direction is weakly handled. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee
Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"In this colorful, English-made picture of intrigue, George Arliss excellently portrays a clever Sultan of the far East. . . The plot is slight, but the direction and cast are good. Exciting. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A pretentious melodrama centered about an unpleasant triangle story which a large cast and exotic settings fail to make other than labored and unreal. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women
Fox W Coast Bul O 10 '36

"This British made picture, featuring George Arliss, fails to give this fine actor opportunity to demonstrate his dramatic ability and for that reason will disappoint many, tho it is well photographed and pretentiously produced. Family."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 28 '36

"This is not one of George Arliss' better vehicles. . . The unsavory marital relations of an English scoundrel and his wife are a prominent part of the plot, and smuggling of liquor to the natives brings about the unpleasant and unconvincing denouement. Adolescents, 12-16: not recommended; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R p6 N '36

"An ideal vehicle for George Arliss. Adults."
+ Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A & Y: colorful oriental drama; C: little interest."
Parents' M p32 D '36

"Colorful and full of movement, with Arliss in the crafty sort of part he does so well. The cast is good. Family."

+ Wkly Guide S 26 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Laura Elston
Canadian M p37 N '36

"[It is a] slight but pleasantly ornate pageant picture. . . Written, directed, and acted with care. Adults & young people."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 28 '36

"The results sadly lack success, chiefly because of shabby story, over-dramatization and unpolished direction. We doubt if even Mr. Arliss was deeply impressed as he set about to express his rare talents in the portrayal of the suave, oriental potentate." J. P. Cunningham

— Commonweal p104 N 20 '36

"This British made picture offers an interesting study for members of motion picture appreciation classes. It defies every cinematic law, rule, practice—whatever you wish to call it. It does not reflect knowledge by its producers of the first principles of screen entertainment. Yet it is honestly and ambitiously made, well directed, photographed acceptably and acted in a thoroughly satisfactory manner. . . As a motion picture it merely is an enlightening demonstration of what not to do on the screen."

— — Hollywood Spec p15 O 10 '36

"Mr. Arliss gives a misleading vitality to the plot's mechanical motivations, for he makes the rajah an inscrutable, shrewd student of Western weaknesses. . . The rest of the acting is just passable. But who cares? There's Mr. Arliss." (2 stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p44 O 31 '36

Manchester Guardian p13 D 1 '36

"[Arliss] misses no chance to be pompous, flawlessly finished, and not a little boring, though for his fans his mannered performance and familiarly impressive presence may be a treat. It is his misfortune that he has been supplied here with a wheezy vehicle which does not seem altogether sensible, or at any rate very important, as it unravels its tangled skeins across the screen. . . The direction, despite efforts to be fascinating, results too often in yawns, not because of lethargy, as happens in English pictures betimes, for it is frantically active, but rather because of a dull conception of what constitutes entertainment." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p14 O 31 '36

"What remains to be discussed is whether it was worth Gaumont British's while, after all, to record on film the absurd hodgepodge of love triangles, rum-running, diplomatic intrigue and mob hysteria. . . Had the producers achieved, in telling their story, some of the imperial sweep of 'Lives of a Bengal Lancer,' the answer might be in the affirmative, but 'East Meets West' seems to be a parochial affair, centering about a river of the size of the Gowanau Canal. . . A sizable cast plays the thing rather badly, for the most part, with a deal of posturing and salaaming and far too much bandying of diplomatic obliquities." J. T. M.

— N Y Times p24 O 31 '36

"'East Meets West' is a minor Arliss affair. . . He is overwhelmingly polite throughout, and, in fact, the film is a little weighed down with those Eastern ceremonials. There isn't much to be weighed down, either." John Mosher

— New Yorker p90 N 7 '36

"George Arliss goes back to his favorite role—the smirking diplomat. . . Arliss makes the best of a shoddy story. His supporting cast is weak in the knees."

— + News-Wk p28 S 26 '36

"Mr. George Arliss again appears as host of a fancy-dress party and does his standard performance of the wily Disraeli, this time in turban and oriental robes. . . Eagerly attempting to repeat the success achieved by William Archer's 'Green Goddess,' the current excursion into the hoko-political machinations of an eastern potentate lacks the raw melodrama and vivid spleen of the earlier piece. . . Lucie Mannheim explodes the theory that all European-trained actresses are expert technicians and amply discloses that ill-treated wives, east of Suez, suffer not so much from hubby's wickedness as from St. Vitus' dance of the eyebrows." Herb Sterne

— + Script p10 O 10 '36

"[The] plot is more complicated than credible. There is a lot about treaties and rum-running in the Moslem countries and aphoristic Englishmen. You've seen it all before."

Stage p14 N '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Returning to familiar ground, George Arliss gives us one of the Oriental characterizations at which he excels in a super-thriller filled with color, drama and suspense. The brilliant actor's portrayal of a wily Oriental rajah is here matched by another from Romney Brent whose performance is also suavely effective. Family."

Box Office p27 O 3 '36

"Playing his part with tongue-in-cheek, George Arliss seems to be getting a lot of fun out of this extravagant extravaganza of the East, for even in the most heart-breaking scenes, the smug smirk never leaves his oily countenance. Off-hand, we would say this production will prove great fun for the kiddies, but it is hardly to be taken seriously as enlightened fare for grown-ups. . . We enjoyed it as much as did George Arliss, who has a fine sense of humor. Anyone with a sense of humor will get a great kick out of it."

Film Daily p3 S 19 '36

"Plot, though extremely slight, is handled with pace and a subtle sense of climax. Arliss holds again the role of prime mover in a game of diplomatic chess, a fresh slant being the clash of racial prejudices between blacks and whites. . . The story development strains rather unnecessarily on credulity at times, but redeems itself in a swiftly handled climax."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p5 S 5 '36

"GB has spent many dollars on the show with melodramatic mob scenes. What the show will do, however, depends totally on the Arliss draw. Production, British in aspect, is generally of a fair level, but Arliss is the main selling angle. Estimate: depends on Arliss."

Phila Exhibitor p35 O 1 '36

"George Arliss is all this one has to offer for the American market, and it's doubtful that even Arliss can accomplish much in its behalf. The star carries a role similar to his rajah in 'The Green Goddess,' but the resemblance ends with the costume department's contribution. Story is melodramatic in old time manner and shot through with deep political intrigue whose significance may be clear in England, but is lost over here. . . There are several mob scenes, and the picture is first rate in the production way. But that doesn't get it to first base."

— + Variety p18 N 4 '36

EASY TO TAKE. Paramount 65min N 6 '36

Cast: Marsha Hunt, John Howard, Eugene Pallette, Richard Carle, Douglas Scott

Director: Glenn Tryon

"John Howard, a radio advisor to boys, is made guardian to the supposedly wealthy Douglas Scott, a spoiled brat of eleven. From the publicity that hits the papers, the boy's sister believes John is a fortune hunter and publicity hound. Instead of the girl and her family being so rich, they are actually broke and John is supporting them." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Intimate views of a broadcasting station in action, amusing situations and wholesome comedy make this good family entertainment. Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"About the only entertainment value in this production is the facial impressions of Carl Switzer and his rendition of 'Love in Bloom.' . . A sequence of an amateur hour on the radio with junior artists is distasteful rather than amusing. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family, but mature for children. Mediocre." DAR

"The whole is fresh and stimulating and the broadcast hour is outstanding and above the average. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"[It is] a lightly amusing comedy. . . Satisfactory acting and direction. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 2 '36

"Although the theme is unusual and the story novel, providing many a laugh and moments of genuine entertainment, this film sadly droops to its climax. . . The direction is jerky, with humor poorly spaced. Family."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A, Y & C: poor."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

Sel Motion Pict p5 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This satire on radio had a good idea—but the thing doesn't jell very well. . . The humor poked at radio has its amusing moments here and there, but mostly the comedy drags along to the end. The cast is merely passable, we regret to report." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p46 D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An amateurish film which bears the stamp of hurried production schedules and a careless script. Its story subject was handled disappointingly throughout, and what could have been an entertaining little satire turns out to be a hodge-podge of poorly developed situations. Family."

— Box Office p27 O 24 '36

"This should make pleasing program fare. With a lot of juvenile stuff, its main appeal will be to the family trade. The most entertaining part of the picture is the [children's] radio show, in which Carl (Alfalfa) Switzer stands out with his suffering rendition of 'Love in Bloom' and little Billy Lee sings a western song and does a neat tap routine. The piece is a comedy drama, in which the plot, although formula, has been handled in an interesting manner."

+ Film Daily p8 O 20 '36

"Making all the customary allowances accorded the B product, this is still pretty sorry stuff, something that will make most fans regret they waited to see the second picture. . . With a pretty girl and a few comics in [the film] it looks [as if] the picture-makers should have gone to town, but in its development the idea falls flatter than a butterfly under glass."

— Hollywood Reporter p4 O 17 '36

— + Motion Pict Daily p11 O 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p33 N 1 '36

"'Easy to Take' is obviously a program picture and although it has several good laughs, it will not rise above the level of mediocrity. It will find its best value as comedy relief on a dueler with a strong first line attraction. . . The story is a very obvious one that has been stretched a little too far."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 17 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ECSTASY. Eureka 85min

Cast: Hedy Kiesler, Jaromir Rogoz, Albert Mog

Director: Gustav Machaty

A silent film produced in Czechoslovakia with "dubbed in" English dialogue. It is not to be confused with Ecstasy of Young Love. This film won the prize in the International Film Show in Italy last year. It was produced several years ago and was held by the Customs Department until recently. "When the passionate nature of a young wife finds no response in her cold and elderly husband, she finds fulfillment in the arms of another man, thereby driving her husband to suicide." (Nat Legion of Decency)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[The love] affair, accompanied by heavy-handed symbolism, is portrayed solely on an animal plane. 'Bestiality' would be a far more descriptive title than 'Ecstasy.' Condemned."

— Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is certainly not the artistic triumph its advance acclaim would lead one to believe. But, if the film has no distinction in its playing and dialogue, it is at least an amazingly frank and sensuous pictorial record of a sexual theme. Indeed, so daring are some of the scenes that one wonders how they ever passed our usually rigid censorship. . . . Despite the picture's artistic ambitions, however, it remains no more than a plodding celluloid aphrodisiac. Still, in its occasional good moments 'Ecstasy' has a memorable quality that makes it worth your while to sit through the long and drab portions." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p58 S 5 '36

"It appears in what is termed 'an uncensored version' to prove that it has little merit as propaganda in the cause of lechery. . . . Ponderously directed, given to the type of gingerbread symbolism Von Sternberg touted in 'The Salvation Hunters,' the story unreels as an arty trifle that will offend no one but those who object to bad acting and slipshod craftsmanship." Herb Sterne

— Script p10 J1 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Ecstasy' offers a distinct tonic to art theatres, a picture excellently cast, marvelously acted, superbly directed, exquisitely photographed. For run-of-mine houses, however, this Czechoslovakian entry is not suited. . . . Customers seeking a picture tinged with the indelicate, if not actually lascivious, will for the most part be disappointed."

+ Phila Exhibitor p49 My 15 '36

ELLIS ISLAND. Invincible 65min N 5 '36

Cast: Donald Cook, Peggy Shannon, Jack LaRue, Joyce Compton

Director: Phil Rosen

Three immigrant bandits rob a bank of a million dollars and are sentenced to a ten year prison term. When they are released and about to be deported from Ellis Island they attempt to recover the funds which they had hidden but are hindered by a government agent.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Although 'Ellis Island' is restricted by release to the neighborhoods, it deserves far better fate, both because it offers more in production than the average picture of its ilk, and because it is amusing and exciting screen fare. It ranks favorably with the good class B output from the majors. . . . Obviously hokum, and actually faulty by way of holes in the story and too frequent coincidence, the picture has been given a tongue-in-the-cheek treatment with plenty of comedy relief to truly minimize its defects."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 N 25 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 N 30 '36

"Marked by some swift action and lively fun, 'Ellis Island' is fair enough comedy melodrama for the lower brackets on dual programs. Picture starts in a rather serious vein, but turns out to be a travesty on tough gangsters, with the gunmen the butt of some amusing kidding."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 25 '36

EMPTY SADDLES. Universal 65min D 20 '36

Cast: Buck Jones, Louise Brooks, Harvey Clark

Director: Lesley Selander

Based on the novel of the same title by Cherry Wilson. A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A somewhat unusual western story, packed with excitement, fast-paced dramatic action, mystery and superb riding. . . . The natural scenic effects are of exceptionally high quality. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A, Y & C: fair Western."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Buck Jones handles a characteristic role in satisfactory fashion and the slight comedy and mild romance are well handled. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p10 N 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Several new angles and Buck Jones' usual capable performance as a hard-riding, square-shooting son of the saddle makes this an above par offering in the Western class. Family."

+ Box Office p27 O 24 '36

"This Buck Jones Western has some hard riding, shooting and some fistic encounters and it should prove satisfactory fare of its type. Buck looks great on his horse, 'Silver,' and he gives an all-round capable performance and his riding is outstanding. He strives hard to keep things interesting, but an involved story hinders him. The fact that there is no menace until late in the story retards the suspense until that time."

+ — Film Daily p3 O 17 '36

"This Buck Jones Western must be set below par because of a rambling and cluttery story that is almost menaceless until the last reel or two and then, in the final chase and battle, is confusing and inconclusive. An earnest attempt has been made to give first aid with touches of comedy, but even this is not always effective and it leaves suspense at loose ends too often. Buck has a large and devoted following that will forgive much, but he must beware of departing too far from the basic pattern."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 O 14 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p7 O 19 '36

"With most of the punch at the end, Jones fans, however, should be satisfied."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 N 1 '36

"With a good story, plenty of hard riding, an abundance of shooting and a picturesque mountain locale, 'Empty Saddles' comes out as a Western which is sure to appeal to the audiences that like gallopers. The yarn has plenty of suspense, numerous spooky situations, a good love theme and enough of the western touch to top a western dualer or fill out the action requirements of a mixed bill and leave the cash customers well satisfied."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 14 '36

END OF THE TRAIL. Columbia 69min S 18 '36

Cast: Jack Holt. Louise Henry. Douglass Dumbrille

Director: Erle C. Kenton

Based on the novel Outlaws of Palouse by Zane Grey. A western melodrama of the days after the close of the Spanish-American War.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: trash; Y and C: no."
Christian Century p1374 O 14 '36

"Virile entertainment. Family."
+ Nat Bd of R M S '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A, Y & C: poor."
Parents' M p32 D '36

"An exceptionally good Zane Grey Western laid in the period of the Spanish American War, that includes realistic scenes of the battle of San Juan Hill and the usual quota of cattle rustling, hard riding and thrilling adventure. . . The direction is smooth, the photography excellent and the acting exceptionally good. Family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict p9 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Superior Zane Grey Western. . . Direction, acting and photography are well above par. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 O 31 '36

"The producers have gone to great trouble in disguising this Western yarn of cattle stealing. . . For a simple, elemental evening in the theater—in fact, a very simple, elemental evening." (1 star) Beverly Hills
Liberty p31 O 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This Jack Holt vehicle finds the star in a fitting he-man role. Packing two guns, a devastating right hand punch and a sense of humor, he hurtles through danger with confidence and abandon that will exhilarate the most jaded of audiences."

+ Film Daily p3 O 31 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 S 18 '36

"Here is a Western on which to go to town. For the most part heavy drama, with some comedy intervals, ending with Holt heading toward the noose, 'End of the Trail' should give patrons practically everything they are seeking."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 O 1 '36

"One of the better Jack Holt Westerns. Contains some Spanish-American war stuff plus wild west drama, action, romance and laughs. Also, a couple of gay mesa tunes. Holt and Guinn Williams make a good team, and Louise Henry is a charming love interest."

+ Variety p19 N 4 '36

EVERYTHING IS THUNDER. Gaumont British 66min O 1 '36

Cast: Constance Bennett. Douglass Montgomery. Oscar Homolka

Director: Milton Rosner

Dialogue film produced in England. Based on the novel of the same title by Jocelyn Lee Hardy. A wartime tale of a Canadian officer's attempt to escape from prison in Germany. He is picked up by a street waif who helps him escape from a detective who is following. The detective, in love with the girl, eventually allows them to go free and kills himself.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It] will put a strain, not only upon the nerves, but also the credulity of audiences. This type of film runs so much to a pattern, with the inevitable romance between two people whose countries are at war and the subsequent conflict of loyalties, that only the brightest direction can endow it with interest and suspense. Such direction is in evidence here. . . Less circumspect in the matter of ethics than Hollywood, the producers of this film have dragged in a suicide which has not even the excuse of dramatic necessity. Such a mock heroic conclusion adds years on this already aged plot. The picture is for adults." T. J. Fitzmorris

America p624 O 3 '36

"A: very poor; Y & C: useless."
Christian Century p1574 N 25 '36

"There is an admirable dramatic quality to the production and while it suffers from a certain choppyness and the theme is not a novel one, the direction and acting leave nothing to be desired. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"The story of the escape of a British Officer from a German prison camp and his encounter with a girl of the streets, who gives him shelter, has been told many times. . . The direction is somewhat choppy, numerous cut-backs obscure the development of the plot, and the ending is so abrupt that the picture seems unfinished. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no interest."

— + Motion Pict R p6 O '36

"Mature."
Nat Bd of R M S '36

"Objectionable in part. Objection: suicide."
Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

"A: somewhat choppy spy story; Y: doubtful; C: no."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Adults & young people."
Sel Motion Pict p9 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Laura Elston

Canadian M p38 N '36

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 24 '36

"This came close to being a fine melodrama of the World War. It misses by a considerable margin—but it does provide Constance Bennett with her best film role in several years. . . This romance of the hunted prisoner and the prostitute is haunted by fear, but it will get you, thanks to Miss Bennett's vivid, moving performance and the adequate aid of Douglass Montgomery. The direction is excellent, for Milton Rosner catches the feeling of a war-gutted city smudged over with horror and terror, with blood and hunger." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 N 28 '36

"Constance Bennett is much too good for the streets of Berlin. Douglass Montgomery has an exciting time escaping from prison and is convincing in his amatory capture. Oscar Homolka plays an unremunerative part with suitable terseness. In all, exciting and entertaining stuff."

+ New Statesman & Nation p257 Ag 22 '36

"Many a slipping Hollywood career has found the air of the London studios salubrious, but this over-seas melodrama does little to revitalize the fortunes of the two Americans who get top billing. A vapid piece, it leans heavily on crude dramatics that cannot stand the strain. . . Whatever possibilities the yarn possessed have been nullified by flagrantly lax direction, inept dialogue and considerable overplaying by the cast." Herb Sterne

— Script p11 S 26 '36

"This English film is good entertainment, very ably directed and admirably acted by two of its three international stars. As for Miss Constance Bennett it would be unfair to say much. I suspect that her blurred blonde per-performance can be laid to the account of our maleficent Board of Censors, who have imposed on Miss Bennett the complicated task of acting a prostitute without ever mentioning her profession. . . The film is very good entertainment of a kind, the kind that deals with disguises and pursuits and incredible resourcefulness, with policemen on the stairs and hunted men in bathrooms. Captain Hardy's book, from which the film is drawn, was better than that."

EVERYTHING IS THUNDER—Continued
 Graham Greene
 + Spec p307 Ag 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The dramatic moments are frequent during this profoundly moving wartime story which has been directed with an intense feeling for the romantic but slight regard for action or suspense. Constance Bennett is attractive, though not ideally cast as a pretty waif of Berlin, but Douglass Montgomery contributes a gripping screen portrayal of an escaped prisoner and the rest of the cast is capable. Family."
 + — Box Office p21 D 5 '36

"This melodrama is fairly good entertainment for audiences generally, especially those whose tastes for love triumphant over all obstacles transcend such elements as plausibility of plot, technical solidity and the brighter facets of acting skill. The picture gets under way slowly, due to lengthy prologue-sequences."
 + — Film Daily p9 N 20 '36

"A war-time melodrama, put over with a punch and a sense of suspense values which make it rank as good entertainment, not only here, [London] but doubtless in America, where fans may come to see Bennett in her first British picture and remain to be thrilled by the surge of crisp melodrama put over by Douglass Montgomery and Oscar Homolka. . . All told, a British production of some real merit. It has a few minor faults which carpers might seize upon, but as melodramatic entertainment it is there."
 + Hollywood Reporter p6 Ag 5 '36
 + Motion Pict Daily p6 Ag 3 '36

"GB has produced another interest-holding war melodrama, with two American names to help it at the box office. . . Production is of the better brand from GB, with plenty of selling angles."
 + Phila Exhibitor p35 O 1 '36

"British film producers apparently have one favorite theme for picture stories—the World War. . . 'Everything Is Thunder' is another along these lines, but so weak in plot and general production that it is doubtful of getting by on this side of the Atlantic. Strictly for the dualers. . . British standards in productions of this type of story are closely followed: dim lighting is a British idea of heightening the dramatic moments; dense, smoky fog is another and Milton Rosner's jumpy direction cannot be considered an asset. Acting is okay all around, the Bennett-Montgomery-Homolka trio carrying the entire story."
 — + Variety p14 N 25 '36

F

FALLING IN LOVE (English title). See Trouble ahead

15 MAIDEN LANE. 20th century-Fox 65min
 O 30 '36

Cast: Claire Trevor, Cesar Romero, Douglas Fowley, Lloyd Nolan

Director: Allan Dwan

"Locale is biggest gem retailing center in the world, Maiden Lane, in New York City, and its fashionable social and underworld extensions. Plot rests on activities of a jewelry insurance firm in running down identity of high-class gem dealers who buy baubles from thieves and recut them." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: better not; C: no."
 Christian Century p1670 D 9 '36

"Fairly interesting for adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The picture is well produced, with good casting and excellent direction, and is good entertainment for those who like murder mysteries. Adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"[It] has continuity and a spirited if obvious climax. . . While the production has the fault of most crook films—too many killings—with the added one of disclosing probable methods of jewel thieves, it has more originality than the majority. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Informative diamond cutting sequence; much shooting. Mature & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

"The plot is full of action and sustained suspense, with a nice balance of mystery and comedy, the dialogue is clever and the acting convincing. There are some interesting shots showing the art of diamond cutting. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"While several of the situations seem overdrawn, the whole moves along at an even tempo, is full of surprises and never lags and there are no offensive sequences, although there are several murders committed in the end. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
 Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"For a picture of this type, it is exceptionally good—a nice blending of action, mystery, excitement and suspense. The direction is excellent and the dramatic work convincing. Family-mature."
 + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
 N 2 '36

"Good. Adults & young adults."
 + Motion Pict Guide D '36

"This is a well sustained, suspenseful program picture in which there are some surprising angles and hairbreadth escapes. The audience is spared the usual romance and an interesting explanation of gem cutting is informative and dramatic. Family."
 + Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"General patronage."
 Nat Legion of Decency O 22 '36

"A: fair; Y & C: unsuitable."
 Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Adults & young people."
 Sel Motion Pict p10 N 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Although Allan Dwan gives it the directorial accelerator, this is only a fair melodrama. Adults."
 + — Christian Science Monitor p15 O 24 '36

"Uniformly excellent. . . [The cast] bring reality's vivid touch to each characterization, inducing through their support those mood-building moments which make any picture great entertainment. '15 Maiden Lane' is just exactly that." Paul Jacobs
 + Hollywood Spec p21 O 10 '36

"This is more than an entertaining melodrama. It takes you into the inside of the wholesale jewelry business and it shows the guarded handling of gems—even takes you to the ringside at the actual splitting up of a large diamond by professional cutters. Of course there is a story. Oddly enough, it is sharp, unsentimental, fresh in treatment."
 (2 stars) Beverly Hills
 Liberty p57 N 14 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Having all the earmarks of technical proficiency, the new film moves smoothly, but the smoothness is not the result of a well-knit and interesting story. For this, credit is due its director, Allan Dwan, and the anonymous individual who supervised the film's cutting. . . Lloyd Nolan, who is capable of better things, is sadly wasted in a minor rôle as a sergeant of detectives in the diamond district." T. M. P. N Y Times p21 O 17 '36

"Small excuse can be found for the so-called melodrama, '15 Maiden Lane.' . . Films like this are thrown together rather than produced, and although their offense is usually grievous and calls for harsh methods, they really aren't worth the effort. Not to be attended by movie-goers who have something better to do, the best way to deal with '15 Maiden Lane' is to dismiss it with a gentle little spank of impatience and a wish that in the future, Hollywood impresarios will remedy their ways and realize that idle actors had better remain idle than be used in bogus, inefficient and shambling stories like this one." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p19 O 20 '36

"A crook film with many of the expected ingredients, but sufficiently different in development to hold interest on a double bill. . . There is every indication that the programmer couldn't have been placed in more capable hands than those of producer Sol Wurtzel and director Allan Dwan. Dwan was responsible for many of the hectic epics made during the early screen career of the senior Fairbanks and he still has the knack of making hokum ingratiating. . . Douglas Fowley is convincing as the go-between for the insurance company and the racketeers. A sturdy style and a clipped manner give this Fowley fella impact. . . Claire Trevor is improving, and while one can still manage to restrain emotional outbursts as to her Thespian talents, it must be admitted that [she] has never looked lovelier." Herb Sterne

+ Script p10 N 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Packed with excitement and implausibility, '15 Maiden Lane' is a smoothly finished product which will be welcomed by audiences that are just a little bit tired of heavy, emotional dramas. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 10 '36

"Here is a highly satisfying program picture. Much credit is due Allan Dwan for keeping the action moving fast and not overlooking the lighter moments. Cesar Romero gives an excellent performance as a suave jewel thief who is also a ruthless killer."

+ Film Daily p10 S 29 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 S 26 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills." + Phila Exhibitor p37 O 15 '36

"Unpretentious little crook opus, threading through familiar lanes with a bit of new scenery here and there. For the duals, and evidently so intended."

— + Variety p15 O 14 '36

"Exploiting comparatively fresh phase of jewel banditry by focusing on alliance between thieves and apparently reliable dealers, '15 Maiden Lane' offers moderately exciting, suspenseful and neatly turned out melodrama, good for its share of entertainment and returns on general run of duals."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 25 '36

FLYING DOCTOR. National-Gaumont British 87min

Cast: Charles Farrell, Mary Maguire, James Raglan, Margaret Wyner, Joe Valli

Director: Miles Mander

Dialogue film made in Sidney, Australia. This film depicts the epic work done in saving lives by the Australian Flying Medical Association.

Trade Paper Reviews

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p13 N 14 '36

"'The Flying Doctor' does not fly quite so wide, high and handsome as expected, but nevertheless has its fine moments, rating between a special and a stock programmer. It suffers from the common Australian complaint of a choppy story and patchy interest. . . Farrell gives one of his most attractive performances as the 'sun-downer' or hobo. . . His acting is smooth, natural, boyish, his voice strangely without the American accent to which we have become accustomed."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 O 20 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 N 5 '36

"With experts sent down [to Australia] by Gaumont-British to assist in production, it was expected that a good job would be done. And with such a star as Charles Farrell it looked as though an Australian production could break into the American field. But take Farrell out and the whole picture, with the exception of Joe Valli, would go floppo insofar as cast is concerned. If this picture does break into the American market the best that can be hoped for it is on the double-decker time, and chances are that American buyers will nix the film even for that. . . As it stands now the picture just rambles from point to point without very much meaning, and the real interest does not begin until the picture reaches its final climax."

— Variety p23 O 21 '36

FLYING HOSTESS. Universal 65min N 22 '36

Cast: William Gargan, Judith Barrett, William Hall, Astrid Allwyn, Andy Devine, Ella Logan

Director: Murray Roth

Based on the novel Sky Fever by George Sayre. The tale of three trained nurses who become air hostesses. One of them, turned down because she fainted at her first hospital operation, disguises herself and makes a 5000 foot delayed parachute jump. She wins the love of two pilots and after numerous complications, chooses one.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It] is pleasantly sprinkled with romance and moments of real excitement." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p192 N 28 '36

"Modern and breezy entertainment. . . This [is an] interesting film. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The picture is tense and exciting with good comedy relief. Excellent acting on the part of William Gargan and Judith Barrett. Adults & young people." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Interesting because of subject. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The scenes in which [the hostess] takes the controls, and guided by an unseen hand at the home port, brings her fog-bound plane to a safe landing, is sure to capture the interest of any audience. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"Stimulating, exciting, dramatic and intensely interesting is this picture in which we are given an excellent insight into the rigid training given to 'flying hostesses.' . . [It is] high in entertainment value and of universal appeal. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 2 '36

"Family,"

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3. '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

FLYING HOSTESS—Continued

"This is an average, but interesting picture, which tells of the training necessary to make hostesses acceptable to airplane executives. . . Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p8 D 1 '36

"[It is] a light and breezy story. . . Some nice flying. Family."

+ Wkly Guide N 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Flying Hostess,' is a competent, exciting tribute to the valor of the girls who quiet air passengers, treat their ills, serve meals to them. Judith Barrett, Universal's new star hope, is pretty and admirable in the title rôle. The picture pleased critics; will please audiences."

+ Lit Digest p23 N 28 '36

"It serves to introduce Ella Logan . . . whose flair for comedy and unsettled headgear is amusingly capitalized in the film. Hollywood's scrutiny of the flying hostess is undeniably romantic, but we suppose certain extravagances may be condoned in the presence of an agreeable and fairly exciting little melodrama." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p29 D 14 '36

"While it may not be a contribution of exceptional merit, it at least has the virtue of a thrilling and gripping climax which lifts it above the ordinary run of films of this genre. . . The film gets off to a lethargic and commonplace start. But once it reaches its climax . . . it will keep you on pins and needles with excitement." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p19 D 14 '36

"[It] is a better-than-average program picture. [The] screen writers . . . have availed themselves of every opening for comedy, and their skilful treatment sends the story humming along at a merry clip. . . Miss Barrett has a lustrous loveliness, and although she is still ill at ease in her more casual scenes, she meets the dramatic demands of her rôle ably. . . But I save all my superlatives for Ella Logan. A comedienne of absolutely top abilities, an enchanting songstress, she will beyond any doubt be a Big Name in Pictures." Molly Lewin

+ Script p10 D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A sprightly aviation picture, which, although a bit formula as to story, is still acceptable entertainment and can hold its own as a top-bracket dueler. Family."

+ Box Office p29 N 21 '36

"A pleasant comedy melodrama of the commercial air service that departs in one particular from the formula that is rapidly crystallizing into the classic pattern for flight plays. This departure engages a group of Universal's newly assembled young players and gives youthful verve and freshness to an otherwise conventional offering. With brisk dialogue writing and careful exposition of the flying work added, the whole sums up to a better-than-average support piece for the duels."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 2 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 N 4 '36

"It should please despite lack of strong names. Estimate: pleasing program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p53 N 15 '36

"[It] displays an amount of suspense and laughs that will satisfy the majority of audiences. . . Despite the fact airplane stories are hitting the screen right and left, 'Flying Hostess' hits a definitely new note in this field. The main thread of the story may be termed improbable, but the romance of flying, the educational background of air hostesses, and the showmanlike use of suspense in the film make the production an entertaining bit. Exhibitors won't go wrong on this one, but it must be spotted on a dual."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 2 '36

FOLLOW YOUR HEART. Republic 85min S 5 '36

Cast: Marion Talley. Michael Bartlett. Nigel Bruce. Luis Alberni. Henrietta Crossman

Director: Aubrey Scotto

Dances: Larry Ceballos

Music: Victor Schertzinger

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: good; C: little interest." Christian Century p1639 D 2 '36

"Family, but mature for children. Excellent." DAR

+ + Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"In this operetta we have a light, romantic story, loosely knit, which gives the impression that with better direction or better editing it would have been provided with the balance and emphasis to make it dramatically effective. . . Michael Bartlett's previous screen experience shows in his fine acting and singing, to the unfortunate disadvantage of Marion Talley in her first screen effort. But in her songs she is her real self, fully satisfying." S. M. Mullen

+ — Motion Pict & Family p5 N 15 '36

"The story is neither original nor convincing. It is obviously designed to give Michael Bartlett and Marion Talley as many opportunities as possible to burst into song. Both sing well and are well recorded. Marion Talley's speaking voice is, curiously enough, nearly as unpleasant to listen to as her singing voice is delightful. The supporting cast gives a good account of itself, and provides some amusing incidents, notably the hunt and the occasion when the whole troupe turns the cooking of the dinner into an operatic sequence. The settings are effective, and the song and dance numbers well staged. Suitability: family." E. P.

+ Mo Film Bul p172 O '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Elaborate song and dance numbers, some good comedy and a patent film romance provide a picture which is entertaining if not outstanding. Adults & young people."

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 O 31 '36

"It is unfortunate that the material for [Marion Talley's] picture should be so wanting in coherence, grace and interest, and that the star herself was not more carefully coached in the art of acting, and not more deftly photographed. . . Miss Talley possesses for film recording a beautiful and exquisitely trained voice. . . In construction and treatment the film is a hodgepodge of bungled ideas, threadbare and dull in their conception and execution." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p18 O 22 '36

"Rouben Mamoulian, who directed Nino Martini in 'The Gay Desperado,' is not the only director to discover that an opera singer is often more acceptable when surrounded by comedians. Aubrey Scotto tried the same trick in 'Follow Your Heart.' . . The trick doesn't come off quite as well this time. It takes brilliant direction and a sparkling supporting cast for this stunt. 'Follow Your Heart' has neither. It doesn't, however, do badly with what it has. Miss Talley—although her performance is lifeless and heavy, photographs well. She speaks flatly, with a Middle West twang. But she sings delightfully. . . The musical numbers prove the brightest part of the film." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p23 O 22 '36

"Republic's talent-crammed operetta, 'Follow Your Heart,' with Marion Talley and Michael Bartlett, both of operatic repute, in its cast, fails to be the first-class entertainment it was designed to be. . . Grand opera seldom bothers to school its votaries in the dramatic arts, and mere voices, however glorious, cannot blind screen audiences to palpable weaknesses in the story framework of a photoplay. . . Aubrey Scotto's direction is too definitely aimed at one objective—music—and every one's efforts seem to be regimented toward setting the stage for the exercises of the operatic headliners. . . Miss Talley's operatic selections are excellently performed, especially her selection from 'Mignon,' but her speaking voice registers poorly on the sound track." J. T. M.

— + N Y Times p31 O 22 '36

"[It] must be registered among the current cinema season's weaklings. . . Miss Talley and Mr. Bartlett lift their golden voices deftly and charmingly in this aria and that and acquit themselves handsomely, as do the members of the supporting cast. . . But their efforts, however gallant, are unable to overcome a cumbersome script and some lethargic direction." William Boehnel
— + N Y World-Telegram p21 O 22 '36

"Marion Talley sings quite agreeably with Michael Bartlett in 'Follow Your Heart,' but I like to think of the film itself as just a preliminary experiment for the diva." John Mosher
New Yorker p77 O 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It's the most pretentious—and perhaps best—musical turned out by an independent studio, but is not up to the mark set by the best major efforts. Should do fair business. . . Michael Bartlett, who is co-starred should go places. He had a bit in a Grace Moore picture, 'Love Me Forever' and has done some other film work, but this is his best effort. . . Miss Talley doesn't photograph any too well. And the director hasn't managed to keep things any too well knit; scenes frequently run away and into each other. Miss Talley's voice records well and she has several good numbers to handle; a couple of operatic arias are intertwined with musical comedy songs pleasantly. . . Whether or not it gets business to compare with the major musical efforts, picture should prove to Republic that [spending money] for production and talent can pay; returns should be good enough for that, despite the film's faults."
+ — Variety p14 O 28 '36

FORBIDDEN HEAVEN. Republic 76min S 26 '35

Cast: Charles Farrell, Charlotte Henry

Director: Reginald Bond

Produced last year but just given general release.

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is a] not too happy rewrite of the 'Seventh Heaven' theme."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 S 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is a mildly absorbing drama. . . The action runs along amiably in fairly obvious channels, with nothing particularly novel in the development, but the yarn has a fairly good vein of human interest."
— + Film Daily p7 Ag 29 '36

"The independent producers haven't done right by Charles Farrell in 'Forbidden Heaven.' The story is too stodgy, slowly paced and miserably directed to serve as a come-back picture. Despite its countless flaws, it does show a more vigorous Farrell; one who reads his lines well and whose voice no longer looms as a handicap. . . The attempt to recall 'Seventh Heaven,' both in the title and some of the plot material, is obvious. . . Resemblance obviously was sought on the theory probably that if it clicked once, it might again in different garb. But it doesn't, and mainly because the punch situations are telegraphed home."

— Variety p16 S 9 '36

FOUR DAYS' WONDER. Universal Ja 10 '37

Cast: Jean Dante, Kenneth Howell, Martha Sleeper, Alan Mowbray

Director: Sidney Salkow

Based on a novel of the same title by A. A. Milne. "A young high school girl, addicted to detective stories, fancies herself capable of solving mysteries until a real one confronts her. Many innocent persons become involved before her aunt's death is proved to be an accident." (Nat Legion of Decency)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A weak production interesting only to young people." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The absurd antics of the two detectives offer an unpleasant contrast to the normal actions of the young people and turn an otherwise fair social drama into a mediocre farce. Adults & 14-18: poor; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Evidently meant as a satire on mystery stories and for the purpose of launching a second Simone Simon, but failing utterly on both counts due to over and inept acting on the part of the cast and under directing on the part of the director. . . Staunch defenders of double bills may like this—the more discriminating audiences will be bored. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature-family. Mediocre." DAR

"The story lacks coherence and the film is merely another program filler. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mediocre." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"The ineffective handling of this Milne story, the lack of suspense, unreal situations and slapstick comedy makes the picture most unconvincing. Alan Mowbray does a fine piece of work as the conceited author but too much was exacted of the little newcomer, Jean Dante. Family-mature."
— + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 14 '36

"The quality of A. A. Milne's imagination is difficult to transfer to the screen. . . The actors are sufficiently successful in their interpretation of their roles, but the director has 2½ times overstressed the action, losing the light touch required by the story. While no great heights of comedy are reached, the picture is agreeably entertaining. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: mature."
+ — Motion Pict R p6 N '36

"Universal is to be complimented upon the way in which this whimsy is presented on the screen. Family & junior matinees."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 14 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A, Y & C: fair."
Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"The cast is well chosen, the members interpret their parts with great delicacy and understanding, and the direction indicates a keen appreciation of the story value. Adults & young people."
+ Sel Motion Pict p10 N 1 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

FUGITIVE IN THE SKY. Warner 58min N 28 '36

Cast: Jean Muir, Warren Hull, Gordon Oliver, Carlyle Moore, Jr.

Director: Nick Grinde

The story deals with the journey of a transcontinental airplane whose passengers include a G-man, a desperate public enemy, a reporter and some bond thieves.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The production values are far better than the vehicle they served. A matter of taste for adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"There is plenty of excitement, but lack of originality in plot or treatment prevents it from being anything more than a filler on a double bill. Disappointing. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Mature & 14-18." DAR

"Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Unusually realistic scenes and acting by a well chosen cast in capable directorial hands provides entertaining and highly exciting picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 31 '36

"The picture, replete with suspense relieved by timely comedy, is satisfactorily cast and directed, meriting special mention for its photography, lighting, sound and scenic effects."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 17 '36

"The sequence showing the plane fighting its way through a dust storm is thrilling and beautifully photographed. Unfortunately the story does not live up to its setting, as there are too many characters, and the plot is involved and illogical. The actors are capable if not outstanding. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R p6 N '36

"Because of its maintained suspense and uncertainty, this picture is entertaining. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 21 '36

"A: average thriller; Y & C: unsuitable." Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Suspenseful, but inexpertly produced. Mature."

+ Sel Motion Pict p6 N 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This film adds a title to the long list of average mystery thrillers. While it has none of the stock elements of chill-producing horror, the picture gets by on its able direction and sincere acting. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 31 '36

"Although its story isn't new and its action isn't hair lifting, 'Fugitive in the Sky' is so convincingly and lightly handled by capable performers that it is certain to appeal in the secondaries, for which type of billing it was ostensibly budgeted. George Bricker's original story of the gangster rampant in a transcontinental airliner is fast becoming American folklore, but his treatment skilfully makes use of every entertainment value and maintains interest from start to finish."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 23 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 O 26 '36

"The old familiar story of the reporter, the G-man, the stewardess, the gangster—in the transcontinental plane—has been repeated here with results seemingly best for twin bills. The story has been done before so many times that it will seem too familiar. Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."

+ Phila Exhibitor p37 N 1 '36

"Warners has churned out just an average [mystery story] in 'Fugitive in the Sky.' Film is another of those things aimed at the class B audience and is obviously set for second billing on double bills. It's another run-of-the-mill story with nothing new to offer the picture public. Yarn is practically a duplicate of the story released by another major studio some months ago which in its original form wasn't so hot. Only difference is Warners' scenario genius concocted the substitution of a dust storm for a snow storm."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 23 '36

G*GARDEN OF ALLAH. United artists 80min N 20 '36

Cast: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer, Tilly Losch, Basil Rathbone, Joseph Schildkraut, John Carradine, C. Aubrey Smith

Director: Richard Boleslawski

Music: Max Steiner

Based on the novel and play of the same title by Robert Hichens. Filmed in technicolor. This is the third version of the film produced. It is the tale of a self-tortured Trappist monk who breaks his final vows and escapes to the desert where he falls desperately in love with a woman who too has gone to the desert to find peace. Torn by love and his awakened sense of religion, he leaves the woman to return once again to his celibate's cell.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This is, unquestionably, the finest thing yet done in technicolored films and one of the most impressive offerings, all around, of a prodigal season. . . In previous versions, the motivation of the runaway monk was a bit cloudy, obscured by an undue emphasis on the sensational, but under Mr. Boyer's superb treatment his breach of conduct becomes understandable without losing its enormity. . . His sincerity and the violence of his inner struggle make the monk truly tragic rather than sordid and the final renunciation is both logical and emotionally satisfying. . . Boyer, in an exacting role, is at his best since 'La Bataille' and Marlene Dietrich plays with beautiful sincerity. The film is far beyond young audiences but it can be recommended to adults as screen fare of the first importance." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ + America p192 N 28 '36

"A: novel; Y: doubtful; C: no."

Christian Century p1670 D 9 '36

"Well worth seeing for its beauty alone, with its gorgeous scenery, coloring and lighting, this picture is highly entertaining. . . A beautiful love story, dramatically told. Adults & young people." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The production qualities are so fine, the desert scenes so magnificent, and the color so exquisite, that it affords an hour of rare pleasure, even though the theme of the story is remote from modern sympathies. Adults: excellent; 14 & 18: mature; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"[It] is artistically a triumph, but dramatically it has not the same successful appeal. . . Charles Boyer manifests a fine understanding of the role, but Marlene Dietrich is a bit too emotionally restrained to make the character seem real or alive. Joseph Schildkraut adds the only joyous note and it is very welcome. Disappointing. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Rarely effective technicolor desert scenes, artistic direction, the cameo-like beauty of M. Dietrich, and the exceptionally fine characterization of C. Boyer make this drama . . . unforgettable. Mature & 14-18. Excellent." DAR

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

"This well known romance . . . seems remote from present day problems. . . Scenes of the desert are breath-takingly lovely and the hub-bub of exotic life in the native bazaars is vividly presented. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It] is brought to the screen in beautiful glowing colors. The story seems, however, to be only a secondary issue as the high dramatic points are conspicuous by their absence. The silences of the melancholy pair convey little of their inner struggle, except when Boris witnesses the seductive movements of the dancing girl. Joseph Schildkraut . . . gives an excellent portrayal of those picturesque characters and relieves the monotony. . . From a pictorial standpoint it will interest the mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"Pictorially this production is a magnificent achievement in color. Mature audience. . . The direction is superb, in the skilful hands of Mr. Boleslawski, who has been mindful of every detail necessary to the perfection of cinema art and highest commendation merited by sound and camera men. A picture of rare beauty, charm, and high entertainment value."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 2 '36

"Color photography has never appeared to greater advantage than in this picture. . . The story is dated. Twenty years ago it seemed daring romance. Today, audiences may find it difficult to be emotionally stirred because a Trappist monk breaks his vows, ventures into the world, samples its joys and then returns to the monastery for penance. The desert idyll is too far removed from modern life to seem real or important. Charles Boyer has a role in which an harassed conscience makes him constantly serious and darkly introspective. Miss Dietrich photographs to advantage in the medium, but a more emotional actress might have made the plot seem more vital. Adolescents, 12-16: no value; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R p9 N '36

"This well known and loved book comes to the screen—this time in color so beautiful and effective as to be breath-taking. . . Marlene Dietrich is superb and the Boris Androvsky of Charles Boyer is most touchingly presented. . . The entire cast is outstanding and each portrayal is perfect in itself. The direction of Richard Boleslawski is masterly, the photography exquisite and the massive stage sets introducing native life bring with them authenticity and reality. A treat for mature audiences."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

"A & Y: romantic tale of the desert; C: no interest."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"The plot of this play has longer whiskers than some of the old Algerians who wander in and out of the picture. . . It's too bad to waste two such actors as Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer on such an ancient vehicle, to say nothing of all that sand and the excellent color photography. Miss Dietrich, as expected, is even more beautiful in color, and, if possible, even more expressionless." Ernestine Taggard

+ Scholastic p17 N 21 '36

"Outstanding. . . The musical accompaniment is noticeably good. Mature."

+ Sel Motion Pict p3 D 1 '36

"Done in Technicolor, and with a noticeable advance in the use of color photography on the screen. Mature. Outstanding."

+ Wkly Guide N 14 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Subdued tones . . . clothe a moving if slow-paced story which deals with inner conflicts of character. Adults & young people."

+ Christian Science Monitor p19 D 5 '36

"The subject is a daringly unusual theme to be undertaken by the motion picture in its capacity of serving mass theatricals. But even the most intimate scenes have been accorded the utmost respect and delicateness. Unfortunately, however, on one occasion a jarring note is injected in the performance by a Tilly Losch troupe of a sensuous dance of such fiery passion that the spectacle of 'torso-twisting' might even make Minsky's 42nd Street burlesque queens blush with shame. Photographic results represent the most astute and most tasteful use of natural color cinematography to date. Here, too, is the perfect example of the extent to which the craftsmanship of expert staging can give importance to a limited plot." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p134 N 27 '36

"Once again Technicolor enthralls us with the beauty of the animated scenes it spreads upon the motion picture screen. . . As a salesman for Technicolor, as a demonstration of its attainments to date, [it] is a brilliant success. . . However, the color process leans on the picture production almost to the point of the latter's extinction. . . All the applause of the audience was accorded it as a spectacle; none was given it as a motion picture drama. The screen play is done in monotone and Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer seem to be in a daze. All Boleslawski's great skill as a director was unequal to the task of making the picture dramatically alive. . . The story, although a couple of decades behind the thought processes of today, has inherent strength, its tragic romance being psychologically sound, but in its telling it becomes more intellectual diversion than picture entertainment. . . Its slow, placid pace, added to the distraction of color, will keep it from doing well at the box office."

+ Hollywood Spec p6 N 7 '36

"You and I can remember when 'The Garden of Allah' was a seven-day shocker. Well—I can, anyway. Today, for all the beauty and lovely coloring of this expert production, [it] seems not a little dated. And there's nothing so flat as yesterday's shock. . . The whole story is told in exquisite Technicolor tints. Maybe there's too much loveliness; maybe the gorgeous hues hush the drama. To me there are too many shots of the lovelorn caravan pushing along the Sahara horizon. . . Richard Boleslawski's direction seems too concerned with sky lines, too little interested in close-up drama." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 D 19 '36

"The cinema's most astute and tasteful use of natural color photography to date is found in 'The Garden of Allah.' . . This time an ancient and always somewhat befuddled story achieves importance and beauty as a result of stunning performance and precise, planned use of Technicolor. . . W. P. Lipscomb and Lynn Riggs took no liberties with the plot structure of the story, but must have sprayed their typewriters with an astringent before writing the dialog. It is restrained, notes the dramatic handicaps of the feeble old story and relies on subtleties of feeling. Boleslawski joined them in shying from lush direction, relying instead on the performances of Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer. . . Miss Dietrich's debut in color appears to have loosed talents heretofore kept in reserve. She never has put more power into a rôle. Nor, satisfying to those who ignore performance values and look only for eye-appeal, has she ever been lovelier. Mr. Boyer's portrait of the Trappist monk . . . probably will renew for him cinema contacts that were beginning to be frayed."

+ Lit Digest p21 N 14 '36

"'The Garden of Allah' is a screen work of surpassing visual beauty. . . It makes magnificent use of color photography, mixing rich blues, browns and reds in a succession of lovely compositions. . . What conviction the almost static plot has depends in large measure on your susceptibility to the spiritual and emotional catharsis experienced by the principals. The ill-fated romance . . . seems to me to be singularly lacking in compulsion. . . [It] demonstrates conclusively that the spectrum has a valid place in the scheme of the cinema. . . The screen drama is singularly fortunate in its stars. Not only is technicolor flattering to their features but they bring an acting intensity to the big moments of the romance that does much to sustain the fragile spell of the piece. Miss Dietrich is hauntingly lovely."

GARDEN OF ALLAH—Continued

Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p23 N 20 '36

"Richard Boleslawski has directed it solemnly, taking special care to offend no one. This caution has also weakened the drama. Charles Boyer never appears in his monk's garb, nor is the exposition sufficiently long to make a modern American audience realize the whole tragedy. The film has a certain rather drowsy charm, thanks to the very color which, although it distracts the interest from any drama, does offer some startlingly lovely glimpses of the desert. This is the best color the screen has yet captured. . . To be quite honest, the picture might have been more exciting if it had been frankly a technicolor scenic." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p30 N 20 '36

"[It] is a distinguished motion picture, rich in pictorial splendor yet unobtrusive, though accurate, in its color, however tempting a background of old Algiers may have been to the producers. Richard Boleslawski's direction places commendable accent on the familiar story, and it is engrossingly enacted by a noteworthy cast. . . Marlene Dietrich has been rescued from her dramatic lethargy of late seasons, clothed fairly sensibly and given something to think about. Charles Boyer, an important player abroad and one who has been rather badly treated here by casting departments, has a rôle in keeping with his talents." J. T. M.

+ + N Y Times p27 N 20 '36

"Although it contains moments of breathtaking beauty in its Technicolor photography—there are also some that are not so breathtaking—and a love story that will probably have the girls crying. . . 'The Garden of Allah' is a pretty dull entertainment, ponderous in movement, pedestrian in speech and unexciting in narrative. . . I'm bound to confess that I, for one, found it rather hollow and unconvincing. Although it has the makings of a genuinely touching tragedy, not all the materials are used to their best advantage either in leading up to the climax or in the climax itself, which seems singularly botched." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p31 N 20 '36

"I should say that the color is the most successful so far. Perhaps that Sahara setting, with its African blues and yellows and scarlets, is adapted to this lurid picture-postcard chemistry, just as the plot is suited to those old-fashioned Technicolor speeches about eternal love, and possibly, too, the effect is assisted by the ease with which the Dietrich face stands color. In a big, splashy way, the whole affair seems handsome. . . The film allows Miss Dietrich to suffer without interruption. Charles Boyer is the young man cast to suffer with her, and he's expert at it." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p99 N 21 '36

"The story. . . is hardly one that can be streamlined for modern consumption. W. P. Lipscomb and Lynn Riggs didn't try to. Their screen version treats the delicate theme with dignity and sincerity; Miss Dietrich and Boyer, achieving the finest performances of their careers, lend it credibility. And the Technicolor camera reaches the high mark of its achievement."

+ News-Wk p20 N 21 '36

"This really proves, we think, that the black and white that stood by us so honorably will give way wholly to Technicolor within a few years. . . Miss Dietrich, while still not our idea of a nun of strong faith, is exotic and lovely against a desert sky. A great deal of power is projected into the story by Charles Boyer, whose monk is a truly convincing creature of conflict. . . We had the feeling that a lovely poem had been read to us. We knew how it was to end, but we did not know how beautifully. We suppose the significant thing here is that 'The Garden of Allah' would have been a good film in black and white; but at last color is of intrinsic value. People will ask you about it."

+ Stage p16 D '36

"[It is] the best answer to the problem [of color] that Hollywood has made in 1936. . . Sad, serene and somewhat silly, 'The Garden of Allah' belongs to that dignified class of pictures which reviewers customarily praise for the music and photography. Unfortunately for Hollywood, cinemaddicts go to the theatre not to see the latest wonders of cinematography but to be entertained. That in this case both music and color photography. . . are genuinely superb, will doubtless not suffice to interest 1936 in two young lovers who, with money to burn, can apparently find nothing better to do than brood about the life hereafter. If 'The Garden of Allah,' best example of color photography the cinema has so far contrived, is a box-office hit, it will be because of its stars. . . If 'The Garden of Allah's' weak point is its story, its strong point is its female star."

Time p39 N 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Producer David O. Selznick elevates the motion picture to new heights of artistry in this film. . . convincingly adapted by W. P. Lipscomb and Lynn Riggs, and directed with Richard Boleslawski's usual masterful touch. This, combined with a star-studded cast and color photography, outstandingly the most beautiful to date, assures the feature's box office success. Family."

+ Box Office p51 N 14 '36

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p18 N 14 '36

"This is the finest example of Technicolor to date. . . Many of the scenes are breath-taking in their beauty, especially some with the desert as the background. Charles Boyer gives a strong performance. . . Marlene Dietrich is excellent as the girl."

+ Film Daily p6 N 3 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 N 2 '36

"Aided by beautiful Technicolor, a musical score that must be ranked with the season's best, backed by two strong names, good feature players, 'The Garden of Allah' should please best in class houses. Tinged with that appeal, but with a strong women's angle that ought to pull, the show is creditably produced. . . Well made, with some inspired scenes, strong on what the women want, the show is saleable from many viewpoints."

+ Phila Exhibitor p53 N 15 '36

"Since life and art are progressive, some day, soon, a story sturdy enough to hold up in black and white will, when coupled with the Technicolor, combine into socko box office. It resolves itself down all over again, in color cinematography or in the normal screen hues, [to the fact] that it's the story first. . . Accordingly 'Garden of Allah,' so sumptuously and impressively mounted by David O. Selznick, impresses as the last word in color production, but a pretty dull affair. It'll come out all right chiefly on the ballyhoo and the marquee values of the stellar pair, Dietrich and Boyer. Especially so for the matinee trade. . . Miss Dietrich and Charles Boyer are more than adequately competent in the leads although sometimes slurring their lines. But in the main they impress in the difficult emotional roles."

+ — Variety p14 N 25 '36

"Superb in its production qualities and emotionally arresting, with the drama enhanced by the most discriminating use of Technicolor thus far, 'The Garden of Allah' comes to the screen as entertainment of highest appeal for cultivated audiences and sturdy box office calibre. . . Boyer and Dietrich are seen at their best. Boyer is most impressive and convincing. . . Dietrich plays with restraint and, thanks to direction, gives the most persuasively human and least theatric performance of her career. . . Tilly Losch provides the most colorful and arresting scene in the picture when she dances the abandoned temptation to Boyer in the desert inn. The dance is the most erotic and at the same time fascinatingly artistic thing of this kind the screen has seen."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 31 '36

GAY DESPERADO. United artists 85min O 2 '36

Cast: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino, Leo Carrillo, Harold Huber, Mischa Auer, James Blakeley

Director: Rouben Mamoulian

Music: George Posford, Miguel Sandoval

Music director: Richard Day

"A comedy about Mexican bandits and the effect of American gangster films on their professional technique." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A & Y: very good; C: unless too exciting."
Christian Century p1510 N 11 '36

"Absolutely unique is this farce, poking fun at gangster films, American slang, and studio tricks. Family, but mature for children. Excellent." DAR

+ + Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"This [is] an entertaining film, which is further enhanced by the fine singing of Nino Martini. Mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Conceived and acted in a mood of irresistible gayety, directed with imagination and a keen sense of humor with every player in the cast entering thoroughly into the spirit of the production, 'The Gay Desperado' is perfect entertainment. . . Even though it becomes a little wild and rowdy at times, it is so delightfully funny and so unusual in its fun, it could not harm anyone. Outstanding. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Delightful light comedy, with the beautiful singing of Nino Martini and subtly ironic touches, make this an unusually fine production. . . Mamoulian's direction is superb. Family." E Coast Preview Committee
Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"[It is] a delightfully satirical farce. . . The cast is exceptionally well chosen, each one giving pertinent characterizations. The work of Rouben Mamoulian, the director is most adroit and unusually effective. A rarely pleasing and most entertaining picture. Family-mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 2 '36

"Roystering burlesque and subtle satire, mingled with grand opera music and lyrical photography, bring about one of the most amusing and intriguing films of the year." S. M. Mullen

+ Motion Pict & Family p6 O 15 '36

"A merry musical farce, loaded with laughs and fine music, altogether delightful. . . The background of desert and mountain scenery is beautifully photographed, Martini's Mexican songs are a treat, Carrillo is perfect in his part, the whole thing is most entertaining. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: too exciting."

+ Motion Pict R p6 O '36

"Excellent direction, delightful humor, a slight but amusing story and the beautiful voice of Nino Martini make of this musical comedy good entertainment. The entire cast is outstandingly fine. Leo Carrillo never was better than in his portrayal of the music-loving bandit. Family & junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"Nino Martini's superb singing highlights this tastefully artistic production."

+ Nat Legion of Decency O 8 '36

"A, Y & C: good."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p10 N 1 '36

"Pleasant and amusing, with many hilarious minor incidents. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Very gay, very full of music and not very desperate is Nino Martini's latest. . . Besides Mr. Martini's singing, which is pleasant and plentiful, the film contains a good deal of amusing burlesque on Hollywood's cherished heroes, the gangsters. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 O 17 '36

"'The Gay Desperado' is a desperately gay satirization of the machine-gun technique of American gangster films. . . Some highly amusing and frequently hilarious results come from the broad burlesquing of the Hollywood version of blood-and-thunder lawlessness. . . Nino Martini is in splendid voice as he emulates a laughing, dashing, singing señor. . . Mr. Martini, after some previous Hollywood mishaps, now gives a strong proof that a Metropolitan Opera star can be a good screen comic both lyrical and laughable. . . In his singing of Verdi's 'Celeste Aida' the real height of 'The Gay Desperado' is reached." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p617 O 23 '36

"Good, clean fun and music of rich artistic quality are blended into fascinating entertainment by one of the finest demonstrations of intelligent direction ever given a picture."

+ + Hollywood Spec p11 O 10 '36

"A Mexican bandit melodrama with a sense of humor. . . The results, as you may guess, frequently are hilarious." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p56 N 14 '36

"The gifted Mr. Rouben Mamoulian has made this film . . . with the obvious intention of striking a gay, Lubitsch note, and keeping it gay. Perhaps because that intention is obvious his film succeeds at any rate in being a jolly film. And jollity is enough in this instance, the acting throughout being better than the script. . . We can place this Mamoulian picture right up at the top of the nearly first class in its melodious-movie kind. Mexican music would give any such picture a good start; but here the singing of Nino Martini is pleasing and plentiful, and the guitar-playing of the Trovadores Chinacos could only be bettered if there were more of it. . . [Mischa Auer offers a] superb and superbly comic portrait of the Mexican Indian. He appears in a part which, for him, is an easy one; but we don't know who else could have played it."

+ + New Statesman & Nation p773 N 14 '36

"Amusing musical comedy, notable chiefly for Mamoulian's clever avoidance of the trite conventions of the theme. . . Mamoulian works well the banalities to disguise. Nevertheless the proceedings, despite modern accretions, possess a musical-comedy stageness of pre-war vintage. Mischa Auer and Harold Huber are excellent. Film estimate: You're doing all right."

+ New Theatre p34 N '36

"The vexing problem of what to do with an opera star on the screen is triumphantly solved in 'The Gay Desperado.' Here is a formula for the musical photoplay that brings melody, comedy and dramatic excitement into harmonious union. It gives ample scope for Nino Martini's enchanting voice and engaging presence while inspiring a rich and hilarious burlesque that could stand very well by itself as entertainment." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p18 O 9 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

GAY DESPERADO—Continued

"Rouben Mamoulian, usually absorbed in more serious subjects, has indulged in some charmingly frivolous satire at the expense, for the most part, of gangster films. Far from an underworld melodrama, this should prove the picture that laughs those high-powered thrillers out of existence. 'The Gay Desperado,' although a musical and, more, a musical with a fine score and an operatic star, is sheer fun. . . . Even without the music, it would be entertaining." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p39 O 9 '36

"While mankind in general has been fretting about the proper means of disposing of used razor blades, Hollywood has been going quietly insane trying to decide what to do with its operatic tenors. We think 'The Gay Desperado' has solved the problem. . . . If the vocal Mr. Martini is forced into the background, it has been in the best of causes. Even an operatic tenor must be content with second place when a first-rate musical comedy is in the making. And 'The Gay Desperado' is truly that." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p31 O 9 '36

"Although I won't swear that 'The Gay Desperado' is the best musical film of the season, it comes pretty close to it. . . . [It] is an excellent blending of all the musical comedy arts—the arts of writing no less than those of singing, direction, acting, composing and photography. . . . It is possible to say without fear of contradiction that here is a musical that is a honey, a witty, humorous, tuneful riddling lampoon that is worth anybody's money at the box office." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p35 O 9 '36

"When not busy with God, Miss Mary Pickford seems inclined to turn out quite trim and bright little comedies. . . . Now it is Nino Martini who is presented, along with Ida Lupino and Leo Carrillo, the three of them appearing to advantage in some successful nonsense about Mexican bandits, American gangsters, young love, and the like. . . . Light comedy has always been a hard hurdle for American films to take, but in this case I should say that Miss Pickford and all her colleagues have just bounded over." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p90 O 10 '36

"'The Gay Desperado' presents an interesting thesis: Mexican bandits, normally the best of hail fellows, become unnaturally evil under two sets of circumstances—(1) when exposed to the subversive influence of Hollywood's gangster films, (2) when music is eliminated from their diet. . . . Martini receives a dozen chances to sing, and he does it so well that his radio and opera fans will find it easy to forget about his acting."

News-Wk p30 O 10 '36

"Too bad Mary and Jesse have given up their partnership. First they knock us over with 'One Rainy Afternoon' and now they simply panic us with the most hilarious comedy of the year. Such laughter I've never heard at a preview. And applause for pictorial beauty and gorgeous singing. . . . Leo Birinski has written an original story that justifies the word. . . . [It is] a picture that simply burbles in every line and action. . . . Lucien Andriot's photography stopped the show. It is as beautiful as Eisenstein's 'Thunder over Mexico.' . . . Do I rave? Well, wait until you see this show! I shall go again and again." Rob Wagner

+ + Script p10 N 7 '36

"'The Gay Desperado' is described as a melodrama set to music. It's so much more than that we hardly know where to begin. It is a burlesque, just delicate enough, of everything from kidnapping and firing squads to James Cagney and law enforcement. . . . Leo Carrillo, Nino Martini, and Ida Lupino gesticulate in immaculate farcical fashion, welding a series of cinema anecdotes into an hilarious whole. . . . Director Rouben Mamoulian does the most enchanting things with music and shadows and laughter. Don't let us keep you here any longer. There's gaiety this night."

+ + Stage p14 N '36

"[It] is that extraordinary rarity, a musical comedy which is both musical and comic. It almost infringes upon Hollywood's iron law that all singing pictures must be about singers and it makes the demise of the partnership between Mary Pickford and Jesse Lasky—which started with 'One Rainy Afternoon' and ended last month—seem definitely regrettable. . . . 'The Gay Desperado' should supply a working model for future efforts in its genre."

+ Time p66 O 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is undoubtedly one of the finest musical comedies of any year. It is a classic example in the field of light comedy, superbly directed, and replete with a subtle brand of humor. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 10 '36

"Mary Pickford and Jesse L. Lasky tapped a novel source for the material used in this production. In having Leo Carrillo and his gang of gay desperadoes emulate the American gangsters, they present a rollicking laugh-loaded comedy that is grand entertainment every foot of the way. It is the kind of show that should play to big box-office returns in every type of theater from the very top to the bottom. On its comedy merits alone, this burlesque and satire on the American gangster could go it alone."

+ Film Daily p3 O 3 '36

"This fresh and deliriously funny satiric farce is one of the best comedies of the year, and the most original. Second, and said to be the last, production of the Pickford-Lasky partnership, it is bound to reawaken deep regret that the rich vein of class entertainment tapped by this combination will not be further explored by them. 'The Gay Desperado' is headed for good grosses everywhere."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 30 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 O 3 '36

"This is a grand mixture of comedy, music that should not only please in class sectors, but, thanks to Leo Carrillo, Martini's voice, that should do okay in other spots. Estimate: high ratings."

+ Phila Exhibitor p40 O 15 '36

"This Nino Martini mesquiteer is a fairly diverting Mexican Western. If regarded in carefree light, 'The Gay Desperado' may be termed not particularly desperate. It'll do spotty trade, depending on locale. It's more musical comedy than grand opera, or even operetta, which may be the major hurdle for those attracted by the Martini marquee values."

+ Variety p15 O 14 '36

"What irony that Mary Pickford and Jesse L. Lasky should say farewell as a production unit with 'The Gay Desperado,' a picture which assuredly is one of the finest of the year in artistry and sure-fire entertainment values and a smash money entry. Romantic, entrancingly melodic, loaded with humor in sparkling line and warm, tingling farcical situation and excitingly unfolded, it should take the box office by that word-of-mouth which always discovers and supports a sound piece of popular entertainment."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 30 '36

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN. Paramount 95min S 4 '36

Cast: Gary Cooper. Madeleine Carroll. Akim Tamiroff. Dudley Digges. Porter Hall. William Frawley. J. M. Kerrigan

Director: Lewis Milestone

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"In making his writing debut before the bourgeoisie which is the solid support of motion pictures, the much-publicized Clifford Odets has managed to set aside his proletarian urges long enough to give us an exciting and unbelievable melodrama. . . . Whether or not he has streamlined his lugubrious philosophy for just this once, Mr. Odets has put wheels on his soap box and takes us for a thoroughly entertaining spin. . . . Akim Tamiroff, as the menace, is suitably terrifying. As a matter of fact, the latter's violent antics place the film in the adult bracket. Children would find little sense in it anyway." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p576 S 19 '36

"Excellent. Weakness; romantic dereliction of hero is inconsistent with his implied character. Mature." DAR

Fox W Coast Bul S 12 '36

"Excellent direction and supporting cast make this a most absorbing picture for adults and young people." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A heavy, brutal picture with swift dramatic action. Adults: interesting; 14-18: tense; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Masterly direction and outstanding characterizations in difficult roles are combined in an exceptionally fine production. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"The story is not without discrepancies and inconsistencies but it is permeated by a sinister and dramatic atmosphere which maintains suspense to the very end. Its view of war and intrigue-wracked China is convincing and finished characterizations add to the interest of a stirring film. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An excellent cast, efficiently handled, with convincingly good photography, have made good adult entertainment." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Exciting, well photographed melodrama with good local color and a tremendous climax. Its weaknesses are trite dialogue and a plot that depends for its situations on the stupidity of a hero for continually exposing himself to obvious dangers. The picture contains too much brutality for young audiences but will probably be popular with adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul S 26 '36

"The breathless quality of eloquent silences, the superb photography, and the vividly descriptive musical score heighten our enjoyment of this skillfully produced picture, which is so forcefully directed. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 16 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"The part of the action relating directly to Yang is the best: the casual, pointless manner of his death is properly stressed. The character is well portrayed by Akim Tamiroff, but perhaps the best performance of all comes from J. M. Kerrigan as a thoroughly slimy rascal. . . . A film with several strong points but as many weak ones. The idea of menace is excellently brought out in the deliberate opening, and the suspense of the closing passages is very real; but, in between, the general slowness of tempo becomes too often merely mannered and heavy, while what had seemed at first to have the potentialities of profound drama is enfeebled by a hackneyed central plot. . . . Suitability: adults & adolescents. The suggestions of torture and violent death towards the close make the film unsuitable for the sensitive."

+ — Mo Film Bul p172 O '36

"Good. Adults & young adults."

+ Motion Pict Guide D '36

"To the callous adult this picture will furnish tense, melodramatic entertainment. The photography is unusual and excellent, symbolic of the theme. Gripping, suspenseful direction of an unusually well chosen cast and an appropriate musical background bring technical perfection to the entire production. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 9 '36

"A: exciting melodrama; Y: too brutal for many; C: no."

Parents' M p42 N '36

"Here is as exciting a screen play as may be seen. . . . Supported by an excellent cast, it captured my interest and has my praise. . . . Some of [Odets's] views have been transplanted from the stage to the silver screen. Hollywood, in constant fear of educating its audience with too heavy a dose, has diluted the liberal views with Hollywoodish dramatics. . . . 'The General Died at Dawn' has a novelty which most pictures lack. With this pinch of 'social aspect' and a fist-full of good, exciting drama, the film is above the ordinary."

+ Scholastic p32 O 3 '36

"Mature."

Sei Motion Pict p5 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Akim Tamiroff's General Yang and the photography are especially commendable among the many qualities, both personal and material, in which the producers invested lavishly for realism. . . . Mr. Odets strengthens his reputation for strict adherence to fact and utter disregard for where his barbs fall, taking the whole of Mr. Booth's manuscript, with its frequent antiquities of construction, and giving it vitality with dialog shadings. . . . This [is a] gripping drama of intrigue, romance and adventure in that part of modern China which is full of dangerous surprises." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p504 S 25 '36

"An attempt to recapture the glamorous mystery and punch of 'Shanghai Express.' Unfortunately, this is the Shanghai Local. . . . All this sounds exciting. But it falters. For one thing, Director Milestone gets too absorbed in his lesser characters, and he is too concerned with catching pictorial beauty, too intent upon his stylized technique. Also, Scenarist Odets, for all his crisp staccato dialogue, goes in a bit thick for moralizing about the underdog." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p36 O 10 '36

"Whatever you and I may think of Gary Cooper as an actor. . . . we do have to admit that he somehow has an affinity for good pictures. His 'Mr. Deeds' was excellent, and 'The General Died at Dawn' is a humdinger Chinese shiverdrammer. . . . This adds up to about two and a half pictures, which is a fairly correct appraisal of 'The General Died at Dawn.' The end is preposterous, but we'll skip that. Not for children." Don Herold

+ + Life p30 N '36

"[It has] a wide field of intrigue. Clifford Odets, who wrote the scenario, has therefore not been trenchbound; and the result of his collaboration with the camera is a superior film, continuously interesting and often quite genuinely terrible. He has, however, made a number of minor mistakes; as when he puts into the wry mouth of his American hero pious words that do not belong there, and as when he lets his love story lapse into the commonplace." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p374 S 26 '36

"Gary Cooper has become an American ideal. . . . [He] is marked for fame and the narrow path of deadening rectitude. 'The General Died at Dawn' is melodrama, a descendant of 'Shanghai Express,' well acted, well directed and, except for some high-flown love, very satisfactory. But Mr. Cooper has become so noble as to be disquieting."

+ New Statesman & Nation p588 O 17 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN—Continued

"Preceded by an avalanche of publicity and false angling, particularly in the left press, it was perhaps inevitable that some movie-goers should feel let down. . . People were given to believe they were going to get 'Das Kapital' in eight reels and received instead a better than average melodrama that very effectively, if not over-subtly, accomplishes the broad purposes of the author. . . Mr. Odets has not yet achieved a cinema style. His long and freighted sentences are still in thrall to stage necessities. There is no reason for believing, however, that he will not get there." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p18 O '36

"Akim Tamiroff gives a really excellent performance and he manages to die with all the sinister imperturbability that has characterized his life. Without this piece of acting the picture might well fail to grip one's attention, for Madeleine Carroll's adventuress is a study in very still life. . . Gary Cooper is his usual strong and charming self, but his performance here has not the same light and shade as his 'Mr. Deeds.' " Mark Forrest

+ Sat R p576 O 31 '36

"I couldn't believe, let alone understand, one foot of the story. . . It is a million miles from Hollywood, and 'Millie' Milestone, one of our ace directors, kept the strangely exotic flavor throughout. But I feel that both he and Odets, who has proved himself a great dramatist, were given an impossible assignment." Rob Wagner

— Script p10 S 19 '36

"The first few silent sequences of 'The General Died at Dawn' are as good as anything to be seen on the screen in London. . . After that it becomes a melodrama, though a melodrama of more than usual skill. . . If it were not for a rather ludicrous ending, this would be one of the best 'thrillers' for some years." Graham Greene

+ Spec p747 O 30 '36

"Audiences at 'The General Died at Dawn' realized after a few moments of photographic introduction that they would have to be all eyes and ears to keep up with the amazingly cryptic drama taking place on the screen. Mr. Odets' contribution to 'The General Died at Dawn' does not end with strong lines spoken firmly. By an amazing co-ordination of forces, the virility that has come to be associated with his writing is communicated in the director's translation in camera terms, in the character's behavior, in the cameraman's photography. . . There is something so exhilarating, so electric in the treatment of this production, from the title right on up, that it should be taken regularly. We can't say more than that."

+ + Stage p24 O '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Well made, produced in the best Paramount manner, with Akim Tamiroff as the general stealing the picture, this is a money show."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 S 15 '36

GENERAL SPANKY. Roach-MGM 73min D 11 '36

Cast: Spanky McFarland, Phillips Holmes, Ralph Morgan, Irving Pichel

Directors: Fred Newmeyer, Gordon Douglas

Little Spanky McFarland and his gang are cast in a burlesqued Civil War story in which they stop an advance of Union forces, rescue a pal from a firing squad and perform sundry other duties for the Confederate cause.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

"A: amusing; Y & C: good."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

Trade Paper Reviews

"Wholesome, home-spun entertainment and comedy is this graduation of 'Our Gang' into their first feature length picture. It will be tops with the juvenile trade and can hold its own with adult audiences. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 31 '36

"For the [children] Hal Roach has one grand picture. . . There is plenty of entertainment in the antics of this outfit, and for the family trade it is a swell show. The picture aims for laughs and it gets plenty of them."

+ Film Daily p13 O 27 '36

"This is great stuff for the [juvenile] and family trade. To the average movie fan, however, it will probably be just six reels of 'Our Gang' and a little bit tiresome after the customary footage has had its run."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p6 O 23 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 O 24 '36

"The children will probably like 'General Spanky' best. Hal Roach's feature venture has the same appeal as the 'Our Gang' comedy idea, with small towns, neighborhoods, family audiences certain to enjoy it. For the ace de luxers, it may not have appeal."

Phila Exhibitor p32 N 1 '36

"Our Gang is a swell outfit of entertainers in any two reel comedy, but for an adult audience, it is expecting too much of the little lads and lassies to keep up their fast tempo for a full feature length film. For [juvenile] audiences, 'General Spanky' will rank tops and if it is cut down it will do okay for the comedy end of any dualer. As presented at the preview [it] lags in several spots and will come out much better after an operation in the cutting room."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 23 '36

GENTLEMAN FROM LOUISIANA. Republic 70min Ag 17 '36

Cast: Eddie Quillan, Chic Sale, Charlotte Henry, Marjorie Gateson, John Miljan

Director: Irving Pichel

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: good."

Parents' M p42 N '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Eddie Quillan rides engagingly through the usual plot situations of this race track yarn which is lifted slightly above program melodrama class by good acting and Irving Pichel's direction."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 S 19 '36

"An unpretentious racing picture disguised as a costume piece of the Mauve Decade."

News-Wk p27 S 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Ordinary racetrack yarn has been given vigor by superior direction and adept acting in this programmer. The picture contains much more action than one would expect of a story that calls for costumes worn in Diamond Jim Brady's day. It hasn't much to offer in marquee decorations aside from 'Chic' Sale and Charlotte Henry, and the former's supporters may be disappointed in seeing the ex-character monologist sans his usual whiskers, playing virtually straight."

+ — Variety p17 S 16 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

GESUZZA, LA SPOSA GARIBALDINA. Cines
Pittaluga 75min N 2 '36

Cast: Aida Bellia. Giuseppe Gulino. Gianfranco Giachetti

Director: Alessandro Blasetti

Italian dialogue film produced in Italy without English sub-titles. "Historical drama dealing with the freeing of Naples and Sicily from Bourbon rule by heroic followers of Italy's great patriot Garibaldi." (Film Daily)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Despite its technical defects, this sketch . . . is bound to grip both Italians and Americans familiar with the history of those days. The picture leaves the spectators hoping for another installment of a story which needs no retouching by scenarists. . . All of them act well, as do the rest of a numerous cast." H. T. S.
+ N Y Times p33 N 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"While lacking technical strength, this film story of heroic manhood and womanhood in the struggle for liberty is impressive entertainment."
+ Film Daily p11 N 4 '36

"It appears to be a foreign attempt with historical costumers, and is not without its exciting episodes. . . Uneven direction and varying pace permit story interest to dwindle, which are handicaps that even excellent photographic work and bits of vivid acting fail to overcome. Because it develops into a cumbersome costume play, seems dubious if this feature will go well even with Italian language houses. No English titles, which means it's out for other U.S. theatres."
— + Variety p29 N 18 '36

GHOST PATROL. Puritan 58min Ag 3 '36

Cast: Tim McCoy. Claudia Dell. Walter Miller

Director: Sam Newfield

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ag 20 '36

"A, Y & C: fair."

Parents' M p32 D '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This time Tim McCoy rides down some desert air raiders with the aid of his trusty steed and saves Claudia Dell—but not the film—into the bargain. Adults."
— Christian Science Monitor p13 S 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This Tim McCoy vehicle deviates from the out-and-out Western path and instead combines some G-man stuff with airplane material, resulting in a generally actionful melodrama that should please the McCoy fans and other neighborhood grind patrons as well."
+ Film Daily p7 S 10 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 S 16 '36

"As with all McCoy's, good in all departments including interest held throughout."
+ Phila Exhibitor p35 S 15 '36

"Putting G-men into chaps and 10-gallon hats is something that had to happen but it doesn't add up to much for screen purposes. The picture is just another Western of the type the exhibitor buys when he calls up the exchange and asks 'em to send him a hoof opera to fill out a double bill. . . McCoy is rather stiff and Miss Dell only fair."
— + Variety p16 S 16 '36

GIRL FROM MAXIM'S. Hoffberg 53min O 1 '36

Cast: Frances Day. Lady Tree. Leslie Henson. George Grossmith

Director: Alexander Korda

Music: Kurt Shroder

Based on the play of the same title by Georges Feyder. It is a dialogue film made in England about five years ago and just released here. "It is one of the those devilish, Mauve Decade farces in which a straightlaced doctor, married to an unattractive wife, goes to Maxim's on a spree, becomes involved with a chorus girl who is mistaken for his wife, and then must try to explain his folly to his wife and a wealthy uncle." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A cheap production that has little or no entertainment value. Adults."

— Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A hapless little farce that utterly wastes the services of a notable company, it is having a belated American showing. . . It is not obvious why it ever should have been exhibited here. The most tolerant film-goer is not likely to find it entertaining. . . The photoplay is much more of a museum piece than its half-decade of age might suggest." Howard Barnes
— N Y Herald Tribune p23 S 16 '36

"The film shows traces of age, especially in lighting and sound. . . Even so, this picture has some of the Korda comedy and the Korda direction. . . 'The Girl from Maxim's' does manage to whip up quite a bit of jollity now and then." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p23 S 16 '36

"The impious Paul Pry who operates the little World Cinema has tiptoed into Alexander Korda's closet and dragged out a family skeleton called 'The Girl From Maxim's,' which Mr. Korda produced back in '31, when he was operating on a frayed shoestring and a frazzled nervous system. . . The photography is gray, the speech indistinct and the lively ladies of Maxim's are quite devilish in a mauve decade way." P. S. Nugent
— N Y Times p29 S 16 '36

"Having achieved an enviable reputation as a producer of outstanding films with his remarkable 'The Private Life of Henry VIII' Alexander Korda must now suffer the ignominy of having some of his pre-'Henry VIII' indiscretions flung back into his face by way of the public screens. . . Frankly, 'The Girl from Maxim's' is a conspicuously mediocre film in every department of production. The direction is heavy and ponderous, the dialogue is completely lacking in freshness or sparkle, and the acting, even though the cast includes some well known names, is pretty awful to contemplate." William Boehnel
— + N Y World-Telegram p25 S 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"If this production, made years ago, had been intended as a burlesque of a serious drama of early vintage you might laugh at it, but you laugh at it anyway because it is so unbelievably bad. . . Acted by an English cast, [which] goes through [its] parts with a great deal of over-emphasis, the material is so colorless and lacking in humor that it dwindles rapidly into the classification of just a plain boring film without any excuse for being released."
— Film Daily p25 S 16 '36

— Motion Pict Daily p10 S 17 '36

"[This is] weak in practically all departments. Estimate: weak; for neighborhoods, twin bills."
— Phila Exhibitor p39 O 1 '36

"[It] would mean little to the American box-office even if it boasted familiar name players. It was produced by Alexander Korda about five years ago, when the now-noted British producer was just getting started and was operating on a limited budget. Compared with pictures of that year this undoubtedly loomed as an ambitious English film try. Today it's obviously dated. . . . Because of its multitudinous flaws, most of them due to ancient vintage of the film, this feature is not strong enough even for dualers. American audiences won't stomach it. It is not worth risking the abuse likely to be heaped on the exhibitor by his regular patrons."

GIRL FROM MAXIM'S—Continued

— — Variety p17 S 23 '36

GIRL ON THE FRONT PAGE. Universal
72min O 4 '36

Cast: Edmund Lowe, Gloria Stuart, Reginald Owen, Spring Byington

Director: Harry Beaumont

"Story depicts the romance of Lowe and Gloria Stuart and the former's exposure of a gang of servant blackmailers. Lowe is managing editor of a metropolitan newspaper which Miss Stuart inherits from her father." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: perhaps; Y: fair; C: no."

Christian Century p1438 O 28 '36

"This [is] entertaining social comedy. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A slight story which gets off to a good start but has a weak ending. Adults: fair; 14-18: possibly; 8-14: beyond." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The picture is exciting without being 'hair-raising.' Light entertainment. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Amusing bits make this trite newspaper mystery pleasing though not convincing entertainment. Mature-family. Mediocre." DAR

"Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[This is] an exciting story, well told and enacted. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul S 26 '36

"[This is] an entertaining picture, swiftly paced, smartly dialogued, with plenty of suspense and humor. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 16 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"Fair. Adults & young adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"An unnecessary and irrelevant sub-plot is introduced when the girl is black-mailed by her own butler. . . . Acting and direction are good, though not outstanding. Adolescents, 12-16: not recommended; children, 8-12: no interest."

+ — Motion Pict R p6 O '36

"This fairly interesting newspaper story introduces a new angle on blackmail. . . . Sophisticated comedy suitable for the family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 9 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A & Y: fair; C: no."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"This film starts with verve from a novel angle, becomes confused and deteriorates to an unsatisfactory conclusion. Mature."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p3 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 10 '36

"When Charlie Rogers gave us 'My Man Godfrey' as the first production to come from the New Universal, he set a standard which his second effort, 'The Girl on the Front Page,' lowers abruptly. Perhaps it was a case of too many cooks, as I see no less than five people are credited with having had something to do with the story. It is an exceedingly poor picture, a complete waste of time spent in viewing it."

— — Hollywood Spec p7 S 26 '36

"Take away Reginald Owen and there would be little left to recommend in 'The Girl on the Front Page.' Portraying a lesser role in a comic melodrama that is rarely accented by fun or excitement, he takes over the show on several occasions with diverting results. . . . Edmund Lowe and Gloria Stuart, it might be noted, are starred in the piece, but they cannot hold a candle to Mr. Owen in wrestling with shoddy material." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 N 7 '36

"The Roxy this week has one of those newspaper comedy melodramas usually so irritating to any one who has ever worked in a city room. 'The Girl on the Front Page' is a welcome exception, a slight, light little film, to be sure, but quite diverting. . . . The film's most amusing performance is given by Reginald Owen as a slyly villainous butler. 'The Girl on the Front Page' is not bad for routine entertainment." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p13 N 7 '36

"What this country needs today, Mr. President, is not the 5-cent cigar nor the nickel stein of beer, but the CAA—Cinema Adjustment Administration—to plow under some of our motion-picture production before it weakens a strong entertainment market. 'The Girl on the Front Page' . . . is not a capital offense, not a felony, nothing quite so bad. But it is a misdemeanor. . . . Five writers are credited . . . with the story and, having told it all in the picture's first five minutes, they repeat it steadily thereafter. . . . Call it mediocre and extend your sympathies to the cast, particularly to Reginald Owen, who tried to make something of the sinister butler, and to Spring Byington as a bewildered matron." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p15 N 7 '36

"[It] is a spotty but reasonably diverting blend of love, wisecracks and blackmail that may not be any great shakes as art, but should keep you interested with its breezy humor and its fast moving events. . . . When it is said that 'The Girl on the Front Page' is spotty it does not mean that the film has been thrown together carelessly but rather that parts of it are so well managed that it is a pity all of it could not have been better planned and executed. However, it is buoyant enough so that its slow patches can be forgiven, and if you are not too analytical you should find it breezy fun." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p9a N 7 '36

"Movies, just movies." John Mosher
New Yorker p117 N 14 '36

"'The Girl on the Front Page' gets there through the efforts of a couple of hard-working males who know what's what in the realm of acting. . . . Edmund Lowe and Reginald Owen. The always reliable Eddie . . . plunges through his performance with such form and good humor that what might have been just another programmer (made today, dual-billed tomorrow and forgotten shortly) becomes considerably better than that. . . . Watch for the finale when Lowe wrings a confession from Owen by placing his fingers in Reggie's ribs; there's terror and exhaustion in a spine-chilling combination." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p10 O 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Aided by a pair of classic performances—those of Edmund Lowe and Reginald Owen—this yarn . . . is smart entertainment in a big way and should be a tonic for an anemic box office. Family."

+ Box Office p19 S 26 '36

"Well-handled comedy-mystery with fine cast makes this a good box office offering."

+ Film Daily p3 S 19 '36

"This is a first-rate, lively little programmer which will drop nicely into the lower bracket of twin bills and only escapes a better rating because it is never quite definitely either melodrama or farce. . . . As a hardboiled, cynical sardonic editor, Lowe turns in a top flight performance, loaded with smooth wise-cracking of the kind that is right down his alley. . . . Gloria Stuart creates a thoroughly acceptable heroine and Spring Byington, as her mother, wrings every laugh possible from the material given her."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 S 16 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 S 17 '36

"Estimate: fair."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p38 O 1 '36

"If Universal had spread one more layer of gloss over 'Girl on the Front Page,' it would have had a bangup comedy film. As is, the production nearly arrives. But that margin of difference between a smoothly coated job, and one that shows a few chips, will also be the margin between big grosses and spotty intake. Especially so since the marquee weight is in that borderline class. . . . [It] contains a flock of good laugh spots, many of them registering solidly, woven around an old wheel-horse of a framework."

+ — Variety p14 N 11 '36

"[It] is rollicking fun. Expertly scripted and directed, it has real entertainment written all over it. Universal has a comedy-romance in this one that justifies the company's pledges to exhibitors. Although a newspaper-racketeer yarn, 'The Girl on the Front Page' far and away tops them all so far."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 16 '36

GIVE ME YOUR HEART. Warner 88min J1 18 '36

Cast: Kay Francis, George Brent, Roland Young, Patric Knowles, Frieda Inescort

Director: Archie L. Mayo

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Kay Francis sulks through a good deal of the film but is good in the more emotional scenes. The first half is very slow, but when the scene shifts to America the pace quickens considerably. Quite good entertainment for those who can bear so much sentimentality. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p155 S 30 '36

"A difficult subject handled with admirable delicacy. Mature. Outstanding."

+ + Nat Bd of R M S '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Roland Young by a brilliant performance saves this film from being just another so-called example of mother-love. . . . But if Mr. Young and Miss Flint do steal the picture, it is not because either Miss Francis or Mr. Brent fail in their respective tasks. It is a case of the characters represented by the former couple being far more interesting than the central figures. . . . Miss Francis's beauty has been touched upon. Her ability to act intelligently is proven once more here. As for Mr. Brent, he is alert and natural, besides being handsome. Mordaunt Hall

+ — Boston Transcript p4 S 26 '36

"This production is easily Kay Francis' best work to date from a popular entertainment viewpoint. It is much deeper than the favorite of all Francis' fans 'One Way Passage' and 'Street of Chance,' one of her best movies, but it falls short of 'White Angel' in some respects. Not, however, from the standpoint of popular appeal and heart interest." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p45 O '36

"One picture to which I can conscientiously send you this month is 'Give Me Your Heart.' This is one written and acted for audiences over eleven years old. . . . [It is] as well done as a good stage play. Kay Francis doesn't always get my vote, but she can be awfully good as a woman with a problem on her mind, if she has to. The picture, however, is really Roland Young's. . . . The conversation in 'Give Me Your Heart' is intelligent first-time talk, not the sappy, repeat, picture-from-picture talk that we so frequently draw in the palace of the cinema. Not for children." Don Herold

+ Life p30 N '36

"Reworked from Jay Mallory's garrulous and confused drama . . . it has failed signally to give much-needed unity and accent to sorry material. The photoplay has a number of those big emotional moments that the screen contrives for tales of illicit love, but they are fragmentary interludes of power in a random production. . . . It was not a felicitous piece of casting that gave Kay Francis the part. . . . She plays Belinda with studious detachment, missing all of the complexities of the role. . . . Her acting is made all the more spurious by the suave assurance of Mr. Young. He minimizes the pseudo-psychological implications of the narrative, giving a clipped, humorous and rounded impersonation that is altogether delightful." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p18 S 17 '36

"'Give Me Your Heart,' belongs in the category of 'a woman's picture,' which usually means good news for the box office. The story gets off the beaten path of most scenarios and actually says something. . . . The situation, rather a delicate one, is well handled both by scenarist and director. . . . Archie L. Mayo, the director, has given the audience credit for some intelligence, a rare gift in a director." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p31 S 17 '36

"[It is] an affecting, mature and sophisticated drama of mother love and applied psychiatry. . . . The cast is thoroughly up to the task of bringing a basically exaggerated story to a convincing measure of credibility. Miss Francis, still amazingly gowned and handicapped by that distressing difficulty with her 'r's,' plays Belinda with pathos and reticence." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p18 S 17 '36

"Artfully contrived to batter down your emotions with its story of mother love, the film is a curious combination of sentiment, naivete and triteness that at times becomes genuinely affecting and at others downright preposterous and difficult to believe. . . . I suspect that on the whole 'Give Me Your Heart' is a fairly good film, full of the stuff of which cinema successes are made and the chances are that you will enjoy it fairly well." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p25 S 17 '36

"Kay Francis never has nonsense around her. . . . My, how she suffers! I really don't believe that I have the heart to tell you about her anguish and her nobility." John Mosher

New Yorker p83 S 26 '36

"[It] should prove vastly popular with better class matinee audiences. The woman's angle has been cannily handled, slush has been studiously avoided, a nice restraint is evident in all departments; it's the best vehicle Kay Francis has had since 'One Way Passage.' . . . A well-deserved pat on the back to Archie Mayo who's handled a delicate theme with skill and taste, evaded Mr. Breen's edicts with subtlety and effect." Herb Sterne

+ Script p12 S 26 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

GIVE ME YOUR HEART—Continued

"Give Me Your Heart" is a conventional tear-jerker, aimed especially at female cinemaddicts for whom its sentimental appeal will theoretically be reinforced by Kay Francis' clothes."

Time p31 S 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is the mother love theme all over again. Being specific rather than general in appeal, it is doubtful if it will receive more than average support. As entertainment it is not only very talky but suffers from lack of dramatic highlights. One of the virtues is some comedy but hardly enough to balance the long stretches where the story has difficulty in holding the interest. . . Miss Francis doesn't make the part as real as it might have been. Nor does she have support around her that gives the story its maximum power."

+ — Variety p16 S 16 '36

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN. Paramount 82min N 13 '36

Cast: Mae West, Warren William, Randolph Scott, Alice Brady, Elizabeth Patterson, Lyle Talbot, Isabel Jewell

Director: Henry Hathaway

Based on the stage success Personal Appearance by Lawrence Riley. In this satirical comedy Miss West plays the part of a Hollywood star whose contract stipulates that she shall not marry for five years. She makes a personal appearance tour under the direction of her publicity man whose task it is to keep her from indulging in romantic interludes with handsome men.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y & C: thoroughly unwholesome."

Christian Century p1639 D 2 '36

"Decidedly not a picture for children, but will amuse adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Mae West is poorly cast. Her style is not suited to the part and her characterization of Mavis Arden if not nearly so good as Gladys George's portrayal of the same story on the stage in 'Personal Appearance'. The picture has no outstanding sets or photography. It is destructive of ethical standards, somewhat demoralizing and totally lacking in charm. Matter of taste for adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The picture is full of action with amusing dialogue and situations but lacks subtlety. The delightful comedy and deft acting of several members of the cast reveal clearly the limitations of the star; in such company Miss West's mannerisms seem all the more exaggerated and incongruous. Adults, if for any audience," Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"[It is] a dull story. . . A disgusting characterization; slow tempo. The purpose of the inappropriate title is clear. No one. Mediocre." DAR

"A diverting film with excellent character sketches by an expert cast. Story is improbable and overdrawn but it will appeal to those who enjoy the usual Mae West innuendoes. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A burlesque on Mae West by Mae West herself. The characterization is a paradox of elegance and bad grammar, of vulgar sex appeal and glamorous costuming. Subtly sophisticated entertainment. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"This picture though lavishly produced and endowed with a highly competent cast remains a typical vehicle for the exploitation of the suggestive mannerisms of the star.

It is replete with sly innuendoes and daring vulgarities, cheaply entertaining. Adults: a matter of taste."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 26 '36

"It will entertain those who enjoy Mae West, but will displease those who are offended by her flamboyant personality. Miss West burlesques the screen personality which she has so vividly created. The entire cast is excellent. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 28 '36

"The legitimate stage play 'Personal Appearance' with slight changes and additions, provides an excellent medium for Mae West to demonstrate her original brand of acting. . . The plot is smoothly worked out and the clever direction of Henry Hathaway keeps all parts well balanced and offers ample opportunities for the amusing, malapropian remarks of Mae West and for the heavy overplaying of her emotions for rich comedy. A strong cast gives her excellent support. Adult entertainment."

+ Sel Motion Pict p9 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There are times when it is unwise for an actress to have too much her own way in the producing of a picture. This is exemplified in 'Go West, Young Man.' . . In her scenario she has tampered so freely with the narrative that it has been robbed of much of its interest. As it emerges from the studio this production is just another Mae West story, with Mae West lines and Mae West in almost every scene. Thus, a good play has been transformed into little more than a stereotyped picture, with Mae West endeavoring to arouse interest by the same tricks she has employed from her start in Hollywood. . . Miss West is not to be congratulated on her performance, for her method of attracting attention is never in the least subtle. . . Warren William gives a much better portrayal and so does Randolph Scott. . . Perhaps this picture will be a lesson to Miss West to permit others to share in the work on a production and also to hearken to direction." Mordaunt Hall

— Boston Transcript p4 N 21 '36

"If you are not one of those who has built up a prejudice against Miss West's lusty humor, this picture ought to provide a satisfactory evening of entertainment for adults. It is not perhaps as satisfactory fare for juveniles." Laura Elston

Canadian M p39 D '36

"Lengthy, coarse and not very funny. Mae West as a movie star stranded in the sticks displays her limitations. Adults."

— + Christian Science Monitor p15 N 28 '36

"Someone has said that the sex in Mae West's newest picture is of elephantine subtlety. Vulgar would be more explicit, with the added disadvantage of establishing a new low mark in entertainment for the Mae West series. There is speculation, too, as to whether the net results of the Westian histrionics enjoy an immunity from the Production Code Administration in Hollywood. It is unadulterated Minsky." J. P. Cunningham

— — Commonweal p162 D 4 '36

"Cleverly weaving the West mannerisms into the story pattern, Lawrence Riley's play, 'Personal Appearance', gave Mae a vehicle which by the expert direction of Henry Hathaway has been made into the best picture in which she has appeared. Only in her first screen appearance did she entertain me. . . All her previous pictures were based on the belief there is box-office in vulgarity. . . Riley's play capitalizes the walk, speech and eyes by making them legitimate features in a decent story that will offend no one."

+ Hollywood Spec p11 N 21 '36

"This stage comedy . . . has lost considerably in its transfer to the screen. The original foot-light comedy had a fresh slant on movieland eccentricities. . . Gladys George, now in the films, portrayed the ornate Mavis Arden for comedy in the Broadway production. Miss West plays Mavis Arden for comedy—and sex. The result is a smudgy performance with considerable double meaning introduced into its proceedings. Nobody stands out, unless it is Elizabeth Patterson as an elderly country spinster." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 D 19 '36

"Miss Mae West's addiction to a rolling water-front gait and speaking with fine impartiality through both nostrils come to small account in 'Go West, Young Man.' . . . It is possible that abandonment of the lace and bangle customs of the presumably gay '90's has altered the Westian spirit and dampened it. In any event, her first tussle with modern dress and a modern story just about results in a draw. . . . The plot of 'Personal Appearance' . . . is one of the most impolite and hilarious available in the theater. . . . The film, for all that it uses the Riley dialog, does not emerge as a particularly comic item."

+ — Lit Digest p26 N 21 '36

"Lawrence Riley's delightful and satirical stage success, 'Personal Appearance,' has come to the screen drained of nearly all its comic quality. It displays the increasingly ample Mae West in a slip-shod and tedious offering. Part of the fault lies in her extraordinarily inept adaptation of the play, but it is mostly due to her dull impersonation of what should have been a sure-fire role. She runs through her limited repertory of acting tricks over and over again and even her efforts at innuendo are less ribald than ludicrous. . . . The supporting company is proficient but it is hard put to it to make the action merry or lucid." Howard Barnes

— — N Y Herald Tribune p18 N 19 '36

"[The] film by late afternoon had shattered the box office records of even the popular 'Broadcast of 1937.' . . . [It is] one of Mae West's funniest, and certainly her best directed film. . . . Necessarily changed for screen purposes, 'Go West, Young Man' remains a hilarious farce. . . . The cleaning process, however, has not affected Mae West, who can still draw a double entendre into the most casual remark." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p22 N 19 '36

"The suavely undulating Mae West is back on the Paramount screen with a new and engagingly robustness exposition. . . . Generally speaking, 'Personal Appearance' has lost little in Miss West's edition. . . . The salty idiom and the haughty malapropisms that punctuated the stage piece have been retained wherever they could be got by the censors, and there is something to be said for Miss West's presentation of these features. . . . As is customary when Hollywood makes a special effort, the supporting cast is uniformly excellent. . . . Warren William, as the press agent, is, of course, deserving of the most special mention of all. He is the only player who has ever come close to stealing a picture from Mae West." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p31 N 19 '36

"Although most of the ruddier aspects of Lawrence Riley's 'Personal Appearance' have been whitewashed . . . enough torrid moments have been substituted to make the picture an impudently piquant entertainment. . . . 'Go West, Young Man' may not be as brisk and hotcha as the original from which it stems, but it is frisky enough and genial enough to be enjoyed without fear of harm by those who like a dash of spice in their entertainment." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p23 N 19 '36

"The film is Director Henry Hathaway's first comedy. Best known for such successes as 'Lives of a Bengal Lancer' and 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine,' he takes kindly to the new type of assignment. Miss West, however, continues to be very much herself. . . . 'Go West, Young Man' is strictly Mae West's field day—and strictly for Mae West fans."

News-Wk p20 N 23 '36

"'Go West, Young Man' is as deliberately ribald as the stage farce, but not nearly so funny. . . . The best comedy is supplied by Mae and Randolph Scott in scenes that are highly incendiary. The film is inexcusably jerky, badly cut, confused and dramatically weak after the climax on the sofa at 2 a. m. . . . Unless [Miss West's] vogue is more tenacious and spectacular than I assume it to be, she must learn some new business or spend more time in her study, writing herself the perfect story. 'Go West, Young Man' would have been much better with any one of half a dozen less familiar actresses in the leading rôle, and that, I fear, amounts to a major criticism." R. S. Ames

+ — Script p10 D 5 '36

"Lawrence Riley's super dig at the cinema queens has afforded the resourceful Miss West a miraculous opportunity. She is here disposed to make the most of it. If you are a Mae West fan, you'll slap your knee and roar. Even if you aren't a Mae West fan, you won't be able to resist this magnificent poke at pretense."

+ Stage p16 D '36

"While other producers are trying to be dainty, [Mae West] tries to be ribald. In 'Go West, Young Man' . . . her efforts are, as usual, successful."

+ Time p25 N 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Showmen can go to town with this latest Mae West hit with every confidence that the take at the wickets will more than justify the trip. Given a role featured by lines, brittle in their brightness, and replete with subtle satire, the becurved star comes through in the best Westian manner with a performance which at least ties, if not tops, anything she has ever done. Family."

+ Box Office p51 N 14 '36

"Mae West is back with us once more. So what, say you! So far as yours truly is concerned, that remark also sums up my attitude to the voluptuous Mae. What did I think of the picture? I am afraid that I don't know how to spell the word that describes it, but I believe that in polite society it is termed the 'razzberry.' . . . As for the performance of La West, she is either very good, or extraordinarily bad; your guess is as good as mine. . . . Direction is by Henry Hathaway, who also directed 'Lives of a Bengal Lancer.' How are the mighty fallen!"

— Canadian Moving Pict Digest p8 D 5 '36

"This will garner plenty of laughs. . . . [It] is an ideal vehicle for Mae West and she delivers solidly. Henry Hathaway has done a good job of directing. Warren William comes through with a splendid performance."

+ Film Daily p13 N 6 '36

"The story has been fitted out with a multiplicity of gags, many of which have nothing episodic and cumbersome instead of swift and to do with the tale, and in consequence it is sparkling. It is also well provided with Westian wisecracks for guffaw purposes, but will give the censors less trouble than usual. However, it is strictly for the Mae West fans. . . . The Mae West glamor, assisted by some stunning gowns and some good portrait photography is not lacking and is helped out with a couple of ballads. . . . But the part as played is wholly unsympathetic and unreal. . . . Director Hathaway is the victim of the script but adroitly saves individual episodes. The production as a whole lacks distinction and is hardly an auspicious start for Emanuel Cohen under his new Paramount releasing contract."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 3 '36

Motion Pict Daily p8 N 4 '36

"Though written by her, the picture screams satire at the industry, at actresses like herself. Estimate: depends on Mae."

Phila Exhibitor p49 N 15 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN—Continued

"[It] is on the way to snug profits. Aided by an excellent box office title 'Go West, Young Man' cannot miss. Miss West, in her own way, is excellent in the role Miss George created on the stage."

+ Variety p14 N 25 '36

"No Mae West picture has been more Westful or more zestful. It is earthy, erotic, pungent—broad comedy pitched at its most entertaining level—providing in ample measure all . . . the [enticements] West legions have come to expect and demand of this ribald farceur. The picture will be heavily touted, and young men and old will heed the title, 'Go West, Young Man,' with generous profit to producer and exhibitor from the ace palaces well down the line. . . For all its broad lines and its calculated entertainment vulgarity, the picture doesn't overstep the bounds of offensiveness within the censorial permissions."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 3 '36

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1937. Warner-First National 95min D 26 '36

Cast: Dick Powell. Joan Blondell. Glenda Farrell. Victor Moore. Lee Dixon. Os-good Perkins

Director: Lloyd Bacon

Dances: Busby Berkeley

Music & lyrics: Harry Warren. Al Dubin. Harold Arlen. E. Y. Harburg

Music director: Leo F. Forbstein

Based on the play Sweet Mystery of Life by Richard Maibaum, Michael Wallach and George Haight. A tuneful musical featuring a back stage story concerned with an insurance company taking over a musical production after the producer has been insured for a million dollars.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a well-worn formula, and one that has produced results and will doubtless produce them again. [It] varies only in incidentals from its predecessors. . . However, it is still an eye-fel, and you could probably do worse, as you could certainly do better. But by any count, it is a pleasant and harmless evening."

Laura Elston

+ — Canadian M p39 D '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This can be rated as the best of the 'Gold Diggers' series. It has a far better story than the usual musical comedy and is loaded with legitimate laughs."

+ Film Daily p7 D 2 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 D 1 '36

"'Gold Diggers of 1937' should be a gold-digging picture for those exhibitors who are lucky enough to have it on their schedules. Lavishly produced from story and script that are substantial, flashy and endowed with a cast of bang-up performers, it stands out as one of the most entertaining musicals of this or any other year. . . Dick Powell's part is a natural. . . His singing of all four songs in the picture ranks with his best vocal work on the screen and his acting sets a new Powell standard. Joan Blondell, in a less rowdy part than she usually draws, is more personable and more appreciated. Victor Moore, as a hypochondriac producer, almost steals the show."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 20 '36

GORGEOUS HUSSY. MGM 105min Ag 28 '36

Cast: Joan Crawford. Robert Taylor. Lionel Barrymore. Franchot Tone. Melvyn Douglas. James Stewart. Beulah Bondi

Director: Clarence Brown

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The picture is an excellent fusion of historical and romantic elements, and it has been directed with taste and distinction." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ + America p552 S 12 '36

"Direction is outstanding, the story is skillfully unfolded, and the attention to detail in costume and settings is unusually good. The picture is a fascinating presentation of one of the most stirring periods in American history. Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: beyond their understanding."

+ Motion Pict R p5 S '36

"A and Y: excellent; C: too mature."

Parents' M p42 N '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is rather pleasant to find an historical subject that is in itself intensely interesting, yet has not served before as the basis for a motion picture. . . It provides delightful movie material."

Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p45 O '36

"[It is a] well-written screen play, handsomely photographed. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 S 19 '36

"Most moviegoers will go to see 'The Gorgeous Hussy' because of the lovely posters of La Crawford in Bob Taylor's arms, rather than at the promptings of history. If so, you'll be disappointed. Taylor plays a bouncing, marcelled sailor boy who dies at the end of the second reel. . . Miss Crawford travels under wraps as Peggy. I'm afraid history frightened her." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p35 O 10 '36

"[It] is a studied, well-made picture, only half of it boring. Beulah Bondi, acts very well; Robert Taylor and Miss Crawford commendably."

+ — New Statesman & Nation p589 O 17 '36

"Like a lot of statesmen in 1823, the M.G.M. outfit in 1936 failed to take Andrew 'Old Hickory' Jackson into serious enough consideration; and 'The Gorgeous Hussy' emerges the story of a gussy Presidency. President Jackson and his pipe-smoking Rachel recreate a robust section of history all by themselves; Peg scurries about in their shadows unable to assume the titular responsibilities of a spectacular production. . . Hollywood glamour has become confused with historical glamour—that's what happened to 'The Gorgeous Hussy.' You may like Hollywood glamour, though."

Stage p24 O '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picture has all the fundamental elements that go to spell out good box office. The story will probably not hold quite as much appeal for Canadian audiences as it will for those in the United States."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 O 31 '36

GREAT O'MALLEY. Warner 70min F 13 '37

Cast: Pat O'Brien. Humphrey Bogart. Ann Sheridan. Frieda Inescort. Sybil Jason. Donald Crisp

Director: William Dieterle

Based on the novel The Making of O'Malley by Gerald Beaumont. This is a remake of a First National silent film. "The story is that of a young New York cop (Pat O'Brien) who, following in the footsteps of his policeman father, thinks that the only thing to do is to enforce the letter of the law. He gives a ticket to Humphrey Bogart, who is going on the first job he has had in years. The delay causes him to lose the job and in desperation to feed his wife and their crippled child, he pulls a holdup and is sent to prison." [Variety (Hollywood)]

Trade Paper Reviews

"A heart-warming program comedy-drama that is among the best of this year's crop of minor offerings from the Warner lot. It is a successful remake. . . The new version well justifies itself by keen character drawing, a rational appeal to the emotions and a worthwhile theme, well pointed but not overstressed. It also adds to the laurels of Pat O'Brien, playing an Irish cop in New York and doing it with such conviction, feeling and restraint as to lift the sentimental story into something near distinction. The offering will be popular and profitable on its level."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 D 3 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 D 4 '36

"That which is necessary to make a picture spell box office has been poured into 'The Great O'Malley' in generous quantities. The picture should do plenty of business on the big runs and crowd them in when it hits the neighborhood houses. . . Director William Dieterle has not missed in his efforts. Every scene shows the touch a good director can give a picture."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 3 '36

GREATER PROMISE. Amkino 83min O 7 '36

Cast: M. M. Blumenthal-Tamarina, V. L. Zuskin, L. A. Schmidt, L. M. Taitis

Director: V. Korsh-Sablin

Russian dialogue film with English sub-titles produced in Birobidjan, Russia. The plot is built around the life of a Jewish family who migrated to Birobidjan from a foreign country, and there formed with the help of neighbors a Collectivist Soviet unit.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] offers the warm-hearted wholesome optimism of the Russian films on national minorities. . . Zuskin . . . figures in several of the most genuinely comic episodes films of recent months have provided. On the filmic side, however, it must be said that 'A Greater Promise' is rather elementary. Film estimate: you're doing all right."

+ New Theatre p22 N '36

"With the aisles jammed and a waiting line of patrons, the new picture at the Cameo yesterday morning appeared to be in for a long run. . . [It] is an interesting and humorous account of the transplanted individuals' achievements and failures. Indeed, it is this excellent characterization which results in the picture's absorbing human interest, while the story is mellowed in its point of view and more talented in its performance than earlier films issuing from the Soviet Union." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p18 O 9 '36

"Beautiful photography, excellent woodland scenes and a picturization of the conquest of the Siberian wilderness are combined with a mildly interesting romance in 'A Greater Promise,' a fairly entertaining film record." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p27 O 8 '36

"Melodrama and propaganda are mixed with dubious results in 'A Greater Promise.' . . Although the narrative is obvious and jerky, there are a lot of good things in the film. The characters are full of vitality and humor and the acting is of a decidedly superior quality. But on the whole the film does not come off with any great distinction." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p33 O 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

— + Motion Pict Daily p13 O 9 '36

"[It] is artistically meritorious, but cold emotionally. It is a propaganda film which makes a deliberate appeal to race and to class, and Jews, whom this film would indicate the Soviet is befriending, may object to it. . . Obviously the film, on behalf of the Soviet, is inviting Jews outside of Russia to settle and develop the wild Birobidjan country, which in case of war with Japan could become among Russia's first lines of defense. . . The picture double-talks, condemning those whom it pretends to help."

Variety p23 O 21 '36

H*HAPPY GO LUCKY. Republic 68min D 14 '36

Cast: Phil Regan, Evelyn Venable, Jed Prouty, William Newell

Director: Aubrey Scotto

Music: Sam H. Stept, Ted Koehler, Ned Washington, Cliff Friend

Music director: Harry Grey

"Basic plot is the standardized double identity one. An American aviator with secrets of a new aviation mechanism is reported lost at sea. His sweetheart believes she discovers him singing in a Shanghai theater. Loss of memory is accepted as the reason why the singer does not recognize her." Hollywood Reporter

Trade Paper Reviews

"A very pleasing, although unpretentious musical production, which will do well by Regan, Republic and Mr. John Q. Exhibitor. The singing of Regan is strictly class A, and he handles his comedy role with ease. Family."

+ Box Office p21 D 5 '36

"This comedy mystery, with music, makes good program fare. Phil Regan, playing a dual role, gives an excellent performance and handles three songs very effectively. . . Aubrey Scotto did a very good job of directing. Colbert Clark rates credit as associate producer."

+ Film Daily p7 D 5 '36

"This is a mixture of melodrama, farce and music, well knitted together for satisfactory program fare. It is strictly hokum, but it is apparent that its makers never took the yarn too seriously and built it with a tongue-in-cheek routine to get a maximum of laughs. It will have its chief appeal in the secondary situations, where it will be a good bolsterer for any bill. . . It is apparent that the picture was made in short time and on a limited budget, but the direction by Aubrey Scotto and treatment of the hokum, plus acceptable work from Evelyn Venable, the romantic interest, Jed Prouty, her father, and the remainder of the cast, help to round out a pleasing programmer."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 30 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 D 3 '36

"Smartly concocted comedy melodrama with music, 'Happy Go Lucky' is one of Republic's most entertaining offerings, having sufficient production quality, story interest and melody to rank well in the program class and justify substantial box office expectations. . . Once the audience is beguiled into accepting the idea that two total strangers can be so nearly identical that even the aviator's beloved can't tell them apart, the semi-farical narrative is on its way for a session of light amusement and excellent music. . . Regan's personality gets over impressively and in song he is comparable to several of the more highly touted names."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 30 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

HERE COMES CARTER. First national 60min
O 24 '36

Cast: Ross Alexander, Glenda Farrell, Anne Nagel, Craig Reynolds, Hobart Cavanaugh
Director: William Clemens

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film under title of Tattler which was the former title.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: amusing; C: fair."
Christian Century p1639 D 2 '36

"Plenty of action and humorous incidents furnish entertainment for the family. Mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults, family & young people: fair entertainment; 8-14: too intense." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This is light, fast moving entertainment, with clever direction and interesting settings of a broadcasting station. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Farfetched, frothy and in rapid tempo, this 'Walter Winchell' story will amuse some adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A picture demonstrating courage and faith that truth will dominate and right prevail, which will appeal to a rather mature audience." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul S 12 '36

"Rather poor type of comedy with questionable ethics. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"Fair. Family-mature."
+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"This is an involved and meaningless tale. . . The acting and direction are competent, but do not redeem the story from its innate vulgarity. Adolescents, 12-16: low ethical standards; children, 8-12: no interest."
— Motion Pict R p9 O '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

"A & Y: fair satirical comedy; C: no interest."
Parents' M p32 D '36

"[It is] a fairly interesting film. . . The cast is a good one, well directed and fast moving; the repartee is clever and breezy and one gets an interesting view of a broadcasting studio. Family, except for young children."
+ — Sel Motion Pict p6 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is a] medium program comedy. Family."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 N 7 '36

"All this may point a moral lesson. However, its reasoning and purpose baffle me. . . The best performance is contributed by John Sheehan as a tough gangster with a weakness for movie first nights." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p44 D 19 '36

"It really begins to look as if we were in for a 'Here Comes' cycle, in the lower brackets of the films. . . The dialogue, surprisingly enough, is better than that of many technically more important productions. . . Mr. Alexander seems to be a younger, sprightlier Jack Benny, with a better gag-man than Jack's and at least as glib a delivery—the ease and self-assurance of his performance having never been exceeded by Mr. Benny himself. The picture has one or two amusing gangster intervals to recommend it, a line of consistently snappy broadcast patter, and very little else." B. R. C.
— + N Y Times p23 N 14 '36

"No one should be materially upset by the mild little comedy called 'Here Comes Carter.' . . An amiable and unpretentious mixture of satire and romance, it never for a moment pretends to be anything more than it is—a reasonably diverting and pleasant affair that can be enjoyed for some sixty minutes and forgotten with the greatest of ease on the way out of the theater." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p27 N 17 '36

"An unpretentious program-filler that lampoons radio, gangsters, the motion picture industry and, quite unconsciously, itself. You've undoubtedly heard those gossip spielers over the air—those fast-talking gents who tread with their heels and leave a swath of ruffled reputations in the wake of each broadcast. . . Not a very likable person, and Ross Alexander accentuates the bombastic character to the point of irritation. Ross purveys a laugh that's an annoyance. . . Glenda Farrell isn't done right by, in assignment or camera work." Herb Sterne

— + Script p10 O 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Ross Alexander breezes through this light morsel and manages to hold the interest in a script that is none too deftly written. But it will please the drop-in type of trade and the neighborhoods."

— + Film Daily p3 N 14 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p2 O 24 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."
+ — Phila Exhibitor p34 S 15 '36

"[It] does not quite click, not only on account of its implausibility but because it is slowly paced and too dependent upon the effervescent actions of Ross Alexander, who is more and more overworking his expression and his manner. He is growing smart alecky rather than breezy and if given too much of the footage is apt to tire if the story cannot carry him along. Can work on a dual, but will hit bottom as a single."

— Variety p13 N 18 '36

HIDEAWAY GIRL. Paramount 60min N 20 '36

Cast: Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Robert Cummings, Monroe Owsley
Director: George Archibaud

Based on a novel Cabin Cruiser by David Garth. "The story centers around Shirley Ross as a mysterious girl who is running away from the police and, when hidden away by Robert Cummings on his enormous yacht, refuses to account for herself despite a developing romantic interest. That is how she comes to be mistaken for Lady Jane, a notorious jewel thief. But the thief is aboard in the person of Cummings' fiancée and before it is over the rest of the gang and a large police force arrive to have it out." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Comedy portion is amusing in some details, but on the whole unpleasantly coarse. Uncalled for drinking. Matter of taste for adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Only for the limited group who enjoy noise and vulgarity will 'Hideaway Girl' hold audience appeal. The dialogue is trite and there is too much of it. Whatever dramatic possibilities the story might have had are overshadowed by the clowning of Martha Raye. This film has stupid direction and unbelievably poor acting. It is decidedly unwholesome, with extensive drinking, thieving and a too intimate bedroom sequence. Adults: matter of taste; 8 & 18: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"[It] opens with high promise. . . However, coincidence plays too great a part in the solution of the mystery, the romance develops entirely too rapidly for plausibility and an unpleasant sequence with Martha Raye prevents the picture from being other than mediocre entertainment. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Family, but mature for children. Good." DAR

"The film is filled with vulgar slapstick and music which is an assault to one's ears. A romantic little song agreeably sung by Shirley Ross and interesting photography are not enough to save this worthless picture. Adults, if any." Nat Soc of New England Women

"All attempts at dignity in the picture are defeated by crude, blatant, slapstick comedy on the part of the newly featured radio artist, Martha Raye, and the overemphasized drinking scenes reduce the ethical and social values to almost nil. Adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"Though swiftly paced and well staged, the picture is unworthy of the ability of the attractive young leads and offers little in the way of entertainment. Entirely too much drinking."

— + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 10 '36

"This is a pleasing musical comedy which gives ample opportunity for the exploitation of Martha Raye and her particular type of humor and songs. . . Clever stagecraft, good photography, capable direction and pleasing music. Excessive drinking. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 11 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

Sel Motion Pict p6 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A pleasant, nicely mounted and well directed offering which will do much to increase the popularity of two young players destined to accumulate large armies of fans. Shirley Ross and Robert Cummings are suited admirably to play the two sides of a romance. . . Martha Raye [is] heavily exploited as a headliner in 'Hideaway Girl.' In her drunken scene in 'Rhythm on the Range,' Martha revealed a flash of comedy genius, just an intimation of something which is susceptible of development. In 'Hideaway Girl' she manages to be only an irritating element, shouting songs in an unmusical, harsh voice, working her generous mouth into grotesque shapes and disporting herself generally in a manner inconsistent with the moods of the scenes in which she appears. . . This one could have been a thoroughly satisfactory piece of screen entertainment if it had not been mutilated to force Martha Raye on the public."

+ — Hollywood Spec p16 N 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Mediocre musical mystery—with Martha Raye cast in a role which limits her abilities. Family."

— + Box Office p51 N 14 '36

"A slim but moderately entertaining farce-comedy-melodrama that is given pulmotor treatment with songs sung by Shirley Ross and Martha Raye. The music, which is new, helps considerably, for neither the comedy, the romance nor the melodrama elements are strong enough to stand alone. With all four rather adroitly mixed the combination makes acceptable class B fare. . . The picture is George Arthur's first supervisory assignment and, under Producer A. M. Botsford, he has made the most of what was evidently pretty tough going."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 N 7 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p14 N 10 '36

"Modern programmer best for twin bill requirements unless the presence of Shirley Ross and Martha Raye help. 'Hideaway Girl' is just so-so."

— + Phila Exhibitor p52 N 15 '36

"Strictly B class production in every proportion, mediocre in essential entertainment and having no established names to pull it through the bog, 'Hideaway Girl' will have to fight for place in the lesser duals. [The] screen play is banal, the dialog generally trite and effort to sustain suspense labored, with direction by George Archainbaud lacking the zest and assurance to cover the defects."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 7 '36

HOLLYWOOD BOULEVARD. Paramount
75min Ag 21 '36

Cast: John Halliday, Marsha Hunt, Robert Cummings, C. Henry Gordon, Esther Ralston, Esther Dale, Frieda Inescort

Director: Robert Florey

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"An older generation of movie-goers, which is afflicted by nostalgic pangs at the mere mention of a faded star, may find this film of absorbing interest. . . Although I am not unduly sentimental, I find this wholesale rattling of bones and parading of Hollywood casualties not an exhilarating spectacle. . . The tale is rather depressing in the main. John Halliday has the lead and does admirably by it. This is also for the adult list." T. J. Fitzmorris

— + America p576 S 19 '36

"A: trash; Y & C: no."

Christian Century p1438 O 28 '36

"The tone of the film is uncertain. It sets out lightheartedly and then suddenly becomes heavily moral and obsessed with the unpleasantness of Hollywood life. . . Hollywood comes in for some nasty cracks on the score of calousness. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p152 S 30 '36

"Those who read the film fan magazines might care for this. Adolescents, 12-16 & children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R p6 O '36

"A, Y and C: fairly interesting."

Parents' M p42 N '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This picture, like its main character, is the rather dull decline of a very minor comet. Adults."

— Christian Science Monitor p13 S 26 '36

"The germ of an absorbing human-interest story lies behind 'Hollywood Boulevard,' no doubt, but as presented currently it has failed to jell. . . It results in entertainment that is often lurid, dull at times, and painfully average throughout for the intelligent observer. . . As for the picture itself—shallow character drawing, the cheap, plotty, hackneyed story, the obvious clichés and the hasty treatment make it mediocre." Marguerite Tazelaar

— + N Y Herald Tribune p10 S 21 '36

"[It is a] sorry combination of cynicism and maudlinism. . . It is a pretty hoary melodrama and slight enough excuse for a whole series of homilies upon the uncertainty of fame and fortune in the glamour city. And we felt pathetically embarrassed for the former stars and featured players. . . Hollywood, having neglected them all these years, at least should have had the decency and good taste not to make them parade themselves as Exhibits A, B, and C of the Forgotten Men and Women of filmdom. 'Hollywood Boulevard' is hardly a sporting gesture." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p26 S 21 '36

"A competent performance by that splendid actor, John Halliday . . . is the chief blessing of 'Hollywood Boulevard,' the tedious and blundering little rattletrap about a passe Hollywood star. . . Mr. Halliday uses every trick he knows to keep the film believable and bearable . . . but the two romantic leads, Robert Cummings and Marsha Hunt, are played as incompetently as the film is written and directed." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p16 S 21 '36

HOLLYWOOD BOULEVARD—Continued

"Despite a superb performance by John Halliday as Blakeford, and effective work by Marsha Hunt and Robert Cummings as the love interest, Paramount's picture fails to rise above the second-feature level."

— + News-Wk p27 S 26 '36

"The current excursion into Celluloid City starts out with a good idea and then loses a considerable part of it in a morass of trick angles and subplots. . . 'Hollywood Boulevard' is something you'll probably want to see because of Marsha Hunt's haunting loveliness . . . and the chance to welcome a host of past favorites back to a profession that needs 'em.'"

Herb Sterne

+ — Script p10 S 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Rabid fans will dote upon 'Hollywood Boulevard' and the general rank-and-file will be entertained. It has unexpected virtues, having one of the best scripts ever possessed by a behind-the-scenes-in-Hollywood picture. It has the advantage of introducing its old timers intelligently and plausibly."

+ Variety p16 S 23 '36

HOPALONG CASSIDY RETURNS. Paramount
72min O 16 '36

Cast: William Boyd, George Hayes, Gail Sheridan

Director: Nate Watt

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Fast action and good photography are depended upon to put over this banal story of early mining days. In spite of the hackneyed plot, it will be entertaining to those who enjoy Westerns. Family-mature. (Too much gun play for children.)" Am Legion Auxiliary

"The usual bad men, dance hall girls, gambling, drinking and a brutal scene where the crippled editor of the local paper is lassoed in his wheel chair and dragged to his death. Adults: poor; 14-18: good; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The story is well told, with sufficient 'punch' to save it from being an ordinary Western. The high principles and courage of this familiar character give a wholesomeness to every picture in this series—this one, however, being a bit more sophisticated in tone than the others. Good for type. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Picturesque natural settings; hard drinking; much shooting. Mature. Mediocre." DAR

"Varied scenes and fine horsemanship in a film which depicts the worst features of the old time West. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Although true to type, the usually trite shooting, drinking and rowdism are not overdone and the old time 'shindigs' have been omitted, all tending to make a better class Western. Very suitably cast with appropriate dialogue. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"[It is] another exciting Western. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 14 '36

"Those who enjoy Westerns will find the latest of the Hopalong Cassidy series much to their taste with its dash and swing, excellent riding, straight-shooting and one of the best of the frontier heroes, William Boyd. These films boast better direction with fewer hitches in action, than most of their kind. . . There is one scene which will bring shudders to many, the spectacle of an invalid dragged to his death in a wheel-chair. Such an exhibition of wanton cruelty is unnecessary and to be deplored, especially in a picture which will attract junior audiences. Adolescents, 12-16: questionable; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R p6 N '36

"[It is] a very mediocre Western. . . A waste of time for any audience."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women O 14 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 29 '36

"A & Y: poor; C: no."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"[It is] a stereotyped Western. . . The only relieving feature is the scenery. Adults & young people."

— + Sel Motion Pict p7 N 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Showmen can welcome Hopalong back with every confidence that this first of Harry Sherman's new series will be a success at the turnstiles. Family."

+ Box Office p63 O 17 '36

"This Hopalong is one of the best in the series. It has more plot and more dramatics than the previous ones, and it stacks up as an outdoor picture of the best grade."

+ Film Daily p8 O 12 '36

"With stories, production and direction constantly improving, this is undoubtedly the best of the Hopalong Cassidy series. It represents a completely satisfactory hour of all-family entertainment and any exhibitor who has done well with the Hopalong before should do better with this."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 8 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p13 O 9 '36

"It holds to the high standard set last season. Estimate: okay."

+ Phila Exhibitor p33 N 1 '36

"With a substantial following built on former pictures in the series, 'Hopalong Cassidy Returns' is a cinch to bear fruit at the wickets wherever it is played. Film has that ample punch to bring them in. It's truly a Western, with all players portraying their characterizations in magnificent style. . . Capably written, acted, directed and produced, this film shouldn't be hard to sell. It's just what the customers like—in the proper theatres."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 8 '36

HOUSE OF SECRETS. Chesterfield 67min O 26 '36

Cast: Leslie Fenton, Muriel Evans, Sidney Blackmer

Director: Roland Reed

"[It is the story of] an American who finds himself not only heir to a large English estate but also the center of much interest on the part of Scotland Yard. He is helped by a friend, who is a detective bent upon a different mission." Sel Motion Pict

Audience Suitability Ratings

"An absorbing mystery drama. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee
+ Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A, Y & C: fair melodrama."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Good acting, smooth and fast direction and an excellent climax are combined in an entertaining film. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict p10 N 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The story is weak, acting only average, some situations are impossible, so 'The House of Secrets' winds up best suited for neighborhoods, twin bills."

— Phila Exhibitor p49 N 15 '36

I

I COVER CHINATOWN. Banner 64min

Cast: Norman Foster. Elaine Shepard. Theodore Von Eltz

Director: Norman Foster

"Locale is San Francisco's Chinatown, where a cold-blooded trunk murder is committed by the elder of two crooks who deal in stolen goods and run a store for a front." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"Produced by Banner Pictures, this one will please patrons of the smaller theaters who thrive on suspense, excitement and melodrama. Although dialogue, direction and some of the acting are not highly polished, they're adequate to get the yarn across."

+ — Film Daily p4 Ag 25 '36

"Estimate: okey independent action picture."

+ Phila Exhibitor p40 O 15 '36

IN HIS STEPS. Grand national 75min S 22 '36

Cast: Eric Linden. Cecilia Parker. Henry Kolker. Charles Richman

Director: Karl Brown

Based on the novel of the same title by Charles M. Sheldon. "It tells the tale of the son and daughter of two wealthy families who marry under age and against their parents' consent. There is a business feud on between the heads of the families. The young couple elope, and hide on the farm of the minister who marries them, because the young man faces a prison sentence of ten years for kidnapping the bride." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The charm of pious simplicity, the real influence in the lives of the boy and girl against the absorbing greed of wealth and power is so realistically brought out that there is no consciousness of the sermon. . . Excellent entertainment. Family-mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family. Adults & 14-18: excellent; 8-14: mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture, with its fine spiritual theme is handled in a delightfully entertaining manner throughout with sufficient comedy interspersed to relieve the inherent seriousness. Rating: very good. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Constructive philosophy. Mature-family. Good." DAR

"Mature audiences (over 16)." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Worthwhile entertainment, especially appealing to young people. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The straightforward sincerity of this picture commends it to a varied audience. . . It leaves the audience a pleasant memory of an association with worth while human characters. Family." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"There is a fine balance of the elements of good entertainment, humor, pathos, swift action and strong drama. . . Delightfully entertaining, inspiring and thought-provoking. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 16 '36

"Mature."

+ Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"There is uplift and inspiration in this picture though at times the preachment is obvious. Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 21 '36

"A deeply moving story with fine moral values. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A, Y and C: good."

Parents' M p42 N '36

Scholastic p23 O 31 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict p3 O 1 '36

"Full of good characterizations and amusing incidents, to counteract the rather machine-made plot, which has only the remotest connection with the novel from which it takes its title. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide S 26 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Family."

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 10 '36

"Grand National Pictures makes its debut with the picturization of Charles M. Sheldon's book, and thereby comes the resurrection of the old Pathe, which will not engage in staging photoplays directly, but will act through the new Grand National. While the first effort of the offspring of such an illustrious parent certainly does not crystallize the decades of production experience of the predecessor, it does bear healthy signs of a freshness of thought and treatment." J. P. Cunningham

+ — Commonweal p560 O 9 '36

"This is not for sophisticated audiences. Yet there is no denying a certain simple elemental appeal." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p37 N 7 '36

"In its favor the picture has clear and explicit direction, a motive lofty and scriptural, and sincere and grave performances by Miss Parker and Mr. Linden. On the other hand, the court scene at the end is so artificial it is ludicrous, while much of the story's force is disseminated by its implausibility." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p23 O 29 '36

"The screenplay is an old-fashioned drama, heavy with platitudes and ringing references to the more sterling virtues. It is exactly like a nineteenth century novel come to life. The acting, like plot and atmosphere, is old-fashioned, with no great attempt at characterization. The people are symbols rather than individuals. . . The picture seems slightly incongruous in 1936, rather like a period piece. Since the book is still doing well in the bookstalls, the picture will probably have an appeal to those who know the novel and can overlook its decided shortcomings as a modern movie." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p29 O 29 '36

"[It] is homespun cinema stuff, with all the irritations that those accustomed to more artfully woven fabrics usually experience from that commodity." J. T. M.

N Y Times p31 O 29 '36

"Sweetness and sentiment are drawn out to the point of pain in 'In His Steps,' one of those helpful little extravaganzas that stimulate the innocent of heart to noble emotions and kindly deeds. Although its speech is a lot of naive prattle and its cunning ways are just a step from the kindergarten, it attempts to teach us again the sturdy lessons of love,

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

IN HIS STEPS—Continued
self-reliance and regeneration." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p19 O 29 '36

Reviewed by John Mosher
New Yorker p90 N 7 '36

"Grand National Pictures' first production will satisfy women who like to weep. Nobly but sloppily, 'In His Steps' dramatizes Charles M. Sheldon's best seller."
News-Wk p35 O 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Producer B. F. Zeidman has given the new Grand National a picture with which it can make a proud debut. With ample entertainment values and based on a generally popular book and theme, the film is ably produced, directed and enacted. It will do business and augurs well for the place Grand National will occupy in production and exhibition fields. Family."

+ Box Office p63 S 19 '36

"At the Astor Theater where the trade show was held, the women folks were sniffing all over the house for twenty minutes before the picture finished—and were still sniffing as it closed. It's that kind of a love story, and based on this reception, it is hard to figure how it can miss. [It is] one of the most dramatically emotional plays of the season, as well as one of the most clean and wholesome."

+ Film Daily p8 S 22 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 S 12 '36

"Creditable all through with photography, direction, sound, first rate, this compares favorably in technique with any major effort. Will make a swell tear jerker for the family house. There is some real down-to-earth comedy in this that should alone recommend it for exhibitors with home folks audiences."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 O 1 '36

"Grand National . . . has made a sincere effort to project the essence of Charles M. Sheldon's book onto the screen so that it will appeal to the average audience. The picture is a tear-jerker and probably will get its share of the feminine trade. Whether it will stand alone on a program will depend on the exploitation put behind it and whether the exhibitor thinks the theme best suited for his patrons. . . As it appears on the screen this is reminiscent of 'The Miracle Man' and others in that category. In film form, the story takes on added strength due to nice scripting, a fine dialog job and uniformly competent acting."

+ Variety p19 N 4 '36

"With 'In His Steps,' a highly controversial picture because of its religious angles, Grand National Distributing Corp. breaks film tides with one that will appeal to the masses if properly exploited. It's a sleeper. By word of mouth, through women's organizations it will come out in the blue."

Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 11 '36

ISLE OF FURY. Warner 60min O 10 '36

Cast: Humphrey Bogart, Margaret Lindsay, Donald Woods, Paul Graetz, Gordon Hart, E. E. Clive

Director: Frank McDonald

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a trite story [which] . . . is helped materially by some unusually good photography." T. J. Fitzmorris

— + America p24 O 10 '36

"A: depends on taste; Y: better not; C: no."
Christian Century p1542 N 18 '36

"Fair entertainment for family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Excellent photography and some beautiful settings add to the entertainment value. Adults & 14-18: fair; 8-14: possible." Calif Cong of Far & Teachers

"In spite of the title, the action is not exaggerated, and the cast give portrayals that are human, sincere and convincing. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"[It is a] tangled incoherent story. Mature. Mediocre." DAR

"Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A picture which makes an appeal beyond the average run of this type and gives distinct value to a fine social drama. . . The way temptation is overcome brings out strength of character and a wholesome lesson in a production suitable to adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul S 19 '36

"A triangle mystery type of drama set against a well-photographed background. . . On the whole, understandable drama, given fairly interesting production. Mature." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ — Fox W Coast Bul O 10 '36

"It holds suspense and offers two particularly exciting sequences, the rescue of a ship in a tropical storm and a death fight with a devil fish, as well as interesting shots of pearl diving. The direction and acting are satisfactory, with Miki Morita excellent in a small part. Family. Mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 8 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"The story has good parts, such as the pearl fishing scenes, the shipwreck, the fight with the octopus, and the treatment is realistic and interesting. But the centre of interest shifts so often that the film lacks coherence and the ending is surprising. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p173 O '36

"[It is] an absurdly juvenile mystery story. . . A magnificent tropical storm with excellent accompanying music and the personality of Humphrey Bogart can scarcely offset a trite and silly story and the pernicious notion that a murderer unrepentant should be allowed to escape justice if he has a sufficiently beautiful wife, and adequate courage to fight an octopus. Adolescents, 12-16 & children, 8-12: no."

— + Motion Pict R p7 O '36

"This trite and obvious triangle theme against a background of South Sea Islands begins with some interesting variations and subtleties, which with excellent sound effects foreshadow the melodrama which unfolds. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 9 '36

"Outstanding photography and atmospheric background compensate for the triteness of the plot. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

"A & Y: fair; C: mature."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Striking marine and submarine photography and adequate acting in a film which shows rather jerky direction and abrupt changes of tempo. Adults."

— + Sel Motion Pict p5 O 1 '36

"Lively action, which covers up some hurried plot construction. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide O 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is some fine undersea photography and the acting is above average but the film is frequently jerky. Adults."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 N 7 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"If it's action you want, this picture has its share of punches—an under-water fight with a devil fish and a lot of dirty conniving by native pearl-divers. It has other things to recommend it, too—another chance to glimpse the work of Humphrey Bogart. . . , E. E. Clive carves out another brilliant job." Molly Lewin
Script p10 O 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This nicely produced feature vibrates with both the drama and enchanting atmosphere of the South Seas. . . Audiences in general will like this attraction for its vigorous entertainment elements. Frank McDonald's direction is thorough, while Frank Good's photography is even better than that name implies. Location shots are skillfully chosen, and natural beauties of settings ingeniously captured."
+ Film Daily p7 D 2 '36

"Estimate: program."
+ Phila Exhibitor p35 S 15 '36

"[It] represents a melodrama that ambles with fair steadiness through South Sea intrigue, perils of pearl diving, and a triangular love affair. It's okay as one end of a dual bill when teamed with a feature film, and it frankly aspires to no more."
+ Variety p29 N 18 '36

IT COULDN'T HAVE HAPPENED. Chesterfield 67min Ag 1 '36

Cast: Reginald Denny. Evelyn Brent. Jack LaRue. Inez Courtney. Hugh Marlowe

Director: Phil Rosen

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair; Y: doubtful; C: no."
Parents' M p42 N '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults only."
Christian Science Monitor p13 S 19 '36

"'It Couldn't Have Happened' is a mildly humorous murder mystery. In the slightly facetious vein which is the current cinema fashion in mystery plays, the picture is seldom a lucid account of detective work; but because it moves along in a happy way, it is as easy to take as it is to forget." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p52 O 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Full title of this opus is 'It Couldn't Have Happened—But It Did.' Many customers may add the interrogation, 'Why?' unless they copped a bank night prize. It's an afterthought to a double program set-up. Several highly capable folks are shoved around, misdirected and manhandled for about forty minutes before this backstage thriller finally gets down to solid ground. . . The biggest mystery about this film is how it could have been done so poorly."
— Variety p31 S 16 '36

J

JUGGERNAUT. Twickenham 70min

Cast: Boris Karloff. Joan Wyndham. Arthur Margetson. Mona Goya

Director: Henry Edwards

Filed in England. "The story tells how a fanatical, experiment-crazed doctor is forced to abandon his life's ambition through lack of funds. Suddenly the wealth he has longed for is offered to him by the philandering Lady Clifford, provided he will assist her in removing from existence her fabulously wealthy husband." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The story is improbable and the thrills sometimes touch absurdity but there is plenty of action and the acting is well suited to the story. . . The direction is competent, the photography uneven, the sound good. Suitability: adults & adolescents."
+ — Mo Film Bul p148 S 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With over-stressing, heavily labored direction, and acting pitched an octave too high even for the wildest of melodrama, this vehicle for the sinister Boris Karloff slips right off the map as a candidate for the horror category. . . Boris Karloff makes heavy going of the half-crazed doctor, and with much rolling of eyeballs and over-stressing of emphasis, fails to put across any suggestion of reality. Mona Goya, as the wicked countess, is equally unconvincing and theatrical."
— Hollywood Reporter p7 S 17 '36

"An uninspired melodrama, this one stands or falls on Karloff's name, for there is little else about it to help sell it. . . Directness of its far-fetched story is in the picture's favor, but at best its value would be confined to bargain nights, one night stands and other spots where you can fool 'em easy. . . Main part of the footage is dull, but the final reel tries to make up the speed with disastrous results. Intended to bring the tale to a suspenseful climax, it will instead probably bring titters. By re-shooting these sequences in a less frenzied manner, film might be saved, although doubtful whether it's worth the trouble."
— Variety p17 S 23 '36

JUNGLE PRINCESS. Paramount 85min N 27 '36

Cast: Dorothy Lamour. Ray Milland. Akim Tamiroff. Lynne Overman. Molly Lamont. Mala

Director: William Thiele

"This is a Tarzan-type picture with the sexes reversed. It has a little native girl who finds herself alone in the Malay jungle and grows up to lovely and lonely young womanhood among the big game, and it has a handsome young American who gets lost there and is rescued by her." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

"A fantastic tale in which romance, tragedy, comedy, animal devotion and the problems of a female Tarzan are combined in entertaining fashion. . . The social and moral problems of modern civilization are worked out in a highly improbable but nevertheless interesting way. The Hollywood jungle scenes, beautifully photographed, are fascinating and the acting and direction are admirable. Miss Lamour, a newcomer to the screen, has both personality and ability. Family."
+ Sel Motion Pict p10 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"When I see a picture of this sort, I have a thoroughly good time. . . It is a blessed relief to see something of the 'Jungle Princess' sort, to see new people in new surroundings, doing things totally unlike anything we ever have done. And parents, who like their children occasionally to find something completely to their liking in a motion picture theatre, will have cause to give thanks for this Paramount production. The story perhaps might have been a little more believable and more closely knit, but, after all, it is the background that matters most, and we certainly can not quarrel with it on the ground that it is not entertaining. . . 'Jungle Princess' is worthwhile, particularly as entertainment for children who have been a neglected box-office element since the screen went talkie. When it comes your way, take the youngsters to see it. It is essentially entertainment for the entire family."

JUNGLE PRINCESS—Continued

+ Hollywood Spec p11 D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A splendid performance by Dorothy Lamour and several gripping stock jungle shots make this good entertainment, despite its many unbelievable situations. Film will rate with juveniles, made 'jungle conscious' through the celluloid and newspaper antics of Tarzan, and can command prominence in any neighborhood situation. Family."

+ Box Office p23 N 28 '36

"Lacking the real thrilling excitement that makes a Tarzan or Jungle picture, this number is only mild entertainment of its type. The picture's interest in the main, is that it introduces the new and charming Dorothy Lamour who exhibits physical charm and personality that should mean something. . . The screen-play . . . is imaginative and well constructed. But with all the good technical contributions, the picture still lacks the vital tense situations that really make this type of picture."

+ Film Daily p9 N 20 '36

"The highly imaginary situation gives opportunity for exciting animal melodrama and social complications, and it will be hugely enjoyed by junior-minded audiences on the Tarzan level. It should also be profitable. . . Max Marcin's story is, of course, according to formula, but it has been worked up into innocent and ingenious entertainment."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 17 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p13 N 18 '36

"Where a female Tarzan is saleable, so is the show. Miss Lamour indicates she has plenty of talent. Estimate: depends on exploitation."

Phila Exhibitor p30 D 1 '36

"Although based on an improbable story and filled with impossible situations, 'The Jungle Princess' is a female Tarzan yarn that will rate fair as a bolsterer on duals. It is hardly a sufficient vehicle to introduce to audiences the screen personality of Dorothy Lamour. . . Those who like their Tarzans, male or female, may go for this one for its action and somewhat idyllic nature, but this will hold only with the neighborhood trade and youngsters."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 17 '36

K*DER KAMPF. Amkino 90min S 10 '36

Cast: Lotte Loebinger, Bruno Schmitsdorf, Gregor Gog, Ingeborg Franke

Director: Gustav Wengenheim

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Maybe we miss the social significance in the cinematic confusion. . . It is hot with bitterness against the Nazis; but the bitterness gets involved in the general muddle. . . Critics tell us Lotte Loebinger does some fine acting as the mother, but you will have to discover for yourself. We are not sure just what she is trying to express—but, whatever it is, she is expressing it at top emotion for ninety minutes." (1 star) Beverly Hills

Liberty p39 O 17 '36

"'Der Kampf' is at one and the same time the most important, moving, formalistically the most interesting, and yet the most incomplete and imperfect film of current running. . . This pent-up protest has crystalized in the greatest single movie performance of the last five years—Lotte Loebinger as Mother Lemke. . . The two strands of the story run side by side and at times cross to the illumination of each. Unfortunately neither is sufficiently clear to make for a complete and logically acceptable whole. . . All its shortcomings taken into consideration, 'Der Kampf' [rates] as an unqualified must [see], if only that it proves that films need not be sure divertissement but can be as rich, raw, and full of protest as life. . . We get a sense of participating in the future." Robert Stebbins

New Theatre p25 O '36

"It is surprising and a great disappointment that 'Der Kampf' should turn out to be a botched piece of work. . . There are outstanding scenes in the film. . . They suggest what the whole film might have been as a piece of reporting had there been an inspired handling of the story involved. . . Yet most of it is too muddled for us, too baffling and murky." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p98 S 19 '36

"This is propaganda. Flicker fans whose eyes glaze at films made to arouse indignation had better look elsewhere. But it will doubtless please those who enjoy an emotional evening at the expense of the Brown Shirts."

News-Wk p30 S 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A provocative condemnation of Nazi barbarism, and a tribute to German workers who have fought and still fight against fascism. . . The entire cast is effective, playing the parts with great realism. Spoken in German, but liberally supplied with super-imposed English dialogue titles, the action is easily followed and should appeal to liberal audiences."

+ Hollywood Reporter p7 S 25 '36

"It is strong and frequently heartrending. . . As cinematography, on the other hand, it is, unfortunately, not all it should be. This latter is unfortunate. It seems as though the producers were nursing their wounds a bit too much, still conscious of their bruises and, in their anxiety to tell the world about it all, forgot about such things as scenic equity, acting, photography and direction. . . And yet the spectator can't help feeling the tense drama of it all, behind scenes."

Variety p16 S 16 '36

KELLY THE SECOND. MGM 70min Ag 21 '36

Cast: Patsy Kelly, Guinn (Big Boy) Williams, Charley Chase, Pert Kelton, Edward Brophy

Director: Gus Meins

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Here is a comedy which will effectively dispel any suspicion that the movies are going highbrow, in spite of their wholesale raids on the classics. It seems to be Patsy Kelly's day off as the bright spot in other people's poor pictures, and in this boisterous affair she has a whole hour in which to convulse her public with laughter unrefined. . . As any movie-goer who knows the star's forte will appreciate, this is not comedy in terms of George Meredith; but if it never quite penetrates into cerebral regions, it is immensely pleasing as far as it goes." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p528 S 5 '36

"A: hardly; Y: good of kind; C: perhaps."
Christian Century p1438 O 28 '36

"A, Y and C: typical Hal Roach comedy with Patsy Kelly leading the slapstick show."
Parents' M p44 J1 '36

"[It is a] good farcical comedy, with some of Metro's best comics. . . Plenty of laughs."
+ Wkly Guide Ag 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"An especial treat for Patsy Kelly fans, which will also be found entertaining by those who don't mind their farces rough, tough and roaring. . . The producers run the gag mill at top speed. Family."
+ Christian Science Monitor O 3 '36

"While 'Kelly the Second' is no more than a string of gags, it is frequently funny, and for those who enjoy slapstick it should prove entertaining. With Patsy Kelly, Charley Chase and Pert Kelton in the cast, the performance is naturally hilarious as well as shrewdly skillful, and if the scattered gags have been strung out a trifle thin, the unflagging exuberance of Miss Kelly makes up for it." Marguerite Taze-lar
+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 O 3 '36

"Laughable as it may be, there is little or nothing that is new or important about 'Kelly the Second,' except that it is the first 'starring' vehicle of Patsy Kelly, who is known to some few ardent admirers as Kelly the one-and-only. . . She is still authentic Kelly, though deplorably softened, one feels (probably because of the responsibility), as compared with the madly irresponsible Kelly of the merely supporting rôles." B. R. C.
— + N Y Times p21 O 3 '36

"Although the event is auspicious, the circumstances under which Miss Kelly makes her debut as a Hollywood First Lady are dubious, since the film is definitely unadroit and spotty in spite of the roguish horse-play of its humor. . . Fearing, perhaps, that their story was a little too skinny to provide an hour of entertainment, the producers have padded it with a series of gags, some of which are funny, but only now and then. For the most part, 'Kelly the Second' remains a good two-reel comedy stretched out to feature length." William Boehnel
— + N Y World-Telegram p25 O 6 '36

"The Hal Roach set will enjoy 'Kelly the Second.' Even more reserved persons may be impressed by the grand moment at the end. . . Miss Patsy Kelly is a stalwart heroine in the piece, which is stuffed rich and toothsome with the good old gags." John Mosher
+ New Yorker p91 O 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Kelly the Second' probably will be welcomed in the duals, because it is filled with humorous moments. But it is too lightweight in plot and accomplished results to stand up alone in most spots. . . Picture has been trimmed about 15 minutes since originally released, and that helps a lot. Even so, some of the gaggings actually slows down the pace midway. Runs 70 minutes now, which is plenty for the average comedy of this sort, especially if placed with another picture."
+ — Variety p15 O 7 '36

LA KERMESSE HEROIQUE. Tobis 95min S
22 '36

Cast: Françoise Rosay. Alerme. Jean Murat.
Louis Jouvet

Director: Jacques Feyder

Based on the novel of the same title by Charles Spaak. A French dialogue film with English sub-titles produced in France. The photoplay received the Grand Prix du Cinéma Français and the gold medal award of the Venice International Exposition of Cinematography. The film is sub-titled Carnival in Flanders. "The story tells of [a town's] predicament when, on the eve of a carnival, the Burgomaster and aldermen learn that the Spanish plan to spend the night there. The Spanish are a battalion of King Philip's army, which have thoroughly terrified Flanders. . . The Burgomaster has an idea. He will pretend to be dead in the hope that the Duke will pass through the village without stopping." (N Y Sun)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A thoroughly delightful piece of entertainment, quite as colossal as 'The Charge of the Light Brigade,' but infinitely superior. 'La Kermesse Heroique' does not derive its excellence from massive sets (although there are many of them) nor from its large personnel; these factors merely form the incidental background for the unfolding of a simple little story, ingeniously enacted by players who act like human beings."
+ Bul on Current Films N 17 '36

"The cleverest thing about the film is undoubtedly the direction of characters, which is extremely subtle: whether singly, in groups, or in crowds, they are always handled with understanding. Françoise Rosay as the Burgomaster's wife is entirely credible, and although she is to all intents and purposes the heroine, her own weaknesses (inevitably bourgeois weaknesses) are not omitted or blurred over. . . Among the very best performances, however, is that of Louis Jouvet as the Duke's chaplain, benign, knowing, sophisticated, and not ignorant of the pleasures of the table. Where the film is not so fully successful—apart from one or two minor faults of construction—is in making its general aims perfectly clear. In details the satire is pointed, but on a general view it is not always easy to know if the film is not simply making fun of an historical period—a less exalted purpose. Suitability: adults & adolescents." A. V.

Mo Film Bul p179 O '36

"On second review, we find this picture definitely objectionable because of subtle indecent dialogue and incidents. Its entire tone is unwholesome and in addition most of it is quite boring. Condemned."
— — Nat Legion of Decency O 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Gallic wit at its crispest delivered by a splendid cast who wear their ruffs and pantaloons with an air. This with direction, photography and music explains why the film won two coveted European cinema prizes. Adults."
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '36

"The French are advancing 'La Kermesse Heroique' as the greatest comedy to reach this country from the motion picture studios of Paris. It is, as they say, without any question, a capably wrought, skillfully played, well directed, handsomely mounted, notably photographed and hilariously studded farce. But they do not mention the more important fact that the plot and climactic action basically involve the 'unique performance of mass adultery by the married women of a homey Flemish town. . . From the viewpoint of construction, the production warranted the honors awarded it. . . But it definitely is not in accordance with American motion picture entertainment standards, bringing condemnation from the Legion of Decency. . . It is unfortunate indeed that the reputed expenditure of $400,000 . . . should be lost on such a subject if the producers desired to impress America." J. P. Cunningham
Commonweal p52 N 6 '36

"This is recommended for those who love good pictures in any language. . . Our protest against Hollywood-made historical films is that they reek of studio artificiality, that they are too spick and span, that they have none of the mellow, dusty flavor of their age. . . On the other hand, European movie makers seem to be able to get past the fresh-paint sign into the past. Jacques Feyder's mature intelligent direction makes this story of nineteen hours of a September day and night in 1616 a richly colored tapestry brought to life. . . Every role, down to the smallest bits of soldiers and peasants, is perfectly done." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

LA KERMESE HEROIQUE—Continued

Liberty p35 N 7 '36

"'La Kermesse Héroïque,' is one of the most diverting [pictures] I have ever watched. . . The acting of François Rosay as the mayor's wife is alone worth going miles to see. But perhaps it is more to the point to speak of the way the entire cast wears its clothes. I have seldom seen a more convincing costume piece, and the reason seems to be that nobody is aware that he has stepped out of a seventeenth-century Low Country painting. . . It will be remembered by those who see it as an extraordinarily finished film." Mark Van Doren

+ + Nation p428 O 10 '36

"At last, a cultured film. . . Except that it shows us Jan Breughel busy painting a Franz Hals, not only is the film lovingly true in its 'atmosphere' and scrupulously attentive to detail, but it was evidently inspired by its subject—the plump and buoyant life of the Netherlands . . . with which the director has completely identified it. This can be said of few films. . . We are made to feel that . . . Feyder's bourgeois will slip back into the frames of their old masters, resuming a two-dimensional peace from which his motion-camera woke them to momentary life. The film is an object-lesson to Hollywood and Denham—it shows that the 'costume-picture' need not be vulgar and illiterate."

+ + New Statesman & Nation p628 O 24 '36

"'La Kermesse Heroique' [is] the most scintillating and adult costume comedy that has ever come from abroad. . . The film has received a fustian lavish beyond what one thought possible to French movie finance. All in all a remarkable enterprise in which Jacques Feyder, the director, astounds with the spontaneity and unfailing rightness of his seemingly inexhaustible comic devices." Robert Stebbins

+ + New Theatre p25 O '36

"Crowned with richly deserved laurels in France and Italy, Jacques Feyder's 'La Kermesse Heroique' opened at the newly launched Filmarte Theater. It is a notable photoplay, gorgeously mounted and costumed, brilliantly acted and filled with all the sorcery that a cannily manipulated camera can invoke. . . [It is] a lusty and completely captivating motion picture. . . With this work Feyder takes his place with Rene Clair and Charlie Chaplin as one of the distinguished comic artists of the cinema. . . There is an abundant vitality about the photoplay that is rarely attained in the medium of the screen." Howard Barnes

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p23 S 23 '36

"It is a production which has already won honors abroad, and a production which Hollywood might well covet as its own. They would probably not have done it as well in Hollywood. . . This is a cast that would bring joy to any director, and Jacques Feyder has done his own job magnificently. . . [It] is about as much as a moviegoer can ask. . . Lazare Meerson, in charge of the settings, has succeeded in making the entire production look as though the paintings of seventeenth century Flanders had suddenly come to life. 'La Kermesse Heroique' is in answer to the people who wonder why movies don't occasionally tackle something original." Eileen Creelman

+ + N Y Sun p35 S 23 '36

"[The new] Filmarte [is] dedicated to the exhibition of outstanding pictures from abroad. Let us note at once that the Filmarte's first offering comes easily within the distinguished category mentioned in the theatre's dedication. . . [It] is an outstanding picture by any standards save those of strict moralists and stricter religionists. . . A delightfully satirical libel upon the city of Boom and its masculine inhabitants, the film has achieved a delicate balance between broad farce and subtle humor which makes it one of the most refreshing and witty pictures of the year. . . Do not, we beg you, be dissuaded from seeing it because the dialogue is in French. Even without the many English subtitles, 'La Kermesse Heroique' would be clearly understood; like all great comedies, it speaks a universal language." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p29 S 23 '36

"The so-called superiority of Homo Sapiens comes in for some cruel razzing in 'La Kermesse Heroique,' the lively and impudent little cinema prank from Paris. . . A bawdy romp, whose mood is ribald and treatment laughable, it ungently kicks the accepted legend that man is superior to woman swiftly and firmly in the pants, thereby inspiring much hilarity. . . In a few words, 'La Kermesse Heroique' is glib, sophisticated and tonic entertainment." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p31 S 23 '36

"Bawdy, funny, with wicked comedy by François Rosay, sets after Breughel, and a slick story about the ladies of a Flanders town and how they survived one Spanish invasion, it will divert jaded types." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p77 O 3 '36

"[It is] a light, bubbling French concoction. . . 'La Kermesse Heroique' roped in [two prizes] for the 'finest French film of the year.' . . Its director, Jacques Feyder, deserves both emblems."

+ News-Wk p34 O 3 '36

"'La Kermesse Héroïque' is the rarest thing in the cinema, a really adult film. . . It is an admirable film, a little obscene like most good comedies, and beautifully acted. I admired particularly the Dominican chaplain. . . M. Feyder's camera picks out with vividness and invention absurdities in costume and character and almost as skillfully as a Restoration dramatist he lightly works into his ribald story a touch of the genuine, the simple emotion." Graham Greene

+ + Spec p747 O 30 '36

"The French film which was awarded the Grand Prix du Cinema Francaise is running wild at the new Filmarte Theatre breaking records of audience response at every showing. This would seem to indicate that the French know their comedy, or that New Yorkers know their French, or maybe that a good picture is a good picture in any language. Let's grant all three. . . The burgomaster, played by Alerme, his wife, played by François Rosay, and the Duke, portrayed by Jean Murat, have a field day of pantomime; and each is expert in sustaining a long and arduous sequence of fun. It is not customary that a comedy be mounted in luxurious settings, but 'La Kermesse Heroique' takes place before a background so compellingly beautiful that it should be used as a standard of excellence by all picture makers."

+ + Stage p14 N '36

"Directed by Jacques Feyder . . . 'La Kermesse Heroique' explodes the theory that René Clair has a monopoly on urbane comedy in the French cinema. It is as sly a farce as any that has ever led a U.S. censor board to mistake good manners for innocent intentions. Produced at a cost of $850,000—fabulous for a French cinema—and magnificently set by Lazare Meerson, it was distinguished abroad by winning the grand Prix du Cinéma Français, being banned in England and Holland."

+ Time p30 O 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The sure-fire human qualities of this hilarious French satire make it delightful entertainment, the gay and sparkling dialogue of the super-imposed English titles insuring its universal appeal. Adults."

+ Box Office p27 O 3 '36

"Packed with clever acting by principals and supporting cast, hilarious comedy and sparkling French dialogue that flashes in crisply translated English titles, this feature . . . is an outstanding photoplay that will delight American audiences. [It] is easily the best screen entertainment that has come out of foreign studios in many a moon."

+ Film Daily p11 S 24 '36

"This French production with complete dialogue titles in English (which titles were almost unnecessary, so universally do the actions of these sterling players convey their meaning in or without any language and so will the simplicity of the story and its brilliant unfolding likewise be universal in its clarity and appeal), comes to this country with the distinction of being the best film produced in France last year. . . Theaters with adult clientele can offer their patrons something refreshing and rib-tickling with [this picture]. Feyder should be a favorite in Hollywood, once again on the strength of this production."

+ Hollywood Reporter p9 O 5 '36

"The comedy is broad, enthusiastically met by the cast, slyly risqué but always tasteful. The dialogue is French but English subtitles make following the story a pleasure. The entire production is suitable domestically for sophisticated, adult, literate [audiences]."

+ Phila Exhibitor p37 N 1 '36

"This French comedy spectacle . . . is tops for arty and foreign language houses. Only its length will militate against its showing in film theatres using two features. Even the handicap of being entirely in French and requiring English titles for the American audiences, fails to take away from its charm and thespian contributions. Story, direction, performances, photography and dialog are standout. . . In English, and with one or two box office names, this might well have taken its place in the procession of recently released American-produced costume plays."

+ Variety p29 S 30 '36

KILLER AT LARGE. Columbia 58min O 1 '36

Cast: Mary Brian, Russell Hardie, Betty Compson, George McKay, Henry Brandon

Director: David Selman

"The plot has to do with the apprehension of a murderer whose traces lie in the wax dummies he makes. Miss Brian, as the heroine detective, and her fiancé, a department store clerk who is wrongly suspected of the murder, together attempt to catch the killer." N Y Herald Tribune

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hopeless; Y and C: harmless but poor." Christian Century p1478 N 4 '36

"The story offered material for a good mystery. The production lacks suspense and significance. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

— Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"It is a rather dull mystery. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A: rather far-fetched melodrama; Y: poor; C: unsuitable."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict p11 N 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is enough plot in 'Killer at Large' for three spook pictures. Curiously enough, for a run-of-the-mill production of this kind, the first half of it is exceptionally well done. The suspense is maintained with blood-curdling deliberation, the unique ideas are forcefully depicted and the swift, bizarre movement leaves the spectator fairly gasping with anticipation. Then the piece slithers off into a conventional, obvious and rather ludicrous tracking down of the killer." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 O 26 '36

"[It] is a complete waste of time. . . It punctuates its stock plot with shrieking sirens, automobile chases, radio bulletins, comic detectives and bad dialogue. Every one tells every one else that Mr. Zero is abnormally cunning, but his actions would discredit an idiot, let alone a maniac. . . The players try hard, but 'Killer at Large' is a literary crime—almost a capital offense." F. S. Nugent

— — N Y Times p20 O 26 '36

"The new film . . . is not a good one. . . Very often, when films as dull as 'Killer at Large' happen along, some of us cinema reviewers, in an effort to temper our wrath at their grievous offense, make a minor virtue of anemia by applying to them such kindly admonitory adjectives as 'unobtrusive.' Although 'Killer at Large' is unobtrusive, it is also aggressively commonplace in characterization, halting in movement and pedestrian in dialogue." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p17 O 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A few shriek-producing sequences and a thrilling chase climax reached up by a pleasing romantic story result in an above-average mystery programmer which makes satisfactory double-bill material. Family."

+ Box Office p51 N 14 '36

"It is fairly entertaining cinema fare for average fans who like a dash of the Frankenstein sort of thing in their diversion diets. . . Feature will stand double featuring okay and stand on own feet in all secondary spots."

+ — Film Daily p13 O 27 '36

"Credibility is not the long suit of this story or adaptation, as is the case in pictures concerning abnormal criminals. . . Theaters with strong cross-roads transient trade, or those appealing to the tastes of the stronger sex, will do business with this one. The boys will have a good time, as silly as it is."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 N 4 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 O 27 '36

"This chiller is replete with countless implausibilities. Because the picture is filled with so many incredible happenings and downright hokum, it would not make the grade on a single-feature set-up even if the vehicle boasted even medium-draw names. As is, the film will have to be sold as an unusual thriller because it does have exciting moments."

— + Variety p15 O 28 '36

KING OF HOCKEY. Warner 56min D 19 '36

Cast: Dick Purcell, Anne Nagel, Marie Wilson, Wayne Morris

Director: Noel Smith

"Dick Purcell, the star hockey player, falls for Anne Nagel. Gamblers try to get him to throw games and when they send a $1,000 bill, it falls into the hands of his roommate and fellow player, Wayne Morris. Purcell returns the money, but when circumstances arise that make it look as if he is throwing the game, Wayne accuses him of accepting the gamblers' money and a fight ensues in which Purcell is injured." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Mildly entertaining for family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A wholesome atmosphere, advocacy of clean sports and some interesting hockey playing. For the not too critical audiences. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family; mature for children. Mediocre." DAR

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

KING OF HOCKEY—Continued

"A mildly interesting film, well cast and consistently in the cause of clean sport. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"With a commonplace, but well portrayed story, the thrilling and fast moving field of hockey carries the audience into a newly featured game of sport. . . The plea for clean sportsmanship is nicely emphasized. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"This picture provides good entertainment of an unpretentious nature. Family & junior matinees."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 2 '36

"The only redeeming feature of this otherwise trite and mediocre picture, is the demonstration of the skill, power, and brutality necessary for a hockey match on ice. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p5 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Hockey proves a bewilderingly fast background for a motion picture. There is plenty of it in this Warner production and those with a liking for the speedy winter game will find the picture entertaining even if the other story incidents do not hold their interest. Bryan Foy, Warner's most prolific turner-out of class B features, gives this one a good production, but on the whole it stays strictly within its class and will do no more than serve to give the proper duration to a dual bill program. Its chief weakness is the disagreeable characterization written for the leading role."

+ — Hollywood Spec p10 N 7 '36

"For those who enjoy going to 'movies,' pour le sport, the film's hockey games in Madison Square Garden, in which opponents beat each other up on skates, should prove diverting." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p23 D 3 '36

"This is made in quickie style, and enacted by a group of rather likable players who didn't seem to be working too hard. . . It's about the sort of picture you might expect to find trailing on a double feature program." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p39 D 3 '36

"'King of Hockey' is a timely trial flight for a group of the younger Warner players, with exciting sequences of big-league hockey for background." J. T. M.

N Y Times p31 D 3 '36

"'King of Hockey,' [is] a melodrama about this popular sport, which just manages to make the grade as a filler on a double bill. . . [It] is pretty feeble stuff, falling back, as it does, on a hackneyed theme. . . The leading players in this one are Dick Purcell, Anne Nagel and George Stone, but their efforts are about on a par with the story, which, at best, is of an indifferent quality." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p33 D 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Handicapped by a lack of important names and a weak story, this picture is saved in the last minute of play by some splendid action photography. Family."

+ — Box Office p35 N 7 '36

"The hectic game of hockey furnishes the thrills that make this a satisfactory program action picture."

+ Film Daily p6 N 3 '36

"Ice hockey takes the place of football in this routine sportplay. That was a good idea and it supplies a few exciting moments, for hockey is a fast and furious game and photographs well. Unfortunately, the rest of the film is undistinguished, even for its low-budget class, and will do well to please the youngsters in the secondary neighborhoods."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 O 30 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p3 O 31 '36

"For twin bills, neighborhoods houses, this might interest, but it lacks selling angles, except for the fact that it glorifies hockey instead of some other sport."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p53 N 15 '36

"Produced ostensibly to fill double-program house needs, this so-called romance of ice hockey will have to depend on second spot in dual setups for its revenue. It hasn't a single name that will brighten the marquee. . . Most interesting moments and the only thing to distinguish 'King of Hockey' from innumerable other pictures are the hockey contest sequences. These are well conceived, nicely staged and captured by the camera. . . Entire story is told on an exaggerated scale. . . Dialog is head and shoulders above the plot construction."

+ — Variety p12 D 9 '36

"With little to recommend it other than some fast and mighty exciting hockey game shots, 'King of Hockey' will do its best business on the lower part of a dueler. With a cast recruited mostly from the studio contract list and a story which follows a very obvious path from beginning to end, the picture is saved from complete oblivion only through a skillful cutting in of fast moving hockey shots at most frequent intervals."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 30 '36

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED. Principal-20th century-Fox 60min S 11 '36

Cast: Robert Kent, Rosalind Keith, Alan Dinehart, Frank McGlynn, Sr.

Director: Howard Bretherton

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Beautiful mountain scenes and an adequate cast will entertain the average picture fan in this Zane Grey story. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"An outdoor drama that does not rise above the mediocre. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature-family." DAR

"[It is] an average program melodrama. . . Ethically satisfactory. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This wholesome picture will prove especially entertaining for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul S 12 '36

"Fair. Family."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"Like others from the Zane Grey collection, this film is weak dramatically and has a thin plot, but it has fine riding and pictures a wide sweep of very beautiful country. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: passable."

+ — Motion Pict R p7 O '36

"A, Y and C: fair."

Parents' M p44 N '36

"This better-than-most outdoor drama will prove satisfactory entertainment for the young people. . . The direction is smooth, the photography good, the acting at times somewhat stilted. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p7 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] program melodrama set in the Sierras, where the scenery is grand, the plot's simple and the movie Mountie gets not only his man but his gal. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor O 3 '36

"'King of the Royal Mounted' . . . says nothing that we have not heard before, but it is a friendly voice in a troubled year, a cinematic town crier who notes that the Mounties are abroad and bawls 'All's well.' Sol Lesser, who produces these outdoor films for Twentieth Century-Fox, has moved his cast to the Sierras and let nature take its photographic course. Nature passes her screen test quite well. . . The players, slightly less effective, fulfill their modest requirements with commendable restraint, it being almost impossible to do any scenery-chewing in the presence of authentic boulders. . . Does the picture end with a hand-to-hand struggle on the brink of a cliff? It does, indeed." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p35 S 29 '36

"'King of the Royal Mounted' [is] a fast, exciting, colorful out-of-doors item which is recommended for Western fans who relish hard riding, quick shooting and who like to see the young lovers clinch at the final fadeout, after the villain has been properly brought to justice." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p18 S 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This production is based on the adventure strip of the same name which is syndicated throughout the nation by King Features. With thousands of youngsters following this strip daily in all parts of the country, it should not be hard to fill your theater when this feature shows."

+ Film Daily p10 S 29 '36

"Employing colorful backgrounds and armed with a script from Earl Snell that contains better than average dialog, Sol Lesser has turned out another with the mounties that will serve the duals trade satisfactorily. In Robert Kent, Rosalind Keith, Alan Dinehart and others he has rounded up a group of capable players."

+ Variety p17 S 30 '36

L

LADIES IN LOVE. 20th century-Fox 90min O 9 '36

Cast: Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Constance Bennett, Simone Simon, Don Ameche, Paul Lukas, Tyrone Power, Jr., Alan Mowbray

Director: Edward H. Griffith

Based on a play Three Girls by Ladislaus Bus-Fekete. "Three young working girls come to live together in Budapest. All are yearning for romance. Each of the girls has a love affair, the stories of which are told concurrently, in short episodes, presented in rotation. All the love affairs are flops, but each finds compensation in another direction." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y & C: no."

Christian Century p1406 O 21 '36

"Excellent cast. Mature & 14-18. Good." DAR

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"Interesting for those who follow their favorite actresses, while the older audiences will admire the clever manipulation of such diversified characters. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young and Constance Bennett are happily cast as the three girls and give excellent performances. Simone Simon is disappointing after the wide publicity given her. Excellent entertainment of the sophisticated type. Adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Sophisticated social drama. Smartly done in a continental manner, this social drama will prove entertaining fare for mature audiences. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Well cast and amusingly put over, this comedy is in a sophisticated vein, which makes it adult cinema fare." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This sophisticated picture, ablaze with many stars, falls short of what one expects from such a galaxy. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 31 '36

"The cast is large and notable, each of the four feminine leads gives pleasing and convincing interpretations, with Alan Mowbray excellent as the egotistical actor. . . An excellent picture pervaded by a spirit of rare understanding."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 17 '36

"Good. Adults & young adults."

+ Motion Pict Guide D '36

"The story is not very deep, but it is done in a charming manner. Adolescents, 12-16: too mature; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R p7 N '36

"The continuity remains surprisingly intact in spite of the fact that there are three separate themes developed. Suitable for mature audiences."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 21 '36

"When three girls from different walks of life assemble and discover that their objectives point to the same goal you may prepare yourself for a few laughs. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A: sophisticated; Y: little interest; C: no." Parents' M p32 D '36

"A very sketchy plot with little story value is so splendidly cast that it commands attention. The fine photography and excellent direction help to embroider the frail frame of the plot."

The out-of-the-ordinary cast deserves a more weighty story. Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p11 N 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide O 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It might be expected that such a dazzling cast was intended to distract the attention from a weak story. Such is not the case, however, as the plot, familiar enough in its essentials, is refreshingly astringent." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 31 '36

"There is something rather unusual in this story of the love affairs of an ill-assorted trio. . . With such a galaxy of feminine talent, the men might so easily have been subordinate. As a matter of fact, however, it is the admirable balance of the male parts that accounts in no small measure for the play's quality. . . This is an admirable picture for those who delight in real comedy." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p38 D '36

"Occasionally, this tale of a man-hunt by a quartet of females in Budapest is casually amusing. More often it is romance à la Hollywood, divided four ways—but not four times better than average. Alan Mowbray as a conceited magician provides much of the comedy. Adults & young people."

+ + Christian Science Monitor p15 N 7 '36

"Thoughtful presentation of a story that is different, a collection of performances outstanding for the evenness of their excellence, direction worthy of the greatest praise, a production pictorially glamorous and beautifully photographed, 'Ladies in Love' will go down on the season's records as a picture of importance, but perhaps not of the widest popular appeal. It is a little too fine for general consumption, too far from the beaten path."

LADIES IN LOVE—Continued

+ Hollywood Spec p13 O 10 '36

"Maybe we anticipated too much. But, to our way of thinking, this comedy's sophistication doesn't jell. Director Edward Griffith never once gets the mellow feel of the fifteen-hundred-year-old city on the banks of the Danube. You really see three attractive Hollywood actresses in a modernistic Hollywood apartment meeting ingenious Hollywood emotional problems—but there is little reality about it." (2 stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p60 N 21 '36

"The new offering is less of a four-ring circus than one might have anticipated. None of the quartet gives a good enough performance to outshine the others and the show itself, based on one of those mildly giddy Hungarian comedies, offers few opportunities for pyrotechnics or solid characterization. It should prove extremely popular, I believe, especially with the ladies, but it is ordinary stuff that has been so star-studded. . . Without the deft direction of Edward H. Griffith, the piece would fall completely to pieces in a welter of ill-assorted moods and incidents. . . It is the able assistance of the men in the company that gives the show what slight dramatic validity it has. . . They and the expert Mr. Griffith can do little more, however, than steady the work. It is neither a field day for the glamour girls nor a noteworthy photoplay." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p23 O 29 '36

"[It] forms a light, fairly amusing little comedy drama, not nearly important enough to warrant such an obviously expensive cast. With one exception, the cast does handsomely by its small opportunities, keeping the audience's attention, although never arousing any emotional response. . . It is somewhat difficult to know what Miss Simon was playing. The lines called for a simple, loyal schoolgirl. . . The new French star, however, played with such coy slyness, such feline impudence, such coqueness that it seemed impossible to believe the story had not been intended to end with a right-about-face and an exposure of the character as a fake. . . 'Ladies in Love' so divides its attentions between three quite separate romances that none ever seems particularly vital to the audience." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p29 O 29 '36

"A film on the order of 'Ladies in Love' is habitually dismissed as 'a woman's picture.' It is a condescending, patronizing and faintly derogatory phrase, and we have no doubt there's none more provoking to militant Lucy Stoners and combative equal-righters. . . Miss Gaynor has played her scenes with charm and humor, and, although I dread the thought of dropping an apple of discord into Hollywood's Olympus, she impressed me more favorably than the Misses Young, Bennett and Simon. Edward Griffith's direction has been smooth and the entire production has a satiny texture. It's still a woman's picture." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p31 O 29 '36

"[It] is a slow, shambling and feeble little anecdote, reporting too much detail what happens to four young women when they go out in search of the men of their desires. . . 'Ladies in Love' isn't much either as drama or entertainment." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p19 O 29 '36

"'Ladies in Love' is a sorority meeting, in Budapest. . . Without hair-pulling, Miss Gaynor triumphs throughout. Paul Lukas is a male involved." John Mosher

New Yorker p90 N 7 '36

"That 'Ladies in Love' turns out to be a suave, intelligent film and an indubitable box-office boon is primarily due to the direction of Edward H. Griffith. . . By appearing to better advantage than ever before in their respective careers—leaving Simone Simon sadly outclassed—Bennett, Gaynor, and Young make Zanuck's production a tour de force."

+ News-Wk p29 O 17 '36

"The scenario is diffuse; leisurely where it should be tense, superficial all the way and has a marked tendency to emulate the more genteel sex periodicals. Despite the high-salaried female contingent a mere man . . . but a damned good trooper (Alan Mowbray) walks into the ladies' den and remains to triumph. As the ham magician Mowbray is superb." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p10 O 24 '36

"This is a persuasively gallant little picture . . . told so unaffectedly that we sat, impressed at last without benefit of fireworks. A plot of this essential simplicity would falter badly without neat bits of characterization that must never overlap, never leave their tidy grooves. . . The producers, unfortunately, felt obliged to write in a role for the tempestuous French star, Mlle. Simone Simon. The part is as superfluous as her pout. Everything else is in good taste and technique."

+ Stage p14 N '36

"[It is] a distinguished and rich picture, not gloomy in spite of its realism, not episodic in spite of its multiple narrative. Excellently adapted by Melville Baker from the play, it moves with the same swift alternations of gayety and sadness as the Hungarian waltzes with which it is scored. Janet Gaynor gets top acting honors in spite of a strong bid by dynamic little Simone Simon."

+ Time p65 O 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This will have to depend on the pulling power of its four strong cast names. The ladies in love are lovely enough, but it is unfortunate that they were not furnished a vehicle in which they could better display their charms and their talents. The picture is short on entertainment and the story it essays has far too continental a flavor to appeal to an average bread-and-butter audience. . . The story just can't carry the load. Adults."

— + Box Office p63 O 17 '36

"This is a triple-threat picture aimed right at the box-office. . . If the [ladies] don't go for that treat then all the dope on what attracts 'em to the theater is wrong."

+ Film Daily p11 O 29 '36

"A very continental attempt to build one play by combining three similar stories, none of which would make a play by itself. Such attempts have been made many times and are doomed to failure. This one reaches the screen as diffuse, dull, and trifling entertainment. An attempt has been made to strengthen it with a bevy of talented box office names but, despite some individually interesting performances, there is little either to draw or to satisfy theater patrons."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 O 3 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 O 5 '36

"Estimate: depends on name draw."
Phila Exhibitor p37 O 15 '36

"Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Constance Bennett and Simone Simon are an attractive name array for the marquee, and that makes 'Ladies in Love' box office-proof. But it won't be a smash because the picture holds little for general appeal beyond the names, and that's a pity. . . The picture is a splendid example of casting, but little else. Producer also contributed everything that could be asked for in the way of mounting and treatment, yet the story seemingly had everybody handcuffed. . . That it is no literary knockout might have been overcome by the cast, but the fact that it offers little or nothing for the male customers is something that no group of names can conceal."

— + Variety p18 N 4 '36

"Pyramiding a group of feminine names which have marquee significance, backed by fine sustaining cast and an alluring title, 'Ladies in Love' comes to the box office with initial momentum which insures substantial revenue. . . For the more discriminating audiences, and especially for women, it should score solidly."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 3 '36

LADY BE CAREFUL. Paramount 67min S 4 '36

Cast: Lew Ayres. Mary Carlisle. Benny Baker. Larry Crabbe. Grant Withers

Director: Theodore Reed

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The story is slight and the film light-hearted. . . Lew Ayres as Dynamite acts well and the supporting cast is good. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p152 S 30 '36

"Fair. Adults & young adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"The picture carefully eliminates the questionable elements of the original play but it is doubtful if the effort was worth while. Adolescents, 12-16; not objectionable; children, 8-12: too mature."

— + Motion Pict R p6 S '36

"A: inane but unobjectionable; Y: doubtful; C: no."

Parents' M p44 N '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor O 3 '36

"Since it was the Rabelaisian flavor of 'Sailor Beware' that made it so funny, the screen's attempt not to offend anybody leaves it a lukewarm trifle, or so it seemed to your mirthless reporter yesterday, surrounded by guffawing companions. . . Mrs. Parker's wit is felt too seldom in the piece, the lines of which are rollicking enough, but not up to her quality. Mr. Reed has directed the picture ably, keeping it going at a fast pace. And, while the performance is all right, it is not nearly the scintillating, vigorous, disorderly thing it was on the stage." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 O 10 '36

"That superbly efficient wet-wash technique of the Hollywood laundries, which consists half the time in removing not only the dirt but the shirt as well, has been applied in the case of 'Lady, Be Careful' by some of the most highly paid spot removers on the Paramount staff. . . Early scenes, more bogus than musical comedy, have been inserted to lend color and the dialogue has been changed from pungent, spicy, authentic navy to something inexcusable, and with scarcely a saving ounce of the Parker virioli to justify the change." B. R. C.

— N Y Times p21 O 10 '36

"Since most of the boisterous, rowdy fun has been deleted from the original, the screen version of 'Sailor Beware,' is no great shakes as entertainment. . . The result is a film that is funny now and then, but one that is unadroit and spotty." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p6a O 10 '36

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p95 O 17 '36

"Dot Parker, Alan Campbell and Harry Ruskin have studiously knocked the sex out of the Navy. They've managed to keep most of the humor intact. . . a difficult adaptation job well done. . . Verve and understanding of Reed's direction bring the farcical figures to life, and he's aided and abetted by a screen play that's genuinely first rate. . .

Program entertainment 'way above average.' Herb Sterne

+ Script p13 S 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"They've done, necessarily, a lot of trimming of business and dialogue in the Broadway stage success, 'Sailor Beware.' . . Pretty weak stuff, and only the good acting of the principals, and some neat comedy business saves the production from flopping entirely. However, it is the type of material about sailor lads that the popular crowds go for, and in theaters where the rough and tumble stuff is in demand, it should go well enough."

— + Film Daily p7 O 10 '36

"Story depends for its laughs on the lines and incidental business, rather than on plot action, though there are a couple of good bits in the direct line. Treatment, however suggests that the script writers were under wraps. There is a lack of fluidity to the movement of the story, and a little too much emphasis on the character of the girl. With a little more swing, this might have been an outstander. As is, it packs a respectable number of laughs, pretty evenly spaced, but lacks solidity and punch. Should do best on duals, but can front on them."

+ — Variety p15 O 14 '36

LADY FROM NOWHERE. Columbia 60min N 21 '36

Cast: Mary Astor. Charles Quigley. Norman Willis

Director: Gordon Wiles

The only witness to a gang murder fearing for her life escapes to a small town where she falls in love with a school teacher who helps her hide and rescues her when the gang finds her hiding place.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency N 26 '36

"The plot moves rapidly and the direction is spirited and smooth. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict p10 D 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A good programmer, best suited for smaller towns and neighborhoods. Mary Astor and Charles Quigley carry creditably the unpretentious story. Family."

+ — Box Office p23 N 28 '36

"With Mary Astor a more prominent name, 'Lady From Nowhere' should prove pleasing. . . Estimate: okay program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p30 D 1 '36

LADY LUCK. Chesterfield 62min J1 6 '36

Cast: William Bakewell. Patricia Farr. Duncan Renaldo

Director: Charles Lamont

This is the story of a manicurist who is supposed to be the winner of a $150,000 sweepstakes ticket and of the complications which arise when the real winner is found.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a dull tale. Adults."

— Nat Legion of Decency Ag 6 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is an] undistinguished murder mystery. Adults."

— + Christian Science Monitor p15 O 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] mildly entertaining run-of-the-mill story suitable for the secondary locations."

— + Film Daily p7 S 14 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LADY LUCK—Continued

— Motion Pict Daily p3 S 16 '36

"Estimate; for neighborhoods, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p34 Ag 1 '36

"[It is] a murder mystery romance that has nothing in particular to distinguish it from the run-of-the-mill fodder for dual bookings. The story is hackneyed and the production of it as routine as they come. An ordinary cast fails to lend it any strength."

— Variety p16 S 23 '36

Audience Suitability Ratings

"That same James Fenimore Cooper who lies a-moldering on the book-shelves of Young America arrives on the screen in a heart-warming vindication of his former high place among respectable thrillers. . . This film is not at all tedious, being a sort of superior Western with an authentic historical background. Sensibly, it has been given a fine cast and runs along under the direction of George Seitz with that blood-curdling abandon which makes small boys and some adults spurn an intellectual content. . . Altogether splendid in its colorful recreation of an exciting chapter in history, the picture is something to take the children to—if you can find no other pretext for going yourself." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p528 S 5 '36

"The story is interesting and exciting and the acting, though unremarkable, is of good standard. The possibilities of the setting have been largely ignored except for some delightful views during the flight by river. The direction has preferred to get the horror effects by obvious means rather than by using the breathless silence of the woods where every shadow and cracking twig may be a terror in ambush. The Indians with whom we are chiefly brought in contact have a curiously indoor appearance. There are some bad backcloths and the earlier scenes with George II and Mr. Pitt are quite unnecessary, but the film is a stirring piece of entertainment though perhaps not for the highly sensitive nor very young. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p173 O '36

"Because of its authenticity, [it] has educational as well as entertainment value. . . The picture is ideal entertainment for American boyhood, but this does not limit its appeal for other audiences. Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: very exciting."

+ Motion Pict R p6 S '36

"A and Y: yes, vigorous drama of early American frontier warfare; C: possibly too strong for young children."

Parents' M p42 O '36

"There are so many war-dances, war-whoops, wars and warriors, that as a screen play there was danger of monotony and spurious melodrama. But Director George Seitz has controlled the numerous action shots, without losing any of the essential punch of the situation. . . The Young Reviewers expressed unanimous approval of the picture and agreed that the film would be best appreciated by children of 14 or less. But many of later years will find themselves on the edge of the seat."

+ Scholastic p32 O 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The picture is done with a great deal of care and attention to detail; the swift movement of Cooper is retained. It may seem old-fashioned—possibly it will; but, for all that, we think you will like this simple guileless romance. . . Randolph Scott is an effective enough Hawkeye, but the Indians, we regret to report, are all healthy young Hollywood actors doing their best to look taciturn and tanned." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p38 O 17 '36

"It is a relatively inept film, with a great many incredible Indians in it and with a bulky fable which it is not always careful to keep clear. . . The American forest which [Cooper] bequeathed to all romancers after him is undeniably here." Mark Van Doren

— + Nation p374 S 26 '36

"The difficulties of bringing so many tongues and tribes to the eyes and ears of the world, are solved by giving each race some different way of speaking English, often with ludicrous effects. Montcalm speaks the best English, his lieutenant is an American, the Indians talk telegraphese. But 'The Last of the Mohicans' has a lot of the genuine old blood and thunder, and a canoe chase down rapids, with redskins biting the water and the birch-bark flying,

LAND WITHOUT MUSIC. Capitol 80min

Cast: Richard Tauber. Jimmy Durante. Diana Napier. June Clyde. Derrick de Marney

Director: Walter Forde

Music: Oscar Strauss

Musical filmed in England. "The Grand Duchess of Lucco finding that her state is penniless because its citizens all make music instead of making money, puts a ban on all music. Carlini, the world-famous singer born in Lucco, aided by an American journalist, leads a musical revolution and wins for the people the rights to make music, and for himself the heart and hand of the Duchess." (Mo Film Bul)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The story is amusing, and Oscar Strauss' music is very agreeable. Richard Tauber's fine singing is well recorded. In fact, this is a musical comedy that contains real music and real comedy. The acting on the whole is competent, though Diana Napier is hardly convincing as the Duchess. The direction is straightforward, if a little unenterprising in the way of lighting, grouping, and choice of camera-angle. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p170 O '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picturesquely witty fantasy, staged in a remote Italian Duchy of long ago, forms a delightful background for the musical accomplishments of Richard Tauber who slimmed beyond recognition and brilliantly photographed by John Boyle, metamorphoses with doubled stellar appeal. . . With brilliant musical sequences (Richard Tauber has never been in better form), delightful comedy interludes, and wittily pointed characterizations, plus superbly handled groupings and crowd backgrounds, Walter Forde has converted what might have been a heavy, music-swamped fable into first-class entertainment."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 29 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 O 19 '36

"Operetta built around Richard Tauber, continental singer, and one of the few real novelties British pictures have turned out in motion picture form. Film is very good light musical, with a quaint plot and plenty of tunes, and has Jimmy Durante playing comedy in a 19th century costume and making a go of it. One up for Max Schach, being about the slickest job he has yet produced. It looks good for general appeal among the popular [theatres] with Tauber's voice and [Durante's] humor building up real entertainment."

+ Variety p15 O 21 '36

LAST OF THE MOHICANS. Reliance-United artists 90min Ag 13 '36

Cast: Randolph Scott. Binnie Barnes. Henry Wilcoxon. Bruce Cabot. Heather Angel

Director: George B. Seitz

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

[and this] beats all the screaming brakes and hurtling roadsters of gangsterdom."

+ New Statesman & Nation p470 O 3 '36

"The Last of the Mohicans," which made his name for Fenimore Cooper, is a book in which both the characterization and the dialogue are somewhat naive. . . . The adapters, however, have evidently felt the need for a heavy revision of the dialogue and have also changed the story considerably in an attempt to make it more attuned to adult ears. . . . On the credit side also of this picture must be set some very good photography and the astonishing make-up of Bruce Cabot." Mark Forrest

+ Sat R p480 O 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Not exactly pro-British in theme, [it] contains so much genuine entertainment value, and is so well produced, that the picture should be excellent box-office even in the most rabid pro-British countries. Press reviews in England itself have all been most favourable, the critics choosing to ignore the Yankee propaganda. . . . For those who have read Cooper's novel and enjoyed it, as indeed nearly everyone who read it, did, the picture will be a great source of enjoyment, for it is one of those very rare phenomenas, a faithful adaptation."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 O 3 '36

LAUGHING AT TROUBLE. 20th century-Fox 70min D 18 '36

Cast: Jane Darwell. Sara Haden. Lois Wilson. John Carradine

Director: Frank R. Strayer

"Jane Darwell, as the editor of the Lane County Courier, traps a murderer, helps a romance or two, and defeats the cause of the sheriff's heartless assistant." Fox W Coast Bul

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A good cast make this entertaining. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The picture is well produced, with well sustained suspense and noteworthy character portrayals by several members of the cast. Adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Inaccurate court procedure; unconvincing. Mature & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

"A complicated plot developed with the technique of earlier movies, with good comedy relief and a 'folksey' atmosphere. Certain incidents are open to criticism. Program film for mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Of high ethical value in exemplifying the true worth of war: interest in the rights of others, we commend this picture to the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"The direction is intelligent with the well chosen cast doing convincing work. Many shots are delightful in their portrayal of small town life with a nice blending of humor, pathos, and suspense. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 26 '36

"There is the old-fashioned villain, black mustache, bloodhounds and all, and the obvious but satisfactory denouement in which justice prevails. Unsophisticated audiences."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 28 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

Sel Motion Pict p7 D 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 O 30 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Estimate: mild, best for neighborhoods, twin bills."

— + Phila Exhibitor p31 D 1 '36

LEGION OF TERROR. Columbia 61min N 1 '36

Cast: Bruce Cabot. Crawford Weaver. Marguerite Churchill. Ward Bond

Director: C. C. Coleman, Jr.

"The hooded legion spreads like fire through a community when the editor of the town paper exerts pressure on the citizens. Two postal inspectors, working for the government, are instrumental in exposing and wiping out the band of terrorists." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This topical exposé of the mob spirit in America, as typified by the Black Legion, fails to excite the indignation such armed violence calls for and it emerges as only fair entertainment precisely because of its toothlessness. . . . A grand opportunity has been lost to show up the degenerate viciousness, the childish cabalism, and menacing trend of these night-riding, hooded hoodlums. . . . The violent nature of the story makes it unsuitable for any but adults." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p144 N 14 '36

"The story is a gripping one, carrying a significant undercurrent of thought and the individual and collective work of the players is good. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A: fair; Y: pretty strong; C: no."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"[It is] a forceful drama. . . . The danger of a few unscrupulous leaders organizing honest and well meaning citizens under the guise of patriotism is a timely thought and well worth the emphasis given it. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict p11 N 1 '36

"Close enough to things that have actually happened to give it interest and importance. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide O 31 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults. The events of the picture do not give sufficient weight to the 'message' delivered at the end."

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '36

"[It is] a so-so melodrama. . . . The result is passingly fair. The story does not get far under the skin in picturing the curiously American weakness for wearing robes and riding anonymously at night, dispensing home-grown justice and injustice. There's a very real drama there — and it has been there since the clan rode for D. W. Griffith in 'The Birth of a Nation.'" (1½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p44 N 28 '36

"Perhaps because it was too hastily done, and possibly, too, because of the difficulty in fitting so loathsome a topic into the formula of the Hollywood amourette, Columbia's exposition of Black Legion . . . is just another melodrama, and a not too absorbing one either." J. T. M.

— + N Y Times p24 N 2 '36

"Such curious American phenomena as secret hooded organizations come in for unmasking in the sometimes terrifying but unbelievably gauche and artless melodrama. . . . Although its crusading intentions are honorable and deserve endorsement, the manner in which the narrative is told is so spurious that it lacks conviction. The result is a shambling and counterfeit offering." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p13 N 3 '36

LEGION OF TERROR—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"Timely and authentic in theme and holding audience interest during a series of hair-raising episodes, this proves splendid box office fare for the thrill fans. Family."

+ Box Office p29 N 21 '36

"Good audience picture that exposes in convincing and exciting fashion the insidious, cowardly activities of lawless secret societies masquerading under hood and robe. In addition to being entertaining, its sequences are ministers of good Americanism."

+ Film Daily p6 N 3 '36

"The picture has a distinct let-down after the final climax when the chief postal inspector reads a lecture to the audience on the folly of people allowing themselves to be misled by such secret organizations. [It] is just made to order for old-time showmen who like to get the utmost out of exploitation possibilities which are here in abundance. Direction and photography are fair, and the film as a whole is unpretentious, but has good possibilities for drawing them in at the box office."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 N 9 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p15 O 16 '36

"Columbia has produced an actionful, melodramatic picture that can stand loads of selling. . . It has been directed with plenty of punch."

+ Phila Exhibitor p32 N 1 '36

"That it doesn't pack solid conviction is due chiefly to its abbreviated treatment of the subject-matter. . . Composite results have a quickie tinge, and would appear to classify best for duals in selected houses. Promotional possibilities are inherent, but in this case are best suited to the adventure houses and neighborhoods where they can stomach horror in stereotype setting."

+ — Variety p19 N 4 '36

LIBELED LADY. MGM 90min O 9 '36

Cast: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy, Walter Connolly, Cora Witherspoon

Director: Jack Conway

"Theme . . . depicts antics of a suave metropolitan reporter trying to quash $5,000,000 suit against his newspaper by attempting to compromise the millionaire plaintiff. Scheme is engineered by the managing editor with the aid of his glib, but loyal fiancée." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: very good of kind; Y: better not; C: no." Christian Century p1406 O 21 '36

"[It is] an amusing and well told story. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Gay spontaneous comedy with ridiculous situations and some slapstick, it is, none the less, exhilarating entertainment. Adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Smartly modern, with hilarious situations, comedy bordering occasionally on the slapstick, admirably directed and superbly cast. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"For a good laugh, see suave William Powell floundering midstream. Mature & 14-18. Excellent." DAR

"Four leading stars head a good cast who put over an absurd but amusing plot with verve and sparkling dialogue. Gorgeous gowns. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A picture of interest to adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"This pretentious production has every thing necessary to enjoyable entertainment. Mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 7 '36

"Very good. Adults & young adults."

+ + Motion Pict Guide D '36

"No more preposterous concoction than 'Libeled Lady' can be imagined, but its lively pace, its flippant rapid-fire dialogue, its ludicrous situations and the zest with which the cast enters into the spirit of the story make it unique in the school of sophisticated slapstick. Adolescents, 12-16: too sophisticated; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R p7 N '36

"This highly amusing, light and refreshing comedy with its clever, witty dialogue and sparkling repartee proves hilarious entertainment. Abounding in humorous situations, the story is improbable but develops smoothly to a happy conclusion. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 7 '36

"Objection: marriage is used as a convenience. Objectionable in part."

— Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A: excellent; Y: sophisticated; C: too mature."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Mature. Outstanding."

+ + Sel Motion Pict p3 N 1 '36

"[It is] a hilarious comedy of errors. . . Each of the numerous stars is lucky enough to have a very fitting part. Mature. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide O 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Libeled Lady' . . . kept an Orpheum audience yesterday morning in a constant state of glee. . . Aside from the other humorous incidents, the producers have thought up an excellent sequence dealing with trout fishing. . . This fount of fun gives all the participants an opportunity to distinguish themselves, with the result that the film is a good pendant for 'The Thin Man.' . . If you find your sides aching or splitting, complain to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, for this concern is responsible for 'Libeled Lady.'" Mordaunt Hall

+ + Boston Transcript p3 O 31 '36

"[It is] a hilarious comedy drama. . . If there were to be any choice as between the admirable performances of this group of talented players, it would probably fall on Miss Harlow, not perhaps because of any exceptional display of talent, but because after playing in a series of sentimentalized roles where she was obviously not at home, she is once again cast as a slightly indecorous young lady. . . 'Libeled Lady' is a combination of amusing and exhilarating experiences tied together with the smartest dialogue of any picture for some time past. . . The unravelling of this tangled skein is a thing of joy to those who delight in smart fast-moving comedy. This is a picture for the reasonably adult. It could not be suggested as either soundly interesting or soundly educational for the adolescent." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p38 D '36

"From its slapstick depths to its high comedy peaks, here is the funniest farce in several moons. Director Jack Conway has ordered no holds barred in the rowdy gag fest and, except for an occasional breathing spell, the quartet of stars and their supporting cast are right there flicking out comedy punches right and left for some 80 odd minutes. Adults & young people."

+ + Christian Science Monitor p17 N 14 '36

"'Libeled Lady' is grand entertainment, a brilliant example of talkie craftsmanship, splendidly acted, of course, and splendidly directed. . . Any review would be merely a string of superlatives. I say about all there is to say when I tell you it is a picture you must see."

+ + Hollywood Spec p11 O 10 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Here is a smart comedy to take its place beside 'Piccadilly Jim' and 'My Man Godfrey' as one of the three or four real laugh producers of 1936. . . William Powell never was better than as the reporter who has orders to get his heiress at any cost. And the heiress is superbly done by Myrna Loy. . . 'Libeled Lady' is fast, racy, right out of tomorrow morning's tabloid." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p59 N 21 '36

"The cinema season's most piquant and daring comedy also is the funniest. . . Four scenarists, snickering in their sleeves, have peppered it with crisp and maliciously witty high comedy dialog. . . It [is] ninety minutes of almost incessant clowning with effective but subtle feints at the censors. . . The four stars make a four-star film."

+ + Lit Digest p22 N 7 '36

"When you see it, as you surely will, you are likely to enjoy it—eight-tenths of it—far more than if anyone had led you to believe that, with all its stars, it was half as witty or as well made as 'My Man Godfrey.' 'Libeled Lady' has pace, which is the cardinal virtue of all such films; but at intervals that pace flags and is revived more often by slapstick than with wit. One slapstick sequence—the urban Mr. Powell floundering in a trout-stream—is brilliant, and Tracy's gruff cynicism is as pleasing as Powell's suavity. . . But somewhere there's grit in the wheels: they rattle, at varying speeds, like farce, missing the sweet even spin of comedy."

+ — New Statesman & Nation p811 N 21 '36

"Deft and rippling comedy, played by an utterly engaging company at top form, is to be found in 'Libeled Lady.' . . [The cast is] so delightfully resourceful that they whip together even the segments of the script into a vastly entertaining production. . . Accept the foolish premises of the narrative and it is generally regaling. . . It offers four elegant characterizations, a glittering chain of funny situations and odd business that is hilariously diverting. . . 'Libeled Lady' is chiefly an actors' field day, but an extremely entertaining one." Howard Barnes

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p14 O 31 '36

"A sardonic comedy, with slapstick smudges and a liberal bedaubing of farce, it takes several freedoms with the press, liberties with the statutes and jousts as justice—all in the merriest of moods. And offhand we can think of a dozen reasons why you should find it a thoroughly agreeable entertainment." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p24 O 31 '36

"With Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy, William Powell, Spencer Tracy, and good honest Walter Connolly, 'Libeled Lady' is a picture to bolt out to see when election talk gets too rabid. This quintet of movie notables appear, each and every one of them, to the best possible advantage. . . I think the picture's too long, like most pictures. . . Sentiment slows up things a bit here, as it usually does. On the other hand, Miss Harlow has some funny lines and lively moments. . . There's high comedy in a ship scene when the adventurous young man tries to make himself agreeable to the millionaires. Don't miss that. . . This is all pretty good fun." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p78 O 24 '36

"In 'Libeled Lady'—a farce that will rejuvenate all but the most hopeless hypochondriacs—Lawrence Weingarten, producer, and Jack Conway, director, have compounded a quartet of stars and a fine assisting cast topped by Walter Connolly. . . All four appear in the same picture, probably on the theory that if any two of them ensure a picture's success, the combined effect of all four should break a good many box-office records. It probably will."

+ News-Wk p39 O 24 '36

"At a time when it seemed that there were no new angles left for stories of the Fourth Estate, along come three writers—two of 'em ex-newspaper people—with a screen play that's succulent as freshly churned butter. . . It succeeds well in making a merry evening." Herb Sterne

+ + Script p10 O 10 '36

"'Libeled Lady' is one of those Hollywood smoothies that neither launch nor sink the cinema boat. . . You aren't supposed to have any response but hilarity, any feeling but terrific admiration. Well, it didn't quite do that to us. The plot has many surprises, too many; and the acting isn't going to win an Academy Award. . . Every once in a while there is a good honest laugh, and twice there is excellent comedy. . . In between you'll think it's a party where everybody is adorable and everything is screamingly entertaining. It's a glitter that's seldom gold."

+ — Stage p16 N '36

"Adapting a story which is to be played by four top-ranking film personalities is a problem in tact as well as dramaturgy. The roles have to be 'balanced' to eliminate jealousies on the part of the players, disappointments for the members of the audience who become annoyed if a favorite is slighted. In 'Libeled Lady' the balancing is done with as much precision as if the roles had been weighed in an apothecary's scales. . . [It] is what is known as a 'natural,' i.e. a story sure to be a box office hit, worth any conceivable amount that might be spent producing it. It is directed at breakneck speed by Jack Conway, plentifully supplied with lighthearted lines."

+ Time p67 O 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It would be libelous to call this anything but a grand picture and it will be criminal if showmen fail to take full advantages of its 24-careat entertainment and its possibilities of being one of their best box office bets of the current season. Family."

+ Box Office p63 O 17 '36

"'Libeled Lady' is the grandest comedy since 'The Thin Man.' . . The picture is certain box-office in any community, with the stars alone guaranteeing substantial returns. Sell the stars and the story, and you should be able to bring out that old sign, dear to the hearts of all exhibitors, 'S.R.O.'"

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p12 N 21 '36

"Here is a laugh riot that should develop into a riot at the box office. With several marquee names to play with and good showmanship, exhibitors should pile up heavy grosses at the box office. Jack Conway's direction is of the best and he has not missed a bet in extracting the full measure of comedy from the various situations."

+ Film Daily p4 O 7 '36

"With four marquee draws of the first magnitude, all with parts that fit like one of Jean Harlow's gowns, in a hilarious comedy that is almost sinfully clever, here is a box office boost of top rank. They just don't come any better. Count on an hour and a half of almost continuous laughter over the romantic difficulties of Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy in a bubbling French-type farce, tailored in the smartest American mode, that sparkles and twists and turns and races with all the verve of a mountain troutstream. And count in enough witty dialogue to stock five ordinary comedies."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 5 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 O 6 '36

"Fast, funny, packed with names, well made, 'Libeled Lady' is another of those top [money] shows that Metro delivers. With names, a swell script, plenty laughs, the picture won't have any trouble anywhere."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 O 15 '36

"Even though 'Libeled Lady' goes overboard on plot and its pace snags badly in several spots, it has so many advantages that it can't help but ring the bell in a big way. Metro has not only filled the bases, as well as the marquee, for the exhibitor, but has brought in a sockeroo of a comedy."

LIBELED LADY—Continued

+ Variety p18 N 4 '36

"Metro has nothing less than a knockout comedy in 'Libeled Lady.' Here is one that won't have to be wedged down exhibitors' throats. They will take it at one gulp and so will the patrons. The picture is overlaid with laughs and handled in such a charmingly sophisticated manner that those exhibitors who are fortunate enough to play this one will watch the ticket sales with genuine glee. . . Capitalizing on the box office draw of Powell and Myrna Loy together, MGM has shrewdly combined them again in a film that shows them both to fine advantage. . . All in all, MGM has a till-ringer in 'Libeled Lady.'"

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 5 '36

LLOYDS OF LONDON. 20th century-Fox
115min N 25 '36

Cast: Freddie Bartholomew. Madeleine Carroll. Sir Guy Standing. Tyrone Power. C. Aubrey Smith

Director: Henry King

"The romantic commercial firm, which has bulked so large in maritime doings for two centuries, offers rich material for screen celebration. The production traces its amazing growth from 1770, when its business was transacted in Lloyd's Coffee House to its dominant position following Nelson's defeat of the French fleet. It presents side by side John Julius Angerstein, who was undoubtedly the greatest executive Lloyds ever had, and the fictional Jonathan Blake, who is supposed to have inaugurated the policy of insuring everything from an actress' legs to a king's coronation." N Y Herald Tribune

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The present film is a fluffed-up spectacle with passages of stirring action and impressive dignity. Its moments of dullness are emphasized by a directorial penchant for shaking the empire at the drop of an insurance policy and very often the plot is unable to live up to the portentous atmosphere in which it is unfolded. . . The appeal of this film is for adults owing to problems neither financial nor naval." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p240 D 12 '36

"Engrossingly interesting is this pretentious and colorful production of old London during the Napoleonic era. . . Henry King, the director merits the highest praise for the consummate skill with which he has blended the many varied elements used in this forceful drama. Another great achievement of cinematic art. Most stimulating entertainment. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 24 '36

"One is completely transported back to the England of the late 18th century in this absorbing, interesting picture in which perfect casting of fine actors and actresses, expert direction, realistic stagecraft and lovely photography are combined to make an outstanding production. . . Excellent for the family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 25 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

"[It] is an impressive historical picture. That the story itself grips interest from the beginning and holds the attention to the great climax at the Battle of Trafalgar, is a tribute to adapter and director alike. . . The ethical tone of the picture is admirable. Fine ideals of loyalty, patriotism and self-sacrifice are stressed. Family, and especially recommended to students. Outstanding."

+ Sel Motion Pict p3 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] comparable in power to the same studio's 'The House of Rothschild.' A stunning motion-picture, worked out in elaborate detail, it records the history of the founding of the great insurance combine. . . Curtis Kenyon, [the scenarist], worked many nights, dug down into ancient papers, long-forgotten books. . . The result: one of the biggest pictures of the year. Most of the film is factual, all of it exciting and constantly interesting. It takes its place with 'Mutiny on the Bounty' as one of the finest pictures ever to come from Hollywood. Audiences are certain to like it."

+ Lit Digest p20 D 5 '36

"[It] is an impressive and sometimes stirring chronicle. . . The photoplay borrows the formula used so effectively in 'The House of Rothschild,' high lighting a documentary exposition with world-shaking events. It has less unity and dramatic urgency than its notable prototype, but it remains a vastly entertaining historical film. Acted with steady brilliance and staged with a sure eye for colorful pageantry, it is an ingenious mixture of fact and fancy, gathering momentum in its final sequences for a smashing climax." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p24 N 26 '36

"Broadway at least, however the rest of the world may feel, could start off its Thanksgiving Day with [a] loud huzzah—one for 'Lloyds of London.' . . [It] can step right to the head of its class. 'Lloyds of London' . . . is one of those historical melodramas, with just enough fiction to make the history palatable, with just enough fact to make the romance important, that Darryl Zanuck's studio does so superbly well. . . Tyrone Power, a handsome deep-voiced young man who seems to be well along the road to stardom in this, his third picture, plays the grown-up Jonathan. Henry King has directed with his usual skill and sincerity, making his picture not only a romantic melodrama of high entertainment value, and a shrewdly disguised lesson in history, but an extraordinarily vivid and visually beautiful portrait of England in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p30 N 27 '36

"Twentieth Century-Fox's 'Lloyds of London' is a pleasing photoplay, crammed with authentic detail of the Georgian England where its scene is laid, reverent and restrained if occasionally original in its presentation of historical incident, and threaded by a semi-fictional story of romance and business daring. . . As the vital Jonathan Blake, Tyrone Power Jr. plays a much more varied rôle than any he has had previously for the screen. Where sheer action and character delineation are concerned, he is excellent. . . Henry King has endowed the production with story book clarity, sustaining interest, when the plot threatens to weigh too heavily, with bright interpolation involving the less sternly destined members of the cast." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p39 N 26 '36

"In 'Lloyds of London,' the amazing Darryl F. Zanuck, who also produced 'The House of Rothschild,' not only gives us a tonic and spirited film that is lively in its background and endlessly entertaining in its people, but one that has a striking parallel to certain current European events. . . Not only is 'Lloyds of London' lively, exciting and handsomely photographed, it is also excellently acted. Tyrone Power gives a superb performance as Blake; Madeleine Carroll is beautiful and capable as the woman he loves. . . [It is] a film enjoyable from beginning to end." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p39 N 27 '36

"I haven't a great deal of patience with that 'Lloyds of London,' which sounds so impressive. . . The opening scenes are promising, with an air of 'David Copperfield' or 'Treasure Island.' . . Tyrone Power [is] a little too personable for the rôle. Very pleasant and nice-looking and so on, he doesn't manage to suggest big business, as he is supposed to; and it's impossible to think that the fate of England as well as of Lloyds actually could ever depend upon his particular inspiration. The whole affair becomes a bit trifling and absurd, and then, after a while, a little dreary. And I don't think these period films become any more impressive when such personages as Nelson, the Prince of Wales, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Benjamin Franklin, and Dr. Johnson are worked into them with a rattle of big names." John Mosher

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

+ — New Yorker p130 D 5 '36

"[It] sometimes lags in the telling; it builds nevertheless to a stirring climax under the reliable direction of Henry King and is documented throughout with glimpses of contemporary notables. Lloyd's famous executive, John Julius Angerstein, is admirably portrayed by Sir Guy Standing, and C. Aubrey Smith gives an amusing interpretation of 'Old Q,' the Marquess of Queensberry."

+ News-Wk p19 D 5 '36

"Anglomaniacs are going to find a great deal to cheer about in 'Lloyds of London.' . . The vast canvas is so thickly peopled as to give the audience little chance to know any of the characters very well. The early sequences have the tang of a Stevenson adventure tale. . . Photographically, this portion of the film is outstanding. . . The romance is sketchy, never touching, and I remained quite indifferent to the string of events that lead to the Battle of Trafalgar. . . As human beings the adult characters never quite come through. The entire film is as attractive as a Howard Chandler Christy magazine cover—and equally as moving. . . Tyrone Power has a long, arduous rôle. It's a taxing part, and while Mr. Power isn't as yet quite up to its demands, he shows all the earmarks of developing into a popular favorite." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p10 D 5 '36

"Famed for his knack of translating headlines into cinema, Zanuck sees history as a collection of front-page stories. Making insurance seem glamorous might sound like a super-human tour de force. 'Lloyds of London,' rich in the atmospheric detail of all good period pieces, warm with the honest adulation which English heroes alone seem capable of inspiring in Hollywood producers, is an insurance drummer's daydream. It makes the business as exciting as a bugle call, magnificently somber as the roll of muffled drums."

+ Time p24 D 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is brilliant cinema, this 'Lloyds of London,' and, properly exploited, its performance at the world box office should be in kind with its artistic stature. Seldom has history been so adroitly employed as a graphic background for a fine, human romance; vast the canvas may be, yet it is never permitted to dominate the story, compelling in theme and with a sustained hold upon your sympathies."

+ Film Daily p17 N 27 '36

"The box office potentialities of 'Lloyds of London' are immeasurable. It will get rave reviews everywhere; will easily and surely draw all cultivated picturegoers and sweep downward from the key houses and road-showings to become a must-see from city to hamlet. Besides its two stars, Freddie Bartholomew and Madeleine Carroll, it has a brilliant new luminary in young Tyrone Power, interest in whom will gain swift momentum as his extraordinary performance is seen and talked about."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 23 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 N 24 '36

"Hollywood seems of late to have gone into the serious business of perpetuating British history. . . But this time what emerges is an oversentimentalized and highly fictitious historical subterfuge. There is some splendid acting; there is fine feeling and background; there is even finesse and deftness. But there is no real warmth. How the picture will fare on a $2 basis isn't, of course, important; when it goes out on its own and has to fight its way at the general wickets against the field it will find frequently difficult going—especially in view of the fact that (although exceptionally well cast) it has no marquee lure. . . [The story is] a bit hard to sell to average audiences. Fact remains that the hero of the story is having a love affair with another man's wife. . . From a physical standpoint, picture is A-1; camera work is tops and backgrounds intelligently handled. Henry King's direction is fine. If the story could be accepted, his handling of the characters and scenes would be tops."

+ — Variety p18 D 2 '36

"Properly exploited this may prove to be the foremost dramatic picture of the year at the box office as well as in the critical nominations. Certainly on merit it will stand sturdily among the tops in a season of outstanding productions."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 23 '36

LONELY TRAIL. Republic 55min My 25 '36

Cast: John Wayne. Ann Rutherford. Cy Kendall

Director: Joseph Kane

A western melodrama of post Civil War days in Texas when the south was exploited by Carpet Baggers.

Trade Paper Reviews

"This Western depends more on dramatic and emotional elements to entertain rather than on the hard riding and spirited action usually [found] in stories of the plains. John Wayne essays straight acting with ease and understanding. Bernard McConville's story is interesting, particularly from the historical standpoint, and the direction and photography . . . are thoroughly adequate."

+ Film Daily p6 N 3 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 O 28 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p23 Je 1 '36

"Few Westerns can be remembered as furnishing audiences with acting. This hardly sets a precedent in the picture art but does furnish a lively celluloid accounting of the post-Civil War days of ripsnorting Texas. Wayne is his usual good-looking, erect-riding self but never impresses as being convinced of his role. On strength of its story and action, film should carry its portion of split programs."

+ Variety p15 O 28 '36

LONGEST NIGHT. MGM 50min O 2 '36

Cast: Robert Young. Florence Rice. Ted Healy. Julie Haydon. Catherine Doucet

Director: Errol Taggart

Based on the novel The Whispering Window by Cortland Fitzsimmons. "Story tells of a band of thieves who sell their loot to a large department store. Buyer for the store heads the gang. When an employee discovers the racket, he is killed. Police lock all the customers in and start the investigation." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The murder movie technique is reduced to near absurdity in this noisy account of sudden death in a department store. Some few attempts to build up suspense and keep a grim face on the production are undone by clownish antics which are often amusing but hardly conducive to an atmosphere of terror." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p48 O 17 '36

"A, Y & C: poor."

Christian Century p1478 N 4 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LONGEST NIGHT—Continued

"The plot is good and the setting novel, but the later sequences are handled in a slapstick manner which gives a noisy and confused ending to otherwise good entertainment for adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Good entertainment for those who like this type of picture. Adults & 14-18: amusing; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"It has some clever moments, but toward the end becomes rather confusing and a fine cast struggles in vain to make real people out of shadowy unreal characters. Rating: fair. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

"Good characterizations and comedy but the action is exaggerated and a confused group of people race about till one's brain reels trying to keep the thread of the story. This type of film brings ridicule upon the film industry. For confirmed mystery story addicts of mature years." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Too exciting and confusing for the average child; it might appeal to an adult audience." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"It is seldom our lot to review such a fearfully chaotic, melodramatic picture as this. . . Gun shots, screams, crashing dishes and a wild musical accompaniment increase the din and confusion. Though intended to be farcical, the picture is not funny and it is too poorly done to be interesting even as a murder mystery. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"Entertainment for those who like strong fare and are unmindful of discrepancies. Mature."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 23 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"An improbable but quite delightful thriller where every minute there is 'something doing.' It has the double merit of being extremely funny and extremely exciting and though it fades away a little at the end it can be highly recommended as entertainment. . . The direction has blended all the parts so that tragedy and comedy form a coherent whole and we are kept interested in everyone. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p173 O '36

"Fair. Adults & young adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"A very involved murder mystery in which a notable cast make every effort but with little result. The story is poorly constructed and the direction confusing. Fair for the family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 21 '36

"[It] will please any audience that is in search of excitement. General patronage." Nat Legion of Decency O 8 '36

"A: fair; Y: possible; C: no." Parents' M p32 D '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict p5 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Laura Elston
Canadian M p38 N '36

"If this were a full length film—it runs only 50 minutes—it would probably live up to its title. It's a murder mystery farce and pretty much of a farce as a murder mystery. Adults."

— Christian Science Monitor p17 O 31 '36

"Occasionally a film is preposterous to the point of being excellent entertainment. Robert Andrews' deliberate humor has made of Courtland Fitzsimmons' original story just such delightful nonsense. . . Throughout, 'The Longest Night' is asparkle with the hoydonish fun everyone (except the murdered lady) seems to be having. So although it, at some time or other, breaks almost all cinematic law, it does it so charmingly, and so obviously with a 'by your leave,' that producers Lucien Hubbard and Samuel Marx will find they have a minor Big Hit. But they probably know it already." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p13 S 26 '36

"After leaving the Rialto, one has an impression of having looked at something through a telescope out of focus. Nevertheless, the dizzy doings that comprise 'The Longest Night' will make you forget your most heated political argument, though possibly also it may make you doubt your sanity." Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p8 O 17 '36

"It is doubtful if even Metro, the munificent, can really afford to throw away such an interesting title and such an excellent cast of secondary, if not primary, players, as it has unaccountably wasted on 'The Longest Night.' . . [It is] disjointed, crackbrained and embellished with all the clichés of murder mystery and farce. . . To tell you which character is responsible for this killing, and for the others that take place during the course of an admittedly long evening, would be unfair, and would spoil the fun you'll have in guessing it almost immediately after the picture opens." B. R. C.

— N Y Times p21 O 17 '36

"Improbable as the statement may seem, 'The Longest Night' is not very good. This statement is made regretfully, since what the Times Square cinema sector could stand at the moment is a good, robust shocker to send the chills up and down moviegoers' spines. However, 'The Longest Night' is not that package of thrills, even though it does get off to a pretty good start. . . Clumsily constructed, and directed in a feeble and ineffective manner, 'The Longest Night' completely wastes the talents of a really good cast of players." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p7a O 17 '36

"Among the inconsiderable, yet spry, little moments I would list 'The Longest Night.' Take it in, if it turns up at the local temple. This is just a thriller with a good splash of farce, perhaps too much farce. . . A scramble in the kitchenware department, a murder on the upholstery floor, a kleptomaniac busy in the sporting-goods wing, and killers loose all over the place, make the piece bright." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p79 O 24 '36

"The maw must be filled; hence B, C and D pictures. I don't know how this one classifies, but while it is a million miles from art it rates fairly high in the present madhouse cycle. At least it panics the [children] and grown-ups with [juvenile] minds. . . It seems kinda cool to subject such charming actors as Robert Young, Catherine Doucet, Janet Beecher, Etienne Girardot and Samuel Hinds to such goofiness."

Script p11 S 26 '36

"'The Longest Night' is designed rather for the Saturday morning diversion of school children than for the august judgment of the cognoscenti. It is a reasonably brisk embodiment of what neighborhood houses expect from a murder in a department store."

— + Time p36 O 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Although suffering from a flimsy story, and a far-fetched climax, this picture has some merry moments of bangup comedy, and emerges a convincing laugh effort. It is not aimed at top billing, but will lend sturdy support to any dual. Family."

+ — Box Office p63 S 19 '36

"This comedy mystery-melodrama should fit nicely on the average bill. That the story is confused makes little difference since the satire furnishes plenty of entertainment. . . Errol Taggart's direction manages to forget the story and as a result stresses comedy much to the benefit of all concerned."

+ — Film Daily p8 S 15 '36

"This is an elaborately gagged mystery yarn and provides fairly amusing pandemonium in a department store over a couple of murders. It is cluttered with stock characters and its humor is aimed at the immature but it moves with such speed and piles up its laughs with such irresponsible verve that it will serve well in dual support, especially as it has the name and presence of Robert Young for box office bait."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 S 11 '36

— + Motion Pict Daily p2 O 19 '36

"This is program that generally entertains although one of the shortest features of the season."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p35 O 1 '36

"It took two producers to turn this one out, Lucien Hubbard and Samuel Marx. That was hardly enough, judging by what they have produced in 'The Longest Night,' which in its release form has been shorn to 50 minutes. They seldom come from that or other major studios with as little to offer, either. Feature will take the place of two shorts, if preferred to shorts, or act as a weak No. 2 feature on duals."

— — Variety p17 O 21 '36

"Loaded with hilarity, hokum and humor, 'The Longest Night' is a classy little comedy. Compact and swift-moving, the picture romps along with some swell kidding of the [mystery story] theme. Obviously it is very timely, since the audience went for the works. . . Combination of clever dialog and good direction puts 'The Longest Night' in real entertainment class, despite the fact the picture never presumes to aim at the big time. Any exhibitor who knows his cinema will go for this one, as it is constructed on the good old principle of action, and the film never drags."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 11 '36

LOVE BEGINS AT TWENTY. Warner-First national 60min Ap 22 '36

Cast: Warren Hull. Patricia Ellis. Hugh Herbert. Hobart Cavanaugh. Dorothy Vaughan

Director: Frank McDonald

See issues of June 29 and September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: not the best; C: no."

Christian Century p1095 Ag 12 '36

"A: relaxation for an idle hour; Y: possibly amusing; C: unelevating."

Parents' M p47 Ag '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 26 '36

"Under the rather misleading title 'Love Begins at Twenty,' this amiable little farce [becomes] not so much a picture of young romance as it does a story of middle-aged rebellion." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p46 Jl 4 '36

"It is lightweight entertainment. . . The film has its moments of slight amusement, but the theme was far from original when Mr. Flavin treated it and it has whiskers down to here now." F. S. Nugent

— + N Y Times p20 S 19 '36

"[It is a] moderately amusing little trifle. . . Since Mr. Herbert has a genius for playing stuttering, cowed underlings, it would be pleasant to say that 'Love Begins at Twenty' is first-rate farce. Unfortunately, it is done in such a stereotyped manner that even his expert playing seems forced and labored."

William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p9a S 19 '36

"[It] is a cinema trifle. . . The story is rather trite and fragile but Tom Reed and Dalton Trumbo have brightened it up with amusing business and Frank McDonald has directed with lively tempo and fine regard for light and shade." Rob Wagner

+ — Script p10 Ag 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Domestic comedy that owes more to its director and scenarist than to the author and is beholden to the cast for its further effect. . . Pretty surefire on a dueler to get audience good humor, but a soloist only where they respond emphatically to the fireside stuff. . . It makes for pleasant entertainment of better than average in its class."

+ — Variety p16 S 23 '36

LOVE IN EXILE. Capitol 78min N 15 '36

Cast: Clive Brook. Helen Vinson. Mary Carlisle. Ronald Squire. Cecil Ramage

Director: Alfred Werker

Based on the novel, His Majesty's Pajamas by Gene Markey. Dialogue film produced in England about a year ago and recently released in this country. The story concerns the efforts of scheming foreign industrial leaders to remove a Ruritanian king and replace him with a dictator. In the end the king returns from exile through the aid of a countess who loves him.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Clive Brook returns to us in rather a jumbled tale. In spite of his finished performance, the film is only fitfully interesting. . . Helen Vinson and Mary Carlisle offer adequate performances in vague characterizations but there are not enough good points to raise the production above the routine level. And there are enough bad points to place the film in the adult-audience class." T. J. Fitzmorris

— + America p216 D 5 '36

"A: fair; Y: good; C: no interest."

Christian Century p1670 D 9 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Timeliness must be the New Criterion's reason for showing 'Love in Exile.' . . The picture was made in England, where life now seems to be following fiction to a most uncomfortable extent. The striking topical quality of the plot is its greatest asset. The film itself is decidedly second-rate, even with such handsome and experienced players as Helen Vinson and Clive Brook in the leading roles. It would be interesting to know how the film would be received today in London, where it was manufactured." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p33 D 10 '36

N Y Times p35 D 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With the best will in the world, it is impossible to say much in favor of this picture. The story is inept, the dialogue follows close behind in its stiltedness, and the thinness of the story is made up for by the quantity of dialogue. In fact, far too large a part of the film consists of medium close shots of static conversations, in which the artists seldom move and the camera stance not at all. Stock shots of plane flights and newspaper inserts for time lapses are made use of unnecessarily and awkwardly, and even the photography is thin and washed-out in appearance."

— — Hollywood Reporter p8 Je 1 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p7 My 26 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LOVE IN EXILE—Continued

"This sounds like a drawing room comedy. In reality it winds up as punchy melodrama that picks up speed. Estimate: pleasing program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p49 N 15 '36

"Helen Vinson . . . is sweet and charming, but not over-convincing in a role that calls for more poise and sophistication. Clive Brook plays the exile in an effortless, nonchalant way, with humorous interludes. Supporting company is excellent, and all in character, with no jarring note in either casting or direction."

Variety p15 My 27 '36

LOVE LETTERS OF A STAR. Universal 55min N 8 '36

Cast: Henry Hunter. Polly Rowles. C. Henry Gordon. Ralph Forbes

Directors: Lewis R. Foster. Milton Carruth

Based on a short story The Case of the Constant God by Rufus King. A mystery story based on the theft for blackmail of indiscreet letters written by a school girl to a matinee idol.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A good cast, but a depressing picture, with some comedy relief furnished by the police photographer. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The blackmail plot is not new, but the speed of events and the convincing manner in which they are developed, make a mystery drama as it should be—tense, uncertain as to outcome and wholly adequate as to thrills. Adults." Calif Cong of Far & Teachers

"An interesting and smoothly developed murder mystery, the title of which is a misnomer. . . The story develops in a logical and fascinating manner with much credit due the director and a very capable cast. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"[It is] a trite blackmail mystery. Mediocre. Adults." DAR

"Natural acting, good comedy relief, apt dialogue and dramatic suspense make this a superior mystery film. Adults & young people." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Although the clues are well concealed, the vital issues appear lacking. Fairly entertaining for the mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 31 '36

"Mature audience. Production values satisfactory, suspense well sustained, timely comedy, and the work of a well directed cast give this picture its entertainment value."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 17 '36

"Audiences will be surprised to find a detective story hiding under a misleading title. . . The result is a somewhat confused but interesting melodrama. Adolescents, 12-16: mature; children, 8-12: no."

+ — Motion Pict R p7 N '36

"[It is] an involved, clumsily directed murder mystery. . . Ralph Forbes and C. Henry Gordon give good performances in an otherwise mediocre picture. Adults."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women O 21 '36

"Objection: revenge, suicide and murder. Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency O 29 '36

"A: fair; Y: possible; C: unsuitable."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict p6 N 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The title is a flagrant attempt to cash in on all that front page publicity which recently pilloried an actress uncircumspect enough to keep a diary. It's irrelevant too, for it covers not a servant-girls'-delight exposé but a mystery story. . . A just fair chiller, it goes through the routine devices that have long served to entertain shriek-in-the-night addicts. The dénouement is jumbled, fails to account for many of the red herrings which have been lavishly sprinkled across the spectator's path."

Herb Sterne

+ — Script p15 N 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This 'guess who?' yarn is neither good nor bad, but somewhere between the two. Built on an illogical premise, the mystery element follows through satisfactorily, though light on comedy relief and on top acting talent. Family."

+ — Box Office p31 O 31 '36

"The yarn is filled with lots of twists and surprises, and will satisfy the thrill fans. . . The directors Lewis Foster and Milton Carruth have sustained a tense atmosphere throughout."

+ Film Daily p17 D 1 '36

"A smoothly unfolded murder mystery that, without stepping far off the beaten track, has enough ingenuity and production class to recommend it even to the epicures in the art of clue-spotting. Without pretense of box office appeal, except a title that is something of a misnomer, inasmuch as the letters are those of a schoolgirl and not of a star, it will serve unusually well as a dual support number."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 21 '36

— Motion Pict Daily p3 O 22 '36

"Program mystery murder drama, short on names, but with new faces which may mean something later, 'Love Letters of a Star,' is routine fare that will serve on twin bills or in lesser situations."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p36 N 1 '36

"'Love Letters of a Star' has no one in its lineup who means box office but picture is competently produced murder mystery that should please if not attract customers. It is good family entertainment. . . With a brace of directors and a trio of adaptors, a total of five hands were joined in writing and directing 'Love Letters.' In both departments, the combined talents of the five men have brought forth a finished product that is notable for its production superiority over the average, run-of-the-mill murder mysteries."

+ Variety p38 D 2 '36

"Obviously seeking to traffic on recent exposures of amorous antics in the news, 'Love Letters of a Star' is actually a minor murder mystery. Picture makes no production claims except an hour's diversion and levels off as a relaxer on duals in the subsequents. . . Mechanics of the unfoldment of motive and killing modus are timeworn, and behavior of detectives and family involved in the crime is not convincing in some of the crucial scenes."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 21 '36

LOVE ON THE RUN. MGM 80min D 4 '36

Cast: Joan Crawford. Clark Gable. Franchot Tone. Reginald Owen. Mona Barrie. Ivan Lebedeff

Director: W. S. Van Dyke

Based on a serial story Beauty on the Beat by Alan Green and Julian Brodie. "Gable and Tone are a couple of New York newspapermen in London. Gable gets the assignment of the wedding of reporter-hating heiress Miss Crawford to Count Ivan Lebedeff; Tone draws the proposed altitude flight of Baron Reginald Owen and Baroness Mona Barrie. When Miss Crawford jilts her impecunious title, Gable grabs her, pushes Tone, Owen and Miss Barrie into a closet and steals the plane." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The players concentrate on the lighter aspects of the intrigue and bring forth a swiftly moving, sometimes hilarious comedy. Franchot Tone provides keen competition for Mr. Gable and Reginald Owen plays an impressive villain. It is first rate family entertainment." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p216 D 5 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 26 '36

"Excellent entertainment, dominated by the fine performances of the three leading players and by the remarkable supporting bit of Donald Meek. The entire cast is exceptionally able and Van Dyke's direction is important. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p10 D 1 '36

"[It is] a swift and hilarious farce. . . For anyone who doesn't expect to take it seriously, it is full of laughs. Family."

+ Wkly Guide N 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"If not entirely credible [the events] are at least sufficiently so as to satisfy the average movie fan. It is a fast moving exciting and admirably acted story. . . In this picture Franchot Tone has a part calling for whimsical comedy and his deft handling of it will give a new conception of his qualities as an actor." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p39 D '36

"This cross-country film chase over Europe has charm and humor to compensate for the story's impossibility. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p19 D 5 '36

"'Love on the Run' is unbelievable but joyous, as satisfactory a piece of screen entertainment as one could wish for. . . The combination of Cedric Gibbons sets, Adrian gowns and Oliver Marsh photography is enough to make any picture worth looking at, and the story and acting in this one make it well worth listening to. Such a finished trio as Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone can make us believe the unbelievable and entertain us with it. . . 'Love on the Run' is screen entertainment easy to take. Its strength lies in the weakness of its appeal to the intelligence of the audience. It is content with asking us only to have a good time with it, presenting no psychological problem demanding close attention. . . It is [a] relief to find in a picture house such a clever bit of tomfoolery."

+ Hollywood Spec p11 N 21 '36

"[It] is formula-made, but amusing in spite of that. Speed, a high-powered cast and a series of good gags are responsible for at least obscuring the fact that 'Love on the Run' is continual nonsense. If it doesn't make sense the film usually does make fun. The story is certainly best left undescribed. 'Love on the Run' is deliberately mad and quite as deliberately funny." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p13 N 28 '36

"A slightly daffy cinematic item of absolutely no importance, 'Love on the Run,' presents Clark Gable, Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone in roles that by now are a bit stale. In all good conscience, the film ought to bow, in turn, to several distinguished antecedents, for it has borrowed liberally here and there of tried and true screen devices and situations. . . W. S. Van Dyke has injected a few of his own tested touches, and some in the Rene Clair and Frank Capra manner, with a resulting mad pace and pleasing familiarity for the audience." J. T. M.

+ — N Y Times p13 N 28 '36

"Since 'Love on the Run' deals in an energetic manner with these everlastingly romantic screen figures—reporters—the chances are that it will probably be a great box office success. But the truth of the matter is that it is a definitely ordinary film—scarcely worth the efforts of its stars, of little credit to its director,

W. S. Van Dyke and of small compensation to those who are in search of rollicking entertainment. . . The three stars do the best they can under the circumstances. . . But the efforts of all are wasted on decidedly inferior material." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p7a N 28 '36

"Everybody works very hard in 'Love on the Run,' but only succeeds in seeming pretty pitiful. The most pitiful people involved are Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, and Franchot Tone. I suppose the studio felt that these three citizens simply had to be kept busy or heaven knows what they'd be up to, and so some sort of sketch was contrived for them." John Mosher

— New Yorker p85 N 28 '36

"Whenever the story needs taking in at the waist, melodrama provides a stitch in time. But for the most part W. S. Van Dyke squeezes the script for all the slapstick there is in it. The three players are cast in roles that call less for acting than for sheer good spirits, and that they have in abundance. . . The film has few dull moments, and those moments that fail to fizz can be blamed on the hackneyed plot. Perhaps this is the reporter story to end all reporter stories."

News-Wk p20 N 28 '36

Time p23 D 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Gable-Crawford-Tone—what more could any exhibitor want? But this film is not alone a big name hit. It's a riot of smart hokum which rings the bell in every department, and runs the gamut of comedy from slapstick to innuendo. Family."

+ Box Office p23 N 28 '36

"One riot of a comedy is this 'Love On the Run.' It sparkles with clever dialogue that Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone put over in grand style. In such a swell piece of entertainment, this name cast should mean smash box office returns. Every type and kind of audience should love its gay, breezy, laugh-loaded qualities. Tone deserves special mention for his performance. Crawford and Gable are splendid in this light type of comedy as they certainly know how to put over the lines."

+ Film Daily p9 N 17 '36

"'Love on the Run' is super-entertainment from its first delve into the riotous to its staccato climax, with nothing left out of the middle in the way of farcical situations and fast-fire never-missing dialogue. The Crawford-Gable-Tone combination has never been better. Naturally box-office, the trio has in this a vehicle which is of sure hit caliber. . . A few lapses into the unbelievable are made more delightful by thoroughly mad picturization."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 13 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 N 14 '36

"Comedy with names, this is headed for good grosses. . . All players are tops, comedy is strong, the cast is all-star."

+ Phila Exhibitor p30 D 1 '36

"Despite meandering story development, some slipshod dialog concoctions and several vague moments, 'Love On the Run' should collect its share at the gate through the sheer momentum of the Gable-Crawford-Tone combination. Crowded with ludicrous situations, considerable action and popular gagging, the film is lightweight and synthetic but will prove probably fit for the holiday season."

+ — Variety p18 D 2 '36

"Mixing all the possible sure-fire comedy ingredients, 'Love on the Run' is a hilarious farce that will set them laughing anywhere. Filled with spontaneous gags, excellent comedy dialog, plenty of action and even slapstick hokum, the picture comes near to being a riot."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 13 '36

LUCKIEST GIRL IN THE WORLD. Universal
70min N 8 '36

Cast: Jane Wyatt, Louis Hayward, Eugene
 Palette, Catharine Doucet

Director: Edward Buzzell

Based on the short story Kitchen Privileges by Anne Jordan. "Miss Wyatt wants to marry the heiress-seeking tennis champion and ball-room charmer and her mother likes the match. However, the father doubts the story they can exist on $150 a month and Miss Wyatt agrees to try it for a month." [Variety (Hollywood)]

Audience Suitability Ratings

"That is a very imposing title for such a minor film and I may point out that Jane Wyatt, who plays the title role, is not by far the luckiest girl even in Hollywood for having drawn so ordinary an assignment. . . This comedy [is] best suited to adults." T. J. Fitzmorris

— + America p168 N 21 '36

"A: pleasant; Y: amusing; C: little interest."
 Christian Century p1670 D 9 '36

"Entertaining. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"[It] is fresh, charming and amusing. Excellent light entertainment. Family." Calif Cong of Far & Teachers

"The story is light, but has charm and wholesome humor. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Amusing situations, good dialogue and an able cast mark this light farce. Mature & 14-18. Good." DAR

"Lightly amusing and based on a sound idea, this pleasant little comedy is unfortunately marred by excessive drinking." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Interesting comedy for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
 Fox W Coast Bul O 31 '36

"A light little love story, refreshingly entertaining. Family."
 + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
 O 17 '36

"The plot is well handled, and the characters seem delightfully human. Adolescents, 12-16: entertaining; children, 8-12: no interest."
 + Motion Pict R p7 N '36

"Mildly amusing, well directed with good photography. Adults."
 Nat Council of Jewish Women O 21 '36

"Adults."
 Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A, Y & C: entertaining light comedy."
 Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Family."
 Sel Motion Pict p4 N 1 '36

"Family. Generally bright and amusing."
 + Wkly Guide O 31 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Jane Wyatt and Louis Hayward, by virtue of the easy, convincingly natural performances they contribute to it, make 'The Luckiest Girl in the World,' a nice little picture. There is not a great deal of story in it, and what there is sags a bit in the middle, but it will entertain any audience which can enjoy following the working out of a social problem devoid of dramatic high spots. . . Except for one sequence in which Hayward and Pendleton get drunk for no greater reason than a desire to get drunk, the picture is clean and wholesome."
 + — Hollywood Spec p11 O 24 '36

"Here is a simple, unheralded comedy that is quite light and amusing through its entire length. . . You will find the comedy frothy and gay most of the way, thanks to Director Eddie Buzzell's smooth direction." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p45 D 12 '36

"Why the new picture should have proved so immoderately amusing to this reviewer during attendance at it is difficult to explain at this later moment, grim and uncompromising and far removed from the plush elegance of the theater. It is probably because the story—a piece of fluff—has been so adroitly acted by Jane Wyatt, Louis Hayward and Nat Pendleton, as well as skillfully directed by Mr. Buzzell. But its situations, threadbare as many of them are, often have a surprise comedy twist and the lines, a bright and original co-ordination which proves hilarious. . . If you want entertainment light, gay and dextrous, without much substance or particular brilliance, but with many spontaneous laughs [see it.]" Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 D 5 '36

"'The Luckiest Girl in the World' is one of the lightest comedies that has come along this season. It is sheer fluff, but, thanks to cast and director, rather an engaging bit of fluff. [It] is not a picture to remain long in your memory. An hour after seeing it, the details are dim. The impression of a pleasant hour lingers on, however." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p30 D 7 '36

"Any one not too much depressed beforehand by such a title as 'The Luckiest Girl in the World' will be pleasantly surprised to find this week a better-than-average contribution to the field of machine-made entertainment at the Roxy. The cinematic counterpart of a racily written 'novellette' in one of the popular five-cent magazines, it permits its pretty and neatly formularized people to behave and talk more brightly than usual, while its charming heroine, Jane Wyatt, gives off an authentic local debutante aura which is all the more unexpected—considering the fact that but recently Miss Wyatt actually was a local debutante." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p16 D 5 '36

"[It] is an amiable, unassuming and entertaining little comedy. . . In outline, this sounds pretty pat and unexciting, but the plot's framework is filled in with delightful little touches, and the acting of Jane Wyatt, Louis Hayward, Nat Pendleton and Eugene Palette is so commendable that 'The Luckiest Girl in the World' turns out to be passably good, if not outstanding, film fare." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p7a D 5 '36

"Eddie Buzzell surmounts the distract proceedings by turning the hoop-la into personable comedy, romantic in mood and incident. Many of the sequences pile satisfactory entertainment and result in a mildly entertaining evening. Jane Wyatt is a charming heroine and Louis Hayward proves an adequate hero." Herb Sterne

— + Script p10 N 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Universal steps out with a picture that is chock-full of romantic moments, lively comedy, an entertaining little story, and some enjoyably capable acting by Jane Wyatt, a new starlet, and Louis Hayward, clean-cut lad with plenty of ability. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 31 '36

"This is a pleasing program number that will pile up many laughs. Although the story is slender, Edward Buzzell has directed well and provided much entertainment."

+ — Film Daily p13 O 22 '36

"An engagingly human little romantic comedy that clings steadfastly to real life and lightens it gayly with a twinkle of whimsy. The story is a mere trifle but its telling is so delightfully unstrained and bubbling with good humor that it makes capital entertainment. Lacking exploitation values its destiny is dual duty but there it will be ideal and popular neighborhood fare."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 10 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p12 O 20 '36

"Pleasant little comedy that makes no claims to greatness but which should be pleasing despite its lack of names."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p36 N 1 '36

"Incredible story . . . has been rigged up with old vaudeville gags and directed with a certain amount of zippiness. Result is a farcical cream puff that will please where they please easily. Elsewhere, and for duals, it will be not too hard to accept. . . Whenever people mention Jane Wyatt they mention the Social Register. It astonishes 'em both ways—that an actress in a Social Register could act. Miss Wyatt can. Very nicely. . . There is, however, no memorable scene, acting trick or trait that could be used as a peg to hang predictions on as to her film future. . . Also from the legitimate [stage] is Louis Hayward. And okay, too. On the boyish side, but possessing enough sincerity when, for a few feet of celluloid, a little seriousness is called for."

+ — Variety p12 D 9 '36

"Again the New Universal has cracked through with first-rate comedy. . . [It] doesn't have a cast heavy enough to warrant heavy billing or exploitation, but it will do swell as the comedy relief on any important dualer. Buzzell's comedy talent bobs up constantly throughout the picture and some of the lines in the previewed edition are still warm enough to get a few raised eyebrows."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 19 '36

M

MAD HOLIDAY. MGM 68min N 13 '36

Cast: Edmund Lowe, Elissa Landi, Zasu Pitts, Ted Healy, Edmund Gwenn

Director: George B. Seitz

Based on the mystery Murder in a Chinese Theatre by Joseph Santley. "Edmund Lowe is a Hollywood film star who is fed up on playing detectives in mystery thrillers, especially those written by the mysterious Peter Dean. So he walks out on his agonized producer and books passage for a sea trip far away from it all. He is followed, however, by Ted Healy, a vociferous studio publicity hound, and the first person he meets is the despised Peter in the ravishingly lovely person of Elissa Landi, who dotes on murders but has never seen a corpse." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It is hard to discover whether this is a comic mystery yarn or a slightly mysterious comedy, but whichever way you will have it, it is not very new. That it manages to amuse and mystify us at all is due to the heroic cast which surmounts the added difficulty of uncertain direction." T. J. Fitzmorris

— + America p168 N 21 '36

"A & Y: fair of kind; C: no."

Christian Century p1574 N 25 '36

"Many good laughs, but some unnecessary drinking. Mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A well cast and well presented murder mystery. Some unnecessary drinking. Adults & young people." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Farce murder mystery. Treated in a farcical-slapstick manner, with many murders but few thrills and little coherence of sequences, this will hold little interest for those who like mystery stories. . . Disappointing to mystery fans. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A handsomely mounted, utterly inane burlesque. Mature & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

"The picture is quick moving, though rather confusing at times. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"The spirited acting of Edmund Lowe and Elissa Landi contribute much to the entertainment value of the picture which has a large well directed cast. Especially interesting [are] the Chinese Theater sequence and the fog scenes. Mature audience."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 2 '36

"Starting in a clever manner this picture soon develops a boresome murder mystery relieved by the rather questionable humor of Zasu Pitts. Edmund Lowe is satisfactory as the actor-detective and Elissa Landi pleases as the authoress but both are worthy of a better vehicle. Family."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

"A well selected cast, with Edmund Lowe and Elissa Landi doing good work; with expert but dubious comedy by Zasu Pitts as a tipsy woman and comedy bits contributed by Ted Healy and a clever little pup. Mature."

Sel Motion Pict p7 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"While I am a disciple of that school of thought which holds that four comedians to three corpses in a murder mystery picture is a ratio which tends to demean murder and lessen its importance as one of the most emphatic manifestations of our rather complex social structure, I feel that in justice to those who had a hand in the making of 'Mad Holiday,' I must confess I derived entertainment from it. . . Still, I maintain it might have preserved a better balance—say one comedian to one corpse. . . To George Seitz, director, goes credit for making it entertaining, for presenting the characters as natural humans who make no effort to impress us as actors."

+ — Hollywood Spec p14 N 21 '36

"Because 'Mad Holiday' seems to us affected, hysterical and boring, is no reason why others should find it so, for it is patterned after 'The Thin Man' type of detective fiction, now the rage on the screen, and its sets, especially the later ones in a Chinese theater are fantastic and original. Edmund Lowe and Elissa Landi do their utmost to be an engaging pair of sophisticates and the jewel robbery motif is reasonably unique." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p19 N 27 '36

"An engaging variation on that macabre motif succinctly classified by the cinema industry as 'whodunit?' is the current 'Mad Holiday.' . . You get the idea, as the gay company of specialized serio-comics becomes involved with the familiar devices of mystery melodrama—masked men, black-gloved hands and Oriental trickery—that maybe Metro and Mr. Seitz are kidding the screen thriller a bit with this one." J. T. M.

+ — N Y Times p39 N 26 '36

"'Mad Holiday' is a better comedy than it is a murder mystery. The characters are gay and interesting and the comic situations in which they find themselves have a light-hearted quality about them. But the puzzle they are asked to solve is just another one of those second-rate riddles. . . [It] has considerable merit as entertainment." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p7a N 25 '36

"[It is] a comedy melodrama that tempers its blood and thunder with the amiable comedy of Zasu Pitts and Ted Healy."

News-Wk p22 D 5 '36

"It's fundamentally a good mystery yarn, different, too. . . Screen comedy is getting screwier and screwier, to the seeming delight of audiences. The treatment goes overboard on slapstick and the foolery, while funny, removes the impact from the melodrama." Herb Sterne

MAD HOLIDAY—Continued

+ Script p15 N 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Despite splendid performances by Edmund Lowe and Elissa Landi, this picture has too much plot, too many corpses and too little action to be much more than a run-of-the-mill film. There is plenty of sparkling dialogue and fine comedy, but the picture misses by becoming too involved. Family."

+ Box Office p51 N 14 '36

"Presenting frothy, light entertainment and tragedy at the same time, it is difficult to classify this laugh-studded mystery drama which appears to be both a travesty and a very serious piece of business. Only the individual picture patrons can decide. But anyone, regardless of how his or her interpretation is gaited, will discover enough all-around diversion to make the ticket investment fairly worth-while."

+ Film Daily p8 N 30 '36

"It would be hard to go farther than this in farcing a murder mystery or to wring more laughs from as corpse-bedecked a story. Unhappily, the thing is carried too far. Into a highly ingenious and amusing satirical travesty there have been inserted a battery of low-comedy gags that throw the rest out of key and slow up the development to no good purpose. . . With some relentless surgery in the cutting room it will be better still."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 5 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 N 6 '36

"[It is] programmer that has more names than the usual attempt of this sort. . . The comedy elements are strong but the net result is program."

+ Phila Exhibitor p52 N 15 '36

"'Mad Holiday' offers a very draggy 72 minutes which includes faked and genuine murders, a dash of comedy and love interest. The ingredients mix together clumsily and the result largely is a bore. Chances at the ticket windows are slender."

+ Variety p38 D 2 '36

"'Mad Holiday' is lightweight, run-of-the-mine filler. It will do well enough as a bit of [mystery] diversion, particularly where customers expect murders well garnished with laughter. Certain irresolutions on part of screen playwrights and director tend to delay the intent of the story until it gradually clarifies as a mildly farced murder mystery. Comedy is stressed, even at expense of suspense. . . Conviction is not maintained even for usual pitch. Characters do not behave as if in the midst of dire doings."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 5 '36

MAGNIFICENT BRUTE. Universal 74min O 11 '36

Cast: Victor McLaglen. Binnie Barnes. William Hall. Jean Dixon. Henry Armetta
Director: John Blystone

Based on the Liberty Magazine short story, Big, by Owen Francis. "Laid in the he-man atmosphere of the steel mills, story depicts rivalry between Victor McLaglen and William Hall, two husky workers vying for honor of being head man in their muscular trade." [Variety (Hollywood)]

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Victor McLaglen continues to be a better actor than his screen stories will admit, for the plot of his latest vehicle is unoriginal and over-sentimentalized. Thanks to a hardworking cast and a generally effective production, the film is slightly better than fair entertainment but not in any sense important. . . The realistic treatment of the story quite evidently places it in the adult bracket." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p96 O 31 '36

"A & Y: good of kind; C: no."

Christian Century p1438 O 28 '36

"Adults. (Matter of taste.)" Am Legion Auxiliary

"Mature-family. Adults: excellent; 14-18: tense; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Impressive interiors of the mill showing the glowing hot metal being poured and a thought-provoking method used to stimulate production make this picture interesting to those who enjoy vigorous drama. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Harrowing details of the mills. Mature audience & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

"Although ethics are a bit confused, the film is exciting and holds one's attention throughout. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Very realistic photography and an excellent cast and direction have made a strong picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"An open hearth steel mill is an unusual background for a motion picture. The story is weak and sordid, with but little human interest to relieve its tragedy. The shots showing the manufacture of steel are interesting, but the death of Howard is unnecessarily harrowing. 12-16: harrowing; 8-12: no." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul O 10 '36

"This unusual picture, a drama of the Steel Mills, though not always pleasant, is forceful in direction, replete with suspense, and gives us an intimate insight into the industry. Family-mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 28 '36

"Fair. Adults."

+ Motion Pict Guide D '36

"The story is weak and sordid with little humor or character development to relieve its tragic events. The sequences depicting the manufacture of steel are interesting, but there are several unnecessarily harrowing scenes. Though acting and direction are adequate the dialogue is trite and what comedy relief there is depends upon 'wisecracks.' Adolescents, 12-16: harrowing; children, 8-12: certainly not."

+ Motion Pict R p7 N '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '36

"A perfect setting for a McLaglen characterization. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A & Y: he-man comedy melodrama; C: possible though tense."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"This picture [is] fairly interesting. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict p6 N 1 '36

"Well acted and holds the interest throughout. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] is frankly melodramatic in its situations and earthy in its humor. Victor McLaglen's presentation . . . along with the sympathetic and restrained performance of Jean Dixon, justifies this rather rugged fare." Laura Elston Canadian M p39 D '36

"If you expect to see another 'Informer' you will be disappointed in this melodramatic hokum. . . [It is] produced and acted with all the restraint of the street brawl which is one of its features. Victor McLaglen is Victor McLaglen without John Ford's restraining hand to mold his performance. Adults."

— Christian Science Monitor p17 O 31 '36

"This morning I know vastly more of what goes on in the steel industry than I knew yesterday morning, thereby getting that much return for the time spent in viewing the picture even if it had failed to entertain me otherwise. . . This Universal picture strikes a sturdy, elemental note. It is excellent entertainment, deriving a great deal of its strength from its vigorous background."

+ Hollywood Spec p15 O 10 '36

"The story takes on some of the 'sez-you-sez-me aspects' of the old McLaglen-Edmund Lowe film feuds. But 'The Magnificent Brute' strives more for realism, less for laughs. McLaglen is an excellent choice for Big Andrews." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p61 N 21 '36

"Blast furnaces, cascading sparks and molten rivers make an effective background for a claptrap story in 'The Magnificent Brute.' It presents Victor McLaglen . . . in sorry contrast to his brilliant portrayals in 'The Lost Patrol' and 'The Informer.' . . In this instance, there is more than a trace of counterfeit about the proceedings. . . It is apparent that [McLaglen] needs the sensitive and understanding direction of John Ford, who made 'The Informer,' to really act." Howard Barnes

— N Y Herald Tribune p10 O 24 '36

"Yesterday's new picture explored the world of steel workers. It seems to be a dramatic world, visually exciting, with photographic possibilities that [it] does not always realize. . . With Victor McLaglen to play Big Steve Andrews, the director has concentrated on character study, a clever move to make an ordinary story into an interesting picture. They had little enough to work on; but between them, Victor McLaglen and John G. Blystone have made 'Big' almost believable. . . [The film], thanks then to its chief player, is something more, but not much more, than a run-of-the-mill melodrama. . . [It] is fair melodrama of the he-man school." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p12 O 24 '36

"A rowdy melodrama served up rare, if not raw, it has its gusty humors, its intermittent shocks of physical conflict, its molten steel horrors and a blusteringly perfect performance by Mr. McLaglen. It probably will not appeal to the knitting ladies of Gramercy Park, but we found it almost as entertaining as a street fight. . . John Blystone has directed his melodrama as vigorously as its materials merit, and, besides Mr. McLaglen's amiable personification of the brawny brute, there are helpful performances by Jean Dixon as the widow [and] Billy Burrud as her hero-worshipping son." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p23 O 24 '36

"Although it displays the heartaches beneath the brawny exteriors of the steel workers throughout the country, 'The Magnificent Brute' is a feeble drama, too unsteady to stand on its own feet, or, if you prefer, too weighty for even the broad shoulders of its star, Victor McLaglen. When it explains the folk ways of these people it does so with more earnestness than gusto, an error which deprives the narrative of that magical ingredient known as entertainment. It would have been better for all concerned if the film had spied on these people in a less elderly plot." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p9a O 24 '36

"Life in the steel mills and Victor McLaglen are the stuff and tissue of a mild, gentle little pastime." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p77 O 31 '36

"Victor McLaglen is a much finer actor in defeat ('The Informer') than in victory. One can feel sorry for a brute who is easily tricked mentally. Victor does a swell job registering bewilderment after his ignominious beating as a wrestler. However, the preview gang at the Ritz yipped for him loudest when he was loudest, which shows that Charles Rogers knows his audiences. At least his neighborhood audiences. . . Credit Edmund Grainger with an inexpensive production that just misses the Big Stuff." Rob Wagner

+ — Script p10 O 31 '36

"In dealing with the life of a steelworker, any medium except the cinema would inevitably have found Labor v. Capital a central problem. For Universal, the sole problem herein was how to substitute overalls for the soldiers' uniforms McLaglen has worn in his recent pictures. . . [It] effects McLaglen's demobilization with a minimum of distinction, a fair share of entertainment. Most tedious noise: McLaglen's guffaw."

+ — Time p70 O 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A lusty story of hard steel and hard men provides a made-to-order spot for Victor McLaglen's swashbuckling talent and Producer Edmund Grainger, taking full advantage of it, delivers a fast-moving, well-cast, excellently directed picture—quite hot in entertainment values and sure to be a money-maker in every situation. . . Much of the picture's merit is creditable to the sequences showing the actual making of steel."

+ Box Office p27 O 3 '36

"Here is a picture for the man in the street. A rollicking story with plenty of action and comedy, and generous sprinkling of romance, plus an interesting picture of the great steel mills of this continent. Names are not lacking either, and those of Victor McLaglen, Binnie Barnes and Henry Armetta should look okay on your marquee."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p13 N 21 '36

"Yarn will score with star's large following, plus picture-goers generally who like red-blooded heroes and their exploits. Film is spiritedly directed by John G. Blystone and has wide audience appeal in that it is he-man entertainment, likewise attractive to women, and, again, is keen picture for [children]. Latter is due to the excellent part played by young Billy Burrud who has flaming case of hero worship on McLaglen."

+ Film Daily p7 O 24 '36

"This gusty, two-fisted comedy-drama about steel mill workers on and off shift is of chief interest in giving Victor McLaglen another of those dimwitted cock-of-the-walk roles in which he is unbeatable. The story is obviously synthetic and loaded with hokum, but it is good entertainment on a popular level. The picture may have tough going at the top but will make up for it below that level with good grosses, and should score big in industrial areas."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 S 24 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 S 25 '36

"The neat result [is] program that ought to be satisfactory if not particularly outstanding."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p40 O 15 '36

"Off to a dawdling start, the story picks up after about a reel, working for more interest until reaching a climax that really has them on their seat edges. . . Strong dual fare, but able to hold up on singles where such still exist, and where too much is not expected. Excellent secondary cast, with plenty of help from the steel mill backgrounds, and not much aid from most of the dialog, which has been slighted, particularly in the earlier scenes, where they seem to be talking to gain length."

+ — Variety p14 O 23 '36

"'The Magnificent Brute' is magnificent box office. Meaty, masculine and robust, this is the type of picture that exhibitors cry for. Loaded with tried and true material, this picture has mass appeal written all over it. . . The whole family will find swell entertainment in 'The Magnificent Brute,' and exhibitors will be able to ballyhoo this one without fear of empty tills."

MAGNIFICENT BRUTE—Continued

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 24 '36

MAKE WAY FOR A LADY. RKO 74min N 13 '36

Cast: Herbert Marshall. Anne Shirley. Gertrude Michael. Margot Grahame

Director: David Burton

Based on the novel Daddy and I by Elizabeth Jordan. "Anne Shirley is the romantic young girl who decides to save her father from a lonely old age by choosing a wife for him. She selects the wrong woman, thereby proving the unreliability of feminine intuition. In the end, however, the publisher finds true love right under his daughter's nose in the person of her teacher." (America)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Yet another treatment of the resourceful adolescent who attempts to solve the problems of her elders, this film manages to be quietly amusing in spite of a dragging action." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p192 N 28 '36

"The daughter's character is overdrawn, and the picture as a whole is just average entertainment. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"As a whole, the story is too long drawn out, with too much attention given to the emotional and sentimental side of the characters portrayed. Adults & 8-18: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The humor of the picture is of the sort that brings smiles and chuckles and therefore may not appeal to audiences who like broad comedy and livelier action. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. A light, pleasant story, capably acted. Mature-family." DAR

"A light story has been given light and pleasant treatment, with the happy relationship between father and daughter perhaps the pleasantest part of it. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"[It is] a very amusing and unique social drama, with a wholesome atmosphere. Credit is due the direction and cast for their natural and fresh presentation. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 28 '36

"[It is] delightfully refreshing. Thoughtful, sensitive direction, artistic settings and good photography added to the excellent work of the able cast give this picture interesting and high entertainment value, leaving one with the warm glow of having enjoyed something pleasingly dear and sweet. Mature audience."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 17 '36

"Dependent entirely for its entertainment value on the charm of Herbert Marshall and Anne Shirley cast as father and daughter, this is a slowly paced, thin little story. . . . It is leisurely, wooden, unimpressive. Family."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women N 16 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Though it all ends happily enough [it] turns out to be a long cinematic detour dotted with dull entanglements and uninspired comedy. Anne Shirley (who photographs indifferently) pirouettes through the role of the daughter. . . . Herbert Marshall looks embarrassed. So should RKO. Family."

— Christian Science Monitor p17 N 14 '36

"As a moon-struck adolescent . . . Miss Shirley is positively the problem of the growing girl personified. Her callowness, however, is almost too pure to be good, and the little misunderstandings on which the plot hinges seem very nearly deliberate. An unfortunate resemblance between Gertrude Michael and Margot Grahame, moreover, may leave some members of the audience a bit confused as to which one it is that Mr. Marshall really wants to marry." B. R. C.

N Y Times p12 D 12 '36

"[It is] an unassuming little film that one may attend without any greater calamity than a trifling loss of time. . . . The film is really adolescent stuff that can be seen without too much fault-finding." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p7a D 12 '36

"'Make Way for a Lady' is a resounding contribution to the Five Little Peppers school of cinema. . . . Implicit in the writing, acting and direction of it, a conviction that the picture is completely charming helps to obliterate any trace of charm which it might otherwise have possessed."

— Time p26 N 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 O 30 '36

"[It is] pleasing comedy drama that has the benefit of more names than the usual Anne Shirley production. . . . Neighborhood audiences, small towns should find entertainment in it."

+ Phila Exhibitor p52 N 15 '36

THE MAN I MARRY. Universal 79min O 18 '36

Cast: Doris Nolan. Michael Whalen. Chic Sale. Nigel Bruce

Director: Ralph Murphy

Based on a novel of the same title by M. Coates Webster. "[It is a tale] about a wealthy young man who seeks seclusion to write a play, and a girl who is running away from marriage. Both wanting to be alone they seek the same deserted house and the fun starts." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A & C: hardly; Y: perhaps."

Christian Century p1670 D 9 '36

"Chic Sale's easy comedy redeems a long, drawn out tale. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Some clever and amusing situations. Good comedy for Chic Sale. Unnecessary drinking on the part of the two reporters. Adults: fair; 8-18: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Some may find this mildly amusing and entertaining, but because of the steady flow of liquor and the use of a church for unpleasant comedy sequences it cannot be recommended for young people. Mildly amusing farce comedy. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature audience. Mediocre." DAR

"Cleverly amusing comedy in which a slight and often used plot has been built into excellent entertainment through the expert acting of a well selected cast. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Some good photography, a great deal of drinking and much ado about nothing by a bewildered cast. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A silly love story, presumably comedy, in which most of the humor, if any, is supplied by two drunken reporters. Mediocre and waste of time." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"Fairly well cast and directed with Doris Nolan, a newcomer, appealing. Unusually effective photography, especially the storm scenes. Mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 14 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The vain struggle of a woman-hater to prevent himself from falling in love is ever an amusing sight for movie audiences. . . With the exception of a mildly boring pair of supposedly intoxicated comedians, this is a pleasantly diverting film. Adolescents, 12-16: possibly entertaining; children, 8-12: no interest."

+ Motion Pict R p7 N '36

"A light, amusing comedy with clever repartee and fast-moving direction. Excessive drinking. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 14 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency O 22 '36

"A & Y: mildly amusing; C: little interest."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"[It is] a light, somewhat entertaining comedy. . . The plot is implausible, depending too much upon dialogue for its motivation, and the overmuch imbibing used as comedy relief is not amusing. Fairly well cast and directed. Adults."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p4 N 1 '36

"[It is] an amusing story. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The Man I Marry' is an exceedingly poor picture. . . [It] is not convincing. The dialogue is directed with regard only for the words composing it, not for the mood of scenes. Lines are presented as a series of orations instead of as intimate conversations which lend the scenes conviction."

— — Hollywood Spec p8 O 24 '36

"Presenting a new screen personality—Doris Nolan. This is her first film, a mad little comedy that doesn't quite get off the springboard. . . All this is in the mood of gay whimsy that just misses all the way. It would be unfair to judge Miss Nolan by this just passable comedy." (1 star) Beverly Hills

Liberty p47 D 5 '36

"Like all screen novitiates, Miss Nolan is carefully restrained from demonstrating her histrionic abilities in the new film. . . [It] has been so designed that it presents her almost solely as a personality, and as such she is highly acceptable. [It] is a minor pleasantry."

T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p24 O 31 '36

"Doris Nolan . . . is being introduced to cinema audiences . . . in circumstances none too felicitous. For 'The Man I Marry,' in which she makes her screen debut, is an awkward and ingenuous film, maladroitly written and clumsily directed. . . Even though the story and the direction aren't satisfactory, Miss Nolan's beauty and sparkle are refreshing. Good work, too, is done by the grand actor, Nigel Bruce, and the members of the supporting cast." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p13 N 3 '36

"The sexes do mock battle again in a slight though often amusing comedy. It gives Doris Nolan just enough of an opportunity to show what she could do with a better one."

News-Wk p25 O 31 '36

"The country needs jobs. People have to make an honest living. So I suppose there was a reason for 'The Man I Marry,' besides double features. Only, the people who pay to see it may grumble. Well, I can't blame them. The story is obviously derivative, jumbled, slow-moving. . . After her advance build up, Doris Nolan has a poor chance to exhibit what she has, but in spite of so-so photography, the newcomer has learned a bit about screen deportment, pleasantly suggests Gladys George, and has a manner and verve quite her own."

R. S. Ames

— Script p11 N 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Doris Nolan is given an auspicious send-off by Universal in this scintillating comedy success. She evidences great capabilities for a light role, and with the support of a smart sophisticated screen play, the entire fare is one that should be welcomed by any audience. Family."

+ Box Office p63 O 17 '36

"[It is a] pleasant enough little comedy that will get a moderate amount of laughs."

+ — Film Daily p8 O 12 '36

"This is a factory-built comedy, laboriously fabricated from stock parts and upholstered with old gags worn smooth from use. There are, however, a lot of these familiar friends and on the juvenile level they will evoke a fair salvo of laughs. Mark the picture as good light fodder for the lesser duals."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p2 O 8 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 O 9 '36

"Presenting Doris Nolan as a comedienne who will bear watching, Universal has produced an engaging comedy in 'The Man I Marry.' The picture ought to help the new name. An able cast gives her plenty of comedy support. . . With some familiar situations, played with an eye to laughs, this shapes up as fair comedy program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p36 N 1 '36

"Foundation stone that Universal has selected in introducing Doris Nolan to starring roles is a rowdy comedy, plugged with stereotype, but destined to garner a sheaf of belly laughs where the patrons don't analyze their humor too much. It's got the law of averages in its favor. Gags and wacky situations arrive in such blasts that the opus merits the subtitle of goofus. Net results put the picture in the average class for neighborhood houses. For bigger spots it hasn't the marquee power, nor the solidity of theme, to go out on its own."

+ — Variety p19 N 4 '36

"Universal has done a very neat job of presenting Doris Nolan in her debut as a screen comedienne. 'The Man I Marry' is definitely the kind of comedy that wins audience appreciation and although delightfully sophisticated it is still well suited for the whole family."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 8 '36

MAN WHO CHANGED HIS MIND. See Man who lived again

MAN WHO COULD WORK MIRACLES. London films-United artists 82min

Cast: Roland Young, Joan Gardner, Ralph Richardson

Director: Lothar Mendes

Based on a short story of the same title by H. G. Wells. Filmed in England. "[It is the story of] a little draper's assistant who suddenly finds he has the power to work miracles. At first these miracles are hardly above the level of conjuring tricks, but as he grows to understand his power better he tries to organize it. Various people urge him to follow their advice; but at last, after encountering furious opposition from a retired Indian Colonel with reactionary ideas, he determines to re-shape the whole world and make it a place fit to live in. Exasperated by the stupidity and opposition of the rulers of the world whom he summons before him, by a single remark he unintentionally throws the world into physical chaos, and is so frightened by the results of his gift that he wishes everything as it was before; he also wishes away his own power." (Mo Film Bul)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"In its original form this was an amusing little tale, subtly but lightly treated. The large propagandist element, which has been

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MAN WHO COULD WORK MIRACLES—Cont. superimposed in the film makes it heavier and at the same time less convincing. A scrappy and inessential feminine interest has been added. . . . Roland Young does the timorous little man fairly well: but he is too obviously a cultured type to be really suitable, and when he asserts himself at the end, it is not the revelation of a hidden potentiality in this meek little man, but the cultured element coming to the surface and making the original delineation so much the less believable."
— + Mo Film Bul p148 S 30 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[We must] arm ourselves against a sea of abstractions, couched in Mr. Wells's embarrassing poetic diction. . . . The result is pretentious and mildly entertaining, with no moments as good as the war sequences of 'Things to Come,' nor as bad as what followed them. The direction and the production are shocking. That is not Mr. Wells's fault. And it may not be altogether the fault of Mr. Lothar Mendes, the director, for the slowness, vulgarity, overemphasis are typical of Mr. Korda's productions. . . . Mr. Korda, a publicity man of genius, who has not yet revealed a talent for the films, casts his pictures with little regard for anything but gossip paragraphs. Mr. Roland Young is quite the wrong type for Fotheringay, with his intermittent accent and his eyes which twinkle merrily with lack of conviction. . . . As for trick photography, of which this film is naturally an orgy, and like orgies of another kind grimly repetitive, it is always to my mind dull and unconvincing and destroys illusion. . . . The whole entertainment [is] sometimes fake poetry, sometimes unsuccessful comedy, sometimes farce, sometimes sociological discussion, without a spark of creative talent or a trace of film ability." Graham Greene
— Spec p379 S 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 J1 24 '36

"There is a limited audience for fantastic subjects, on stage or screen. Fact that this one comes from the distinguished pen of H. G. Wells won't influence people who don't care for that sort of thing. Like most of Wells's ideas, it is ingenious, but extravagant in conception and not easily grasped by the proletariat."

Variety p18 Ag 12 '36

MAN WHO LIVED AGAIN. Gaumont British 65min N 1 '36

Cast: Boris Karloff, Anna Lee, John Loder, Frank Cellier

Director: Robert Stevenson

"The story shows an eminent mind-specialist, Boris Karloff, at work in sinister surroundings. Feeling that he is on the eve of a world-shaking discovery, the professor sends for Anna Lee, a young girl who has qualified as a doctor, to act as his assistant. He demonstrates his discovery, a mechanism whereby the mind-energy of two apes can be drained and transposed so that a complete transference of personality takes place." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: doubtful; C: no."
Christian Century p1542 N 18 '36

"Further helped by a clear, smoothly moving plot, fine photography and a hair-raising climax, this story . . . is a fine achievement in this type of cinema. Adults." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"The story is well put together and well directed. It provides plenty of macabre thrills without descending to horrific sensationalism. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p148 O 30 '36

"Objectionable in part. Objection: a horror picture that proves unwholesome entertainment."

Nat Legion of Decency O 22 '36

"A: matter of taste; Y & C: no."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Strikingly vivid scenes, in which machines take on thinking qualities and weird experiments with unknown psychoses are treated as universally accepted facts, combine to make this film a fascinating study of the occult. . . . Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict p11 N 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The mad scientist is at work again . . . with moderately exciting results. Although the theme is a compound of balderdash, it has been projected with considerable skill and imagination. The camera-minded Robert Stevenson has directed the work with properly tricky effects. Boris Karloff bares his fangs and rumples up his hair in a more credible impersonation than he usually offers; the dialogue has some concise and authentic speech to offset the medical nonsense, and the supporting players are excellent." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p23 D 16 '36

"Even if it isn't art, it is entertainment and of the most welcome kind. . . . [It] is primarily a thriller and as such it doesn't call for too much plausibility. But it has what few thrillers possess—finished writing, expert and imaginative direction and polished acting. Although it is frankly fantastic and at times shamelessly absurd, the qualities do not interfere with the story's progress in the slightest degree. It rushes madly along from one weird situation to another and the spectator is swept with it. . . . It is first-rate weird entertainment." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p25 D 15 '36

"Until the idea goes wholesale, quite a few dramatic sparks are made to fly on the screen. Frank Cellier . . . turns in, as usual, a superb characterization. The rest of the cast play it with as straight faces as they can muster for an occasion which every now and then threatens to become monotonous. The tireless children of all ages should love it."

+ — Stage p16 N '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"If developed more from the psychological angle, this story . . . might have won through. By over-emphasis and uninspired handling the subject quickly drops to the level of bizarre melodrama and horror-thriller."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 26 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 S 22 '36

"Exploitable, with thrill angles strong, this will depend on the Karloff draw, selling."

Phila Exhibitor p32 N 1 '36

"For lovers of the macabre here is another spine tickler, though not of such a gruesome nature as the Frankenstein series. . . . Production is painstaking and realistic and, indeed, the whole thing seems all too feasible. No reason why this shouldn't register anywhere that this class of subject attracts."

Variety p16 S 23 '36

MAN WHO LIVED TWICE. Columbia 72min S 25 '36

Cast: Ralph Bellamy, Isabel Jewell, Thurston Hall, Henry Kolker

Director: Harry Lachman

A notorious killer wanted for murder is changed by the miracles of modern medical science into a noted doctor.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A theoretical problem is interestingly presented in an unusual story that is strongly told and well worth seeing. The novel and controversial subject will have a special appeal for various groups, including the medical and the legal. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul O 17 '36

"The story is arresting and unusual, if not entirely credible. An irrelevant love interest weakens the development, and the consequent 'happy ending' is an anti-climax. In this, and in one or two other incidents stronger and more sensitive direction might have avoided bathos. Ralph Bellamy gives a very fine performance. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p174 O '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A: matter of taste; Y & C: no."
Parents' M p32 D '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict p11 N 1 '36

"The general tone is melodramatic, but the idea and its working out are interesting. Family."

Wkly Guide O 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The results of Columbia's experimentation in the allied fields of brain surgery, induced amnesia, the rehabilitation of the recidivist and face-lifting are on view in a diverting, well photographed and nicely performed problem photoplay called 'The Man Who Lived Twice.'"

J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p23 O 12 '36

"In case you have suspected that 'The Man Who Lived Twice' disappointed this reviewer, you will be correct. It did. Although it has some lively and exciting moments, pithy speeches and expert performances by Mr. Bellamy, Thurston Hall, Henry Kolker, Willard Robertson, Ward Bond and Isabel Jewell—especially Miss Jewell—its direction is uneven and its denouement slovenly. The result is a good idea gone wrong." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p10 O 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Although only a program picture and heavy melodrama, this film has plenty of interest for family audiences."

+ — Box Office p35 N 7 '36

"[It is] unusual drama of double identity [which] carries thrills and suspense in well-knit story."

+ Film Daily p13 O 13 '36

"Although it is incredible and extremely far-fetched, the plot merits speculative interest on the stage or screen, but only in these realms of fantasy. As a starring vehicle for Ralph Bellamy, he appears to advantage in a heavy role, but in the main the production is undistinguished 'mellodrammer.' It has suspense and it is provocative until the denouement of the plot is worked out. . . Your audience may walk out of the theater with some feeling of dissatisfaction and readiness to forget the whole thing because of its implausibility, but the production and title can be depended upon to bring them into the house and keep them interested until the last half reel unwinds."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 O 19 '36

"Heavy melodrama all the way, it has a good pace, with the result—interesting program. Estimate: saleable."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 O 15 '36

"'The Man Who Lived Twice,' a good title even if it crowds the marquee, deals with crime from the social and pathological angle in a very entertaining manner. Favored by good production, able direction and a script that impresses for this type of story, the picture deserves to do average business or better. . . A worthwhile selection for double bills. [It] has sufficient quality to stand alone on secondary first runs."

+ Variety p15 O 14 '36

MANDARIN MYSTERY. Republic 65min D 7 '36

Cast: Eddie Quillan. Charlotte Henry. Rita LaRoy

Director: Ralph Stone

Based on the mystery story The Chinese Orange Mystery by Ellery Queen. A young detective investigates a murder and the mysterious disappearance of a valuable Chinese stamp which is a collector's item.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Although there have been exceptions, it is almost axiomatic to say that a film story is usually poor in ratio to the number of writers who concoct it. . . It seems a pity that, having slighted so fine an actor as Eddie Quillan, Hollywood returns him to us in a vehicle so poor that even Eddie is at times almost overwhelmed. The fundamental weakness . . . is Producer Nat Levine's disregard of the law of the illusion of reality. The entire story movement is sustained by a series of manifestly impossible events. . . 'Mandarin Mystery' immediately became, and remained throughout just a series of preposterous celluloid incidents. . . The conclusion to be drawn from this unfortunately justified criticism is that 'The Mandarin Mystery' is an exceptionally fine specimen for classroom dissection by students of cinema, as it offers a rich harvest of cinematic errors. If, however, you are in search of entertainment, forget this Republic mistake. That is, unless you have a highly developed sense of humor."

Paul Jacobs

— — Hollywood Spec p11 D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Despite good comedy performances by Eddie Quillan and William Newell, this picture will be best to hold up the short end on a double bill. The mystery plot is thin, and the action slow. Family."

+ — Box Office p29 N 21 '36

— Motion Pict Daily p10 N 17 '36

"Mystery, with accent on comedy, this lacks name strength, with results best for twin bills, neighborhoods. . . With a cast that has no selling names, familiar type of yarn, the picture's main selling angle would seem to be in the Chinese background of the title."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p31 D 1 '36

MEN OF THE PLAINS. Grand national 62min

Cast: Rex Bell. Joan Barclay. George Ball

Director: Robert Hill

A western melodrama.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Strictly for the cowboy opus fans—and then only the avid ones. . . [It is] a particularly uninspired affair. Family."

— Christian Science Monitor p15 O 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fans of the western star and action films glorifying bullets, fisticuffs and flying hoofs will find this entertaining. Though photography

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MEN OF THE PLAINS—Continued

is a bit under par and the story rolls along under rather standardized formula, nevertheless Rex Bell's pleasing personality gives sequences repeated lifts."

+ — Film Daily p10 S 29 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 O 1 '36

"Estimate: twin bill Western."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p34 O 1 '36

"This is a recipe coyote drama. It has the familiar heavies, whether afoot or in the saddle. . . The romance is transparent. For the multiples. . . The camera flatters nobody, not even the scenery, and the acting fits the plot."

— Variety p17 S 30 '36

LES MISÉRABLES. Pathé-Natan 165min O 27 '36

Cast: Harry Baur, Charles Vanel, Henry Krauss, Gaby Triquet, Josseline Gael, Max Dearly

Director: Raymond Bernard

Music: Arthur Honegger

Based on the novel of the same title by Victor Hugo. French dialogue film produced in France several years ago and recently released in this country. Originally made in three parts which run for a total of six hours and twenty minutes. It was cut for the American release. It was held until the American version was made and released. Contains English sub-titles. "The film traces Valjean's attempts to make amends for his crimes and the feud that exists between him and the bloodhound, Javert, with whom the law is a religion and who must hound his man no matter how desperately a criminal tries to reform." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] turned out to be disappointing. 'Les Misérables' has of course some great acting by Harry Baur, who plays three roles; but as a film it is intolerably slow. The American thing called 'pace' is said not to be highly regarded in the European studios, and perhaps it is not the highest virtue a film can have; yet it seems to me a necessary one, and at any rate I can derive only moderate pleasure from a picture that dies dozens of deaths before its close. A few fine moments—and Harry Baur provides more than a few as Jean Valjean—are not in themselves enough." Mark Van Doren

— + Nation p58 N 7 '36

"[It] is an extended but beautifully wrought and absorbing motion picture. . . Brilliantly directed by Raymond Bernard, and performed with vigor and distinction, it is a memorable cinematic production. The current offering has been cut, but even so it runs for close to three hours. So compellingly has the tale of human suffering and redemption been filmed, however, that it is only in the very ending that your interest is likely to flag. The photoplay inevitably challenges comparison with the handsome Darryl Zanuck screening of the novel. . . It has not the dramatic finesse and surface polish of its American counterpart and it has no Charles Laughton. . . It has reached deeper into the Hugo work for its material, creating a rich and profoundly moving document of human experience. In addition, there is a magnificent performance by Harry Baur as the hounded Jean Valjean, which gives substance and unity to a necessarily episodic treatment." Howard Barnes

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p21 O 28 '36

"With Charles Laughton and Fredric March as Javert and Jean Valjean, 20th Century's 'Les Misérables' was a fine picture and deservedly a success. . . This [French version] also is a fine film, less powerful than the Hollywood production but far more French. The pictures differ considerably, not only in technic, in acting, in direction, but in point of view. . . Harry Baur is the current Valjean and a memorable one. . . The picture should be shortened; but, in spite of its length, Harry Baur's characterization and the French version of a powerful French novel makes 'Les Misérables' a picture well worth seeing." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p36 O 28 '36

"Simplicity is a dangerous word to pin upon so diffuse a work as Victor Hugo's 'Les Misérables,' yet it is simplicity—simplicity of production, of mood, of performance and direction—which distinguishes the French film edition of the classic. . . and lends it dignity, strength and a measure of great beauty. . . This is a thoroughgoing edition of Hugo, telescoped perforce, but not a sketchy abridgment nor a high-lighting, however admirable, of one phase of the novel. The picture has a running time of two and three-quarter hours, but you probably will not be conscious of its length. . . It is part of the simplicity of the Gallic producers that they do not require, as Hollywood always requires, that their leading man be handsome. . . Mr. March had your sympathy from the moment you saw him; Mr. Baur's Valjean must overcome repugnance to win yours, and that he does, utterly, is the most objective way of appraising a magnificent performance. . . Beyond question, the French 'Les Misérables' has its faults, but only the hyper-critical could be blinded by them to its equally unquestionable excellence." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p31 O 28 '36

"Although the French cinema version of 'Les Misérables' runs for nearly three hours without a single intermission, this is the report of one who sat enthralled through every minute. . . It is one of the distinguished films of the season. . . Harry Baur comes off with first acting honors, partly, no doubt, because he has the vivid role of Valjean and his various aliases, but mainly for the insights, and brilliance of his portrayal. Charles Vanel's realization of Javert is a superb piece of acting." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p29 O 28 '36

"To try to put over another 'Les Misérables'—a French one, at that, and one which runs two hours and three-quarters—seems to me about as tough a job as any eager little film house might take on its shoulders. . . I am going right on to announce that this is a fine film, that somehow or other it manages to hold up right from start to end, and that I hope the Cinéma de Paris manages to persuade the public to take a look at it. . . I groaned at the mere two-hour length of the American 'Les Misérables.' That was by no means my experience this time. So solid is the treatment, so skillful the camerawork, so generally adroit the adaptation of the novel, that I forgot all about the length, the passing of the years, and the shifting seasons. Much of this was due, of course, to the performance of Harry Baur as Valjean." John Mosher

+ + New Yorker p76 O 31 '36

"Here is a stupendous translation, drawing its truth from the Hugo writing, and projecting it in the purest terms of the camera. We seldom have indictments of such honest cinematic content, so sure, so purposeful. . . This 'Les Misérables' is not to be confused, or spoken of in the same room, with the Hollywood production. There is no romanticism here, no handsome martyrdom, no compromise with names and persons as in the Laughton-March version. There is no room here for glamor. . . Here is a classic story unfolded on the screen to dominate each of its parts and become a masterpiece."

+ + Stage p14 N '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Despite its extreme length, during which every important sequence of the original Victor Hugo novel is graphically pictured, this French dialogue version of the oft-filmed masterpiece is one of the most engrossing dramas of all time. Adults."

+ Box Office p35 N 7 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"[It] is a decidedly powerful picture from the popular, technical and artistic standpoints alike. Despite its unusual length, it is unusually entertaining and traces with fidelity and conviction the woeful persecution of its heroic leading character, Jean Valjean. . . . This is one of the standout films from French studios. American audiences, appreciating top-flight screen fare, will revel in the production, which is fully comprehensible because of the 'flash-in' titles in English."

+ Film Daily p11 O 29 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 O 29 '36

"This picture represents Gallic cinematographic production at its best, with Harry Baur, as the harassed Jean Valjean, contributing a performance that is tops. . . . From knowledge gained from the American version, exhibitors can easily appreciate this production, although they must bear in mind foreign language and production technique is not always compatible with mass attendance. Production, acting, camera work are fine. Estimate: for foreign, art houses."

Phila Exhibitor p37 N 1 '36

"Of the seven filmizations attempted at various times of Hugo's gigantic novel this production is by all odds the most faithful, longest, and meritorious. . . . In acting, direction, and over-all conception it generally deserves its self-coronation as a French film classic. From the U. S. point of view, however, and specifically from a box office angle, the long-winded importation is hemmed in by circumstances. It comes only a little more than a year behind 20th's 'Les Miserables,' the March-Laughton starrer, which was enough 'Les Miserables' for most patrons for a couple of years to come. . . . But it will be a critics' picture in the bigger places, sure-fire for rave notices."

+ Variety p18 N 4 '36

MISSING GIRLS. Chesterfield 66min S 10 '36

Cast: Roger Pryor, Sidney Blackmer, Noel Madison, Muriel Evans

Director: Phil Rosen

"A newspaper reporter is sentenced to a thirty-day term for refusing to disclose the source of information for his serial, 'Missing Girls.' While in prison he gets the 'low down' on the hide-out of notorious gangsters." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"An interesting story of the power of the press. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

"A: very good; Y: possible; C: no."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 17 '36

"George Batcheller, president of Chesterfield Pictures and producer of 'Missing Girls,' seems to know how to go about getting a picture that will rate high in entertainment qualities. He allows the writer who conceives the story to see that it gets on the screen just as he conceived it. . . . The result is that in 'Missing Girls' we have the most expertly told story I can remember having seen. If it were a big picture, turned out by one of the major producers, with a cast of imposing names and shown in the biggest houses, it is possible it might have marked the dawning of an era distinguished for the fidelity with which the conceptions of authors reached the public."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 S 26 '36

"Another melodrama of the missing-girl racket, but a little better, a little more authentically detailed." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p36 N 7 '36

"While 'Missing Girls' . . . adds little or nothing to the sum total of our knowledge about what becomes of girls who leave unhappy homes to seek fortunes in New York, it is a well-presented restatement of the author's thesis that rackets and politics are bedfellows in Gotham. . . . From a newspaper man's viewpoint, there is less to carp about in Roger Pryor's screen reporter characterization than there has been in similar representations by better known players." J. T. M.

+ — N Y Times p25 O 5 '36

"'Missing Girls' is a rather feeble combination of love, expose and murder, done in an artificial and transparent manner under a spicy title." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p17 O 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Just another newspaper-racketeer yarn, again following the usual formula. . . . What with the unoriginal plot and spotty performances by Roger Pryor, Noel Madison, and Sidney Blackmer, strong exploitation will be necessary to make this film pay at the box-office. Family."

— Box Office p19 S 26 '36

"[It is a] rambling gangster melodrama, poorly written and fails to register necessary punch."

— Film Daily p4 O 7 '36

"This crime melodrama written by Martin Mooney starts out promisingly. . . . Then it goes off on another track and winds up with a conventional raid on a crook hide-out. In spite of its wanderings among surplus plot elements, however, it is better than average crime entertainment. It is well above independent par in its making and will be serviceable fodder on the lesser dual levels."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 S 15 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p7 O 8 '36

"Chesterfield-Invincible's first for 1936-37 is a credit to the company. 'Missing Girls' looms as a well-made independent picture with definite saleable angles. . . . Directed by Phil Rosen, well photographed, this deserves attention."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 O 1 '36

"Old school racketeer thriller with a generous handout of kidnapped girls, wise-cracking reporters and a final ambush with plenty of gunfire. Arrives pretty late to mean much. No names for marquee pull."

— Variety p15 O 7 '36

"Chesterfield has a racketeer yarn in 'Missing Girls' that is fast-moving and interest-holding throughout. Film plunges right into story and never drags. . . . However, with no big draw names and a general theme that has nothing startling about it, getting customers to the box-office for this one should be no cinch. Title may help."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 15 '36

MORE THAN A SECRETARY. Columbia 80min D 21 '36

Cast: Jean Arthur, George Brent, Lionel Stander, Ruth Donnelly, Reginald Denny

Director: Alfred E. Green

Based on a short story Safari in Manhattan by Matt Taylor. "George Brent is the serious-minded editor of Body and Brain and he practices all the funny fads he preaches. In consequence the magazine is sinking steadily from its own weight. Jean Arthur is co-partner with Ruth Donnelly in a secretarial school that supplies the irascible editor with unsatisfactory secretaries. So Jean herself slips into the job and the tables are turned. She becomes associate editor and in George's absence adds the popular note that turns the magazine into a success." (Hollywood Reporter)

MORE THAN A SECRETARY—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The many flaws in [it] can be blamed squarely on the half dozen or so authors who have had a stir at the broth. The new photo-play . . . is a comic trifle with far too few funny moments. The squad of writers has elected to embellish [the] old theme . . . but has neglected to enliven it with amusing characterizations or humorous incidental nonsense. There are occasional ribald lines . . . but on the whole it is a production that is definitely on the dull side. Even the assured and attractive Jean Arthur flounders through several of the sequences. . . George Brent, as the editor, is buffeted about by the random situations." Howard Barnes

— N Y Herald Tribune p30 D 11 '36

"'More than a Secretary,' an artificial comedy with a synthetic plot, doesn't stand up too well. . . Cast and direction were up to standard, almost up to the standards of the Music Hall where the picture is now on view. The story just wasn't worth all the effort it took to unfold. . . [It] combines the features of a good many old pictures. . . This is one of those films so difficult to review. There is little to say except that it is just another light little movie, an inconsequential story well told, not unamusing if you happen to chance upon it, certainly worth no effort to see." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p43 D 11 '36

"[It is] a trifling frippery in which Jean Arthur and Dorothea Kent engage in a meatless struggle for the love of a vegetarian publisher, Mr. George Brent. Just why Mr. Brent, as editor of Body and Brain, should be regarded as a trophy worth winning is a question whose solution, at the moment, eludes us. . . Maizie, brightly played by blonde Dorothea Kent, is a redeeming feature. . . If 'More Than a Secretary' had given us more of Maizie and less of the dull business between Mr. Brent and Miss Arthur it would have been a happier farce. But it did not, and as a comedy it rings hollow wherever it is tapped." F. S. Nugent

— + N Y Times p35 D 11 '36

"If you were to take all the 'church mouse' stories . . . add a few quips about love and physical culture fadists, and mix them all flagrantly together, you would arrive at something approximately like 'More Than a Secretary' the rather pedestrian film of undistinguished quality now on view. . . The role of the church mouse secretary is intrusted to lovely Jean Arthur, who plays the part with considerable freshness, spontaneity and zest. . . But the really fine performances in the film are contributed by the dependable Lionel Stander as the editor's physical culture mentor and by Dorothea Kent, who is superb as the blond cutie who causes all the complications." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p27 D 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Columbia adds still another notch to its high comedy score with this smart farcical comedy satirizing health fads in general and the publishing of health magazines in particular. It is unremittably amusing nonsense, with a few sharp barbs of truth-telling added to give it kick. . . It makes a box office asset that can be sold at a profit through the full range of houses. . . The five-ply writing crew has delivered a rattling piece of playfulness that bristles with good lines and fetching turns. . . It is a perfect part for Miss Arthur and she well earns her stardom. Brent is required to be something of a sap but he does it with such engaging ease and mock seriousness as to score smartly."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 D 1 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p17 D 2 '36

"With pithy dialog and a novel presentation of the boss-secretary theme handled in a light and bubbling manner by able performers, 'More Than a Secretary' emerges as better-than-average entertainment. . . While some of the dialog in the screen play is sometimes suggestive, it nevertheless drew heavy laughs from preview audience. On the whole dialog sparkles and is keenly fitted to each character."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 1 '36

MURDER WITH PICTURES. Paramount 75min S 18 '36

Cast: Lew Ayres. Gail Patrick. Paul Kelly. Benny Baker

Director: Charles Barton

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y: hardly; C: no."

Christian Century p1406 O 21 '36

"Interesting for adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The action is complicated and confusing, the direction poor. Adults & 14-18: mediocre; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A mystery yarn which, despite some good comedy dialogue, is a very unsatisfying and confusing picture. Mature. Ratings: very confusing." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Mature & 14-18." DAR

"The suspense builds to a breath-taking climax, the camera work is fine and the production will satisfy those who enjoy following a mystery theme. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"An average program filler for adults and young people who dote on mystery stories." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"A few unusual and interesting quirks in the plot make this otherwise routine murder mystery fairly entertaining. The story . . . is often very disconnected. The picture is well cast but the direction is somewhat weak and the story seems unreal because there is no delineation of character. Family." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"Fast moving and fairly entertaining. Adults & young people."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 23 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"The acting is very good all round. One or two slight discrepancies in the story can easily be overlooked; it is not quite clear on which side the chief murderer is, whether he is a lone wolf or working with Girard. The direction is good, the excitement being all well worked up and sustained. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p174 O '36

"[It is] a very involved murder mystery. Family."

Nat Bd of R M S '36

"This is a fairly interesting murder mystery. Adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 21 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

"A: fair; Y: possible; C: no."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict p5 O 1 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Fair program murder melodrama which would be more successful were it not so confusing. . . Adults."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p19 D 5 '36

"Regardless of the triteness of the piece, and its very sketchy unwinding, it is rather bright entertainment at that. Lew Ayres, as the photographer, is an engaging, if rather hysterical young man." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 N 21 '36

"The title of the Rialto's current 'Murder With Pictures' readily suggests itself as a likely critical analysis of the film, especially when you realize how such an item may damage the cinema reputations of talented players like Gail Patrick, Onslow Stevens and Paul Kelly."

J. T. M.
— N Y Times p21 N 21 '36

"[It is a] run-of-the-mill murder melodrama. [It is a] tortuous and complicated film that is frequently exciting but more often too stereotyped to result in something better than an indifferent melodrama." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p31 N 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A terrific tempo marks this melodrama from start to finish. It is chock full of trick twists and surprises, always the unexpected happening. . . A very fast and exciting climax, with the murderer being uncovered in a most dramatic manner. Play this one up for the thrill fans, promise them red-blooded action and he-man stuff in big gobs, and you won't be deceiving them."

+ Film Daily p9 N 20 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."
+ — Phila Exhibitor p34 S 15 '36

"Mystery element and some first-rate performances fail to cover up all of the writing flaws. Despite obvious scripting weaknesses, 'Murder With Pictures' will prove entertaining for audiences liking sleuth bafflers. Lack of heavy name draw may keep the film in dual frame in numerous localities. . . Production supplies Lew Ayres with a swell chance to shine, and he makes the most of it. . . Where the scripters fell down a bit on plot premises they partially redeemed themselves with some snappy dialoging of modern type."

+ — Variety p15 N 25 '36

MY MAN GODFREY. Universal 95min Ag 30 '36

Cast: William Powell, Carole Lombard, Alice Brady, Eugene Pallette, Gail Patrick

Director: Gregory La Cava

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The film gambols along at a farcical gait, but, behind the amusing situations, is the wraith of a sobering idea. . . A wholesome and intelligent comedy, pitched to the proper key of exuberance." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p504 Ag 29 '36

"William Powell is superb as a butler and is careful to underplay Godfrey, using eyebrows instead of words. Gregory La Cava's direction is more than equal to the job and, as a result, this long comedy is not a minute too long. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p152 S 30 '36

"A and Y: side-splitting farce; C: mature."
Parents' M p43 O '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[This is] an hilarious movie. . . It is the clever dialogue, the farcical situations and real comedy that promise an avalanche of laughs and there are moments of deft and very fine acting also." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p46 O '36

"Hollywood gets the sillies under the adept guidance of Gregory La Cava working with characteristic material from Morrie Ryskind and Eric Hatch, and the result is an entertaining satirical farce. . . Occasional Deeds-like philosophy. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 S 19 '36

"1936 is already a good film year, if nothing else. In the past nine months, among half a dozen remarkable films, three outstanding pictures have reached the highest talkie standard: 'Fury,' 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town,' and 'My Man Godfrey.' All three films blend entertainment value with a certain sociological significance. . . It provides further evidence of Hollywood's entirely changed attitude toward the glaring discrepancy between monied civilization, as we have it, and the rational, ideal humanity which we lack; for what is so new about several recent films is the indication of something vaguely definable as sincerity. . . Not that 'My Man Godfrey' is primarily, by any means, a sociological film or human document. It is an astringent, flip comedy. . . It is a joyous film, because it has all the speed and sparkle that crisp direction and swift, unpretentious writing can give it. . . The whole cast contributes appreciably to its success—and it's a very great success, in a field which, we are beginning to suspect, may have been too much maligned. . . All concerned with the making of this film deserve congratulation."

+ New Statesman & Nation p428 S 26 '36

"All things considered 'My Man Godfrey' exemplifies the usual Hollywood phenomenon—fine talent lavished on shoddy. Performers and director turn in an outstanding comedy job. . . A dilute imitation of 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town' (thematically, that is) without the latter's sincerity. Film estimate: you're doing all right."

+ — New Theatre p22 N '36

"It has been shaped to a lunatic and hilarious screen farce. . . It is only when the scattered ends of a plot are gathered up in the concluding sequences, with a preposterous attempt to derive social significance from the nonsensical narrative, that the photoplay falters." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p18 S 18 '36

"'My Man Godfrey' is one of those unexpected treats, a film long heralded as mad, scatterbrained and hilarious, that actually turns out to be mad, scatterbrained and, best of all hilarious. . . The picture falls to pieces, as such daffy yarns usually do, in the last reel. There it discovers social significance, economics and a happy ending." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p35 S 18 '36

"[It is] the daffiest comedy of the year. . . There may be a sober moment or two in the picture; there may be a few lines of the script that do not pack a laugh. Somehow we cannot remember them. It's nonsense, of course, but it's something to relish on a damp September morn. . . 'My Man Godfrey' is an exuberantly funny picture." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p18 S 18 '36

"[It] manages to mix satire and some semi-serio social comment in a moderately amusing and entertaining manner. . . If you are depending upon it to call attention vigorously and truthfully to the unfortunate plight of the army of unemployed I must warn you that it is tissue paper propaganda. But if you merely want to be amused by some witty observations on insignificant problems that face the inhabitants of upper Park Ave., you will find it witty, urbane and rather amusing." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p26 S 18 '36

MY MAN GODFREY—Continued

"'My Man Godfrey' wants to be entertaining. It wants awfully hard to be funny, in fact, and once or twice it almost succeeds. . . . Carole Lombard and William Powell sustain the responsibilities of the major rôles, and they do well enough with the nonsense. But, for my taste anyhow, the nonsense is somewhat excessive. The whole thing rather falls down between the sofa of high comedy and the hammock of whimsy." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p83 S 26 '36

"'The Forgotten Man motif has never been pulled with such splendid abandon, the characters striking hilarious poses and making irrelevancy the disorder of the day. Conscience grips the producer about midway, we are sorry to report, and his contemplation of a national problem gets the upper hand and forces him to insert a dull passage about derelicts and jobs and the fine spirit of dump inhabitants. If that and a few instances of overplaying had not bogged down a delicate farcical situation, Mr. Hatch's drama might have joined that great triumvirate of fanciful funning, 'It Happened One Night,' 'The Thin Man,' and 'Mr. Deeds.' . . . The first forty minutes of it can't be beat."

+ — Spec p543 O 2 '36

"The Forgotten Man motif has never been pulled with such splendid abandon, the characters striking hilarious poses and making irrelevancy the disorder of the day. Conscience grips the producer about midway, we are sorry to report, and his contemplation of a national problem gets the upper hand and forces him to insert a dull passage about derelicts and jobs and the fine spirit of dump inhabitants. If that and a few instances of overplaying had not bogged down a delicate farcical situation, Mr. Hatch's drama might have joined that great triumvirate of fanciful funning, 'It Happened One Night,' 'The Thin Man,' and 'Mr. Deeds.' . . . The first forty minutes of it can't be beat."

Stage p26 O '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"William Powell and Carole Lombard are pleasantly teamed in this splendidly produced comedy. It will make a nifty showing at the box office. Story is balmy, but not too much so, and lends itself to sophisticated screen treatment. . . . In the production and selection of cast and trimmings Producer Charles R. Rogers' contribution is a good one all around."

+ Variety p16 S 23 '36

MYSTERIES OF NOTRE DAME. DuWorld
58min O 1 '36

Director: Anonymous

Music: Choir & organ of Notre Dame

French silent film without English sub-titles produced in Paris. "'Mysteries of Notre Dame' is a close examination of the sculptural and architectural treasures of the cathedral, in full and in detail, [accompanied by a] musical score played on the great Notre Dame organ." (N Y Times)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] will be for a specialized audience—the sculptor, the artist, the illustrator, the designer and, finally the genuine patron of the arts, by whom it should prove an enormously satisfying object of beauty as well as an informative reproduction of one of the world's greatest treasures. However, not to mislead the layman who wants action dialogue, and possibly a star or two in his film fare, 'Mysteries of Notre Dame' may prove tediously long, monotonous and boring. It will not be dull to the cultivated and discriminating mind, for the beautiful projection of the sculptural groups, the gorgeous art treasures, the lofty architecture and the nobility of the edifice are inspiring despite the handicaps of a picture without a plot or a cast." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p21 O 28 '36

"The Notre Dame film is [not] interesting, in spite of its subject. The direction is unimaginative, as methodical as an algebra book. One by one, it points out the treasures of the vast cathedral, its fascinating architecture, its crowded sculptures, its unique carvings. The background music, supplied by choir and organ, is very beautiful. . . . 'Mysteries of Notre Dame' might, if mercilessly edited, make a good short subject. As it now stands, the film will probably attract only those with some special interest in the cathedral itself." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p36 O 28 '36

"'Mysteries of Notre Dame' is a remarkable cinema document, with the unfortunate fault that it fails, like the fabled fly on the cathedral wall, to appreciate the cumulative grandeur of the magnificent structure because of its preoccupation with the detail. It is screen entertainment for the few, but for those few it should be a treasure trove. . . . Cathedrals have fallen in war, and should Notre Dame de Paris ever be laid waste, however unthinkable that may be, this film, conceived and executed by men who choose to remain anonymous, will remain as a record of the sort of effort and genius men expend to provide proper earthly abodes for their gods." J. T. M.

N Y Times p31 O 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is an] impressive cinema record of architectural glories of this renowned and historic cathedral."

+ Film Daily O 30 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 N 2 '36

"Exterior views command most interest as various angles are played up in unusual style. . . . This takes too much time and wears: 65 minutes of this architectural excursion is overboard for U. S. audiences. Scenes from the roof are good, frequently resembling etchings. . . . Organ music is badly recorded, becoming jarring to the ears after a while. Limited appeal for discriminating patrons at [the] small house. . . . It should be cut and merchandized as a short."

— + Variety p19 N 4 '36

N*NIGHT WAITRESS. RKO 57min D 18 '36

Cast: Margot Grahame, Gordon Jones, Vinton Haworth, Marc Lawrence

Director: Lew Landers

The story revolves around a night waitress in a seaport cafe who is on parole trying to go straight. She finds herself innocently involved with crooks. After complications she falls in love with a young skipper.

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Night Waitress,' although built on a short budget and lacking in real story and cast draw, will offer satisfactory attraction in the neighborhoods on the dualers. It isn't too highly exciting, but a certain amount of suspense and a light treatment afford primary entertainment elements."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 N 3 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p9 N 4 '36

"Waterfront melodrama, short on what the marquee needs, this will fit best into double feature, neighborhood requirements. . . . It never reaches any other division."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p52 N 15 '36

"'Night Waitress' is an unpretentious film targeted as a program filler for the neighborhoods. It is devoid of name attractions, and exploitation angles are nil. It will have to coast along on its own merit as entertainment in its classification. . . . In the title role Margot Grahame works with machine-like precision.

It is obvious that she is worthy of much better fare. As the waitress, her diction and delivery are too uptown to be convincing. . . Weak spot is Gordon Jones, who tries too hard to be charming. He is sadly miscast."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 3 '36

NIGHTINGALE. Amkino 93min N 2 '36

Cast: V. Ivasheva. Z. Kashkarova. I. Lavrov

Director: Nikolai Ekk

Russian dialogue film produced in Russia. No sub-titles but occasional synopses of the action. This is the first all-color film produced in the Soviet Union and commemorates the tenth anniversary of Soviet films in America. "The scene is a large china factory, supposed, presumably, to represent Russia of the imperial days. . . In order to obtain money with which to build a new factory the owner deliberately has his henchmen set fire to the old wooden shack, thereby causing the death of many of his employees. It is not until the uncle of one of the workers learns the truth and tells the women employed in the factory about it that these toilers arise and vent their wrath on the foreman and the troops who are sent to subdue them." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"From a technical standpoint [it] is a considerable success, but better subject matter might have been selected for the experiment. Even when the pigmentation is beautifully harmonized and modulated, it seems curiously out of place in a savage study of provincial working-class revolt. Except for one strikingly effective sequence of a burning factory . . . [it] would have had far more compulsion. I believe, in the stark blacks and whites that the Russians know so well how to photograph. . . It has interludes of terrific dramatic impact, but, on the whole, it is overlong and badly paced. . . With a more strict selection of incident, 'Nightingale' might have proved a notable screen drama. It proves that the Soviet cinema should have no real trouble with the technique of color photography, even though it does not become this theme." Howard Barnes

— + N Y Herald Tribune p28 N 3 '36

"At first we were inclined to be bitter about it, but it really does not deserve one's indignation. The blunt and unpleasant fact is that 'Nightingale' is pretty bad. . . Unless you look at it through red-tinted glasses and have a Russian interpreter by your side, it is likely to bore you pink. The picture is a rather amazing anachronism in one respect, combining that newest attribute of the cinema—color—with an editing technique characteristic of the silent films of the pre-war era. . . It still is a dullish item and merits consideration only as a cinema curiosity." F. S. Nugent

— — N Y Times p41 N 4 '36

"I'd scarcely recommend it, either for its color photography, its propaganda or as entertainment. Although it was directed by Nikolai Ekk, who made the memorable 'Road to Life,' this 'Nightingale' is among the least interesting of the Soviet films—cumbersome, artless and gauche and almost entirely lacking in all the qualities that go to make superior films." William Boehnel

— — N Y World-Telegram p37 N 4 '36

"Movies, just movies. [It is] not the film to prove that color has come to stay." John Mosher

New Yorker p117 N 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is a] mildly interesting story of revolt. . . The color employed shows only nominal advance as used by Russian technicians. Film technically and from story standpoint has little appeal for American audiences."

— + Film Daily p13 N 6 '36

"The film is of value here mainly as an experiment in color. The story is dull and hard to follow, due to sluggish direction and the necessity of using narrative inserts as in silent films, instead of the usual superimposed titles."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 N 9 '36

— Motion Pict Daily p8 N 5 '36

"The Soviet's first all-color film is a mediocre job. . . [It] is a tedious entertainment, sometimes good, more often bad, produced in poor, embryonic color. . . The camera stuff is sparingly good. Everybody is good in the closeup shots on serious expressions, for in facial work perhaps Russian actors excel all others."

— + Variety p15 N 11 '36

NINE DAYS A QUEEN. Gaumont British 78min S 1 '36

Cast: Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nova Pilbeam, John Mills, Sybil Thorndike, Desmond Tester

Director: Robert Stevenson

See issues of June 29 and September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film. The film is titled Lady Jane Grey in the June 29 issue.

A Photoplay Study Guide to Nine Days a Queen has been prepared by Daniel C. Knowlton. The Guide is obtainable from Educational and Recreation Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents a copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This is a splendid addition to the pictorial history of Tudor days but one glaring omission must be noted. The religious aspect of the period has been totally ignored and it must be obvious to the informed that no attempt at historicity can be wholly successful which refuses to consider that profoundly important element. That British producers are most unwilling to mention religion in any picture is evident and inexplicable. In such cases as this, their selective treatment of history smacks of dishonesty and places them in a bad light." T. J. Fitzmorris

America p480 Ag 22 '36

"A and Y: excellent; C: too strong."

Christian Century p1270 S 23 '36

"'Nine Days a Queen' is one of the pleasantest ways we can think of learning a history lesson. . . Nova Pilbeam as Jane does a remarkable job for a girl of her age. . . The play borrows little or nothing from fiction; it is well cast, and beautifully played." Ernestine Taggard

+ Scholastic p17 N 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Family."

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 10 '36

"If the accuracy of the film is not a fault—lending perhaps a little coldness to what in more reckless hands could easily have grown overheated—then it has no fault. It is serious and convincing, and intelligently respectful of its material; one of the best historical films, indeed, among the many now to be seen; and without question superior to 'Mary of Scotland.'" Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p502 O 24 '36

"Historical costume affair of a better grade than one is accustomed to from the English studios. Slow and stodgy from the American viewpoint, the film possesses the merits of an earnest if not animated production and comparative historical accuracy. Film estimate: you're doing all right."

+ — New Theatre p34 N '36

"Historical events have rarely been recapitulated in such dramatic, powerful and moving terms as they are in 'Nine Days a Queen.' . . It is an absorbing and hauntingly beautiful companion piece to 'The Private Life of Henry

NINE DAYS A QUEEN—Continued

VIII.' It excels that earlier offering of the British studios in most respects. . . Miss Pilbeam gives an inspired performance as Lady Jane. . . The Edward of young Desmond Tester is almost as compelling a portrait. . . Whatever 'Nine Days a Queen' owes to its distinguished acting, it is still chiefly the triumph of Mr. Stevenson. . . The players themselves he has guided in a tremendously exciting human pattern that makes his screen work one of the greatest genuflections that the cinema has made to the past." Howard Barnes

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p10 O 3 '36

"When the English studios turn to dramas of their country's turbulent past, they are pretty apt to create a film unequalled anywhere. Such a one [is] 'Nine Days a Queen.' . . This new picture belongs in the top ranks of the year's cinemas. . . [It] has an emotional force no other picture on Broadway can touch. . . This is a film to delight any one who enjoyed 'The Private Life of Henry VIII.' Perhaps, in spite of its underlying tragedy, it is just a film to delight any one." Eileen Creelman

+ + N Y Sun p34 O 3 '36

"The impression prevails this morning that Britain may, after all, be its best historian. In 'Nine Days a Queen,' the English film-makers have risen again to the standard of excellence established by 'The Private Life of Henry VIII.' . . The new film, being painstakingly accurate, bitterly dramatic and movingly performed, must be set down as the finest historical picture we have seen this season. . . Nova Pilbeam plays Lady Jane with a winning sincerity. . . Desmond Tester, as the young Edward VI, is the most accomplished child actor the screen has known. . . Individually and as a whole it is a faultless cast, and the picture itself is a crushing reply to those who insist that history must be distorted and mutilated to be transferred effectively to the screen." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p21 O 3 '36

"Without benefit of Charles Laughton, but with excellent aid from Nova Pilbeam, Cedric Hardwicke, Desmond Tester and Sybil Thordike, Gaumont-British has turned out another historical film that is one of the season's most legitimate and distracting entertainments, a literate, compelling and exciting motion picture. . . In a caparisoned atmosphere of romance, love, bigotry and treachery, the film gave to this reviewer as good a time as he has had in the cinema this year—swift, engrossing and exciting." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p8a O 3 '36

"It belongs, of course, to the category of educational pictures, and the general treatment is somewhat of the character of a Charlotte M. Yonge novel. . . It is not entirely fair to this picture to place it too definitely in this class. . . It's an English production, and the English studios manage to dress up their historical pageants with a care and a suggestion of authority that add considerably to the whole effect. The London of the Tudors, life in the Tower, and the like seem nicely done in this particular instance." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p82 S 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An historical costume piece, this British film is sombre, slow and inclined to be dull. There are no names to help even slightly at the box office on this side of the Atlantic, and the dialog is clipped and muffled in that British manner so irritating to American audiences. Some of it is so slurred by the actors as not to be at all decipherable in the United States. . . Gaumont committed an error in assigning Nova Pilbeam to the Lady Jane role. Miss Pilbeam only last year was playing child parts and here she is cast as a young married queen, although admittedly still in her 'teens and forced to the marriage. . . Expecting her to handle this emotional, mature assignment is unfair to her. . . Photography is only fair, but production fine and, in spots, impressive. Where audiences are highbrow or historically inclined (schools, etc.) picture may do a bit better than elsewhere, but on the whole it won't find the going easy in the United States."

— + Variety p15 O 7 '36

NORTH OF NOME. Columbia 63min N 14 '36

Cast: Jack Holt, Evelyn Venable, John Miljan, Dorothy Appleby

Director: William Nigh

"Jack Holt has the role of an Alaskan seal poacher who, by the vagaries of wind and weather, finds himself the custodian of four shipwreck victims. . . Holt has to keep them prisoner until the Bering sea freezes and he can move out his furs; they resort to every sort of ruse and violence to make their escape." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 26 '36

"A, Y & C: good."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Some suspense and much action are combined with the interesting background of Nome in an unevenly paced and slow-moving story. . . The production is fairly good entertainment in spite of certain ineptitudes. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p10 D 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Plenty of punch-packed action and thrilling melodrama in this film, laid against a picturesque background of the Alaskan sealing waters, and played with conviction by a stellar cast. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 31 '36

"This is a program number that will satisfy action fans. Although the star, Jack Holt, gives a convincing performance, it is pert little Dorothy Appleby, who steals the show. With proper material and handling, she should go very far."

+ Film Daily p7 O 28 '36

"Rugged adventure, just as hectic as if lifted bodily from the feeble pages of a pulp magazine, makes this ideal fare for the fans who like their slices of life from the action magazines. . . William Nigh's direction, while adequate, is generally stereotyped, which may also be said of the original story by Houston Branch and the screenplay by Albert DeMond, but in material of this sort deviations from formula would probably be resented."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 O 24 '36

"Windup is fast, furious with romance slight but necessary. Action houses will find enough in this."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p32 N 1 '36

"Interesting and entertaining story off the beaten path is here projected against the old Alaskan fur seal banks and smoky seas of poaching adventure, well adapted to talents of Jack Holt and certain to find a welcome spot on programs where the more carefully made melodramas are in demand. Picture is one of the best Larry Darmour has turned out in cast, production and dramatic substance."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 24 '36

O

OLD HUTCH. MGM 79min S 25 '36

Cast: Wallace Beery, Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker, Elizabeth Patterson

Director: J. Walter Ruben

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"You've seen 'Old Hutch' before, under several different names. As a matter of fact, all Mr. Beery had to do to play this role was to let his beard grow. . . . The picture is not even slightly unusual but it will provide good family entertainment." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p624 O 3 '36

"A: rather good; Y & C: very good."
Christian Century p1479 N 4 '36

"Supported by an excellent cast, this picture is good entertainment for the family."
Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults & 14-18: excellent; 8-14: fair." Calif
Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent direction, the restrained acting of Wallace Beery, and interesting detail of settings add materially to the slight story. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre—family." DAR

"This is a diverting comedy. Family." Nat
Soc of New England Women

"[It is a] thoroughly entertaining and wholesome picture for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"A homely, wholesome characterization. [There is] little story value, small significance, but with the beloved Wallace Beery as the tousled town loafer, there is a warmth of appeal and chuckles enough to please any audience." Mrs T. G. Winter
Fox W Coast Bul S 19 '36

"The sympathetic insight of the director has enabled him to make the most of every situation, and the fine ability of a well chosen cast, gives to this picture exceptional entertainment value. Family."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 8 '36

"Family."
Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"For the most part, the film is a pleasantly amusing comedy. The situations arising out of the finding of the money are extremely plausible and well-contrived and interest is carried right on to the conventionally happy ending. Suitability: adults & adolescents."
+ Mo Film Bul p175 O '36

"Very good. Family."
+ + Motion Pict Guide D '36

"The supporting cast is excellent, and the director has knitted a flimsy plot into an interesting and sometimes, touching play. Adolescents, 12-16 & children, 8-12: yes."
+ Motion Pict R p8 O '36

"A lively and interesting picture of the homey kind. Family—juvenile."
+ Nat Bd of R M S '36

"A sentimental story which suits admirably the talents of Wallace Beery, and because of excellent direction, a fine cast, and good suspense develops into interesting entertainment. Family."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 9 '36

"A chuckling comedy that keeps us guessing. General patronage."
+ Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

"A, Y and C: pleasing homespun yarn."
Parents' M p44 N '36

"Family."
Sel Motion Pict p5 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A typical Wallace Beery role in a well-written human interest comedy with the usual allotment of laughs, thrills and romance. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 O 24 '36

"[It is] insignificantly homey melodrama of extremely thin plot and a single emphasis on the central character of Wallace Beery." J. P. Cunningham

— + Commonweal p560 O 9 '36

"Shiftless, lazy, lovable ne'er-do-wells have been favorite characters on the stage from Rip Van Winkle to Lightnin' and onward. . . . Maybe the fact that Wallace Beery does not interest us is due to our general dislike for Rips, Lightnin's, and Hutches. Unsanitary philosophers are not our dish. Beery is heavy and unwieldy. But, as we have intimated, we are a prejudiced observer." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p31 O 24 '36

"Genial, bucolic 'Old Hutch,' which like a Christmas tree or the distributor of income tax blanks, has something for everybody, is again on the screen, this time with Wallace Beery. Sixteen years ago it was the late Will Rogers who played it. . . . Wallace Beery throws himself wholly into the part of the indolent up-State Izaak Walton, and we can't imagine any one better suited to the rôle of the long-suffering wife . . . than Elizabeth Patterson." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p27 D 7 '36

"[It is a] cheerful and amusing little comedy-drama. . . . Although its narrative sags from time to time, 'Old Hutch' is a first rate anecdote that becomes satisfactory entertainment because of the ease and charm and facility with which it is related by Mr. Beery and a company of persuasive actors, among whom are Elizabeth Patterson—who is excellent as Hutch's long-suffering wife." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p27 D 7 '36

"Cinemaddicts who have felt that Wallace Beery's specialty of pawing at his chest, wrinkling his forehead, scuffing his toes and wiping his rubbery face with the palm of his hand, received too little footage in his previous pictures should be delighted by 'Old Hutch.' It contains practically nothing else."
Time p30 O 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As the first feature of a double-bill, this picture is obviously out of its class, for it is a Class A production in every way. . . . The picture is splendid entertainment for the whole family, with Beery's performance as Hutch, the outstanding feature of the production."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p14 N 14 '36

"Good entertainment for the Beery fans in pleasing mixture of human interest, humor and incidental romance."

+ Film Daily p8 S 22 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 S 16 '36

"Depending on Beery's draw, this is an interesting character study, not too strong at the box office. . . . With an adequate cast for support, Beery turns in a nice performance but the picture reaches no particular heights."
+ Phila Exhibitor p34 S 15 '36

"It looks as though somebody was dozing when they put this feature through the hopper because obviously the film hasn't the backbone usually associated with Wallace Beery starring vehicles. 'Old Hutch' makes a nice, light comedy which doubtlessly will garner fair box office, but the secondary interest to this main character is not decisive enough nor carries the sympathy or contrast to make the production measure up to Beery's recent efforts. This accounts for the film having been kept out of New York for so long after having been out on release in the hinterland. . . . The picture will not disappoint Beery fans if only for the reason that it is fluffy and laughable."

+ — Variety p13 D 9 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ONCE IN A BLUE MOON. Paramount 65min

Cast: Jimmy Savo. Nikita Balieff. Cecelia Loftus. Whitney Bourne. Edwina Armstrong

Directors: Ben Hecht. Charles MacArthur

Produced three years ago and never nationally released. It has been shown in several third run houses until the present engagement at the World Theatre, New York. It tells the pathetic story of a wistful clown and an entrancing Russian princess in the days following the revolution.

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is easy to understand why [it] has been routed around obscure playhouses for the last two years. Reflecting little credit on its cut-up author-directors or its company, it is a ponderous burlesque, almost deserving the billing it received at a small Boston playhouse—'the world's worst picture.' If you are curious to see how completely a lot of talent can be wasted it will repay you to drop in at the World Theater. The film is a virtual compendium of cinematic faults. . . . The staging is so disordered that it is actually difficult to follow the action at times. The whole production almost suggests a conspiracy to destroy what few virtues there were in the work, for Lee Garmes, who has shown some skill with a camera in the past, has done a dismal piece of photography." Howard Barnes

— N Y Herald Tribune p23 D 2 '36

"[Since it] brings briefly to the screen that exquisite and adorable clown Jimmy Savo, the occasion itself is bound to be a happy and propitious one. For all the acknowledged shortcomings and strangely prophetic title of 'Once in a Blue Moon,' those who love Savo will welcome it, seeing in the admitted failure of his authors, of his surroundings, of practically everything connected with the film but himself, merely a regrettably crude frame for certain indestructible elements of personal integrity, and for a comic style which, like Chaplin's alone, has in it nothing imitative, vulgar, cheap, smart-aleck, self-glorifying or sickly commercial. . . . In an age when the mechanics of production are taken for granted the Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur, in this one film, contrived to suffer an unprecedented breakdown of nearly all their resources, especially of those in the sound-recording department. But still, through the garbled and tarnished brilliance of the talk, the muddled disconnectedness of incident, miraculously shines the lovely, fragile and infinitely touching characterization of Gabbo the Great." B. R. C.

N Y Times p35 D 2 '36

"Famed for their wit and prankishness, as well as their ability to construct workable and theatrically effective scripts, the Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur have in 'Once in a Blue Moon' pieced together an incredibly disjointed narrative that reflects little of their skilled artisanship. How much of this is due to cutting it is difficult to say, but the fact remains that the film is pretty much of a botch. Nor has it any point of view—or anything resembling a point of view. . . . Moreover, the direction is laborious, the acting is of a kind that is best forgotten and the sound recording is so inferior that at times it is impossible to hear what the characters are saying. Now and then Mr. Savo manages to project across the screen some of the pathetic charm that has endeared him to lovers of slapstick, but for the most part his efforts are as forced as they are unfunny." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p33 D 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] was shelved for good and sufficient reasons. With the announced arrival of Jimmy Savo in a stage play, the proprietor of the World Theater off Broadway saw a chance to capitalize on the discarded opus, so it is being run on a double bill. We have never seen so many people get up and walk out during the running of a film. In plain words, it's terrible.

Jimmy Savo is the only real actor in the cast. He does heroically, carrying on against terrific odds."

— Film Daily p6 D 3 '36

"In legitimate [theatre] when a turkey is produced the producer calls up Cain's and says please come and cart it away. That's the end of that. In pictures a turkey is sometimes expensive. So, as in the case of this picture a couple of years after it's made it shows up on double feature bills in hideaways to try and get back six or seven cents. And the few exhibitors who'll be kidded into playing this one won't be very happy about it afterward. . . . There's no sense kidding about 'Once in a Blue Moon' or mincing language, or being cute about it. It's a bad picture. Jimmy Savo is featured and is very unfunny in what was intended to be a new Chaplin performance. . . . He is either the champ tough luck guy in the world or there is just plain something wrong somewhere in spite of his legion of intelligentsia supporters."

— Variety p13 D 9 '36

ONE HUNDRED DAYS OF NAPOLEON.

Nuovo mondo 100min S 13 '36

Cast: Corrado Racca. Pino Locchi. Emilia Varini. Rosa Stradner. Enzo Biliotti

Director: Giovacchino Forzano

A dialogue film in Italian with English titles made in Italy by a joint collaboration of German and Italian film companies. It was also filmed in German. Also known as Campo di Maggio. It is the story of those one hundred days after Napoleon escaped from Elba and returned to France to make an attempt to regain his throne. Through the wily machinations of Fouché he is finally defeated at Waterloo, forced to abdicate and exiled to St. Helena.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"An impressive picture showing striking battle scenes and having expert characterizations. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Its adherence to historical fact appears to be accurate. . . . The outstanding thing in the picture is the characterization of Napoleon. . . . The story is open to a number of interpretations and should not prove a loss of time to the serious picture patron." Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p23 S 16 '36

"Of all the Italian pictures that have run [at the Cine-Roma,] this current one should prove of most interest to non-Italian audiences. . . . The production is a lavish one, from its palace scenes to the debacle at Waterloo. . . . The picture, by the way, should be excellent for children studying French history—English subtitles make the action clear. The cast, from Corrado Racca's Napoleon to Enzo Biliotti's wily, bowing Fouché, is competent and intelligent. . . . This is the most elaborate of the Italian productions and, so far, the best." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p28 S 14 '36

"Collaboration of German and Italian film companies, backed by the powers-that-be in Berlin and Rome, has resulted in the production of a historical picture which can stand comparison with the best things in that line ever turned out in Hollywood or anywhere else. From almost every standpoint [it] is impressive; so much so that at times even hardened cinema patrons and despisers of militarism and all its works are likely to be carried away with the enthusiasm of Napoleon's followers." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p25 S 14 '36

"The film, which has been produced with considerable vigor and gusto for a foreign offering, is so well managed technically and artistically that it bears favorable comparison with the best of the Hollywood and London historical offerings. It is in its point of view that this department quarrels with it. . . In its acting, in its use of mass movement and in its photography, 'One Hundred Days of Napoleon' ranks among the best of the Italian language films that have been shown in New York. Played in a subdued manner, it has none of the wild histrionics usually associated with these films, [since] its story is told forcefully and effectively and the direction is strong and sure." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p25 S 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Excellent historical picture produced with German-Italian cooperation ranks with leading pictures of its kind."

Film Daily p8 S 15 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 O 27 '36

"Vague as the real impression of Napoleon may be with most, this Italian actor's [Corrado Racca] characterization of that historical figure has not been equaled in Anglo-Saxon films. . . The Italian film world can well be proud of it. English titles aid in understanding the film, and the historical significance of the picture should fetch more than merely Italian-speaking trade."

+ Variety p17 S 16 '36

OUR BOY. See Vaaran pojke

OUR RELATIONS. Roach-MGM 70min O 30 '36

Cast: Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Alan Hale

Director: Harry Lachman

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: perhaps; Y & C: probably quite amusing."

Christian Century p1639 D 2 '36

"Mediocre. Mature-family." DAR

"[It] offers Laurel and Hardy good opportunity for their special type of humor. Uniformly hilarious, with an occasional lapse from good taste." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Laurel and Hardy, like most other specialty comedians, are a matter of individual opinion. If your taste runs in the direction of their brand of zany, this new concoction of slapstick gags will probably have you pretty well in the aisles. Family."

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '36

"The entertainment is complicated . . . and you will be so mixed up by the time the two Hardys (Hardy is the fat one) step off the wharf in the fadeout that you will probably wander about in a daze when you get into the street. In spite of its enormous hilarity, some new gags and our own increasing conviction that this team has a great comic talent, the new picture is not up to two earlier ones these clowns made—'The Bohemian Girl' and 'The Devil's Brother.'" Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p24 N 12 '36

"A knock-about comedy in which an acute case of confused identities is permitted to develop into galloping bedlam, it restates most of the old slapstick arguments and offers a few new ones. Although it is fast and undeniably furious, we reached the saturation point when the picture touched the half-way mark. Custard pies can be funny, but only in limited amounts. . . Still, the hearty gentleman at our right enjoyed it. . . We did not begrudge him his belly laughs; we stifled a few ourselves, for Laurel and Hardy are a funny pair; but they should know when to stop—and that is after the third reel." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p55 N 11 '36

"In case you are in search of some good, lusty slapstick that will tickle your funnybone with its knockabout highjinks, then the Rialto . . . is the place to visit. . . Indeed, here is a recommended photoplay for low comedy enthusiasts and others who would relish some robust, fundamental comedy as a relief from the more sophisticated, satirical type of fun that the movies have been offering lately. . . Not that 'Our Relations' is a masterpiece of its kind. Far from it. But it is better than just standard goods in the field, and I'll warrant that you'll have a good time at it from beginning to end and that on several occasions you'll laugh your head off at the antics of its two principals." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p27 N 11 '36

"This new Laurel and Hardy comedy is a thoroughly dizzy picture. . . The story is little more than a series of gags. . . The material is handled in the old two-reeler technique, laugh piling upon laugh, with no concession to narrative thread, love interest or other new-fangled problems which most modern comedies try to work in. Harry Lachman, a director whose name is not usually associated with farce, masters his idiom as if to the manner born. . . Preview audience tossed their caps in admiration." Molly Lewin

+ Script p11 N 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Stan Laurel has done himself proud on his first fling as a producer. So much so that Metro gives him liberal credit as such with this latest try of the Laurel-Hardy comedy combination. Looks like easily their best all-round laugh-evoker to date, and a certain bet as a double program strengthener, with the time consumed on screen helping in this respect. It may hold its own alone in localities where the fun combination are favorites."

+ Variety p13 N 18 '36

P

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN. Columbia 90min N 25 '36

Cast: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans, Edith Fellows, Louis Armstrong

Director: Norman McLeod

Music: Arthur Johnson

Music director: George Stoll

Based on novel The Peacock Feather by Katharine Leslie Moore. "Bing is a carefree troubadour who tries to save 10-year-old Edith Fellows from being sent to a charity institution, and attempts to raise money by various methods—singing in the street, promoting a road-house, and working with a carnival." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 3 '36

"A nicely balanced production with the right proportion of comedy, music and human interest to hold attention throughout. . . Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p10 D 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide N 28 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN—ContinuedNewspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] has an impossible story . . . yet it is one of the brightest pieces of screen entertainment we have had this year. Such stories, when presented intelligently, make successful screen material because of what they lack as stories. . . [It] will clean up at box offices everywhere. . . Excellent entertainment is provided by 'Pennies From Heaven' because, by cooperating with it, we entertain ourselves. . . The cast was chosen with rare judgment. . . The even excellence of the performances is a tribute to the excellence of McLeod's direction."

+ Hollywood Spec p10 N 21 '36

"The amiable Bing Crosby strolls through one of the season's mildest films. . . Like its star, this is an amiable film, neither forceful nor exciting, but in no way objectionable. . . Children will probably enjoy the picture more than grown-ups. . . Mr. Crosby, slimmer than he has ever been before, goes in for romance and plaintiveness rather than comedy this time. . . He and little Miss Fellows are a good team, acting as though they really enjoyed each other's company. Comedy, however, is Bing Crosby's forte. The picture could have stood a good deal more of it." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p33 D 10 '36

"A wholesome, lightly sentimental and genial comedy, it is all the more ingratiating by contrast to its predecessor—[Mae West's 'Go West, Young Man.']. Although the Bing's voice is not unanimously acclaimed by the nation's music-lovers—we even noted a faint cheer in the balcony when he admitted he was the last of the troubadours—still he does not swing his hips when he walks and he does not read his lines as though they had been selected from an underlined copy of Uncle Billy's Whiz Bang. . . It makes for a light and briskly paced comedy and, naturally, it provides Mr. Crosby with several lyric opportunities. . . Conceding that Mr. Crosby is as good-natured as ever and that Miss Evans is so attractive a social worker that we are tempted to apply for relief and be investigated, the chief honors properly belong to little Miss Fellows. . . In sum, 'Pennies From Heaven' is one of Mr. Crosby's best." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p35 D 10 '36

"There are some pleasant tunes, first-rate humor and some good acting in 'Pennies From Heaven' . . . but not much enterprise or ingenuity. However, in spite of the fact that the scheme of the film is entirely conventional, it is an attraction that is above the ordinary in merit. This, I suspect, is largely so because [it] has the good luck to have Edith Fellows in its cast—a youngster who is really a first-rate little actress." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p33 D 10 '36

"'Pennies From Heaven' is a textbook example of the oldest adage in cinemaking: Nothing ruins a picture more effectively than too many good ideas. Best idea wasted is the character of Larry (Bing Crosby), a jailbird minstrel whose most prized possession is a 13th-Century lute. . . There is one moment of real magic when Larry is singing 'So Do I'. . . Screenwriter Jo Swerling, however, quickly dropped development of the 'Pennies From Heaven' idea. He set his characters to making a haunted house into a night club, then switched to a carnival background, then to an orphan asylum."

+ — Time p28 N 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Producer Emanuel Cohen's 'Pennies From Heaven' will mean dollars for the box office, what with Bing Crosby crooning as catchy a batch of tunes as has ever been written for one of his pictures, in a delightful hodge-podge of music and laughs that spells entertainment for any fan's time and money. Family."

+ Box Office p29 N 21 '36

"Emanuel Cohen can take a bow on this Bing Crosby picture. It is an ideal vehicle for the singing star and he is surrounded by talented players. Little Edith Fellows, as his aide is splendid as a belligerent child. . . Dusky Louis Armstrong, the trumpeter, almost steals the picture with his novelty number, 'Skeleton in the Closet.'"

+ Film Daily p7 N 16 '36

"With Bing Crosby in a warmly appealing role that gives him opportunity for four melodious new songs, and a story background rich with homely sentiment and natural comedy, this Emanuel Cohen picture will have large mass appeal. Many will rank it as Crosby's best and its box office returns will be big."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 12 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 N 13 '36

"Casting Bing as a wandering songster who only seeks to spread happiness, contentment, 'Pennies From Heaven' will largely depend for its return on his personal draw. Family audiences will like it best."

+ Phila Exhibitor p30 D 1 '36

"The sentimental troubadour character which has come to identify Bing Crosby on the screen is well catered to in this whimsical, musical comedy. It is oddly romantic, has good general entertainment merit, variety of ingredients and music of high quality. Nature of the material, with well-calculated appeal to juvenile audiences, heads it for most favorable reception in the family spots. The Crosby fans will like it. It should give good account of itself."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 12 '36

PICCADILLY JIM. MGM 100min Ag 14 '36

Cast: Robert Montgomery. Frank Morgan. Madge Evans. Eric Blore. Billie Burke. Robert Benchley. Cora Witherspoon.

Director: Robert Z. Leonard

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The hilarious nonsense of P. G. Wodehouse comes to the screen undiluted in this expert adaptation of one of his most rollicking tales. We can expect to see more and more of his work filmed after such a stimulating sample and against those happy occasions this reviewer intends to hoard some of his choicer adjectives. . . No one can fail to be amused by this one." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ + America p504 Ag 29 '36

"A film of P. G. Wodehouse's famous novel, but possessing very little of his famous humour, which is travestied out of recognition. . . The film has indications of having been hastily made; the continuity is disjointed and many of the scenes seem overlit. Suitability: family."

+ — Mo Film Bul p153 S 30 '36

"[It is] absurd and mildly boring slapstick. . . The usual comedy scenes inherent in such a situation develop with irritating regularity. Not even the deft skill of Robert Montgomery nor the excellent characterizations of Frank Morgan and Eric Blore can quite overcome the handicap of threadbare story, unoriginal dialogue, and uninspired direction. Adolescents, 12-16: no, too much drinking; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R p6 S '36

"A and Y: laughable comedy with fine acting; C: no interest."

Parents' M p43 O '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Piccadilly Jim' is a film of the same type as 'My Man Godfrey,' but it is not in the same class. To some extent the freshness, improbability, and charm of the original P. G. Wodehouse story are preserved in this film version

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 17 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a very good picture. . . The production has the De Mille vigor and sweep. He has turned back the pages of the West's picture-book and paused now and then to bring one to life. . . The picture is more than just stirring film entertainment; it is a valuable historical document to make future generations of Americans realize what they owe to a past generation of brave men and loyal women. . . Technically, 'The Plainsman' is outstanding. . . The whole production is a great achievement which would justify Paramount in giving itself a few pats on the back."

+ + Hollywood Spec p9 D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Skillfully directed and acted in every detail, 'The Plainsman' surpasses the previous and excellent Paramount opus of the plains, 'The Texas Rangers.'"

+ Box Office p21 D 5 '36

"Cecil B. De Mille has drawn the well-known historical characters as such dynamic figures in the settling of the West that one cannot help but be fascinated by them. . . The piece is a stirring one with battle scenes that are terrific. Everywhere the De Mille touch for the spectacular is to be found. It is a big production of the 'Cimmarron', 'Covered Wagon' type and its appeal should be to the same kind of audience, and its box-office returns should therefore be great. Cooper in one of those he-man roles which made him famous and which are tailor-made to his talents is superb."

+ Film Daily p7 N 24 '36

"Cecil B. De Mille here delivers a super-Western that has had few if any equals in the history of pictures. . . There is not the least doubt that it will take the box offices of the world by storm and roll up a magnificent record. To the magic of the De Mille name is added that of Gary Cooper in a role to which he brings all the best qualities of his recent work and which gives him one splendidly realized opportunity after another. . . All the ingredients of every good Western are present in ample measure and have, of course, been glorified under De Mille's magic touch. Oddly and wisely he had concentrated on the personal drama so that the mass scenes are kept to an unexpected minimum. Even the Custer massacre is told in a few shatteringly effective feet."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 21 '36

"'The Plainsman' reveals Cecil B. De Mille as the master melodramatist. Less stylized, better balanced, obviously not concerned with upper-case art, attacked simply as the narrative of plains men and women conquering the wilderness with blood and iron, this will probably prove De Mille's most prosperous picture. A super Western, it exploits a subject not usually linked with the screen tradition of the producer-director."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 21 '36

PLOT THICKENS. RKO 68min D 11 '36

Cast: James Gleason, Zasu Pitts, Owen Davis, Jr. Louise Latimer

Director: Ben Holmes

This is the third of a series of detective stories, based on the Oscar Piper character created by Stuart Palmer. It is taken from his novel The Case of the Dangling Pearl. "Depicts the complicated events which revolve around the theft of a Cellini metal masterpiece." [Variety (Hollywood)]

Audience Suitability Ratings

"If you have been following the adventures of Oscar Piper . . . you will welcome this. . . [It is] amusing and sometimes exciting." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p240 D 12 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 26 '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict p11 D 1 '36

"[It is] a pretty good mystery with sustained interest and a fair amount of uncertainty as to the outcome. A good bit of comedy scattered throughout. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide N 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'The Plot Thickens' is better than most murder mystery pictures in the degree in which it avoids running true to form. True, it makes Jim Gleason, the police inspector in charge of the case, dangerously dumb, but keeps him just sane enough to make it reasonable that he and Zasu Pitts, also played for laughs, should solve the mystery and bring the murderer to justice. But I would like to see just one such picture that took crime seriously and did not strive to make us laugh in the face of murder. . . If you can enjoy a little murder now and then in your screen fare, I can recommend 'The Plot Thickens' as a picture that will not waste the time you spend in viewing it. It keeps you puzzled, and that is all you may reasonably ask of a picture of the sort."

+ Hollywood Spec p16 N 21 '36

"A Stuart Palmer mystery at the Rialto may be news to lighten the hearts of many this morning. . . The unraveling of the murders (two) is accomplished with customary comic pomp and ceremony, Zasu Pitts, who supplants Miss Oliver in the role of schoolteacher, is not, to this way of thinking, so perfect a lady detective as the original, but she manages to be, as always, a humorous, faintly mournful character, amusing enough. . . What makes it a little more entertaining than many other screen murder-mysteries is the lightness of Mr. Gleason and Miss Pitts, and the unique setting of the story. . . The story is confusing at times, nor does it seem so sprightly as some of the earlier ones in the series." Marguerite Taze-laar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p20 D 9 '36

"It is a reasonably entertaining baffler, barring our faint wince at the sight of Zasu Pitts trying to fill the saturnine shoes of the Hildegardes of Edna May Oliver and Helen Broderick. . . Probably as a concession to Miss Pitts' flutter, the usual acerb exchanges between the Inspector and Hildegarde have been blunted, becoming merely moderate sarcasms which really do not justify Mr. Gleason's exaggerated recoils. What he needs for finching purposes is a Miss Oliver or a Miss Broderick who knows how to pour the hot coals on." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p35 D 9 '36

"The finished result is a series of lethal high-jinks that has a certain amount of nimble-plot complication and some slick sleuthing but which is singularly lacking in physical action, suspense and excitement. . . How both crimes are solved among the art treasures of the museum results in a rather laborious and clumsily managed denouement that is something of a let down and that weakens an otherwise fair-to-middling murder item." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p37 D 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"There's enough variety in this to please every type of movie-goer—which should result in satisfactory returns at the cashier's window. Family."

+ Box Office p29 N 21 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PLOT THICKENS—Continued

"This is easily among the top comedy crime puzzlers of the year. It is the third of a successful series in which James Gleason leads as a hard-boiled and self-assured police inspector who can never quite find the answer without the unwelcome help of the inquisitive schoolmarm, Hildegard Withers. The earlier pictures using this titillating combination have been highly profitable in their field and this one should top them and build up an outstanding box office property."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 9 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 N 10 '36

"Estimate: mild program, best for neighborhoods, twin bills."

— + Phila Exhibitor p31 D 1 '36

"The Plot Thickens" is just another class B comedy melodrama. However, the picture may turn out to be a bolsterer on dual bills due to the work of James Gleason and Zasu Pitts, who are teamed in top spots in this one. Production as it stands is poorly directed and badly edited. Cutting in some instances has been so flagrant that members of preview audience were forced to ask their neighbors just what was going on on the screen."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 9 '36

POLO JOE. Warner 62min D 5 '36

Cast: Joe E. Brown, Carol Hughes, Richard 'Skeets' Gallagher

Director: William McGann

Brown portrays a polo expert who knows nothing about polo but is forced to go through with a crucial polo match in order to win the girl.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fairly good; Y: amusing; C: good."
Christian Century p1639 D 2 '36

"Children will love this comedy, and most everyone will smile, at least, at the ridiculous antics of the horse ten goaler. Family & junior matinee." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Many amusing situations and the star's singing of songs in Chinese make this hilarious entertainment. Family. Adults & 8-18: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Hilarious farce. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Family." DAR

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Plenty of hilarity for all the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Hilarious comedy, heightened by the star's rendition of songs in Chinese. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ Fox W Coast Bul O 10 '36

"Clever direction, good casting, excellent photography, and interesting scenes of polo playing contributes much to this amusing picture. All ages. Junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 28 '36

"The incidents are comically absurd, and Joe E. Brown, in not forcing the comedy, sustains the humor admirably. The picture is good family entertainment. Adolescents, 12-16 & children, 8-12: good."

+ Motion Pict R p8 O '36

"Excellent for the family."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 22 '36

"A, Y & C: good entertainment."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"A well worked out farce, smoothly moving and filled with novel gags and a hundred laughs. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p4 N 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide N 14 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Another instance in which venerable and impossible plot and situations cavort about like young things under deft handling. Created especially for Joe E. Brown fans, the nonsensical yarn . . . may also be found amusing by moviegoers in general. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '36

"Here is a picture, apparently manufactured to win laughs, that achieves its purpose. . . The narrative, obvious from the start, as a whole moves so briskly and entertainingly that while reviewing it one disregards the fact that he has viewed it several times before. . . Apparently the preview spectators found a great deal in the film to delight them, for there were not many quiet moments at the capacity-filled Forum Theatre during the showing, the audience often creating tumultuous laughter."

Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p14 S 26 '36

"The new Joe E. Brown comedy is not overburdened with story, nor for that matter comedy, unless our sense of humor, as we strongly suspect, is becoming blunted. Nevertheless, of humor there is very little in 'Polo Joe,' of slapstick comedy, a smattering. . . The picture is a one-man show, light in substance, and though its closing antics may amuse you, nothing of importance will be lost should you miss seeing the new offering." Marguerite Tazelaar

— + N Y Herald Tribune p28 N 3 '36

"'Polo Joe,' last of the wide-mouthed star's films for Warner Brothers, is unfortunately one of his least funny. Mr. Brown depends too heavily upon his old gags, the Brown yell now used sometimes as a sneeze and sometimes as a shriek of terror, the extravagant smile, the acrobatic clowning. . . Children will probably like 'Polo Joe,' as the slapstick is frequent and furious. The more demanding may find it a faint carbon copy of better Brown comedies." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p35 N 4 '36

"[It is] an unenterprising slapstick called 'Polo Joe,' which we understand is [Brown's] farewell gesture to the Warners. A faintly pathetic gesture, it seems, with the great pantaloons laughing hollowly at the picture's little jokes and wordlessly begging the audience to forgive the sins he is being forced to commit in the name of comedy. For 'Polo Joe' isn't Mr. Brown's mistake but its script writers. Every time he opens his mouth they put their feet in it—and that isn't mere metaphor, either. . . The youngsters probably will find it clear sailing, but adults should heed the storm warnings." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p35 N 5 '36

"Whether or not you happen to like Joe E. Brown, you're bound to have a good time watching his antics in 'Polo Joe,' the frisky little film which combines polo, love and burlesque in an engaging and amusing manner. . . Although it is an intensely artificial affair, you should enjoy 'Polo Joe.'" William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p21 N 5 '36

"Movies, just movies." John Mosher
New Yorker p117 N 14 '36

"Liberal peppered with slapstick, a familiar dish is heated over for the Joe E. Brown customers."

+ — News-Wk p60 N 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Comedians come and go but Joe E. Brown goes on and on. The wholesome heartiness of his pictures probably accounts for the large-mouthed laugh-getter's undiminished popularity, and certainly nothing could be more wholesome or less subtle than this breezy tale. Family."

+ Box Office p27 O 3 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"This will have no trouble pleasing the Joe E. Brown fans. . . Peter Milne and Hugh Cummings, who did the screenplay, concocted some good gags."

+ Film Daily p11 S 24 '36

"[It] is an adequate representation of the staple, reliable stuff that the exhibitors have come to expect from the cavern-mouthed comic. It will neither betray nor enhance the Brown box office draw. The material itself in this case is not so good as in the last picture, but Brown himself is better."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 S 19 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 S 21 '36

"Brown's last for Warners ought to prove as good at the box office as the others. Where he has a personal draw, this will be responsible for the same kind of business as his others."

Phila Exhibitor p39 O 1 '36

"[It] provides Joe E. Brown with meager opportunities for results. 'Polo Joe' is one of the poorer of the comedian's vehicles and Brown's followers no matter how faithful, will be disappointed in him this time. It's the material which, while basically okay, has not been developed in a sure-fire manner by either the writers or the director. Too frequently the action follows lines of slapstick that are neither very original nor very funny."

— Variety p14 N 11 '36

"Joe E. Brown fans will not be disappointed in 'Polo Joe.' Picture is hilarious comedy that had preview audience yelling with laughter and in some instances bordering on the verge of hysteria. While never aiming to carry a show by itself, picture is topper for any double-bill."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 19 '36

PRESCOTT KID. Columbia 55min

Cast: Tim McCoy, Sheila Mannors, Joseph Sauers

Director: David Selman

A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Action melodrama of old west gives Tim McCoy chance to score with fights and hard riding."

+ Film Daily p3 O 17 '36

"A neatly packed action opus, with Tim McCoy given free rein for his two-fisted talents. . . Rates better than average sagebrush offering."

+ Variety p17 O 21 '36

PRESIDENT'S MYSTERY. Republic 80min O 1 '36

Cast: Henry Wilcoxon, Betty Furness, Sidney Blackmer, Evelyn Brent

Director: Phil Rosen

Based on the serial story and novel of the same title by Rupert Hughes and other writers from a story conceived by President Roosevelt. "The premise is that with government financial assistance, shuttered factories can be opened and successfully operated by the workers on a cooperative basis. The writers stick close to their subject while developing a mystery around a man's disappearance, the murder of his wife, his regeneration in a small homespun community, his new romance and his bringing happiness to everyone concerned while bringing it to himself." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A & Y: fair; C: little interest."

Christian Century p1479 N 4 '36

"Mediocre." DAR

"[It] provides fine entertainment in addition to a stirring message. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A & Y: fair; C: little interest."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p12 N 1 '36

"Pretty good entertainment and a slight effort, at least, to deal with a timely problem."

+ — Wkly Guide O 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a stimulating idea told through a melodramatic medium. Adults & young people."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 O 24 '36

"Lacking the primary essence of Liberty's change-of-identity serial suggested by the President, Nat Levine's new production has injected a new verve and punch which amply compensates. . . An odd touch was added by having Henry Wilcoxon read the 'President's Mystery' from which his own story is concocted. Wilcoxon, by the way, is given his first opportunity to prove himself more than a costume mannikin. He turns out to be a splendid actor and deserving of the best roles Hollywood can offer. . . [The film] is warmly recommended for its thorough workmanship."

Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p23 O 10 '36

"Liberty readers will have an unusual desire to see this screen transcription of a feature they read with interest. . . The acting, particularly of Henry Wilcoxon as the big-business attorney who goes altruistic, is excellent throughout. Indeed, even a Republican will like this." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p55 N 14 '36

"The President's Mystery' . . . induces the belief that a new species of American film is on its way, if indeed it has not already arrived. It is not strictly new, since Europe has long been familiar with it, but in this particular form it is new to us; and the interesting thing about the present examples, not to speak of last summer's 'Fury,' is the success with which they have adapted what has hitherto been a foreign idea to purely native materials. . . The purpose of the authors, Lester Cole and Nathaniel West, was to get something said; they chose a transparent rhetoric with which to say it; and they have said it with power. . . They saw the value of the vehicle and mixed their types so cleverly. And they have kept the American scene before our eyes." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p558 N 7 '36

"Naturally the picture is uneven in its telling and confused in substance, since six authors worked on the original idea, and then two more made a screen script of it. Moreover, it appears to have been produced in great haste and without deft technical skill. Even so, the high spots in the performance, during the mob scenes, for example, have a touch of the excitement 'Fury' had, and the object lesson, though crudely presented, is emphatic." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 O 19 '36

"In spite of, or because of, all those minds that concentrated upon the writing of it, the picture is even more unreal than most films. It does, however, tell its tale in a straightforward, unpretentious manner, refraining from too much political discussion. . . The picture is fair melodrama, directed by Phil Rosen with lucidity if not with inspiration. The sound recording, rare in American films, is below standard. So, which is not so unusual, is the acting." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p26 O 20 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PRESIDENT'S MYSTERY—Continued

"It is so unusual to find a motion picture attuned to any serious aspect of the contemporary national scene that 'The President's Mystery' deserves to be treated as something more than just another melodrama. . . . Although there is no disputing its propagandist intent, the film—unlike the Soviet lectures—has not reduced its narrative to a moralizing bludgeon. . . . In its melodramatic way, [it] is a well-constructed essay on one means of achieving a more abundant life, and it is an interesting picture as well." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p22 O 19 '36

"You can't help enjoying 'The President's Mystery' . . . unless you're downright obstinate. A skillfully blended mixture of murder, mystery, romance and social comment, it is the surprise film of the week—one that is warranted to keep you interested from beginning to end with its exciting, engrossing story." William Boehnel
+ N Y World-Telegram p13 O 19 '36

"Mr. Roosevelt has not suffered the fate of many inspired folk and seen his own idea grabbed up by the professional people and his own name lost in the shuffle. He receives full credit. In fact, the picture is called 'The President's Mystery,' though it isn't a mystery and there's no president in it. . . . Love and a murder and some skulduggery are all included in a film that isn't, if one may take the liberty of saying so, very exciting. However, the major premise somewhat suggests the social concern of Soviet films, and pictures of that sober sort may be the pleasure, of course, of the Administration." John Mosher
— + New Yorker p78 O 24 '36

"Republic has constructed an exciting film advocating producers' cooperatives financed by the government. The seemingly incongruous elements are skillfully combined to make the most vigorous propaganda Hollywood has yet produced."
+ News-Wk p29 O 17 '36

"[It is] an honest, exciting melodrama. . . . The film uses an entirely conventional technique—no attempt to make it an 'arty' film. Yet Director Phil Rosen extracts from his material a pictorial reality that is usually found only in the more vivid news-reels—or in foreign pictures. A creditable job, all 'round." Molly Lewin
+ Script p10 O 31 '36

"The President's Mystery Story' was snapped up by Hollywood, which has made from it an adaptation which reeks of New Deal propaganda and good melodrama. . . . [It has] an exciting though hardly realistic end."
+ — Time p34 O 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The most pretentious and laudable production yet to come from Republic. . . . Produced at a timely moment, with a definite appeal for social justice, a story conceived by President Roosevelt, and a strong tieup with Liberty magazine, it is headed for good box office grosses. Family."
+ Box Office p27 O 3 '36

"Republic presents a timely subject in an exciting, interesting manner and, when enthusiastically sold, should attract the masses. The production shows that Nat Levine . . . [has] spared no expense in achieving a production that can play anywhere. . . . Exploitation will be necessary to get the production off to a flying start, but it should be well worth all efforts."
+ Film Daily p14 S 28 '36

"When the President of the United States suggests the story, when a national magazine hires six famous name writers to put it into words, then you have exploitation possibilities that should make 'The President's Mystery' a boxoffice natural, if properly exploited. Leaning a little heavily toward sociological propaganda at times, the picture otherwise has been handsomely produced."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 S 24 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 S 25 '36

"Well directed by Phil Rosen, with strong angles, this is in the upper Republic bracket. Estimate: okey."
+ Phila Exhibitor p37 O 15 '36

"Chief mystery about 'The President's Mystery' is why the producers attempted to improve on the Liberty magazine version. . . . [If it] had been transferred to the screen as a mystery yarn and nothing else, Republic might have had something. As it is, the feature will have a tough job getting into many single spots. By heavy selling along the lines that Franklin D. Roosevelt conceived the original idea, it may grab some good opening days but after that its draw is highly doubtful. Added drawbacks are its length and lack of marquee sparkle."
— + Variety p15 O 21 '36

"Figured for timeliness, both in title and content—which deals as much with politics and economics as with mystery, in plot and theme—"The President's Mystery" has exploitation ammunition gauged to national selling campaign which should more than compensate for lack of marquee names in box office bid. . . . It is in many respects less a mystery than an economic dissertation, and whatever faults it has as entertainment stem from the combination of political elements with the melodrama, and generous inclusion of over much material in effort to insure its impressiveness."
+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 24 '36

PUT ON THE SPOT. Victory 60min S 12 '36

Cast: Eddie Nugent. Maxine Doyle. Fuzzy Knight

Director: Bob Hill

Formerly called Rio Grande Romance. Based on a novel Rio Grande Romance by Peter B. Kyne.

See issue of June 29, 1936 for other reviews of this film under title of Rio Grande Romance.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Some original twists have been given this standard type of G-man yarn which, with the action, romance and comedy relief neatly worked in, results in lively program fare for the double-feature houses. Family."
+ — Box Office p63 O 17 '36

"Though unpretentiously produced, this is a lively little crime picture that should do well in the intermediate spots either as single or second feature. Its screenplay is well devised, and while some of its basic situations have been used frequently, yet there is a definite originality to the story brought about by twists in plot."
+ — Film Daily p3 O 3 '36

"G-man gets his man and a girl once more but it's done in a rather entertaining fashion. . . . While offering nothing in names to blaze a trail toward the box office, audiences should like Eddie Nugent and Maxine Doyle."
+ — Variety p17 S 16 '36

R*RACING LADY. RKO 59min Ja 29 '37

Cast: Ann Dvorak. Smith Ballew. Harry Carey. Berton Churchill. Willie Best

Director: Wallace Fox

Based on two short stories, All Scarlet by Damon Runyon and Odds Are Even by J. Robert Bren and Norman Houston. "Ann Dvorak is the owner of a one-horse self-trained stable. Seeing the publicity she gets as such, and being in the racing game for the sole purpose of promoting his automobile business, Smith Ballew buys her horse in a claiming race, knowing full well that she'll want to stick to her nag and he can hire her and get some of her headlines." (Hollywood Reporter)

Trade Paper Reviews

"Offering an exciting horse race finish and some sparse comedy for its box office appeal, 'Racing Lady,' hampered by a weak story and a cast lacking in draw names, stands as a secondary dualer. . . . The screenplay, based on two originals . . . seems to have been written with little regard for the better features of either one. . . . It moves slowly and suspenselessly to a thrilling climax which does a lot, but not enough to lessen the yarn's inertia. . . . Miss Dvorak's performance is up to standards; given only a chance to be interested in horses, her acting was necessarily restricted. Ballew is an unfortunate choice opposite; although he doesn't figure in more than a few sequences, his delivery is not capable."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 D 1 '36

— + Motion Pict Daily p17 D 2 '36

"'Racing Lady' finishes a poor second in a race with itself. Despite the fact it is based on two originals and three adapters labored over the script, the result is a trite yarn, lacking in suspense and with a love theme purely platonic and indicated from the start of the film. Ann Dvorak, Harry Carey, Berton Churchill and a colored player, Willie Best, make a gallant but vain effort to put the picture over. Smith Ballew has the romantic lead, but he is totally unconvincing and his acting borders on the amateurish. Direction is nothing above average. . . . 'Racing Lady' will find its best results on the lower end of a neighborhood dualer."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 1 '36

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER. RKO 87min D 25 '36

Cast: Bobby Breen, May Robson, Charles Butterworth, Benita Hume, Alan Mowbray, Louise Beavers

Director: Kurt Neumann

Music directors: Hugo Riesenfeld, Abe Meyer

Based on the novel Toinette's Phillip by Mrs C. V. Jamison. "The story . . . is laid in New Orleans in 1875. Bobby, son of quality folks who disappeared in the war, has been raised by Louise Beavers, an ex-slave, who has done her heroic best for him. But the time comes when he must be given up to northern relatives. These include his immensely wealthy and, of course, bad-tempered grandmother, a feminine counterpart of Fauntleroy's Earl of Dorincourt. They also include a married daughter with a child of Bobby's age, who is clutching at the family millions." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 17 '36

"[It is] a sentimental and amusing story. . . . Fine, appealing singing by the youthful star and plenty of pathos and comedy. Family-juvenile."

+ Wkly Guide D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is a grand load of entertainment. It has been shrewdly tailored to fit Bobby Breen's talents and is a comedy drama that wins tears and laughter. Bobby sings a wide range of numbers and scores with each. The numbers, nine in all, range from 'Ave Maria' to 'Rainbow on the River,' a popular piece. Stephen Foster's 'Old Folks at Home,' 'Ring, Ring de Banjo' and 'The Camptown Races' are cleverly interwoven into the picture. . . . Kurt Neumann's direction is his best to date and he has provided numerous touches that gain laughs and tears."

+ Film Daily p7 D 5 '36

"This second Bobby Breen picture outdoes the first on many counts. It is a sentimental comedy-drama of the Fauntleroy school, plentifully interspersed with song numbers and well-packed with laughter and tears. It will have wide appeal, except among the more sophisticated, and will be especially good box office where feminine and family trade is dominant. . . . The production is excellent throughout and reflects especial credit on Edward Gross, producer in charge, for whom this is a first production assignment, and on Kurt Neumann, director, who has gone the limit for heart-throbs and captured them solidly."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 D 2 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 D 3 '36

"Here is the very essence of sentimental drama with music, so cannily aimed at the susceptible hearts of the masses that it is bound to click for a showman's harvest. Second of the Bobby Breen starring pictures, it will enhance the marquee value of the silver-voiced youngster. . . . Breen sings a variety of songs with superb technique and persuasive feeling in his liquid-clear boy's soprano, gay and solemn, popular and classic, alone and with chorus, selected to please the simple popular taste as well as the cultivated. . . . A tearful feminine preview audience amply attested the boy's power to reach the heart."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 2 '36

RAMONA. 20th century-Fox 90min S 25 '36

Cast: Loretta Young, Don Ameche, Kent Taylor, Pauline Frederick

Director: Henry King

Music: Alfred Newman

Based on the novel of the same title by Helen Hunt Jackson. Filmed in technicolor. This is the fourth remake of the story. "[It] is the gradual unfolding of tragedy in the marriage of the girl, reared as an aristocrat, to the Indian, Alessandro, and the terrible ravishment of Indian settlement by colonizing whites in a dark chapter of California's early days." [Variety (Hollywood)]

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Loretta Young's sensitivity and loveliness make the portrait memorable. Obviously destined for popular approval, the picture can be recommended as a wholesome change from the frequent banalities of the sophisticated drama."

T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p624 O 3 '36

"A: fine of kind; Y: very good; C: too strong." Christian Century p1343 O 7 '36

"A picture the whole family will enjoy. Family. Adults & 14-18: excellent; 8-14: mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature-family. Excellent." DAR

"The color is exquisite and will do much to make more widely known the glories of the 'Golden State.' Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 26 '36

"The story has been tampered with and it is disappointing in spite of its colorful beauty. Perhaps it is the accompanying obligato of music, which is too evident, too strident, in such a symbolic, pastoral play. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

RAMONA—Continued

"An absorbing, highly dramatic, well directed picture which will hold the interest of the entire family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"This film is decidedly worth seeing. Family." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"A poetic and artistic achievement. Family."
+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 16 '36

"Family."
Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"The incredible 'happy ending' is not a matter of great moment. What is memorable and arresting about the film is its pictorial beauty. The 'new perfected Technicolor' is a joy to the eye. Suitability: adults & adolescents."
+ Mo Film Bul p175 O '36

"The pastoral beauty of California and the picturesque costumes and action of the period are ideal subject matter for color photography and add immeasurably to the charm of this picturization. . . The ending seems too abrupt, promising too sudden a release for the heroine. Those familiar with the story will have to add in imagination the steps which give her ultimate contentment. . . It is a charming story, always fresh and always worth seeing. Adolescents, 12-16; excellent; children, 8-12: depends on maturity."
+ Motion Pict R p8 O '36

"Some of the outdoor scenes are superb, among the best color sequences that have yet appeared. Family."
+ Nat Bd of R M S '36

"[It] is visually so beautiful that it stands as an artistic achievement in color photography. . . Perfect choice in casting and sensitive direction are important factors in making this moving story into a lovely picture. Family."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 21 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

"A, Y and C: excellent."
Parents' M p44 N '36

"Family."
Sel Motion Pict p3 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Tints are much less shrill in 'Ramona' than in some of its Technicolor predecessors, but the camera's obvious prideful concern with realism is inclined to slow up the story. . . The plight of the dispossessed Indians is not brought out until just before the end of the picture resulting in a solid jam of unrelieved tragedy, in contrast to the sort of travogue effect of the earlier part." M. E. P.
+ — Boston Transcript p7 O 17 '36

"Adults."
Christian Science Monitor p13 O 10 '36

"Here are stirringly depicted the early-California injustices inflicted by the incoming whites on the Indians. . . There are many shortcomings in story and dramatic values, but these are amply balanced by the artistry of scenic grandeur." J. P. Cunningham
Commonweal p20 O 30 '36

"This lovely production, done in warm Technicolor, is marked by the finely restrained direction of Henry King. It will move you in some of its dramatic moments—and move you, oddly enough, because it pulls its punches." (3 stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p30 O 24 '36

"Only one worth-while scene—the expropriation of the Indians from their lands. Mark another failure for Technicolor. Film estimate: you could do worse."
+ + New Theatre p35 N '36

"Because of the tenderness Loretta Young puts into her performance as Ramona, the girl whose mother was an Indian squaw, the film has an emotional quality, that is often touching. Its color, too, lends pictorial decoration, but as entertainment, the long, dull stretches, pompous speeches and lack of climax, leave much to be desired. While Mr. King's direction is too slowly paced, the trouble seems to lie more with the colorless adaptation and the uninspired writing." Marguerite Tazelaar
— + N Y Herald Tribune p21 O 8 '36

"Technicolor's strides have been swift; too swift, it would seem, for Hollywood's story departments. In 'Ramona,' as in the earlier color films, the photographic technique runs ahead of its interference. Receiving but little aid from its writers and players, the photoplay is stopped with only a slight gain to Broadway's entertainment seekers." F. S. Nugent
— + N Y Times p32 O 7 '36

"Since Mr. Zanuck is a skilled student in devices fertile at the box office, I hope he will forgive me today my failure last night to find his latest film very entertaining. Although it is a gallant attempt to revive a literary antique with some stirringly beautiful technicolor photography as a pulmotor, the film lags in movement and speech and is commonplace in characterization." William Boehnel
— + N Y World-Telegram p35 O 7 '36

"Increasing excellence of technicolor photography is sufficient reason for resurrecting the semi-historical heroine of Helen Hunt Jackson's novel. Though too leisurely in pace, the familiar tragedy . . . survives its fourth pictorialization thanks to a fine cast and some of the most satisfying color yet photographed."
+ News-Wk p29 O 17 '36

"As beautifully acted and directed as it is, I still think 'Ramona' lost more than it gained in color. . . That the picture is entertaining is due to incidental business by Lamar Trotti (screen play), direction by Henry King, and acting by a fine cast." Rob Wagner
Script p10 S 26 '36

"It is the fourth edition of this 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' of the redskin, and a little late to do those worthy people any good. It will, though, advance the technicolor argument a healthy notch, for the effects are subdued and properly apportioned. . . There is beautiful photographic composition throughout the picture, and intelligent pacing. Unless you are an incurable black and white, you will see lots of good in this."
+ — Stage p26 O '36

"Ramona herself is half-historical, half-fictional, half-white and half-Indian, but there is nothing half-way in the manner in which Twentieth Century-Fox has handled her biography. It has used the simple framework as a bitter disquisition on the traditional white methods of dealing with Indians, civilized or raw. In addition, the cinemagoer gets a memorable love story, a handsome technicolor picture gallery of California's southern highlands. . . The attempt to froth a happy ending over Ramona's widow-weeds is not a major flaw. The picture is so pictorially arresting it might almost do without a story."
+ Time p28 O 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Helen Hunt Jackson's widely-read, tragic romance comes to the screen as a formidable contender for top honors among current productions. An ever popular story, intelligently adapted, superbly produced and directed, and magnificently photographed in technicolor, it will undoubtedly command record-establishing grosses in all of its showings. Family."
+ Box Office p65 S 19 '36

"For sheer beauty alone, 'Ramona' should win a blue ribbon. . . It contains scenes that are breath-taking in color and composition, living paintings which accentuate the charm and flow of the story. But 'Ramona' has everything besides—romance, tragedy, comedy, a flawless cast, direction par excellence. . . 'Ramona' spells box-office success for all exhibitors. It has universal audience appeal."

+ Film Daily p25 S 16 '36

"This picture in color raises the artistic status of the screen by several degrees. It will be acclaimed the most beautiful motion picture ever filmed, and for that and several other sound reasons it will be a world-wide box office success. The famous romance of early California becomes in this visualization a poetic tragedy of deeply moving appeal and, markedly unlike any conventional picture type."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 12 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 S 14 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p35 S 15 '36

"Colored photography, by Technicolor and other processes, despite the steady improvements being made, is no longer such novelty as to attract attention and business on its own. Therefore it needs help in the way of scenario. 'Ramona,' as background for this latest color effort, is not much help. . . The next step in the development of colored photography, it would seem, would be a fitting story for its presentment."

+ — Variety p15 O 14 '36

"[It] comes to the screen in its gorgeous Technicolor trappings as entertainment of high order, rich in romantic charm, moving emotional appeal and finest artistry. . . Approached with infinite care and taste, supported at every turn by sound craftsmanship and pictorial beauty and unerringly keyed to genuine heart interest in playing and direction, with enough aggregate name weight to have marquee allure, 'Ramona' may stand sturdily alone for any audience."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 12 '36

RANGER COURAGE. Columbia 58min O 30 '36

Cast: Bob Allen. Martha Tibbetts

Director: Spencer Gordon Bennet

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A trite plot and uninspired acting and direction. Some exceptionally fine riding and beautiful outdoor photography serve as a support for an otherwise mediocre production. Family,"

E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p12 N 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Second Bob Allen Western, this continues in the style set by the first. . . Fast moving, this will please the open air addicts."

+ Phila Exhibitor p49 N 15 '36

REBELLION. Crescent 60min O 27 '36

Cast: Tom Keene. Rita Cansino. Duncan Renaldo

Director: Lynn Shores

This is the second in a series of history Westerns starring Tom Keene. "Rebellion" dramatizes a chapter in early California's history (1850) between the time of its American occupation and its becoming a state, when lawless bands of Americans were seizing the haciendas of the Spanish settlers in defiance of the terms of the Guadalupe-Hidalgo treaty and Washington was too far away to protect them." (Hollywood Reporter)

Trade Paper Reviews

"This justifies the additional expenditures made to lift it out of the formula Western class. It is good entertainment and can hold its own in any situation in the market for which it is intended, particularly as it possesses exploitation possibilities not to be found in the usual action film. Family."

+ Box Office p27 O 24 '36

"Taking a page from history, E. B. Derr has produced a picture that is one of the better outdoor dramas. Its historical significance makes it highly interesting, and its forceful dramatic qualities hold one throughout. Besides that it has enough fighting, gun-play and hard riding to please the action fans, and it also has a nice bit of comedy."

+ Film Daily p7 O 10 '36

"[It] keeps lively step with [the] first [in the series], 'The Glory Trail,' and passes it on several counts. These carefully prepared transcripts from frontier records, though made on a limited budget and containing all the ingredients dear to the action fans, earn a higher rating. They will score profitably in the secondary duals where a combination of action and factual value will count."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 6 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p13 O 9 '36

"Hitting for the houses that crave action pictures, E. B. Derr has in 'Rebellion' a picture with the fortunate combination of a good story, plenty of action and a topnotch cast. It will fill the bill and please audiences. . . Action pictures such as 'Rebellion' will do much to give the theatres which bill them a share of the prosperity which the deluxe houses are now enjoying."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 6 '36

REMBRANDT. London films-United artists 84min D 4 '36

Cast: Charles Laughton. Elsa Lanchester.

Gertrude Lawrence. John Bryning

Director: Alexander Korda

Dialogue film produced in England. "An idealized film biography of the life of the famous painter. Story begins at the height of Rembrandt's fame, during his lifetime, and carries on to his solitary, poverty-stricken old age." (Variety)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Objectionable in part. Objection: Questionable dialogue and promiscuous love affairs."

Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

"[It] often rises to unusual importance. Beautifully photographed and acted, and done with a surprisingly light touch that at the same time does not make light of its subject. Suggested for schools and libraries. Mature. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide D 5 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"One of those lavish and highly polished productions to which we have become accustomed from Alexander Korda. Charles Laughton is not always convincing but the extensive cast is more than satisfactory. Adults & young people."

Christian Science Monitor p19 D 5 '36

"Mr. Laughton fills out the sagged fabric of his part—hardly any other actor could—with something very like inspiration. Like Rembrandt's painting, his performance improves with the passage of time. The insufferable arrogance of the early scenes changes somehow to a very genial and moving maturity. Miss Elsa Lanchester did Hendrikje Stoffels well, though a little archly. . . Miss Gertrude Lawrence was as out of place in seventeenth-century Amsterdam as you would expect. The settings are well designed but overworked. The tragedy of such pasteboard is that it can be photographed only from one angle. 'Kermesse Heroique' (which is about Holland a little earlier) leaves one with an impression of a whole fantastic town. Rembrandt's Amsterdam is only a cardboard Square. And this is typical of the film as a whole. It was a fine conception with most of the details well carried out. But, viewed as a whole, it is woefully thin and straggling."

REMBRANDT—Continued

+ — New Statesmen & Nation p772 N 14 '36

"[It] is pictorially engrossing and filled with deft and subtle characterizations. In attempting to celebrate the life of one of the great artists of all time, it suffers from the same paucity of significant incident that characterizes nearly every attempt to dramatize creative genius. The man himself is placed before you and his ideological and emotional experience is recreated in detail, but the thing that set him apart from his fellow men eludes the director and the camera. That 'Rembrandt' is infinitely superior to biographical photoplays of its kind is due to the superlatively fine acting of Charles Laughton." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p23 D 3 '36

"It is in its breaking away from Hollywood tradition, in its determination to paint a portrait rather than unfold another plot, that... [it] is unique. It has other virtues too, a stirring visual beauty, a fine historical sense and a memorable performance by Charles Laughton. Less melodramatic than his other roles, this portrait of a painter is surely his subtlest and perhaps his best. This very subtlety will undoubtedly keep it from being his most popular. 'Rembrandt' is designed for the carriage trade... But it is Charles Laughton about whom this picture revolves, as indeed it should... Mr. Laughton, with his unrivaled mastery of make-up, again looks quite unlike Charles Laughton, actor, and startlingly like Herr Van Rijn. His characterization mounts steadily in power, reaching its height perhaps in that fine scene where he realizes that even his pictures are no longer his own. 'Rembrandt' is certainly a film for every discriminating moviegoer." Eileen Creelman

+ + N Y Sun p39 D 3 '36

"Between the two of them, Charles Laughton and Alexander Korda have produced a great, and rich, and glowing motion picture in 'Rembrandt,' a picture signed all over with distinction, like one of the master's own canvases... 'Rembrandt' is as much Mr. Korda's greatest production to date, as it is, at once, the noblest subject and the best likeness—so far, at any rate—in Mr. Laughton's inspired gallery of historical portraits... It is hard to say just what it is about 'Rembrandt' that most inspires one to raise these perhaps undignified cheers. One might list the film's courageous indifference to 'romance,' in the cheap Hollywood sense, its surprising, rather foreign awareness of the facts of life, and its resolute hewing to a line of individual integrity and character." B. R. C.

+ + N Y Times p31 D 3 '36

"Alexander Korda... gives us a distinguished and beautiful film that bears the unmistakable stamp of his genius. To the film reviewer who passes his time chronicling the merits or demerits of the countless motion pictures that pass his way, the beauty of 'Rembrandt' presents a peculiar hazard because adjectives like 'breath-taking', 'haunting', and 'startling' are of small use. No matter how admirably they may have served their purpose in describing the grandeurs of other outstanding films that have come his way, they sound hackneyed when applied to 'Rembrandt.' For the beauty of the film is, in its use of light and dark, like nothing the screen has ever before achieved and is as difficult to describe in words as these qualities in one of Rembrandt's paintings or etchings... In the title role Charles Laughton does his most brilliant acting to date." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p33 D 3 '36

"Very respectable and worthy, indicating that Alexander Korda and his staff have studied their galleries well, is the Charles Laughton 'Rembrandt'... The accuracy is there throughout, and the tendency is to make a nice educational picture and instruct us in the life of a great man. Perhaps the picture isn't overwhelmingly exciting... Certainly 'Rembrandt' is for the serious student rather than for those nervous types who get spots in front of their eyes whenever they aren't entertained." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p130 D 5 '36

"At the start it must be stated emphatically that the photography and the settings in 'Rembrandt'... are among the best which have been seen on the screen... Technically, then, [it] is an excellent film, but when one comes to the story, about which all this achievement has been spun, it is not easy to praise... In this picture the more real the settings become the less flesh and blood the life within them seems to have... The spark of vitality is missing and Charles Laughton's emotion... raises little in one's breast but an academic interest... Nevertheless, Mr. Korda's effort is a sincere one and I hope it makes his company money." Mark Forrest

+ — Sat R p640 N 14 '36

"Reverence and a good cameraman are not enough. Mr. Alexander Korda in his latest film has chosen the most difficult of all subjects, the life of an artist, and though he is indubitably on the side of Art with a capital A against the bourgeoisie... he has not himself produced a film which one can treat as a work of art. There are some good scenes... But the film is ruined by lack of story and continuity: it has no drive. Like 'The Private Life of Henry the Eighth,' it is a series of unrelated tableaux... I have called the film reverent, but pompous, I fear, would be nearer the mark. Emotions are too obviously forced on us... 'Scenes From the Life of...'—that is how this picture should be described, and, in spite of Mr. Charles Laughton's amazing virtuosity and Miss Elsa Lanchester's attractive Flemish impersonation (her refined voice, alas! betrays the charming ungainliness of her appearance), it is chiefly remarkable for the lesson it teaches: that no amount of money spent on expensive sets, no careful photography, will atone for the lack of a story line, the continuity and drive of a well constructed plot." Graham Greene

— + Spec p905 N 20 '36

"'Rembrandt' is, and will be for a long time, the epitome of biographical cinema. This is true for one commanding reason, and several secondary ones. First of all, Charles Laughton assumes, more authentically than any other screen actor we know, the characteristics of the person he is portraying... In this film there is a period recreated that encompassed one of the world's immortals; and the members of his household, no matter how small a role they play, are part of this background... It is a majestic portrait, this Rembrandt."

+ + Stage p16 D '36

"Rembrandt by Laughton is almost identical in appearance with Rembrandt by Rembrandt. This excellence of make-up is surpassed only by the merit of the picture, which is one of the year's subtlest and finest... Playing his part with enormous gusto against handsome Dutch sets, Actor Laughton dominates 'Rembrandt' gives one of his finest performances at a dignified pace which well befits the life of his noble, if somewhat ribald, model."

+ + Time p26 D 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Alexander Korda's London Films enriches the screen with a feature comprising a series of exquisitely photographed still-life scenes highlighted with acting of the finest quality and directed with imagination and a knowledge of the life of one of the world's greatest painters. Korda's direction of Charles Laughton in a biographical drama should prove this a masterpiece of screen art. The story's episodic quality and tragic undertones make the film excellent fare for the discriminating and art lovers. Average audiences may find it dull unless it is sold with dignity. Adults."

+ Box Office p23 N 28 '36

"This London Films production is a Roman holiday for Charles Laughton as the greatest living actor at reading lines; further, it is an artistic triumph and a beautiful series of pastel studies done in terms of motion picture—but as film entertainment for the average audience it is lacking. . . . We contend this is not film material, and fails utterly as mass entertainment regardless of its undoubted artistic attainments. That also goes for the general story structure throughout, which moves leisurely, episodically and somewhat jerkily from one episode to another, and seldom hits a real dramatic note or anything resembling action. Here is fine material for a two-reeler, but certainly not intended for over an hour of entertainment for mixed audiences in America most of whom know little about Rembrandt and care less."

— + Film Daily p7 N 21 '36

"[It] is disappointing. The story . . . is nebulous, rambling and episodic and the screenplay fails to develop any definite dramatic interest or suspense. The dialogue is unduly prolix and pretentious. Laughton, lacking due directorial control, struggles through the superfluity of speeches ponderously unconvincing and humorless. A highspot is provided, however, by his superlative rendering of numerous lengthy biblical passages."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 N 5 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 N 17 '36

"Another class picture from Korda. As such, it's swell. . . . The old Dutch settings, indoor, outdoor, are rich, authentic, striking. In a word, everything is top-notch."

+ Phila Exhibitor p34 D 1 '36

"There is something radically original in this latest British importation—a feature film without a story plot, a not too successful effort to expand a characterization into full photoplay length. . . . Of course, there is no good reason why the screen biography of Rembrandt shouldn't be done in this manner, if Alexander Korda wants to do it contrary to the generally accepted method, but neither Korda, who directed, nor Laughton, who acted, should be too disappointed if the reception of their joint effort is something less than enthusiastic. . . . It's a rather disjointed, somewhat dull, undramatic and humorless portrait of a very ill-tempered, improvident and frustrated individual who has a complex for quoting scripture. It is never exciting, and only partly believable. To the credit of Korda . . . it can be said to be a beautifully produced film, excellently photographed, well staged, with interesting settings of Amsterdam in the 1600s, but the fans will leave the theatre confused and somewhat disappointed. . . . In his transition over a period of years Laughton presents a masterful job of makeup and facial and physical change. . . . Lack of story interest and dramatic situations place the film in a niche below the best biographical pictures of the past."

+ — Variety p12 D 9 '36

REUNION. 20th century-Fox 80min N 20 '36

Cast: Jean Hersholt. Rochelle Hudson.
Helen Vinson. George (Slim) Summerville.
Robert Kent. John Qualen

Director: Norman Taurog

"It has for core—there is scarcely any plot—the reunion of several thousand men, women and children who have been ushered into the world by the kindly doctor. For comedy basis it stresses amusing paternal rivalry between the father of the quintuplets, enacted by John Qualen, and Slim Summerville whose hopes of fathering the sextuplets and thus breaking the world record are dashed when only a single child arrives." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This film serves to reintroduce the Dionne quintuplets at a later stage of their development. It doesn't accomplish much else. . . . The comedy in the picture is in too many instances vulgar and clinical and wholly unsuitable for young audiences. As a matter of fact, there is little entertainment value to the production unless one is interested in vital statistics and the Dionne children." T. J. Fitzmorris

— America p216 D 5 '36

"A: poor; Y: not very good; C: hardly."

Christian Century p1639 D 2 '36

"The famous babies are adorable and the comedy is aptly handled by Slim Summerville and John Qualen. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults & 14-18: good." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The adorable Quints are the principal reason for this picture and undoubtedly they will be its chief drawing card, but they are not an essential part of the story as in the 'Country Doctor.' . . . Jean Hersholt is the center of a story that is more dramatic and sophisticated than the first one, though not so heart-warming and human in its appeal. Very good. Family-mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good." DAR

"The noted babies are before the camera longer than in their previous film and are very entertaining. . . . Dubious comedy between Slim Summerville and the father of the Quints tends to make this a poor vehicle in reintroducing these interesting children on the screen. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 28 '36

"Production values are most satisfactory. Able work by a large capable cast; Jean Hersholt very fine; with the director adding many homely touches that enhance the quality of the picture. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 17 '36

"A disappointing story, poorly constructed, with obvious situations, lacking in suspense or subtlety. Concocated as an excuse to capitalize on the popularity of the Quintuplets, their brief appearance does not sufficiently compensate for this mealy drama. Mature."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women N 16 '36

"Adults."
Nat Legion of Decency N 26 '36

"This picture, the second featuring the Dionne Quintuplets, is worth seeing, if for no other reason than that it shows the growth and development of these remarkable babies. The story . . . seems a good idea, but the development leaves much to be desired. It lacks the spontaneity and humor of the former picture and the ethics are somewhat questionable. The cast is good and the picture is well produced. Mature."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p4 D 1 '36

"A warm-hearted story and a good show, with a welcome sight of such old favorites as Tom Moore, Esther Ralston and Hank Mann. Family."

+ Wkly Guide N 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Laura Elston
Canadian M p38 D '36

"The Dionne Quintuplets once more show themselves to be utterly charming and completely unself-conscious performers. . . . The photoplay itself is not as sturdy as 'The Country Doctor,' but it is mildly pleasant entertainment, peopled by many of the engaging players who made the earlier film so heart-warming. For many it will be enough to know that the celebrated infants are at top form and have a comparatively large share in the entertainment. . . Mr. Hersholt carries some of the sentimental sequences close to the breaking point, although his performance, on the whole, is appealingly straightforward." Howard Barnes

REUNION—Continued

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p19 N 27 '36

"Those charming wards of Edward VIII and Darryl F. Zanuck, the Dionne quintuplets run through their limited but endlessly fascinating dramatic repertoire. . . They bring with them, perhaps, too numerous a supporting cast of grown-ups, for the truth is that 'Reunion' is pretty regrettable, as much for the superfluous adult presences on the screen as for the too frequent and too long absences of the Callander glamour girls. Of course, it is almost impossible not to have story trouble with leading ladies who are 2 years of age and five in number." B. R. C.
— + N Y Times p27 N 27 '36

"For pleasure seekers: The most popular entertainers in the world, the Dionne Quintuplets, of course, are in 'Reunion.' The ladies make several appearances in the film and couldn't be more charming. The story, however, is concerned with adults. . . Again there is John Qualen as Asa, the father, undoubtedly one of the startling impersonations on the modern screen."

New Yorker p131 D 5 '36

"This sentimental film is notable for giving the five little Dionnes—at the advanced age of 2—another opportunity to mind their P's and Q's to the tune of admiring 'Ohs' and 'Ahs.'"
News-Wk p22 D 5 '36

"The idea of viewing a film combining the reputed cutenesses of the Dionne Quintuplets was intimidating. . . That 'Reunion' kept me in my seat, amused and contented, must be laid to the adult cast, a good story, clever direction, and not the persuasiveness of the Canadian caperettes." Herb Sterne
+ — Script p10 N 21 '36

"In 'The Country Doctor' . . . the famed Five were the most important characters in the story. In 'Reunion' they are incidental. . . All this leaves the audience with renewed conviction that sequels are rarely as good as the first instalment."

+ — Time p23 D 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picture is so loaded with comedy, drama and kindness that it cannot miss. . . It will do landslide business on the drawing power of the quints alone—and any exhibitor who gets behind it and sells it will have to push the theatre walls back to accommodate the crowds. Family."

+ — Box Office p29 N 21 '36

"The cute and tricky Quintuplets highlight this comedy drama. With those five tiny stars, the picture should hit strongly at the box-office. They are on near the opening of the show and are again presented close to the end. . . Many a good gag makes for plenty of laughter, and with the doctor straightening out the lives of a few of the visitors, things are always interesting."

+ — Film Daily p9 N 13 '36

"Darryl Zanuck and his flock have achieved the seemingly impossible, producing a sequel to 'The Country Doctor,' again starring the Dionne quints, that is as enjoyable a piece of entertainment as the first. That, of course, is saying a great deal. 'Reunion' will yield very large returns. The new picture has something of almost everything that made the other outstandingly successful, and much besides."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 N 10 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 N 11 '36

"20th Century-Fox's second Dionne quintuplets [film] should do as well or better than the first. Because the quints are spotted twice in the picture, once for about four minutes, again for about eight, audiences will be more satisfied. . . Family audiences will like it best but the appeal is there for all."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p31 D 1 '36

"This follow-up on the first story of the Dionne quintuplets is too episodic to command interest or supply suspense, but it probably will appeal in no less measure to the same class of patronage that flocked before to see the famous babies. Probably a light night grosser in many spots, but looks promising for matinee business. . . Result is passable, thanks largely to the playing and direction. . . Some women may think it all very cute, but it will not appeal to the men."

+ — Variety p18 D 2 '36

"It is a cinch that any picture featuring the Dionne quints will score heavily at the box office as did the first one to exploit these youngsters—'The Country Doctor.' In 'Reunion,' the five considerably grown since the release of 'The Country Doctor,' are involved in a mellow human story with homespun humor which hands any exhibitor about all he could ask of family entertainment. Everyone who saw the quints previously will want to see them again. They are the marquee magnet, but they are supported by a splendidly trouncing cast."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 10 '36

RIDE 'EM COWBOY. Universal 60min S 20 '36

Cast: Buck Jones, Luana Walters, George Cooper

Director: Lester Selander

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: improbable but entertaining."
Parents' M p70 S '36

"A highly improbable Western about a cowboy who becomes an automobile racer overnight, but full of excitement and suspense and a thoroughly entertaining picture of its type. Family-juvenile."

+ — Wkly Guide J1 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Daily p12 O 8 '36

"With racing cars replacing for the most part traditional western pintos, here is an opera, however, in the best Western manner, with plenty of action and thrills. Estimate: unusual Western."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p38 O 1 '36

RIO GRANDE ROMANCE. See Put on the spotROMANCE RIDES THE RANGE. Spectrum 59min S 28 '36

Cast: Fred Scott, Cliff Nazarro, Marion Shilling, Buzz Barton

Director: Harry Fraser

A western melodrama. This is the first of six musical Westerns starring Fred Scott.

Trade Paper Reviews

"In addition to a pleasing romance, some fast riding and several most realistic set-tos, this first Western in a new series follows the present popular trend by providing spots for the handsome young star, Fred Scott, to display his baritone voice to advantage. Family."

+ — Box Office p27 O 3 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Audiences liking clean-cut yarns of ranch life will enjoy this feature whose story gives Fred Scott, singing western star, ample opportunity to show vocal, pugilistic and riding skill."

+ Film Daily p8 S 22 '36

"This film is mildly amusing program fare suitable for kiddies and dyed-in-the-wool Western fans. Fred Scott is a personable chap, built especially for action films. . . Given a less hackneyed yarn and a little support he will undoubtedly win high favor with all patrons of action pictures."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 S 24 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 S 22 '36

"Scott is personable, self possessed, a pleasant singer. The picture itself is routine entertainment with usual action quota, sure to satisfy where this stuff goes. Estimate: okey."

+ Phila Exhibitor p39 O 1 '36

ROSE BOWL. Paramount 75min O 30 '36

Cast: Tom Brown, Eleanor Whitney, Benny Baker, William Frawley, Larry Crabbe

Director: Charles Barton

Based on the novel O'Reilly of Notre Dame by Francis Wallace. "The small town team in the middle west makes good locally, thanks to the playing of Tom Brown and Benny Baker and the coaching of William Frawley. At the end of the season it is headed for the Rose Bowl, but needs some national publicity to put it in the running. This is secured with stories of supposed romances of the two players which also involve Larry Crabbe of the rival coast team. On the strength of this gentle jogging of public enthusiasm the team goes to the Bowl and wins." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: stupid; Y & C: inane but harmless."
Christian Century p1574 N 25 '36

"Some unique angles in football tricks and splendid pictures of the game. A thoroughly enjoyable picture of college life without a single drinking scene. Good light entertainment for the family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Although the theme is not new, the presentation is entertaining, the actors well cast and the comedy fresh and amusing. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good entertainment. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good-family." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"The film could stand some cutting. Benny Baker in a secondary comedy role nearly steals the show. Good family entertainment." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The clash situations are very realistic and the whole is interspersed with keen humor and cleverly appropriate repartee. Especially appealing to all lovers of this sport. Entirely free from drinking sequences. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family." Mrs T. G. Winter
Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"This [is] a most enjoyable picture for the family. Family & junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 26 '36

"This is outstanding as a football picture. All the old tricks are abandoned; no blustering, hard-boiled coach, no last minute victory by a Cinderella football hero, no rah! rah! college, rough style of student conduct. One feels as if the director must know college as it is. More than that the picture is cinematically good. . .

The scenes are brief, but complete or suggestive of completeness, and the photography is superb." S. M. Mullen

+ Motion Pict & Family p5 N 15 '36

"This innocuous football story is lacking in originality and includes too many football games to create suspense; however the sincere young cast is so capable and refreshing that the picture will please youngsters and football fans. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 28 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 29 '36

"A, Y & C: good."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p12 N 1 '36

"Family-juvenile."

Wkly Guide O 24 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"We can't pin any posies on this pigskin epic. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 O 31 '36

"Quite entertaining. Also unusual. . . There is no acting in 'Rose Bowl,' just a group of clean, refreshing young Americans, attending to their various affairs and fooling us into the belief that we are having a good time watching them. That is all you can hope to get out of the picture, just genuine entertainment. You will like all the people in it."

+ Hollywood Spec p9 O 24 '36

"On they come, the ingenuous melodramas of the gridiron. This one has an unusually adolescent plot." (1 star) Beverly Hills
Liberty p44 N 23 '36

"The title of the New Rialto offering, fails to carry out its rosy promise. A series of scrimmage football matches culminating in the Rose Bowl game, it is perhaps ideal entertainment for the Rover boys, but will have little mental intoxication for 'thoughtful reader.' . . Even the producers realized that six reels of unremitting strategy with a football might fail to hold the most ardent follower of the game, and so they have injected romance. . . The complications which follow the couple's many misunderstandings are not only juvenile but become fairly unbearable." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p23 D 2 '36

"It is our considered opinion, after watching the Rialto's 'Rose Bowl' contest, that the Carnegie Foundation, in its threatened new scrutiny of football conditions, should inquire into the overemphasis on pigskin puppy love at Dear Old Hollywood. The alma mater of such gridiron stalwarts as Richard Dix, Dick Arlen and Stuart Erwin should be admonished, on pain of having to give the game back to the boys, against a repetition of the current 'Rose Bowl' scandal, the perpetrators of which have presumed to warp the eternal triangle into a pernicious pentagon." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p35 D 2 '36

"[It is] an amiable and diverting mixture of love and football that has a certain timeliness, because of the current mystery as to who Washington's opponent will be in the annual Rose Bowl game. . . 'Rose Bowl' [is] acceptable, if not outstanding, film fare." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p33 D 2 '36

"Football stories, for the most part, are clipped from the same piece of pigskin and the penetrating odor of ham invades the celluloid transcriptions. That new material, good stuff too, can be found to orient the thundering elevens on the screen was proved a few years back when Paramount made 'Touchdown.' This isn't." Herb Sterne

+ Script p10 N 21 '36

ROSE BOWL—Continued

"Rose Bowl's" games are not composed of matched stock-shots in the accepted current technique, but were played partly on U. S. C.'s fields, partly in the Rose Bowl, partly on a gridiron built on the Paramount tank stage. The resulting action shots are the clearest of the current football picture cycle, a verisimilitude unfortunately not shared by the plot."

+ — Time p46 N 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Producer A. M. Botsford's contribution to the annual cycle of pigskin pictures turns out to be a highly pleasing comedy with just enough gridiron activity to make it seasonable. Family."

+ Box Office p27 O 24 '36

"The lighter side of intercollegiate football, of minor college life and of smalltown puppy-love affairs is the chief ingredient of this mild addition to the 1936 crop of football pictures. Though it gets away from formula on some counts and is frequently funny, it is somehow lacking in the mounting excitement and the exuberant youthfulness that is to be expected in these seasonal offerings, but it will serve its purpose in neighborhood tandems with undoubted satisfaction to the more youthful devotees."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 O 13 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 O 14 '36

"Not all football, but with a collegiate background, this is highly exploitable at this season of the year. . . In small towns it should do best, as lack of name strength will handicap it unless exploitation makes up for it."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p33 N 1 '36

"The celluloid it's printed on is about the newest thing to 'Rose Bowl,' a routine football-collegiate romance picture that's just fairly entertaining. But on its own it isn't box office, nor is the cast likely to help it along much on the business end."

+ — Variety p13 D 9 '36

"The 'Rose Bowl' presumably (and its civic promoters certainly hope so!) is widely enough known as the spot where one of the annual post-season grid gigantes is played to have marquee value in selling the picture. . . It flashes enough football in the drive of a mythical freshwater college team toward intersectional glory to invite the pigskin addicts, but it is primarily a neat and entertaining college comedy contrived to amuse the mob. By, of and for youth, it will give the laugh-seekers a diverting hour on the better dual programs."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 13 '36

S

SEA SPOILERS. Universal 62min S 27 '36

Cast: John Wayne, Nan Grey, William Bakewell, 'Fuzzy' Knight

Director: Frank Strayer

A western adventure tale of the Coast Guard's fight against seal poaching.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: fair; C: no."

Christian Century p1542 N 18 '36

"This [is an] exciting picture which will prove entertaining for the family. Too exciting for children." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Interesting photography. Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It is] a good entertainment for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 12 '36

"Family. The film creates admiration for the Coast Guard and gives a clear understanding of their hazardous life. Pleasing background of land and sea, adequate direction and natural, convincing acting gives this picture unusual entertainment value."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 2 '36

"Fair, entertainment of its kind. Family-mature."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"It is a program picture of no great value but fairly entertaining of its class; adolescents, 12-16: fair; children, 8-12: no value."

+ — Motion Pict R p8 O '36

"Beautiful Alaskan scenery well photographed, forms an interesting background for an otherwise ordinary picture. . . Fair direction. Adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 2 '36

"[It is a] fine portrayal of the adventures of the Coast Guard. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency S 17 '36

"A, Y and C: exciting and good."

Parents' M p44 N '36

"Family, except for young children."

Sel Motion Pict p6 O 1 '36

"A good adventure story with many excellent twists and situations, and of course exciting. Family-juvenile."

+ Wkly Guide S 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Routine story receives novelty from Alaskan setting and the fact that it gives the Marines and G-men the go-by in favor of the Coast Guard patrol. Adults & young people."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 N 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Outdoor adventure in a new setting will provide good entertainment for all who like their film fare packed with action and thrills. Family."

+ Box Office p35 N 7 '36

"Using colorful equipment of Coast Guard, and the traditional romance of the service to lend glamour, Universal had succeeded in turning out a fairly entertaining feature."

+ — Film Daily p7 O 24 '36

"An exciting action melodrama of the coast guard has been very nicely brought to the screen by Trem Carr for Universal, the production having what it takes for an hour of family entertainment. In the neighborhood houses and on twin bills it will rate above what is generally offered for that class of trade."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 25 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 S 12 '36

"Estimate: okey action."

+ Phila Exhibitor p38 O 1 '36

"Although the U. S. Coast Guard was enrolled to turn this picture out, it is by no means a flag-waver for anybody or anything. . . Okay for the neighborhoods, and fine for the adventure circuit when coupled with another film."

+ — Variety p15 O 23 '36

"A swift-moving melodrama that whips to a swell finish, 'Sea Spoilers' is favorable fare for the family trade and can be spotted nicely on any double-bill. Picture has action from fadein to fadeout, sustaining audience interest without being too blood and thunderish. . . While story and dialog are nothing to write home about, the picture nevertheless is loaded with good old-fashioned box office hokem that has that certain something that makes the neighborhood trade sit on the seat edges. This same hokem makes the [children] cheer, only this time it is the coast guard instead of the marines."

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 25 '36

SECOND WIFE. RKO 60min Ag 21 '36

Cast: Walter Abel. Gertrude Michael. Erik Rhodes

Director: Edward Killy

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The special perils awaiting the woman who marries a widower with a son are met and overcome in this human interest document on marriage. . . The direction is a shade inferior, running to heavy emphasis on the more sentimental moments." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p528 S 5 '36

"An improbable story fairly well acted with good production values. Adults, family, young people: matter of taste; 8-14: too intense." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The picture gets off to a slow start, but gathers momentum, and the sequence in which David steals the guns of the bandits is quite breath-taking. There is some pleasant photography of outdoor scenes, the direction is good and the cast well chosen." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 12 '36

"Fair. Adults & young adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

SING, BABY, SING. 20th century-Fox 90min Ag 21 '36

Cast: Alice Faye. Adolphe Menjou. Gregory Ratoff. Ted Healy. Patsy Kelly. Michael Whalen

Director: Sidney Lanfield

Music & lyrics: Lew Pollock. Jack Yellen

Music director: Louis Silvers

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The picture is for the more mature and, although there are some very funny moments, there is also a touch of vulgarity. The film belongs not to the realm of art but to the cruder regions of slapstick." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p504 Ag 29 '36

"The story . . . is not too clearly developed. It is generously padded with songs, in themselves good, and with burlesque acts by the Ritz brothers who bring a new type of crazy fooling to the screen. This crazy atmosphere runs through the film and Adolphe Menjou is in grand form in his caricature of a famous actor. . . Technically the film is good. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p176 O '36

"It is a noisy farce with musical interludes, inartistic and overplayed. While the Ritz Brothers are clever and undeniably versatile, their strident voices and grotesque dances soon become exhausting. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R p7 S '36

"A and Y: mad merriment; C: mature." Parents' M p43 O '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adolphe Menjou, who can claim the enviable distinction of never disappointing his audiences, is at the peak of his form as an overworked, alcoholic actor in 'Sing, Baby, Sing.' . . The picture is wild and witty, a generous load of fun, sometimes farce and sometimes straight comedy. Perhaps it might come under the heading of intelligent nonsense of the rougher variety. There are even moments when the effervescent humor is spiced with subtlety." Mordaunt Hall

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 19 '36

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 26 '36

"'Sing, Baby, Sing' slipped into town with a modesty and absence of ballyhoo most unlike 'Swing Time' and at once established itself as the best semi-musical of the year, miles ahead of Twentieth Century's last attempts in the genre—'Thanks a Million' and 'King of Burlesque.'" Robert Stebbins

+ + New Theatre p17 O '36

"There is some entertainment to be found in a minor item called 'Sing, Baby, Sing,' thanks especially to the comic antics of Adolphe Menjou." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p83 S 26 '36

News-Wk p30 S 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Sing, showmen, sing. For here comes something called 'Sing, Baby, Sing,' a melody for the box office that will keep the ticket machines ringing and audience sides shaking. . . The cast, story and songs combine to remove any alibi that this picture isn't entertaining, as well as any exhibitor excuse for using another feature with it. . . Ritz Bros., long in vaudeville, make their debut in this DeSylva musical. They are a riot. . . It wouldn't do any harm for exhibitors to start in right now to sell this trio of clowns."

+ Variety p16 S 16 '36

SING ME A LOVE SONG. Warner-First national 75min Ja 9 '37

Cast: James Melton. Patricia Ellis. Hugh Herbert. Zasu Pitts. Allen Jenkins. Nat Pendleton

Director: Raymond Enright

Music director: Leo F. Forbstein

"The story rambles through James Melton's adventures as the youthful inheritor of a great department store. In order to learn the business, he works in the music department under an assumed name and wins his way into the hearts of the employees, not to mention the heart of Patricia Ellis, who is a sheet music plugger in the store." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] gay and rollicking. . . The continuity is poor and the youthful lead a little stiff in his love scenes, but the excellence of the cast make it good entertainment. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"This [is] excellent family entertainment. Adult & 14-18: excellent; 8-14: little interest." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Very good. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family but mature for children. Good." DAR

"Improbable and rather silly, this inoffensive plot offers a vehicle for James Melton's really fine voice which deserves a much better opportunity. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This semi-musical farce [is] good light entertainment." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"A very clever and amusing comedy interspersed with unique situations and romantic song. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 14 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SING ME A LOVE SONG—Continued

"James Melton sings very well indeed, and he is not niggardly in displaying his talents. It is the absurd comedy however which really carried the show. Seldom does one see such delightful nonsense as Hugh Herbert's pantomime in the part of Hammerslag, the shop-lifter, while Walter Catlett as the floorwalker and Zasu Pitts as the salesgirl who just cannot refrain from breaking things adds substantially to the fun. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: yes."

+ Motion Pict R p8 N '36

"This musical comedy is entertaining film fare. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 14 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

"A, Y & C: entertaining."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Family, but mature for children."

Sel Motion Pict p5 N 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Thematically trite, directorially spotty, melodiously pleasing, photographically competent and, from the standpoint of acting, not completely successful, 'Sing Me a Love Song' emerges as a production typical of the average Warner musical comedy, one expected to achieve not more than moderate commercial success. . . . The romance depicted between James Melton and Patricia Ellis has all the earmarks of a purely unreal article, something manufactured for a motion picture, much blame for which goes to the writers, whose work requires both characters to do things that no intelligent persons, such as they, I presume, are intended to be, would do." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p11 O 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Starting mildly as a light musical romance, this suddenly develops into a comedy panic when Hugh Herbert throws himself into high and exhibits every trick of the comedy trade. . . . Melton sings excellently but acts woodenly. Family."

+ Box Office p63 O 17 '36

"Warner's 'Sing Me a Love Song' is a musical with more comedy than music; the humorous element involving the Warner Bros. stock company will afford some draw appeal, but the ordinary story and a lack of big names will be detriments, which the comedy will remove to a degree."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 8 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 O 9 '36

"Warners has a grand comedy musical in 'Sing Me a Love Song.' With shrewd showmanship, producers have surrounded the personable James Melton with a cast of established troupers who build the picture into class entertainment. The film contains genuine laughs and some real uproarious comedy, plus good tunes, two of which are definitely ticketed for the hit box office. Full of gags and expert comedy work, Warners shouldn't have any trouble selling this one to John Public."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 8 '36

SITTING ON THE MOON. Republic 65min S 15 '36

Cast: Roger Pryor, Grace Bradley, William Newell, Pert Kelton

Director: Ralph Staub

Music: Sam H. Stept, Sidney D. Mitchell
Music director: Harry Grey

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y and C: no."

Christian Century p1375 O 14 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 16 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A, Y and C: fair musical comedy."

Parents' M p44 N '36

"A slender thread of a story overly long drawn out serves as a vehicle for music in a popular vein. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p10 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It has] a plot which is not strengthened by meaningless dialogue and several more or less entertaining songs. Family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: pleasant program for neighborhoods, twin bills."

+ Phila Exhibitor p35 S 15 '36

"Pleasant radio musical. A kind of backstage play about broadcasting. Good companion program piece anywhere and the songs are nice."

+ Variety p29 S 30 '36

SMART BLONDE. Warner-First national 65min Ja 2 '37

Cast: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane, Winifred Shaw, Craig Reynolds

Director: Frank McDonald

This is the first of a new detective series. "Glenda Farrell is Torchy Blane, a smart, flip, well characterized newspaper reporter. She works with Barton MacLane of the police detective detail. They are friendly enemies, within the limits of their affection and respect for each other. Their first adventure is to crack the mystery of the murder of a sports tycoon." [Variety (Hollywood)]

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Witty dialogue and clever acting give the picture its entertainment value. Family-mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The suspense, for the most part, is well sustained. Adults: good; 14-18: possibly; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The picture is so expertly acted and so smoothly directed, and has such an unexpected denouement, it is rather better entertainment than the average film of this type. Good. Adult." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Capable leads, light, amusing treatment. Mature & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

"The usual suspense prevails throughout, although there is nothing new or original in story and treatment. Adequately cast and directed. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 28 '36

"The direction is consistent and convincing, the settings appropriate, the large cast satisfactory with the work of Glenda Farrell most commendable. Mature audience."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 17 '36

"Smart dialogue and lively action in a well directed cleverly cast murder mystery."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 16 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency D 3 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict p7 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"One of the smoothest cinematic jobs of this or any other season. As perfect an example of the talkie form as one could wish for. Direction that has not been excelled by any of the big-time directors. . . There are laughs in 'Smart Blonde,' but they are worked in smoothly. . . [in] the skilfully constructed screen play, and bob up only at permissible moments without interrupting the flow of the story. . . McDonald gets from his players a collection of the finest performances I ever saw in a class B picture, as fine as I ever saw in a class A picture. We rate a performance by the degree of conviction it attains, whether it be comedy, drama or tragedy."

+ Hollywood Spec p7 D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Splendid performances by a cast full of convincing characters, particularly Glenda Farrell and Barton MacLane, and a mile-a-minute screen play, well devised by its authors and well directed by Frank McDonald, make this a picture which will hold up its end of the gross on any bill. Film has suspense, logical plot development and best of all, a hat full of sparkling dialogue. Family."

+ Box Office p23 N 28 '36

"This is a very satisfying program offering. It has much action, fresh comedy and has been well directed by Frank McDonald. Glenda Farrell, as a newspaper woman, is an ideal choice for the title role and does excellent work."

+ Film Daily p7 N 21 '36

"An undistinguished murder mystery whose chief reason for being is to give Glenda Farrell, reporter, the chance to rib Detective Lieutenant Barton MacLane as she tags after him through an intricate clue-hunt. . . The formula crime story unfolds with neatness if not dispatch to make an average dual offering."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 N 15 '36

— + Motion Pict Daily p11 N 20 '36

"Presence of Miss Farrell should help but otherwise the show has nothing to distinguish it. . . A Warner stock feature cast contributes fair performances while Miss Farrell's observations supply plenty of comedy. Made for the program division, it holds to that standard all the way."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p30 D 1 '36

"Warners herewith launches its Adventures of Torchy Blane series to a swift, exciting and wholly entertaining start. If the successors, to co-feature Glenda Farrell and Barton MacLane, can follow the pace set by 'Smart Blonde,' the series is a cinch to click as acceptable diversion on any dual program and should be a profitable venture, creditable to those who broached the idea and to Bryan Foy and his staff for excellent production quality."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 18 '36

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN. RKO 60min
N 27 '36

Cast: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothorn, Helen Broderick, Eric Blore

Director: Joseph Santley

"Ann models smart clothes for photographic purposes. Helen manages the studio. For a series of yachting costumes they bribe Eric Blore, valet to the immensely wealthy young Gene Raymond, to let them use Gene's yacht as a background. The male model is late and when Gene shows up he is mistaken for the missing male model and put to work." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This is merely program entertainment, momentarily enlivened by the comic resources of Helen Broderick and Eric Blore. . . There is little novelty in this film and the saving touches of humor are too infrequent to do any more than slightly break the fall of the production. As far as it goes, it is adult entertainment." T. J. Fitzmorris

— + America p192 N 28 '36

"Amusing, light entertainment. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature & 14-18. Good." DAR

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This delightful picture [is] somewhat mature but suitable for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"You are more than likely to be amused by its vagaries, its freshness and its youthful zip. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"This picture [has] high entertainment value. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 26 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: possible; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R p8 N '36

"Mature."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 28 '36

"A. Y. & C: amusing."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"This picture [has] high entertainment value. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p6 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is too much talk and not enough of it funny in this farce. . . The last 10 minutes are hilarious but that isn't enough in an hour-long film. Family."

— + Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '36

"[It is] handsomely staged by RKO, nicely acted by a competent cast, and mildly amusing. . . If motion picture brains had been applied to the preparation of 'Smartest Girl,' it would have been an exceedingly bright little comedy that any audience would accept with satisfaction. As we get it, however, it is just another offering which reflects Hollywood's complete misunderstanding of the nature of its medium."

— + Hollywood Spec p9 N 7 '36

"Although 'Smartest Girl in Town' . . . has no pretensions beyond the telling of a light-hearted variation of the Cinderella theme, the result is somewhat disappointing. The disappointment becomes more acute when one stops to consider that the film is not without some nice inventiveness of situations and some patches of engaging dialogue and that, further, it has some really pleasant people portraying its principal roles. . . [It is] a farce which with a little more attention on the part of all concerned could have been converted from an indifferent entertainment into something frisky and engrossing." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 N 26 '36

News-Wk p20 N 25 '36

"Something to put Springtime in your heart . . . an ingratiating, unpretentious romantic comedy that's light-headed as a choline and quite as attractive. . . Helen Broderick. A trenchant lass is Helen, one who knows how to sell a salty quip effectively. Her best screen chance to date, for she has not only wisely tailored material but also Eric Blore as partner. . . Gene Raymond and Ann Sothorn have heretofore found greater favor with the fans than they have with this reviewer, but now I'm able to add my applause with that of the big

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN—Continued
brigade. . . Mediocre process stuff mars an all round fine production. . . Too frequently pedicular, trick camera lensing spoils an otherwise laudable film." Herb Sterne
+ Script p14 N 14 '36

"Open telegram to able screen comedians
Broderick, Blore, and Rhodes: Sincerest condolences Stop."

— Stage p18 D '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Consistently entertaining and often uproarious, this contains all the ingredients that shape a romantic comedy success, with smooth acting by the principals, Ann Sothern and Gene Raymond. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 31 '36

"If you wanted to pick flaws in the plausibil-ities missing in this story you could find plenty, for the plot construction is stretched for the fun to be found in it. And the writers found the fun in plenty—and the result is that any audience is in for one grand hour of enjoyment and light laughter."

+ — Film Daily p7 N 10 '36

"Here's a jolly, artful and glib little romantic farce that almost everyone will heartily enjoy.
Though rating a program picture, it will hold up in the best of company and should develop considerable box office draw. With pictures like these RKO is setting a high standard for B product and will do itself much good."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 O 23 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 O 24 '36

"Pleasant comedy . . . [that] ought to be pleasing program. Estimate: okey."

+ Phila Exhibitor p33 N 1 '36

"[The] film hasn't enough substance to be anything beyond the duals. Picture is quite amusing in an ordinary way, however. . .
Harry Jans disports as the lazy hubby of Helen Broderick. It's a negligible role made less attractive by Jans. Erik Rhodes is a thickwitted baron, not altogether impressive."

— + Variety p14 N 25 '36

"The Gene Raymond-Ann Sothern combination clicks again in a fast, flip comedy which exhibitors generally should find to the liking of folk who want their entertainment light and easy. Just the kind of offering which will supply either the cocktail or the cordial on any well arranged dual menu."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 23 '36

A SON COMES HOME. Paramount 75min JI
31 '36

Cast: Mary Boland, Julie Haydon, Donald Woods, Wallace Ford, Anthony Nace

Director: E. A. Dupont

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: perhaps; Y: doubtful; C: no."
Christian Century p1343 O 7 '36

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."
Mo Film Bul p154 S 30 '36

"Fair. Adults & young adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"Mary Boland's ingratiating comedy is insufficient to balance inept direction which has consciously played up the insincere and improbable to harry the emotions. Good waterfront photography. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R p8 S '36

"A: affords unusual character study; Y: mature; C: unsuitable."

Parents' M p43 O '36

SON OF MONGOLIA. Amkino 105min N 20 '36

Cast: Tseven Rabdan, Igin-Khorlo. Sosor-
Barma, Gombo. Bato-Ochir

Director: Ilya Trauberg

Mongolian dialogue film with English subtitles produced by the Soviet with native Mongolian actors. This is the first Mongolian film produced. "Tseven, the shepherd, rides off across the tundra to find an enchanted garden and prove his worth to his shepherdess, on the advice of a venal soothsayer. He wanders into Manchukuo, by mistake, overhears Japanese officers and a Manchurian prince plotting to take over Mongolia, discloses the plot during a wild scuffle in a circus and lands in the enchanted garden—in chains. With the aid of a Manchurian sympathizer he worsts his enemies and makes his way back to his own country, where he describes the forthcoming attack and is cheered no end by a display of Mongolian military strength." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Son of Mongolia' is the only Russian film in a year which I have been able to enjoy without reservation. Even then I was uncertain during the first few minutes, when some business having to do with the introduction of Dulma's three suitors looked very much like the horseplay which has disfigured most recent films from a similar source. . . But the uncertainty was soon over. . . [It is] a film packed full of fascinating and informing novelties, and a story distinguished by the presence everywhere in it of a vast, happy, and primeval good-nature. . . If 'Son of Mongolia' were nothing but a newsreel it would still be one of the finest of current films. . . [It] however, is more than a newsreel. With Tseven Rabdan playing the role of Tseven, and with Ilya Trauberg doing an imaginative piece of directing, it grows into something picaresque if not epic. . .
[Tseven] is one of the best actors I have ever watched, just as this is one of the best films—an Oriental 'Western' if you do not mind the contradiction in terms." Mark Van Doren
+ + Nation p677 D 5 '36

"Crudely made, but effectively acted, the new Soviet film, 'Son of Mongolia,' pulls no punches in describing one of the tinder-box spots of the world today. . . While frankly propagandistic, it achieves its most telling points through a picaresque tale about an ignorant but heroic herdsman. His exciting and colorful adventures make the work entertaining as well as provocative, and it is a pity that it could not have been directed and photographed more expertly."
Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 N 21 '36

"A strange film as beautifully jumbled as the political environment out of which it sprang, like a handsome weed, 'Son of Mongolia' is a travelogue of unique and authentic richness, an amusing Far Eastern horse opera of picaresque character, and a scientifically valuable anthropological document in which the Soviet film industry may well take pride." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p21 N 21 '36

"After a long list of mediocre films the Soviet motion picture industry . . . begins to show signs of coming back into its own again with 'Son of Mongolia,' an engaging blend of fantasy and realism. Not that 'Son of Mongolia' is to be listed among such Russian film masterpieces as 'Potemkin,' 'Ten Days That Shook the World,' 'China Express,' 'Chapayev' and others; it has none of the brooding intensity or passionate frenzy of those films. But rather that it has enough vitality and charm of its own in a minor way to make it seem excellent entertainment. . . A melodrama combined with satire and propaganda, 'Son of Mongolia' has enough good things in it to make one wish it were better. This, however, should not mitigate against the film, because it deserves to be seen as it stands." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p7a N 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Powerful, interesting production richly endowed with scenic and acting highlights. Although crude technically, film is unusual and will appeal to discriminating audiences and those interested in romantic lands of Eastern Asia, their people and political problems. While essentially propaganda against the Japanese, it is effective entertainment with love theme. Fact that film is first Mongolian-made feature adds to interest."

+ Film Daily p7 N 24 '36

"Picture is stretched out interminably, perhaps a third of the footage coming more under the classification of manners and customs rather than plot narrative. Some of it is interesting but not for nearly an hour and a half. . . This is probably just what Mongolia wants, but it's a long distance from American standards in spite of admirable direction and occasionally picturesque single sets. The subtitles are intelligent and adequate to tell the story, such as it is."

+ Variety p15 N 25 '36

SONG OF CHINA. Douglas MacLean 65min
N 9 '36

Cast: Lim Cho-cho. Shang Kwah-wu. Li Shoh-shoh

Director: Lo Ming-yau

See issues of June 29 and September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Song of China' . . . conveys a great deal of information about the other side of the earth and [is] heartily recommended. . . [It] is most interestingly acted by Chinese." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p677 D 5 '36

"Because it was made in the Orient, written, scored, directed, produced and enacted by Chinese, the film is really interesting. Technically, it is far behind Hollywood, no better photographed or directed than the usual Russian film. It does, however, . . . bring the Orient a little closer to us. . . 'Song of China' offers nothing new technically; nor will the story or acting stack up against Hollywood quickies. Its principal interest and a real one, is its camera's eye view of modern China, a land which has not heretofore bothered much about exporting its motion pictures." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p33 N 10 '36

"As the prologue explains, the Chinese always have been fond of drama extolling filial piety. . . There's definite proof of that in 'Song of China,' which goes to several sentimental extremes in its treatment of the wayward-children theme. Still, there is something hearteningly honest about it. Sincerity, simplicity, dignity—they all apply, and yet, because we have been schooled to distrust such frontier qualities, we prefer to call it 'quaint.'"

China's technical facilities obviously are limited, and the picture shows it in its weak lighting of interiors and in its generally static quality. But the outdoor photography frequently is excellent and the performances, once we readjust ourselves to the silent screen, are eloquent enough. Whatever else you think of it, 'Song of China' has a curiosity value. On that basis primarily, and not as general entertainment, it may be recommended." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p31 N 10 '36

"A group of Chinese artists, ranging in efficiency from pretty good to pretty awful, acquaint us with some of the habits and traditions of the mysterious race from which the film springs in the inert and incoherent photoplay entitled 'Song of China.' More interesting as a novelty than as a drama, it tells [its tale] in a slow and stylized manner, borrowed none-too-skillfully from the Russian motion picture producers. . . Although I do not wish to appear inhospitable toward the cinematic efforts of our Oriental friends from across the sea, I should be lax in my duty as a defender of the cinema if I failed to point out that, while the film's intentions are laudable, the results are lamentable, and that some of the complaints that may safely be lodged against it are that it is slow, tedious and feeble—a flimsy counterfeit having little value either as art or as entertainment."

William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 N 10 '36

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p101 N 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Song of China' is epigrammatic and frequently quite bromidic, but, in spite of its slowness and lack of action, it is fairly interesting foreign-made material. Picture will draw the arty crowd, and in some centers . . . it should receive good support from Chinese and possibly other Orientals."

+ Variety p14 N 11 '36

SONG OF THE GRINGO. Grand national 62min
N 10 '36

Cast: Tex Ritter. Joan Woodbury. Fuzzy Knight. Monte Blue

Director: John P. McCarthy

A musical western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p11 D 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Tex Ritter's ingratiating personality and pleasing singing voice qualify him for popularity as a western star more than his riding and fighting talents. . . Action is swift, particularly at the climax, but frequent interludes are given over to cowboy ballads in which Tex has proven himself a past master. Family."

+ Box Office p29 N 21 '36

"Via radio and rodeo, Tex Ritter makes his screen debut in this song-studded Western which is also first Grand National release from producer Edward F. Finney. Based on solid story, it is well above average outdoor drama on virtually every count. Ritter's singing ability, personality and natural flare for acting indicate a future of popularity and profit for him."

+ Film Daily p7 N 10 '36

"Producer Ed Finney in his first attempt, 'Song of the Gringo' has given a little more production value than is usually found in an independent of this type and the result, a tuneful entertaining Western, should find favor with patrons enjoying horse operas."

+ Hollywood Reporter p15 N 13 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p14 N 10 '36

"Ritter's lilting songs, pleasing personality are the high spot of the picture. He's a little self-conscious; but given a proper vehicle, he will capture the Western fans. This picture is a fair start."

+ Phila Exhibitor p49 N 15 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

STAGE STRUCK. Warner-First national 90min
S 12 '36

Cast: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Warren William, Frank McHugh, Jeanne Madden

Director: Busby Berkeley

Music & lyrics: E. Y. Harburg, Harold Arlen

Music director: Leo F. Forbstein

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This one looks and sounds just like all the others you have seen—or, happily, missed. . . This is, in short, only the leaden echo of an overworked musical comedy cycle. If you concentrate very hard, you will probably be able to keep this picture distinct from '42d Street' and others." T. J. Fitzmorris

— + America p552 S 12 '36

"A and Y: inane but amusing; C: probably good."

Christian Century p1270 S 23 '36

"A trivial and stereotyped bit of backstage nonsense which attempts to be different from the usual picture of this sort by omitting the lavish and spectacular effects which such a story usually includes. The attempt is unsuccessful because the story is not of sufficient moment to carry interest and the disjointed manner in which it is presented discourages even the most rabid Powell-Blondell fans. Adolescents, 12-16: depends on taste; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R p8 S '36

"A, Y and C: entertaining."
Parents' M p43 O '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Laura Elston
Canadian M p46 O '36

"Faces familiar in previous Warner Brothers' 'backstage' musical spectacles do not make this the same familiar spectacle. It's well below par."

— + Christian Science Monitor p13 S 19 '36

"'Stage Struck,' the new song and dance photoplay is so lean in comic inventiveness that its pleasant score and lively chorus numbers do no more than make a palpably false front for a tedious show. . . This latest reworking of the backstage formula [is performed] in something less than entertaining fashion. . . It is a dull and muddled screen musical." Howard Barnes

— N Y Herald Tribune p10 S 28 '36

"It's cut from the same cloth that made 'Forty-Second Street' and all the Warner musicals which followed that hit. 'Stage Struck,' however, is funnier than most of the recent ones. . . This is certainly Miss Blondell's best performance in a long time. . . The plot is none too new. . . The Warners . . . have entrusted the chorus girl role, the romantic lead, to a girl who has never been in pictures before. This is Jeanne Madden, whose eyes are the merriest on the screen, but whose high soprano voice has not been flatteringly recorded." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p29 S 28 '36

"'Stage Struck' . . . is a backstage item: a rather moldy slice off the loaf which produced '42d Street' in better days. . . There are a few redeeming features: The Yacht Club Boys, who have two numbers—'The Body Beautiful' and 'The Income Tax'—through which they gyrate with their usual energy and the brave pretense that they are not crusaders in a lost cause. . . Miss Madden, the newcomer of the picture, is a pert little ingenue with a slight but pleasant voice, but she speaks as though she is remembering every word her elocution teacher told her." F. S. Nugent

— + N Y Times p14 S 28 '36

"[The cast] seem more or less unhappy in a venture which seldom lifts its audience out of a state of philosophic neutrality. Perhaps I shouldn't be so blunt about it so soon, because 'Stage Struck' has several reasons for suspecting that it might have been a potentially amusing and entertaining musicale. But its desperate want of something approaching a reasonably fresh plot, and its lagging pace in the midst of so much good talent, reduce the latest costly song and dance entertainment from the Warner studios to blank and routine second-ratedness." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p13 S 28 '36

Stage p26 O '36

Time p25 S 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Even though it makes an attempt to poke fun at the show-must-go-on thing, 'Stage Struck' is cut from the same old pattern, gravitating between moments of sizzling comedy and long stretches of dull palaver. But coming on the heels of the Joan Blondell-Dick Powell marriage, and the attendant publicity, it's enough to help the box office generously. Otherwise it likely won't account for much over average takings. . . Jeanne Madden does okay for a starter. Some fans may find it hard to connect the shirley-templeish face, manner and smile with the mature tonal quality of this ingenue's voice, but she makes a neat and natural fit for the part."

+ — Variety p17 S 30 '36

STAR FOR A NIGHT. 20th century-Fox 75min
Ag 28 '36

Cast: Claire Trevor, Jane Darwell, Evelyn Venable, Arline Judge, J. Edward Bromberg

Director: Lewis Seiler

Music & lyrics: Harry Akst, Sidney Clare

Music director: Samuel Kaylin

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The acting of all is good, especially that of Jane Darwell as Mrs. Lind. The three chorus girls are great fun and relieve the film from too much pathos. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p177 O '36

"This is an appealing story. . . The dialogue rings true, and all parts are sincerely taken. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: probably mature."

+ Motion Pict R p8 S '36

"A and Y: pleasant sentimental comedy; C: little interest."

Parents' M p43 O '36

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER. Paramount 65min Ag 28 '36

Cast: Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke, Andy Clyde, David Holt

Director: Stuart Heisler

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A mediocre picture that may appeal to David Holt fans. Family-mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Good. Family." DAR

"This is definitely a gangster film with harrowing scenes no child should see and unwholesome crime situations which are offensive to most adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

Fox W Coast Bul S 12 '36

"The story is well directed with many subtle touches, and the suspense is carefully sustained. The acting all round is very good. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p155 S 30 '36

"There are some of the faults which usually accompany melodrama, and while this is a satisfactory program picture, it has no great merit. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: too tense."

+ Motion Pict R p8 O '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor O '36

"A sturdily constructed programmer that strikes the entertainment bell due to literate scripting, compact direction and the uniformly competent work of the acting talent. Not a pretentious offering, but a thoroughly diverting one. . . A father-and-son sub-plot is handled with restraint, never toddles toward the treacle morass, uses understatement effectively in presenting an underager's woes as he views his dad contemplating a second wife." Herb Sterne

+ Script p11 S 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] moderately entertaining. The love interest is developed along routine lines, general production supervision brings out nothing strikingly strong, and the scenes with the boy with one exception possess no real strength. However, the picture has enough human interest and homespun appeal to gain fair or better support from family trade."

+ Variety p13 N 18 '36

STUDENT ROMANCE. British international
O 10 '36

Cast: Grete Natzler, Patric Knowles. W. H. Berry. Carol Goodner

Director: Otto Kanturek

An operetta produced in England. It is based on the Continental operetta I Lost My Heart in Heidelberg. "This new study of life in the German university features not a student prince but a visiting princess. She meets a penniless composer, who happens to be also a student, and promptly falls in love with him, to the refrain of half a dozen melodies." (N Y Sun)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There has been little tampering with operetta conventions in 'The Student Romance.' . . The unhurried exposition is given considerable color and movement by the Alt Heidelberg settings and the excursions into song are pleasant. . . If this sort of thing is to your liking, you will find it one of the better shows of its kind. . . Altogether, 'The Student Romance' is an effective enough reworking of familiar devices." Howard Barnes

N Y Herald Tribune p14 O 12 '36

"[It] is an English concoction based on a Viennese piece. The humor is a good deal more English music hall comedy than Viennese, with heavy puns serving as substitute for wit. The score is generous and melodious, marred by tinny recording. The general atmosphere is festive, foolish and reeking with theatrical romance. . . The picture, for all its airs and graces, cannot stack up with even the second-grade musicals turned out here." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p14 O 12 '36

"It re-exhumes the tinkling bones of a theme we thought had been safely lowered to rest in the family vault of 'Student Prince', 'In Old Heidelberg' and their many descendants. . . The excursion is not too dull, the score not too undistinguished, the romance not too depressing, the comedy not too silly. Call it just a pleasant but unimportant repetition of an old, old story which has been served with equally pleasant unimportance by its cast." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p23 O 12 '36

"The film is somewhat in the vein of 'The Student Prince' and probably would have resulted in another feather in the British film producers' caps if they had been able to turn the trick. But I am bound, regretfully, to testify that their experiment in Viennese operetta is not altogether satisfactory. The plot is slow and heavy, the humor is commonplace and the singing nothing on which to bestow bouquets. . . Although it does not call for a severe spanking, it is among the least interesting of the current screen entertainments." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p25 O 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It has] inadequate regard for costuming accuracy, a hackneyed plot about a student who loves a princess, some British accents which ruin the picture for most domestic spectators. However, the old German student, folk songs which run through the picture, the new ones written specially, are very tuneful; Grete Natzler is beautiful; technique is fair. . . This is pleasant entertainment for class audiences in metropolitan areas."

Phila Exhibitor p53 N 15 '36

"Operetta, 'I Lost My Heart in Heidelberg,' presented filmization problems that obviously weren't hurdled. Original opus had one good song, a lot of colorful costumes and some boy-girl combinations that subsequently seem pretty amateurish. On the screen the good song isn't too well recorded, while the camera and scenic departments muffled the colorful end. Picture furthermore is draggy throughout. Doubtful seller for the general route. Some houses, with class trade as a specialty, might make the grade after a heavy haul, but results on the whole seem doubtful."

+ Variety p23 O 21 '36

SWING TIME. RKO 100min S 4 '36

Cast: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Victor Moore, Helen Broderick, Eric Blore

Director: George Stevens

Dance director: Hermes Pan

Music & lyrics: Jerome Kern, Dorothy Fields

Music director: Nathaniel Shilkret

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A light, frothy story which never strives to do more than entertain. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Truly delightful entertainment except for the story, the basis of which is gambling presented in such a manner that the picture can be recommended only for adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent. Mature-family." DAR

"This is absolutely top notch film entertainment. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

SWING TIME—Continued

"Well cast and admirably directed, this outstanding picture should provide fine entertainment for the mature audience." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The production sets a swift pace and is excellent entertainment. 12-16; excellent; children; excellent." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

"Excellent for all."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 23 '36

"Well cast and admirably directed, this outstanding picture should provide fine entertainment for the whole family. (The P. T. A. and the Federated Church Women object to the over-emphasis on gambling. Best of the month. Outstanding."

+ + Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"It provides ample entertainment. . . Those who stress ethical values might object to the gambling element, and the stress put upon the glorification of always taking a dare. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 21 '36

"A, Y and C: excellent." Parents' M p44 N '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire are still swinging up new box office records with their latest song and dance act. Family."

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 19 '36

"It is smart, sophisticated, and suave, and it steps along at a lively rhythm. Maybe it isn't the best of the Astaire-Rogers operas. Who am I to judge? They're my weakness and sane judgment fails me. . . The co-stars never danced better together. In fact, 'Swing Time' is a decidedly happy event." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p35 O 10 '36

"There are two reasons I am glad I happen to be alive right now, and they are: Mickey Mouse and Fred Astaire. I think every new Fred Astaire picture might well be the occasion for dancing in the streets. . . There is even a little more fun in 'Swing Time' than in the usual Astaire picture, because this one has the advantage of a book by Howard Lindsay and Allan Scott, and of the presence of those two stellar old foolers, Helen Broderick and Victor Moore." Don Herold

+ Life p30 N '36

"'Swing Time' is an advance on anything this team has done before, the plot better constructed, and the 'book' wonderfully witty. The only falling off is in the music. . . Mr. Astaire is a better comedian than ever, dancing more marvelously, and, Miss Rogers . . . swirls on his wing almost as perfectly as Adele Astaire did in the old, old days. In addition to all these virtues, this is almost the funniest film we have seen."

+ + New Statesman & Nation p628 O 24 '36

"Next to 'Anthony Adverse', 'Swing Time' is the most publicized and over-rated film of the new season. Excellent principals, capable comedians and absolutely no click. Negligible story and paceless direction to blame. . . The Bojangles number discloses new dance possibilities in the free counterpointing of person and shadow, and makes for considerable interest." Robert Stebbins

+ + New Theatre p17 O '36

"The grace and rhythm Fred Astaire commands his body to express has raised the lowly tap dance into a Terpsichorean triumph. I thought the story exceptionally amusing, the comedy hilarious, and the direction spirited and lively. . . Altogether a corking show with Fred Astaire at his best." Rob Wagner

+ Script p10 S 19 '36

"The jubilation that always greets the joint appearance of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers breaks loose anew at 'Swing Time.' . . Since Victor Moore is irreparably lost to Broadway for all time, it is some consolation to see him at his fittle best in 'Swing Time.' . . He supplies most of the bewitching fun of the picture. The Astaire-Rogers dancing is as magnificent as ever, only more so, but there's nothing spectacularly new in the terpsichorean antics they indulge in so delightfully. . . Before we forget it, as if we could, the Bojangles of Harlem number is something out of a book of magic. You won't believe your eyes. Believe us, though, and go."

+ + Stage p26 O '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Swing Time' has been rolling up such large grosses around the country that even the producers are surprised. . . Astaire and Rogers are still the biggest box-office draw in pictures. The Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers pictures are Entertainment Plus, and after all entertainment is what the public wants. Their pictures teach no great moral lesson, nor are they arty, but they do entertain, and this is supposed to be the entertainment world."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p8 S 19 '36

SWORN ENEMY. MGM 78min S 11 '36

Cast: Robert Young, Florence Rice, Joseph Calleia, Lewis Stone, Nat Pendleton

Director: Edwin L. Marin

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: doubtful; C: no."

Christian Century p1303 S 30 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 17 '36

"This is a minor underworld sketch. . . There's nothing very novel in this bit. . . except, perhaps, the performance of Joseph Calleia. . . Mr. Calleia is more and more turning out to be one of the expert interpreters of the sinister and villainous." John Mosher

New Yorker p99 S 19 '36

"A first-rate screen play by Wells Root and a first-rate performance by Joseph Calleia make this otherwise ordinary Gangster v. Government film agreeably nerve-racking."

Time p25 S 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The time-worn racket theme and a [bad] title militate against this Lucien Hubbard melodrama, though it should prove entertainment for most audiences once they're inside. . . If overlooking the now rather trite theme of the story and its title, film has much in its favor—good acting, good direction, good production and a well-conceived script."

+ — Variety p16 S 16 '36

T*TARZAN ESCAPES. MGM 95min N 6 '36

Cast: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Buckler, Benita Hume, Herbert Mundin

Director: Richard Thorpe

Based on the character created by Edgar Rice Burroughs. This is the third of the series. Tarzan is trapped by an unethical big game hunter in Africa in order to be placed on display in England. He escapes by calling out the elephants who break his cage. His mate who was returning to England for a legacy decides to remain with him in the jungle.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A & Y: no value; C: no."

Christian Century p1574 N 25 '36

"This next episode in the highly exciting life of the white ape, Tarzan, holds many thrills, fine jungle scenery, interesting shots of African native animals, and the thread of story which delights a young audience. Family & junior matinees." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Were it not for the prolonged death scene of Captain Fry, it could be recommended for family, otherwise adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"An interesting film, very well produced. Any audience." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[It] presents the rather improbable situation of the ape-man, Tarzan, and his white mate, far from civilization in Africa. . . The terrifying sequences of the picture make it unsuitable for young children, but due to the popularity of the Tarzan stories, it may be rated as a family film." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"By all means, family." Mrs T. G. Winter
Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"Well cast and pleasingly entertaining. Family & junior matinee."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 26 '36

"Good. Family-mature."
+ Motion Pict Guide D '36

"In a picture of this kind which uses an extremely fantastic plot and an impossible hero, it seems a pity that the producers should introduce the shocking realism of death scenes, vividly pictured in all their horrid details. As either fairy stories or adventure tales the 'Tarzan' books have a large following of children and adults who like to be transported out of the world of reality by swift action and imaginative events, but the thrills of 'Tarzan's' amazing feats do not need actual horror to increase their appeal. Several scenes in this picture unfit it for the audiences with which it should have the greatest popularity. Adolescents, 12-16: not recommended; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R p10 N '36

"There are some moments of beauty, some inconsistencies in this tale of adventure; but unfortunately some gruesome deaths mar its otherwise exceptional value as juvenile entertainment."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 28 '36

"Too exciting for very young children. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A, Y & C: good adventure story."
Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"[It is] an engrossing sequel to the Tarzan films. Family."
+ Sel Motion Pict p11 D 1 '36

"[It is] a thrilling and exciting adventure story. Family."
+ Wkly Guide O 31 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Just who the devotees of Tarzan may be is open to perplexing speculation. On the one hand, they may all be the normal persons who pass the thirteen-year-old intelligence tests with flying colors; again they may be escapists whom the African landscape captivates, or they may simply be poor wretches who find in the fabulous conjurings of M-G-M and Edgar Rice Burroughs a sedative. In any case, the Capitol Theater was thronged yesterday with spellbound patrons who laughed like children. . . Maureen O'Sullivan brings such conviction to her role that at any minute this reviewer may pack up and leave for the South Seas." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p23 N 20 '36

"'Tarzan Escapes' was two or three years in the making. Completed at last, it emerges as a super-thriller for juveniles—and quite a lot of fun for the grown-ups, too. . . It's got thrills enough, this 'Tarzan,' all well photographed, ingeniously concocted. There is real imagination in this fantasy of adventure, and plenty of comedy. Herbert Mundin contributes many of the laughs." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p30 N 20 '36

"From the adult viewpoint, if there is such a thing, where 'Tarzan' is concerned, it is Africa that really saves the picture. The flavor and the monstrous spell, the strange and horrifying beauty of the Dark Continent are all there, carefully processed and sound-tracked, to offset the comical ululations of the ape-man. . . In its wealth of animal sequences, Metro has slyly propitiated the sentimentalists and zoologists with shots of cunning lion cubs, cute fawns, &c., while withholding nothing from the lovers of savage scenes of tiger-shooting, native-spearing, war dances, sacrificial ceremonies." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p29 N 20 '36

"Whatever else you may think of 'Tarzan Escapes'—and you'll probably be able to think up a lot of unkind things to say about it if you've a mind to—you'll have to admit that it makes no pretense about being something it isn't. It neither solves, nor pretends to solve anything—but simply says 'here is some good fun; take it or leave it.' Frankly, this department prefers to take it. . . [It is the] sort of engaging adventure-comic-strip entertainment that completely disarms reviewers who sometimes like to boast that the cinema has reached the age of long trousers and discretion. . . The cast. . . is in every way suitable to the demands imposed upon it and helps to make 'Tarzan Escapes' fun, if not art." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p31 N 20 '36

"It satisfies all the demands made of these classics. . . In this particular film, considerable precedence is given Cheetah, the chimpanzee, and you shouldn't miss the cave monsters of the climax." John Mosher

New Yorker p85 N 28 '36

News-Wk p20 N 28 '36

"'Tarzan Escapes' has one striking difference from its predecessor, 'Tarzan and His Mate.' Mate Maureen O'Sullivan, who once frolicked through the jungle almost nude, now wears a tunic far more modest than most bathing suits. Despite the Legion of Decency, however, Tarzan's mate is still 'Miss Jane Parker' to the whites who journey into Africa to find her. . . Cinemaddicts with good memories of MGM's two previous Tarzan pictures, though they may feel that they have seen 'Tarzan Escapes' before, will find it richly entertaining."

+ Time p41 N 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is adventure supreme. Retaining all the thrills and spectacle of the earlier Tarzan productions, Metro has topped them with a lavishly produced, coherently directed story of the jungle and its ruler, Tarzan, king of the apes. The appeal of 'Tarzan Escapes' to the juvenile audience throughout the country will be tremendous, and its drawing power for adults should not be under-estimated. Family."

+ Box Office p31 O 31 '36

"The latest Tarzan version should be enthusiastically welcomed by his followers. It is one of the best Tarzans yet. For the [juvenile] trade especially it is great stuff, and anyone who goes for this fantastic sort of thing should like it."

+ Film Daily p13 O 27 '36

TARZAN ESCAPES—Continued

"[It] has all the box office attractions of the others with the added advantage of a human and humorous treatment which gives promise of an even wider public appeal. With these pictures always popular with adolescents, foreign audiences, and with the legion of Edgar Rice Burroughs fans, the current opus will be certain also to annex new enthusiasts wherever shown."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 24 '36

"Metro spent time, money in remaking 'Tarzan Escapes,' but the result proves it was worth it. In the best Tarzan tradition, this is plenty hokem but it will more than satisfy folks who liked the first Tarzan offerings."

+ Phila Exhibitor p33 N 1 '36

"Two years of ribbing between the last 'Tarzan' feature and this one, has left its mark on the subject. With the constant kidding having accentuated the absurdity of the highly imaginative jungle doings, the tree-to-tree stuff has worn pretty thin for adult consumption. Appeal of 'Tarzan Escapes' will be mostly for the [children,] and that's not likely to mean more than mediocre returns. While at first the sight of Tarzan doing everything but playing pinocle with his beast pals was a novelty, it's all rather silly now. Derisive laughter greeted the picture too often at the Capitol and it probably will run into similar difficulty most everywhere."

— + Variety p14 N 25 '36

"Production has size and appearance of much care in its making. Once under way, it keeps moving with enough interesting wild animal life to tighten the interest. Smash scene is a stampede of elephants. Good sound effects heighten the illusion. . . Weissmuller stayed within the definition of the character which he has originated. He did one bit of very beautiful underwater swimming. Leading woman again is Maureen O'Sullivan, who looked attractive and acted with spirit. . . Film is answer to the question how to get the children off the streets at matinee time."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 24 '36

TATTLER. See Here comes Carter

TEXAS RANGERS. Paramount 90min Ag 28 '36

Cast: Fred MacMurray. Jack Oakie. Jean Parker. Lloyd Nolan. Edward Ellis

Director: King Vidor

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good entertainment for all except young children." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Scenic beauty, spirited music and action, and historical interest combine to make good entertainment. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Family-mature." DAR

"Family, exclusive of young children for whom it is too exciting." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The change of motives of the leading characters gives ethical value to picture certain to please the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Too exciting for children. Otherwise, family." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 12 '36

"The morals of this story are very mixed. There is a noticeable romantization of the Bad Man; while the tactics of the supporters of law are sometimes rather doubtful. In any case Fred MacMurray, good actor though he is, can never for a moment make us believe in him as an outlaw—he simply does not look the part. . . The virtues of the film are its excellent outdoor photography (though the action is at times too static, through overdoses of dialogue), and the vigour of the various scenes of fighting and shooting on a large scale. Suitability: adults & adolescents." A. V.

+ — Mo Film Bul p177 O '36

"The picture is exceptionally well cast. The direction is most skillful, and scenic backgrounds and action are beautifully photographed. The story is dramatic, logical, without sentimentality. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: exciting."

+ Motion Pict R p9 O '36

"A and Y: good; C: possibly too tense." Parents' M p44 N '36

"The story is neither exceptional nor new but it is far better than the usual exaggerated Western. The film is sustained wholly by the acting of the principal characters and the capable direction of King Vidor."

+ — Scholastic p32 O 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This is not a perfect picture, but it is a perfect example of how lively and exciting a cowboy film can be when it receives the same consideration in dialogue, direction, and playing that is usually reserved for only less vigorous themes." (4 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p51 O 3 '36

"[It [is]] one of those pictures . . . which Hollywood produces so well. Everyone concerned in the picture seems to have been dealing with something he understood, if only emotionally. The result is not only vigour but naturalness. . . These characters take their place in a picture full of sweeping action, brilliantly photographed. The riding is fast, the fighting furious, and scene after scene reminds us that it was in depicting active adventure and simple heroism of this nature that the cinema first came into its own. 'The Texas Rangers,' however, revives as well as reminds. It makes the screen seem no longer tired." R. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p20 O 2 '36

"Paramount wastes still another distinguished director in this one. Vidor admitted grinding it out to 'reestablish his box-office value.' We liked Nolan's performance. Film estimate: you could do worse."

— + New Theatre p34 N '36

"King Vidor has turned from the social problem of feeding America in 'Our Daily Bread,' to a vigilante saga of the Southwest in his latest production, 'The Texas Rangers.' To say that it is disappointing is meant only in the larger sense, for with his flair for showmanship, he naturally offers a colorful, and at times epic canvas. . . Despite its great length, the result is an absorbing picture. Yet, one cannot help but wish that, with his high talent, experience, and skill, a less stereotype, even commonplace, theme might now, in the full tide of his outstanding career, flow from Mr. Vidor's cameras." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p19 S 24 '36

"'The Texas Rangers' is a Western, old-fashioned, as most Westerns by necessity are, but a pretty good Western at that. It is housed at the Paramount, which usually doesn't show Westerns. This new one, however, has a cast headed by Fred MacMurray and Jack Oakie, and its director is King Vidor. This combination, along with a prologue and epilogue delivered by an invisible narrator, may have fooled Paramount into thinking the film an epic, whatever an epic may be. That delusion is unfortunate. The picture, as well as the audience, would be much happier without those educational and quite uninspired monologues. A good Western needs no excuse, even when cut strictly to formula." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p29 S 25 '36

"To come right out with it, 'The Texas Rangers' . . . is pretty maudlin stuff. . . Except for a bright characterization by Jack Oakie and an equally pleasing sinister one by Lloyd Nolan, 'The Texas Rangers' is simply a revival of a decadent cinema form, generically referred to as 'cops and robbers.' . . Things happen in accord with one of the screen's most archaic formulas." J. T. M.
 — + N Y Times p29 S 24 '36

"'The Texas Rangers' gives us some good Indian warfare in the thorough Vidor style, and lasts two hours, but isn't really inspired, first-rate Vidor, Jack Oakie's comic antics relieve the banditry and tussling." John Mosher
 + — New Yorker p77 O 3 '36

News-Wk p30 S 19 '36

"[It is] more, I fancy to the taste of the children and adults of to-day than the scalpings and tomahawks of the Mohicans. . . There is plenty of action and plenty of killing which are the two things people go to a Western to see; but I wish that the advent of the talkie had not brought in its train a tendency to shoot off propaganda as well as revolvers." Mark Forrest
 + — Sat R p480 O 10 '36

"Mr. Vidor is one of the best of the popular directors; D. W. Griffith, a much finer artist, is his master. . . But in Vidor's 'epics,' just as in Cruze's somewhat overpraised picture, 'The Covered Wagon,' the story gets in the way; they bear about as much relation to epic drama as do the huge, artless, historical novels which have been so popular recently in the United States. The story of 'The Texas Rangers,' I should add, is a great deal better than that of 'The Covered Wagon.'" Grahame Greene
 Spec p582 O 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"What appears to have been intended as an epic of the Southwest is just a fancy hoss opry. It holds more in entertainment than the average Western, but its box office potentialities are not so hot unless the film is accompanied by a vigorous exploitation campaign. For [children], however, this picture is a natural —and this is where most of its gross will probably come from. . . Supposedly a saga of the Texas Rangers and their part in the creation of that vast state, the story is not sufficiently factual and, even more important, is deficient in glorifying the pioneer police force."
 + — Variety p17 S 30 '36

THANK YOU, JEEVES. 20th century-Fox
 57min O 23 '36

Cast: Arthur Treacher, Virginia Field,
 David Niven, Lester Matthews
 Director: Arthur Greville Collins

Based on the novel of the same title by P. G. Wodehouse. "Screen tale has Jeeves [gentleman's gentleman] and his master involved in an intrigue for possession of plans for a new type airplane, with Virginia Field popping into the picture as possessor of half the construction blueprint and Lester Matthews holding the other half." [Variety (Hollywood)]

Audience Suitability Ratings

"That this is not the repeat performance of P. G. Wodehouse, which must certainly have been expected after 'Piccadilly Jim,' becomes painfully apparent before the first reel has run out. The film is only a fair rendition of what was once choice nonsense, lacking finesse almost to the point of being clumsy."
 — + America p24 O 10 '36

"A: good of kind; Y & C: amusing."
 Christian Century p1407 O 21 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Good acting on the part of Arthur Treacher and some amusing comedy fail to bring alive this improbable story. Adults & 8-18: fair. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A mildly entertaining and decidedly confusing English farce with a liberal amount of slapstick. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Mature-family." DAR

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul S 26 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
 S 16 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"The picture is entertaining farce-comedy, well presented. Adolescents, 12-16 & children, 8-12: yes."

+ Motion Pict R p9 O '36

"This picture gave little opportunity to a cast which deserved a better vehicle."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women S 9 '36

"An inferior version of one of P. G. Wodehouse's stories. General patronage."

— + Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A, Y & C: entertaining."

Parents' M p32 D '36

"[It is] a mildly amusing farce. Family."

— + Sel Motion Pict p7 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Family."

Christian Science Monitor O 3 '36

"[If [Wodehouse] intends to view the picture, I would advise him to take along all his sense of humor. Otherwise he may pull out all his hair and sue Sol [Wurtzel]. The Wodehouse humor would seem to be good screen material. But Sol does not think so. Apparently he feels the Jeeves stories were popular because of the velvety quality of the word 'Jeeves' for that is all of Wodehouse he has put in the picture. And for the Wodehouse humor he has substituted as laugh provokers a colored saxophone player, and a boy who squirts buckshot at people's necks through his teeth. You'd just die laughin'! . . . Wodehouse's valet is an ideal choice for a series, if he can live down the pitiful thing in which he is presented first."
 — Hollywood Spec p10 S 26 '36

"[It is] mild entertainment at best. . . The youngsters may like it, but we prefer to take our Jeeves in less active doses." F. S. Nugent
 — + N Y Times p25 O 5 '36

"Wodehouse enthusiasts, who begin to chuckle at the mere mention of the name Jeeves, are in for some gay moments if they drop into the Palace this week. . . Although 'Thank You, Jeeves,' lacks the snap and dash and humor of 'Piccadilly Jim' another cinema gem based on a Wodehouse story, it has more than its share of moments that tickle the funny bone. . . 'Thank You, Jeeves' may not be Wodehouse at his most side-splitting, but it is jolly fun." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p17 O 5 '36

"Jeeves . . . has collected a large and rabid following during his years in book form. Those who have followed his hilarious career on the printed page will be disappointed by his screen materialization. If the studio plans to feature this character successfully in a series they'll have to adhere more strictly to the author's—and public's—idea of the Englishman. . . This [is a] tepid farce. . . There's dandy film material in the Wodehouse stories and it is to be hoped that future picture adaptations will be granted more conversant treatment." Herb Sterne

— Script p10 O 10 '36

THANK YOU, JEEVES—Continued

"Hampered by the fact that on the screen Jeeves is seen direct rather than through the mist of Bertie Wooster's dazed idolatry, 'Thank You, Jeeves,' though sure to disappoint Wodehouse addicts, is still a passably amusing farce."

+ — Time p36 O 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Disappointing in its interpretation of P. G. Wodehouse's characters, Bertie Wooster and Jeeves, and losing much of the author's inimitable subtlety, this film emerges as more or less slapstick. It will please those who like that variety of comedy but will be a let-down for Wodehouse fans. Family."

— + Box Office p63 S 19 '36

"Except for Arthur Treacher as the valet, the writers of this screenplay did not take much from P. G. Wodehouse, creator of Jeeves, but instead attempted to turn out a comedy of general appeal with enough British flavor to preserve the identity of the original. The result is a rather mixed affair."

+ — Film Daily p8 S 17 '36

"Missing fire on almost every count, this silly and confused English farce will not get far as entertainment and must be relegated to dual support duty where it won't matter. Compounded of alternate dashes of very British whimsy and of old-fashioned slapstick, its chief merits lie in a few individual performances, a scatter spray of bright lines and some admirable British sets."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 S 10 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 S 11 '36

"Lightweight, this hasn't even good feature names to help it. Some may like English comedian Treacher but the show will probably wind up on double features."

— + Phila Exhibitor p38 O 1 '36

"[It] is a tidy little bit for dual use. It's sound in every department and will satisfy all around in any type of house. Clipped running time shows there were no intentions to get out of the support class, but this in no way detracts from the picture's merits."

+ — Variety p16 S 23 '36

"P. G. Wodehouse's gentleman's gentleman, has been caricatured into a figure of burlesque mystery. He bears only faint resemblance to the author's creation but presents a kind of entertainment which more literal translation of the original might have missed for general audience. . . [It] is strictly neighborhood program made for folk who laugh easily at simple buffoonery. So conceived, written and directed, it will satisfy in these less-demanding spots where the Wodehouse tales are little known."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 10 '36

THEODORA GOES WILD. Columbia 90min N 12 '36

Cast: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas, Thomas Mitchell, Thurston Hall

Director: Richard Boleslawski

Based on a short story of same title by Mary McCarthy. Irene Dunne portrays a New England spinster, brought up under the stern repressions of a small town by two maiden aunts. Unknown to them she writes a daring book and goes to see the New York publishers when it becomes a great success. There she meets the illustrator of the book who twits her about her primness. She decides to show him and she does by "running wild."

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Laughingly gay, this picture is excellent entertainment for mature audiences." Am Legion Auxiliary

"This delightfully amusing farce is so well produced, so perfectly cast and so finely directed that it ranks with the very best in light adult entertainment. . . The subtle satire on a small New England town, its people, its church and literary club, could not possibly offend. Adults."

Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture has every element that makes for excellent entertainment for intelligent, mature audiences. It maintains a high standard for even and consistent story development, clever dialogue, excellence of production and deftness of direction. Outstanding. Mature."

Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Irene Dunne proves an excellent comedienne. Mature & 14-18. Excellent." DAR

"A gay, spontaneous comedy with clever dialogue, excellent photography, good direction and a capable cast. . . Mature. (It is to be deplored that church people are pictured as narrow, straightlaced and gossipy.)"

S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"A highly entertaining sophisticated comedy with enough underlying pathos to give the story body. . . An able cast, fittingly chosen, give fine characterizations, with Irene Dunne and Melvyn Douglas, excelling. Adults & young people."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 2 '36

"Columbia scores another hit. . . Under the brilliant directorial guidance of Richard Boleslawski the entire production emerges sparkling with humor and clever repartee. Mature."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

"Mature. Outstanding."

+ + Sel Motion Pict p4 D 1 '36

"[It is] a delightful and amusing story. . . Excellent acting, clever dialogue and good directing. Mature. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide N 14 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A genially entertaining comedy, although the situations are forced at times and many of the lines are silly without being funny. Family."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p17 N 14 '36

"[It] is a joy, not by virtue of the strength of the story, but because it has excellent direction and clever performances. Cleverness is something the screen should have in larger doses. . . The Theodora story is a crazy sort of thing, but Boleslawski gives it to us as one of the most delightful offerings of the season."

+ — Hollywood Spec p7 N 7 '36

"The players deserve most of the credit for the antic quality that pervades 'Theodora Goes Wild.' The farcical conceits that define the action of the film are not exactly sturdy and the comic byplay frequently betrays a ripe age. Irene Dunne and her expert assistants have contrived to keep the brightest facets of the production turned toward you, however. Under Richard Boleslawski's light touch, they make it a generally merry if rather inconsequential screen comedy." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p23 N 13 '36

"When Irene Dunne escapes from both heavy drama and elaborate musical she goes the whole way. In the new feature, a gay light comedy verging on farce, she seems to be having as much fun as her audiences. That is quite a bit of fun, too, for all the film's feathery quality. Miss Dunne, given her chance at real comedy, never hesitates. . . Director Richard Boleslawski and a topping comedy cast make the most of every opportunity, however slight."

Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p34 N 13 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Columbia obviously was dreaming of a distaff edition of 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town' when it produced 'Theodora Goes Wild.' . . . We must puncture the toy balloon by proclaiming that Theodora is no match for Longfellow Deeds in sound, honest, homespun humor. Although she goes wild, she also goes silly; and farce does not set too well upon the lovely shoulders of Irene Dunne. The one thing we cannot abide is studied cuteness. . . . By less exacting standards than those of 'Mr. Deeds,' the new film is a frolicsome piece with several moments of ingratiating comedy. Although there is a noticeable slackening of pace in its midcareer, it introduces a new theme and it explodes it with commendable freshness. . . . A good bit of it is thoroughly silly, over-taxing even Miss Dunne's ability, but the honest New England comedy of it is astringent and wholesome. The Lynn Literary Society is magnificent." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p27 N 13 '36

"Miss Irene Dunne turns to comedy and in the frisky, hilarious and nifty film called 'Theodora Goes Wild,' turns in a gay and spirited performance that does much to make this one of the season's most distracting and tonic entertainments. Although it is an intensely artificial and lightweight affair, it is replete with sparkling wisecracks, literate light comedy writing and deft situations. . . . If you fail to enjoy its intelligent frivolity you will have only yourself to blame." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p33 N 13 '36

"Don't . . . forget gentle little Irene Dunne. She's being rather bright and pleasant these days in 'Theodora Goes Wild.' This is a film for your easier moments. When I saw it, I thought first it might turn out to be just comedy about the publicity antics of lady authors, a dismal theme, but it's really about a small-town girl on a rampage. . . . In spite of too many antique jokes, it's bright and fresh often enough." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p101 N 21 '36

"Miss Dunne had a lot of expert help. The assisting cast, led by Melvyn Douglas, entered into the spirit of this adventure, and Richard Boleslawski, whose screen work is even less associated with farce than his star's, directed with a light hand. Sidney Buchman's story refurbishes some old gags, but injects twice as many new ones into a plot that has no vain hope of making sense."

+ News-Wk p60 N 14 '36

"[It is] a lively, I might say, hilarious female version of 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town.' I don't know when I've seen a picture so full of amusing surprises, bright dialogue and ridiculous situations. . . . Chalk up another knock-out for Harry Cohn of Columbia." Rob Wagner

+ + Script p10 N 21 '36

"Somewhere in this idea is excellent farce. The situations are not believable enough. Miss Dunne is called upon to be too kittenish too long. What we mean is, Theodora goes too wild."

— + Stage p18 D '36

"For cinema patrons who like rollicking farce, 'Theodora Goes Wild' amounts to a feast. It begins rollicking in Reel One, rollicks faster and more furiously from there on."

+ Time p26 N 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Audiences should go wild over 'Theodora Goes Wild.' It reveals Irene Dunne as a comedienne of superlative charm and ability, and its delightfully rollicking comedy is reminiscent of 'It Happened One Night.' From every angle the picture is practically flawless. Family."

+ Box Office p51 N 14 '36

"This is one of the most amusing pictures of the year. It is full of laughs and human touches. It presents a new Irene Dunne and she proves herself one of the screen's best comedienness. The picture is a triumph for its producer, director, writers, players, and all concerned in its making."

+ Film Daily p6 N 5 '36

"An uproarious romantic farce that will stand with the very best in a sensational comedy year. Its box office earnings also will come close to equaling top grosses for this popular type, for it has universal appeal and will evoke almost continuous laughter in any man's theater. . . . The offering is something to talk about. It will be."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 2 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 N 4 '36

"Columbia has again produced a comedy that should be in the top grosses when the returns are in. . . . Everyone plays well, the result is swell."

+ Phila Exhibitor p49 N 15 '36

"A comedy of steady tempo and deepening laughter, 'Theodora Goes Wild' is certain to attract big trade and strong word-of-mouth ballyhoo. It will be a logical holdover for many downtown spots. And it should strengthen the following of Irene Dunne. . . . Film-goers will like the skittish results which achieve a certain helter-skelter lunacy while still not toe-stubbing the sense of illusion. It's synthetic stuff, made to seem real and plausible."

+ Variety p12 N 18 '36

"For sustained interest, rollicking comedy and a good love story, 'Theodora Goes Wild' is an outstanding picture and one that should certainly do big at the box office. Whatever a good picture needs, this has. A film masterpiece from every viewpoint, it reveals Director Richard Boleslawski as a master of comedy. . . . Irene Dunne gives a top performance in a part that was most difficult, to say the least. Melvyn Douglas, as the romantic interest, does a superb job."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 2 '36

THEY MET IN A TAXI. Columbia 70min S 1 '36

Cast: Chester Morris. Fay Wray. Raymond Walburn. Lionel Stander

Director: Alfred E. Green

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and C: perhaps; Y: good."

Christian Century p1303 S 30 '36

"The story is novelettish but not unduly sentimental or sensational; good direction, and competent acting and casting, make it pleasant entertainment. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p177 O '36

"Fair. Adults & young adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"It is well acted and well directed. The story moves along at a rapid pace and is pleasant light entertainment. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: no interest."

+ Motion Pict R p9 O '36

"A and Y: entertaining comedy melodrama; C: doubtful."

Parents' M p44 N '36

"[It is] hampered by a trite plot [but is] a fairly entertaining comedy. Adults & young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p10 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 26 '36

"'They Met in a Taxi,' featuring the far from distinguished efforts of Chester Morris, is a rather pure example of the quickie, good for a laugh or two if you are not too choosy."

— + New Theatre p18 O '36

THEY MET IN A TAXI—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"'They Met in a Taxi' is a modest little comedy that hasn't the heft for solo playing but in the duals it will stand on its own. While it totes no heavy box office draft, the cast is a capable one, and that's the picture's chief asset."

+ — Variety p16 S 16 '36

THREE-CORNERED HAT. See Il cappello a tre punte

THREE MARRIED MEN. Paramount 60min S 11 '36

Cast: Roscoe Karns, William Frawley, Lynne Overman, Mary Brian, George Barbier, Marjorie Gateson

Director: Eddie Buzzell

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It aims at being a pleasant little comedy rather than a tract on domestic society and, with that good intention in its favor, one must not reprove it too harshly for being funny only part of the time." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p576 S 19 '36

"A: hardly; Y: not the best; C: no."
Christian Century p1343 O 7 '36

"Mature."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 8 '36

"Mature. (D. A. R. says comedy depends on innuendo and will not please.)"
Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"A delightful domestic comedy, packed with the human element and full of situations which, though familiar, will be appreciated by many audiences. . . It is a theme in which treatment is everything and the direction is admirable. It may well give more pleasure than a much more pretentious film. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p177 O '36

"The adventures and embarrassments of newlyweds often form a basis for an amusing comedy. . . The picture is amusing of its type, but the general atmosphere seems unwholesome. Adolescents, 12-16: not recommended; children, 8-12: no interest."

+ — Motion Pict R p9 O '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M S '36

"A, Y and C: poor."

Parents' M p44 N '36

"Story only fair but held together by pertinent dialogue and humorous situations, resulting in many laughs. Mature."

+ — Sel Motion Pict p7 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It certainly seems as though [Dorothy Parker] has steered clear of her usual wit, for while there are undoubtedly a few good moments in the film, the sum and substance is by no means above the average of such comedies. . . Although it is nothing to write home about, it at least is never irritating or actually boring." Mordaunt Hall

+ — Boston Transcript p6 S 18 '36

"Freshness and laughter characterize this little comedy. Possibly because the clever Dorothy Parker worked on the screen version, giving sharpness and observation to the dialogue." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p31 O 24 '36

"Writer Owen Davis has a long memory. It stood him in good stead while preparing this yarn. . . Okay for audiences that have laughed at the same situations for twenty years . . . and still manage to find 'em funny." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p12 N 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] light domestic comedy of newlywed troubles mildly diverting and carries laughs."

+ — Film Daily p6 S 25 '36

"Family picture, short on names, longer on entertainment, 'Three Married Men' should please in small towns, on twin bills. It lacks strength for the de luxers."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p34 S 15 '36

"Adept performances and succinct comedy elevate this above the accepted dual bill placement. But the absence of really box office names undoubtedly will force 'Three Married Men' to get most of its coin on double programmers. Story content, while graduated for high laugh results, is a trifle too light for film to stand alone in most spots. . . Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell have done elegant work in transferring the Davis story to the screen and providing sparkling dialog."

+ — Variety p17 S 30 '36

THREE MEN ON A HORSE. Warner-First national 105min N 21 '36

Cast: Frank McHugh, Joan Blondell, Carol Hughes, Sam Levene, Allen Jenkins, Guy Kibbee, Teddy Hart

Director: Mervyn LeRoy

Based on the play of the same title by John Cecil Holm and George Abbott. "Frank McHugh is a gentle suburbanite who writes gift-card verses for savage old Guy Kibbee. His secret recreation is picking winning horses, for which he has some sort of psychic gift. But he never bets. That, he believes, would spoil the trick. Falling into the hands of a gang of unlucky gamblers, his guesses are taken seriously and the money begins pouring in. They kidnap him just as his grist of Mother's Day poetry is needed by Kibbee's printers." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: better not; C: no."
Christian Century p1670 D 9 '36

"[It] follows the play, with just as few scenes, just as much talk, and just as much drinking. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Too much gambling and drinking. Adults."
Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The blunt humor of this farce will entertain men; but its cheap jargon will not appeal to women." Adults. Mediocre." DAR

"A highly diverting farce, improbable but well cast and with sustained interest. Good race track scenes. Much drinking. Adults."
Nat Soc of New England Women

"A doubtful comedy filled with drinking, gambling and coarse language. Waste of time. Adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Adults." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"The humor and dialogue though crude and coarse provoke laughter and will appeal especially to men. Adults."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 26 '36

"This is the rollicking stage play, which is equally mirth-provoking on the screen, with its free-for-all comedy and pungent dialogue. . . It is somewhat rough and alcoholic as the theme implies; men will enjoy it most. Adolescents, 12-16: better not; children, 8-12: no."

+ — Motion Pict R p8 N '36

"This raucous comedy makes funny screen entertainment in spite of a lack of spontaneity and overstraining for comedy effects. Adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women O 28 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

"A: fairly good farce; Y: doubtful; C: no."
Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict p11 D 1 '36

"Family. Outstanding."

+ + Wkly Guide N 14 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Erwin Trowbridge comes to life . . . in the person of Frank McHugh. He is the harmless little fellow of 'Three Men on a Horse,' from which play Alex Yokel made a fortune and the chances are that the Warner Brothers will amass even a greater profit from their investment in the film version. Those who are devotees of horse racing will write down this picture as a 'must,' and others, after hearing of some of the incidental happenings, will probably want to see Erwin themselves." Mordaunt Hall

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 14 '36

"Neither as rowdy nor as funny as the stage play. [It is] a noisy film farce. Adults."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '36

"'Three Men on a Horse' is a failure, which goes to show that the best of [directors] can slip. . . . The characters shout at one another throughout the entire length of the picture, and not for more than ten seconds at a stretch is the screen silent. . . . The main weakness of the picture is fundamental. The story premise is interesting and fraught with great comedy possibilities, but none of its possibilities is realized. . . . Now that Mervyn has got this picture out of his system, we confidently can look forward to his giving us something more worthy of his established ability."

— Hollywood Spec p8 O 24 '36

"It is fast and amusing. . . . Here, we're sure, is a farce that will arouse your laughter. We like Frank McHugh as the timid Erwin; the three small-time bettors are briskly done by Sam Levene, Allen Jenkins, and Teddy Hart; there is a swell barkeep by Edgar Kennedy; and Joan Blondell does the very much repressed (in the screen version) ex-Follies sweetie of one of the dopsters." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills Liberty p43 D 12 '36

"Although 'Three Men on a Horse' carries on at the Fulton Theater stage in its ninety-sixth week, there is little reason to suppose that the Strand Theater screen will be vacated by the same racetrack comedy before the new year, for the film version of the play is every bit as sprightly as the original. In fact, it differs from the drama very little. . . . The picture is spiced with those same wise-cracking lines which have kept New Yorkers so constantly entertained on the stage. . . . Perhaps because Sam Levene and Teddy Hart, who were the original Patsy and Frankie on Broadway, lend such authority to the performance, the comedy retains much of its original stimulation, yet the entire cast falls into the hilarious stride, resulting in smooth and expert rowdiness. Frank McHugh is excellent as Erwin, greeting-card poet and psychic." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p24 N 26 '36

"Little need be said except that it is just as funny as the stage original still running at the Fulton Theater. That really should be enough. . . . Frank McHugh is the gifted Oiwin, a part into which he steps with such ease that it is evident Mr. McHugh deserves more recognition than his studio was formerly wont to accord him. Miss Blondell, in a smaller role than usual, is also much funnier than usual, a fact which both she and her employers might profitably note." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p30 N 27 '36

"[It] has been converted into an acceptably ribald film farce. . . . [It] makes for an evening, or afternoon, of hilarious and extremely improbable entertainment." B. R. C.

+ + N Y Times p39 N 26 '36

"The screen version is every bit as hilarious as the play from which it stems. . . . McHugh plays this fabulous hero for all he is worth. . . . Frankly, I despair to describe 'Three Men On a Horse' in wordy detail. My job is only to advise you to hop over to the Strand and see it for yourself and enjoy to the full its merry, cock-eyed, good natured fun and the work of a fine cast." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p39 N 27 '36

"'Three Men on a Horse' is an exact and careful picture of the play, and very funny. Frank McHugh's Oiwin and Joan Blondell's Mabel are both of Nobel Prize calibre, if the Nobel Prize is some day to be given cinema performers. . . . [It is] possibly not quite respectable, but certainly never a dull film." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p131 D 5 '36

"In this laugh-for-laugh and almost word-for-word transcription of the Broadway hit, Frank McHugh comes into his comic own as a writer of greeting-card verses. . . . Teddy Hart and Sam Levene, whom Mervyn LeRoy—producer and director of the film—snatched from the Broadway production, come close to trotting off with the picture."

+ News-Wk p20 N 28 '36

"Some of the funniest vernacular that was ever written is spoken in violent and high-strung volume. Frank McHugh, as Erwin, seems to be walking in his sleep, which is just what Erwin would do in the situation that befalls him. . . . Anyone with the slightest appreciation for artful idiom will find it all happily recorded in this screen version. 'Three Men on a Horse' is still a safe bet."

+ Stage p18 D '36

"Skillfully directed by Mervyn LeRoy, adorned with two members of the original stage cast (Teddy Hart and Sam Levene), 'Three Men on a Horse' is more than just a very funny picture. It has the authentic lilt and shuffle of that Broadway half-world whose deflated, hard-packed mirth had had no equal interpretation since the late Ring Lardner."

+ Time p42 N 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Uproarious as a stage play, this emerges as only mildly amusing screen fare, chiefly because of lengthy running time, lack of action, a too-close adherence to the original in background and setting, and a script that is entirely too wordy. The robust, racy lines of the legitimate production could not be used in the screen version, making the whole affair a rather wishy-washy transcription of a play that was characterized by outspoken heartiness. Family."

+ — Box Office p63 O 17 '36

"[It] is a riot of fun and laughter for young and old. . . . It kept capacity houses at the Strand, in continuous fits of laughter. The cast, while not filled with exceptional box-office names, is perfectly suited for this production. . . . [It] presents the exhibitor with dozens of ways for exploitation, almost any of which will sell the picture. . . . Sell the public on the picture as one of the biggest laughs in months."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 N 28 '36

"We can't see how it can miss wherever folks want to laugh. All the comedy of the stage version has been preserved, and some more added via new scenes. Frank McHugh does a grand job as Erwin. . . . The pressbook on this production emphasizes the laugh angle, and if you play it up that way it can't miss at your box-office, for it is one of the naturals when it comes to the heavy guffaws."

+ Film Daily p9 N 13 '36

THREE MEN ON A HORSE—Continued

"The highly successful stage farce about race track gambling, here brought to the screen by Mervyn LeRoy for Warners, is raucous and ribald entertainment with an undeniably high laugh content that will put it over for substantial returns in many quarters. Transference of the John Cecil Holm play to the screen somehow emphasizes its maniacal absurdities and the fact that every character is a caricature and every situation a phoney, but the snappy and slangy gag-lines and the wildly farced action come so fast that there is little to do but let go and laugh."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 S 29 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 S 30 '36

"Warners have taken the stage hit, cast it with pulling names, presented it almost exactly as in the stage version, with the result fast comedy that will probably have a bit more appeal to men than women but a show that ought to land in upper grosses. Estimate: winner, with plenty to spare."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 O 15 '36

"'Three Men on a Horse' on celluloid is an even better laugh-grabber than its stage counterpart, and assuredly box office. There have been practically no alterations and only a few additions, and whatever was added is on the profit side. . . 'Three Men on a Horse' looked like a natural for the screen in legit form. Now there's no doubt of it."

+ Variety p18 D 2 '36

"It has much of the rowdy pungency of 'The Front Page' and preserves all the best elements from its own stage progenitor. Lines are racy, pace seems fast, despite overlength of preview, because dialog fascinates and suspense is well built, and humor springs solidly out of main situation and its diverting side issues. When 1,000 feet have been cut from first assembly, as will be done before release, picture will sprint the full distance with unflagging hilarity."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 29 '36

THREE MESQUITEERS. Republic 60min S 10 '36

Cast: Robert Livingston. Ray Corrigan. Syd Saylor

Director: Ray Taylor

This is the first of a series of eight outdoor Westerns. A western melodrama involving disabled world war veterans who seek homesteads in the west.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Excellent riding helps make this a stimulating and exciting Western. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A, Y and C: good Western."

Parents' M p44 N '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Republic introduces a new cowboy trio, 'The Three Mesquiteers,' in a picture that has all the earmarks of being the forerunner in a series of popular western dramas. Family."

+ Box Office p23 S 12 '36

"This is much more than a routine Western for there is a very original and graphic story that is built up with fine characterization and plenty of human interest touches."

+ Film Daily p10 O 2 '36

"First of Republic's new series of eight Westerns in which a trio of riding and shooting pals will lead, this variant of the standard formula will satisfy in the standard action spots."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 2 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 S 5 '36

"Estimate: okey Western."

+ Phila Exhibitor p35 S 15 '36

"Republic has turned out a better than average run-of-the-mill Western in 'The Three Mesquiteers.' . . Displaying smart showmanship, the ending of the picture leaves 'The Three Mesquiteers' together riding on their merry way for further adventures. While not in the serial class, the ending gives the distinct impression that these three will be seen again, a point that exhibitors should not overlook when this one clicks in the neighborhoods and with family trade, as it obviously will. Title of the picture has excellent exploitation possibilities, and the series should go to town if standard of this one is maintained throughout."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 2 '36

THREE SMART GIRLS. Universal 84min D 20 '36

Cast: Deanna Durbin. Nan Grey. Barbara Reed. Charles Winninger. Binnie Barnes. Alice Brady. Mischa Auer

Director: Henry Koster

"A story of three girls who return to their father in America to keep him from marrying a fortune hunter." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

"Well directed, good photography, and highly amusing. The entire cast is excellent and the singing of Deanna Durbin, Universal's 13-year-old singing marvel, is very fine. Miss Durbin is really the leading lady. The picture is almost a starred production. Family."

+ Wkly Guide D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"To Universal must go the acclaim of the whole picture industry for the production of 'Three Smart Girls,' not because it will turn out about the best gross of the year or the month; not because of the production of a great story; not because of the great assembly of stars; but because Universal has taken a story of little consequence and, through fine writing, acting, direction, and production, has made one of the best pieces of entertainment this reviewer has seen in many months—with a cast of players many of them unknown but who will be plenty known after the picture gets out. . . The three smart girls of the picture are Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey and Barbara Reed, all newcomers, all from the Universal stock company and all certain to go places, particularly Miss Durbin, who is assuredly the greatest find of the year. . . [She] is one of the most astonishing personalities to come to the screen in a long time. She can act, sings gloriously and is most pleasant to look at."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 D 1 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 D 1 '36

"Favored with unusual showmanship in production, direction and story, the trio of ingenuities in Universal's 'Three Smart Girls' distinguishes this as one of the outstanding and surprise pictures of the season. Without discounting the other featured players the girls will get highest critical and popular acclaim for entertainment which will delight any audience and hearten any exhibitor. Smartly sold to create initial momentum, the picture should roll up handsome grosses. . . Sensational is the projection of a new star in the making, Deanna Durbin, in her screen bow. With astute handling to exploit the gifts and graces displayed as an actress and a songstress, this youngster, still in her teens, will quickly reach the film peerage."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 1 '36

TRAITOR. Puritan 57min Ag 29 '36

Cast: Tim McCoy. Frances Grant. Carl Hackett

Director: Sig Neufeld

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency S 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Plenty of action pervades this Western in which stalwart Tim McCoy plays the role of a Texas Ranger. . . Picture will please action fans."

+ Film Daily p13 N 6 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 N 5 '36

"McCoy's Westerns have been of good standard. This is no exception. Estimate: okey."

+ Phila Exhibitor p40 O 15 '36

"Not the usual Westerner. . . Stage-coaches are up-to-date Detroit models, haciendas have clean glass windows and cowboy garb is natty. Plenty of hard riding, though, in spite of these advances. Okay for a dual bill. . . Plot gets blurred toward the end which is somewhat of a letdown. Otherwise handled in even manner."

+ — Variety p19 N 4 '36

TROUBLE AHEAD. Atlantic 75min S 17 '36

Cast: Charlie Farrell. Margot Grahame. Gregory Ratoff

Director: Monty Banks

A dialogue film produced in England. "It tells of the annoyances that beset an American film idol, lured to London by an enterprising press agent to make a film for a producer who wants to make a screen star out of a blonde cutie in whom he is interested." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This trite story has a most obvious ending. General patronage."

— Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"We hope the reciprocal trade agreements will not encourage importation of tired little productions like this. . . Gregory Ratoff does his best to save the proceedings. Family."

— + Christian Science Monitor p17 O 31 '36

"Perhaps the most completely uninspired photoplay since the early flicker days is 'Trouble Ahead,' so jarring an importation of cinematic clichés that even a fervent interpretation by Gregory Ratoff of a rôle of the sort he does best cannot save it from almost immediate oblivion." J. T. M.

— — N Y Times p26 S 21 '36

"It is a shambling and bogus little weakling too feeble to withstand Broadway competition. It adds little to the stature of British film production, and will not, I feel safe in predicting, cause any uneasiness to other candidates for the best film of the year." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p16 S 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Produced in London by Pathe, this importation is light, pleasant entertainment as program pictures go. Though never rising to its potential heights, which sounder production and sharp supervision would have attained for it in capable Hollywood hands, it has frequent moments of charm in its late sequences that effectively play on patrons' romantic emotions."

+ — Film Daily p7 O 19 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 S 22 '36

"It has names, but they act like beginners. It has comedy, but it is all muffed amidst bad recording, putrid direction. Farrell is wooden. So is his leading lady. Margot Grahame looks like a mummy. Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."

— — Phila Exhibitor p39 O 1 '36

"This light romantic comedy will not heighten Charles Farrell's popularity. Story has too many Cinderella trimmings at the outset to hold interest. Hollywood producers tried doing the same sugary type of yarn with Farrell not long ago with sad results. This English effort is equally flat in attempting to show Farrell the comeback paths. Despite the slim, easily recognized story, Monty Banks has done a commendable job knitting together uninteresting developments."

— + Variety p23 O 21 '36

TUGBOAT PRINCESS. Columbia 68min O 15 '36

Cast: Walter C. Kelly. Edith Fellows. Valerie Hobson

Director: David Selman

"The differences between two tugboat captains are settled by an orphan girl and their rivalry is changed to a friendship." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The picture is a routine job and a bit too familiar to be continuously interesting. But Walter Kelly, forsaking his Virginia judgeship to go to sea provides amusing interludes, and Edith Fellows and Valerie Hobson play well." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p144 N 14 '36

"An unpretentious story . . . is told with sympathy and understanding. . . Good acting, capable direction and a simple, heartwarming story are combined in a pleasant and interesting film. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A, Y & C: fair."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p11 D 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

+ — Motion Pict Daily p7 O 22 '36

TUNDRA. Burroughs-Tarzan 78min Ag 15 '36

Cast: Del Cambre

Director: Norman Dawn

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Scenically beautiful and abounding in thrilling adventure, the picture will hold the interest of the entire family. . . Many interesting scenes of wild animal life add to the educational as well as the entertainment value of the picture. Excellent for type. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent for schools because of pictures of wild life though not exactly accurate as to scenes or the tundra. Family. Good." DAR

"This film abounds in entertainment values. . . Details of Alaskan life seem at times hardly authentic but the picture is thoroughly enjoyable for any audience from beginning to end." Nat Soc of New England Women

TUNDRA—Continued

"Remarkable and authentic photography. Scenes of the Alaskan Tundra and the breaking up of the ice are breath-taking and portray the majestic grandeur of this northern country. . . Excellent direction and well presented. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 10 '36

"Taking as its background one of the places on earth that still possesses glamour and the possibility of thrilling adventure, the picture gets away to a fine start. But the story fails to live up to the grandeur of the setting. The continuity could have been better handled, and in moments of crisis the emotional effect is marred by insensitive handling of incident and by uninspired acting. As a story it is mediocre, but as a picture of the Alaskan tundra it is excellent entertainment which the family will enjoy and which children will hail with delight because of fascinating closeups of Arctic animals. Adolescents, 12-16 & children, 8-12: yes."

Motion Pict R p8 N '36

"Superb, realistic photography, excellent shots of wild animals in their natural habitat, and a story full of drama and suspense add to the interest and entertainment. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 7 '36

"A trivial story binds together this saga of the Alaskan wilderness. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency O 22 '36

"Family & junior matinee."

Sel Motion Pict p3 N 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"While the Robinson Crusoe plot coats the film with a faint artificiality, one forgets its self-consciousness as the picture proceeds and becomes fascinated with the adventures of 'the flying doctor' and his two bear cub companions, Tom and Jerry. But it is not alone the action of the piece which proves alluring, it is also the really beautiful photography, so clear and natural one can almost smell the frostbitten air." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p23 D 3 '36

"'Tundra' is not a bad film for children. It might well have been adapted from a juvenile book, perhaps one called 'The Bear Cub Twins,' or 'How Tom and Jerry Helped the Doctor Escape.' [It is] quite frankly an adventure story, with no pretense at acting or plot. . . [It consists of] a long and varied series of well photographed, well directed outdoor thrills." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p39 D 8 '36

"[It] is a series of awesome glimpses of the Northland into which has been woven a not too intrusive story. . . The producers have succeeded in producing a remarkable document of the Alaskan wilds. . . As the doctor, Del Cambre's calm performance during the weeks of isolation is a welcome departure from the crazed frenzy that Hollywood usually demands of its stranded men." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p31 D 3 '36

"'Tundra' has isolated moments of fine photographic beauty and others of considerable excitement. . . The film is, of its kind, first rate entertainment. . . [It] is well worth seeing." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p33 D 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As a pictorial exposition, 'Tundra' . . . has plenty to offer, but as entertainment it proves little except that the aforementioned territory is bad land to pick out for hitch-hiking. May help on a dual bill in a pinch, though the almost total absence of plot and its length are handicaps. . . The main actor . . . is given miserable lines and seldom gets the opportunity to prove anything. . . Biggest trouble is that it fails to measure up to preceding epics of this type. It lacks sustained action; the most dramatic and thrilling episodes are left hanging in mid-air. The picture is chockful of highly impossible feats and escapes, even the splendid photography and intimate shots of wild animals fail to offset it. . . Production has been poorly edited and badly cut. Scenes where he stumbles onto the epidemic-swept village, with only skeletons perched in the various huts, is ghastly and unessential. As is the phoney fight with a band of dogs."

— + Variety p13 D 9 '36

TWO IN A CROWD. Universal 85min Ag 30 '36

Cast: Joan Bennett, Joel McCrea, Elisha Cook, Jr. Alison Skipworth

Director: Alfred E. Green

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"That the halves of a thousand dollar bill should bring two young strangers together for no more exciting adventure than a stock horse race is the real tragedy of this picture. In grinding it out to its last, weatherbeaten reel, the producers have spoiled forever a perfectly good, novel idea. . . That Big Race solution is wearing rather thin and has no place in credible drama." T. J. Fitzmorris

— America p600 S 26 '36

"A: hardly; Y: probably amusing; C: doubtful."

Christian Century p1343 O 7 '36

"Mediocre. Mature and 14-18." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"The story drags a great deal of the time and lacks a coherent central plot. Altho a few of the humorous situations evoke a genuine laugh, the majority seem forced, lack spontaneity, and fall rather flat. 12-16: passable; 8-12: no." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul S 26 '36

"An improbable story, filled with absurd complications and far-fetched situations, which is redeemed by the laughs furnished by Henry Armetta, Andy Clyde, Nat Pendleton and Donald Meek. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"This [is] a weak and unconvincing story with which a good cast struggles vainly. Adults: good; 14-18: poor; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This well-acted and smoothly directed comedy is a pleasant mixture of comedy, hokum and mild excitement. Amusing. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A weak story with a series of events having no focal center. Fairly entertaining in spots but jumbled and far too alcoholic. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A mediocre picture with an unethical plot and too many episodes in which the comedy element is slapstick and the atmosphere generally unwholesome. Waste of time. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"This entertaining, rather unusual comedy is enhanced by many clever situations, pleasing characterizations and good direction. Family-mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 14 '36

"A cheerful picture with a good deal of fun in it which could have been improved by cutting out some of the scenes and by developing the humour latent in those which remained. Very well acted, especially in the smaller parts. Good, clear sound and adequate photography. Suitability: family; suitable for children over 10."

+ — Mo Film Bul p155 S 30 '36

"Adolescents 12-16: passable; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R p8 S '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The plot is a bit complicated which makes the story drag at times, but there are plenty of amusing situations and a light comedy touch is retained throughout. Family."

+ — Nat Bd of R M S '36

"This is an entertaining comedy, perhaps somewhat too lengthy, but with a 'different' story, light, frothy dialogue and slow-moving but capable direction. A spirit of justice and fair play pervades the entire production. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women O 14 '36

"A and Y: passable; C: little interest."
Parents' M p44 N '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p11 O 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Two in a Crowd' is rampant with whimsy, hifalutin' dialogue and incredible situations. . . The horse, whose name does not appear in the cast, is easily the most competent actor, though Andy Clyde, Donald Meek and Reginald Denny, are occasionally amusing."

— Boston Transcript p6 S 18 '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 19 '36

"'Two in a Crowd' with Joel McCrea and Joan Bennett, has a Runyonesque idea as a starter, but it worries it thin trying to build it into a feature-length picture. . . We were almost as impatient with it as we were with the interminable trailer the Warners introduced to herald the arrival of 'Anthony Adverse.'"

F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p25 O 5 '36

"A typical variation of 'Broadway Bill', 'It Happened One Night' and other films of this genre, 'Two in a Crowd' is light and amiable entertainment with no great punch." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p17 O 5 '36

News-Wk p27 S 26 '36

"G-men, gangsters, show business and a horse race have all been crammed into a yarn that never develops a focal point. In an effort to include every ingredient that's ever been dubbed box office, cohesion has been replaced by structural chaos. . . Alfred Green is a talented director, but after all a man needs more than just a capable cast if he's to turn out a satisfactory fillum." Herb Sterne

— Script p10 O 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Slovenly scenario and indifferent dialog job condemn what might have been a bright comedy to the inferior half of the duals and defeat the efforts of a number of competent players to pull a promising idea over the handicap of bad writing. . . Writing is worse than inept; it's clumsy."

— Variety p15 O 7 '36

U

UNDER COVER MAN. Supreme-Republic
55min S 24 '36

Cast: Johnny Mack Brown, Suzanne Kaaren, Ted Adams

Director: Albert Ray

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 8 '36

"A, Y & C: good. Western."

Parents' M p32 D '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A Western that, without once stepping off the beaten track of sagebrush plots, displays more than the average allotment of brains, both in the story and in its treatment. . . It will be well liked wherever Westerns are on the regular bill-of-fare."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 10 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 S 14 '36

"Estimate: okey Brown."

+ Phila Exhibitor p38 O 1 '36

"This is a right neat little Western, one that will bring the kiddies and some of the adults to the edges of their seats. Johnny Mack Brown, the star, is aided in fine manner by all those connected with the production to keep it from being maudlin. It will be an added starter to Republic's program of releases."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 10 '36

UNDER YOUR SPELL. 20th century-Fox 62min
N 6 '36

Cast: Lawrence Tibbett, Wendy Barrie, Gregory Ratoff, Arthur Treacher

Director: Otto Ludwig Preminger

Music & lyrics: Arthur Schwartz, Howard Dietz

Music director: Arthur Lange

"Story hinges on the activities of opera star, Tibbett, who tires of publicity as the price of fame and hides away in New Mexico, where he was born, leaving behind him a batch of contracts that his manager made. One contract in particular, entered into with a self-willed and spoiled wealthy society girl to sing at a party in order that she may win a silly bet, causes all the trouble." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Lawrence Tibbett's singing is the highlight of the picture. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Lawrence Tibbett's voice is brilliantly recorded and Wendy Barrie is excellent in a comedy role, as is also Arthur Treacher. The story is only fair. Good entertainment if you like Lawrence Tibbett. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture, weighed down by artificial situations and hackneyed plot, is wholly lacking in distinction except for the glorious singing of Lawrence Tibbett." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

Fox W Coast Bul N 14 '36

"Lawrence Tibbett is given every opportunity to display his magnificent voice in this charming but light musical comedy. . . Enjoyable entertainment for all but a particular treat for music lovers. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 2 '36

"Judged from the musical viewpoint, this photoplay is delightful. Mr. Tibbett uses every opportunity to sing. The story, however, is trivial and the direction lacks distinction. Nevertheless, just the one scene of Mr. Tibbett as Mephistopheles is sufficient reason for the production." S. M. Mullen

+ — Motion Pict & Family p5 N 15 '36

"Mr. Tibbett's voice was never better, and he shows definite talent as a comedian. . . The film is one of the best of the musical productions, perhaps because it is not overloaded by operatic selections, so often dragged in to display the singer's virtuosity. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: yes."

+ Motion Pict R p10 N '36

"The glorious voice and histrionic ability of Lawrence Tibbett, and the comedy of Gregory Ratoff and Arthur Treacher cannot save this picture from mediocrity. The producers seemed

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

UNDER YOUR SPELL—Continued

overanxious to make use of Mr. Tibbett's voice since he was forced to sing at every conceivable time and in many queer places. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"The play is bright and sparkling, in serious vein," and is a step toward better musical films."

+ Sel Motion Pict p16 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Film is worth seeing but Mr. Tibbett and his cohorts deserve better. Family."

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '36

"To Lawrence Tibbett's splendid voice and the comedy of Gregory Ratoff and Arthur Treacher goes the credit for saving an otherwise very poor picture. Lawrence Tibbett dominates it from the start with his superb voice. . . The direction, as a whole, is rather heavy and spotty, and too much time is spent in setting the scenes. . . Wendy Barrie's picturesque beauty and obvious ability are wasted on a role entirely unsuited to her. . . To the writers of the screen play . . . goes credit for a valiant attempt to improve a trite and usual theme. Given bad material to start with, they improve it with dialogue that helps to move the story along, and well spaced comedy situations that got laughs from the audience every time." John Christensen

+ Hollywood Spec p11 N 7 '36

"By some unaccountable mischance, perhaps the strangely inept music of Arthur Schwartz or the mediocre lyrics by Howard Dietz, perhaps the absence of well-worn arias by Rossini, Verdi or Leoncavallo, the new Lawrence Tibbett film, 'Under Your Spell,' has been consigned to the limbo of a secondary billing. . . The picture itself is not nearly as black as this fortuitous circumstance has painted it, however. On the contrary, Mr. Tibbett gives just as good an account of himself vocally, in spite of the words and music, as he did in 'Metropolitan.' . . His manifest weakness as a screen artist has always been his essential incongruity in the conventional 'romantic' context." B. R. C.

+ — N Y Times p15 N 7 '36

"It is difficult to write with any degree of persuasiveness about 'Under Your Spell' . . . because even the most casual references to its plot are likely to stiffen your sales resistance. Even so, 'Under Your Spell' possesses a really skillful physical production, has a certain freshness and individual style and emerges as a considerably more entertaining photoplay than you might suspect from a brief outline of its plot." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p15 N 9 '36

"Movies, just movies." John Mosher
New Yorker p117 N 14 '36

"Lawrence Tibbett's first picture of the year is a very different concoction from any prepared for him in the past. While allowing a dash of opera for the aria lovers among the popular baritone's fans, the producers have provided a tuneful score, a swift, light comedy to romp through, and a chance for Tibbett to be himself. . . [He] takes to the new type of vehicle with gusto. Besides singing as often as anyone could wish, he is both personable and humorous in the role of Lawrence Tibbett in modern clothes."

+ News-Wk p41 N 7 '36

"Just to hear Lawrence Tibbett sing is worth the price of about six double features, but it does seem too bad that a fellow of his standing shouldn't be provided with a bangup story and a superproduction. . . This fragile story is shot in jerky sequences and directed rather ponderously—until the last reel when it picks up and finishes with a bang. . . If Lawrence Tibbett ever gets a story wherein he can cut loose with complete boyish abandon, he will panic the country." Rob Wagner

+ — Script p11 N 7 '36

"'Under Your Spell' represents a determined effort to sell Lawrence Tibbett, whose appeal has heretofore been confined to music lovers, to the cinemasses. . . Instead of warmed-over grand opera, the musical accompaniment consists mainly of popular airs. . . Unfortunately, the unpretentiousness intended to endear 'Under Your Spell' to large numbers of cinemaddicts is of a sort more likely to ensure it second rating on double-feature programs."

+ — Time p37 N 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Lawrence Tibbett's singing voice was never more magnificent—Gregory Ratoff never came closer to stealing a picture—Arthur Treacher was never more dolefully humorous. Tibbett . . . battles gamely through the rest of the unimportant story. Family."

+ — Box Office p35 N 7 '36

"Lawrence Tibbett's glorious singing gives this picture its entertainment value. In addition there is the comedy by Gregory Ratoff and Arthur Treacher. The story itself, however, is light weight and hardly worthy of Tibbett's talents. In foreign markets it may mean more, due to the Tibbett voice and the easy going mood maintained. . . In covering up on the weak story he is forced to sing too often. . . The picture's real weakness is its lack of forceful situations."

+ — Film Daily p11 N 4 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 O 17 '36

"Tibbett will have more popular appeal in this, with his comedy moments competing for his attention with his singing. His voice, of course, is tops, with music lovers certain to enjoy the picture. Able support is given him by a competent cast but the result will depend entirely on the Tibbett draw."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 N 1 '36

"Featherweight musical striving to present Lawrence Tibbett in a light, racy story with results summing up on the weaker side. Flimsy yarn offers slim opportunity for any histrionics, even for comedy, and singing demands don't fit in any too snugly. . . Direction by Otto Ludwig Preminger is spotty, not overcoming any of the story's shortcomings. . . A sturdier story would serve his direction better. This is his first Hollywood directional task."

+ — Variety p12 N 18 '36

"'Under Your Spell' is a decidedly well-balanced class production. While naturally aimed to capitalize on Lawrence Tibbett's voice, picture contains a down-to-earth story and fast hokem comedy, cleverly balanced to satisfy all audiences. Given good production value and colorfully mounted, it should do okay. . . Tibbett is excellent. At his very best in his singing numbers, he nevertheless does well in the romantic sequences and lighter comedy moments."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 31 '36

V

VAARAN POJKE. Europa 93min O 9 '36

Cast: Edvard Persson. Nils Wahlbom. Tollie Zellman. Karin Ekelund

Director: Arne Bornesburgh

Swedish dialogue film produced in Sweden without English sub-titles. Also known as Our Boy. "[It is the tale] of a maid seeking the father of her 7-year old son. She marries another man and when the father of the child appears, amusing situations develop." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"So full of talk that it could only interest someone acquainted with the language. Mature."

Wkly Guide O 31 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"That excellent Swedish comedian, Edvard Person, is again demonstrating his popularity with the Scandinavian-speaking film public of New York in 'Vaaran Pojke' ('Our Boy'), an amusing mixture of fun, sentiment and music."

H. T. S.
+ N Y Times p21 O 10 '36

"Swedish residents of New York should find 'Vaaran Pojke' entirely to their liking. An amiable and well-acted little mixture of humor, music and sentiment, it features Edvard Person, an excellent comedian and already a great favorite with local Scandinavian audiences."

William Boehnel
+ N Y World-Telegram p29 O 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is an] amusing film."
+ Film Daily p8 O 12 '36

"This lengthy Swedish-made film follows the general pattern of pictures made in that country, excepting that it is more tedious, more talkative and less active than its predecessors. Supposed to star Edvard Person, it offers him the unopposed center of the spotlight as he wanders through what is virtually a monolog. At least part of the audience thought either he or his word-gargling funny, a commendable point in such a monotonous production."

— Variety p23 O 21 '36

VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE.

Paramount 109min O 2 '36

Cast: Gladys George, Arline Judge, John Howard, Dudley Digges, Harry Carey, Isabel Jewell

Director: Wesley Ruggles

Based on the novel of the same title by Barry Benefield. It is the story of a woman of questionable morals whose life is altered and regenerated by the unconventional adoption of an orphaned boy and a girl found in a train wreck.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This film is an excellent example of Hollywood's salvaging powers. . . . Contrary to the noisy assertions of obstructionists and die-hards, the process of cleaning up has once again proved not only a moral necessity but a definite aesthetic advantage. Stripped of all that was questionable, the touching story of Carrie Snyder is unhindered in making a deep and sympathetic impression upon the spectator. . . . There can be no quarrel with the treatment of this production, but the nature of the story makes it obviously unsuited to young audiences."

T. J. Fitzmorris
+ America p24 O 10 '36

"A: very good; Y: unsuitable; C: no."
Christian Century p1479 N 4 '36

"An outstanding production. Adults & young people." Am Legion Auxiliary

"This dubious screen material is presented with a delicacy and good taste which lessens its offense. Adults: interesting; 8-18: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Outstanding. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent. This very human, engrossing picture is difficult to evaluate. [It is] expertly produced, skillfully enacted, with no offensive scenes. Sensational exploitation of this picture would make its emotional appeal insidious; dignified advertising will keep it acceptable for adults." DAR

"The melodramatic conclusion, in which the heroine personally directs a jail break and receives a prison term for her part in it strains the story's plausibility and definitely weakens it. Certain fine distinctions in ethical values make this a film for mature audiences only."

Nat Soc of New England Women
"This picture provides much food for thought. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul S 26 '36

"The production is slow paced depending much on dialogue but holds the interest throughout, the subject matter having been handled in good taste at all times. . . . An hour of interesting and thoughtful entertainment. Mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 16 '36

"Mature."
Jt Estimates S 15 '36

Reviewed by H. M. Le Sourd
Motion Pict & Family p6 N 15 '36

"Very good. Adults."
+ Motion Pict Guide D '36

"There is nothing in the treatment to offend good taste. . . . Here is novel and challenging subject matter. . . . The first half of the picture is exceptionally well done. The latter half is not so engrossing. . . . Adaptation and direction avoid pitfalls of sentimentality and tactfully retain the vigorous and dramatic flavor of the original. Adolescents, 12-16: unsuitable; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R p10 O '36

"Those who read and enjoyed this popular novel may be assured that the picture is faithful in both theme and flavor to the original, barring some minor changes in the ending. Able direction and a good cast make the most of a fine script with dialogue that has vitality and is natural and clever. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 9 '36

"Adults."
Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A & Y: interesting and thought-provoking entertainment; C: mature."
Parents' M p32 D '36

"Mature."
Sel Motion Pict p4 O 1 '36

"Mature."
Wkly Guide O 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The first half of the picture is utterly beguiling. . . . The youngsters are as unlike the usual picture [children] as could be imagined. . . . When the children are grown up . . . the attention is inclined to relax. The final series of episodes, culminating in Carrie's unsuccessful efforts to arrange a jail-break are somewhat implausible. Whatever the vagaries of the plot, however, Miss George keeps all Carrie's actions on a plane of reality."

M. E. P.
+ Boston Transcript p3 O 31 '36

"In transferring the story to the screen there has fortunately been no attempt to change the nature of the story. . . . Gladys George, who plays the role, gives to it a sincerity and truthfulness that carries it along unqualified by the emotionalism of the opening scenes, into a genuinely moving story. . . . There are tears in it, but there is a glow in it too, for it is a valiant story, and one that is well worth a tear or two." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p37 N '36

"[It] is a sincerely moving drama, especially in the early scenes. Later the film runs aground on melodramatic shoals. On the whole a tasteful production, thoroughly well cast. Adults & young people."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 7 '36

"There is not enough entertainment in the story to warrant a running time of one hour and fifty minutes. The leading part is played by a stage actress, unskilled in portraying emotions in such an intimate medium as the screen. . . . The book . . . had an exceedingly large sale owing to the charming literary style in which [it was] presented. A successful motion picture can not be made by such a simple method as photographing the skeleton of a successful book. It is the flesh of a book, not its bones, that makes it popular. . . Paramount displays more bravery than wisdom in selecting the book for screening. It reflects good taste in handling a subject censorable in essence, but did not seem quite up to the task of making it into a picture with strong emotional appeal. I do not mean that it is not worth seeing."

VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE—

Continued

Hollywood Spec p11 S 26 '36

"Miss George will win you as the ex-careless Carrie here as definitely as Belle Bennett won you in 'Stella Dallas.' Our only complaint against this panorama of valiancy is its length. And it is long." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 O 31 '36

"A progression of heroic heart-tugs. In the opening sequences of the film and in his direction of John Wray, Wesley Ruggles displays a talent for handling realistic material that is thoroughly wasted in light of the deluge of cheap emotionalism that follows. Film estimate: you could do worse."

+ — New Theatre p34 N '36

"There is enough material for at least three screen dramas in 'Valiant Is the Word for Carrie.' . . A handsome production, the knowing direction of Wesley Ruggles and several fine performances deserve a more adroitly conceived scenario. . . The early portions of the fable are rich in film possibilities and they have been ably exploited in the show. Claude Binyon has followed the original in plodding fashion and he has cluttered his adaptation with unnecessary dialogue. 'Valiant Is the Word for Carrie' is such excellent and engrossing entertainment for much of the time that its lack of unity and verbosity become grave faults."

Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p21 O 8 '36

"This is a surprisingly tender and quiet tale, set very definitely in a mood probably taken from the novel. . . The sudden flash of melodrama at the end is the only unconvincing moment of the whole film. . . 'Valiant Is the Word for Carrie' is well made, intelligent and sympathetic." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p19 O 8 '36

"The cold, harsh, critical opinion is that the new film is too long in the telling. Its running time is a fraction short of two hours, or about thirty minutes overtime for a truly effective presentation of its material. . . The virtue of the story rested in the simplicity, tenderness and wisdom of its earlier scenes. . . After such a splendid introduction to the principal characters, we cannot avoid a feeling of disappointment when the picture treats of the family's problems after the children reach maturity. . . The misfortune is that 'valiant' is only one of the words for 'Carrie'; another would be 'disproportionate.' The picture takes too long, although doing it well, to introduce a little which is not well done at all." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p27 O 8 '36

"The words 'ponderous' or 'static' or 'cumbersome' or 'pedestrian' might very easily be substituted for 'valiant' in 'Valiant Is the Word for Carrie.' . . Although the film is a dignified and sober dramatic transcription of the novel of the same name, its pace is so lethargic, that it destroys much of the sympathetic and understanding treatment that the director and star have brought to the interpretation of the chief character. . . Despite the sincerity of Wesley Ruggles' direction, 'Valiant' is only a fair to middling film." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p33 O 8 '36

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p95 O 17 '36

"'Carrie' makes great demands; Miss George troups to such advantage that she is able to dominate every split-second of the hour-and-fifty-minute unreeling. . . The Breen office, surprisingly enough, permitted this adventure of a fancy lady to pass its portals with fewer extractions than usual. Claude Binyon's adaptation job is smooth; the dialogue has naturalness, ably entices poignancy from the heart in honest style. . . Two youngsters are mighty fine; it's difficult to recall just when such persuasive youngsters as Jackie Moran and Charlene Wyatt have been seen on the screen."

+ — Script p10 O 17 '36

"The presence of Miss Gladys George on the nation's screens is reason enough for an editorial huzzah in behalf of 'Valiant Is the Word for Carrie.' . . Her debut in films is auspicious in itself, but we certainly could have done with something meatier than 'Valiant.' Mr. Benefield's novel . . . found a great deal more than half its strength in its writing. It was a slow, casual little story. . . The film manages to catch some of the two-way personality of Carrie in the first half; but the regeneration period lags and lags and lags. . . Valiant is the word for Miss George."

+ — Stage p16 N '36

"Recently as rare as the redskin, the noble prostitute was once a cinema favorite. Carrie Snyder, as impersonated with enormous gusto and skill by Actress Gladys George . . . rates with the noblest of them all. . . The rating of 'Valiant is the Word for Carrie' against other noble-prostitute pictures is equally favorable. Adapted from Barry Benefield's novel, astutely directed by Wesley Ruggles, it is a slick, high-powered old-school tear-jerker, guaranteed to please exhibitors by making their patrons miserable."

+ — Time p64 O 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A class production from every angle, human, appealing and natural in its abundance of entertainment value, Wesley Ruggles' production of the Barry Benefield novel is a certain audience pleaser with high revenue potentialities. Family."

+ — Box Office p19 S 26 '36

"Mark this down as one of the best pictures of the year. Warm, human, it will tug at the hearts of all types of audiences. It should play to splendid business and get much word-of-mouth advertising."

+ — Film Daily p8 S 22 '36

"Here is one hour and 50 minutes of valiance, of warm heart interest, delightful comedy and engrossing incident. But there is too much for one picture. It does not sustain the emotional pull of the almost perfect first half. If Paramount cannot bring itself to sacrifice any of the footage shown last night, it should release the picture in two parts, for which there is a natural time-lapse break, and run the picture in two parts. Tightened up so that the more loosely-woven second half will sustain its hold, this beautifully made and richly entertaining narrative screenplay should make one of the strong boxoffice draws of the year and one of the most talked-about."

Hollywood Reporter p3 S 18 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p2 S 19 '36

"Estimate: good job; deserves special handling."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p35 O 1 '36

"Novel of a scarlet woman whose wickedness is mixed with some good becomes a moving, if cumbersome, screen piece. It crams into its 109 minutes much that could have been left out and it fails to hold up as well in the second half as it does in the first. With advertising and publicity aid easy, 'Valiant' should be a profitable undertaking. . . This is Gladys George's first picture. It is a starter for the actress which should lead her to box-office manna."

+ — Variety p15 O 14 '36

"Playing the heart strings for the masses without offending the taste of the more discriminating, and from every dramatic and production standpoint highly commendable and dependable entertainment, 'Valiant Is the Word for Carrie' is in its own right and its exploitation possibilities one of the season's standout pictures. . . [It] is an offering of fine emotional appeal and irreproachable character from a tale which missed being banned from films only [because of] Ruggles' intelligence and courage."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 18 '36

W

WALKING ON AIR. RKO 68min S 11 '36

Cast: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern, Jessie Ralph, Henry Stephenson

Director: Joseph Santley

Music & lyrics: Bert Kalmar, Sid Silvers, Harry Ruby

Music director: Nathaniel Shilkret

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The only variations on an old theme are provided by the radio setting and by the method adopted to prevent the marriage, which is too ridiculous to be funny. But the songs are tuneful and well rendered, the acting is not subtle, but it is adequate to the demands of the story, and a pleasant good humour runs through the film. These and the good technical qualities cannot conceal the commonplaces of the story, but they make it possible to accept them again. Suitability: family."

+ — Mo Film Bul p178 O '36

"Innocuous farce comedy concerning a wilful girl whose father tries to prevent an unsuitable marriage. Each tries to outwit the other, and the ensuing entanglements and absurdities combined with rather attractive music make acceptable entertainment of the lighter type. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: unobjectionable."

+ Motion Pict R p8 S '36

"A, Y and C: gay comedy with music."

Parents' M p44 N '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Time p26 S 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Thin plot and uninspired writing make this a risk as a solo, but it can hold its own on a dual bill in good company and get most of the laugh situations proven by long test. Most of the humor was pumped out of the bogus French count idea long ago and four scenarists and an author do not appear to have been able to give much novelty other than throwing some of the action into a radio station."

— + Variety p17 S 16 '36

WANTED: JANE TURNER. RKO 65min D 4 '36

Cast: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart, Judith Blake, John McGuire

Director: Edward Kelly

"Story involves activities of postal department sleuths who succeed in tracing down a major offender after some hair-raising and dramatic incidents." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Exciting in spots, this story furnishes thrills when United States postal inspectors pursue and capture a gang of criminals. This picture will be good as a program filler. Family, but not for excitable children." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The result is a fairly entertaining picture, with good suspense, clever dialogue, and some interesting post office interior settings. Adults & 14-18: fair; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The part that the postal inspection department plays in the detection of criminals gives this picture some novelty; in other respects, it is a typical fast moving gangster film. . . There is some good photography and interesting sound effects in the scenes showing the use of monotonous repetition to persuade a stubborn witness to confess. Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family, but mature for children. Good." DAR

"Good entertainment is furnished in a production which has much excitement and humor to recommend it. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A detective story with an original twist, snappy, fast moving and lively. . . Entirely free from drinking. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"Mature audience."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 10 '36

"This is an interesting melodrama with a new and fascinating insight into the workings of the postoffice department. . . Lee Tracy in the leading role is most acceptable and Gloria Stuart is charming. Good direction, suspense maintained throughout. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 11 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 26 '36

"A & Y: good murder mystery; C: possible."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict p8 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Better than average comedy thriller, although one or two interludes of comic padding do not help the pace. Adults & young people."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 28 '36

"Nothing outstanding, but nevertheless an exciting and fast moving program picture that will break no box-office records, but will provide an expensive major picture and will provide a good evening's entertainment." John Christensen

+ — Hollywood Spec p11 N 7 '36

"A tightly directed, coherent melodrama, 'Wanted: Jane Turner,' is currently at the Globe with an ideally suited cast acting out a postal service story that draws upon the famed depredations of the late Ice-Wagon Crowley and Killer Cunniffe for its inspiration and goes right on back to William Cowper for its atmospheric touches. The return of Lee Tracy to this type of thing, after a year or so of comparative idleness, is probably just the shot in the arm the postal service cycle in Hollywood needed." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p24 N 30 '36

"Tracy, Miss Stuart and Guilfoyle do their best to convert this stereotyped narrative into meritorious entertainment, but their expert performances suffer from the weakness of the plot and the characterizations. . . The plot never quite succeeds in working itself up to any high pitch of excitement and as a result becomes unsatisfactory as entertainment." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p7a N 28 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

WANTED: JANE TURNER—Continued

"Melodramatic high-jinks racily directed by Edward Kilby who has turned out a top-ranking 'B' picture. The chase stuff is cannily handled and possesses no end of thrills." Herb Sterne

+ Script p11 N 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Packed with thrills, gangsters and gunplay, plus a typically fast-talking, good-humored performance by Lee Tracy, this picture has but one fault—it's six months late. Varying from the run-of-the-mill G-men films in that the postal department does the sleuthing for the murderer of a mail truck driver, it is a well-balanced, skilfully directed production whose success as a program feature is only diminished because of the dropping-off of interest in the 'war against crime' sagas. Family."

+ Box Office p35 N 7 '36

"[It is a] well-paced and nicely rounded melodrama of unrelenting fashion in which Post Office Department tracks down violators of its services. . . The dialogue and characters are true to life and thrills and sordid happenings are deftly counterbalanced by humor."

+ Film Daily p8 N 30 '36

"This is an exciting melodrama of the postal inspectors, well written, plotted and acted. As it stands it is above most of the stuff turned out for the dual program trade."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 27 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 O 30 '36

"Made in the best melodrama vein, okay for the thrill houses this keeps moving all the way, should prove satisfactory for action followers."

+ Phila Exhibitor p52 N 15 '36

"Cliff Reid has needed a wheezy cops-and-robbers theme with just enough mounting and production to make it acceptable as a program picture on the duals. . . Film is held together chiefly by the experience of Lee Tracy and Gloria Stuart, plus pretty decent management at the hands of Director Kilby. . . The plot is as old as Robbins' barn, but in sparing over-strenuous blasts of gunfire, etc., in favor of an overlay of mild gagging, mixed with legitimate situations, a few new twists are acquired."

+ Variety p38 D 2 '36

"Radio has a better-than-average comedy melodrama in 'Wanted: Jane Turner.' . . Picture is nicely mounted and contains some excellent dialog, which is directly responsible for heavy chuckles. . . Production as a whole is nothing pretentious but has that something that spells mass entertainment. Shown to a house that didn't know it was coming on the screen, 'Wanted: Jane Turner' was a complete surprise and the audience liked it."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 27 '36

WE WHO ARE ABOUT TO DIE. RKO 80min
D 11 '36

Cast: Preston Foster, Ann Dvorak, John Beal

Director: Christy Cabanne

Based on the biography of the same title by David Lamson. "A young man is framed by a gang of payroll thieves, who make it appear that a holdup and murder are his work. He is swiftly condemned to die and sent to join the tragic company of those awaiting the gallows. Meanwhile, his sweetheart has enlisted the sympathy and interest of a shrewd police detective and an intensive hunt is begun. Clues are slow in coming and there is a desperate race against time to get enough evidence to secure a stay." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a morbid and depressive story. Matter of taste for adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The subject is presented with strength and realism, but the picture has a tendency to arouse undue sympathy for the criminal element by stressing the injustice imposed upon one innocent victim among thousands of the guilty. Adults." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This picture can hardly be classified as entertainment and will certainly build up audience resistance due to the fact that it resembles the earlier gangster films. . . As presented here, this treatise against capital punishment fails of its effect for the reason that it is so sensationally and illogically treated that whatever dignity it had in the original has been definitely lost in its transmission to the screen. In controversial subjects of this kind, so little emphasis is put on the constructive side of the question, that it becomes almost a justification of the crime, rather than an effort of an outraged public to suppress and punish guilty prisoners. There is a dangerous precedent being established when this particular book by this particular author is purchased for the screen; it would seem a deliberate attempt to cash in on unpleasant notoriety. Not recommended for any audience. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A preachment, somewhat exaggerated, against capital punishment, this arouses sympathy for even the most ruthless criminals, and is much too morbid for entertainment. Adults. Good." DAR

"A disturbing and controversial film with an appalling, if true, expose of prison conditions. A tense and harrowing story. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"No touches of horror of the men in their last hours of life are left to the imagination in this grippingly convincing picture, which could hardly appeal to any but a mature audience." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"While the circumstances of the case may lead to some controversy, the production is handled in good taste. Mature." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"The direction is impressive, light and shadow effectively used. An exceptionally well chosen cast in which each member makes a worthy contribution. In all an unusual and interesting picture. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 26 '36

"The film is unique in that the prison scenes seem more realistic and true than those in other films on the subject. They are immensely powerful and the production should have great interest for adult audiences. Adolescents, 12-16: no, too emotional; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R p9 N '36

"It is stark, virile, moving drama revealing life as complex, not a simple matter of good and bad; and provides food for thought. An able cast is directed brilliantly by Christy Cabanne. Adults only."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 28 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency N 19 '36

"A & Y: good; C: mature."
Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Adults. Harrowing."
Sel Motion Pict p4 D 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Quite a powerful picture, one that will keep your attention on the screen. . . Just how many of us wish to sojourn in a cinematic shadow of death, to see the look in the eyes of those so soon to meet it, only the box-office will reveal. Except for a tendency in some sequences to permit dialogue to be delivered with that meticulousness which robs scenes of their conviction, Christy Cabanne's direction develops the possibilities of his story material. . . The picture opens with an exceedingly clever construction of a crime to point the finger of suspicion at an innocent man, and it ends on a blah note devoid of cleverness, a resort to theatric devices old enough to have long white whiskers."

+ — Hollywood Spec p9 N 7 '36

"The completed film bears the same title as the book, but is much more powerful. In it Mr. Lamson, with the trained aid of scenarist John Twist, accomplishes a motion-picture sermon inveighing against unscrupulous politicians. . . Wisely, too, the writers have avoided maudlin sentimentality. They use grimness effectively, the prison scenes are unusually factual. . . Whole sequences are virtual invasions of the mind of a man sitting caged and helpless awaiting death. The terrors through which he passes are shown without any pulling of punches."

Lit Digest p22 N 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is powerful gripping drama. . . Although it is an indictment of self-seeking politicians and the prison system, it never becomes a preachment. John Twist has fashioned a screenplay that has ample comedy relief, although practically all the action is laid in 'Death Row' and other parts of a state penitentiary."

+ Film Daily p7 O 23 '36

"The picture is a sombre and powerful portrayal of life in Death Row and a moving appeal, though by implication only, against capital punishment. On its merits as dramatic entertainment it will win considerable acclaim and will carry the heavy end of double bills to substantial returns."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 O 5 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 O 6 '36

"[It] will get most attention from the males. Of an exploitable nature, what it does will depend on the handling. . . Melodramatic to an extreme, written by David Lamson, who served time in the death house before he was freed, the show is intensely saleable."

Phila Exhibitor p33 N 1 '36

"Now comes to the screen one of the most powerful, convincing preachments ever tossed against unscrupulous politicians, circumstantial evidence and policemen with an eye only on conviction, regardless of fact. 'We Who Are About to Die' is at once a powerful drama and a great social document on film. . . From the exhibitor's viewpoint, it should spell big profits. The book of the same title and the troubles of its author have been widely publicized. The picture will have a splendid word-of-mouth advertising value after its first performance and the political and social preachments within the story lend themselves to good exploitation treatment."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 5 '36

WEDDING PRESENT. Paramount 80min O 9 '36

Cast: Joan Bennett, Cary Grant, George Bancroft, Conrad Nagel

Director: Richard Wallace

Based on the short story of the same title by Paul Gallico. "[It] concerns the romance of two erratic reporters, who delight in annoying their city-editor by silly, practical jokes and irresponsibility. A quarrel separates them but a series of inane pranks brings them together again." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: not the best; C: no."

Christian Century p1542 N 18 '36

"Spirited, refreshing entertainment for family." Am Legion Auxiliary

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"This improbable story is banal and slow-moving despite a few humorous situations. Mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This is a hodge-podge of gags and wild and improbable situations, but will furnish plenty of laughs for anyone wanting to be entertained—but not too seriously! Mature." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre. Mature." DAR

"Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The picture is amusing but possesses almost no ethical value. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul S 19 '36

"[It is] a frothy, ridiculous farce. . . The picture is interestingly photographed but this able cast merits very much better story material."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 8 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates S 15 '36

"The production is not in the best of taste on account of its reliance on practical jokes for its humor, but will entertain those who are not too critical. Adolescents, 12-16: not recommended; children, 8-12: mature."

+ Motion Pict R p10 O '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 9 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency O 1 '36

"A & Y: mediocre; C: mature."

Parents' M p48 D '36

"A mediocre farce verging on slapstick and pepped up with plenty of cocktails. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict p7 O 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A farce which, if you put your rationality on a high shelf, will do. Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 7 '36

"[It is] the maddest farce of the year. I warn you that to enjoy the picture as I did, you have to go crazy and concede that its impossibilities are possible. If you can view it from that angle, you are in for an hour and a quarter of genuine, fast moving fun. . . An extended review of a picture of this sort is quite impossible. It is too mad for analysis, but it is a class of entertainment the screen could stand in more frequent doses. There is nothing half-way about it; if you do not think it is good, you will think it is awful."

Hollywood Spec p12 S 26 '36

"Newspaper work has taken it on the nose from the cinema more than one occasion this season, but 'Wedding Present,' at the New Criterion, reaches a new high in factual distortion. . . We do not wish to destroy the 'movie' myth about journalism, but we suggest that the situations of the photo-play are implausible, dissociated, undramatic, preposterous and dreary. . . The film is not fortunate in its principals. Cary Grant plays the crazy reporter turned editor in a lackadaisical manner, mouthing most of his lines and acting more like a dramatic caricature than a character. If he is not walking through his lines in this production, we never saw that feat accomplished. Joan Bennett, for her part, does little to stay the complete demoralization of [the] plot. . . It makes for a foot-loose and boring screen drama." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p20 N 18 '36

"'Wedding Present' is a bit of light-hearted entertainment, the brightest this pretty little theater has enjoyed in several weeks. It tells a slightly goofy yarn about two slightly goofy people, and if it had just been a little goofier, a little madder, it would have been much funnier. This is a picture that needed the crackle of high tension pace, the sparkle of first-rate farceurs. It has not these. Richard

WEDDING PRESENT—Continued

Wallace's direction, competent enough, here lacks any touch of brilliance, and his cast is a little too gentle for these pleasant lunatics. . . 'Wedding Present' is a fair specimen of romantic farce, with several genuinely jolly moments." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p22 N 19 '36

"Paul Gallico's magazine story . . . was perhaps not exactly art, but it was a masterpiece compared to the film version which bears the same title. . . In picturizing his people, Mr. Gallico, who is also responsible for the screen story, makes them seem even more painful inventions for the sake of a smash climax than they did on the printed page." B. R. C.

+ — N Y Times p31 N 19 '36

"Many strange films about newspaper people have come out of Hollywood since some one first decided that reporters are a gay, dashing, romantic lot, but none quite so bewildering as 'Wedding Present.' . . [It] insists on being furiously and monotonously whimsical. However, say this much for it at least, it begins on a whimsical note and continues it through to the bitter end. But the things the audience must listen to and watch during its unreeling are something else again." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p29 N 18 '36

"Two star reporters . . . dash about Chicago and New York in a farce that sweats over its laughs and comes through just often enough to warrant the effort."

+ — News-Wk p60 N 14 '36

"Cinema newspaper people, merely drunken sots a few years ago, have kept on topping each other's efforts in irresponsibility. Currently newshawks on the screen are, with few exceptions, practically indistinguishable from run-of-the-mill lunatics. 'Wedding Present' turns a couple of these creatures loose to follow the bidding of their erratic temperaments. The result, however insulting to the dignity of the trade, is efficacious and at times uproarious comedy."

+ — Time p71 O 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Striking a high note of popular appeal, this one should get much favorable word-of-mouth publicity. Filled with new gags, it moves smoothly and swiftly. Family."

+ — Box Office p35 N 7 '36

"As a laugh-loaded gay piece of lunacy, B. P. Schulberg's comedy should be swell entertainment for any regular audience. The start may be slow, but proceedings pick up quickly and once started move at a mad pace with plenty of goofy happenings, but it's all very enjoyable."

+ — Film Daily p11 S 24 '36

"This featherweight flight into the stratosphere of lunacy is a flip and frolicsome farce in the current moon-struck mode and it will make a diverting hour for a wide audience. . . With Joan Bennett and Cary Grant heading a capital cast, it stands a bright chance in single harness and it will certainly be good box office."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 S 19 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p10 S 21 '36

"Estimate: pleasing comedy."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p35 O 1 '36

"It takes the final reel to save this one from developing into a complete void of entertainment. But even that final reel hasn't enough wallop to put 'Wedding Present' in the running for top position in a dual setup. About the only persons who give the impression that they feel they've really got something in 'Present' are Cary Grant and Joan Bennett. They try hard, but the combination of story, direction and whatnot is pretty much against them."

+ — Variety p15 N 25 '36

"Slow to start and laboring over the intended laugh lines in the earlier sequences, the farcical doings get up steam after the first two reels and come through in a burst of hilarity to run up average for excellent box office prospects. Intended laugh lines in spots hamper both Miss Bennett and Grant, but when they shake clear of these binders, pair romp through farcical and satirical episodes with gusto and play several outstandingly novel gags in newspaper office for sustained guffaws. Screen play gives them too long maintained and unvaried sarcasms in effort to sustain antagonism."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 19 '36

WHITE HUNTER. 20th century-Fox N 27 '36

Cast: Warner Baxter. June Lang. Gail Patrick. Alison Skipworth. Wilfrid Lawson

Director: Irving Cummings

"[It] is [the story of] a former Under Secretary in the British War Office, who has had to flee to Africa to escape arrest for the innocent part played in a munitions contract scandal engineered by the girl he thought he loved and her wealthy lover." N Y World-Telegram

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It is simply a variation on a too familiar theme but Mr. Baxter, June Lang and Wilfrid Lawson play with convincing earnestness and the photography has been handled with telling effect." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ — America p240 D 12 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 3 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p12 D 1 '36

"A brooding intensity to the story that is effective, and some splendid atmosphere of the African wilds. Family."

Wkly Guide N 28 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Close-ups of June Lang not so interesting as those of the jungle. Action slow. Family." Christian Science Monitor p15 N 28 '36

"As Irving Cummings long ago established himself as a capable director, I refuse to believe the film he turned in could not have been assembled to better advantage. The fact that Irving asked for the termination of his contract with the producers after he shot the picture, may be involved in some way with the slow pace it maintains. The individual scenes are directed capably, dialogue is handled intelligently and no fault can be found with the performances as a whole, but the cutting leaves much to be desired. . . The story is purely negative. . . In every picture we have some meaningless close-ups, but not quite so many as 'White Hunter' contains. It is cutting which becomes ridiculous, particularly in the case of June Lang, a youngster who is nice looking in a negative sort of way, but whose facial expression can not compete with the heavy dose of white make-up which gives her the appearance of wearing a mask. . . Warner's ability is wasted in a picture with so little to recommend it."

+ — Hollywood Spec p10 D 5 '36

"It is neither an exciting nor dramatic safari that one is taken on in 'White Hunter.' . . The wild animal life of the Dark Continent has rarely been used to such poor advantage, however, in bolstering up a wabbling plot. As for the human players, they mark time in a rather embarrassing manner, struggling with vaguely defined situations and pompous dialogue. . . In the central role Warner Baxter is more vengeful than amorous, but he does more than his share in keeping some semblance of suspense and movement in the work. Wilfrid Lawson over-accentuates his impersonation of a munitions maker. . . June Lang, on the other hand, does an extraordinarily inept job with the role of the heroine. She neither succeeds in making the part credible nor in charming you with her personality. She showed little promise in 'Road to Glory.' In 'White Hunter' she shows even less." Howard Barnes

— + N Y Herald Tribune p18 N 25 '36

"The new Criterion, which deserves much better pictures than it is getting, hasn't great reason for rejoicing over 'White Hunter.' The names in its cast prove that Twentieth Century-Fox meant well by its production. Somewhere in the filming, more probably in the writing, this goodwill was defeated. The plot is mechanical, the direction artificial, even the acting slightly bored." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p30 N 27 '36

"The Continent of Africa is being used so incontinently of late to buttress a number of saggingly secondary films that the hardened reviewer who gets wind of a safari being organized in some newly arrived picture may be excused for assuming that it is probably going out in search of a plot. The one uncovered by Mr. Zanuck's Central Avenue beaters in 'White Hunter' is very small game indeed, and the old California veldt it is scared up in could hardly look less genuine if it were covered with filing stations. A secondary film, as a rule, is tougher on its villain than on any other department, and therefore it is peculiarly enheartening to observe how nobly Wilfrid Lawson not only bears up under the strain but succeeds in bringing to the screen a new sneer." E. R. C.

— N Y Times p39 N 26 '36

"[It] is by no means uninteresting—it is a fair-to-middling mixture of love and adventure—but nevertheless, manages to be generally unexciting and lacking in interest. Why, frankly, I can't tell. All the good and staple elements of melodrama are here, but they mix into something quite bumbly and unpalatable. Perhaps it is because the narrative is carelessly fabricated, because the dialogue is commonplace and because the direction is uninspired." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p14 N 25 '36
News-Wk p22 D 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Warner Baxter deserves better film fare than this flimsy, hackneyed story. Excellently played throughout, with Baxter and Gail Patrick topping the cast, the production emerges as a poor adventure yarn with but few breathless moments. Family."

— + Box Office p21 D 5 '36

"Intrigue and romance pervade this fairly entertaining story which has Africa as its locale. Fans in general, who are not too particular about authenticity of settings, will find its melodramatic sequences exciting and interesting, particularly a leopard's attack on Warner Baxter. . . [There are] numerous shots of the colorful beasts inhabiting the Dark Continent, and one such shot taken from an airplane shows enough fauna to fill many zoos. It is these views which give to the film enough real atmosphere to make one forget the un-African backgrounds of remaining footage."

+ — Film Daily p3 N 28 '36

"Where an adventure story is indicated, one in which the emotional conflict is of equal rank with the conflict with nature, this one will do as an hour's fair entertainment. Warner Baxter's fans . . . will generally be disappointed. The play, lacking a grand climax, has several small climaxes, which are approached tediously. . . Nothing is convincing and what were intended as dramatic moments are so thoroughly stereotyped they lose most of their punch."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 N 30 '36

— + Motion Pict Daily p14 N 27 '36

"Melodrama with an African background, 'The White Hunter' won't help Warner Baxter any. Estimate: just program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p31 D 1 '36

"'White Hunter' is one of those films which, after unspooling a few glimpses of the cast and the South African veldt, leaves nothing to the audience's anticipation. . . Names of Warner Baxter and June Lang don't make bad marquee decorations, but unfortunately the celluloid doesn't back up the mazda strength. Story is just one of those things, and the cast works as though it had a pretty clear idea of this situation; with the exception of Baxter, who turns in a steady chore somewhat superior to his assignment. . . Everything turns out as per expectations, and that's what will confine the picture to the dualers."

— + Variety p38 D 2 '36

"While this tries its level best to be thoroughly modern in treatment, 'White Hunter' is crammed with ancient film technique and emerges as a weak box office offering. A moth-eaten story, camouflaged with up-to-date trimmings, the film is neither thrilling nor romantic and attempted comedy fails to register. Multitudinous fans of Warner Baxter . . . will be disappointed with this one as entertainment. However, Baxter gives as fine a performance as possible, material considered."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 N 30 '36

WHITE LEGION. Grand national 81min O 13 '36

Cast: Tala Birell, Ian Keith, Ferdinand Gottschalk

Director: Karl Brown

"Tells of the work of five medical scientists sent by the government to try to stamp out [an] epidemic. An officious Senator from Washington and his willful daughter are quarantined and forced to go through all the agonies and trials of the affair along with the doctors." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A & Y: unsuitable; C: no."
Parents' M p46 Ja '37

Trade Paper Reviews

"Sincere, impressive and absorbing, this dramatic tale of the courageous battle waged by a few heroic souls against the dread yellow fever germ will interest all who appreciate serious films. The romantic interest, however, is slight and the grim story is unrelieved by lighter touches, which may detract from its appeal to general audiences. Adults."

+ — Box Office p27 O 24 '36

"This one opens with a long sequence of yellow fever patients in a government hospital at Panama during construction of the Canal, with close-ups of one patient after another going through the agonies of the disease and the attendant delirium. From then on the production is unrelieved with anything that serves adequately to offset the depressing theme and the tragedy inherent in the subject matter. . . The general handling of the theme is heavy and uninspired. . . It is a director's picture in the sense that the director also is the author, which probably explains a lot."

— Film Daily p3 O 17 '36

"As much as it hurts and disappoints to have to report that this picture based on a high-minded theme, reflects credit on its producer and discredit in its delineation, it must be recorded that said producer 'hasn't done right by our Nell.' . . This picture, inadequately done [does not] appeal to mass audiences. One cannot be certain, but it is perhaps that topics of disease and death do not fall into the realm of entertainment, but rather into the lecture hall. 'The White Legion' will do as a filler on dual programs."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 O 23 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p2 O 19 '36

"Well made, with the same selling angles as 'Pasteur,' this is worth attention. Players all turn in good performances. Estimate: interesting program, can be sold."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p35 O 1 '36

WILD BRIAN KENT. Principal-20th century-Fox 59min N 6 '36

Cast: Ralph Bellamy, Mae Clarke, Helen Lowell, Stanley Andrews

Director: Howard Bretherton

Based on the novel Re-creation of Brian Kent by Harold Bell Wright. "Ralph Bellamy is a wastrel polo player, dropped by his team into the middle of the wheat and cattle country. Penniless, he is befriended by Mae Clarke and Aunt Helen Lowell, and in return for the favor, promises to raise the necessary three thousand dollars to get the cattle to market and the wheat harvested." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A slow moving melodrama of little interest to anyone except children. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The country settings and the threshing machine in action are interesting. The production qualities are fair. Adults & 14-18: fair; 8-14: interesting." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Ralph Bellamy is too polished an actor for this type of picture as are other members of the cast. Disappointing. Family." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature & 14-18. Mediocre." DAR

"Very natural acting and notably beautiful photography of the wheat and cattle country are the highlights of this otherwise undistinguished film. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A quick-moving Western drama with beautiful scenery. Interesting to all who like a picture of this type. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 28 '36

"This Western is nicely photographed, fairly well directed and acted and has plenty of action. Family."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 2 '36

"Fair. Adults & young adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

"In the picture there are no outstanding scenes or dramatic incidents. The only appeal is to those who are interested in seeing a typical Harold Bell Wright story on the screen. Adolescents, 12-16: passable; children, 8-12: no interest."

+ — Motion Pict R p9 N '36

"A poorly edited filming of an obvious melodrama with adequate players cast as leads, but overdrawn characterizations in the supporting roles. . . The very good suspense of the fire and racing episodes is the only redeeming feature. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women N 16 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency N 26 '36

"A & Y: passable; C: little interest."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p8 D 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Aimed to please the Harold Bell Wright-Ralph Bellamy fans, this film hits its target, and is satisfactory fare, for any dual. Bellamy and Mae Clarke give their usual good performances. Family."

+ Box Office p27 O 24 '36

"[It is] satisfactory program fare for the action fans."

+ — Film Daily p13 O 22 '36

"[It] fails to elicit much of the excitement inherent in the novel and will find its appeal in the subsequent-run houses and in the neighborhoods where Wright's novel output has been most popular. Sol Lesser's production has everything in it but the exciting ingredients which should characterize an action picture."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p5 O 17 '36

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 O 19 '36

"The show is okay for the small towns, neighborhoods, twin bills. The players turn in satisfactory performances, with the scenic backgrounds also helping."

+ Phila Exhibitor p36 N 1 '36

"Harold Bell Wright story has little to commend, other than that it may make a fair dueler. Ralph Bellamy and Mae Clarke both are miscast. Miss Clarke is hardly fetching as a country lass and Bellamy is offside trying to be funny or social. Of the old gaslight drama school, it unwinds slowly."

+ — Variety p13 D 9 '36

"With a good yarn, ample hard riding, an abundance of shooting and picturesque mountain and plain locales, 'Wild Brian Kent' bids for grosses at spots at which it is aimed. It will have to go after audiences liking their mesquiteers."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 17 '36

WINTERSET. RKO 75min N 20 '36

Cast: Burgess Meredith, Margo, Eduardo Ciannelli, John Carradine, Edward Ellis, Paul Guilfoyle, Maurice Moscovitch, Stanley Ridges

Director: Alfred Santell

Music: Maurice de Packh

Music director: Nathaniel Shilkret

Based on the stage success of the same title by Maxwell Anderson. "The picture opens briefly with the railroading to the chair of a high-minded radical for a crime that he did not commit. He leaves an infant son and the boy grows to manhood possessed by the urge to clear his father's name. Drifting into New York on a rainy night he is drawn, as if by some invisible power, into the sordid circle that hides the answer to his prayer. Drawn there also is the judge who condemned his father, now broken in mind by the 18-year-old memory of his deed." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Maxwell Anderson's hard-bitten prize-winner comes to us in more frankly melodramatic terms in this screen version than in the stage play, and that is to say it has found its true level of theatre. It is a tensely engrossing film, splendidly enacted throughout and with enough action of the obvious sort to offset its social indignation. Further, it has been relieved of its pretensions to poetry and a happy ending has been contrived, so that no hindrance to popular success remains. . . This is not at all a pleasant film, its tragedy being relentless and unrelieved until the concluding moments, but it can be recommended to unfinching adults as a superior piece of work." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ + America p216 D 5 '36

"A: outstanding; Y & C: harrowing, unwholesome."

Christian Century p1670 D 9 '36

"Distinguished is the screen presentation of Maxwell Anderson's tragic play with music, light and shadow intensifying its somberness. . . Thought-provoking fare for adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 24 '36

"Grim, gripping drama, stark realism, and absorbing suspense mark the production of this screen version of a very successful stage play. Surrounded by many of the original cast, Burgess Meredith and Margo give outstanding portrayals in the roles they created on the stage. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 25 '36

"[It is] an unforgettable production. . . The whole film is greatly enhanced by the authentic atmosphere of the background and the excellent photography. Altogether, an outstanding production, with a wealth of telling detail, finesse and material for serious thought and discussion. Adult entertainment."

++ Sel Motion Pict p12 D 1 '36

"[It is] a gripping story, unusual in its social implications. . . Fine acting gives many deeply moving moments to the picture, which has definitely uncommon qualities. Suggested for church use. Outstanding."

++ Wkly Guide N 28 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Despite the new happy ending this is a distinguished film. Adults & young people."

++ Christian Science Monitor p19 D 5 '36

"Once again the screen invades the stage, photographs it and demonstrates the camera's ability to make drama more vivid on the screen than it ever can be made on the stage. . . I have not seen 'Winterset' on the stage, but among the multitude of stage productions I have seen were none which gripped me so completely and continuously. . . RKO's production is not a motion picture and it will not appeal generally to the motion picture's wide audience. . . Many of Meredith's speeches are notable for their lyric quality and for the beauty of the thoughts they convey; Meredith's fine reading bringing out all their values. His performance is one of the most compelling I have ever seen on the screen. . . Pandro Berman has given us a remarkably compelling production, one which rates near the top of the list of the season's output, one you can not afford to overlook."

++ Hollywood Spec p9 N 21 '36

"The screen version of 'Winterset' has succeeded remarkably in carrying over the singing and somber intensity of Maxwell Anderson's play to another medium. . . The savage and high-pitched action has been reshaped to cinematic terms with a great heightening and unifying of the essential melodrama, while the work remains an eloquent and ringing protest against reactionary injustice. . . It is a brave, beautiful and memorable motion picture. There is a deplorable happy ending that has no place in a narrative of tragic compulsion, but otherwise, I believe, it betters its original. . . The acting of Mr. Meredith, as Mio, is so splendidly assured and distinguished that he becomes, at once, one of the really fine artists of the screen. Many who saw him in the role on the stage decided that he was the most promising young actor of the theater. In his new medium, he already has few equals. . . Margo is better on the screen than she was at the Martin Beck, to my mind. . . Mr. Santell's direction has fused the rich material in sequences of haunting imagery. He has ignored the progress of the action as the stage sets confined it, moving surely from one incident to another and carrying them along together in that exciting crescendo of the cinema known as rhythmic montage. . . 'Winterset' will probably have to battle for public favor, for it has none of the big names that are such powerful lures to film-goers. It richly deserves success. It is a challenging and absorbing production, consummately acted, that is certain to increase the cinema's prestige enormously." Howard Barnes

++ N Y Herald Tribune p20 D 4 '36

"By cutting and editing rather than change of dialogue or characterization, the film emerges more vivid and forceful than the play, a not uncommon feat this year of 'Dodsworth' and 'These Three.' . . This is a picture to be respected. Pandro S. Berman has given it a beautiful production, with some of the finest photography and lighting you can find on any screen. Although respecting Mr. Anderson's dialogue, the producer has not hesitated to eliminate unnecessary lines, to make the characters more human than they appeared upon the stage. . . 'Winterset' should still have remained frankly a poetic tragedy, with a none too convincing plot but a powerful melodramatic situation. . . I wonder what the Warners or Darryl Zanuck would have made of it as a straight melodrama with no self-consciousness."

Eileen Creelman

++ N Y Sun p38 D 4 '36

"[It] is a forceful screen drama of importance, produced with unswerving allegiance to the spirit of the Maxwell Anderson play that sired it and fraught with the same frank determination to sway men's minds. . . Perhaps the most compelling characterization in the film, aside from John Carradine's brief moment as Romagna, is the Trock Estrella of Eduardo Ciannelli. . . Burgess Meredith's Mio is brilliant, expressive, embittered—a boy who sneers at the fate that has dealt so harshly with him. . . The settings are beautifully and authentically executed according to the playwright's planning, although a perhaps too great reverence for them lays the screen production open to the criticism that it is static in the sequences in which the camera dwells too fondly on its darkly glistening cobblestone backgrounds. The most inevitable criticism of the production, however, will probably be [caused] by the changed ending. It cannot be gainsaid, however, that a feeling of the triumph of the right things is imparted by the film's climax, whether or not it was devised as a bow to the box office." J. T. M.

++ N Y Times p31 D 4 '36

"[It is] a stirring, superbly acted, bitter and eloquent photoplay. . . Mr. Anderson, you will remember, wrote his play for the most part in lovely but virile blank verse and treated his audiences to a typically harrowing Elizabethan tragedy finale. . . While the photoplay resorts to a happy ending—the alterations have in no way detracted from the majesty and splendor of the original. 'Winterset' remains in screen form a beautifully written, nobly imagined, dynamic drama. . . Alfred Santell's direction is extraordinarily good, as is the screen play by Anthony Veiller; and, the acting of the entire cast is brilliant. To single out any of the players for special commendation would be unfair because they all do such fine work, but an exception must be made in the cases of Burgess Meredith, Margo, Eduardo Ciannelli, John Carradine, Edward Ellis, Paul Guilfoyle, Maurice Moscovitch and Stanley Ridges, all of whom are superb." William Boehnel

++ N Y World-Telegram p27 D 4 '36

"Just as a picture, 'Winterset' is superb, a great, sombre pleasure. As a picture, the story is more effective than it was as a play, because this is exactly the thing that the movies can do on the grand scale. It's a beautiful piece of work. I think also that you can say it's a beautiful piece of work in other ways, too. . . The public that wants its under-world films straight may be disappointed. Perhaps this film won't be a smash hit and won't make a lot of money for the R.K.O. people, because it's so clearly a quality picture. . . I, for one, found that I liked the film better than I did the play. If I like the film because the sets are more lavish and expanded than they could be on any stage, I like it too because the language has been considerably simplified and abbreviated. . . Toward the end there are a few lapses into the grand manner, and you may be startled when the boy of the story, pressed against the stone buttresses of the Bridge, prays to the 'bright, ironical gods.'" John Mosher

++ New Yorker p84 N 28 '36

"[It] is one of the finest films to come out of Hollywood this year. But artistic merit is rarely the specific for anemic box-office receipts. Hailed as a 'critics' picture,' [it] must depend on the critics and on word-of-mouth advertising to marshal its audiences. . . As screenfare for intelligent movie-goers, 'Winterset' is uniquely successful—even if its commercial fate must rest in the laps of those 'bright, ironical gods' (whom Mio invokes)."

++ News-Wk p20 D 5 '36

"I thought the film might be more credible, more terse, more emotionally gratifying than the play. In some respects my anticipations were realized: fulminating speeches and metaphorical colloquies have been pruned; the new,

WINTERSET—Continued

happy ending is more logical and far less melodramatic than Mr. Anderson's. . . [It] is visually less exciting than the stage production. The chief actors, Burgess Meredith and Margo, whose stage performances delighted the critics, leave a great deal to be desired in their film characterizations. I found 'Winteret' tedious, static and uninspired, a decision which may set me apart from my fellows, but after serious reflection I cannot admit to any honest enthusiasm on behalf of Alfred Santell's production." R. S. Ames

— + Script p10 N 28 '36

"'Winteret' is transferred to the screen by Producer Pandro S. Berman with such honesty, intelligence and skill that it betters its original. By abbreviating some of Author Anderson's less appropriate flights of poetry, Anthony Veiller, who wrote the screen play, improved the dialog. . . 'Winteret,' brilliantly directed by Alfred Santell, is a production that is sure to be listed among the best pictures of the year. . . That 'Winteret' will fail to appeal to the cinema's mass audience is likely. As an investment for RKO it can therefore be measured mainly as an introduction to the cinema public of several new faces. Margo's—which cinemaddicts have seen before but never under such favorable circumstances—is most likely to become familiar."

+ + Time p25 D 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"One of the finest pictures ever to come from RKO Radio, 'Winteret' is dramatic dynamite—consistent, unrelenting and intelligent. . . Definitely a class picture, its only flaw is its limited appeal—but those who understand it will sing its praises. Outstanding performance, curiously enough, comes not from the members of the stage cast, but from Stanley Ridges, erstwhile film villain, who delivers a horrifying bit. Family."

+ Box Office p29 N 21 '36

"This will rank with the really important pictures of the year. It will have a special appeal to discriminating audiences. Alfred Santell has done a masterly job of directing and produced a gripping picture. . . The acting is flawless, with Burgess Meredith, of the stage cast, scoring heavily. His performance is one of the best of the year."

+ Film Daily p9 N 17 '36

"Maxwell Anderson's grim and profoundly moving poetic drama of the underworld. . . is an artistic triumph. Its similarities to 'The Informer' will be widely commented on. Its fate at the box office is less certain. Universal as is its dramatic appeal, its sordid, almost terrifying subject, literary antecedents and New York theater cast may yield only a moderate marquee draw. But it is a truly great picture and high honors are due its makers for the daring contribution to the roster of modern masterpieces of the screen."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 N 13 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 N 14 '36

"This is excellent class. Characters are intelligent, dialogue literate, motivations sometimes too obscure. Estimate: excellent class job, but needs selling."

+ Phila Exhibitor p31 D 1 '36

"'Winteret' is not big box-office. It's a critic's picture and, as such, the box office reaction will be favored through the kindly press this RKO filmization. . . is bound to receive. For the rank and file 'Winteret' will be hit 'n' miss. In certain locales they may even wonder what it's all about. As an artistic production it's tops. 'Winteret,' if nothing else, will be noteworthy in having launched Burgess Meredith cinematically, although this highly capable legitimate [stage] juvenile has yet to assert his fullest film potentialities. His next picture, or the one after that, will do the trick because Meredith is definitely box office timber. . . Very nature of this drab celluloid interpretation of an ethereal stage theme—which even in [stage] atmosphere confused and confounded some patrons—is not conducive to the best picture fan requirements. . . Directorially 'Winteret' is confusing. Prolog set in the small town 16 years ago is disjointed. General screen purpose is vaguely limned. Conceivably, it's an obscurity which may be censorially necessary, but lacking that definition, 'Winteret' is a bit muddled."

Variety p12 D 9 '36

WITH LOVE AND KISSES. Melody 66min

Cast: Pinky Tomlin, Toby Wing, Kane Richmond, Arthur Houseman

Director: Les Goodwins

"Pinky, a farm boy with a yen for composing, hears a radio singer, Kane Richmond, claim one of his songs. With the fifty dollars he has borrowed on his cow, Minnie, he goes to New York where he lands in jail and meets Arthur Houseman." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"Pinky Tomlin delivers a number of his own songs in the style for which he is well known. . . This picture makes a pleasing musical comedy for the neighborhood and subsequent runs. A couple of Pinky's songs should catch the public's fancy. . . Although unpretentious, the show has a lot of entertainment, and stacks up as one of the best independent productions. The family and suburban trade should find it much to their liking."

+ Film Daily p11 D 7 '36

"Restricted by its release to the neighborhoods and lesser dualers, 'With Love and Kisses' is certain to please audiences for whose patronage it is produced. Given plenty of gags and entertaining songs, it ranks favorably as an unpretentious offering in the low budget field."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 D 3 '36

"Although light and unpretentious, 'With Love and Kisses' is an amusing enough comedy musical to satisfy the neighborhoods and the sticks. It has sufficient entertainment for the independent market but lacks punch and names to carry elsewhere. . . Tomlin sings several songs in his distinctly individual manner and Miss Wing contributes several numbers herself, but either a bad print or inferior recording prevents them from putting over their tunes as well as they might have with improved sound."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 3 '36

WITHOUT ORDERS. RKO 63min O 30 '36

Cast: Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong, Frances Sage, Charley Grapewin, Vinton Haworth

Director: Lew Landers

"The story. . . is built around the conflict between a seasoned and resourceful commercial air pilot and the weakling son of the owner of the line, a brilliant stunt flyer but unfit for responsibility. When the boy's adoring father gives him charge of a transport the opposition comes to a head. It is built up by the rivalry of the two men for the hand of Sally Eilers, air stewardess and trained as a pilot." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y: better not; C: no."

Christian Century p1574 N 25 '36

"Good. Mature audience & 14-18." DAR
Fox W Coast Bul O 24 '36

"The long suffering airlines are again given bad publicity in this film. . . The photography is very fine indeed, and there is no dearth of action, however improbable it may seem. Adolescents, 12-16: questionable; children, 8-12: no."

— + Motion Pict R p10 O '36

"A film that gains momentum as it rushes toward a breath-taking climax. Adults." Nat Legion of Decency O 15 '36

"A: improbable but exciting; Y: possible; C: no."

Parents' M p48 D '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p12 N 1 '36

"Some interesting characters, and the plot works up to an exciting climax. Family." Wkly Guide O 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Sally Eilers makes this all appear wholly credible and the result is a very interesting picture, if one overloaded a bit with rhapsodic lines having to do with the safety of commercial aviation. It's just another of the pictures that is capitalizing on the new vogue for flying, and, of its kind, it might be a lot worse. It is family fare." Laura Elston

+ — Canadian M p39 D '36

"There are some thrilling moments and good photography, but the film is not very believable. Adults & young people."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p19 D 5 '36

"'Without Orders' is just another romantic melodrama about flyers. Some of the air shots in blizzards high above California's Sierras are picturesque and exciting, but the plot is so fantastic and surfeited with threadbare situations it is not a little tedious to stay the film through. . . Obviously manufactured as a thriller, the authors didn't bother to work out either a plausible plot or credible characters. Moreover, the production appears to have been hasty, although the performers, especially Miss Eilers and Mr. Armstrong, do all they can to make the piece convincing." Marguerite Taze-laar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p20 N 5 '36

"Not exactly new in idea (it deals with that previously celebrated conflict between stunt and transport piloting) nor exactly revolutionary in treatment, 'Without Orders' none the less manages to be endurable and even fairly exciting aero-drama." B. R. C.

+ — N Y Times p41 N 4 '36

"Movies, just movies." John Mosher

New Yorker p17 N 14 '36

"The producers are inclined to rhapsodize over the safety of commercial flying, but soft-pedal propaganda in the interests of an exciting story which builds to a hackle-raising climax."

News-Wk p25 O 31 '36

"'Without Orders' contains one exciting sequence in which an airline stewardess takes over the controls of a transport plane in a storm. . . For the rest, one more minor-league investigation of air travel implying that this is an adventure rather than a convenience, 'Without Orders' is likely to arouse more indignation from airline executives than enthusiasm from lay audiences."

Time p21 N 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Plenty of interest-sustaining action and some splendid air shots make this film, based on commercial aviation, good entertainment, despite a rather unbelievable story."

+ — Box Office p27 O 9 '36

"With thrills galore, this airplane picture should be meaty fare for the patrons who want excitement. . . Lew Landers, the director, has turned out a fast-moving, action-filled number. A newcomer, Vinton Haworth, who plays the weakling son of the airline operator, does a fine job in a difficult role, and much credit for his excellent performance should go to Landers."

+ Film Daily p6 S 25 '36

"An exciting story of commercial aviation that goes straight to its melodramatic goal with pep, punch and an undeviating straightforwardness that is refreshing. A well constructed screenplay and an honest and intelligent production lift it well above its limited budget, and, except for light name-draw, it would do some fancy soloing. As it is, it is good for solid satisfaction and profits on all dual levels."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 21 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 S 22 '36

"Estimate: program, best for neighborhoods, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p38 O 1 '36

"By application of a commercial aviation background, this old-fashioned melodrama plot is brought up to date. But it's still the same old idea and the setting only provides a pair of atmospheric crutches for easier limping purposes. Picture is of secondary classification, both from entertainment and box office standpoints."

+ — Variety p14 N 11 '36

"Associate Producer Cliff Reid has turned out a film which, if properly exploited, will bring money into any exhibitor's till. . . 'Without Orders,' with its airline background, should lend itself to profitable exploitation without heavy effort. Running only 63 minutes, it can be relied upon to carry anything else on a dualer."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 21 '36

WIVES NEVER KNOW. Paramount 70min S 25 '36

Cast: Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland.

Adolphe Menjou, Vivienne Osborne

Director: Elliott Nugent

A sophisticated novelist who preaches against marriage almost breaks up the household of a timid horticulturist.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The idea that a wife must be allowed the privilege of forgiving her husband's misdeeds in order to be perfectly happy is amusingly exploited in this latest marital mix-up involving Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles."

Given such a hilarious situation, these expert comedians could not fail to make the most of it and their troubles are continuously funny. It is, however, farce, that is best suited to an adult audience." T. J. Fitzmorris

+ America p624 O 3 '36

"A: amusing; Y: mature; C: little interest." Christian Century p1407 O 21 '36

"A well chosen cast and good direction make this a highly entertaining picture. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: good; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"[It is] a hilarious farce. Excellent for type." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"A comedy with some clever characterizations which evolve into hilarious farce with many laughs for adult audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A definitely disappointing vehicle for the favorite and capable comedy team. . . The picture is negative in ethical value and suitable only for adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul O 3 '36

WIVES NEVER KNOW—Continued

"[It] will provide many laughs for those who enjoy these comedians. Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 23 '36

"A first-class mirth-provoking comedy in the best Ruggles-Boland style. . . The humour is adroitly handled by experts and will be enjoyed by thousands of couples who realise that a state of placid virtue is far easier and pleasanter to live in than its opposite number. . . The dialogue is good and the actors seize on all its points. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p178 O '36

"Good. Adults & young adults."

+ Motion Pict Guide D '36

"Considering the plot, the picture is handled without vulgarity. It is an amusing farce lampooning pseudo-Freudian literature, and making the most of the absurd situations that arise when a silly wife tries to remodel her domesticated husband. Adolescents, 12-16: unsuitable material; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R p10 O '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 21 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency S 24 '36

"A, Y and C: entertaining farce."

Parents' M p44 N '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict p11 O 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide S 19 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Plausibility is tossed to the four winds in the course of the farce-comedy, 'Wives Never Know.' Had this story been told in a less rowdy fashion, it might have resulted in a sedate piece of drollery; but Elliott Nugent, the director, and those responsible for the script, saw fit to risk everything for the sake of hilarity. And the picture does give the spectators many a good laugh." Mordaunt Hall

+ — Boston Transcript p6 O 3 '36

"Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 10 '36

"From Vivienne Osborne and Claude Gillingwater to Copper Edward Gargan, 'Wives Never Know' is enacted in princely fashion, thus making the roll-call complete. From producer to bit-player it is perfectly handled. See it." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p15 S 12 '36

"Constructed on a tried and true farce formula, this must have looked hilarious on paper. And it is fairly amusing on the screen, thanks chiefly to Adolphe Menjou, who is fast becoming our favorite farceur. . . This will divert you—if your tastes are simple." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p44 O 31 '36

"The domestic establishment of Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland is holding what looks like a sacrifice auction sale. Second-hand oddments of the old homestead—including a spree scene by Mr. Ruggles, his familiar timid-husband sequences, and the usual number of stock Bolandisms, are offered—at a considerable reduction in humor—under the ambiguous, bargain-counter title, 'Wives Never Know.' The picture is merely an antiquated type of stage farce enacted before a camera. . . [It is] a series of almost wholly unamusing escapades." B. R. C.

— N Y Times p24 O 31 '36

"No permanent injury to the cinema has been accomplished by the production of 'Wives Never Know,' the amiable and inoffensive minor league comedy. Involving most of the staple elements of farce, it is pretty commonplace and tricky in plot, but there are also some funny moments and a good deal of excellent playing in it. The mixture results in fair-to-middling entertainment." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p43 N 2 '36

"Not intended to be exciting, 'Wives Never Know' is, however, funny in the way Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles manage to make their little treatises on matrimonial life. Adolphe Menjou is the figure who starts the trouble in this case. And it's a bright case, thanks to Miss Boland. Mr. Ruggles is bright, too." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p90 N 7 '36

"[It is] unpretentious comedy."

+ — News-Wk p42 N 7 '36

"Comedy teams, when they're held together over a protracted period of time, tend to become monotonous. . . But Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland are the exceptions that redeem the rule; the longer they co-star the greater fluency they develop in igniting each other's particular brand of humor. I won't presume to tell you that Mr. Ruggles and Miss Boland are funny. . . Scripters already know that . . . but just take a peek at their current vehicle to see how funny they can be."

+ Script p10 O 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A merry, mad, matrimonial mixup, this will be a riot with audiences who like their comedy straight with a dash of sophistication, and can hold its own in any situation. Family."

+ Box Office p63 S 19 '36

"[It is a] highly amusing comedy with Ruggles-Boland-Menjou scoring in domestic yarn of general appeal."

+ Film Daily p11 S 9 '36

"This new Ruggles-Boland comedy vehicle is a shining successor to 'Early to Bed.' It, too, is a hilarious farce comedy of domestic relations and it has an additional asset in the presence of Adolphe Menjou in another of the low-comedy roles to which he has recently been committed with so much success. The picture can safely be welcomed to the top rank of dual offerings, where it will have box office value beyond its predecessors."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 S 3 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 S 4 '36

"Estimate: pleasing laugh program."

+ Phila Exhibitor p35 S 15 '36

"Light in story texture and unimportant as to plot, this domestic farce owes far more to the players and direction than to the author, who merely provided the peg on which two able farceurs hang their japes. But it is good entertainment once the premise is established and is kept moving at an agreeable pace."

+ Variety p19 N 4 '36

"Taking a theme almost as old as the theatre itself, Producer Harlan Thompson has given a different touch and new comedy to the ancient institution of wifely jealousy and turned out a rollicking farce. . . 'Wives Never Know' is not a pretentious picture, but it is one that can stand a good build-up from the exhibitor without fear of consequence."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 S 3 '36

A WOMAN REBELS. RKO 93min N 6 '36

Cast: Katharine Hepburn. Herbert Marshall. Elizabeth Allan. Donald Crisp. Doris Dudley

Director: Mark Sandrich

Based on the novel Portrait of a Rebel by Netta Syrett. It is the story of a girl in England in the 70's who rebelled against her father's domination and later against Victorian convention before the time of woman's emancipation.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: excellent; Y: probably too mature; C: no."

Christian Century p1542 N 18 '36

"Charmingly pictured and dramatically developed is this story of one woman's fight for equal rights. . . Katharine Hepburn gives a softly shining quality to the role in which she moves from defiant girlhood to the fine maturity of a woman of forty. Mature." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul N 7 '36

"Katharine Hepburn was never more lovely than in this heart throbbing story of a woman who dared as desperately as she loved. Mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Outstanding. Katharine Hepburn gives a finely shaded performance except for the times when her own personality shines through too clearly and her diction becomes a little strident. The support players enter into the spirit of the production and the result is an outstanding and arresting picture. Adults." Calif Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"This [is a] beautifully photographed and smoothly directed picture in which Katharine Hepburn appears at her best. Adults; excellent; 14-18: little interest; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A poignant, sympathetic role which Katharine Hepburn could have made stronger. Adults. Excellent." DAR

"An outstanding production, at times deeply poignant and always profoundly sympathetic. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"An old plot, very sincerely acted and staged with notably careful attention to detail. Convincing and worth while for an adult audience." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Rising to tense dramatic heights, with a distinguished cast, the whole is a gem of a production. Adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul N 21 '36

"Mature audience."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 10 '36

Reviewed by H. M. Le Sourd

Motion Pict & Family p6 N 15 '36

"This absorbing drama gives Miss Hepburn an opportunity for one of her finest portrayals. . . The supporting cast is a fine one each member adding a bit to the perfection of the whole. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 3 '36

"Although sin is portrayed it is clearly shown as sin and retribution follows. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency N 5 '36

"A & Y: excellent; C: little interest."

Parents' M p46 Ja '37

"An outstanding production, at times deeply poignant and always profoundly sympathetic. Adults & young people."

+ + Sel Motion Pict p13 N 1 '36

"A tense drama. . . Katharine Hepburn does a splendid piece of acting and the production is well directed. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide O 24 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] is an amalgam of most of the theatrical stencils of the Victorian era. Yet Katharine Hepburn plays Pamela with such resourceful subtlety that the character actually comes alive." M. E. P.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 N 7 '36

Reviewed by Laura Elston

Canadian M p38 D '36

"So highly polished is this record of a valiant Victorian lady in revolt that you may not immediately realize its phony qualities. Adults."

Christian Science Monitor p17 N 14 '36

"The picture is an engrossing social drama, in intimate biographical recital of incidents in the life of a woman, which is made convincing solely because of the intelligent direction of the dialogue. . . By virtue of the easy, conversational tone in which Katharine Hepburn talks, her performance is the most convincing she ever has contributed to the screen. There is an entire absence of the suggestion of extravagance in both voice and gesture which has marred previous appearances. She never has been a great box-office favorite, but her response to Sandrich's direction in this picture should start her on the road to that distinction. . . The story does not give the picture its strength as entertainment. It opens well, the first sequence creating the necessary curiosity as to what will come next, but at least twice as it proceeds it sags too low to keep our interest from sagging with it."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 N 7 '36

"Pamela's passion play seems unduly long. Not that Miss Hepburn gives a bad performance. She is interesting as the heroine who bucks at convention and tradition. Probably it is a better characterization than she has contributed from Hollywood in some time." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p44 D 12 '36

"Miss Katharine Hepburn's seemingly endless preoccupation with costume drama stumbles momentarily in 'A Woman Rebels'. . . It is a chance for Miss Hepburn to be noble and brave, but once she has established those virtues, the film begins to skip down-hill. There is no doubt that 'A Woman Rebels' is excellent period drama, that it gives a blunt, condemning peek at Victorian England at its most squeamish. Also, Mark Sandrich, making his first deeply dramatic picture, has studied it with exceptionally shrewd bits of telling direction."

+ — Lit Digest p21 N 14 '36

"It is cunningly put together, ably acted and sometimes genuinely touching. If the idealogical content of the photoplay is generally obscured by an episodic and melodramatic romance, this was undoubtedly the intention of the producers. Katharine Hepburn gives an appealing if not altogether believable portrayal of a young lady who is alternately shaking off the shackles of her sex and getting in jams. . . The attractive Doris Dudley makes her screen debut. . . The part itself is so ill-defined that it would be charitable to reserve judgment on Miss Dudley's cinematic talents. . . Mark Sandrich, in his direction, has ignored the preposterous aspects of the scenario, making the most of confused material in a good-looking production, chiefly distinguished for Miss Hepburn's fine acting." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p23 O 30 '36

"As a portrait, frankly prejudiced, of the mid-Victorian era, 'A Woman Rebels' is amusing and occasionally charming. As drama, it leaves something to be desired. It never, in spite of the extraordinarily vivid and detailed atmosphere (the picture's greatest asset) approaches close to reality. . . 'A Woman Rebels,' thanks mostly to the delightful atmospheric detail and to Mark Sandrich's direction, is interesting if not moving. It describes, with frequent bitterness but occasional light comedy, an era the movies have left too long untouched." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p32 O 30 '36

"Aided by an excellent source book, Netta Syrett's 'Portrait of a Rebel,' and by a group of understanding players, [it has been] fashioned into a handsome period drama. . . Miss Hepburn has played every rebellious scene of it with fire, courage and a resolute spirit which kindles our admiration for Pamela. . . We have less respect for the stock dramatics. . . But this is merely by-play, a theatrical accompaniment to the larger theme, and we may accept it or reject it as melodramatic pyrotechnics illuminating the somber study of a Victorian rebel. In any case, it has been delicately inserted into the picture and need not bore you by its familiarity. The film has any number of capable performances besides that of Miss Hepburn, which is one of her best."

A WOMAN REBELS—Continued

F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p27 O 30 '36

"Miss Katharine Hepburn, the cinema's First Lady, is very successful in 'A Woman Rebels.' . . The narrative is one of those earnest but decrepit little things manufactured from all the weather-beaten odds and ends known to the cinema. That, however, is the worst to be said of 'A Woman Rebels,' since it is a definite pleasure to [watch] Miss Hepburn. . . She, of course, is glowing, hypnotic and vivid as Pamela, and Herbert Marshall is first-rate as her faithful admirer. . . In fact, everything about the film is good except the narrative."

William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 O 30 '36

"This is a rather sad little treatise on Woman's Rights, as they used to be called, and it rather seems to ask us to go over all that problem again. Miss Hepburn is stately and charming and has her style, of course. . . It's not exciting." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p90 N 7 '36

"It is Katharine Hepburn's picture. Her sympathetic and intelligent performance binds together the melodramatic incidents which compose the story. . . In an age when the presence of women in an elevator no longer prompts men to snatch off their hats, a crusade for women's rights might be expected to awaken only academic interest. But, with Miss Hepburn's performance and Mark Sandrich's direction, this picture stirs more than that."

+ News-Wk p40 N 7 '36

"A remarkable picture of the ugly Victorian mores at their worst. . . It is hard for a present-day audience to tolerate the smugness of such depressing respectability, or the equally depressing aestheticism of such godawful clothes, but it is a strong narrative story, acted to the hilt and directed by Mark Sandrich with intelligence, taste and fine understanding. Katharine Hepburn is superb." Rob Wagner

+ Script p10 N 7 '36

"Not since Jo in 'Little Women' has Katharine Hepburn had a role that fits her inimitable talents so snugly as Pamela in 'A Woman Rebels.' . . Pamela is deserted, dramatically, and left to create a lone portrait, without frame or background. This, we hasten to assure you, is no fault of Miss Hepburn's. She performs as valiantly as the script will allow, and makes her Pamela a person of dignity and character. We might call this a moral victory for Miss Hepburn."

Stage p18 D '36

"Ever since Katharine Hepburn set the cinema industry by the ears with 'Little Women,' her employers have been trying doggedly to discover just what elusive factor, added to the stock formula of Lavender & Old Lace, made that picture so sensationally successful. 'A Woman Rebels' represents an effort to discover if the element was the revolt of a young girl against convention. That the experiment is conducted with painstaking care only makes it the more apparent that the hypothesis is faulty. . . Marked by none of the vitality of its predecessors in Katharine Hepburn's Victorian series, 'A Woman Rebels' is saved from complete mediocrity by her well-modulated performance and by the admirable feeling for background and atmosphere implicit in Mark Sandrich's direction."

+ Time p46 N 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This problem play of the mid-Victorian era will have to lean heavily on the popularity of Katharine Hepburn for its returns. Although sincerely and convincingly enacted and bolstered by brilliant direction, the story is much too heavy and slow to have a general appeal to run-of-the-mill audiences. Adults."

+ Box Office p35 N 7 '36

"This picture is obviously for adult audiences, mature both physically and mentally, but the picture is so carefully produced and directed that there is never anything which could be called 'objectionable.' Hepburn scores heavily in the difficult role of the 'Rebel,' and her acting in all times is of the highest calibre."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p15 N 15 '36

"Here is a feminine film that the ladies of all degrees and ages will revel in. It gives Katharine Hepburn her most poignant and sympathetic role to date. And what she does with it will bring joy to a showman's heart and shekels to his box-office. Can't miss with the [ladies] from Fifth or Tenth avenues, and from all the avenues and crossroads from here to the Coast."

+ Film Daily p7 O 28 '36

"A picture of superlative merits and some grave defects, this narrative vehicle for Katharine Hepburn adds to her personal laurels and can probably be counted upon for better than average Hepburn business. Its appeal is largely to women. . . [It] takes the form of a fictional biography and as such it has continuity of design and passages of moving beauty, but lacks the suspensive power of tightly-woven drama. . . In this character Miss Hepburn has, perhaps, her most fitting role. From the girlhood episode to the moving end she commands sympathy and admiration. . . It is an impressive portrayal."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 O 28 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 O 26 '36

"Well made, directed, photographed, this belongs in the better group of Hepburn productions. Although there is a class tinge, the appeal should be universal."

+ Phila Exhibitor p33 N 1 '36

"Just so-so. Not the best and not the worst of the Hepburn starring series. It offers the press agents lots of openings for stunts, but the story, as developed, is rambling and without cumulative sock. While individual sequences are attractive the picture in general is pretty flat and will get by on the strength of its star rather than any merit in the story. . . All the characters ultimately become mere sticks in a make-believe parade backgrounding Miss Hepburn in a series of fetching Victorian fashions which reveal her doing Dietrich poses for the camera."

+ Variety p18 N 4 '36

"Katharine Hepburn, Herbert Marshall and an excellent support triumph immeasurably over an elaborate and complex story of structural difficulties. Result is spotty and loosely episodic, with strong emotional scenes alternating with academic statement of woman's estate in mid-Victorian England and considerable dialogic preachment alongside the tragic elements of the sustaining love story. Picture will probably not hurt Miss Hepburn, nor will it help her very much. . . [It] will ring up no record grosses, but it does promise substantial business at the class houses. It is preponderantly a woman's picture."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 O 28 '36

Y

YELLOW CRUISE. French motion picture
77min N 18 '36

Director: Andre Sauvage

Music: Paris Opera Orchestra

This is a camera record of the third Citroen Central Asia Expedition of eight thousand miles made in 1931-32 under the leadership of the famous French explorer Georges-Marie Haardt who died during the expedition. "Over the route which Marco Polo rode on camelback, through the souks of Kandahar and the snow deserts of Tibet, in forgotten lamaseries, and along the corpse-strewn streets of Shanghai, the cameras clicked and the microphones listened." (News-Wk)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency D 10 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Yellow Cruise' . . . conveys a great deal of information about the other side of the earth and [is] heartily recommended. . . [It] is a travel picture, following the third Citroen-Haardt expedition from Beirut to Peking—that is to say, over the Himalayas and through some of the most interesting countries in the world." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p67 D 5 '36

"[It] offers some remarkable scenes. For those who love adventure, or for the scholar, there should be wondrous stuff in 'The Yellow Cruise.'" Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p18 N 19 '36

"'The Yellow Cruise' is a picture to delight the travel-hungry, those to whom the very names of Bagdad, the Himalayas, Shanghai, Afghanistan, are magic. . . It's unmistakable authenticity is one of its chief charms. Although essentially a travel film, 'The Yellow Cruise' has its share of drama." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p31 N 18 '36

"The pictorial record of the odyssey, photographed with technical painstaking and an eye to the unusual . . . has been edited into a remarkable travel film by Léon Poirier; one which . . . definitely rescues the cinema travelogue from the ho-hum class." J. T. M.

+ + N Y Times p31 N 18 '36

"Couched in beautiful photography and containing incident after incident of great excitement, 'The Yellow Cruise' . . . is a graphic realization of man's inexhaustible curiosity about far-away places and his insatiable thirst for adventure. . . The melodramatic nature of the accomplishment, is recaptured in hauntingly beautiful photography and in sequences that illustrate graphically the dangers and hardships the expedition experienced. . . It is at once a superior educational and adventure entertainment." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 N 18 '36

"Subscribers to the National Geographic . . . will run in droves to see [it]. . . Quite a trip! Scenery, hardships, odd little natives. You may note that 'Kashmir 2' looks well on an automobile license, and you may thank your stars you're not in that part of the world where you have to protect your eyes with veils of yak hair." John Mosher

New Yorker p77 O 3 '36

"[It is] a sound film which the most conservative Hollywood press agent would dub 'colossal.' . . The picture is no dreamy travelogue. It is an exciting and beautiful record of a journey to legendary lands."

+ + News-Wk p27 S 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This camera record of the Citroen-Haardt expedition into little-known parts of Central Asia will prove splendid film fare for art theatres and for selected audiences. The photography gives many vivid closeups of unusual native types and pictures numerous scenic vistas and long shots, the narration is clear and concise and the musical accompaniment effectively creates the necessary mood. Family."

+ Box Office p63 O 17 '36

"This is one of the most unusual travel pictures ever filmed. . . [It] affords unusual views of the various countries, their peoples, architecture, etc. The photography is breathtakingly beautiful. In crossing the countries, the expedition used special motor tractors, and made its way under tremendous difficulties at times."

+ Film Daily p10 O 30 '36

"This is an expedition film which is more likely to be termed an overgrown travelogue. For sheer pictorial effects it tops everything ever before attempted. . . Intelligent moviegoers will receive this picture with open arms. For the others—doubtful appeal. The only criticism that might be offered would be the poor sound recording of the Paris opera orchestra, and fuzzy photography at the start of the film."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 My 9 '36

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 My 7 '36

"Scientific, detailed, 'The Yellow Cruise' offers a valuable contribution to the cinematographic literature on geography, exploration, but in its present form has its intensely interesting passages much too separated by lengthy expositions of mere details. . . Cut to about three reels, 'The Yellow Cruise' would probably make a wow travelogue, but in its present form—with English narrative, English sub-titles where on-the-spot French was recorded—it is usable only in foreign, art houses where the clientele is geographically, exploringly minded."

Phila Exhibitor p34 D 1 '36

"This is a travelogue of much higher than average mettle, but well-nigh ruined for the American market by inept handling and editing. Even as is, intrinsic merit should make it a good bet for the arties. Had it been properly edited, however, it might have qualified as a feature for regular channels. . . Great deal of the footage is highly interesting and different from the usual run of things. . . Photography is unusually good and there is an interesting (though noisy) accompanying musical score. Lecture is in English with the speaker an uncredited Englishman. Good idea, his not being credited; there's no credit due; it's one of the picture's major weaknesses. He has a dull, tiring voice and an astonishingly constant misconception of diction. About a third of what he says is understandable. . . Another fault is in the cutting; it's inexpertly done and there isn't enough of it; taking out 15 or 20 minutes would help a lot."

+ — Variety p15 N 25 '36

YELLOWSTONE. Universal 62min Ag 30 '36

Cast: Henry Hunter. Judith Barratt. Andy Devine. Ralph Morgan

Director: Arthur Lubin

See issue of September 28, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y and C: little value."

Christian Century p1375 O 14 '36

"Direction and dialogue are undistinguished; some attractive scenery is shown and the hot water springs are an interesting addition to the cinema's lethal weapons. Foster, a tragic and pathetic example of a man who has suffered and learnt nothing by his suffering is well played by Ralph Morgan. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p178 O '36

"Fair. Family-mature."

+ — Motion Pict Guide D '36

YELLOWSTONE—Continued

"A murder melodrama laid in beautiful Yellowstone Park. This piquant combination will not be enjoyed by those who like the beauty of nature unmarred by bandits and sudden death. Most audiences, however, will enjoy the rather adroit interweaving of love and mystery against the superb background of falls, geysers, and high mountain trails. Adolescents, 12-16: matter of taste; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R p9 S '36

"A and Y: mediocre; C: doubtful."
Parents' M p44 N '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Adults,"

Christian Science Monitor O 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Far-fetched tale handicapped by the rather poor showing of Henry Hunter and Judith Barrett in the leads, this emerges as weak second-feature farce. Family."

— Box Office p19 S 26 '36

"Fine Yellowstone Park background is enjoyable highlight of fairly good melodrama."

+ — Film Daily p3 S 19 '36

"Outside of a couple of fantastic sidelights on natural science, this [mystery] hits the deep-end in interest. With the scenic and underground phenomena of Yellowstone Park serving as the background, the narrative staggers along minus suspense, excitement or logic. 'Yellowstone' is strictly of minor dual rating, and can be counted on for anything but support."

— Variety p16 S 23 '36

ANNUAL INDEX

Under the names of the leading actors and actresses will be found the productions in which they have taken part.

Under the director's name will be found a list of the films which he directed.

Under the headings Books, Plays and Short Stories (Adapted) will be found the author, title of published work and the title of the film. When the title of the film differs from the title of the book, the film's title is given in parenthesis, thus:

Eberhart, M. G.

From this dark stairway (Murder of Dr Harrigan)

An annual title index containing all films which have appeared in the various numbers from December 16, 1935 through December 28, 1936 follows the Annual Index.

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

- |                       |                            |                            |
|-----------------------|----------------------------|----------------------------|
| Abel, Walter          | Allwyn, Astrid             | Astaire, Fred              |
| Fury                  | Flying hostess             | Follow the fleet           |
| Lady consents         | Alpar, Gitta               | Swing time                 |
| Second wife           | I give my heart            | Top hat                    |
| Three musketeers      | Alvarado, Don              | Asther, Nils               |
| Two in the dark       | Red wagon                  | Abdul the damned           |
| We went to college    | Spy 77                     | Astor, Mary                |
| Witness chair         | Ameche, Don                | And so they were married   |
| Abraikosof, A.        | Ladies in love             | Dodsworth                  |
| Anna                  | Ramona                     | Lady from nowhere          |
| Grain                 | Sins of man                | Man of iron                |
| Acuff, Eddie          | Ames, Adrienne             | Murder of Dr Harrigan      |
| Boulder dam           | Abdul the damned           | Trapped by television      |
| Guns of the Pecos     | Anderson, Eddie            | Atkins, Robert             |
| Adams, Ted            | Green pastures             | Cardinal                   |
| Under cover man       | Andre, Lona                | Atwill, Lionel             |
| Adrien, Iris          | Lucky terror               | Absolute quiet             |
| Criminal within       | Skybound                   | Captain Blood              |
| Aherne, Brian         | Andrews, Stanley           | Lady of secrets            |
| I live my life        | Wild Brian Kent            | Till we meet again         |
| Sylvia Scarlett       | Angel, Heather             | Auer, Mischa               |
| Ainley, Henry         | Daniel Boone               | Gay desperado              |
| As you like it        | Last of the Mohicans       | Three smart girls          |
| Alberni, Luis         | Perfect gentleman          | Aumont, Jean-Pierre        |
| Dancing pirate        | Three musketeers           | Lac Aux Dames              |
| Follow your heart     | Apfel, Oscar               | Autry, Gene                |
| Albertson, Frank      | Fire trap                  | Big show                   |
| East of Java          | Shadows of the Orient      | Comin' 'round the mountain |
| Fury                  | Appleby, Dorothy           | Guns and guitars           |
| Waterfront lady       | North of Nome              | Melody trail               |
| Albright, Hardie      | Arledge, John              | Sagebrush troubadour       |
| Red salute            | Two in revolt              | Singing cowboy             |
| Alerme                | You may be next            | Singing vagabond           |
| La Kermesse heroique  | Arlen, Richard             | Tumbling tumbleweeds       |
| Pension Mimosas       | Calling of Dan Matthews    | Ayres, Lew                 |
| Alexander, Katharine  | Mine with the iron door    | Lady be careful            |
| Splendor              | Three live ghosts          | Leathernecks have landed   |
| Sutter's gold         | Arlliss, George            | Murder with pictures       |
| Alexander, Ross       | East meets west            | Panic on the air           |
| Boulder dam           | Mister Hobo                | Shakedown                  |
| Brides are like that  | Transatlantic tunnel       |                            |
| Captain Blood         | Armetta, Henry             |                            |
| China Clipper         | Let's sing again           |                            |
| Here comes Carter     | Magnificent brute          |                            |
| Hot money             | Three kids and a queen     |                            |
| I married a doctor    | Armstrong, Edwina          | Babochkin, Boris           |
| Shipmates forever     | Once in a blue moon        | Three women                |
| Allan, Elizabeth      | Armstrong, Louis           | Bacon, Irving              |
| The shadow            | Pennies from heaven        | Drift fence                |
| Tale of two cities    | Armstrong, Robert          | Bacque, André              |
| a woman rebels        | All American chump         | Maria Chapdelaine          |
| Allen, Adrienne       | Dangerous waters           | Baker, Benny               |
| Morals of Marcus      | Ex-Mrs Bradford            | Drift fence                |
| Allen, Bob            | Public enemy's wife        | Lady be careful            |
| Ranger courage        | Without orders             | Millions in the air        |
| Unknown ranger        | Arnold, Edward             | Murder with pictures       |
| Allen, Fred           | Come and get it            | Panic on the air           |
| Thanks a million      | Crime and punishment       | Rose Bowl                  |
| Allen, Gracie         | Diamond Jim                | Bakewell, William          |
| Big broadcast of 1936 | Meet Nero Wolfe            | Lady luck                  |
| Big broadcast of 1937 | Remember last night        | Sea spoilers               |
| Here comes Cookie     | Sutter's gold              | Balfour, Betty             |
| Allen, Jimmie         | Arthur, Jean               | Born for glory             |
| Sky parade            | Adventure in Manhattan     | Balieff, Nikita            |
| Allen, Judith         | Diamond Jim                | Once in a blue moon        |
| Burning gold          | Ex-Mrs Bradford            | Ball, George               |
| Allen, Robert         | If you could only cook     | Men of the plains          |
| Guard that girl       | Mr Deeds goes to town      | Ballew, Smith              |
| Pride of the Marines  | More than a secretary      | Palm Springs               |
| Allister, Claude      | The plainsman              | Racing lady                |
| Three live ghosts     | Public menace              | Bancroft, George           |
|                       | Ashcroft, Peggy            | Hell ship Morgan           |
|                       | Rhodes, the diamond master | Mr Deeds goes to town      |
|                       |                            | Wedding present            |

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

—Continued

Banks, Leslie
Three maxims
Transatlantic tunnel
Barbier, George
Early to bed
Here comes Cookie
Preview murder mystery
Spendthrift
Three married men
Barclay, Joan
Glory trail
Men of the plains
Prison shadows
West of Nevada
Barnes, Binnie
Diamond Jim
Last of the Mohicans
Magnificent brute
Rendezvous
Small town girl
Sutter's gold
Three smart girls
Barnes, Jane
Frontier justice
Barnett, Vince
Captain calamity
Dancing feet
Rest cure
Yellow cargo
Barondess, Barbara
Easy money
Barrat, Robert
Dr Socrates
Draegerman courage
Trailin' west
Barrett, Judith
Flying hostess
Yellowstone
Barrett, Mary Jane
Ladies love hats
Barrie, Mona
Here comes trouble
Love on the run
Melody lingers on
Storm over the Andes
Barrie, Wendy
Love on a bet
Millions in the air
Scandals of Paris
Speed
Ticket to paradise
Under your spell
Barrymore, Dolores Costello
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Yours for the asking
Barrymore, John
Romeo and Juliet
Barrymore, Lionel
Ah, wilderness
Devil doll
Gorgeous hussy
Return of Peter Grimm
Road to glory
Voice of Bugle Ann
Bartholomew, Freddie
Anna Karenina
Devil is a sissy
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Lloyds of London
Professional soldier
Bartlett, Michael
Follow your heart
Music goes 'round
She married her boss
Barton, Buzz
Feud of the west
Riding avenger
Romance rides the range
Barton, Finis
Secret patrol
Barton, James
His family tree
Basseggio, Cesco
Alpine love
Bato-Ochir
Son of Mongolia
Batobrina, G.
Children of the revolution
Baugé, André
Le Barbier de Seville

Baur, Harry
Crime et châiment
I stand condemned
Les Misérables
Baxter, Alan
Case against Mrs Ames
Mary Burns, fugitive
Parole
Thirteen hours by air
Baxter, Jane
Dusty ermine
Baxter, Warner
King of burlesque
Prisoner of Shark Island
Road to glory
Robin Hood of El Dorado
To Mary—with love
White hunter
Bayer, Ferdinand
Don Bosco
Beal, John
M'liss
We who are about to die
Beavers, Louise
Rainbow on the river
Beck, Thomas
Can this be Dixie?
Every Saturday night
Beecher, Janet
I'd give my life
Love before breakfast
So red the rose
Beery, Noah
Crimson circle
King of the damned
Beery, Noah, Jr.
Parole
Stormy
Beery, Wallace
Ah, wilderness
Message to Garcia
Old hutch
O'Shaughnessy's boy
Bell, Rex
Idaho kid
Men of the plains
Too much beef
West of Nevada
Bellamy, Ralph
Dangerous intrigue
Final hour
Hands across the table
Man who lived twice
Navy wife
Roaming lady
Straight from the shoulder
Wild Brian Kent
Bellia, Aida
Gesuzza, la sposa Garibaldina
Benchley, Robert
How to behave
Piccadilly Jim
Bennett, Constance
Everything is thunder
Ladies in love
Bennett, Joan
Big brown eyes
Man who broke the bank
at Monte Carlo
She couldn't take it
Thirteen hours by air
Two for tonight
Two in a crowd
Wedding present
Benny, Jack
Big broadcast of 1937
Broadway melody of 1936
It's in the air
Benson, Elaine
Old curiosity shop
Berankova, Jarmila
Young love
Bergen, Connie
Too much beef
Bergman, Ingrid
On the sunnyside
Bergner, Elisabeth
As you like it
Bernard, Armand
Amphitryon

Bernard, Nerio
Tempo Massimo
Bernard, Paul
Pension Mimosas
Berri, Mady
La Maternelle
Berriau, Simone
Ciboulette
Itto
Berry, W. H.
Once in a million
Student romance
Besozzi, Nino
Il Serpente a Sonagli
Best, Willie
Racing lady
Bettarini, Cesare
Wedding march
Bezan, Isla
Wolves of the underworld
Bickford, Charles
East of Java
The plainsman
Pride of the Marines
Red wagon
Rose of the Rancho
Biliotti, Enzo
One hundred days of Napoleon
Bilotto, Camillo
Lorenzino de Medici
Bing, Herman
Adventure in Manhattan
Champagne waltz
Come closer, folks
Bird, Richard
Crouching beast
Birell, Tala
Crime and punishment
White legion
Blackmer, Sidney
False pretenses
Fire trap
Forced landing
Heart of the west
House of secrets
Missing girls
President's mystery
Blake, Gladys
Racing blood
Blake, Judith
Wanted: Jane Turner
Blake, Mary
Code of the range
Blakeley, James
Gay desperado
Blakeney, Olive
Come out of the pantry
Blanchar, Pierre
Crime et châiment
Blane, Sally
This is the life
Blavette
Les Amours de Toni
Blondell, Joan
Bullets or ballots
Colleen
Gold diggers of 1937
Miss Pacific Fleet
Sons o' guns
Stage struck
Three men on a horse
Blore, Eric
Diamond Jim
Ex-Mrs Bradford
I dream too much
Piccadilly Jim
Seven keys to Baldpate
Smartest girl in town
Sons o' guns
Swing time
Two in the dark
Blue, Monte
Nevada
Prison shadows
Song of the Gringo
Trails of the wild
Treachery rides the range
Blumenthal-Tamarina, M. M.
Greater promise
Boardman, Virginia True
Crime patrol

- Bogart, Humphrey
   Bullets or ballots
   China Clipper
   Great O'Malley
   Isle of fury
   Petrified forest
   Two against the world
 Bogda, Marja
   Young forest
 Bogolybov, N.
   Seven brave men
 Bohnen, Michael
   Private life of Louis XIV
 Boitel, Jeanne
   Amphitryon
 Boland, Mary
   Early to bed
   A son comes home
   Two for tonight
   Wives never know
 Boles, John
   Craig's wife
   Littlest rebel
   Message to Garcia
   Rose of the Rancho
 Bollman, Hans Heinz
   Frasquita
 Bolognesi, Gina
   Milizia Territoriale
 Bond, Ford
   Hunters' paradise
   Thrills with daredevils
 Bond, Ward
   Avenging waters
   Cattle thief
   Conflict
   Crash Donovan
   Legion of terror
   Pride of the Marines
 Bondi, Beulah
   Case against Mrs Ames
   Gorgeous hussy
   Moon's our home
 Bosworth, Hobart
   Dark hour
   Wildcat trooper
 Bouchier, Chili
   Mr Cohen takes a walk
 Bourday, Simone
   La porteuse de pain
 Bourdelle, Thomy
   Seven sinners
 Bourne, Whitney
   Once in a blue moon
 Boyd, Bill
   Eagle's brood
   Racing luck
 Boyd, William
   Bar 20 rides again
   Burning gold
   Call of the prairie
   Federal agent
   Go get-'em Haines
   Heart of the west
   Hopalong Cassidy returns
   Three on the trail
 Boyer, Charles
   Le Bonheur
   Garden of Allah
 Bracey, Sidney
   Changing of the guard
 Bradley, Grace
   Dangerous waters
   F-man
   Sitting on the moon
 Brady, Alice
   Go west, young man
   Harvester
   Metropolitan
   My man Godfrey
   Three smart girls
 Brandon, Henry
   Killer at large
 Brandt, Ivan
   Forget me not
 Brantford, Mickey
   Last journey
   Mr Cohen takes a walk
 Breakston, George
   Return of Peter Grimm
 Breen, Bobby
   Let's sing again
   Rainbow on the river
 Brennan, Walter
   Banjo on my knee
   Come and get it
   Three godfathers
 Brent, Evelyn
   Forgotten woman
   It couldn't have happened
   President's mystery
   Song of the trail
 Brent, George
   Case against Mrs Ames
   Give me your heart
   Golden arrow
   In person
   More than a secretary
   Snowed under
   Special agent
 Brent, Romney
   East meets west
 Brian, Mary
   Killer at large
   Once in a million
   Spendthrift
   Three married men
 Brice, Fanny
   Great Ziegfeld
 Brick, Ben
   Itto
 Bridge, Al
   Fast bullets
 Brignone, Lilla
   Il Serpente a Sonagli
 Brissac, Virginia
   Murder by an aristocrat
 Brisson, Carl
   Ship cafe
 Broderick, Helen
   Bride walks out
   Love on a bet
   Murder on a bridge path
   Smartest girl in town
   Swing time
   To beat the band
 Brodzisz, Adam
   Young forest
 Bromberg, J. Edward
   Crime of Dr Forbes
   Sins of man
   Star for a night
 Brook, Clive
   Love in exile
 Brooks, Louise
   Empty saddles
 Brooks, Marjorie
   She shall have music
 Brooks, Phyllis
   Another face
 Brophy, Edward
   Kelly the second
   Show them no mercy
   Spendthrift
 Brown, Joe E.
   Earthworm tractors
   Midsummer night's dream
   Polo Joe
   Sons o' guns
 Brown, Johnny Mack
   Between men
   Courageous avenger
   Crooked trail
   Desert phantom
   Everyman's law
   Rogue of the range
   Under cover man
 Brown, Tom
   And sudden death
   Annapolis farewell
   Freckles
   Gentle Julia
   I'd give my life
   Rose Bowl
 Browne, Charles A.
   Federal agent
 Browne, Lucille
   Crooked trail
   Tumbling tumbleweeds
 Bruce, Nigel
   Charge of the Light Brigade
   Follow your heart
 Bruce, Virginia
   Born to dance
   Garden murder case
   Great Ziegfeld
   Here comes the band
   Metropolitan
   Pirate party on Catalina Island
 Brunius, Anne-Marie
   Youth of today
 Bryan, Jane
   Captain's kid
 Bryant, Nana
   Blackmailer
 Bryning, John
   Rembrandt
 Buchanan, Jack
   Come out of the pantry
   When knights were bold
 Buck, Frank
   Fang and claw
 Buckler, John
   Tarzan escapes
 Bunchuk, Yasha
   Moscow moods
 Bupp, Tommy
   Conflict
   Roarin' guns
 Burgess, Betty
   Coronado
 Burgess, Helen
   The plainsman
 Burke, Billie
   Craig's wife
   Feather in her hat
   My American wife
   Piccadilly Jim
   She couldn't take it
 Burke, James
   Forgotten faces
   Leathernecks have landed
 Burke, Kathleen
   Last outpost
   Nevada
 Burnette, Smiley
   Big show
   Comin' 'round the mountain
   Guns and guitars
   Melody trail
   Sagebrush troubadour
   Singing cowboy
   Singing vagabond
   Tumbling tumbleweeds
 Burnier, Robert
   Ciboulette
 Burns, Bob
   Big broadcast of 1937
   Rhythm on the range
 Burns, George
   Big broadcast of 1936
   Big broadcast of 1937
   Here comes Cookie
 Burrud, Billy
   Cowboy and the kid
   Pride of the Marines
 Burton, Frederick
   Calling of Dan Matthews
 Busch, Mae
   Bohemian girl
 Bushell, Anthony
   Dusty ermine
 Bushman, Francis X., Jr.
   Caryl of the mountains
 Bushuyev, C.
   We are from Kronstadt
 Butterworth, Charles
   Half angel
   Magnificent obsession
   Moon's our home
   Rainbow on the river
   We went to college
 Byington, Spring
   Back to nature
   Educating father
   Every Saturday night
   Girl on the front page
 Byron, Walter
   Bridge of sighs

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

—Continued

- Cabot, Bruce
 Big game
 Don't gamble with love
 Don't turn 'em loose
 Fury
 Last of the Mohicans
 Legion of terror
 Robin Hood of El Dorado
 Show them no mercy
 Three wise guys
 Cagney, James
 Ceiling zero
 Frisco Kid
 Midsummer night's dream
 Caine, Georgia
 White angel
 Callahan, Margaret
 His family tree
 Last outlaw
 Muss 'em up
 Seven keys to Baldpate
 Special investigator
 Calleia, Joseph
 After the thin man
 Exclusive story
 His brother's wife
 Riffraff
 Sworn enemy
 Tough guy
 Calloway, Cab
 Singing kid
 Calthrop, Donald
 Scrooge
 Cambre, Del
 Tundra
 Campeau, Frank
 Everyman's law
 Campo, Del
 Devil on horseback
 Cansino, Rita
 Rebellion
 Cantor, Eddie
 Strike me pink
 Carew, James
 Come out of the pantry
 Carey, Harry
 Last of the Clintons
 Last outlaw
 Powdersmoke range
 Racing lady
 Valiant is the word for
 Carrie
 Wild mustang
 Carle, Richard
 Easy to take
 Carleton, William P.
 Border patrolman
 Carlisle, Kitty
 Night at the opera
 Carlisle, Mary
 Lady be careful
 Love in exile
 Superspeed
 Carlyle, David
 Cain and Mabel
 Carminati, Tullio
 Three maxims
 Wedding march
 Carradine, John
 Daniel Boone
 Garden of Allah
 Laughing at trouble
 Mary of Scotland
 Winterset
 Carrillo, Leo
 Gay desperado
 If you could only cook
 It had to happen
 Moonlight murder
 Carroll, John
 Hi Gaucho
 Carroll, Madeleine
 Case against Mrs Ames
 General died at dawn
 Lloyds of London
 Secret agent
 Thirty-nine steps
 Carroll, Virginia
 Wellington Pike goes west
 Cassidy, Ed
 Courageous avenger
 Catlett, Walter
 Affair of Susan
 Banjo on my knee
 Cain and Mabel
 We went to college
 Cavanagh, Paul
 Champagne Charlie
 Crime over London
 Splendor
 Thunder in the night
 Cavanaugh, Hobart
 Here comes Carter
 Love begins at twenty
 Cawthorn, Joseph
 Brides are like that
 Crime over London
 Freshman love
 Harmony lane
 Hot money
 Cellier, Antoinette
 Ourselves alone
 Cellier, Frank
 Man who changed his mind
 Ceseri, Ugo
 Passaporto Rosso
 Chandler, Chick
 Tango
 Three of a kind
 Chandler, Lane
 Idaho kid
 Winds of the wasteland
 Chaney, Lon, Jr.
 Singing cowboy
 Chaplin, Charles
 Modern times
 Charpin, M.
 Le Barbier de Seville
 Chase, Alden
 Rogue of the range
 Chase, Charley
 Kelly the second
 Neighborhood house
 Chase, Ilka
 Lady consents
 Chatterton, Ruth
 Dodsworth
 Girls' dormitory
 Lady of secrets
 Chellini, Amelia
 Your troubles are mine
 Chernaya, Lala
 Gypsies
 Chevalier, Maurice
 Beloved vagabond
 L'homme des Folies Bergère
 Christians, Mady
 Ship cafe
 Chrystall, Belle
 Scotland Yard mystery
 Churchill, Berton
 Dark hour
 Racing lady
 Three of a kind
 Churchill, Marguerite
 Alibi for murder
 Dracula's daughter
 Final hour
 Legion of terror
 Man hunt
 Murder by an aristocrat
 Walking dead
 Ciannelli, Eduardo
 Criminal lawyer
 Winterset
 Claire, Bernice
 Two hearts in harmony
 Clark, Harvey
 Boss rider of Gun Creek
 Empty saddles
 Clarke, Mae
 Hearts in bondage
 Hitch hike lady
 House of a thousand candles
 Wild Brian Kent
 Clausen, Claus
 Making of a king
 Clayworth, June
 Two-fisted gentleman
 Clifford, Jack
 Gallant defender
 Clive, Colin
 Man who broke the bank
 at Monte Carlo
 Widow from Monte Carlo
 Clive, E. E.
 Isle of fury
 Clyde, Andy
 Hot Paprika
 Straight from the shoulder
 Yellow dust
 Clyde, June
 Dance band
 Forgotten women
 Land without music
 She shall have music
 Cobb, Ed
 California mail
 Cobb, Irvin S.
 Everybody's old man
 Pepper
 Steamboat round the bend
 Cody, Bill
 Blazing justice
 Lawless border
 Outlaws of the range
 Cody, Bill, Jr.
 Outlaws of the range
 Coghlan, Frank, Jr.
 Little red schoolhouse
 Colbert, Claudette
 Bride comes home
 She married her boss
 Under two flags
 Collier, Constance
 Girls' dormitory
 Professional soldier
 Collins, Charles
 Dancing pirate
 Collins, Cora Sue
 Harvester
 Two sinners
 Collins, Monte
 Just speeding
 Colman, Ronald
 Man who broke the bank
 at Monte Carlo
 Tale of two cities
 Under two flags
 Colombo, Eugenio
 Your troubles are mine
 Compson, Betty
 August week-end
 Dragnet
 Killer at large
 Millionaire kid
 Compton, Joyce
 Country gentlemen
 Ellis Island
 Suicide squad
 Trapped by television
 Conklin, Chester
 Call of the prairie
 Modern times
 Conklin, Peggy
 Devil is a sissy
 Her master's voice
 One-way ticket
 Connolly, Walter
 King steps out
 Libeled lady
 Music goes 'round
 One-way ticket
 She couldn't take it
 So red the rose
 Soak the rich
 Consino, Rita
 Paddy O'Day
 Cook, Donald
 Confidential
 Ellis Island
 Girl from Mandalay
 Leavenworth case
 Ring around the moon
 Showboat
 Spanish Cape mystery
 Cook, Elisha, Jr.
 Two in a crowd
 Cooper, Anthony Kemble
 Master Will Shakespeare
 Cooper, Gary
 Desire
 General died at dawn
 Mr Deeds goes to town
 Peter Ibbetson
 The plainsman
 Cooper, George
 Ride 'em cowboy

- Cooper, Jackie
Devil is a sissy
O'Shaughnessy's boy
Tough guy
- Corbett, Leonora
Living dangerously
- Corradi, Nelly
Alpine love
Crooked love
- Corrigan, Ray
Three mesquiteers
- Cortez, Ricardo
Case of the black cat
Frisco Kid
Man hunt
Murder of Dr Harrigan
Postal Inspector
Special agent
Walking dead
- Cossart, Ernest
My American wife
Palm Springs
- Cotter, Catherine
Outlaws of the range
Sundown Saunders
Courtneidge, Cicely
Perfect gentleman
- Courtney, Inez
Dizzy dames
It couldn't have happened
Reckless way
- Coxen, Edward
Code of the range
- Crabbe, Larry
Arizona raiders
Desert gold
Drift fence
Lady be careful
Nevada
Rose Bowl
- Cramer, Richard
Speed reporter
- Craven, Frank
Harvester
- Crawford, Joan
Gorgeous hussy
I live my life
Love on the run
- Crehan, Joseph
Song of a nation
- Creti, Vasco
Your troubles are mine
- Crisp, Donald
Charge of the Light Brigade
Great O'Malley
A woman rebels
- Crispin, Jeanne
Second bureau
- Croker-King, Charles
White angel
- Cromwell, Richard
Annapolis farewell
Poppy
- Crosby, Bing
Anything goes
Pennies from heaven
Rhythm on the range
Two for tonight
- Crosman, Henrietta
Charlie Chan's secret
Follow your heart
Girl of the Ozarks
Hitch hike to heaven
Moon's our home
- Cross, Milton J.
Steel and stone
- Cummings, Constance
Remember last night
Seven sinners
- Cummings, Robert
Accusing finger
Border flight
Desert gold
Forgotten faces
Hideaway girl
Hollywood Boulevard
Three cheers for love
- Curzon, George
Scotland Yard mystery
Two hearts in harmony
White angel
- Cutler, Kate
When knights were bold
- Dale, Esther
Farmer in the dell
Hollywood Boulevard
- Dallan
Les Amours de Toni
- Damita, Lili
Devil on horseback
Frisco kid
- D'Ancora, Monte
Milizia Territoriale
- Daniell, Henry
Unguarded hour
- Daniels, Bebe
Music is magic
- Dann, Roger
La Porteuse de Pain
- Dante, Jean
Four days' wonder
- D'Arcy, Roy
Revolt of the Zombies
- Darro, Frankie
Born to fight
Charlie Chan at the race track
Racing blood
Three kids and a queen
Valley of wanted men
- Darwell, Jane
Craig's wife
First baby
Laughing at trouble
Little Miss Nobody
Navy wife
Paddy O'Day
Star for a night
White Fang
- Davidson, William
Murder by an aristocrat
- Davies, Marion
Cain and Mabel
Hearts divided
Pirate party on Catalina Island
- Davis, Bette
Dangerous
Golden arrow
Hard luck dame
Petrified forest
Satan met a lady
Special agent
- Davis, Owen, Jr.
Bunker Bean
Grand jury
Plot thickens
- Day, Frances
Girl from Maxim's
- Deane, Shirley
Back to nature
Educating father
First baby
- Dearly, Max
Les Misérables
- Debain, Henri
La Maternelle
- De Cordoba, Pedro
Condemned to live
- Dee, Frances
Gay deception
Half angel
- De Filippo, Eduardo
Il Cappello a Tre Punte
- De Filippo, Peppino
Il Cappello a Tre Punte
- De Haven, Carter
Modern times
- De Havilland, Olivia
Anthony Adverse
Captain Blood
Charge of the Light Brigade
- Deis, Carol
Seeing Nellie home
- Delamare, Lise
Pension Mimosas
- Delaney, Charles
Millionaire kid
- Dell, Claudia
Ghost patrol
Midnight phantom
- Delmont, E.
Les Amours de Toni
- Del Rio, Dolores
Accused
I live for love
Widow from Monte Carlo
- De Marney, Derrick
Land without music
- De Mille, Katherine
Banjo on my knee
Drift fence
Sky parade
- Denis, Mario
Lorenzino de Medici
Your troubles are mine
- Denny, Reginald
It couldn't have happened
Lady in scarlet
Midnight phantom
More than a secretary
Preview murder mystery
Rest cure
- Derean, Rosine
Lac Aux Dames
- Dermoz, Germaine
La Porteuse de Pain
- De Sica, Vittorio
La Canzone del Sole
I love you only
Tempo Massimo
- Desmond, Florence
Accused
- Despres, Suzanne
Maria Chapdelaine
- Devine, Andy
Coronado
Fighting youth
Flying hostess
Yellowstone
- Devire, Earl
Sundown Saunders
- Diehl, Carl
Spy 77
- Dietrich, Marlene
Desire
Garden of Allah
- Dietz, Lilliane
La Canzone del Sole
- Digges, Dudley
General died at dawn
Three live ghosts
Unguarded hour
Valiant is the word for Carrie
Voice of Bugle Ann
- Di Luca, Dino
Blind girl of Sorrento
- Dinehart, Alan
Born to dance
Charlie Chan at the race track
Human cargo
It had to happen
King of the Royal Mounted
Parole
- Dix, Dorothy
Guns and guitars
Sunset of power
- Dix, Richard
Devil's squadron
Special investigator
Transatlantic tunnel
Yellow dust
- Dixon, Jean
Magnificent brute
- Dixon, Lee
Gold diggers of 1937
- Dodd, Claire
Case of the velvet claws
Murder by an aristocrat
Navy born
Pay-Off
Song of a nation
- Donat, Robert
Ghost goes west
Thirty-nine steps
- Donlevy, Brian
Another face
Half angel
High tension
Human cargo
Strike me pink
Thirteen hours by air
- Donnelly, Ruth
Fatal lady
More than a secretary
Personal maid's secret
Song and dance man
- Doran, Ann
Little red schoolhouse

ACTORS and ACTRESSES

—Continued

- Doran, Mary
 Bridge of sighs
 Dorny, Therese
 Ciboulette
 Doucet, Catherine
 Longest night
 Luckiest girl in the world
 Poppy
 Douglas, Melvyn
 And so they were married
 Gorgeous hussy
 Lone wolf returns
 Mary Burns, fugitive
 She married her boss
 Theodora goes wild
 Dowling, Maryan
 Desert justice
 Downs, Johnny
 Arizona raiders
 Coronado
 Everybody's old man
 First baby
 Pigskin parade
 Doyle, Maxine
 Condemned to live
 Put on the spot
 Drake, Frances
 And sudden death
 Florida special
 I'd give my life
 Invisible ray
 Preview murder mystery
 Draper, Paul
 Colleen
 Drayton, Alfred
 Crimson circle
 Dreon
 La Porteuse de Pain
 Duchin, Eddie
 Coronado
 Dudley, Doris
 A woman rebels
 Dudley-Ward, Penelope
 I stand condemned
 Du Maurier, Gerald
 Scotland Yard mystery
 Dumbville, Douglass
 End of the trail
 Mr Deeds goes to town
 M'liss
 Princess comes across
 Public menace
 Witness chair
 You may be next
 Duna, Steffi
 Dancing pirate
 Hi Gaucho
 I conquer the sea
 Dunbar, Dixie
 Back to nature
 Educating father
 First baby
 King of burlesque
 Dunn, James
 Bad boy
 Come closer, folks
 Don't get personal
 Hearts in bondage
 Pay-Off
 Two-fisted gentleman
 Dunne, Irene
 Magnificent obsession
 Showboat
 Theodora goes wild
 Duprez, June
 Cardinal
 Crimson circle
 Durant, Jack
 Music is magic Durante, Jimmy
 Land without music
 Durbin, Deanna
 Three smart girls
 Dvorak, Ann
 Dr Socrates
 Racing lady
 Thanks a million
 We who are about to die
- Ebsen, Buddy
 Banjo on my knee
 Born to dance
 Captain January
 Eburne, Maude
 Doughnuts and society
 Happiness C.O.D.
 Leavenworth case
 Eddy, Nelson
 Rose Marie
 Edwards, Alan
 If you could only cook
 Eggerth, Marta
 Divine spark
 Eilers, Sally
 Don't get personal
 Florida special
 Remember last night
 Strike me pink
 Without orders
 Ekelund, Karin
 Vaaran Pojke
 Elambert, Paulette
 La Maternelle
 Eldredge, John
 Man of iron
 Murder of Dr Harrigan
 Eldridge, Florence
 Mary of Scotland
 Elliott, Gordon
 Case of the velvet claws
 Elliott, John
 Bulldog courage
 Ellis, Edward
 Chatterbox
 Lady consents
 Return of Peter Grimm
 Texas Rangers
 Wanderer of the wasteland
 Winterset
 Ellis, Mary
 Fatal lady
 Ellis, Patricia
 Boulder dam
 Case of the lucky legs
 Down the stretch
 Freshman love
 Love begins at twenty
 Pay-Off
 Postal Inspector
 Sing me a love song
 Snowed under
 Ellison, Jimmy
 Bar 20 rides again
 Call of the prairie
 Eagle's brood
 Heart of the west
 Hitch hike lady
 Leathernecks have landed
 The plainsman
 Three on the trail
 Engels, Wera
 Great impersonation
 Hong Kong nights
 Erickson, Glenn
 Drift fence
 Erickson, Helen
 Courageous avenger
 Erikson, Leif
 Girl of the Ozarks
 Ernest, George
 Racing luck
 Song of the saddle
 Too many parents
 Ernest, Harry
 Heroes of the range
 Errol, Leon
 Coronado
 Erwin, Stuart
 Absolute quiet
 All American chump
 Ceiling zero
 Exclusive story
 Pigskin parade
 Women are trouble
 Esmond, Carl
 Invitation to the waltz
 Evans, Clifford
 Ourselves alone
 Evans, Madge
 Exclusive story
 Moonlight murder
 Pennies from heaven
- Piccadilly Jim
 Transatlantic tunnel
 Evans, Muriel
 Boss rider of Gun Creek
 Call of the prairie
 House of secrets
 King of the Pecos
 Missing girls
 New frontier
 Silver spurs
 Three on the trail
 Throwback
 Everest, Barbara
 Scrooge
- Fairbanks, Douglas, Jr.
 Accused
 Amateur gentleman
 Mimi
 Falconi, Armando
 Il Re Burlone
 Farebrother, Violet
 Mr Cohen takes a walk
 Fares, Oreste
 Passaporto Rosso
 Farley, Dot
 Gasoloons
 Farley, Edward
 Music goes 'round
 Farmer, Frances
 Border flight
 Come and get it
 Rhythm on the range
 Too many parents
 Farnum, Franklyn
 Frontier justice
 Farnum, William
 Between men
 Fighting coward
 Farr, Patricia
 Lady in scarlet
 Lady luck
 Farrar, Gwen
 She shall have music
 Farrell, Charles
 Fighting youth
 Flying doctor
 Forbidden heaven
 Trouble ahead
 Farrell, Glenda
 Gold diggers of 1937
 Here comes Carter
 High tension
 Law in her hands
 Miss Pacific Fleet
 Nobody's fool
 Smart blonde
 Snowed under
 Faye, Alice
 King of burlesque
 Music is magic
 Poor little rich girl
 Sing, baby, sing
 Fazenda, Louise
 Bad boy
 Colleen
 Doughnuts and society
 Forgotten women
 I married a doctor
 Widow from Monte Carlo
 Fedorova, Z.
 Three women
 Fellows, Edith
 And so they were married
 Pennies from heaven
 She married her boss
 Tugboat princess
 Fenton, Leslie
 House of secrets
 Murder on a bridle path
 Two in the dark
 Ferguson, Al
 Roamin' wild
 Ferida, Luisa
 Il Re Burlone
 Fernandel
 La Porteuse de Pain
 Fetchit, Stepin
 Steamboat round the bend
 Virginia judge
- Ebbesen, Dagmar
 Skaergaards-flirt

- Field, Virginia
Thank you, Jeeves
- Fields, Stanley
Mine with the iron door
O'Malley of the Mounted
- Fields, W. C.
Poppy
- Finkenzeller, Heli
Royal waltz
- Florelle, Odette
Amphitryon
- Flynn, Errol
Captain Blood
Charge of the Light Brigade
- Fonda, Henry
I dream too much
Moon's our home
Spendthrift
Trail of the lonesome pine
Way Down East
- Foran, Dick
Big noise
California mail
Earthworm tractors
Golden arrow
Guns of the Pecos
Moonlight on the prairie
Song of the saddle
Trailin' west
Treachery rides the range
- Forbes, Ralph
Daniel Boone
I'll name the murderer
Love letters of a star
- Ford, Francis
Charlie Chan at the circus
- Ford, Wallace
Another face
Rogues' tavern
A son comes home
- Forest, Frank
Big broadcast of 1937
- Foresta, Franco
For love of you
- Forst, Willi
Royal waltz
- Foster, Norman
Bishop misbehaves
Everybody's old man
Fatal lady
Fire trap
High tension
I cover Chinatown
Leavenworth case
Suicide squad
Superspeed
- Foster, Preston
Annie Oakley
Last days of Pompeii
Love before breakfast
Muss 'em up
We who are about to die
We're only human
- Fowley, Douglas
15 Maiden Lane
Navy born
36 hours to kill
- Francis, Kay
Give me your heart
I found Stella Parish
White angel
- Franke, Ingeborg
Der Kampf
- Franklin, Irene
Along came love
- Fraser, Phyllis
Winds of the wasteland
- Frawley, William
Desire
F-man
General died at dawn
Harmony Lane
It's a great life
Princess comes across
Rose Bowl
Ship cafe
Strike me pink
Three cheers for love
Three married men
- Frazier, Robert
Never too late
- Frederick, Pauline
My marriage
Ramona
- French, Charles
Western courage
- Fritchie, Barbara
Thunder mountain
Wild mustang
- Froman, Jane
Stars over Broadway
- Frost, Philip
Scrooge
- Furness, Betty
All American chump
Here comes Cookie
Magnificent obsession
Mister Cinderella
President's mystery
Three wise guys
- Gable, Clark
Cain and Mabel
Love on the run
Mutiny on the Bounty
San Francisco
Wife versus secretary
- Gabriel, Lynn
Heart of the west
- Gael, Josseline
Les Misérables
- Gale, June
Heroes of the range
Riding avenger
Swiftly
- Gale, Roberta
No man's range
- Gallagher, Richard 'Skeets'
Polo Joe
- Galland, Jean
Le Barbier de Seville
- Gallaudet, John
Alibi for murder
- Gambarelli, Maria
Here's to romance
- Garat, Henri
Amphitryon
- Garbo, Greta
Anna Karenina
- Gardner, Joan
Forget me not
Man who could work miracles
- Gargan, William
Alibi for murder
Blackmailer
Flying hostess
Man hunt
Milky way
Navy born
Sky parade
- Garralaga, Martin
Lawless border
- Garrick, John
Woman alone
- Gateson, Marjorie
Gentleman from Louisiana
Three married men
- Gaye, Gregory
Charlie Chan at the opera
- Gaynor, Janet
Ladies in love
Small town girl
- George, Gladys
Valiant is the word for Carrie
- Geray, Steve
Dance band
- Gerrard, Gene
Mister Hobo
Scandals of Paris
- Giacchetti, Fosco
Crooked love
- Giacchetti, Ginafranco
Gesuzza, la Sposa Garibaldina
- Gibson, Diana
Dangerous waters
- Gibson, Hoot
Cavalcade of the west
Feud of the west
Frontier justice
Last outlaw
Lucky terror
Powdersmoke range
Riding avenger
Swiftly
- Gibson, Wynne
Come closer, folks
Crouching beast
- Gielgud, John
Secret agent
- Gigli, Beniamino
Forget me not
- Gilbert, John
Pirate party on Catalina Island
- Gillingwater, Claude
Prisoner of Shark Island
Ticket to paradise
- Girardot, Etienne
Half angel
- Gish, Dorothy
Wanted men
- Gleason, James
Big game
Don't turn 'em loose
Ex-Mrs Bradford
Murder on a bridge path
Plot thickens
We're only human
Yours for the asking
- Gleason, Russell
Condemned to live
Wellington Pike goes west
- Gloria, Leda
Il Cappello a Tre Punte
- Goddard, Paulette
Modern times
- Gog, Gregor
Der Kampf
- Gombell, Minna
Miss Pacific Fleet
Two sinners
- Gombo
Son of Mongolia
- Goodner, Carol
Music hath charms
Student romance
- Gordon, C. Henry
Hollywood Boulevard
Love letters of a star
- Gordon, Del
Last of the Clintons
Wild mustang
- Goryunof, Anatol
Anna
- Gottschalk, Ferdinand
White legion
- Gould, William
Desert guns
Trigger Tom
Wildcat Saunders
- Goya, Mona
Juggernaut
- Grable, Betty
Collegiate
Don't turn 'em loose
- Grabley, Ursula
Annette in paradise
- Graetz, Paul
Bengal tiger
Hot money
Isle of fury
Mr Cohen takes a walk
- Grahame, Margot
Counterfeit
Crime over London
Criminal lawyer
Make way for a lady
Night waitress
Three musketeers
Trouble ahead
Two in the dark
- Granach, Alexander
Gypsies

ACTORS and ACTRESSES

—Continued

- Grant, Cary
Big brown eyes
Last outpost
Pirate party on Catalina Island
Suzy
Sylvia Scarlett
Wedding present
- Grant, Frances
Born to fight
Cavalry
Traitor
- Granville, Bonita
Song of the saddle
These three
- Grapewin, Charley
Without orders
- Gray, Gilda
Rose Marie
- Gray, Lawrence
Dizzy dames
Timber war
- Greet, Clare
Murder in the red barn
- Gretillet, Jacques
La Porteuse de Pain
- Grey, Anne
Just my luck
- Grey, Nan
Crash Donovan
Sea spoilers
Three smart girls
- Grey, Shirley
Mystery of the Marie Celeste
- Griffith, Gordon
Blazing justice
- Grossmith, George
Girl from Maxim's
- Groves, Fred
Wolves of the underworld
- Gruendgens, Gustaf
Liebelei
- Guilfoyle, Paul
Winterset
- Guitry, Sacha
Pasteur
- Guitty, Madeleine
Ciboulette
La Porteuse de Pain
- Gulino, Giuseppe
Gesuzza la Sposa Garibaldina
- Gunn, Judy
Last journey
Private secretary
- Gwenn, Edmund
All American chump
Anthony Adverse
Bishop misbehaves
Mad holiday
Sylvia Scarlett
Walking dead
- Haas, Dolly
Broken blossoms
- Hackett, Karl
Cavalry
Desert phantom
Traitor
- Haden, Sara
Can this be Dixie?
Crime of Dr Forbes
Laughing at trouble
Little Miss Nobody
Magnificent obsession
O'Shaughnessy's boy
- Hale, Alan
Message to Garcia
Our relations
- Hale, Sonnie
First a girl
It's love again
- Haley, Jack
Coronado
F-man
Mister Cinderella
Pigskin parade
Poor little rich girl
- Hall, Henry
Music hath charms
- Hall, Porter
General died at dawn
Too many parents
- Hall, Thurston
Case of the missing man
Lone wolf returns
Man who lived twice
Roaming lady
Shakedown
Theodora goes wild
Three wise guys
- Hall, Warren
Freshman love
- Hall, William
Flying hostess
Magnificent brute
- Halliday, John
Desire
Fatal lady
Hollywood Boulevard
Melody lingers on
Peter Ibbetson
- Hamilton, Margaret
Moon's our home
- Hanley, Jimmy
Born for glory
- Hanson, Lars
On the sunnyside
- Hardie, Russell
Down to the sea
Harvester
Killer at large
Meet Nero Wolfe
- Harding, Ann
Lady consents
Peter Ibbetson
Witness chair
- Hardwicke, Sir Cedric
Nine days a queen
Peg of old Drury
- Hardy, Oliver
Bohemian girl
Our relations
- Hare, J. Robertson
Jack of all trades
- Harker, Gordon
Amateur gentleman
- Harlow, Jean
Libeled lady
Riffraff
Suzy
Wife versus secretary
- Harrigan, Nedda
Charlie Chan at the opera
- Harrigan, William
His family tree
- Harris, Mildred
Never too late
- Hart, Gordon
Guns of the Pecos
Isle of fury
- Hart, Teddy
Three men on a horse
- Hartley, Paul
Two hearts in harmony
- Harvey, Lillian
Invitation to the waltz
- Harwood, John
Once in a million
- Hatton, Raymond
Arizona raiders
- Hawkins, Jack
Peg of old Drury
- Haworth, Vinton
Night waitress
Without orders
- Haydon, Julie
Longest night
A son comes home
- Hayes, Bernadine
Absolute quiet
Judgment book
Trigger Tom
- Hayes, George
Call of the prairie
Heart of the west
Hopalong Cassidy returns
- Hayward, Louis
Feather in her hat
Luckiest girl in the world
- Hayward, Richard
Luck of the Irish
- Healy, Ted
It's in the air
Longest night
Mad holiday
San Francisco
Sing, baby, sing
Speed
- Henderson, Charles
Seeing Nellie home
- Henry, Buzzy
Unknown ranger
- Henry, Charlotte
Forbidden heaven
Gentleman from Louisiana
Hearts in bondage
Mandarin mystery
Return of Jimmy Valentine
Three kids and a queen
- Henry, Louise
End of the trail
- Henson, Leslie
Girl from Maxim's
- Hepburn, Katharine
Mary of Scotland
Sylvia Scarlett
A woman rebels
- Herbert, Hugh
Colleen
Love begins at twenty
Miss Pacific Fleet
One rainy afternoon
Sing me a love song
To beat the band
We went to college
- Hersholt, Jean
Country doctor
His brother's wife
Reunion
Sins of man
- Hervey, Irene
Absolute quiet
Along came love
Charlie Chan in Shanghai
His night out
- Hicks, Seymour
Scrooge
- Hilliard, Harriet
Follow the fleet
- Hinz, Werner
Making of a king
- Hobbes, Halliwell
Changing of the guard
- Hobson, Valerie
August week-end
Great impersonation
Tugboat princess
- Hodges, Horace
Three maxims
- Hoerbiger, Paul
Liebelei
Royal waltz
- Hogan, Michael
Wolves of the underworld
- Hohl, Arthur
Devil doll
Guard that girl
Lone wolf returns
Superspeed
- Holden, Gloria
Dracula's daughter
- Holmes, Phillips
Chatterbox
Divine spark
General Spanky
House of a thousand candles
- Holt, David
Straight from the shoulder
Trouble for two
- Holt, Jack
Crash Donovan
Dangerous waters
End of the trail
Littlest rebel
North of Nome
San Francisco
Storm over the Andes
- Homans, Robert
Easy money
- Homolka, Oscar
Everything is thunder
Rhodes, the diamond master

- Hood, Darla
   Bohemian girl
   Neighborhood house
 Hopkins, Miriam
   Barbary Coast
   Splendor
   These three
 Hopper, Hedda
   Doughnuts and society
   Society fever
 Hopton, Russell
   Below the deadline
   False pretenses
 Horton, Edward Everett
   Hearts divided
   Her master's voice
   His night out
   Nobody's fool
   Private secretary
   Singing kid
   Top hat
   Your Uncle Dudley
 Housman, Arthur
   Racing blood
   With love and kisses
 Houston, George
   Captain calamity
   Let's sing again
   Melody lingers on
 Houston, Norman
   Hitch hike to heaven
 Howard, John
   Border flight
   Easy to take
   Millions in the air
   Soak the rich
   Valiant is the word for
   Carrie
 Howard, Leslie
   Petrified forest
   Romeo and Juliet
 Howard, Willie
   Millions in the air
   Rose of the Rancho
 Howell, Kenneth
   Educating father
   Four days' wonder
 Hubbard, Lorna
   Music hath charms
 Huber, Harold
   Gay desperado
   Klondike Annie
 Hudson, Rochelle
   Country beyond
   Everybody's old man
   Music goes 'round
   Poppy
   Reunion
   Show them no mercy
   Way Down East
 Hughes, Carol
   Earthworm tractors
   Polo Joe
   Three men on a horse
 Hughes, Kay
   Big show
 Hughes, Lloyd
   Kelly of the secret service
   Little red schoolhouse
   Midnight phantom
   Night cargo
   Skybound
   Society fever
 Hulbert, Jack
   Jack of all trades
 Hull, Warren
   Bengal tiger
   Big noise
   Fugitive in the sky
   Law in her hands
   Love begins at twenty
   Personal maid's secret
 Hume, Benita
   Garden murder case
   Moonlight murder
   Rainbow on the river
   Tarzan escapes
 Hunt, Eleanor
   Go get 'em Haines
   Rest cure
   Yellow cargo
 Hunt, Marsha
   Accusing finger
   Arizona raiders
   Desert gold
   Easy to take
   Gentle Julia
   Hollywood Boulevard
   Virginia judge
 Hunter, Henry
   Love letters of a star
   Parole
   Yellowstone
 Hunter, Ian
   Devil is a sissy
   I found Stella Parish
   Morals of Marcus
   To Mary—with love
   White angel
 Huntley, G. P., Jr.
   August week-end
   Sons o' guns
 Husing, Ted
   Winged champions
 Huston, Philip
   Big game
 Huston, Walter
   Dodsworth
   Rhodes, the diamond master
 Hutchinson, Josephine
   I married a doctor
   Melody lingers on
   Story of Louis Pasteur
 Hyams, Leila
   $1000 a minute
   Yellow dust
 Hylton, Jack
   She shall have music
 Hymer, Warren
   Confidential
   Desert justice
   Hitch hike lady
   Hong Kong nights
   Leavenworth case
   Show them no mercy
   Tango
   36 hours to kill
   Widow from Monte Carlo
 Ibrahim, Moulay
   Itto
 Igin-Khorlo
   Son of Mongolia
 Ilg, Kaspar
   Mystic mountain
 Inescort, Frieda
   Give me your heart
   Great O'Malley
   Hollywood Boulevard
   If you could only cook
   King steps out
 Ingraham, Lloyd
   Burning gold
 Ingram, Rex
   Green pastures
 Irving, Florence
   Women are trouble
 Irving, Margaret
   Neighborhood house
 Ivakin, N.
   We are from Kronstadt
 Ivashova, V.
   Nightingale
 Jason, Sybil
   Captain's kid
   Changing of the guard
   Great O'Malley
   I found Stella Parish
   Singing kid
 Jeffreys, Ellis
   Limelight
 Jenkins, Allen
   Cain and Mabel
   Case of the lucky legs
   Miss Pacific Fleet
   Sing me a love song
   Singing kid
   Sins of man
   Three men on a horse
 Jewell, Isabel
   Career woman
   Ceiling zero
   Go west, young man
   Leathernecks have landed
   Man who lived twice
   36 hours to kill
   Valiant is the word for
   Carrie
 Johnson, Chic
   Country gentlemen
 Jolson, Al
   Singing kid
 Jones, Allan
   Night at the opera
   Rose Marie
   Showboat
 Jones, Buck
   Boss rider of Gun Creek
   Cowboy and the kid
   Empty saddles
   For the service
   Ivory-handled gun
   Ride 'em cowboy
   Silver spurs
   Sunset of power
   Throwback
 Jones, Gordon
   Night waitress
 Jones, Marcia Mae
   These three
 Jory, Victor
   Escape from Devil's Island
   Hell Ship Morgan
   Meet Nero Wolfe
   Streamline express
   Too tough to kill
 Jovet, Louis
   La Kermesse Heroique
 Joyeux, Odette
   Lac Aux Dames
 Judge, Arline
   Here comes trouble
   It had to happen
   King of burlesque
   Ship cafe
   Star for a night
   Valiant is the word for
   Carrie
 Juvenet, Pierre
   Le Barbier de Seville
 Kaaren, Suzanne
   Under cover man
 Karloff, Boris
   Charlie Chan at the opera
   Invisible ray
   Juggernaut
   Man who changed his mind
   Walking dead
 Karns, Roscoe
   Border flight
   Cain and Mabel
   Three cheers for love
   Three married men
   Two fisted
   Woman trap
 Kashkarova, Z.
   Nightingale
 Keane, Edward
   For the service
 Keating, Fred
   Devil on horseback
   Thirteen hours by air

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

- Continued
- Keaton, Buster
Grand slam opera
Old Spanish custom
- Keats, Viola
Woman alone
- Keeler, Ruby
Colleen
Shipmates forever
- Keen, Malcolm
Wanted men
- Keene, Tom
Desert gold
Drift fence
Glory trail
Hong Kong nights
Rebellion
Timothy's quest
- Keith, Ian
Crusades
Don't gamble with love
White legion
- Keith, Rosalind
Annapolis farewell
It's a great life
King of the Royal Mounted
- Kelly, Judy
Four masked men
- Kelly, Patsy
Hill Tillies
Kelly the second
Pigskin parade
Private number
Sing, baby, sing
Thanks a million
- Kelly, Paul
Accusing finger
Country beyond
Here comes trouble
It's a great life
Murder with pictures
My marriage
Song and dance man
Women are trouble
- Kelly, Walter C.
Laughing Irish eyes
Tugboat princess
Virginia judge
- Kelton, Pert
Kelly the second
Mary Burns, fugitive
Sitting on the moon
- Kendall, Cy
Bulldog edition
King of the Pecos
Lonely trail
- Kendall, Henry
The shadow
- Kennedy, Edgar
Gasoloons
Yours for the asking
- Kennedy, Tom
Just speeding
- Kent, Barbara
Guard that girl
- Kent, Robert
Country beyond
Crime of Dr Forbes
Dimples
King of the Royal Mounted
Reunion
- Kenyon, Doris
Along came love
- Kerrigan, J. M.
General died at dawn
- Khorosh, S.
Children of the revolution
- Kibbee, Guy
Big noise
Captain Blood
Captain January
Captain's kid
Earthworm tractors
I married a doctor
Little Lord Fauntleroy
M'liss
Three men on a horse
- Kieppura, Jan
Give us this night
- Kiesler, Hedy
Ecstasy
- King, Charles
Crooked trail
Last of the Warrens
- King, John
Crash Donovan
- King, Joseph
Road gang
Sons o' guns
Kingsford, Walter
Meet Nero Wolfe
- Klöpfer, Eugen
Private life of Louis XIV
- Knapp, Evalyn
Bulldog edition
Confidential
Fire trap
Laughing Irish eyes
Three of a kind
- Knight, Fuzzy
Kelly of the secret service
Put on the spot
Sea spoilers
Song of the Gringo
Song of the trail
Trails of the wild
Wildcat trooper
- Knowles, Patric
Charge of the Light Brigade
Give me your heart
Student romance
- Kofoed, Jack
Thrills with daredevils
- Kohler, Fred
Dangerous intrigue
- Kohler, Fred, Jr.
Toll of the desert
- Kolker, Henry
In his steps
Man who lived twice
- Konstantin, Leopoldine
Making of a king
- Konstantinov, V.
New Gulliver
- Korene, Vera
Second bureau
- Kornman, Mary
Calling of Dan Matthews
- Koroleva, Guli
Children of the revolution
- Kortner, Fritz
Abdul the damned
Crouching beast
- Krauss, Henry
Les Misérables
- Kruger, Otto
Dracula's daughter
Lady of secrets
Living dangerously
Two sinners
- Kun, Madga
Dance band
- Lake, Florence
Gasoloons
- Lamont, Molly
Jungle princess
- Lamour, Dorothy
Jungle princess
- Lanchester, Elsa
Rembrandt
- Landi, Elissa
After the thin man
Amateur gentleman
Mad holiday
- Lane, Bruce
Silver spurs
- Lane, Nora
Outlaw deputy
- Lang, Howard
Judgment book
- Lang, June
Country doctor
Every Saturday night
Road to glory
White hunter
- Lang, Matheson
Cardinal
- Langford, Frances
Born to dance
Collegiate
Palm Springs
- La Rocque, Rod
Dragnet
Frisco waterfront
Hi Gaucho
Preview murder mystery
Till we meet again
- LaRoy, Rita
Mandarin mystery
- LaRue, Jack
Born to fight
Bridge of sighs
Ellis Island
It couldn't have happened
Special agent
Wellington Pike goes west
Yellow cargo
- Latimer, Louise
Bunker Bean
Don't turn 'em loose
Grand jury
Plot thickens
Two in revolt
- Laughton, Charles
Mutiny on the Bounty
Rembrandt
Wanted men
- Laurel, Stan
Bohemian girl
Our relations
- Laurent, Eric
Skaergaards-flirt
- Lauri-Volpi, Giacomo
La Canzone del Sole
- Lavrov, I.
Nightingale
- Lawford, Betty
Love before breakfast
- Lawrence, Fred
Captain's kid
- Lawrence, Gertrude
Mimi
Rembrandt
- Lawrence, Marc
Night waitress
- Lawrence, Rosina
Charlie Chan's secret
Neighborhood house
- Lawson, Wilfrid
White hunter
- Lawton, Frank
Devil doll
- Lease, Rex
Aces and eights
Cavalcade of the west
Fast bullets
- Lebedeff, Ivan
Love on the run
- Lederer, Francis
Gay deception
My American wife
One rainy afternoon
- Lee, Anna
First a girl
Man who changed his mind
- Lee, Billie
And sudden death
- Lee, Dorothy
Silly Billies
- Lee, Lila
Country gentlemen
- Lees, Antoinette
Song of the trail
- Leiber, Fritz
Down under the sea
Hearts in bondage
- Leighton, Frank
Thoroughbred
- Levene, Sam
Three men on a horse
- Lewis, Joe
Private number
- Lewis, Ted
Here comes the band
- Leyton, Drue
Valley of wanted men
- Li, Shoh-shoh
Song of China
- Lim, Cho-cho
Song of China
- Linaker, Kay
Easy money
Girl from Mandalay
Murder of Dr Harrigan
Road gang

- Linden, Eric
   Ah, wilderness
   In his steps
   Old hutch
   Robin Hood of El Dorado
   Voice of Bugle Ann
 Lindsay, Margaret
   Dangerous
   Frisco kid
   Isle of fury
   Lady consents
   Law in her hands
   Personal maid's secret
   Public enemy's wife
 Lister, Bruce
   Ourselves alone
 Lister, Francis
   Living dangerously
 Livanof, Boris
   Dubrovsky
 Livingston, Robert
   Three mesquiteers
 Lloyd, Alma
   Big noise
   Song of the saddle
 Lloyd, Doris
   Brilliant marriage
   Kind lady
 Lloyd, Harold
   Milky way
 Locchi, Pino
   One hundred days of Napoleon
 Locher, Charles
   Charlie Chan in Shanghai
 Locke, Katherine
   Straight from the shoulder
 Lockhart, Gene
   Brides are like that
   Career woman
   Times Square playboy
 Lockhart, Kathleen
   Brides are like that
   Times Square playboy
 Lockwood, Margaret
   Beloved vagabond
 Loder, John
   Daredevils of the earth
   Man who changed his mind
   Ourselves alone
 Lodge, John
   Ourselves alone
 Loebinger, Lotte
   Der Kampf
 Loftus, Cecelia
   Once in a blue moon
 Logan, Ella
   Flying hostess
 Lombard, Carole
   Hands across the table
   Love before breakfast
   My man Godfrey
   Princess comes across
 London, Tom
   Guns and guitars
 Long, Lotus
   Last of the pagans
 Longden, John
   Thoroughbred
 Lord, Pauline
   Feather in her hat
 Loring, Ann
   Robin Hood of El Dorado
 Loring, Michael
   Postal Inspector
 Lorre, Peter
   Crime and punishment
   Secret agent
 Losch, Tilly
   Garden of Allah
   Limelight
 Losgren, Marianne
   On the sunnyside
 Louise, Anita
   Anthony Adverse
   Brides are like that
   Midsummer night's dream
   Personal maid's secret
   Story of Louis Pasteur
- Lowe, Edmund
   Garden murder case
   Girl on the front page
   Grand exit
   Great impersonation
   King Solomon of Broadway
   Mad holiday
   Seven sinners
   Thunder in the night
 Lowell, Helen
   Wild Brian Kent
 Loy, Myrna
   After the thin man
   Great Ziegfeld
   Libeled lady
   Petticoat fever
   To Mary—with love
   Whipsaw
   Wife versus secretary
 Lugosi, Bela
   Invisible ray
   Mystery of the Marie
   Celeste
   Postal Inspector
 Lukas, Paul
   Dodsworth
   I found Stella Parish
   Ladies in love
   Three musketeers
 Luke, Keye
   Charlie Chan at the circus
   Charlie Chan at the opera
   Charlie Chan at the race
   track
   Charlie Chan in Shanghai
 Lund, Lucille
   Prison shadows
   Timber war
 Lupino, Ida
   Anything goes
   Daredevils of the earth
   Gay desperado
   One rainy afternoon
   Yours for the asking
 Lyon, Ben
   Dancing feet
   Down under the sea
   Frisco waterfront
   Navy wife
- McCoy, Tim
   Aces and eights
   Border caballero
   Bulldog courage
   Ghost patrol
   Lightnin' Bill Carson
   Lion's den
   Outlaw deputy
   Prescott kid
   Roarin' guns
   Traitor
 McCrea, Joel
   Adventure in Manhattan
   Banjo on my knee
   Barbary Coast
   Come and get it
   Splendor
   These three
   Two in a crowd
 MacDonald, J. Farrell
   Exclusive story
   Florida special
   Shadows of the Orient
   Stormy
   Waterfront lady
 MacDonald, Jeanette
   Rose Marie
   San Francisco
 McFarland, Spanky
   General Spanky
   Trail of the lonesome pine
 MacGinnis, Niall
   Luck of the Irish
   Ourselves alone
 McGlynn, Frank, Sr.
   King of the Royal Mounted
   Littlest rebel
 McGowan, J. P.
   Secret patrol
 MacGregor, Malcolm
   I'll name the murderer
- McGuire, John
   Steamboat round the bend
   This is the life
   Wanted: Jane Turner
   Your Uncle Dudley
 McHugh, Frank
   Bullets or ballots
   Freshman love
   Moonlight murder
   Snowed under
   Stage struck
   Three men on a horse
 Mack, Betty
   Hair Trigger Casey
   Last of the Clintons
   Toll of the desert
 Mack, Helen
   Milky way
   Return of Peter Grimm
 MacKay, Barry
   Born for glory
   Private secretary
 McKay, George
   Killer at large
   Public menace
   Two-fisted gentleman
 McKinney, Florine
   Cappy Ricks returns
   Dizzy dames
 McLaglen, Cliff
   Mystery of the Marie
   Celeste
 McLaglen, Cyril
   Daredevils of the earth
 McLaglen, Victor
   Klondike Annie
   Magnificent brute
   Professional soldier
   Under two flags
 MacLane, Barton
   Bengal tiger
   Bullets or ballots
   Dr Socrates
   Draegerman courage
   Jailbreak
   Man of iron
   Smart blonde
   Times Square playboy
 MacMahon, Aline
   Ah, wilderness
   Kind lady
 MacMurray, Fred
   Bride comes home
   Champagne waltz
   Hands across the table
   Princess comes across
   Texas Rangers
   Thirteen hours by air
   Trail of the lonesome pine
 McNaughton, Charles
   Three live ghosts
 Macrae, Arthur
   Dusty ermine
 McWade, Robert
   Bunker Bean
   Cappy Ricks returns
 Madden, Jeanne
   Stage struck
 Madison, Noel
   Easy money
   Missing girls
   Morals of Marcus
   Pace that kills
 Magnani, Anna
   Blind girl of Sorrento
   Tempo Massimo
 Maguire, Mary
   Flying doctor
 Makarova, T.
   Seven brave men
 Mala
   Jungle princess
 Maleyef, Igor
   Anna
 Mallory, Boots
   Powdersmoke range
 Malo, Gina
   Jack of all trades
 Mander, Miles
   Four masked men
 Mann, Allen
   Shake Mr Shakespeare
 Manners, David
   Hearts in bondage

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

—Continued

- Mannheim, Lucie
 East meets west
 Thirty-nine steps
 Mannors, Sheila
 Desert phantom
 Kelly of the secret service
 Lawless range
 Moonlight on the prairie
 Pace that kills
 Prescott kid
 March, Fredric
 Anna Karenina
 Anthony Adverse
 Dark angel
 Mary of Scotland
 Road to glory
 Margetson, Arthur
 Broken blossoms
 Juggernaut
 Mystery of the Marie Celeste
 Margo
 Winterset
 Marion, Beth
 Avenging waters
 Between men
 Everyman's law
 For the service
 Fugitive sheriff
 Marlow, June
 Riddle Ranch
 Marlowe, Hugh
 It couldn't have happened
 Marlowe, John
 Brilliant marriage
 Marmont, Percy
 Secret agent
 Marquis, Margaret
 Last of the Warrens
 Marsh, Carolyn
 Shake Mr Shakespeare
 Marsh, Garry
 When knights were bold
 Marsh, Joan
 Brilliant marriage
 Dancing feet
 Marsh, Marian
 Come closer, folks
 Counterfeit
 Crime and punishment
 Lady of secrets
 Marshall, Alan
 After the thin man
 Marshall, Everett
 I live for love
 Marshall, Herbert
 Dark angel
 Forgotten faces
 Girls' dormitory
 If you could only cook
 Lady consents
 Make way for a lady
 Till we meet again
 A woman rebels
 Marson, Aileen
 Living dangerously
 Martel, June
 Fighting youth
 Martin, Tony
 Back to nature
 Martini, Nino
 Gay desperado
 Here's to romance
 Marx, Chico
 Night at the opera
 Marx, Groucho
 Night at the opera
 Marx, Harpo
 Night at the opera
 Mason, Roy
 Border patrolman
 Valley of wanted men
 Massey, Raymond
 Things to come
 Matthews, Jessie
 First a girl
 It's love again
 Matthews, Lester
 Spy 77
 Thank you, Jeeves
 Too many parents
- Mauch, Billy
 Anthony Adverse
 Maxwell, Edwin
 Happiness C. O. D.
 Mayerova, Vojtova
 Young love
 Maynard, Ken
 Avenging waters
 Cattle thief
 Fugitive sheriff
 Heir to trouble
 Heroes of the range
 Lawless riders
 Western courage
 Maynard, Kermit
 His fighting blood
 Song of the trail
 Timber war
 Trails of the wild
 Wildcat trooper
 Mayo, Frank
 Burning gold
 Meek, Donald
 Happiness C. O. D.
 Kind lady
 Meeker, George
 Tango
 Mehaffey, Blanche
 Wildcat Saunders
 Mellette, Arthur
 Lion's den
 Melton, James
 Sing me a love song
 Stars over Broadway
 Mendaille, Daniel
 Maria Chapdelaine
 Menjou, Adolphe
 Milky way
 Sing, baby, sing
 Wives never know
 Mercer, Beryl
 Three live ghosts
 Meredith, Burgess
 Winterset
 Merivale, Philip
 Give us this night
 Merkel, Una
 Born to dance
 Broadway melody of 1936
 It's in the air
 Riffraff
 Speed
 We went to college
 Merman, Ethel
 Anything goes
 Strike me pink
 Messinger, Gertrude
 Blazing justice
 Metcalfe, Bradley
 Millionaire kid
 Michael, Gertrude
 Forgotten faces
 Last outpost
 Make way for a lady
 Return of Sophie Lang
 Second wife
 Till we meet again
 Woman trap
 Middleton, Charles
 Song of the saddle
 Sunset of power
 Miljan, John
 Criminal within
 Gentleman from Louisiana
 North of Nome
 Milland, Ray
 Big broadcast of 1937
 Jungle princess
 Next time we love
 Return of Sophie Lang
 Miller, Hugh
 I give my heart
 Miller, Walter
 Fugitive sheriff
 Ghost patrol
 Night cargo
 Mills, John
 Born for glory
 Nine days a queen
 Milly
 I love you only
 Tempo Massimo
 Milton, Billy
 Music hath charms
- Milton, Ernest
 It's love again
 Miranda, Isa
 Passaporto Rosso
 Mitchell, Frank
 Music is magic
 Mitchell, Geneva
 Cattle thief
 Crime patrol
 Lawless riders
 Western courage
 Mitchell, Grant
 Next time we love
 Parole
 Seven keys to Baldpate
 Mitchell, Julien
 Last journey
 Mitchell, Thomas
 Theodora goes wild
 Mix, Art
 Lucky terror
 Mix, Ruth
 Riding avenger
 Mog, Albert
 Ecstasy
 Moissi, Alessandro
 Lorenzino de Medici
 Monakhof, N.
 Dubrovsky
 Mong, William V.
 Dark hour
 Montalvan, Celia
 Les Amours de Toni
 Montgomery, Douglass
 Everything is thunder
 Harmony lane
 Montgomery, Robert
 Petticoat fever
 Piccadilly Jim
 Trouble for two
 Moore, Carlyle, Jr.
 Fugitive in the sky
 Road gang
 Two against the world
 Moore, Dennis
 Down the stretch
 Moore, Dickie
 Little red schoolhouse
 Timothy's quest
 Moore, Grace
 King steps out
 Moore, Victor
 Gold diggers of 1937
 Swing time
 Moran, Jackie
 And so they were married
 Valiant is the word for
 Carrie
 Mordvinov, N.
 Gypsies
 Moreno, Antonio
 Bohemian girl
 Storm over the Andes
 Moreno, Rosita
 House of a thousand candles
 Morgan, Frank
 Dancing pirate
 Dimples
 Great Ziegfeld
 I live my life
 Perfect gentleman
 Piccadilly Jim
 Trouble for two
 Morgan, Gene
 Alibi for murder
 Morgan, Helen
 Frankie and Johnny
 Showboat
 Morgan, Ralph
 Condemned to live
 General Spanky
 Human cargo
 Little Miss Nobody
 Yellowstone
 Morlay, Gaby
 Le Bonheur
 Morley, Karen
 Devil's squadron
 Littlest rebel
 Thunder in the night
 Morner, Stanley
 I conquer the sea

- Morris, Chester
   Counterfeit
   Frankie and Johnnie
   Moonlight murder
   Pirate party on Catalina Island
   They met in a taxi
   Three godfathers
 Morris, Margaret
   Desert guns
 Morris, Wayne
   King of hockey
 Morrison, Joe
   It's a great life
 Moscovitch, Maurice
   Winterset
 Mowbray, Alan
   Fatal lady
   Four days' wonder
   Give us this night
   Ladies in love
   Muss 'em up
   Rainbow on the river
 Muir, Esther
   Racing luck
 Muir, Gavin
   Charlie Chan at the race track
 Muir, Jean
   Draegerman courage
   Fugitive in the sky
   Midsummer night's dream
   Stars over Broadway
   White Fang
 Mulhall, Jack
   Skull and Crown
 Müller, Renate
   Private life of Louis XIV
 Mundin, Herbert
   Tarzan escapes
 Muni, Paul
   Dr Socrates
   Story of Louis Pasteur
 Murat, Jean
   La Kermesse Heroique
   Second bureau
 Murphy, George
   Public menace
   Woman trap
 Murray, Charlie
   Dangerous waters
 Musco, Angelo
   Your troubles are mine
- Nace, Anthony
   A son comes home
 Nagel, Anne
   Guns of the Pecos
   Here comes Carter
   King of hockey
 Nagel, Conrad
   Girl from Mandalay
   Wedding present
   Yellow cargo
 Napier, Diana
   For love of you
   Land without music
 Nares, Owen
   I give my heart
 Narokof, N.
   Grain
 Nash, Mary
   Come and get it
 Natzler, Grete
   Scotland Yard mystery
   Student romance
 Nazarro, Cliff
   Romance rides the range
 Neagle, Anna
   Limelight
   Peg of old Drury
   Three maxims
 Nearing, Margaret
   Fast bullets
 Newell, William
   Big show
   Happy go lucky
   Sitting on the moon
 Nissen, Greta
   Red wagon
   Spy 77
- Niven, David
   Dodsworth
   Palm Springs
   Thank you, Jeeves
 Nixon, Marian
   Captain calamity
   Dagnet
   Reckless way
   Tango
 Nolan, Doris
   The man I marry
 Nolan, Lloyd
   Counterfeit
   Devil's squadron
   15 Maiden Lane
   One-way ticket
   Texas Rangers
   You may be next
 Noland, Robert
   Revolt of the Zombies
 Norris, Edward
   Show them no mercy
 Novoseltzev, I.
   Seven brave men
 Novotna, Jarmila
   Frasquita
 Nugent, Eddie
   Dancing feet
   Doughnuts and society
   Just my luck
   Prison shadows
   Put on the spot
   Rio Grande romance
   Skybound
- Oakie, Jack
   Big broadcast of 1936
   Champagne waltz
   Colleen
   Collegiate
   Florida special
   King of burlesque
   Texas Rangers
 Oakman, Wheeler
   Aces and eights
 Oberon, Merle
   Dark angel
   These three
 O'Brien, George
   Border patrolman
   Daniel Boone
   O'Malley of the Mounted
   Thunder mountain
   Whispering Smith speaks
 O'Brien, Pat
   Ceiling zero
   China Clipper
   Great O'Malley
   I married a doctor
   Public enemy's wife
   Stars over Broadway
 O'Brien-Moore, Erin
   Leavenworth case
   Ring around the moon
   Two in the dark
 O'Connell, Hugh
   Affair of Susan
 O'Connell, Peggy
   Too much beef
 O'Connor, Una
   Thunder in the night
 O'Day, Molly
   Lawless border
   Skull and Crown
 Offerman, George, Jr.
   Chatterbox
   Outlaw deputy
 Ohlin, Anna
   Raggen, Det Aer Jag Det
 Oland, Warner
   Charlie Chan at the circus
   Charlie Chan at the opera
   Charlie Chan at the race track
   Charlie Chan in Shanghai
   Charlie Chan's secret
 Oliver, Edna May
   Romeo and Juliet
 Oliver, Gordon
   Fugitive in the sky
- Olivier, Laurence
   As you like it
   I stand condemned
 Olsen, Moroni
   Farmer in the dell
   Grand jury
   M'liss
   Mummy's boys
   Two in revolt
   Yellow dust
 Olsen, Ole
   Country gentlemen
 Ondra, Anna
   Knock-out
 O'Neal, Zelma
   Scandals of Paris
 O'Neil, Sally
   Too tough to kill
 O'Neill, Henry
   Draegerman courage
 Osborn, Bud
   Outlaw deputy
 Osborne, Vivienne
   Let's sing again
   Wives never know
 Oscar, Henry
   Seven sinners
 Osterman, Jack
   Wanted men
 O'Sullivan, Maureen
   Bishop misbehaves
   Devil doll
   Tarzan escapes
   Voice of Bugle Ann
 Ottiano, Rafaela
   Devil doll
 Overman, Lynne
   Collegiate
   Jungle princess
   Poppy
   Three married men
 Owen, Reginald
   Adventure in Manhattan
   Girl on the front page
   Love on the run
   Petticoat fever
   Rose Marie
   Yours for the asking
 Owsley, Monroe
   Hideaway girl
   Mister Cinderella
 Ozeray, Madeleine
   Crime et Châtiment
- Page, Anita
   Hitch hike to heaven
 Page, Bradley
   Three of a kind
 Page, Dorothy
   King Solomon of Broadway
 Page, Lucille
   Moonlight and melody
 Pagnani, Andreina
   Il Serpente a Sonagli
 Paley, Natalie
   L'homme des Folies Bergère
   Sylvia Scarlett
 Palette, Eugene
   Easy to take
   Ghost goes west
   Golden arrow
   Luckiest girl in the world
   My man Godfrey
 Palmer, Kiki
   Wedding march
 Paola, Dria
   Blind girl of Sorrento
 Paolieri, Germana
   Lorenzino de Medici
 Parker, Cecilia
   Ah, wilderness
   Below the deadline
   In his steps
   Mine with the iron door
   Old hutch
   Three live ghosts
 Parker, Frank
   Sweet surrender

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

—Continued

- Parker, Jean
   Farmer in the dell
   Ghost goes west
   Texas Rangers
 Parlo, Dita
   Mystic mountain
 Paterson, Pat
   Spendthrift
 Patrick, Gail
   Early to bed
   Lone wolf returns
   Murder with pictures
   My man Godfrey
   Preview murder mystery
   Two fisted
   Wanderer of the wasteland
   White hunter
 Patricola, Tom
   Moonlight and melody
 Patterson, Elizabeth
   Go west, young man
   Old hutch
   Return of Sophie Lang
   Three cheers for love
   Timothy's quest
 Pawley, Edward
   King Solomon of Broadway
 Payne, Sally
   Big show
 Pegna, Vanna
   Il Serpente a Sonagli
 Pendleton, Nat
   Garden murder case
   Great Ziegfeld
   Here comes the band
   It's in the air
   Sing me a love song
   Sworn enemy
   Trapped by television
 Penner, Joe
   Collegiate
 Pepper, Barbara
   Mummy's boys
   Rogues' tavern
   Sagebrush troubadour
   Singing vagabond
   Waterfront lady
 Perbellini, Dina
   Il Cappello a Tre Punte
 Percy, Esme
   Old Spanish custom
   Spy 77
 Perier, Jean
   Pasteur
 Perkins, Osgood
   Gold diggers of 1937
   I dream too much
 Perrin, Jack
   Desert justice
   Hair Trigger Casey
   Wildcat Saunders
 Perry, Joan
   Case of the missing man
   Gallant defender
   Heir to trouble
   Meet Nero Wolfe
   Mysterious avenger
   Shakedown
 Perry, Linda
   California mail
   Two against the world
 Person, Edvard
   Vaaran Pojke
 Peterson, Dorothy
   Country doctor
   Man of iron
 Petrie, Hay
   Old curiosity shop
 Petrov, A.
   Peasants
 Pettingell, Frank
   Amateur gentleman
 Pichel, Irving
   Don't gamble with love
   Down under the sea
   Dracula's daughter
   General Spanky
   House of a thousand candles
- Pidgeon, Walter
   Big brown eyes
   Fatal lady
 Pilbeam, Nova
   Nine days a queen
 Pilotto, Camillo
   Alpine love
 Pisu, Mario
   Il Re Burlone
 Pitts, Zasu
   Affair of Susan
   Mad holiday
   Plot thickens
   Sing me a love song
   Thirteen hours by air
 Pola, Isa
   Alpine love
 Polk, Oscar
   Green pastures
 Pons, Lily
   I dream too much
 Portman, Eric
   Cardinal
 Poslavsky, Boris
   Peasants
   Three women
 Post, Guy Eates
   Fatal lady
   Till we meet again
 Potel, Victor
   Last of the Clintons
 Powell, Dick
   Colleen
   Gold diggers of 1937
   Hearts divided
   Midsummer night's dream
   Shipmates forever
   Stage struck
   Thanks a million
 Powell, Eleanor
   Born to dance
   Broadway melody of 1936
 Powell, William
   After the thin man
   Ex-Mrs Bradford
   Great Ziegfeld
   Libeled lady
   My man Godfrey
   Rendezvous
 Power, Tyrone
   Lloyds of London
 Pratt, Purnell
   Dancing feet
 Preston, Ann
   Parole
 Price, Hal
   Cavalry
 Price, Rosalinda
   Roarin' guns
 Prouty, Jed
   Back to nature
   Educating father
   Every Saturday night
   Happy go lucky
 Pryor, Roger
   Case of the missing man
   Missing girls
   $1000 a minute
   Return of Jimmy Valentine
   Sitting on the moon
   Ticket to paradise
 Purcell, Richard
   Jailbreak
   King of hockey
- Qualen, John
   Reunion
 Quartermaine, Leon
   As you like it
 Quensel, Isa
   Raggen, Det Aer Jag Det
 Quigley, Charles
   Charlie Chan's secret
   King of burlesque
   Lady from nowhere
 Quigley, Juanita
   Devil doll
 Quillan, Eddie
   Gentleman from Louisiana
   Mandarin mystery
- Rabdan, Tseven
   Son of Mongolia
 Racca, Corrado
   One hundred days of Napoleon
 Raft, George
   It had to happen
   She couldn't take it
   Yours for the asking
 Raglan, James
   Flying doctor
 Rainer, Luise
   Great Ziegfeld
 Rains, Claude
   Anthony Adverse
   Hearts divided
   Last outpost
 Ralph, Jessie
   After the thin man
   Bunker Bean
   San Francisco
   Walking on air
   Yellow dust
 Ralston, Esther
   Forced landing
   Girl from Mandalay
   Hollywood Boulevard
   Rest cure
   Shadows of the Orient
 Rambeau, Marjorie
   Dizzy dames
 Rathbone, Basil
   Anna Karenina
   Captain Blood
   Feather in her hat
   Garden of Allah
   Kind lady
   Last days of Pompeii
   Private number
   Romeo and Juliet
   Tale of two cities
 Ratoff, Gregory
   Here comes trouble
   King of burlesque
   Road to glory
   Sing, baby, sing
   Trouble ahead
   Under your spell
 Rawlinson, Herbert
   Hitch hike to heaven
 Ray, Charles
   Just my luck
 Ray, Rene
   Crime over London
   Passing of the third floor back
 Rave, Martha
   Big broadcast of 1937
   Hideaway girl
   Rhythm on the range
 Raymond, Gene
   Bride walks out
   Love on a bet
   Seven keys to Baldpate
   Smartest girl in town
   Walking on air
 Reed, Barbara
   Three smart girls
 Reed, Florence
   Frankie and Johnnie
 Reed, Philip
   Klondike Annie
 Regan, Phil
   Broadway hostess
   Happy go lucky
   Laughing Irish eyes
 Renaldo, Duncan
   Lady luck
   Rebellion
 Renaud, Madeleine
   Maria Chapdelaine
   La Maternelle
 Revier, Dorothy
   Cowboy and the kid
   Eagle's brood
   Lady in scarlet
 Reynolds, Craig
   Case of the black cat
   Here comes Carter
   Jailbreak
   Smart blonde
 Rhodes, Erik
   Criminal lawyer
   One rainy afternoon
   Second wife

- Rhodes, Jane
 Forgotten faces
 Rice, Florence
 Blackmailer
 Escape from Devil's Island
 Guard that girl
 Longest night
 Panic on the air
 Pride of the Marines
 Superspeed
 Sworn enemy
 Women are trouble
 Rice, Frank
 Ivory-handled gun
 Rice, Jack
 Gasoloons
 Rich, Irene
 Forgotten women
 Richards, Addison
 Draegerman courage
 Song of a nation
 Trailin' west
 Richardson, Ralph
 Man who could work miracles
 Things to come
 Richman, Charles
 In his steps
 Richman, Harry
 Music goes 'round
 Richmond, Kane
 Born to fight
 Racing blood
 Reckless way
 With love and kisses
 Richmond, Warner
 Courageous avenger
 Ridges, Stanley
 Winterset
 Riley, Michael
 Music goes 'round
 Riscoe, Arthur
 For love of you
 Kiss me goodbye
 Risdon, Elizabeth
 King steps out
 Risone, Giuditta
 I love you only
 Ritter, Tex
 Song of the Gringo
 Rivero, Julian
 Riddle Ranch
 Robert, Hélène
 Le Barbier de Seville
 Roberti, Lyda
 Hill Tillies
 Roberts, Beverly
 China Clipper
 Hot money
 Singing kid
 Sons o' guns
 Two against the world
 Robeson, Paul
 Showboat
 Robinson, Bill
 In old Kentucky
 Littlest rebel
 Robinson, Edward G.
 Barbary Coast
 Bullets or ballots
 Robson, May
 Captain's kid
 Rainbow on the river
 Three kids and a queen
 Wife versus secretary
 Rodon, Francois
 Pasteur
 Rogers, Buddy
 Dance band
 Once in a million
 Pirate party on Catalina Island
 Rogers, Ginger
 Follow the fleet
 In person
 Swing time
 Top hat
 Rogers, Jean
 Conflict
 Stormy
 Rogers, Will
 In old Kentucky
 Steamboat round the bend
 Rogoz, Jaromir
 Ecstasy
- Romantsev, Igor
 Children of the revolution
 Romero, Cesar
 15 Maiden Lane
 Love before breakfast
 Nobody's fool
 Public enemy's wife
 Show them no mercy
 Rooney, Mickey
 Devil is a sissy
 Down the stretch
 Midsummer night's dream
 Rosay, Françoise
 La Kermesse Heroique
 Pension Mimosas
 Rosmino, Gian Paolo
 Don Bosco
 Ross, Shirley
 Big broadcast of 1937
 Hideaway girl
 Rouverol, Jean
 Bar 20 rides again
 Leavenworth case
 Rowles, Polly
 Love letters of a star
 Roy, Gloria
 Charlie Chan at the race
 track
 Rub, Christian
 Murder on a bridle path
 Rudens, Dyk
 Mystic mountain
 Ruehmann, Heinz
 Frasuquita
 Ruggles, Charlie
 Anything goes
 Early to bed
 Hearts divided
 Wives never know
 Rumann, Siegfried
 East of Java
 Russell, Elizabeth
 Girl of the Ozarks
 Russell, Harriet
 Crime of Dr Crespi
 Russell, Rosalind
 Craig's wife
 It had to happen
 Rendezvous
 Trouble for two
 Under two flags
 Rutherford, Ann
 Comin' 'round the mountain
 Doughnuts and society
 Down under the sea
 Harvester
 Lawless nineties
 Lonely trail
 Melody trail
 Oregon trail
 Singing vagabond
 Waterfront lady
- Schmitsdorf, Bruno
 Der Kampf
 Schneider, Magda
 Kiss me goodbye
 Liebeleil
 Schonrath, Hans
 Knock-out
 Schumann-Heink, Mme.
 Ernestine
 Here's to romance
 Scott, Douglas
 Easy to take
 Scott, Fred
 Romance rides the range
 Scott, Margaretta
 Things to come
 Scott, Randolph
 And sudden death
 Follow the fleet
 Go west, young man
 Last of the Mohicans
 So red the rose
 Searl, Jackie
 Gentle Julia
 Sellon, Charles
 In old Kentucky
 Seward, Billie
 Trails of the wild
 Shagaida, S.
 Frontier
 Shang, Kwah-wu
 Song of China
 Shannon, Peggy
 Ellis Island
 Shaw, Winifred
 Broadway hostess
 Case of the velvet claws
 Satan met a lady
 Smart blonde
 Sons o' guns
 Shea, Gloria
 Dangerous intrigue
 Shearer, Norma
 Romeo and Juliet
 Shepard, Elaine
 I cover Chinatown
 Sheridan, Ann
 Fighting youth
 Great O'Malley
 Sheridan, Frank
 Conflict
 Sheridan, Gail
 Hopalong Cassidy returns
 Shilling, Marion
 Cavalcade of the west
 Gun play
 Idaho kid
 I'll name the murderer
 Romance rides the range
 Shirley, Anne
 Chatterbox
 Make way for a lady
 M'liss
 Steamboat round the bend
 Shkurat, S.
 Frontier
 Shoemaker, Ann
 Sins of man
 Shoter, Winifred
 Petticoat fever
 Sidney, Sylvia
 Fury
 Mary Burns, fugitive
 Trail of the lonesome pine
 Silvers, Sid
 Born to dance
 Simon, Michel
 Lac Aux Dames
 Le Bonheur
 Simon, Simone
 Girls' dormitory
 Lac Aux Dames
 Ladies in love
 Sinehnikova, M.
 Gypsies
 Skipworth, Alison
 Dangerous
 Hard luck dame
 Hitch hike lady
 Princess comes across
 Satan met a lady
 Two in a crowd
 White hunter
 Slaughter, Tod
 Murder in the red barn
- Sage, Frances
 Without orders
 St. John, Al
 West of Nevada
 Sale, Chic
 Gentleman from Louisiana
 It's a great life
 Man hunt
 The man I marry
 Samarin-Elsky, E.
 Dubrovsky
 Sauers, Joseph
 Prescott kid
 Savo, Jimmy
 Once in a blue moon
 Sawyer, Joseph
 Special investigator
 Saylor, Syd
 Three mesquiteers
 Scelzo, Filippo
 Passaporto Rosso
 Schildkraut, Joseph
 Garden of Allah
 Schmeling, Max
 Knock-out
 Schmidt, L. A.
 Greater promise

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

—Continued

- Sleeper, Martha
 Four days' wonder
 Two sinners
 Smith, C. Aubrey
 Garden of Allah
 Little Lord Fauntleroy
 Lloyds of London
 Romeo and Juliet
 Smith, Pete
 Audioscopiks
 Soehner, Hans
 Annette in paradise
 Sondergaard, Gale
 Anthony Adverse
 Sosor-Barma
 Son of Mongolia
 Sothern, Ann
 Don't gamble with love
 Grand exit
 Hell Ship Morgan
 My American wife
 Smartest girl in town
 Walking on air
 You may be next
 Sparks, Ned
 Bride walks out
 Collegiate
 Squinquel, Jose
 Pasteur
 Squire, Ronald
 Come out of the pantry
 Dusty ermine
 Stamp-Taylor, Enid
 Two hearts in harmony
 Stander, Lionel
 If you could only cook
 Meet Nero Wolfe
 Mr Deeds goes to town
 More than a secretary
 Music goes 'round
 Soak the rich
 They met in a taxi
 Standing, Sir Guy
 Annapolis farewell
 I'd give my life
 Lloyds of London
 Palm Springs
 Return of Sophie Lang
 Stanwyck, Barbara
 Annie Oakley
 Banjo on my knee
 Bride walks out
 His brother's wife
 Message to Garcia
 Red salute
 Starrett, Charles
 Along came love
 Code of the range
 Gallant defender
 Mysterious avenger
 Secret patrol
 Steele, Bob
 Cavalry
 Last of the Warrens
 No man's range
 Powdersmoke range
 Sundown Saunders
 Steele, Isobel
 I was a captive of Nazi
 Germany
 Sten, Anna
 Woman alone
 Stenl, Mario
 Blind girl of Sorrento
 Stephens, Harvey
 Tough guy
 Stephenson, Henry
 Charge of the Light Brigade
 Walking on air
 Stevens, Onslow
 Bridge of sighs
 Easy money
 Forced landing
 Three on the trail
 Yellow dust
 Stewart, Athole
 Jack of all trades
 Stewart, James
 After the thin man
 Born to dance
 Gorgeous hussy
 Next time we love
 Rose Marie
 Speed
 Stewart, Sophie
 As you like it
 Murder in the red barn
 Stiffi, Maria Vincenza
 Don Bosco
 Stockfeld, Betty
 Beloved vagabond
 Stockwell, Harry
 Here comes the band
 Stoliarov, S.
 Frontier
 Stone, Carol
 Freckles
 Stone, Dorothy
 Revolt of the Zombies
 Stone, Fred
 Farmer in the dell
 Grand jury
 My American wife
 Trail of the lonesome pine
 Stone, Lewis
 Don't turn 'em loose
 Shipmates forever
 Small town girl
 Suzy
 Sworn enemy
 Three godfathers
 Unguarded hour
 Stone, Paula
 Trailin' west
 Treachery rides the range
 Stradner, Rosa
 One hundred days of Napoleon
 Stuart, Gloria
 Crime of Dr Forbes
 Girl on the front page
 Poor little rich girl
 Prisoner of Shark Island
 Professional soldier
 36 hours to kill
 Wanted: Jane Turner
 Stuart, Jeanne
 The shadow
 Stuart, John
 Abdul the damned
 Four masked men
 Sullavan, Margaret
 Moon's our home
 Next time we love
 So red the rose
 Summerville, George (Slim)
 Can this be Dixie?
 Captain January
 Country doctor
 Pepper
 Reunion
 Way Down East
 White Fang
 Swanstroem, Karin
 On the sunnyside
 Swarthout, Gladys
 Champagne waltz
 Give us this night
 Rose of the Rancho
 Swickart, Joseph
 Caryl of the mountains
 Sydney, Basil
 Accused
 Crime over London
 Rhodes, the diamond master
 Tashman, Lilyan
 Frankie and Johnnie
 Tauber, Richard
 Land without music
 Taylor, Forrest
 Too much beef
 Taylor, Kent
 Accusing finger
 Florida special
 My marriage
 Ramona
 Sky parade
 Taylor, Mary
 Soak the rich
 Taylor, Robert
 Broadway melody of 1936
 Gorgeous hussy
 His brother's wife
 Magnificent obsession
 Private number
 Small town girl
 Tchirkof, Boris
 Three women
 Tearle, Conway
 Desert guns
 Judgment book
 Tearle, Godfrey
 East meets west
 Last journey
 Thirty-nine steps
 Wolves of the underworld
 Teasdale, Verree
 Milky way
 Temple, Shirley
 Captain January
 Dimples
 Littlest rebel
 Poor little rich girl
 Tenin, Boris
 Grain
 Terry, Sheila
 Go get-'em Haines
 Tester, Desmond
 Beloved vagabond
 Nine days a queen
 Thomson, Beatrix
 Old curiosity shop
 Thomson, Kenneth
 Whispering Smith speaks
 Thorgersen, Edward
 Game of Jai-alai
 Winter magic
 Thorndike, Sybil
 Nine days a queen
 Thunder Cloud, Chief
 Annie Oakley
 Tibbett, Lawrence
 Metropolitan
 Under your spell
 Tibbetts, Martha
 Ranger courage
 Unknown ranger
 Tobin, Genevieve
 Broadway hostess
 Case of the lucky legs
 Here's to romance
 Snowed under Todd, Thelma
 Bohemian girl
 Two for tonight
 Toler, Sidney
 This is the life
 Tombes, Andrew
 Ticket to paradise
 Tomlin, Pinky
 Don't get personal
 King Solomon of Broadway
 Paddy O'Day
 With love and kisses
 Tone, Franchot
 Dangerous
 Exclusive story
 Gorgeous hussy
 King steps out
 Love on the run
 Mutiny on the Bounty
 Suzy
 Unguarded hour
 Toomey, Regis
 Bulldog edition
 Shadows of the Orient
 Skull and Crown

- Torrence, David
 Captain Blood
 Torres, Raquel
 Red wagon
 Tovar, Lupita
 Old Spanish custom
 Toye, Wendy
 Invitation to the waltz
 Tracy, Arthur
 Limelight
 Tracy, Lee
 Criminal lawyer
 Sutter's gold
 Two fisted
 Wanted: Jane Turner
 Tracy, Spencer
 Fury
 Libeled lady
 Riffraff
 San Francisco
 Whipsaw
 Travis, June
 Bengal tiger
 Big game
 Case of the black cat
 Ceiling zero
 Earthworm tractors
 Jailbreak
 Times Square playboy
 Treacher, Arthur
 Case against Mrs Ames
 Hard luck dame
 Hearts divided
 Hitch hike lady
 Satan met a lady
 Thank you, Jeeves
 Under your spell
 Tree, Dorothy
 Bridge of sighs
 Tree, Lady
 Girl from Maxim's
 Trevor, Claire
 Career woman
 15 Maiden Lane
 Human cargo
 My marriage
 Navy wife
 Song and dance man
 Star for a night
 To Mary—with love
 Trevor, Edward
 Way Down East
 Triquet, Gaby
 Les Misérables
 Truex, Ernest
 Ladies love hats
 Tsessarskaya, Emma
 Grain
 Twelvetees, Helen
 Frisco waterfront
 Spanish Cape mystery
 Thoroughbred
 Tyler, Tom
 Fast bullets
 Last outlaw
 Powdersmoke range
 Roamin' wild
 Trigger Tom
 Ullrich, Luise
 Liebeleil
 Valli, Joe
 Flying doctor
 Vanel, Charles
 Les Misérables
 Van Riel, Raimondo
 Crooked love
 Varini, Emilia
 One hundred days of Napoleon
 Vaughan, Dorothy
 Love begins at twenty
 Veidt, Conrad
 King of the damned
 Passing of the third floor
 back
 Velez, Lupe
 Morals of Marcus
 Venable, Evelyn
 Happy go lucky
 Harmony lane
 North of Nome
 Star for a night
 Streamline express
 Viarisio, Enrico
 I love you only
 Milizia Territoriale
 Vincent, Alan
 Easy money
 Vinson, Helen
 King of the damned
 Love in exile
 Reunion
 Viva, Sim
 L'homme des Folies Bergère
 Voitsik, Ada
 Anna
 Vojta, Jar
 Young love
 Von Eltz, Theodore
 Below the deadline
 I cover Chinatown
 Von Stroheim, Eric
 Crime of Dr Crespi
 Vyner, Margaret
 Flying doctor
 Waddington, Patrick
 I give my heart
 Wahlberg, Gideon
 Skaergaards-flirt
 Wahlborn, Nils
 Raggen, Det Aer Jag Det
 Vaaran Pojke
 Youth of today
 Wakefield, Hugh
 Crimson circle
 Forget me not
 Walburn, Raymond
 Absolute quiet
 Mister Cinderella
 They met in a taxi
 Three wise guys
 Walker, Ray
 Brilliant marriage
 Bulldog edition
 Cappy Ricks returns
 Crime patrol
 Dark hour
 Fighting coward
 Music is magic
 Walsh, Kay
 Luck of the Irish
 Walters, Luana
 Aces and eights
 Ride 'em cowboy
 Speed reporter
 Walthall, Henry B.
 China Clipper
 Hearts in bondage
 Last outlaw
 Mine with the iron door
 Tale of two cities
 Walton, Douglas
 Garden murder case
 I conquer the sea
 Mary of Scotland
 Ward, Penelope Dudley
 I stand condemned
 Ward, Polly
 Old curiosity shop
 Ware, Irene
 Criminal within
 Dark hour
 False pretenses
 Federal agent
 Happiness C. O. D.
 O'Malley of the Mounted
 Whispering Smith speaks
 Warner, H. B.
 Along came love
 Blackmailer
 Rose of the Rancho
 Warrender, Harold
 Invitation to the waltz
 Warwick, Robert
 Return of Jimmy Valentine
 Washburn, Bryant
 Millionaire kid
 Watson, Lucille
 Bishop misbehaves
 Wayne, John
 Conflict
 King of the Pecos
 Lawless nineties
 Lawless range
 Lonely trail
 New frontier
 Oregon trail
 Sea spoilers
 Winds of the wasteland
 Wayne, Naughton
 Kiss me goodbye
 Weaver, Crawford
 Legion of terror
 Webster, Ben
 Old curiosity shop
 Weidler, Virginia
 Freckles
 Girl of the Ozarks
 Timothy's quest
 Trouble for two
 Weissmuller, Johnny
 Tarzan escapes
 Weldon, Heyburn
 Speed
 Wells, Jacqueline
 Bohemian girl
 Night cargo
 West, Buster
 Moonlight and melody
 West, Mae
 Go west, young man
 Klondike Annie
 Westley, Helen
 Banjo on my knee
 Dimples
 Half angel
 Splendor
 Whalen, Michael
 Career woman
 Country doctor
 The man I marry
 Poor little rich girl
 Sing, baby, sing
 Song and dance man
 White Fang
 Wheeler, Bert
 Mummy's boys
 Silly Billies
 White, Thelma
 Never too late
 Whiteman, Paul
 Thanks a million
 Whitman, Gayne
 Wild wings
 Whitney, Eleanore
 Rose Bowl
 Three cheers for love
 Timothy's quest
 Wieck, Dorothea
 Private life of Louis XIV
 Wilcoxon, Henry
 Crusades
 Last of the Mohicans
 President's mystery
 Woman alone
 Wilde, Lois
 Caryl of the mountains
 Singing cowboy
 Wildcat trooper
 Willard, Edmund
 Mystery of the Marie
 Celeste
 William, Warren
 Case of the lucky legs
 Case of the velvet claws
 Go west, young man
 Hard luck dame
 Satan met a lady
 Stage struck
 Times Square playboy
 Widow from Monte Carlo
 Williams, D. J.
 Murder in the red barn
 Williams, Emlyn
 Broken blossoms
 Williams, Guinn
 Gun play
 Kelly the second
 Muss 'em up
 Powdersmoke range

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

—Continued

- Williams, Herb
Rose of the Rancho
Williams, Hugh
Last journey
Williams, Roger
Cattle thief
Toll of the desert
Willis, Norman
Lady from nowhere
Wilson, Dorothy
Bad boy
In old Kentucky
Last days of Pompeii
Wilson, Frank
Green pastures
Wilson, Lois
Laughing at trouble
Society fever
Your Uncle Dudley
Wilson, Marie
King of hockey
Satan met a lady
Wing, Toby
Forced landing
Hill Tillies
With love and kisses
Wingard, Karl G.
Raggen, Det Aer Jag Det
Winninger, Charles
Showboat
Three smart girls
White Fang
Wise, Ray
Last of the pagans
Withers, Grant
Lady be careful
Let's sing again
Skybound
Withers, Jane
Can this be Dixie?
Gentle Julia
Little Miss Nobody
Paddy O'Day
Pepper
This is the life
Witherspoon, Cora
Ladies love hats
Libeled lady
Piccadilly Jim
Wood, Helen
Can this be Dixie?
Champagne Charlie
Charlie Chan at the race track
High tension
Woodbury, Joan
Bulldog courage
Fighting coward
Lion's den
Rogues' tavern
Song of the Gringo
Woods, Donald
Isle of fury
Road gang
A son comes home
Song of a nation
Story of Louis Pasteur
Tale of two cities
White angel
Woods, Harry
Gallant defender
Heir to trouble
Heroes of the range
Lawless nineties
Silly Billies
Woolsey, Robert
Mummy's boys
Silly Billies
Worth, Barbara
Racing luck
Worth, David
Riddle Ranch
Wray, Fay
Come out of the pantry
Roaming lady
They met in a taxi
When knights were bold
Wuest, Ida
Annette in paradise
Wyatt, Charlene
Valiant is the word for Carrie
- Wyatt, Jane
Luckiest girl in the world
We're only human
Wyndham, Carol
Roamin' wild
Wyndham, Joan
Juggernaut
Wynters, Charlotte
Calling of Dan Matthews
Ivory-handled gun
- Yacanelli, Frank
Gun play
Lucky terror
Young, Elizabeth
East of Java
Young, Loretta
Crusades
Ladies in love
Private number
Ramona
Unguarded hour
Young, Polly Ann
Border patrolman
His fighting blood
Young, Robert
Bride comes home
Bride walks out
It's love again
Longest night
Red salute
Remember last night
Secret agent
Sworn enemy
Three wise guys
Young, Roland
Give me your heart
Man who could work miracles
One rainy afternoon
Unguarded hour
Younger, E.
Peasants
Youssef, Mohaud
Itto
Yurka, Blanche
Tale of two cities
- Zaichikov, V.
We are from Kronstadt
Zarubina, I.
Three women
Zellman, Tollie
Vaaran Pojke
Youth of today
Zheimo, Yanina
Three women
Zuskin, V. L.
Greater promise
- Brentano, L.
Melody lingers on
Brodie, J., & Green, A.
Beauty on the beat (Love on the run)
Brush, K.
Maid of honor (Lady of secrets)
Buchan, J.
Thirty-nine steps
Bulwer-Lytton, E. G. E. L.
Last days of Pompeii
Burgess, G.
Two o'clock courage (Two in the dark)
Burman, B. L.
Steamboat round the bend
Burnett, F. H.
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Burnett, W. R.
Dr Socrates
Burns, W. N.
Robin Hood of El Dorado
Campbell, R.
Tiger valley (Girl from Mandalay)
Cendrars, B.
Sutter's gold
Connolly, M.
Lady Smith (Palm Springs)
Cooper, J. F.
Last of the Mohicans
Cram, M.
Thin air (Stars over Broadway)
Curwood, J. O.
Country beyond
Song of the trail
Timber war
De Alarcon, P. A.
El Sombbrero de Tres Picos (Il Cappello a Tre Punte)
DeBeneditti, A.
Milizia Territoriale
Deeping, W.
Two black sheep (Two sinners)
Delmar, V.
Bracelets (Hands across the table)
Day never came (King of burlesque)
De Montepin, X., and Dor-nay, J.
La Porteuse de Pain
Dickens, C.
A Christmas carol (Scrooge)
Old curiosity shop
Tale of two cities
Dostoevskii, F. M.
Crime and punishment
Crime and punishment (Crime et Châtiment)
Douglas, L. C.
Magnificent obsession
Dumas, A.
Three musketeers
Du Maurier, G.
Peter Ibbetson
Eberhart, M. G.
From this dark stairway (Murder of Dr Harrigan)
Murder by an aristocrat
Eden, R., pseud.
Dancing feet
Farnol, J.
Amateur gentleman
Ferber, E.
Come and get it
Showboat
Finn, J.
Murder in the big house (Jailbreak)
Fitzsimmons, C.
Whispering window (Longest night)
Forester, C. S.
Born for glory
Fox, J., Jr.
Trail of the lonesome pine
Frapié, L.
La Maternelle
Furnas, J. C.
And sudden death [article]

BOOKS (Adapted)

- Adams, S. H.
Gorgeous hussy
In person
Allen, H.
Anthony Adverse
Asbury, H.
Barbary Coast
Austin, F. B.
Drums (Last outpost)
Baldwin, F.
Moon's our home
Spinster dinner (Love before breakfast)
Wife versus secretary
Beaumont, G.
Making of O'Malley (Great O'Malley)
Benefield, B.
Valiant is the word for Carrie
Biggers, E. D.
Seven keys to Baldpate
Booth, C. G.
General died at dawn

- Gardner, E. S.
Case of the caretaker's cat
(Case of the black cat)
Case of the lucky legs
Case of the velvet claws
Special investigator
- Garth, D.
Cabin cruiser (Hideaway girl)
- Gluck, S.
The last trap (Dark hour)
- Gorman, H.
Suzy
- Grant, J. E.
Green shadow (Muss 'em up)
- Green, A. K.
Leavenworth case
- Grey, Z.
Desert gold
Drift fence
King of the Royal Mounted
Nevada
Outlaws of Palouse (End of the trail)
Raiders of Spanish Peaks (Arizona raiders)
Thunder mountain
Wanderer of the wasteland
- Hamilton, H.
Banjo on my knee
- Hammett, D.
Maltese falcon (Satan met a lady)
- Hardy, J. L.
Everything is thunder
- Hatch, E.
My man Godfrey
- Hemon, L.
Maria Chapdelaine
- Hichens, R.
Garden of Allah
- Hobart, V.
Ring around the moon
- Hobhouse, A., pseud.
Hangover murders (Remember last night)
- Hubbard, E.
Message to Garcia
- Hughes, R.
Canavan (It had to happen)
- Hughes, R., and others
President's mystery
- Hugo, V.
Les Misérables
- Hurst, V.
Tango
- Jackson, H. H.
Ramona
- Jamison, Mrs C. V.
Toinette's Phillip (Rainbow on the river)
- Jesse, F. T.
Lightning strikes twice (Half angel)
- Jope-Slade, C.
Forbidden heaven
- Jordan, E.
Daddy and I (Make way for a lady)
- Kantor, M.
Voice of Bugle Ann
- Kelland, C. B.
Dreamland (Strike me pink)
Opera hat (Mr Deeds goes to town)
- Kellerman, B.
The tunnel (Transatlantic tunnel)
- Kyne, P. B.
Born to fight
Cappy Ricks returns
Three godfathers
- Kyson, C.
Raw gold (West of Nevada)
- Lamb, H.
Crusades
- Lamson, D.
We who are about to die
- Lewis, S.
Dodsworth
Main street (I married a doctor)
- Lippincott, N.
Murder at Glen Athol (Criminal within)
- Locke, W. J.
Beloved vagabond
- London, J.
Abysmal brute (Conflict)
White Fang
- MacDonald, W. C.
Powdersmoke range
- MacKenzie, C.
 Sylvia Scarlett
- Markey, G.
His majesty's pajamas (Love in exile)
- Mastriani, F.
La Cieca di Sorrento (Blind girl of Sorrento)
- Maugham, S.
Narrow corner (Isle of fury)
- Melville, H.
Typee (Last of the pagans)
- Merritt, A.
Burn, witch, burn (Devil doll)
- Miller, A. D.
Come out of the pantry
- Millin, S. G.
The life of Rhodes (Rhodes, the diamond master)
- Milne, A. A.
Four days' wonder
- Monroe, N. M.
Dr Samuel Mudd (Prisoner of Shark Island)
- Moore, K. L.
Peacock feather (Pennies from heaven)
- Morell, P.
Diamond Jim
- Morris, G.
Tiger Island (East of Java)
- Mulford, C.
Bar 20 rides again
Bar 20 Three (Three on the trail)
Eagle's brood
Hop-a-long Cassidy's protegee (Call of the prairie)
- Murger, H.
La vie de Bohème (Mimi)
- Natoli, M.
Tempo Massimo
- Nicholson, M.
House of a thousand candles
- Nordhoff, C. B., and Hall, J.
Men against the sea (Mutiny on the Bounty)
Mutiny on the Bounty
Pitcairn's Island (Mutiny on the Bounty)
- Norris, K.
Beauty's daughter (Navy wife)
- Oppenheim, E. P.
Great impersonation
- Ouida, pseud.
Under two flags
- Palmer, S.
Case of the dangling pearl (Plot thickens)
Murder on a bridle path
- Payne, S.
Tracks (Swiftly)
- Parrott, U.
Next time we live, or Say goodbye again (Next time we love)
- Porter, G. S.
Freckles
Harvester
- Powell, D.
Country boy (Man of iron)
- Pushkin, A.
Dubrovsky
- Queen, E., pseud.
Chinese orange mystery (Mandarin mystery)
Spanish Cape mystery
- Reeves, T.
Glory hole (Dangerous waters)
- Richards, L. E.
Captain January
- Robert-Dumas, C.
Second bureau
- Roche, A. S.
Case against Mrs Ames
- Rogger, L. L.
The duchess (Princess comes across)
- Roth, J.
Job (Sins of man)
- Rowan, A. S.
Message to Garcia
- Sabatini, R.
Captain Blood
- Santley, J.
Murder in a Chinese theatre (Mad holiday)
- Saunders, L., pseud.
Snowed under
- Sayre, G.
Sky fever (Flying hostess)
- Sheldon, C. M.
In his steps
- Shepard, K.
I will be faithful (Human cargo)
- Sherman, R.
To Mary—with love
- Shuhov, I.
Enemies' paths (Grain)
- Smith, E.
Red wagon
- Spaak, C.
La Kermesse Heroique
- Stong, P.
Farmer in the dell
- Stout, R.
Fer-de-Lance (Meet Nero Wolfe)
- Strachey, L.
Eminent Victorians (White angel)
- Stuart, D.
The shadow
- Swift, J.
Gulliver's travels (New Gulliver)
- Syrett, N.
Portrait of a rebel (A woman rebels)
- Tarkington, B.
Gentle Julia
- Templin, E. M.
Boulder dam
- Tennyson, A.
Charge of the Light Brigade [poem]
- Tolstoi, L. N.
Anna Karenina
- Turner, E.
One-way ticket
- Vance, L. J.
Lone wolf returns
- Van Dine, S. S.
Garden murder case
- Wallace, E.
Crimson circle
- Wallace, F.
Odds against honor (Big game)
O'Reilly of Notre Dame (Rose Bowl)
- Webb, W. P.
Texas Rangers
- Webster, M. C.
The man I marry
- Weiman, R.
Witness chair
- Wells, H. G.
Shape of things to come (Things to come)
- West, W.
Big Bend Buckaroo (Riding avenger)
- Widgren, Gunnor
Raggen, Det Aer Jag Det
- Wiggin, K. D.
Timothy's quest
- Williams, B. A.
Small town girl
- Williams, V.
Clubfoot (Crouching beast)
- Wilson, C.
Empty saddles
Stormy

BOOKS (Adapted)—Continued

Wilson, H. L.
His majesty, Bunker Bean
(Bunker Bean)
Wodehouse, P. G.
Piccadilly Jim
Thank you, Jeeves
Wright, H. B.
Alias Brian Kent (Road to glory)
Calling of Dan Matthews
Mine with the iron door
Re-creation of Brian Kent
(Wild Brian Kent)
Wylie, I. A. R.
Feather in her hat
Yardley, H. O.
American black chamber (Rendezvous)
Young, S.
So red the rose

DIRECTORS

Alessandrini, G.
Don Bosco
Alexandre, R.
Cloistered
Allegret, M.
Lac Aux Dames
Archambaud, G.
Hideaway girl
My marriage
Return of Sophie Lang
Thunder in the night
Arnshtam, L.
Three women
Arzner, D.
Craig's wife
Asquith, A.
I stand condemned
Atkins, T.
Hi Gaucho
Auer, J. H.
Crime of Dr Crespi
Ayres, L.
Hearts in bondage
Bacon, L.
Cain and Mabel
Frisco Kid
Gold diggers of 1937
Sons o' guns
Banks, M.
Trouble ahead
Barton, C.
And sudden death
Last outpost
Murder with pictures
Nevada
Rose Bowl
Timothy's quest
Bauman, S.
Raggen, Det Aer Jag Det
Beaudine, W.
Forgotten women
Mr Cohen takes a walk
Two hearts in harmony
Beaumont, H.
Girl on the front page
Bennett, S. G.
Avenging waters
Cattle thief
Fugitive sheriff
Heir to trouble
Heroes of the range
Ranger courage
Unknown ranger
Western courage
Benoit-Levy, J.
Itto
La Maternelle
Bentley, T.
Music hath charms
Old curiosity shop
Scotland Yard mystery
Berkeley, B.
I live for love
Stage struck
Bernard, R.
Les Misérables
Bernhardt, K.
Beloved vagabond

Besozzi, M.
La Canzone del Sole
Biberman, H. J.
Meet Nero Wolfe
One-way ticket
Billon, P.
Second bureau
Black, P.
Hot paprika
Blassetti, A.
Gesuzza, la Sposa Gari-baldina
Blystone, J.
Bad boy
Gentle Julia
Little Miss Nobody
Magnificent brute
Boleslawski, R.
Garden of Allah
Metropolitan
O'Shaughnessy's boy
Theodora goes wild
Three godfathers
Bond, R.
Forbidden heaven
Bonnard, M.
Milizia Territoriale
Wedding march
Bornebusch, A.
Skaergaards-flirt
Vaaran Pojke
Borzage, F.
Desire
Hearts divided
Shipmates forever
Bradbury, R. N.
Between men
Cavalry
Courageous avenger
Last of the Warrens
Lawless range
No man's range
Sundown Saunders
Brahm, H.
Broken blossoms
Branner, P.
Youth of today
Brenon, H.
Living dangerously
Bretherton, H.
Bar 20 rides again
Call of the prairie
Eagle's brood
Girl from Mandalay
Heart of the west
King of the Royal Mounted
Leathernecks have landed
Three on the trail
Wild Brian Kent
Brice, M.
Sweet surrender
Brignoni, G.
Lorenzino de Medici
Passaporto Rosso
Brower, O.
Outlaw deputy
Postal Inspector
Sins of man
Brown, C.
Ah, wilderness
Anna Karenina
Gorgeous hussy
Wife versus secretary
Brown, K.
In his steps
White legion
Brown, M.
Forced landing
Browning, T.
Devil doll
Brunel, A.
Old Spanish custom
Buck, F.
Fang and claw
Burton, D.
Make way for a lady
Melody lingers on
Butler, D.
Captain January
Littlest rebel
Pigskin parade
White Fang
Buzzell, E.
Luckiest girl in the world
Three married men
Cabanne, C.
Another face
Criminal lawyer
Last outlaw
Storm over the Andes
We who are about to die
Cahn, E. L.
Confidential
Capra, F.
Mr Deeds goes to town
Carruth, M.
Love letters of a star
Chaplin, C.
Modern times
Chenal, P.
Crime et Châtiment
Christie, A.
Ladies love hats
Moonlight and melody
Clair, R.
Ghost goes west
Clemens, W.
Case of the velvet claws
Down the stretch
Here comes Carter
Law in her hands
Man hunt
Clift, D.
Mystery of the Marie
Celeste
Clifton, E.
Skull and Crown
Wildcat trooper
Cline, E. F.
F-man
It's a great life
Coleman, C. C., Jr.
Code of the range
Legion of terror
Collins, A. G.
Nobody's fool
Personal maid's secret
Thank you, Jeeves
Widow from Monte Carlo
Collins, L. D.
Doughnuts and society
Down under the sea
Leavenworth case
Return of Jimmy Valentine
Spanish Cape mystery
Connelly, M.
Green pastures
Connolly, B.
Changing of the guard
Conway, J.
Libeled lady
Tale of two cities
Cooper, G.
The shadow
Wolves of the underworld
Corrigan, L.
Dancing pirate
Cromwell, J.
Banjo on my knee
I dream too much
Little Lord Fauntleroy
To Mary—with love
Crosland, A.
Great impersonation
King Solomon of Broadway
Cruze, J.
Sutter's gold
Two fisted
Cukor, G.
Romeo and Juliet
Sylvia Scarlett
Girls' dormitory
Cummings, I.
Crime patrol
Girls' Dormitory
Poor little rich girl
White hunter
Curtiz, M.
Captain Blood
Charge of the Light Brigade
Walking dead
Czinner, P.
As you like it
Dawn, N.
Tundra
De Courville, A.
Seven sinners
De La Falaise, Marquis H.
Legong

- Del Ruth, R.
   Born to dance
   Broadway melody of 1936
   L'homme des Folies Bergère
   It had to happen
   Private number
   Thanks a million
 De Mille, C. B.
   Crusades
   The plainsman
 Denham, R.
   Crimson circle
 Desmond-Hurst, B.
   Ourselves alone
 Dieterle, W.
   Dr Socrates
   Great O'Malley
   Hard luck dame
   Midsummer night's dream
   Satan met a lady
   Story of Louis Pasteur
   White angel
 Disney, W.
   Broken toys
   Cock o' the walk
   Moving day
   On ice
   Three little wolves
   Three orphan kittens
 Douglas, G.
   General Spanky
 Dovjenco, A.
   Frontier
 Dupont, E. A.
   Bishop misbehaves
   Forgotten faces
   A son comes home
 Duvivier, J.
   Maria Chapdelaine
 Dwan, A.
   15 Maiden Lane
   High tension
   Human cargo
   Navy wife
   Song and dance man
 Dzigan, E.
   We are from Kronstadt
 Edwards, H.
   Jugernaut
   Private secretary
   Scrooge
 Ekk, N.
   Nightingale
 Elvey, M.
   Transatlantic tunnel
 English, J. W.
   His fighting blood
 Enright, R.
   China Clipper
   Earthworm tractors
   Miss Pacific Fleet
   Sing me a love song
   Snowed under
 Epstein, M.
   Itto
   La Maternelle
 Ermler, F.
   Peasants
 Erskine, C.
   Frankie and Johnnie
 Etter, M.
   Alpine love
 Faralla, D.
   Little America
 Feyder, J.
   La Kermesse Heroique
   Pension Mimosas
 Fields, L.
   Streamline express
 Fitzmaurice, G.
   Petticoat fever
   Suzy
 FitzPatrick, J. A.
   Sacred city of the Mayan
   Indians
 Flood, J.
   Everybody's old man
   We're only human
 Florey, R.
   Hollywood Boulevard
   Pay-Off
   Preview murder mystery
   Ship cafe
   Till we meet again
 Ford, J.
   Mary of Scotland
   Prisoner of Shark Island
   Steamboat round the bend
 Forde, E.
   Country beyond
   36 hours to kill
   Your Uncle Dudley
 Forde, W.
   Born for glory
   King of the damned
   Land without music
 Forzano, G.
   One hundred days of Napoleon
 Foster, L. R.
   Love letters of a star
 Foster, N.
   I cover Chinatown
 Fox, W.
   Powdersmoke range
   Racing lady
   Yellow dust
 Franklin, C.
   Tough guy
 Franklin, S.
   Dark angel
 Fraser, H.
   Cavalcade of the west
   Feud of the west
   Hair Trigger Casey
   Last of the Clintons
   Riding avenger
   Romance rides the range
   Wild mustang
   Wildcat Saunders
 Freeland, T.
   Accused
   Amateur gentleman
 Frenke, E.
   Woman alone
 Friedlander, L.
   Parole
   Stormy
 Froelich, C.
   Private life of Louis XIV
 Gallone, C.
   Divine spark
   For love of you
   Kiss me goodbye
 Garnett, T.
   Professional soldier
   She couldn't take it
 Gasnier, L.
   Last outpost
 Gerasimov, S.
   Seven brave men
 Gering, M.
   Lady of secrets
   Rose of the Rancho
 Goldblatt, M.
   Gypsies
 Goodwins, L.
   With love and kisses
 Gordon, S.
   Lawless riders
 Green, A. E.
   Colleen
   Dangerous
   Golden arrow
   Here's to romance
   More than a secretary
   They met in a taxi
   Two in a crowd
 Griffith, E. H.
   Ladies in love
   Next time we love
 Grinde, N.
   Captain's kid
   Fugitive in the sky
   Jailbreak
   Public enemy's wife
 Grune, K.
   Abdul the damned
 Guazoni, E.
   Il Re Burlone
 Guiol, F.
   Mummy's boys
   Silly Billies
 Guitry, S.
   Pasteur
 Hale, A.
   Neighborhood house
 Hale, R.
   Racing blood
 Hall, A.
   Annapolis farewell
   Give us this night
   Yours for the asking
 Hall, K. G.
   Thoroughbred
 Halperin, V.
   I conquer the sea
   Revolt of the Zombies
 Hamilton, W.
   Bunker Bean
   Freckles
   Murder on a bridle path
   Seven keys to Baldpate
 Hanbury, W. V.
   Crouching beast
   Scandals of Paris
 Hathaway, H.
   Go west, young man
   Peter Ibbetson
   Trail of the lonesome pine
 Hawks, H.
   Barbary Coast
   Ceiling zero
   Come and get it
   Road to glory
 Hecht, B.
   Once in a blue moon
   Soak the rich
 Heinz, R. R.
   Just my luck
 Heister, S.
   Straight from the shoulder
 L'Herbier, M.
   Le Bonheur
 Herman, A.
   Blazing justice
   Gun play
   Outlaws of the range
 Hill, B.
   Put on the spot
 Hill, R.
   Idaho kid
   Kelly of the secret service
   Men of the plains
   Prison shadows
   Rogues' tavern
   Too much beef
   West of Nevada
 Hill, S.
   Cardinal
 Hillyer, L.
   Dangerous waters
   Dracula's daughter
   Guard that girl
   Invisible ray
   Superspeed
 Hiscott, L.
   She shall have music
 Hitchcock, A.
   Secret agent
   Thirty-nine steps
 Hogan, J.
   Accusing finger
   Arizona raiders
   Desert gold
 Holmes, B.
   Farmer in the dell
   Plot thickens
 Hopper, E. M.
   Hong Kong nights
 Hopton, R.
   Song of the trail
 Horne, J.
   Bohemian girl
 Howard, D.
   Border patrolman
   Conflict
   Daniel Boone
   Mine with the iron door
   O'Malley of the Mounted
   Thunder mountain
   Whispering Smith speaks
 Howard, W. K.
   Mary Burns, fugitive
   Princess comes across
   Rendezvous
 Hulbert, J.
   Jack of all trades

DIRECTORS—Continued

- Humberstone, H. B.
 Charlie Chan at the opera
 Charlie Chan at the race track
 Three live ghosts
- Hutchinson, C.
 Born to fight
 Desert guns
 Judgment book
 Night cargo
 Riddle Ranch
 Ivanovsky, A. V.
 Dubrovsky
 James, A.
 Lucky terror
 Swiftly
 Valley of wanted men
- Jason, L.
 Bride walks out
 Love on a bet
- Johnson, R. K.
 I'll name the murderer
 Reckless way
 Skybound
 Suicide squad
- Jones, B.
 For the service
- Kane, J.
 Guns and guitars
 King of the Pecos
 Lawless nineties
 Lonely trail
 Melody trail
 Sagebrush troubadour
 Tumbling tumbleweeds
- Kanturek, O.
 Student romance
- Keighley, W.
 Bullets or ballots
 Green pastures
 Singing kid
 Special agent
 Stars over Broadway
- Kenton, E. C.
 Counterfeit
 Devil's squadron
 End of the trail
 Grand exit
 Public menace
- Killy, E.
 Bunker Bean
 Freckles
 Murder on a bridle path
 Second wife
 Seven keys to Baldpate
 Wanted: Jane Turner
- King, H.
 Country doctor
 Lloyds of London
 Ramona
 Way Down East
- King, L.
 Bengal tiger
 Draegerman courage
 Road gang
 Song of the saddle
 Special investigator
- Kirkwood, R.
 Lawless border
- Kirsanoff, D.
 Mystic mountain
- Korda, A.
 Forget me not
 Girl from Maxim's
 Rembrandt
- Korsh-Sablin, V.
 Greater promise
- Koster, H.
 Three smart girls
- La Cava, G.
 My man Godfrey
 She married her boss
- Lachman, H.
 Charlie Chan at the circus
 Man who lived twice
 Our relations
- Lamac, C.
 Frasquita
 Knock-out
- Lamont, C.
 August week-end
 Below the deadline
 Bulldog edition
 Dark hour
 False pretenses
 Grand slam opera
 Happiness C. O. D.
 Hitch hike to heaven
 Lady in scarlet
 Lady luck
 Little red schoolhouse
 Ring around the moon
- Landers, L.
 Night waitress
 Without orders
- Lanfield, S.
 Half angel
 King of burlesque
 Red salute
 Sing, baby, sing
- Lang, A.
 Great Ziegfeld
- Lang, F.
 Fury
- Lang, W.
 Love before breakfast
- Lara, C.
 Ciboulette
- Law, H.
 Neighborhood house
- Lederman, D. R.
 Alibi for murder
 Case of the missing man
 Come closer, folks
 Final hour
 Hell Ship Morgan
 Moonlight on the prairie
 Panic on the air
 Pride of the Marines
 Too tough to kill
- Lee, R. V.
 One rainy afternoon
 Three musketeers
- Leisen, M.
 Big broadcast of 1937
 Hands across the table
 Thirteen hours by air
- Leites, J.
 Young forest
- Leman, J.
 Land of promise
- Leonard, R. Z.
 Great Ziegfeld
 Piccadilly Jim
- LeRoy, M.
 Anthony Adverse
 I found Stella Parish
 Three men on a horse
- Lewyn, L.
 Pirate party on Catalina Island
- Lloyd, F.
 Mutiny on the Bounty
 Under two flags
- Lo, M.
 Song of China
- Lord, D.
 Trapped by television
- Lovering, O.
 Border flight
 Drift fence
 Sky parade
 Wanderer of the wasteland
- Lubin, A.
 Frisco waterfront
 House of a thousand candles
 Two sinners
 Yellowstone
- Luby, S. R.
 Crooked trail
 Desert phantom
 Rogue of the range
- Ludwig, E.
 Adventure in Manhattan
 Fatal lady
 Three kids and a queen
- Lynwood, B.
 Fire trap
 Shadows of the Orient
- Lytell, B.
 Along came love
- MacArthur, C.
 Once in a blue moon
 Soak the rich
- McCarey, L.
 Milky way
- McCarey, R.
 Millions in the air
 Three cheers for love
- McCarthy, J. P.
 Song of the Gringo
- McDonald, F.
 Big noise
 Boulder dam
 Broadway hostess
 Isle of fury
 Love begins at twenty
 Murder by an aristocrat
 Murder of Dr Harrigan
 Smart blonde
 Song of a nation
 Treachery rides the range
- MacFadden, H.
 Fighting youth
- McGann, W.
 Brides are like that
 Case of the black cat
 Freshman love
 Hot money
 Man of iron
 Polo Joe
 Times Square playboy
 Two against the world
- McGowan, R.
 Frontier justice
 Too many parents
- Machaty, G.
 Ecstasy
- Mack, R.
 Shake Mr Shakespeare
- McLeod, N.
 Coronado
 Early to bed
 Here comes Cookie
 Pennies from heaven
- Maish, H.
 Royal waltz
- Malasomma, N.
 Blind girl of Sorrento
- Mamouliau, R.
 Gay desperado
- Mander, M.
 Flying doctor
 Morals of Marcus
- Mannon, A. T.
 I was a captive of Nazi Germany
- Marin, E. L.
 All American chump
 Garden murder case
 I'd give my life
 Moonlight murder
 Speed
 Sworn enemy
- Marshall, G.
 Can this be Dixie?
 Crime of Dr Forbes
 In old Kentucky
 Message to Garcia
 Music is magic
 Show them no mercy
- Masyukof, A.
 Children of the revolution
- Mason, H.
 East meets west
- Masson, L.
 Le Barbier de Seville
- Materazzo, R.
 Il Serpente a Sonagli
- Mattioli, M.
 I love you only
- Mayo, A. L.
 Case of the lucky legs
 Give me your heart
 I married a doctor
 Petrified forest
- Meins, G.
 Kelly the second
- Melford, G.
 East of Java
- Mendes, L.
 Man who could work miracles

- Menzies, W. C.
   Things to come
 Merzbach, P.
   Invitation to the waltz
 Milestone, L.
   Anything goes
   General died at dawn
 Millar, A.
   Crooked love
 Milner, D.
   Fighting coward
 Mintz, C.
   Bon bon parade
   Kannibal kapers
 Molander, G.
   On the sunnyside
 Moore, V.
   Dragnet
 Moser, F.
   Mayflower
 Murphy, D.
   Don't gamble with love
 Murphy, R.
   Collegiate
   Florida special
   The man I marry
 Nattoli, M.
   Tempo Massimo
 Neilan, M.
   This is the life
 Neill, R. W.
   Lone wolf returns
 Neufeld, S.
   Traitor
 Neumann, K.
   Affair of Susan
   Let's sing again
   Rainbow on the river
 Newfield, S.
   Aces and eights
   Border caballero
   Bulldog courage
   Federal agent
   Ghost patrol
   Go get 'em Haines
   Lightnin' Bill Carson
   Lion's den
   Racing luck
   Roarin' guns
   Timber war
   Trails of the wild
 Newman, E. M.
   Steel and stone
 Newmeyer, F.
   General Spanky
 Nicholls, G., Jr.
   Big game
   Chatterbox
   M'liss
   Return of Peter Grimm
   Witness chair
 Nigh, W.
   Crash Donovan
   Dizzy dames
   Don't get personal
   His night out
   North of Nome
 Nugent, E.
   And so they were married
   Splendor
   Wives never know
 Obal, M.
   Annette in paradise
 O'Connor, W.
   Pace that kills
 O'Neill, M. G.
   Wellington Pike goes west
 Ophuels, M.
   Liebele
 Palermi, A.
   Your troubles are mine
 Pearson, G.
   Four masked men
 Pedelty, D.
   Luck of the Irish
 Pember, C.
   Wanted men
 Pembroke, S.
   Oregon trail
 Pichel, I.
   Gentleman from Louisiana
 Pierson, C.
   New frontier
   Singing vagabond
 Piryof, I.
   Anna
 Preminger, O. L.
   Under your spell
 Preobrazhenskaya, O.
   Grain
 Ptushko, A.
   New Gulliver
 Ratoff, G.
   Sins of man
 Ray, A.
   Everyman's law
   Under cover man
 Ray, B. B.
   Caryl of the mountains
   Midnight phantom
   Millionaire kid
   Roamin' wild
   Speed reporter
 Raymond, J.
   Come out of the pantry
   When knights were bold
 Reed, E.
   House of secrets
 Reed, T.
   Lady be careful
 Reinhardt, J.
   Captain calamity
 Reinhardt, M.
   Midsummer night's dream
 Renoir, J.
   Les amours de Toni
 Riesner, C. F.
   It's in the air
 Roach, H.
   Hill Tillies
 Roberts, S.
   Ex-Mrs Bradford
   Lady consents
   Man who broke the bank
     at Monte Carlo
 Rogell, A.
   Escape from Devil's Island
   Grand jury
   Roaming lady
   You may be next
 Rogers, C.
   Bohemian girl
 Rosen, P.
   Bridge of sighs
   Brilliant marriage
   Calling of Dan Matthews
   Easy money
   Ellis Island
   It couldn't have happened
   Missing girls
   President's mystery
   Tango
   Three of a kind
 Rosmer, M.
   Everything is thunder
   Mister Hobo
   Murder in the red barn
 Roth, M.
   Flying hostess
 Rovensky, J.
   Young love
 Ruben, J. W.
   Old hutch
   Riffraff
   Trouble for two
 Ruggles, W.
   Bride comes home
   Valiant is the word for
     Carrie
 Salkow, S.
   Four days' wonder
 Samuels, H.
   Fast bullets
 Sandrich, M.
   Follow the fleet
   Top hat
   A woman rebels
 Santell, A.
   Feather in her hat
   Winterset
 Santley, J.
   Dancing feet
   Harmony lane
   Harvester
   Her master's voice
   Laughing Irish eyes
   Smartest girl in town
   Walking on air
   Waterfront lady
   We went to college
 Sauvage, A.
   Yellow cruise
 Saville, V.
   First a girl
   It's love again
 Schneider, E.
   Gypsies
 Schoedsack, E. B.
   Last days of Pompeii
 Schunzel, E.
   Amphitryon
 Scott, A.
   Follow your heart
   Happy go lucky
   Hitch hike lady
   $1000 a minute
   Palm Springs
   Ticket to paradise
 Sedgwick, E.
   Mister Cinderella
   Virginia judge
 Seller, L.
   Career woman
   First baby
   Here comes trouble
   Paddy O'Day
   Star for a night
 Seiter, W. A.
   Case against Mrs Ames
   Dimples
   If you could only cook
   In person
   Moon's our home
 Seitz, G. B.
   Absolute quiet
   Exclusive story
   Kind lady
   Last of the Mohicans
   Mad holiday
   Three wise guys
 Selander, L.
   Boss rider of Gun Creek
   Empty saddles
   Ride 'em cowboy
 Selman, D.
   Dangerous intrigue
   Gallant defender
   Killer at large
   Mysterious avenger
   Prescott kid
   Secret patrol
   Shakedown
   Tugboat princess
 Semells, H.
   Trigger Tom
 Sevilla, R.
   She-Devil Island
 Shamroy, F.
   Never too late
 Shea, W.
   Girl of the Ozarks
 Shertzing, V.
   Music goes 'round
 Shores, L.
   Glory trail
   Rebellion
 Sloane, P.
   Here comes the band
 Smith, N.
   California mail
   Guns of the Pecos
   King of hockey
   Trallin' west
 Stahl, J. M.
   Magnificent obsession
 Staub, R.
   Country gentlemen
   Reg'lar kids
   Sitting on the moon
 Stein, P.
   Mimi
   Red wagon
 Steinhoff, H.
   Making of a king

DIRECTORS—Continued

- Stevens, G.
Annie Oakley
Swing time
Stevenson, R.
Jack of all trades
Man who changed his mind
Nine days a queen
Sti, A. R.
La Porteuse de Pain
Stoffard, J.
Scandals of Paris
Stoloff, B.
Don't turn 'em loose
To beat the band
Two in the dark
Stone, R.
Mandarin mystery
Strayer, F. R.
Condemned to live
Criminal within
Laughing at trouble
Sea spoilers
Society fever
Summers, W.
Ourselves alone
Sutherland, A. E.
Champagne waltz
Diamond Jim
Poppy
Taggart, E.
Longest night
Women are trouble
Talley, T.
Filming the feminine headliners
Winter magic
Taurog, N.
Big broadcast of 1936
Reunion
Rhythm on the range
Strike me pink
Taylor, R.
Cowboy and the kid
Ivory-handled gun
Silver spurs
Sunset of power
Three mesquiteers
Throwback
Terry, P.
Mayflower
Thiele, W.
Jungle princess
Thorpe, R.
Last of the pagans
Tarzan escapes
Voice of Bugle Ann
Tinling, J.
Back to nature
Champagne Charlie
Charlie Chan in Shanghai
Educating father
Every Saturday night
Pepper
Trauberg, I.
Son of Mongolia
Tryon, G.
Easy to take
Two in revolt
Tuttle, F.
Two for tonight
Valentin, A.
Amphitryon
Van Beuren, A. J.
Molly Moo Cow and the Indians
Van Dyke, W. S.
After the thin man
Devil is a sissy
His brother's wife
I live my life
Love on the run
Rose Marie
San Francisco
Varnel, M.
Dance band
I give my heart
Vidor, C.
His family tree
Muss 'em up
Vidor, K.
So red the rose
Texas Rangers
- Viertel, B.
Passing of the third floor
back
Rhodes, the diamond master
Von Sternberg, J.
Crime and punishment
King steps out
Vorhaus, B.
Daredevils of the earth
Dusty ermine
Last journey
Wallace, R.
Wedding present
Walsh, R.
Big brown eyes
Klondike Annie
Spendthrift
Wangenheim, G.
Der Kampf
Watson, W.
Seeing Nellie home
Watt, N.
Hopalong Cassidy returns
Navy born
Wechster, L.
Wings over Ethiopia
Wellman, W. A.
Robin Hood of El Dorado
Small town girl
Whale, J.
Remember last night
Showboat
Whelan, T.
Perfect gentleman
Wilbur, C.
Devil on horseback
Gay cure
Yellow cargo
Wilcox, H.
Limelight
Peg of old Drury
Three maxims
Wiles, G.
Blackmailer
Charlie Chan's secret
Lady from nowhere
Two-fisted gentleman
Williams, L.
Desert justice
Toll of the desert
Wood, S.
Night at the opera
Unguarded hour
Whipsaw
Woods, A.
Once in a million
Spy 77
Wright, M. V.
Big show
Cappy Ricks returns
Comin' 'round the mountain
Singing cowboy
Winds of the wasteland
Wyler, W.
Come and get it
Dodsworth
Gay deception
These three
Young, H.
My American wife
Woman trap
Zeisler, A.
Crime over London
- Beaumarchais, P.
Barber of Seville (Le Barbier de Seville) Marriage of Figaro (Le Barbier de Seville)
Belasco, D.
Return of Peter Grimm
Benoit, P.
Nuits de Muscovie (I stand condemned)
Bernstein, H.
Le Bonheur
Bolton, G.
Dark angel
Burnett, F. H.
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Bus-Fekete, L.
Three girls (Ladies in love)
Carb, D.
Chatterbox
Carpenter, E. C.
Perfect gentleman
Chancellor, J.
King of the damned
Chodorov, E.
Kind lady
Cohan, G. M.
Home towners (Times Square playboy)
Seven keys to Baldpate
Song and dance man
Connelly, M.
Green pastures
Connors, B.
Applesauce (Brides are like that)
Crouse, R., and Lindsay, H.
Anything goes
Davis, A.
Reunion (Till we meet again)
Dazey, C. T.
In old Kentucky
De Croisset, F.
Ciboulette [operetta]
Decsey, E., and Hohn, G.
Cissy (King steps out)
Dixon, C.
Secret agent
Dodd, L. W.
His majesty, Bunker Bean
(Bunker Bean)
Donnelly, D.
Poppy
Farago, A., and Laszlo, A.
The girl who dared (Top hat)
Feyder, G.
Girl from Maxim's
Flavin, M.
Broken dishes (Love begins at twenty)
Fodor, L.
Matura (Girls' dormitory)
Unguarded hour
Gates, E.
Poor little rich girl
Geoffrey, W.
Scotland Yard mystery
Gleason, J., and Taber, R.
Is zat so? (Two-fisted)
Grant, N.
Dusty ermine
Hammerstein, O.
Showboat
Hammerstein, O., and Harbach, O.
Rose Marie
Harte, B.
M'liss
Hay, I., and Mason, A. E. W.
Present from Margate (Widow from Monte Carlo)
Hellman, L.
Children's hour (These three)
Hichens, R.
Garden of Allah
Holm, J. C., and Abbott, G.
Three men on a horse
Howard, S.
Dodsworth
Isham, F. S., and Marcin, M.
Three live ghosts

PLAYS (Adapted)

- Ade, G.
College widow (Freshman love)
Anderson, M.
Mary of Scotland
Winterset
Arlen, M.
Dream princess (Golden arrow)
Balf, M. W.
Bohemian girl
Bataille, H.
La Marcia Nuziale (Wedding March)

Jackson, F.
Bishop misbehaves
Jerome, J. K.
Passing of the third floor
back
Kavanaugh, K.
Every Saturday night
Kelly, G.
Craig's wife
Kinkead, C.
Common clay (Private number)
Kirkland, J.
Frankie and Johnnie
Knepler, P., and Welleminski,
J. M.
DuBarry (I give my heart)
Kummer, C.
Her master's voice
Lehar, F.
Frasquita [operetta]
Lief, J. O., and Lief, M.
Two for tonight
Lindsay, H., and Robinson,
B.
Your Uncle Dudley
Locke, W. J.
Morals of Marcus
Mack, W.
Dragnet
Maibaum, R., Wallach, M., and Haight, G.
Sweet mystery of life (Gold diggers of 1937)
Mallory, J., pseud.
Sweet aloe (Give me your heart)
Marischka, H., and E.
Cissy (King steps out)
[operetta]
Marlowe, C.
When knights were bold
Michaelis, K.
Die heilige Luege (Star for a night)
Miller, A. D., and Milton, R.
Charm school (Collegiate)
Mozart, W.
Marriage of Figaro (Le Barbier de Seville) [opera]
Nicholson, K., and Robinson,
C.
Sailor beware (Lady be careful)
O'Neil, G., and Totheroh, D.
Mother lode (Yellow dust)
O'Neill, E.
Ah, wilderness
Osborne, H.
Shore leave (Follow the fleet)
Oursler, F.
All the king's men (Second wife)
Parker, L.
Cardinal
Parker, L. B.
Way Down East
Peple, E.
Littlest rebel
Pujal, P., and R.
Monsieur sans gene (One rainy afternoon)
Raphael, J. N.
Peter Ibbetson
Reed, M.
Petticoat fever
Ridley, A., and Merivale, B.
Wrecker (Seven sinners)
Riley, L.
Personal appearance (Go west, young man)
Root, L., and Clark, H.
Milky way
Rossini, G.
Barber of Seville (Le Barbier de Seville) [opera]
Schnitzler, A.
Liebelei
Shakespeare, W.
As you like it
Midsummer night's dream
Romeo and Juliet

Sherwood, R. E.
Petrified forest
Simpson, R., and Gregory, F.
Living dangerously
Sturrock, D., and Scott, N.
The trouble (Ourselves alone)
Szekely, H., and Stemmler,
R. A.
Pearl necklace (Desire)
Thomas, A. E.
Lord Richard in the pantry
(Come out of the pantry)
Thompson, F., and Donahue,
J.
Tin hats (Sons o' guns)
Tully, R. W., and Belasco,
D.
Rose of the Rancho
Unger, G., and Lasky, J., Jr.
Private beach (Music is magic)
Van Loan, H. H., and Mack,
W.
The noose (I'd give my life)
Vulpus, F.
Youth at the helm (Jack of all trades)
Wead, F.
Ceiling zero
Weitzenkorn, L.
Five star final (Two against the world)
Young, R. J.
Glorious Betsy (Hearts divided)

PUPPETEERS

Kransy, F.
New Gulliver

SHORT STORIES (Adapted)

Addington, S.
Bless their hearts (And so they were married)
Anderson, F. I.
Notorious Sophie Lang (Return of Sophie Lang)
Bourbon, D.
Roaming lady
Bradford, R.
O' man Adam an' his chil-
lun (Green pastures)
Bren, J. R. and Houston, N.
Odds are even (Racing lady)
Brennan, F. H.
Matron's report (Little Miss Nobody)
Miss Pacific Fleet
Burke, T.
Chink and the child (Broken blossoms)
Burnett, W. R.
36 hours to kill
Carey, L.
Johnny gets his gun (Straight from the shoulder)
Cockrell, F. M.
Count Pete (Walking on air)
Curwood, J. O.
Caryl of the mountains
(Trails of the wild)
Day, L.
Living up to Lizzie (Personal maid's secret)
Dodge, H. I.
Skinner's dress suit (His night out)
Edington, M.
Purple and fine linen (Adventure in Manhattan)
Francis, O.
Big (Magnificent brute)
Freeman, E.
$1000 a minute

Gallico, P.
Wedding present
Goodloe, A. C.
Claustrophobia (I live my life)
Grant, J. E.
Hahsit, Babe, and Big brown eyes (Big brown eyes)
Hamilton, C.
The prodigal father (Perfect gentleman)
Harte, B.
M'liss
Hervey, H.
A son comes home
Holding, E. S.
Bride comes home
Jacobs, W. W.
Money box (Our relations)
Jordan, A.
Kitchen privileges (Luckiest girl in the world)
Kelland, C. B.
Recreation car (Florida
special)
Keown, Eric
Glourie Castle (Ghost goes west)
King, R.
Case of the Constant God
(Love letters of a star)
Kyne, P. B.
All for love (Valley of wanted men)
Last assignment (Fighting coward)
Lionized (Racing blood)
On Irish hill (Kelly of the secret service)
Without orders
McCardell, R. L.
High hats (Ladies love hats)
McCarthy, M.
Theodora goes wild
McCulley, J.
King of Cactusville (Outlaw deputy)
Maughan, W. S.
Ashenden; or the British agent (Secret agent)
Poe, E. A.
Premature burial (Crime of Dr Crespi)
Rinehart, M. R.
Mr Cohen takes a walk
Runyon, D.
All scarlet (Racing lady) Gentlemen, the King (Professional soldier)
Three wise guys
Scott, E.
Border flight
Smith, G.
Old hutch
Squier, E. L.
Glorious buccaneer (Dancing pirate)
Stevenson, R. L.
Suicide club (Trouble for two)
Taylor, M.
Safari in Manhattan (More than a secretary)
Tinsley, T. A.
Five spot (Panic on the air)
Upson, W. H.
Earthworm tractors
Walpole, H.
Silver mask (Kind lady)
Walsh, T.
Homecoming (Don't turn em loose)
Husk (We're only human)
Wells, H. G.
Man who could work miracles
Witwer, H. C.
Cain and Mabel
Wodehouse, P. G.
Watch dog (Dizzy dames)
Worts, G. F.
Absolute quiet

ANNUAL TITLE INDEX

This index of film titles contains all films which have appeared in the various numbers from December 16, 1935 through December 28, 1936. The first issue contained films released from September 1, 1935 through December 16, 1935.

After the title of the film, the producer is given (in abbreviation) and next the date of the issue or issues wherein the reviews appear. These dates apply to the four quarterly issues as follows:

March 30, 1936; June 29, 1936; September 28, 1936; and December 28, 1936.

A key to the producer's abbreviations is found at the end of this index.

(s) This symbol denotes a short feature.

Abdul the Damned (Col)	June 29	Big Noise (War)	June 29, Sept 28	Cappy Ricks Returns (Rep)	Mar 30
Absolute Quiet (MGM)	June 29	Big Show (Rep)	Dec 28	Captain Blood (War)	Mar 30
Abyssinia (Amk)	Dec 28	Bishop Misbehaves (MGM)	Mar 30	Captain Calamity (Regal)	June 29
Aces and Eights (Pur)	Sept 28	Blackmailer (Col)	Sept 28	Captain January (20th-C)	Mar 30, June 29
Accused (Crit-UA)	Dec 28	Blazing Justice (Spec)	Mar 30	Captain's Kid (War)	Sept 28, Dec 28
Accusing Finger (Par)	Dec 28	Blind Girl of Sorrento (NM)	Sept 28	Cardinal (Gros)	June 29
Adventure in Manhattan (Col)	Dec 28	Bohemian Girl (MGM)	Mar 30	Career Woman (20th-C)	Dec 28
Affair of Susan (Univ)	Mar 30	Bold Caballero (Rep)	Dec 28	Caryl of the Mountains (Rel)	June 29
After the Thin Man (MGM)	Dec 28	(s) Bon Bon Parade (Col)	Mar 30	Case Against Mrs Ames (Par)	June 29
Ah, Wilderness (MGM)	Mar 30	Le Bonheur (Pathé)	Mar 30	Case of the Black Cat (War)	Dec 28
Alibi for Murder (Col)	Dec 28	Border Caballero (Pur)	June 29	Case of the Lucky Legs (War)	Mar 30
All American Chump (MGM)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Border Flight (Par)	June 29, Sept 28	Case of the Missing Man (Col)	Mar 30
Alpine Love (NM)	June 29	Border Patrolman (20th-C)	Sept 28	Case of the Velvet Claws (War)	June 29, Sept 28
Amateur Gentleman (UA)	Mar 30, June 29	Born for Glory (GB)	Mar 30, June 29	Cattle Thief (Col)	Mar 30, June 29
Les Amours de Toni (FMP)	Dec 28	Born to Dance (MGM)	Dec 28	Cavalcade of the West (Div)	Dec 28
Amphitryon (LC)	Dec 28	Born to Fight (Conn)	June 29	Cavalry (Rep)	Dec 28
And So They Were Married (Col)	June 29	Boss Rider of Gun Creek (Univ)	Dec 28	Ceiling Zero (War)	Mar 30
And Sudden Death (Par)	June 29, Sept 28	Boulder Dam (War)	Mar 30, June 29	Champagne Charlie (20th-C)	June 29
Anna (Amk)	Sept 28	Bride Comes Home (Par)	Mar 30	Champagne Waltz (Par)	Dec 28
Anna Karenina (MGM)	Mar 30	Bride Walks Out (RKO)	Sept 28	(s) Changing of the Guard (War)	Sept 28
Annapolis Farewell (Par)	Mar 30	Brides Are Like That (War)	Mar 30, June 29	Charge of the Light Brigade (War)	Dec 28
Annette in Paradise (AAFA)	June 29	Bridge of Sighs (Inv)	June 29	Charlie Chan at the Circus (20th-C)	Mar 30, June 29
Annie Oakley (RKO)	Mar 30	Brilliant Marriage (Inv)	June 29, Dec 28	Charlie Chan at the Opera (20th-C)	Dec 28
Another Face (RKO)	Mar 30	Broadway Hostess (War)	Mar 30	Charlie Chan at the Race Track (20th-C)	Sept 28
Anthony Adverse (War)	June 29, Sept 28	Broadway Melody of 1936 (MGM)	Mar 30	Charlie Chan in Shanghai (20th-C)	Mar 30
Anything Goes (Par)	Mar 30	Broadway Playboy (War)	See	Charlie Chan's Secret (20th-C)	Mar 30
Arizona Raiders (Par)	Sept 28	Times Square Playboy		Chatterbox (RKO)	Mar 30
As You Like It (20th-C)	Dec 28	Broken Blossoms (Twick)	June 29	Children of the Revolution (Ukr)	June 29
(s) Audioscopiks (MGM)	Mar 30	(s) Broken Toys (UA)	Mar 30	China Clipper (War)	Sept 28
August Week-End (Chest)	June 29, Sept 28	Builders of Socialism (Amk)	Mar 30	Ciboulette (Cipar)	Dec 28
Avenging Waters (Col)	Sept 28	Bulldog Courage (Pur)	Mar 30	Cloistered (Pathé)	June 29
		Bulldog Edition (Rep)	Sept 28, Dec 28	(s) Cock o' the Walk (UA)	Mar 30
		Bullets or Ballots (War)	June 29	Code of the Range (Col)	Dec 28
Back to Nature (20th-C)	Sept 28	Bunker Bean (RKO)	June 29	Colleen (War)	Mar 30, June 29
Bad Boy (20th-C)	Mar 30	Burning Gold (Rep)	Mar 30	Collegiate (Par)	Mar 30
Banjo on My Knee (20th-C)	Dec 28			Come and Get It (UA)	Dec 28
Bar 20 Rides Again (Par)	Mar 30			Come Closer, Folks (Col)	Dec 28
Barbary Coast (UA)	Mar 30			Come Out of the Pantry (B&D-UA)	Mar 30
Le Barbier de Seville (Hak)	Dec 28	Cain and Mabel (War)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Comin' 'Round the Mountain (Rep)	June 29
Beloved Vagabond (T-Col)	Sept 28	California Mail (War)	Dec 28	Condemned to Live (Chest)	Mar 30
Below the Deadline (Chest-GN)	June 29, Sept 28	Call of the Prairie (Par)	Mar 30	Confidential (Mas)	Mar 30
Bengal Tiger (War)	Sept 28	Calling of Dan Matthews (Col)	Mar 30	Conflict (Univ)	Dec 28
Between Men (Sup)	Mar 30	Can This Be Dixie? (20th-C)	Dec 28	Coronado (Par)	Mar 30
Big Broadcast of 1936 (Par)	Mar 30	La Canzone del Sole (Capi)	June 29	Counterfeit (Col)	June 29, Sept 28
Big Broadcast of 1937 (Par)	Dec 28	Il Cappello a Tre Punte (NM)	Dec 28
Big Brown Eyes (Par)	June 29
Big Game (RKO)	Dec 28

Country Beyond (20th-C)	June 29	Eagle's Brood (Par)	Mar 30	Gallant Defender (Col)	Mar 30
Country Doctor (20th-C)	Mar 30, June 29	Early to Bed (Par)	June 29, Sept 28	(s) Game of Jai-Alai (Ed)	Mar 30
Country Gentlemen (Rep)	Dec 28	Earthworm Tractors (War)	Sept 28	Garden Murder Case (MGM)	Mar 30
Courageous Avenger (Sup)	Mar 30	East Meets West (GB)	Dec 28	Garden of Allah (UA)	Dec 28
Cowboy and the Kid (Univ)	June 29	East of Java (Univ)	Mar 30	(s) Gasoloons (RKO)	Mar 30
Craig's Wife (Col)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Easy Money (Inv)	Sept 28	Gay Deception (20th-C)	Mar 30
Crash Donovan (Univ)	Sept 28	Easy to Take (Par)	Dec 28	Gay Desperado (UA)	Dec 28
Crime and Punishment (Col)	Mar 30	Ecstasy (Eu)	Dec 28	General Died at Dawn (Par)	Sept 28, Dec 28
Crime et Châtiment (Le)	Mar 30	Educating Father (20th-C)	June 29, Sept 28	General Spanky (Roach-MGM)	Dec 28
Crime of Dr Crespi (Rep)	Mar 30	Ellis Island (Inv)	Dec 28	Gentle Julia (20th-C)	Mar 30, June 29
Crime of Dr Forbes (20th-C)	June 29, Sept 28	Empty Saddles (Univ)	Dec 28	Gentleman from Louisiana (Rep)	Sept 28, Dec 28
Crime Over London (Crit-UA)	Dec 28	End of the Trail (Col)	Dec 28	Gesuzza, la Sposa Garibaldina (Cin-P)	Dec 28
Crime Patrol (Emp)	June 29	Escape from Devil's Island (Col)	Mar 30	Ghost Goes West (UA)	Mar 30
Criminal Lawyer (RKO)	Dec 28	Every Saturday Night (20th-C)	Mar 30, June 29	Ghost Patrol (Pur)	Dec 28
Criminal Within (Inv-Chest)	Mar 30, June 29	Everybody's Old Man (20th-C)	Mar 30, June 29	Girl from Mandalay (Rep)	June 29
Crimson Circle (Univ)	June 29	Everyman's Law (Sup)	Sept 28	Girl from Maxims (Hoff)	Dec 28
Crooked Love (NM)	Sept 28	Everything Is Thunder (GB)	Dec 28	Girl of the Ozarks (Par)	June 29, Sept 28
Crooked Trail (Sup)	Dec 28	Ex-Mrs Bradford (RKO)	June 29	Girl on the Front Page (Univ)	Dec 28
Crouching Beast (Oly)	Sept 28	Exclusive Story (MGM)	Mar 30	Girls' Dormitory (20th-C)	Sept 28
Crusades (Par)	Mar 30	F-Man (Par)	Mar 30	Give Me Your Heart (War)	Sept 28, Dec 28
		False Pretenses (Chest)	Mar 30	Give Us This Night (Par)	Mar 30, June 29
Dance Band (BIP)	Mar 30	Fang and Claw (RKO)	Mar 30	Glory Trail (Cres)	Sept 28
Dancing Feet (Rep)	Mar 30, June 29	Farmer in the Dell (RKO)	Mar 30, June 29	Go Get 'Em Haines (Rep)	Sept 28
Dancing Pirate (RKO)	June 29, Sept 28	Fast Bullets (Rel)	Mar 30	Go West, Young Man (Par)	Dec 28
Dangerous (War)	Mar 30	Fatal Lady (Par)	June 29, Sept 28	Gold Diggers of 1937 (War)	Dec 28
Dangerous Intrigue (Col)	Mar 30	Feather in Her Hat (Col)	Mar 30	Golden Arrow (War)	June 29
Dangerous Waters (Univ)	Mar 30	Federal Agent (Rep)	June 29	Gorgeous Hussy (MGM)	Sept 28, Dec 28
Daniel Boone (RKO)	Dec 28	Fed of the West (Div-Fu)	June 29	Grain (Amk)	Mar 30
Daredevils of the Earth (Hall)	Mar 30	15 Maiden Lane (20th-C)	Dec 28	Grand Exit (Col)	Mar 30
Dark Angel (UA)	Mar 30	Fighting Coward (Vic)	Mar 30	Grand Jury (RKO)	Sept 28
Dark Hour (Chest)	Mar 30, Sept 28	Fighting Youth (Univ)	Mar 30	(s) Grand Slam Opera (Ed)	Mar 30
Desert Gold (Par)	Mar 30, June 29	(s) Filming the Feminine Headliners (20th-C)	Mar 30	Great Impersonation (Univ)	Mar 30
Desert Guns (Beau)	Mar 30	Final Hour (Col)	Sept 28	Great O'Malley (War)	Dec 28
Desert Justice (Atl)	June 29	Fire Trap (Emp)	Mar 30	Great Ziegfeld (MGM)	Mar 30, June 29
Desert Phantom (Sup)	June 29	First a Girl (GB)	Mar 30	Greater Promise (Amk)	Dec 28
Desire (Par)	Mar 30, June 29	First Baby (20th-C)	June 29, Sept 28	Green Pastures (War)	June 29, Sept 28
Devil Doll (MGM)	Sept 28	Florida Special (Par)	June 29	Guard That Girl (Col)	Mar 30
Devil Is a Sissy (MGM)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Flying Doctor (N-GB)	Dec 28	Gun Play (Be)	Mar 30
Devil on Horseback (GN)	Dec 28	Flying Hostess (Univ)	Dec 28	Guns and Guitars (Rep)	Sept 28
Devil's Squadron (Col)	June 29	Follow the Fleet (RKO)	Mar 30, June 29	Guns of the Pecos (War)	Sept 28
Diamond Jim (Univ)	Mar 30	Follow Your Heart (Rep)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Gypsies (Amk)	Sept 28
Dimples (20th-C)	Dec 28	For Love of You (Cel)	Mar 30
Divine Spark (GB)	Mar 30	For the Service (Univ)	June 29
Dizzy Dames (Lib)	Sept 28	Forbidden Heaven (Rep)	Mar 30, Dec 28	Hair Trigger Casey (Atl)	Mar 30
Dr Socrates (War)	Mar 30	Forced Landing (Rep)	Mar 30	Half Angel (20th-C)	June 29, Sept 28
Dodsworth (UA)	Dec 28	Forget Me Not (UA)	June 29	Hands Across the Table (Par)	Mar 30
Don Bosco (Lux)	June 29	Forgotten Faces (Par)	June 29, Sept 28	Happiness C. O. D. (Chest)	Mar 30
Don't Gamble With Love (Col)	Mar 30, June 29	Forgotten Women (Imp)	June 29	Happy Go Lucky (Rep)	Dec 28
Don't Get Personal (Univ)	Mar 30, June 29	Four Days' Wonder (Univ)	Dec 28	Hard Luck Dame (War)	See Satan Met a Lady
Don't Turn 'Em Loose (RKO)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Four Masked Men (Oly)	Mar 30	Harmony Lane (Mas)	Mar 30
Doughnuts and Society (Mas)	Mar 30, June 29	Frankie and Johnnie (Rep)	June 29, Sept 28	Harvester (Rep)	June 29, Sept 28
Down the Stretch (War)	Sept 28	Frasquita (DuW)	Mar 30, June 29	Heart of the West (Par)	Sept 28
Down Under the Sea (Rep)	Sept 28	Freckles (RKO)	Mar 30	Hearts Divided (War)	June 29, Sept 28
Dracula's Daughter (Univ)	June 29	Freshman Love (War)	Mar 30	Hearts in Bondage (Rep)	June 29
Draegerman Courage (War)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Frisco Kid (War)	Mar 30	Heir to Trouble (Col)	Mar 30
Dragnet (B-T)	June 29	Frisco Waterfront (Rep)	Mar 30	Hell Ship Morgan (Col)	Mar 30, June 29
Drift Fence (Par)	Mar 30	Frontier (Amk)	Mar 30
Dubrovsky (Len)	June 29	Frontier Justice (Fu)	Mar 30
Dusty Ermine (Twick)	Dec 28	Fugitive in the Sky (War)	Dec 28
		Fugitive Sheriff (Col)	Sept 28
		Fury (MGM)	June 29, Sept 28

Her Master's Voice (Par)	Mar 30	It's Love Again (GB)	June 29, Sept 28	Law in Her Hands (War)	June 29
Here Comes Carter (War)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Itto (Eu)	Mar 30	Lawless Border (Spec)	Mar 30
Here Comes Cookie (Par)	Mar 30	Ivory-Handled Gun (Univ)	Mar 30	Lawless Nineties (Rep)	Mar 30, Sept 28
Here Comes the Band (MGM)	Mar 30			Lawless Range (Rep)	Mar 30
Here Comes Trouble (20th-C)	Mar 30			Lawless Riders (Col)	Mar 30
Here's to Romance (20th-C)	Mar 30	Jack of All Trades (GB)	June 29	Leathernecks Have Landed (Rep)	Mar 30, June 29
Heroes of the Range (Col)	Sept 28	Jailbreak (War)	June 29	Leavenworth Case (Rep)	Mar 30
Hi Gaucho (RKO)	Mar 30	Judgment Book (Beau)	Sept 28	Legion of Terror (Col)	Dec 28
Hideaway Girl (Par)	Dec 28	Juggernaut (Twick)	Dec 28	Legong (DuW)	Mar 30
High Tension (20th-C)	Sept 28	Jungle Princess (Par)	Dec 28	Let's Sing Again (RKO)	June 29
(s) Hill Tillies (MGM)	Sept 28	Just My Luck (NC)	Mar 30	Libeled Lady (MGM)	Dec 28
His Brother's Wife (MGM)	Sept 28	(s) Just Speeding (Col)	June 29	Liebelei (E-T)	Mar 30
His Family Tree (RKO)	Mar 30			Lightnin' Bill Carson (Pur)	June 29
His Fighting Blood (Amb)	Mar 30			Limelight (Wil)	Mar 30
His Night Out (Univ)	Mar 30	Der Kampf (Amk)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Lion's Den (Pur)	Sept 28
Hitch Hike Lady (Rep)	Mar 30	(s) Kannibal Kapers (Col)	Mar 30	Little America (Par)	Mar 30
Hitch Hike to Heaven (Inv)	Mar 30	Kelly of the Secret Service (Prin)	Sept 28	Little Lord Fauntleroy (UA)	Mar 30, June 29
Hollywood Boulevard (Par)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Kelly the Second (MGM)	June 29, Dec 28	Little Miss Nobody (20th-C)	June 29, Sept 28
L'Homme des Folies Bergère (UA)	June 29	La Kermesse Heroique (Tobis)	Dec 28	Little Red Schoolhouse (Chest)	June 29
Hong Kong Nights (Fu)	Mar 30	Killer at Large (Col)	Dec 28	(s) Little Stranger (Par)	June 29
Hopalong Cassidy Returns (Par)	Dec 28	Kind Lady (MGM)	Mar 30	Littlest Rebel (20th-C)	Mar 30
Hot Money (War)	June 29, Sept 28	King of Burlesque (20th-C)	Mar 30	Living Dangerously (AB)	June 29
(s) Hot Paprika (Col)	Mar 30	King of Hockey (War)	Dec 28	Lloyds of London (20th-C)	Dec 28
House of a Thousand Candles (Rep)	Mar 30, June 29	King of the Damned (GB)	Mar 30, June 29	Lone Wolf Returns (Col)	Mar 30
House of Secrets (Chest)	Dec 28	King of the Pecos (Rep)	June 29	Lonely Trail (Rep)	Dec 28
(s) How to Behave (MGM)	June 29	King of the Royal Mounted (20th-C)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Longest Night (MGM)	Dec 28
Human Cargo (20th-C)	June 29	King Solomon of Broadway (Univ)	Mar 30	Lorenzino de Medici (NM)	June 29
(s) Hunters' Paradise (Col)	Mar 30	King Steps Out (Col)	June 29, Sept 28	Love Before Breakfast (Univ)	Mar 30, June 29
		Kiss Me Goodbye (Cel)	Mar 30	Love Begins at Twenty (War)	June 29, Sept 28, Dec 28
		Klondike Annie (Par)	Mar 30	Love in Exile (Cap)	Dec 28
		Knock-Out (Bav)	Mar 30	Love Letters of a Star (Univ)	Dec 28
				Love on a Bet (RKO)	Mar 30
I Conquer the Sea (Acad)	Mar 30			Love on the Run (MGM)	Dec 28
I Cover Chinatown (Ban)	Dec 28	Lac Aux Dames (F-Am)	Mar 30	Luck of the Irish (Guar)	June 29
I Dream Too Much (RKO)	Mar 30	Ladies in Love (20th-C)	Dec 28	Luckiest Girl in the World (Univ)	Dec 28
I Found Stella Parish (War)	Mar 30	(s) Ladies Love Hats (Ed)	Mar 30	Lucky Terror (FD)	June 29
I Give My Heart (AB)	Mar 30	Lady Be Careful (Par)	Sept 28, Dec 28
I Live for Love (War)	Mar 30	Lady Consents (RKO)	Mar 30	Mad Holiday (MGM)	Dec 28
I Live My Life (MGM)	Mar 30	Lady from Nowhere (Col)	Dec 28	Magnificent Brute (Univ)	Dec 28
I Love You Only (NM)	Sept 28	Lady in Scarlet (Chest)	Mar 30	Magnificent Obsession (Univ)	Mar 30
I Married a Doctor (War)	June 29	Lady Jane Grey (GB)	See	Make Way for a Lady (RKO)	Dec 28
I Stand Condemned (UA)	Mar 30, June 29, Sept 28	Nine Days a Queen	Dec 28	Making of a King (Deka)	Mar 30
I Was a Captive of Nazi Germany (Mal)	Sept 28	Lady Luck (Chest)	Dec 28	Man Hunt (War)	Mar 30
I'd Give My Life (Par)	Sept 28	Lady of Secrets (Col)	Mar 30	The Man I Marry (Univ)	Dec 28
Idaho Kid (GN)	Sept 28	Land of Promise (Pal)	Mar 30	Man of Iron (War)	Mar 30
If You Could Only Cook (Col)	Mar 30	Land Without Music	Dec 28	Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo (20th-C)	Mar 30
I'll Name the Murderer (Pur)	Mar 30	Last Days of Pompeii	Dec 28	Man Who Changed His Mind (GB)	See Man Who Lived Again
In His Steps (GN)	Dec 28	Last Journey (Atl)	June 29	Man Who Could Work Miracles (UA)	Dec 28
In Old Kentucky (20th-C)	Mar 30	Last of the Clintons (Ajax)	Mar 30	Man Who Lived Again (GB)	Dec 28
In Person (RKO)	Mar 30	Last of the Mohicans (UA)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Man Who Lived Twice (Col)	Dec 28
Invisible Ray (Univ)	Mar 30	Last of the Pagans (MGM)	Mar 30	Mandarin Mystery (Rep)	Dec 28
Invitation to the Waltz (AB)	Mar 30	Last of the Warrens (Sup)	Sept 28	Maria Chapdelaine (F-F)	Mar 30
Isle of Fury (War)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Last Outlaw (RKO)	June 29, Sept 28	Mary Burns, Fugitive (Par)	Mar 30
It Couldn't Have Happened (Chest)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Last Outpost (Par)	Mar 30	Mary of Scotland (RKO)	Sept 28
It Had to Happen (20th-C)	Mar 30	Laughing at Trouble (20th-C)	Dec 28	(s) Master Will Shakespeare (MGM)	Sept 28
It's a Great Life (Par)	Mar 30	Laughing Irish Eyes (Rep)	Mar 30, June 29
It's in the Air (MGM)	Mar 30

La Maternelle (SP)	Mar 30	Navy Born (Rep)	June 29, Sept 28	The Plainsman (Par)	Dec 28
(s) Mayflower (Ed)	Mar 30	Navy Wife (20th-C)	Mar 30	Plot Thickens (RKO)	Dec 28
Meet Nero Wolfe (Col)	Sept 28	Neighborhood House (MGM)	June 29, Sept 28	Polo Joe (War)	Dec 28
Melody Lingers On (UA)	Mar 30	Nevada (Par)	Mar 30	Poor Little Rich Girl (20th-C)	June 29, Sept 28
Melody Trail (Rep)	Mar 30	Never Too Late (Rel)	Mar 30	Poppy (Par)	June 29, Sept 28
Men of the Plains (GN)	Dec 28	New Frontier (Rep)	Mar 30	La Porteuse de Pain (Le)	Sept 28
Message to Garcia (20th-C)	Mar 30, June 29	New Gulliver (Amk)	Mar 30	Postal Inspector (Univ)	Sept 28
Metropolitan (20th-C)	Mar 30	News of the U.S.S.R. (Amk)	Sept 28	Powdersmoke Range (RKO)	Mar 30
Midnight Phantom (Rel)	Mar 30	Next Time We Love (Univ)	Mar 30	Prescott Kid (Col)	Dec 28
Midsummer Night's Dream (War)	Mar 30	Night at the Opera (MGM)	Mar 30	President's Mystery (Rep)	Dec 28
Milizia Territoriale (Caes)	June 29	Night Cargo (Peer)	Mar 30	Preview Murder Mystery (Par)	Mar 30, June 29
Milky Way (Par)	Mar 30, June 29	Night Waitress (RKO)	Dec 28	Pride of the Marines (Col)	June 29
Millionaire Kid (Rel)	June 29	Nightingale (Amk)	Dec 28	Princess Comes Across (Par)	June 29, Sept 28
Millions in the Air (Par)	Mar 30	Nine Days a Queen (GB)	Dec 28	Prison Shadows (Pur)	Sept 28
Mimi (FD)	Mar 30	No Man's Range (Sup)	Mar 30	Prisoner of Shark Island (20th-C)	Mar 30, June 29
Mine with the Iron Door (Col)	June 29, Sept 28	No More Yesterdays (Col)	June 29	Private Life of Louis XIV (GFS)	Mar 30
Les Misérables (Pathé)	Dec 28	See Lady of Secrets	June 29	Private Number (20th-C)	June 29
Miss Pacific Fleet (War)	Mar 30	Nobody's Fool (Univ)	Dec 28	Private Secretary (Twick)	Sept 28
Missing Girls (Chest)	Dec 28	North of Nome (Col)	Dec 28	Professional Soldier (20th-C)	Mar 30
Mister Cinderella (MGM)	Sept 28	Old Curiosity Shop (BIP)	Mar 30	Public Enemy's Wife (War)	Sept 28
Mr Cohen Takes a Walk (War)	Mar 30	Old Hutch (MGM)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Public Menace (Col)	Mar 30
Mr Deeds Goes to Town (Col)	June 29	Old Spanish Custom (Hoff)	Mar 30	Put on the Spot (Vic)	June 29, Dec 28
Mister Hobo (GB)	Mar 30	O'Malley of the Mounted (20th-C)	June 29	Racing Blood (Conn)	Sept 28
M'Liss (RKO)	Sept 28	(s) On Ice (UA)	Mar 30	Racing Lady (RKO)	Dec 28
Modern Times (UA)	Mar 30	Once in a Blue Moon	Dec 28	Racing Luck (Rep)	Mar 30
(s) Molly Moo Cow and the Indians (RKO)	Mar 30	Once in a Million (AB)	June 29	Raggen, Det Aer Jag Det (Eur)	June 29
(s) Moonlight and Melody (Ed)	Mar 30	One Hundred Days of Napoleon (NM)	Dec 28	Rainbow on the River (RKO)	Dec 28
Moonlight Murder (MGM)	June 29	One Rainy Afternoon (UA)	June 29	Rainmakers (RKO)	Mar 30
Moonlight on the Prairie (War)	Mar 30	$1,000 a Minute (Rep)	Mar 30	Ramona (20th-C)	Dec 28
Moon's Our Home (Par)	June 29	One-Way Ticket (Col)	Mar 30	Ranger Courage (Col)	Dec 28
Morals of Marcus (GB)	Mar 30	Oregon Trail (Rep)	Mar 30	Il Re Burlone (Capi)	June 29
More Than a Secretary (Col)	Dec 28	O'Shaughnessy's Boy (MGM)	Mar 30	Rebellion (Cres)	Dec 28
(s) Moscow Moods (Par)	June 29	Our Relations (MGM)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Reckless Way (Pur)	Sept 28
Moscow Nights (UA)	See	Ourselves Alone (AB)	June 29	Red Salute (Rel)	Mar 30
I Stand Condemned		Outlaw Deputy (Pur)	Mar 30	Red Wagon (FD)	June 29, Sept 28
(s) Moving Day (UA)	Sept 28	Outlaws of the Range (Spec)	June 29	(s) Reg'lar Kids (Vit)	Mar 30
Mummy's Boys (RKO)	Sept 28	Paa Solsidan (S-FI)	Sept 28	Rembrandt (UA)	Dec 28
Murder at Glen Athol (Inv)	See Criminal Within	Pace that Kills (WK)	Mar 30	Remember Last Night? (Univ)	Mar 30
Murder by an Aristocrat (War)	June 29	Paddy O'Day (20th-C)	Mar 30	Rendezvous (MGM)	Mar 30
Murder in the Red Barn (Oly)	Sept 28	Palm Springs (Par)	June 29, Sept 28	Rest Cure (Regal)	Mar 30
Murder of Dr Harrigan (War)	Mar 30	Panic on the Air (Col)	June 29	Return of Jimmy Valentine (Rep)	Mar 30
Murder on a Bridle Path (RKO)	June 29	Parole (Univ)	June 29, Sept 28	Return of Peter Grimm (RKO)	Mar 30
Murder with Pictures (Par)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Passaporto Rosso (NM)	Sept 28	Return of Sophie Lang (Par)	Sept 28
Music Goes 'Round (Col)	Mar 30	Passing of the Third Floor Back (GB)	Mar 30, June 29	Reunion (20th-C)	Dec 28
Music Hath Charms (AB)	Mar 30	Pasteur (Le)	Mar 30	Revolt of the Zombies (Acad)	June 29
Music Is Magic (20th-C)	Mar 30	Pay-Off (War)	Mar 30	Rhodes, the Diamond Master (GB)	Mar 30, June 29
Muss 'Em Up (RKO)	Mar 30	Peasants (Len)	Mar 30	Rhythm on the Range (Par)	Sept 28
Mutiny on the Bounty (MGM)	Mar 30	Peg of Old Drury (B&D)	Mar 30, June 29	Riddle Ranch (Beau)	Mar 30
My American Wife (Par)	Sept 28	Pennies from Heaven (Col)	Dec 28	Ride 'Em Cowboy (Univ)	Dec 28
My Man Godfrey (Univ)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Pension Mimosas (F-Am)	June 29	Riding Avenger (Div)	Sept 28
My Marriage (20th-C)	Mar 30	Pepper (20th-C)	Sept 28	Riffraff (MGM)	Mar 30
Mysteries of Notre Dame (DuW)	Dec 28	Perfect Gentleman (MGM)	Mar 30	Ring Around the Moon (Chest)	Mar 30
Mysterious Avenger (Col)	Mar 30, June 29	Personal Maid's Secret (War)	Mar 30	Rio Grande Romance (Vic)	June 29
Mystery of the Marie Celeste (Ha)	Mar 30	Peter Ibbetson (Par)	Mar 30	See Put on the Spot	Mar 30
Mystic Mountain (Le)	June 29	Pettified Forest (War)	Mar 30	Road Gang (War)	Mar 30
		Petticoat Fever (MGM)	Mar 30, June 29	Road to Glory (20th-C)	June 29, Sept 28
		Piccadilly Jim (MGM)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Roamin' Wild (Rel)	June 29
		Pigskin Parade (20th-C)	Dec 28	Roaming Lady (Col)	June 29
		(s) Pirate Party on Catalina Island (MGM)	June 29	Roarin' Guns (Pur)	Sept 28
				Robin Hood of El Dorado (MGM)	Mar 30, June 29
				Rogue of the Range (Sup)	June 29

Rogues' Tavern (Pur)	Sept 28	Song and Dance Man (20th-C)	This Is the Land (Aga)
Romance Rides the Range (Spec)	Dec 28	(s) Song of a Nation (War)	Sept 28
Romeo and Juliet (MGM)	Sept 28	Song of China (DM)	Mar 30
Rose Bowl (Par)	Dec 28	June 29, Sept 28, Dec 28	This Is the Life (20th-C)
Rose Marie (MGM)	Mar 30	Song of the Gringo (GN)	Mar 30
Rose of the Rancho (Par)	Mar 30	Dec 28	Thoroughbred (B-Emp)
Royal Waltz (UFA)	June 29	Song of the Saddle (War)	Sept 28
		Mar 30, June 29	(Par)
		Song of the Trail (Amb)	Sept 28
		June 29	Three Cheers for Love (MGM)
		Sons o' Guns (War)	Mar 30
		June 29	Three Kids and a Queen (Univ)
		Soviet News (Amk)	Mar 30
		June 29	(s) Three Little Wolves (UA)
		Spanish Cape Mystery (Rep)	June 29
(s) Sacred City of the Mayan Indians (MGM)	Mar 30	Special Agent (War)	Three Live Ghosts (MGM)
Sagebrush Troubadour (Rep)	Mar 30	Special Investigator (RKO)	Mar 30
San Francisco (MGM)	Sept 28	Speed (MGM)	Three Married Men (Par)
Satan Met a Lady (War)	June 29, Sept 28	Speed Reporter (Rel)	Sept 28, Dec 28
Scandals of Paris (Regal)	Mar 30	Spendthrift (Par)	Three Maxims (Wil)
Scotland Yard Mystery (Al)	June 29	Splendor (UA)	Sept 28
Scrooge (Par)	Mar 30	Spy 77 (FD)	Three Men on a Horse (War)
Sea Spoilers (Univ)	Dec 28	Stage Struck (War)	Dec 28
Second Bureau (LP)	Mar 30	Sept 28, Dec 28	Three Mesquiteers (Rep)
Second Wife (RKO)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Star for a Night (20th-C)	Dec 28
Secret Agent (GB)	June 29, Sept 28	Sept 28, Dec 28	Three Musketeers (RKO)
Secret Patrol (Col)	June 29	Stars Over Broadway (War)	Mar 30
(s) Seeing Nellie Home (Ed)	Mar 30	Mar 30	Three of a Kind (Inv)
Il Serpente a Sonagli (NM)	Sept 28	Steamboat 'Round the Bend (20th-C)	June 29, Sept 28
Seven Brave Men (Amk)	June 29, Sept 28	(s) Steel and Stone (Vit)	Three on the Trail (Par)
Seven Keys to Baldpate (RKO)	Mar 30	Mar 30	June 29, Sept 28
Seven Sinners (GB)	Sept 28	Storm Over the Andes (Univ)	(s) Three Orphan Kittens (UA)
Shadow (Globe)	Sept 28	Mar 30	Mar 30
Shadows of the Orient (Emp)	Mar 30	Stormy (Univ)	Three Smart Girls (Univ)
		Story of Louis Pasteur (War)	Dec 28
(s) Shake Mr Shakespeare (Vit)	Sept 28	Straight from the Shoulder (Par)	Three Wise Guys (MGM)
Shakedown (Col)	Sept 28	Sept 28, Dec 28	June 29, Sept 28
She Couldn't Take It (Col)	Mar 30	Streamline Express (Mas)	Three Women (Amk)
She-Devil Island (GN)	Sept 28	Mar 30	Mar 30
She Married Her Boss (Col)	Mar 30	Strike Me Pink (UA)	(s) Thrills with Daredevils (Col)
She Shall Have Music (Twick)	Mar 30	Student Romance (BIP)	June 29
Ship Cafe (Par)	Mar 30	Dec 28	Throwback (Univ)
Shipmates Forever (War)	Mar 30	Suicide Squad (Pur)	Mar 30
Show Them No Mercy (20th-C)	Mar 30	Sundown Saunders (Sup)	Thunder in the Night (20th-C)
Showboat (Univ)	June 29	June 29	Mar 30
Silly Billies (RKO)	Mar 30, June 29	Sunset of Power (Univ)	Ticket to Paradise (Rep)
Silverspurs (Univ)	Mar 30	Mar 30	Sept 28
Sing, Baby, Sing (20th-C)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Superspeed (Col)	Till We Meet Again (Par)
Sing Me a Love Song (War)	Dec 28	Sutter's Gold (Univ)	June 29
Singing Cowboy (Rep)	June 29	June 29	Timber War (Amb)
Singing Kid (War)	Mar 30, June 29	Suzy (MGM)	Mar 30
Singing Vagabond (Rep)	Mar 30	Sweet Surrender (Univ)	Times Square Playboy (War)
Sins of Man (20th-C)	June 29, Sept 28	Mar 30	Mar 30, June 29
Sitting on the Moon (Rep)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Swiftly (FD)	Timothy's Quest (Par)
Skaergaards-Flirt (Eur)	June 29	Swing Time (RKO)	Mar 30
Skull and Crown (Rel)	Mar 30	Sept 28, Dec 28	To Beat the Band (RKO)
Sky Parade (Par)	June 29	Sworn Enemy (MGM)	Mar 30
Skybound (Pur)	Mar 30	Sept 28, Dec 28	To Mary—with Love (20th-C)
Small Town Girl (MGM)	June 29	Sylvia Scarlett (RKO)	Sept 28
Smart Blonde (War)	Dec 28	Mar 30	Toll of the Desert (Com)
Smartest Girl in Town (RKO)	Dec 28	Tale of Two Cities (MGM)	Mar 30
Snowed Under (War)	Mar 30, June 29	Mar 30	Too Many Parents (Par)
So Red the Rose (Par)	Mar 30	Tango (Inv)	Mar 30, June 29
Soak the Rich (Par)	Mar 30	Tarzan Escapes (MGM)	June 29
Society Fever (Inv)	Mar 30	Dec 28	Too Tough to Kill (Col)
A Son Comes Home (Par)	Sept 28, Dec 28	Tattler (War)	Mar 30
Son of Mongolia (Amk)	Dec 28	Comes Carter	Mar 30
		Tempo Massimo (World)	Top Hat (RKO)
		Mar 30	Tough Guy (MGM)
		Texas Rangers (Par)	Trail of the Lonesome Pine (Par)
		Sept 28, Dec 28	Mar 30, June 29
		Thank You, Jeeves (20th-C)	Trailin' West (War)
		Dec 28	Sept 28
		Thanks a Million (20th-C)	Trails of the Wild (Amb)
		Mar 30	Mar 30
		Theodora Goes Wild (Col)	Traitor (Pur)
		Dec 28	Dec 28
		These Three (UA)	Transatlantic Tunnel (GB)
		Mar 30, June 29	Mar 30
		They Met in a Taxi (Col)	Trapped by Television (Col)
		Sept 28, Dec 28	Sept 28
		Things to Come (UA)	Treachery Rides the Range (War)
		Mar 30, June 29	Mar 30, June 29
		Thirteen Hours by Air (Par)	Trigger Tom (Rel)
		June 29	Mar 30
		Thirty-Nine Steps (GB-20th-C)	Trouble Ahead (Atl)
		Mar 30	Dec 28
		36 Hours to Kill (20th-C)	Trouble for Two (MGM)
		Sept 28	June 29
			Tugboat Princess (Col)
			Dec 28
			Tumbling Tumbleweeds (Rep)
			Mar 30
			Tundra (B-T) Sept 28, Dec 28
			Two Against the World (War)
			June 29, Sept 28
			Two Fisted (Par)
			Mar 30
			Two-Fisted Gentleman (Col)
			Sept 28
			Two for Tonight (Par)
			Mar 30
			Two Hearts in Harmony (AB)
			Mar 30
			Two in a Crowd (Univ)
			Sept 28, Dec 28

Two in Revolt (RKO)	Waterfront Lady (Mas)	Winds of the Wasteland (Rep)
Mar 30, June 29	Mar 30	Sept 28
Two in the Dark (RKO)	Way Down East (20th-C)	(s) Winged Champions (Par)
Mar 30	Mar 30	June 29
Two Sinners (Rep)	We Are from Kronstadt (Mos)	Wings over Ethiopia (Par)
Mar 30	June 29	Mar 30
	We Went to College (MGM)	(s) Winter Magic (20th-C)
	Sept 28	Mar 30
Under Cover Man (Rep)	We Who Are About to Die (RKO)	Winterset (RKO)
Dec 28	Dec 28	Dec 28
Under Two Flags (20th-C)	Wedding March (F-Am)	With Love and Kisses (Mel)
June 29	Mar 30	Dec 28
Under Your Spell (20th-C)	Wedding Present (Par)	Without Orders (RKO)
Dec 28	Dec 28	Dec 28
Unguarded Hour (MGM)	Wellington Pike Goes West (O-SR)	Witness Chair (RKO)
June 29	June 29, Sept 28	June 29
Unknown Ranger (Col)	We're Only Human (RKO)	Wives Never Know (Par)
Sept 28	Mar 30	Dec 28
	West of Nevada (Colo)	Wolves of the Underworld (Regal)
	Sept 28	Mar 30
	Western Courage (Col)	Woman Alone (GK-B)
	Mar 30	June 29
	When Knights Were Bold (Cap)	A Woman Rebels (RKO)
	Mar 30	Dec 28
	Whipsaw (MGM)	Woman Trap (Par)
	Mar 30	Mar 30
Vaaren Pojke (Eur)	Whispering Smith Speaks (20th-C)	Women Are Trouble (MGM)
Dec 28	Mar 30	June 29, Sept 28
Valiant Is the Word for Carrie (Par)	White Angel (War)
Dec 28	June 29, Sept 28
Valley of Wanted Men (Conn)	White Fang (20th-C)	Yellow Cargo (P-GN)
Mar 30	Sept 28	June 29
Virginia Judge (Par)	White Hunter (20th-C)	Yellow Cruise (FMP)
Mar 30	Dec 28	Dec 28
Voice of Bugle Ann (MGM)	White Legion (GN)	Yellow Dust (RKO)
Mar 30	Dec 28	Mar 30, June 29
	Widow from Monte Carlo (War)	Yellowstone (Univ)
	Mar 30	Sept 28, Dec 28
	Wife Versus Secretary (MGM)	You May Be Next (Col)
	Mar 30	Mar 30, June 29
Walking Dead (War)	Wild Brian Kent (Prin-20th-C)	Young Forest (Lib)
Mar 30	Dec 28	Mar 30
Walking on Air (RKO)	Wild Mustang (Com)	Young Love (E-F)
Sept 28, Dec 28	Mar 30	Mar 30
Wanderer of the Wasteland (Par)	(s) Wild Wings (Vit)	Your Troubles Are Mine (NM)
Mar 30	Mar 30	Sept 28
Wanted: Jane Turner (RKO)	Wildcat Saunders (Atl)	Your Uncle Dudley (20th-C)
Dec 28	June 29	Mar 30
Wanted Men (Hoff)	Wildcat Trooper (Amb)	Yours for the Asking (Par)
Sept 28	Sept 28	Sept 28
		Youth of Today (Par)
		Sept 28

KEY TO PRODUCERS

AB —Associated British	Eu —Eureka	O —O'Neill
Acad —Academy	Eur —Europa	Oly —Olympic
Acme —Acme	F-Am —Franco-American	P —Pacific
Aga —Aga	FD —First Division	Pal —Palestine Picture
Ajax —Ajax	F-F —France-Film	Par —Paramount
Al —Alliance	FMP —French Motion Picture	Pathé —Pathé Natan
Amb —Ambassador	Fu —Futter	Peer —Peerless
Amk —Amkino	Gains —Gainsborough	Prin —Principal
Atl —Atlantic	GB —Gaumont British	Regal —Regal
B Emp —British Empire	GFS —General Foreign Sales	Rel —Reliable
B&amp;D —British & Dominions	GK —Garrett Klement	Relia —Reliance
Ban —Banner	Globe —Globe	Rep —Republic
Bav —Bavaria	GN —Grand National	RKO —RKO Radio
Be —Beacon	Gros —Grosvenor	Roach —Roach
Beau —Beaumont	Guar —Guaranteed	SFI —Svensk Film Industri
BIP —British International Pictures	Ha —Hammer	Sher —Sherman
B-T —Burroughs-Tarzan	Hak —Hakim	SP —Studios Photosonor
Caes —Caesar	Hall —Hallmark	SR —State Rights
Cap —Capitol	Hoff —Hoffberg	Spec —Spectrum
Capi —Capitani	Imp —Imperial	Sup —Supreme
Cel —Celebrity	Inv —Invincible	Sw-P —Swiss-Praesens
Chest —Chesterfield	LC —L'Alliance Cinematographique	T —Toeplitz
Cin-P —Cines Pittaluga	Le —Lenauer	Tobis —Tobis
Cipar —Cipar	Len —Lenfilm	20th-C —20th Century-Fox
Col —Columbia	LF —London Films	Twick —Twickenham
Colo —Colony	Lib —Liberty	UA —United Artists
Com —Commodore	Libk —Libkow	UFA —UFA Films
Conn —Conn	LP —Le Pelletier	Ukr —Ukrainfilm
Cres —Crescent	Lux —Lux	Univ —Universal
Crit —Criterion	Mal —Malvina	VB —Van Beuren
Dar —Darmour	Mas —Mascot	Vic —Victory
Deka —Deka	Mel —Melody	Vit —Vitaphone
Div —Diversion	MGM —Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer	Wan —Wanger
DM —Douglas MacLean	Mos —Mosfilm	War —Warner
DuW —DuWorld	N —National	Wil —Wilcox
Ed —Educational	NC —New Century	WK —Willis Kent
E-F —Elekta-Films	NM —Nuovo Mondo	World —World
Emp —Empire
ET —Elite Tonfilm

Directory of Producers

- Academy. Academy Pictures, Inc, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
Ajax. Ajax Pictures Corp, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
Alliance. Alliance Films Corp, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
Ambassador. Ambassador Pictures, Inc, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
Amkino. Amkino Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
Associated British. Associated British Corp, Ltd, Film House, Wardour St, London, W. 1
Atlantic. Atlantic Pictures Corp, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
- Beacon. Beacon Films, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
Beaumont. Beaumont Pictures, Inc, 846 E 6th St, Los Angeles
British & Dominions. British & Dominions Film Corp, Ltd, Empire House, 117 Regent St, London, W. 1
British international. British International Pictures, Ltd, Boreham Wood, Elstree, Hertfordshire, Eng.
Burroughs-Tarzan. Burroughs-Tarzan Enterprises, Inc, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
- Capitani. Capitani-Films, Via XX, Settembre 3, Rome
Capitol. Capitol Film Productions, Ltd, 28 Brook St, London W. 1
Celebrity. Celebrity Productions, Inc, 723 7th Av, N.Y.
Chesterfield. Chesterfield Motion Pictures Corp, 1540 Broadway, N.Y.
Columbia. Columbia Pictures Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
Commodore. Commodore Pictures Corp, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
Conn. Conn Pictures Corp, Talisman Studios, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
Crescent. Crescent Pictures Corp, Talisman Studios, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
Criterion. Criterion Film Productions, Ltd, 28 Brook St, London, W. 1
- Darmour. Darmour Studios, 5823 Santa Monica Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
Deka. Deka-Film, Berlin SW. 68, Hedemannstrasse 13
Diversion. Diversion Pictures, Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
DuWorld. DuWorld Pictures, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
- Educational. Educational Pictures, Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
Empire. Empire Film Distributors, Inc, 723 7th Av, N.Y.
- First division. First Division Pictures, Inc, RKO Bldg, Radio City, N.Y.
First national. See Warner
Fox. See 20th century-Fox
Franco-American. Franco-American Film Corp, 66 5th Av, N.Y.
Futter. Wafilms, Inc, and The Futter Corp, 1426 N Beachwood Drive, Hollywood, Calif; Paramount Bldg, N.Y.
- Gainsborough. Gainsborough Studios, Poole St, Islington, N. 1., London
Gaumont British. Gaumont British Picture Corp of America, 1600 Broadway, N.Y. Gaumont British Picture Corp, Ltd, 142-150 Wardour St, London, W. 1
General foreign sales. General Foreign Sales Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
Goldwyn-United artists. See United artists
Grand national. Grand National Films, Inc, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
- Hoffberg. J. H. Hoffberg, Co, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
- Imperial. Imperial Distributing Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
Invincible. See Chesterfield
- Lenauer. Jean Lenauer, 250 W 57th St, N.Y.
Lenfilm. Lenfilm, Leningrad, U.S.S.R.
Libkow. Libkow Film, Marszalkowska 94, Warsaw
London films. London Film Productions, Ltd, 22 Grosvenor St, London, W. 1
- Mascot. Mascot Pictures Corp, 1776 Broadway, N.Y.
MGM. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corp, 1540 Broadway, N.Y.
Moscow film studios. See Amkino
- Nuovo mondo. Nuovo Mondo Motion Pictures, Inc, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
- Olympic. Olympic Motion Picture Corp, 325 W 44th St, N.Y.
- Paramount. Paramount Pictures Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
Pathé. Pathé Cinema, 6 Rue Francoeur, Paris
Pickford-Lasky. Pickford-Lasky, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
Principal. Principal Distributing Corp, RKO Bldg, Radio City, N.Y.
- Regal. Regal Productions, Inc, 4516 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
Reliable. Reliable Pictures Corp, 6048 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
Reliance. Reliance Pictures, Inc, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
Republic. Republic Pictures Corp, RKO Bldg, Rockefeller Center, N.Y.
RKO. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
Roach. Hal Roach Studios, Inc, 8822 Washington Blvd, Culver City, Calif.
- Selznick international. Selznick International Pictures, Inc, 9336 Washington Blvd, Culver City, Calif.
Sherman. Harry Productions, Inc, 650 N Bronson, Hollywood, Calif.
Spectrum. Spectrum Pictures Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
Studios Photosonor. Studios Photosonor, 17 bis Quai de Seine, Courbevoie, Paris
Supreme. Supreme Pictures, 1501 Broadway, N.Y.
Swiss-Praesens Films. Praesens Film A. G., Zurich, Switzerland
- 20th century-Fox. 20th Century-Fox Film Corp, 44 W 56th St, N.Y.
Twickenham. Twickenham Film Studios, Ltd, Alliance Studios, St Margaret's, Middlesex, Eng.
- UFA. UFA Films, Inc, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
United artists. United Artists Corp, 729 7th Av, N.Y.
Universal. Universal Pictures, Inc, 1250 6th Av, N.Y.
- Van Beuren. Van Beuren Corp, 1270 6th Av, N.Y.
Victory. Victory Pictures Corp, Foy Studios, Culver City, Calif.
Vitaphone. Vitaphone Corp, 1277 E 14th St, Brooklyn, N.Y.
- Wanger. Walter Wanger Productions, Inc, 1040 N Las Palmas Av, Hollywood, Calif.
Warner. Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc, 321 W 44th St, N.Y.
Wilcox. Herbert Wilcox Productions, Ltd, Imperial Studios, Boreham Wood, Elstree, Hertfordshire, Eng.

JUN 4 1968

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(Continued from inside front cover)

	Page		Page
North of Nome .....	100	Straight from the Shoulder ..	124
Old Hutch .....	100	Student Romance .....	125
Once in a Blue Moon .....	102	Swing Time .....	125
One Hundred Days of Napo- leon .....	102	Sworn Enemy .....	126
Our Relations .....	103	Tarzan Escapes .....	126
Pennies from Heaven .....	103	Texas Rangers .....	128
Piccadilly Jim .....	104	Thank You, Jeeves .....	129
Pigskin Parade .....	105	Theodora Goes Wild .....	130
The Plainsman .....	106	They Met in a Taxi .....	131
Plot Thickens .....	107	Three Married Men .....	132
Polo Joe .....	108	Three Men on a Horse....	132
Prescott Kid .....	109	Three Mesquiteers .....	134
President's Mystery .....	109	Three Smart Girls .....	134
Put on the Spot .....	110	Traitor .....	135
Racing Lady .....	110	Trouble Ahead .....	135
Rainbow on the River .....	111	Tugboat Princess .....	135
Ramona .....	111	Tundra .....	135
Ranger Courage .....	113	Two in a Crowd .....	136
Rebellion .....	113	Under Cover Man .....	137
Rembrandt .....	113	Under Your Spell .....	137
Reunion .....	115	Vaaran Pojke .....	138
Ride 'Em Cowboy .....	116	Valiant Is the Word for Carrie .....	139
Romance Rides the Range..	116	Walking on Air .....	141
Rose Bowl .....	117	Wanted: Jane Turner .....	141
Sea Spoilers .....	118	We Who Are About to Die	142
Second Wife .....	119	Wedding Present .....	143
Sing, Baby, Sing .....	119	White Hunter .....	144
Sing Me a Love Song....	119	White Legion .....	145
Sitting on the Moon .....	120	Wild Brian Kent .....	146
Smart Blonde .....	120	Winterset .....	146
Smartest Girl in Town .....	121	With Love and Kisses....	148
A Son Comes Home .....	122	Without Orders .....	148
Son of Mongolia .....	122	Wives Never Know .....	149
Song of China .....	123	A Woman Rebels .....	150
Song of the Gringo .....	123	Yellow Cruise .....	152
Stage Struck .....	124	Yellowstone .....	153
Star for a Night .....	124

How to Use the Motion Picture Review Digest

Sample Entry

FURY. MGM 90min My 29 '36

Cast: Spencer Tracy. Sylvia Sidney. Walter Abel. Frank Albertson. Bruce Cabot
Director: Fritz Lang

"Tracy is peace-loving, hard working. He and Sylvia are engaged. On circumstantial evidence, Tracy is arrested as a kidnapper in a Middle-western village. Led by rowdies, the villagers storm the jail, bent on lynching Tracy. Unable to enter Tracy's cell, the mob dynamites the jail. Tracy is believed killed, but the explosion tears off his cell door and he escapes, although injured." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A sometimes horrific indictment against the abuse of law and order. In a clear, unbiased manner the social problems of lynching and mob fury are presented. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

"No locality is indicated, and the plot is cleverly contrived not to arouse controversy and to avoid ultimate tragedy, but the case against lawlessness is presented with surprising force. . . Suggested for church use. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family."

+ + Wkly Guide Je 6 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"How to disturb an audience is of course a big problem in the cinema. Director Fritz Lang has been highly successful with the problem. . . One might say too successful, for 'Fury' is disturbing for the wrong reason: the problem it poses is entirely unresolved at the close. . . It is regrettable that [Director Lang] did not, or could not, make 'Fury' the first-rate tragedy it might have been." Robert Giroux

+ — Nation p821 Je 24 '36

"Although the film becomes top-heavy with an individual plot in the final sequence, it remains a compelling and terrifying document. . . So magnificent is it in its unwavering denunciation of mob rule that one regrets that it has had to fall back on courtroom melodramatics and plot manipulation before it ends." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"From directing, writing, acting standpoints, 'Fury,' is a topnotch job. For audiences, however, it may prove too dramatic for better than fair returns. . . Well done, it is however, a type picture that doesn't always realize its possibilities at the box office. Exploitation may aid it."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

Starting at the beginning, the title of this picture is Fury. The producing company is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It is 90 minutes in length. It was released on May 29, 1936.

The list of principal players and the director will require no explanation.

Next comes a brief note describing the picture, its nature, and plot. Sometimes these notes are written by our staff. In other cases they are quoted from a published source. In such cases the source is given.

Following the descriptive note, the excerpts from reviews begin. Following each review the source is given, with date of issue and number of the page on which the review appears.

It will be noticed that plus and minus signs sometimes precede the sources. These indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the review as a whole (not just of the quoted excerpt). The meaning of the various combinations of these signs is as follows:

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

The signs are omitted when a review merely reports on a film without expressing a definite critical opinion.

In interpreting these signs, it will be well to remember that their precise significance will vary somewhat according to the source. In general there are three types of sources represented in the MOTION PICTURE REVIEW DIGEST: (1) audience suitability ratings by special reviewing organizations (women's clubs, religious groups and the like); (2) general newspapers and magazines; and (3) trade papers. The purpose of the audience suitability ratings by the special reviewing organizations is chiefly to pass on questions of morality and propriety and to report on suitability for children of various ages. The purpose of the reviews in general magazines and newspapers is to inform the adult patron of artistic and entertainment qualities. The purpose of the trade paper reviews is to inform the exhibitor of probable commercial value.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

0 005 869 228 1